

Paraphernalia bill could 'create' criminals

Attorneys fear proposed legislation too broad

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"It's like trying to eliminate drinking by banning glasses." That's one Midland attorney's assessment of the drug paraphernalia bill under debate by the Texas Legislature. "But it'll probably pass, owing to the fact we don't have the most astute legal minds in the legislature — even though the majority of them are lawyers," said the attorney, who asked not to be named. In outline form, the bill would make it illegal to sell or possess "material of any kind that is used, intended for use, or designed for use, in planting, propagating, cultivating, growing, harvesting, manufacturing, compounding, converting, producing, processing, preparing, testing, analyzing, packaging, repackaging, storing, containing, or concealing a controlled substance."

THE BILL GOES on to embrace such things as balance scales, sifters, blenders, bowls, spoons, pipes, and roach clips in its definition of drug paraphernalia. A major problem with the bill, according to members of the legal community, is that its very comprehensiveness takes it into the realm of unconstitutionality. Couldn't farm tractors, sandwich bags, cigarette papers and even hair pins be construed as paraphernalia? "Yes," said another attorney. "Housewives and store owners in Texas are in danger of becoming instant criminals if this act is passed. The main problem with the act, however, is the fact that a person is charged with the responsibility of 'knowing' an item may be used for criminal conduct. Thus, a store owner may be liable if the buyer of a pipe uses it to smoke marijuana."

THE HIGH COURTS of some 13 states have already ruled paraphernalia laws — similar to the one proposed in Texas — are unconstitutional. And on Dec. 8, 1980, some Ohio business owners were successful in their challenge of paraphernalia ordinances passed by the cities of Lakewood, Parma and North Olmsted, Ohio. In reversing a lower court decision, the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit said: "Because the definition of drug paraphernalia is vague and overbroad, the ordinances must be declared unconstitutional. The purpose of listing the common forms of drug paraphernalia is to lend precision to the definition in order to give more specific notice to persons potentially subject to the ordinances. The descriptions of roach clips and miniature cocaine spoons do not fulfill this purpose. A roach clip is defined as any object that can be used to hold the short end of a burning marijuana cigarette.

"ONLY THE imagination of the user limits the number of things fitting this description. All of these things, such as alligator clips, tweezers, and paper clips, have predominantly lawful, beneficial uses." In addressing itself to the issue of selective enforcement of overbroad laws, the court noted: "The testimony of Detectives Bennett and Rutt, qualified experts on narcotics law enforcement, shows convincingly the danger of arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement of the ordinances by the police. Detectives Bennett and Rutt would arrest any retailer who sold pipes with screens, despite the ability to use these pipes lawfully. (And) Detective Rutt would arrest a retailer operating a 'head shop' if it sold alligator clips or cigarette papers, but not a drug store owner selling the same items. This testimony suggests that the ordinances would be enforced only against 'head shops,' as designated by local law enforcement officials. No guidelines have been written to prevent such selective, discriminatory enforcement.

"BECAUSE THE ordinances would permit the arrest and prosecution of persons by police and prosecutors who claim to know drug paraphernalia when

Hijackers list more demands

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Armed hijackers holding an airliner with 57 people aboard, including three Americans, early today raised the number of "political prisoners" they are demanding be freed by Indonesia from 20 to 80. They set a 9:30 a.m. EST deadline for the arrival here of the prisoners.

The hijackers, said to number six, also demanded a new plane and pilot for the Indonesia jetliner they commandeered Saturday morning while it was on a domestic flight.

There was no immediate indication whether Indonesian authorities would agree to the new demand. Earlier, Thai officials said Indonesian President Suharto agreed to release 20 prisoners.

Indonesian airline officials said their country's chief negotiator, Air Marshal Sugiri, had been told Suharto was prepared to provide a DC-10 aircraft with long-range flight capabilities to take the hijackers to Sri Lanka as they had demanded.

Trays of food were delivered, one at a time, to a door of the plane Sunday morning, witnesses reported.

