FTC actions 'ludicrous,' says Stockman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration budget chief David Stockman explained his attack on the two leading consumer agencies today by saying their "misguided efforts" have burdened the U.S. economy.

Stockman told a House consumer subcommittee that the Federal Trade Commission and Consumer Product Safety Commission "have embarked on activities inconsistent with sound economic principles and with plain common sense."

He characterized FTC actions as "ludicrous," "preposterous," and "absurd."

Stockman directs the White House Office of Management and Budget, which proposed major funding cuts for the two agencies.

Under questioning by liberal subcommittee Chairman Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., Stockman said, "The amount of regulatory activity expands to fill the budget of an agency" and said a way to halt that expansion is to cut the agency budget.

Rosenthal said the initial OMB proposal to eliminate FTC antitrust authority would have ended a national policy that has stood since the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt. This OMB stand later was changed to allow the FTC continued, though reduced, antitrust funding.

"You sent out signals to the business and legal communities that will take 10 years to repair," Rosenthal said, pressing Stockman to explain how the initial decision and the subsequent change were reached.

Stockman denied a report that the first decision was reached in less than one minute of deliberation but declined to specify how it was reached.

"I'm not sure how fruitful this line of questioning is," Stockman told Rosenthal.

After 45 minutes of testimony in which he called FTC actions "ludicrous" and "absurd," Stockman responded to a question by saying he agreed with the FTC in one area.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., threw up his hands and exclaimed "Ah," in mock surprise that Stockman could agree with the FTC on anything.

Stockman had less severe criticism for the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

"As established, the agency was to ferret out hazardous products and to correct the situation. That being largely accomplished, the agency has a diminished need for resources," he testified.

Stockman said CPSC should stop regulating chronic chemical hazards, which he said other federal agencies should deal with.

Bank loses tree shooting commercial

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Once the barricades were set up blocking Marienfeld Street and Texas Avenue in front of Midland National Bank and the Midland police were in position standing guard, the stage was set.

Bystanders, including media, were herded together, first on the northeast corner of the intersection, then directly in front of the bank. Everyone was ready for action.

Finally, Simba appeared on the street. He had been resting before time for his filming. Yawning a couple of times and shaking his head as if to clear his thoughts, he began ambling down Marienfeld.

This 13-year-old veteran of some 30 to 40 films and commercials, was unaware of the safety precautions taken for his arrival.

He didn't care. The others did.

"We've never had a problem and we don't want one," said Cindy Cullen of Frank Inns Inc. of California.

Simba is a full-grown African male lion. Ms. Cullen is his trainer. The purpose of their Midland visit was filming a commercial for Midland National Bank.

Sunday was a good day. The rain had, at last, left and, although it was windy, the dust wasn't blowing. Film makers were making the most of a good thing. They filmed different locations beginning at 7 a.m. and did not stop until dark. They concluded their filming today.

Actually three lions were involved in the commercial, but only one, Simba, was filmed at the bank location. The other two are much younger, with one being a cub and the other just three years old.

The lions are the property of two different animal compounds. As Ms. Cullen explained, "If we (trainers) fed every animal we worked, we'd be in trouble. We're two competitive trainers working together. He (Steve Martin) is working for me here and I'm working for him on another show. It's a good way to do business."

Frank Inns Inc. houses 450 animals and the other organization, Martin's Working Wildlife, also of California, houses 150.

"If I'm lucky, I see one-tenth of the things I do," Ms. Cullen said, adding, "We're always working 10 to 15 shows." Frank Inns Inc. handles the world-famous dog Benji, while Ms. Cullen is the trainer who handled the Doberman gang movies and the dogs in the film "The Boys from Brazil."

"There are not enough animal trainers in the world," Ms. Cullen said, explaining why those who do this type of work are always busy.

As Martin said, "We rent animals to different motion picture companies, television programs, commercials, parties — you name it, we do it."

And that's what they were doing Sunday.

The filming, as is often true, did not go smoothly. Simba cut himself during the jump shot directly in front of the bank. After checking him over, the decision was made to continue filming. The cut was on the side away from the camera.

However, this was not the only problem of the day. It seems that one of the three trees in front of the bank was in the way. The director said it had to go. It went.

Andrews man killed

An Andrews man was killed and three other Permian Basin residents were injured in two separate one-car rollovers Sunday.

Killed in an accident 2.8 miles south of Andrews on State Highway 385 about 2:30 a.m. Sunday was Don Lee Munsell, 46, of Andrews. Injured in that same accident were Joseph Wayne Harper, 18, and Samuel Wayne Baxter, 18, both of Andrews.

Harper was driver of the car that was northbound on SH 385, apparently at a high rate of speed, at the time of the accident. According to the Department of Public Safety, the vehicle ran off the right side of the highway and the driver apparently overcorrected.

The vehicle then crossed back over the northbound lane, rolled twice and came to rest upright in the southbound traffic lane.

Munsell was thrown from the vehicle and was pronounced dead at the scene by Andrews Peace Justice Jay Williams. Munsell's body was taken to Singleton Funeral Home.

Harper and Baxter suffered cuts and bruises in the accident. Both men are listed in good condition in Permian General Hospital in Andrews.

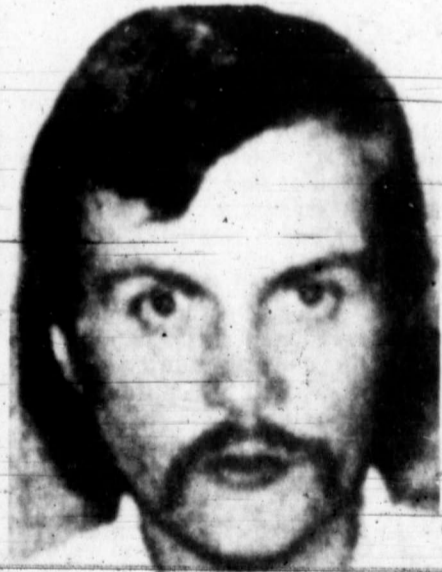

Thomas Melvin Davis, 35, of Odessa was critically injured in the second accident which occurred at 2:10 a.m. Sunday a half-mile north of Stanton on Interstate 20.

The Department of Public Safety said Davis was driving a pickup west on Interstate 20, apparently at a high rate of speed, when he apparently lost control of the vehicle on an overpass, ran off the north side of the roadway and overcorrected.

The vehicle then swerved back across the highway, struck the guardrail and overturned. It then continued over the center median guardrail and overturned one more time, coming to rest in the eastbound traffic lane.

Davis was thrown from the vehicle and suffered a fractured skull and fractured hip. He was listed in critical condition early today in the intensive care unit of Midland Memorial Hospital.

The accident was investigated by DPS patrolmen Freddy Gutierrez and Wade Turner of Stanton.

'Mystery' hostage

Hostages leave Syria; Mystery man identified

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The Moslems among the 101 freed hostages from the hijacked Pakistani airliner flew to Saudi Arabia today for a two-day thanksgiving at Islam's holy shrines, including a free side trip to Mecca, on the first leg of their trip home.

One of the two Americans among the hostages, Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, took off for Frankfurt, West Germany, to meet his wife, who was freed by the hijackers in Afghanistan, and his parents.

The plans of the other American, Craig R. Clymore of Laguna Hills, Calif., were not known. He is wanted on drug charges in the United States.

The State Department revoked his passport and said it would issue him documents valid for travel only to the United States.

A third hostage identified during the 13-day hijacking as an American turned out to be a Canadian using the name of Lawrence C. Mangum, a Brooklyn furniture mover whose wife said he had never left the United States. The Canadian government said it believed he was Lawrence Lome, who escaped from a Canadian penitentiary in 1976 while serving a term for importing narcotics.

A spokesman in Ottawa said Canada has no extradition agreement with Syria, but the Syrian government was expected to help get the fugitive back to Canada.

The three hijackers and the 54 Pakistani prisoners whose freedom they obtained were given temporary asylum in Syria after Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi withdrew his offer of haven to them. There was no indication what country might accept them until a change in the political climate in Pakistan.

The second longest hijacking in aviation history ended Saturday when the prisoners freed by Pakistan's military government arrived in Damascus, and the three young opponents of military rule surrendered to Syrian police.

Meanwhile, Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq charged that Afghanistan's Soviet-backed communist government supplied the hijackers with automatic weapons and explosives after they diverted the Boeing 720 jetliner to Kabul, the Afghan capital, during a domestic flight on March 1.

Defense Minister Mohammad Rafim Khan told reporters the three young men were "armed only with pistols" when they took over the plane, but at Kabul "many people went aboard," and afterward the hijackers "produced ... grenades and explosives they had wired to blow up the plane."

"You can draw your own conclusions," he said.

The freed passengers and crew members spent Saturday night in a Syrian military hospital. Doctors there said they were "in much better shape than we thought they would be." A U.S. Embassy official said the Americans were "full of beans, telling jokes and keeping everybody happy."

Embassy officials escorted Clymore, Hubbell, the mystery man "Mangum" and a South African official of the World Bank named Geoffrey Balkind to a Damascus hotel on Sunday.

Firm to solve parking problems

The Parking Task Force of the Midland Chamber of Commerce has retained the consulting engineering firm of Waller P. Moore and Associates, Inc. of Houston to research, design, and implement a central business district parking program for Midland.

Joe Kloesel, chairman of the Parking Task Force, made the announcement today after conferring with other members of the chamber's executive committee.

"We haven't accomplished anything when we tried to do it," Kloesel said of past studies by various groups.

The parking study area is bounded by Michigan Avenue on the north, North Weatherford on the east, Front Street and Indiana Avenue on the south and North Pecos Street on the west. This 48-block area comprises the most critical portion of Midland's office and retail establishments. However, a spokesman with the chamber said the firm has been asked to expand the area on the north and west.

In its proposal, Moore and Associates has stated they will develop recommendations for a short (two years) and a long-range (10-year) parking program. They also will develop implementation schedules and identify institutional constraints and solutions to ease the program's implementation.

The short-range plan will involve specific recommendations, how much they will cost and how they could be funded, according to a chamber spokesman. The long-range plan will project what the needs will be, what the solutions should be and what Midland should be doing now to reach those goals.

The group will get to work immediately, said Kloesel. They expect the work to take about six weeks, but it could be as long as three months, he added.

Cost of the project will be in the "$25,000 to $30,000 ballpark figure" range, Kloesel said. "It's being done on an engineering fee basis."

To determine Midland's parking needs and develop a recommended program, Moore and Associates will first undertake the following work tasks:

- Review previous studies conducted for the downtown area of Midland.
- Following the review, selected parking information will be updated. Basic information will include an inventory of the existing parking supply.
- From the historic data and current information, 1981 parking demands and needs will be established. Parking demands will be projected for the year 1991 based on anticipated growth of Midland's Central Business District.
- Following the analysis and evaluation, a program of parking development will be prepared.
- Findings and recommendations will be compiled in a report. Sufficient documentation of findings and recommendations will be presented in tables and graphic illustrations.

—Jerry L. King, P.E., senior vice president of Moore and Associates, will serve as principal-in-charge of the Midland parking study.

Kloesel said the chamber task force considered several firms but selected Moore and Associates because "we liked their approach — it's one of hands on. They're going to come in and do field work. They have experience in exactly this type of thing (parking problems). And they are more directed to private enterprise solving their own problems."

Moore and Associates is a multi-disciplinary consulting firm with more than 40 years of combined experience in parking and traffic studies. Among the many major projects completed by the firm are, The Main Garage, Houston; City Post Oak Traffic and Parking Plan, Houston; Transportation System Management Study, Harris County; and Traffic Study of Downtown Transit Mall, Houston.

Bomb blast kills reputed mobster

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The slaying of reputed Philadelphia mob boss Phillip C. "Chicken Man" Testa, blown up on the front steps of his house, may have been a retaliation killing or part of an effort by New York mobsters to muscle in on area rackets, officials speculate.

Testa, alleged to have controlled the local underworld since Angelo Bruno was shot to death last March, died Sunday of multiple injuries from the bomb blast triggered as he was about to enter his home on a quiet, tree-lined street of South Philadelphia.

"He looked like he went through a giant paper shredder. It was a helluva bomb," one police officer on the scene told The Philadelphia Bulletin.

Unidentified authorities quoted in local newspapers speculated the killing was possibly part of efforts by New York crime families to claim Philadelphia and southern New Jersey rackets.

Others felt Testa had made himself vulnerable by eliminating every strong figure in the local crime family who posed a threat to him, while some unidentified detectives said the killing might have been in retaliation for the pre-Christmas shooting death of Roofers Union President John J. McCullough.

Authorities, however, had no suspects and were not sure of the composition of the bomb or how it was detonated. They believed the bomb was set off by remote-control by someone within "eye range," according to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The 2:55 a.m. explosion shook the neighborhood around Testa's house, and some residents fled their homes thinking a tank had blown up at one of the nearby oil refineries. The still-locked front door was found in the dining room, 15 feet from the blood-stained entrance.

No one else was hurt in the blast, police said. Testa lived alone in half of a two-story brick and stucco duplex since his wife's death from cancer last year.

"There were two elderly women there (in the other half of the duplex) and they were uninjured, just shaken up," said Det. Capt. Orville Ballard.

Police said the house, owned by Testa's son, was empty when Testa arrived.

Testa, 56, died at 4:15 a.m. at nearby St. Agnes Hospital without regaining consciousness.

Ballard said a hole was blown through about six inches of concrete in the front porch. Testa's belt buckle was found in the middle of the street. His glasses, a gun, the scattered cash and his burnt clothing were recovered by police.

Testa was among 10 former Bruno associates indicted Feb. 20 and charged with conspiring to violate federal racketeering statutes. He was to go on trial April 13 in U.S. District Court.

Two others named as members of the Bruno syndicate by the Pennsylvania Crime Commission have met violent deaths since Bruno's execution. They are Johnny Keyes Simone, who was found shot to death last September on New York's Staten Island, and Frank Gaetano Sindone, whose bullet-riddled body was discovered stuffed in two trash bags last October in a south Philadelphia parking lot.

In addition, the battered nude bodies of Antonio "Tony Bananas" Caponigro, 67, and his 69-year-old brother-in-law, Alfred Salerno, were found shot and dumped in The Bronx last April 18. Philadelphia police described them as loyalists of the 69-year-old Bruno.

But in testimony before the Crime Commission last September, Arthur Shuman, chief assistant district attorney in Philadelphia, said investigators had concluded that Caponigro had ordered Bruno's death and had been killed in retaliation.

General Motors chairman calls for help on import

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of the nation's largest automaking company says he generally supports President Reagan's desire to get government out of business, but thinks the government should intervene on Japanese auto imports.

General Motors Corp. Chairman Robert Smith, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said Sunday he believed the government should negotiate voluntary import restrictions with Japanese automakers.

"I think the big rule there is that the government is intervening ... to stop something that could damage the country. What I'm talking about is a trade war," he said.

Smith also said GM would be willing to talk about profit-sharing with the United Auto Workers, as financially troubled Chrysler Corp. has done, if the union would make concessions, particularly on cutting down non-productive time such as personal days off.

In order to win a recent $400 million in federal loan guarantees, Chrysler agreed to accept profit sharing in exchange for wage concessions.

"Now is the time for profit sharing," Smith added, "because it lets the worker participate in his efforts more directly."

Asked about the possibility that Chrysler might go bankrupt despite federal loans, Smith replied:

"I think Chrysler will survive if they have a good product that people see value in. If they don't see value in it, I don't care how much money the government puts into it."

Smith said he thought any voluntary cutback in Japanese auto imports should be on a short-term basis.

He predicted the Japanese would accept it because in the long run their interests would be served and free trade preserved.

He said that even though some of Reagan's proposed budget cuts, like cuts in the Export-Import Bank program, would affect his industry, he was willing to go along in order to get "America rolling again."

"What we need to do," he said, "is get behind the president as a nation and support the program, not pick it apart."

Bands of 'gypsy dealers' sought

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' attorney general wants to bring to a screeching halt the sales of faulty travel trailers by bands of "gypsy dealers" roaming the state and preying on unsuspecting retired couples, an assistant attorney general said.

The salesmen usually lie about the quality of their vehicles at the time of the sale and then vanish when repairs are needed, said Zoleta Courtney.

The buyers are left with faulty trailers and no warranties, and few — if any — recreational vehicle dealers in Texas will repair the trailers because they "hate the gypsies so much," she said.

The problem has been especially bad in Fort Worth, where some gypsy dealers keep permanent residences, and in the Rio Grande Valley, where gypsies prey on elderly couples, Ms.

Courtney said.

The state attorney general's office filed complaints last month against alleged gypsy dealers in Mercedes and La Feria in South Texas, Ms. Courtney said.

The complaints name three people who are accused of violating the Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act by misrepresenting the quality of the travel trailers they sold, Ms. Courtney said. They allegedly told buyers the trailers had a three-year warranty when they had none and made false statements about the original price paid for the trailers, she said.

Ms. Courtney said the gypsy dealers buy their travel trailers in their own names directly from the manufacturers in Elkhart, Indiana.

Mail takes three weeks to Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Neither rain nor snow nor dead of night were cited as reasons why airmail letters from the United States can take up to three weeks to reach Denmark.

But authorities here did find that many letters were already three weeks old before they left America, according to a report issued today by Denmark's Post and Telegraph Authority.

The postal agency said it began studying mail from America after receiving complaints from Danes who wondered why it took so long for airmail to cross the Atlantic.

Authorities started checking the post marks on U.S. letters and found that many sent airmail are up to three weeks old before they are ever forwarded out of the United States.

For surface mail, sent by ship, the post office said some letters, posted in the United States in mid-November were first shipped out around new year's.

Among those going the opposite way, postal authorities found that a number of airmail-express, or special delivery, letters reached their U.S. destinations after two weeks.

The Danish postal authority said it has asked the U.S. Postal Service to investigate the delays.

But authorities here were not quick to criticize their American counterparts. After all, the Danes admit, since they opened a multimillion-dollar computerized sorting terminal in Copenhagen last year, it can take days to get a letter from one side of the capital to the other.

16 tons of pot seized in biggest drug bust

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Sixteen tons of high-grade marijuana, 14 would-be drug smugglers, a fishing boat, a truck rig, two cars, two motorized campers and six weapons were the haul in a massive, coordinated drug raid at a dilapidated pier north of here, agents said.

Dozens of local, state and federal agents cooperated in the raid at Seadrift, the biggest drug bust ever made on the Texas coast, a federal agent said.

A U.S. magistrate scheduled arraignment for the 14 today. Sunday's raid ended a three-month investigation and also resulted in the seizure of a 76-foot, steel-bottomed shrimp boat, a tractor-trailer rig, two large recreational vehicles, six weapons and two late-model automobiles, said James Anderson, in charge of the DEA office here.

Two of those arrested were Cubans, one was a Colombian and the marijuana had a street value of $20 million, he said.

"The stuff was in ... burlap-covered piles," said Anderson. "It was fine leaf, no stems or seeds. It is in federal custody and will be destroyed, except for those samples saved for use as evidence."

Several undercover officers from different law enforcement agencies — Anderson would not reveal specific details — set up the big bust.

"We had been staked out all night," said Charles Conroy of the U.S. Customs office in Houston. "The arrests ended a months-long investigation."

"We knew they were coming," he said.

The agents said they waited in darkness until the marijuana had been loaded onto the truck and the delivery boat had departed before making the arrests.

"The marijuana had just been off-loaded onto the 18-wheeler," said Conroy.

There was the usual panic when the raid was triggered, with one of the men on the pier jumping into San Antonio Bay in an attempt to escape, but he was quickly fished out of the water and the rest of the men surrendered without struggle, the officers said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Coast Guard chipped in by seizing the boat as it reached the mouth of the bay and arrested the three men on board.

Chaplain is charged

MIAMI (AP) — The chaplain of the Dade County Jail is free on bond after being accused of stealing a prisoner-release pass for an inmate in what authorities allege was an unsuccessful escape attempt.

The Rev. Roberto Perez, 37, was arrested after officials began investigating how the pass fell into the hands of the inmate, who was recognized and prevented from leaving the prison, authorities said.

Perez, who receives a salary to counsel inmates and arrange religious services, was released on bond.

U.S. may join Sinai peacekeeping force

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Australia and New Zealand are willing to help keep the peace in the Sinai peninsula between Egypt and Israel, an authoritative Cairo newspaper reported today. Western sources speculated that United States troops might also join the multinational police force.

The weekly newspaper Mayo, the organ of President Anwar Sadat's National Democratic Party, reported in a front-page article today that Egypt has talked with several nations that might join the force. The paper said Australia and New Zealand have agreed in principle to join, but it gave no details.

The U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace accords between Egypt and Israel call for the international force to be stationed astride the Egyptian-Israeli frontier once Israel completes its troop withdrawal from Sinai in April 1982.

As originally envisioned, the force would have been sponsored by the United Nations. But the Soviet Union has made clear it would veto such an project.

Western and Egyptian diplomatic sources said the United States and Egypt also have gotten favorable responses from unidentified Latin American nations.

Khoemini calls in squabbling leaders

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini summoned Iran's squabbling leaders to his home today, apparently trying to halt an escalating power struggle between secular moderates and clergy-led hard-liners.

The official Pars news agency said President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, leader of the moderates, and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, head of the hard-line camp, were present at the "extraordinary meeting" at Khomeini's residence in Tehran. The president and prime minister each brought several supporters to the session.

The agency said "the country's various problems were discussed." It gave no details.

The meeting followed three weeks of political sniping in which Bani-Sadr charged that hard-liners plotted to unseat him and form a three-man presidency council of their own to "impose a new dictatorship."

Rajai and Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, head of Iran's Supreme Court, charged that Bani-Sadr's supporters started clashes with hard-liners at a March 6 Tehran rally in support of the president. They hinted the president should be tried.

Both sides have been calling on Khomeini to intervene, particularly after Bani-Sadr challenged his three main opponents to an open debate on Tehran's state radio and television.

Parliament speaker Hojatoleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani accepted the challenge, but Rajai and Beheshti gave conditional responses.

Rajai said the nation's leaders should debate the nation's problems within the Parliament or the Cabinet. Beheshti declared he would be willing to appear face-to-face with the president on television only when courts finish examining complaints filed against the president by victims of the March 5 clashes.

The political squabble has been fought against a backdrop of Iran's nearly six-month-old war with Iraq.

On Sunday, Pars said two cities in Iran's oil-rich Khuzistan province were hit by Iraqi airplanes and missiles as a group representing the International Red Cross inspected one of them.

The agency said six Iranian civilians were killed. The Red Cross team members were unhurt.

Iraq and Iran have been at war for six months along a 300-mile front at the northern end of the Persian Gulf.

Both Iran and Iraq reported the air raid attacks on the cities of Dezful and Ahwaz. Iran has claimed that more than 50 civilians were killed in attacks on the same two cities last week. War claims from the two sides, which do not allow reporters near the battlefield, cannot be verified.

Arab diplomatic sources in Beirut said the Iraqi air attacks were designed to prepare for a new offensive to try to seize all of Khuzistan, which Iraq calls Arabistan.

Iraq and Iran are both Moslem nations, but Iraq is predominantly Arab while most Iranians are Persian.

Germany better under Hitler?

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP)— "Under Hitler, Germany had it better," said 18 percent of West German voters, according to a survey ordered by the Bonn government and published in part today by the Spiegel news magazine.

"Every seventh West German citizen has an extreme leaning toward the right and almost half of this group favors the use of force," the Hamburg-based magazine quoted the poll as saying.

The survey was ordered in 1979 and allegedly kept under wraps since it was finished last year, the magazine said.

It said the survey was compiled by the Munich-based Sinus Institute and based on the evaluation of rightist literature and the questioning of 6,968 eligible voters.

"The alarming result: A total of 13 percent of the voters (about 5.5 million) have an ideologically complete frame of mind the main supports of which are a national socialist (Nazi) view of history, hatred of foreigners, democracy and pluralism and an exaggerated devotion to people, fatherland and family," according to the magazine's report of the survey.

"Almost half of the extreme rightists, that is about six percent of eligible voters, accept politically motivated force, up to terror against people," the report said.

Prof develops economic crystal ball

WACO, Texas (AP) — A Baylor University economics professor is developing a crystal ball of sorts — one of the most sophisticated state economic models in the country.

Dr. Ray Perryman is taking what he calls "a very inexact science" — economic forecasting — and sharpening its precision with a computer model based on three times the amount of information of any state forecasting system yet developed in the United States.

When completed near the end of the year, the model will allow Perryman, 28, to project the effects that major national programs and events will have on individual sectors within the Texas economy, such as agriculture or employment.

"Currently, there are 30 states with econometric models, but these are much smaller, with fewer equations," Perryman said. "Instead of taking a general econometric model and applying it to Texas, what we're doing is trying to capture the unique things about Texas and develop a very precise model for forecasting."

Perryman, director of the Center for the Advancement of Economic Analysis, has been working a year and a half to accumulate about 150,000 tidbits of economic information, ranging from retail sales of food to oil production — and all dating back 30 years.

Meanwhile, his wife Nancy, assistant director of the center, has been putting together the computer software and hardware required to handle the mass of data.

"It's been a long ordeal," he said, but added that results are starting to appear.

"We now have the software and hardware at the level we need to do estimating and testing, we almost have a complete data base, and we're down to finalizing and testing our final equations. It's looking good," Perryman said.

Perryman, a native of Lindale in East Texas, came back to the Baylor business school in 1977, after graduating from there with a bachelor's degree in math and economics and from Rice University in Houston with a doctorate in economics.

Since then, he has received several awards for his research on economic forecasting.

He says his home state provides a challenge for his model because Texas "has almost everything."

"You have deserts here and you have citrus growth. You have minerals, manufacturing, agriculture. In fact, out of all of the production industries, the only one which is not represented in Texas is tobacco," he said.

The hub of the model is the Gross State Product, the measure of total output of goods and services in Texas, or the state counterpart to the Gross National Product.

Initially, the model will be used to forecast the major sectors in the GSP: mining and construction; manufacturing; wholesale and retail trade; government; services; finance, insurance and real estate; agriculture.

Media now a part of slaying story

ATLANTA (AP) — They seem to be everywhere, taking pictures, pointing microphones, furiously scribbling on notepads. To residents of a city staggering under the pressure of 22 child slayings and disappearances, the media has become part of the story.

To some, the hundreds of journalists who have descended on this Southern city are bringing to the world's attention a story that has plagued the city for 20 months. To others, the press is a reminder of things they would prefer to forget.

"They told our story when no one else would," said Ann Maxey of the Committee To Stop Children's Murders, which was formed by mothers of the young black victims. "If it hadn't been for the press, our side would not have been told."

But Ms. Maxey, who is not related to any of the victims, said the recent influx of journalists from around the world has caused some problems.

In recent months, journalists from as far away as Germany, France and Australia have joined their American colleagues in pursuit of the story, which has drawn donations and concern from around the world.

Last week, when Curtis Walker, 13, the 20th victim, was buried, at least nine television cameras and a flock of reporters flanked both sides of the flower-bedecked coffin.

"It was a circus," said Ms. Maxey. "All we ask is that the press deal on a human level and not treat this like a carnival."

Ernestine Stephens, mother of 12-year-old Charles Stephens, whose strangled body was found last October, has mixed feelings about the attention focused on her and her family.

"They don't bother me too much," she said. "But I see no reason for them to keep coming and asking the same questions."

"It only makes it worse," she said, referring to the constant reminder of her dead son. "It only makes it worse."

But John Bascom, coordinator of weekly volunteer searches for clues in the cases, cited the media's help.

"I think they've been very helpful in relaying and mobilizing information on the searches," said Bascom, who is with the United Youth Adult Conference. "They've even run errands, gone to get the police when we find something and picked up stranded searchers."

Bascom said media interest is not just limited to pursuit of a publishable story.

"They're searching too," he said. "They come without their pads and mikes and get out there with the rest of us."

"After all, the media, just like the policeman, the preacher, the ordinary person on the street, is concerned about the missing and murdered children," he said.

Mayor Maynard Jackson says police have been close-mouthed about the cases because they are fearful too much publicity could jeopardize the investigation.

In several recent speeches, Jackson said his administration has made a policy decision to protect or keep secret any evidence found, a decision he said has led to criticism "that we are not doing anything."

Marchers demonstrate for slain kids

ATLANTA (AP) — As police examined a jacket like the one worn by the latest young victim, scores of demonstrators from across the nation brought their prayers, their money, their friendship and their sometimes hostile frustration to the city stalked by a child killer.

About 2,500 people, including busloads from Connecticut, New York City, Boston, Detroit, Washington, D.C., Iowa, Virginia, Indiana, New Orleans, Houston and Florida, joined Atlantans in a memorial to the 20 slain children Sunday.

Meanwhile, more than 2,000 people staged a walkathon Sunday in Stamford, Conn., raising about $1,500 for the Atlanta investigation "to show the people of Atlanta that they are not standing alone," said Joseph Arnette, chairman of the Stamford-Urban League.

And in Brockton, Mass., New England Patriots football players Tony McGee and Ray Hamilton joined more than 100 people for a prayer and song service for the families of the slain children and two boys who remain missing.

Hostility rippled through the Atlanta crowd, with several local speakers heckled as they spoke of marchers united in peace and harmony.

"We need action, not talk," one dissenter yelled, drawing applause.

Andrew Young, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and an Atlanta resident, left the stage with the first catcalls and when he was "introduced," his car had long since departed.

"What we need to do is not put the police or leadership on trial," Young told several reporters as he walked to his car. "You have to have confidence in the police. We just haven't had a break yet."

"There just aren't enough Atlantans involved," said Bernie McCain, who traveled by bus from Washington, D.C., with a group of 140 to march three miles from the state Capitol to a rally on the Morehouse College campus.

The crowd booed entertainer Ben Vereen, who, like Coretta Scott King, rode the final miles of the march.

"Certainly we have differences, but there's one thing we must all agree on, we must bring an end to this killing," the Rev. Joseph Lowery, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, told the gathering.

Meanwhile, hundreds of volunteers joined weekend search parties seeking clues that might lead to the elusive killer or killers.

The first search last fall turned up a child's body, but no bodies have been found by volunteer searchers since.

On Saturday, the searchers found near a school a blue jacket that matched the description of one worn by Joseph Bell, 15, one of the two black children on the task force's missing list. The boy's mother told authorities later she did not recognize the jacket, but homicide investigators were conducting tests to make sure it was not Bell's.

The disappearances of Bell and 10-year-old Darron Glass are being investigated by an 80-member police task force set up to find the killer or killers of 20 black youngsters found dead since July 1979. No arrests have been made.

Vice President George Bush met Saturday with city officials after President Reagan announced that $1.5 million in federal funds would be made available to the investigation. Bush also met with officials of the police task force and with relatives of the victims.

Irish-Americans form group for peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of prominent Irish-American politicians, renewing their annual call for an end to sectarian violence in Northern Ireland, announced plans today to create a formal "Friends of Ireland" organization to pursue their goals.

The group, which includes House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and New York

Gov. Hugh Carey, noted that since issuing its first St. Patrick's Day appeal four years ago, "we take satisfaction that American support for the violence has declined."

"We have seen the decline not just in weapons or financial aid (from private citizens) but in the insidious support of those who create or credit the propaganda that can only increase the tension and worsen the violence," the statement added, referring to supporters of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Since August 1969, some 2,100 persons have been killed in terrorist incidents by militants among the Protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority in British-controlled Northern Ireland.

The group said it was heartened by meetings last year between the prime ministers of Britain and the Irish Republic exploring ways to bring peace to the province.

"We believe the United States has a constructive role to play in promoting a settlement of the conflict," the statement continued, "...and we look forward to working with President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig — our fellow Irish-Americans — in continuing this indispensable effort."

The U.S. government has encouraged formation of a Northern Irish government that would command widespread respect among the population, but it has not said how this should be accomplished.

Spy subjects to be paid

NEW YORK (AP) — Five people, including a woman who lived with Yippies leader Abbie Hoffman, have been awarded $10,000 each in a lawsuit over the FBI's illegal wiretapping and burglarizing of their homes in the early 1970s.

The plaintiffs include Johanna Lawrenson, whose telephones were tapped for more than four years in Manhattan and in upstate Pineview, where she lived with Hoffman while he was a fugitive, said attorney Michael Standard of the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee.

Hoffman surrendered last year on drug charges after years in hiding. He is awaiting sentencing.

The plaintiffs learned of the illegal spying after the indictment of John J. Kearney, former head of the FBI's internal security unit. The charges against Kearney later were dropped on grounds his superiors had sanctioned his activities.

DETROIT (AP) — It's a good thing Carl Lewis has a sense of humor...

Owens was the last athlete to take a sprint and the long jump outdoors. He did it in 1936.

Lewis, a native of Willingboro, N.J., won the long jump in 27-10 Friday night — just a quarter-inch off his world indoor record — then came back Saturday to overhaul Georgia's Mel Lattany at the tape with a 6.16 in the 60-yard dash.

"I knew I got off to a slow start, but I've always been tagged as a runner who can be strong at the finish," Lewis said.

"If I did lose, I wanted to lose to Mel Lattany."

As great as he is, however, Lewis may not even be the best in his own family. His 17-year-old sister, Carol, still a high school senior, already holds the

Williams team in midst of an era

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Nobody is using the word dynasty yet, but the Williams Formula One team obviously is in the midst of an era.

Alan Jones of Australia and Carlos Reutemann of Argentina finished an easy one-two Sunday in the Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach.

It was the first event of the year in the world championship series, but the third straight championship race in which Jones and Reutemann have been the first two across the finish line.

Jones won four races in 1979 and six in 1980 — including a disputed triumph in Spain — and wound up taking his first world championship last season.

Reutemann won the street race through Monte Carlo last year and also took the race earlier this year at South Africa, which did not count toward the world title.

There were also six second-place finishes in 1980. The 34-year-old Jones ended a string of three straight years in which the driver who won the pole position stayed on top all the way.

He started his sleek green-and-white Williams FW07 second to Italian Riccardo Patrese's Arrows A3, but fell off the pace at the start.

Jones slipped behind Reutemann and was running second when he was overtaken by Alan Jones.