Thailand's air force commander, Air Chief Marshal Paniang Kantarat, told reporters the Thai government would not allow the DC-10 to land here because it reportedly would carry an armed commando unit. He did not immediately elaborate and his allegation could not immediately be confirmed in Indonesia. Sri Lanka earlier said it did not want the hijackers there.

Charn Angsuechote of the Thai prime minister's office had said Suharto, in a telephone conversation from Indonesia, asked negotiators to tell the hijackers it would take time to round up the 20 prisoners from prisons on Java and Sumatra and make arrangements for a destination.

The unidentified hijackers, said to be armed with grenades and small arms, commandeered the Garuda Indonesian Airways jetliner shortly after it left Palembang in southern Sumatra Saturday morning for the northern Sumatra capital of Medan.

They forced it to Penang, Malaysia, where it refueled, then left for Bangkok. At one point they threatened to blow up the DC-9 if their demands were not met in 28 hours, Police Chief Monchai Pankongchuen said.

Thailand surrounded the Indonesian jetliner with armed troops but had allowed it to refuel on Saturday. Thai officials considered the hijacking a "domestic affair" of the Indonesian government, according to Communications Minister Amorn Sirikaya.

In Colombo, Sri Lanka's capital, Foreign Ministry secretary W.T. Jayasinghe said, "The matter will be settled in Bangkok" and that Sri Lanka would not permit the hijacked aircraft to land there.

Crises, capitalism and cars

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

NEW YORK — The American automobile industry's crisis was with us last week, although it was overshadowed in the headlines by news from Poland, and the squabble in Washington over who is going to be in charge of future crises.

Inasmuch as the Polish crisis has not yet been resolved, and the Haig versus Bush controversy is sure to blow over, I chose to concentrate today on the state of the nation's relationship between capitalism and cars.

The presence in Washington of Japan's Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito, preceded by a meeting of former Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fu-

Candidates' experience varied

Ann Page, candidate for Place 3 school board seat, said she is running in next month's election to fill a void on the board which is lacking an effective elementary school spokesperson.

Also running for the Place 3 position, currently held by Johnny Warren, is Dicky Gatlin, an accountant with Gene Sledge Drilling Corp.

Mrs. Page, who calls herself an "early childhood advocate," was defeated in 1979 by 5 percent of the vote. She said she has chosen to run again to provide a voice for the elementary schools.

"I have three children in public school and I have noticed the class sizes are becoming larger and larger.

Election 81 school board

I very much see a need for new elementary schools," she said, referring to the $5.6 million bond proposal which if passed April 4 will allow the construction of two new elementary schools. "We need to furnish more classrooms, to keep the classes smaller."

Mrs. Page said she also is supporting the other $1.05 million proposed for high school improvements, part of which would be funneled toward the building of a new library at Midland High School. "When the Texas Accreditation Agency visited here, they found the library space at Midland High vastly inadequate," she said. "It's extremely imperative to do something about this."

Mrs. Page said her long history of volunteer work in the community has allowed her to develop research skills to thoroughly assess programs to find the best means for their implementation. "I don't think you can expect a businessman to take out 20 to 30 hours a week," she said. "It's unrealistic. Although they may find the time to serve, they really don't have the time a volunteer does."

The 37-year-old housewife, who has lived in Midland for 14 years, is a member of the City Council PTA Board and has served as a delegate to the Objectives for Midland in the 80s.

Mrs. Page, who holds a bachelor of administration degree from The University of Texas at Arlington, said her conservative philosophy will be a plus factor if she is re-elected to the school board. "I'm very conservative," she said. "I don't make changes for change's sake. I'm sensitive to the needs of the classroom and will be able to bring that to the board. I have served on Midland's school board for three years. I am familiar with the policies and procedures of this school district."

Although Midland offers one of the highest teachers salaries in the state, Mrs. Page feels the school district's hiring procedures are failing to attract the best qualified teachers.

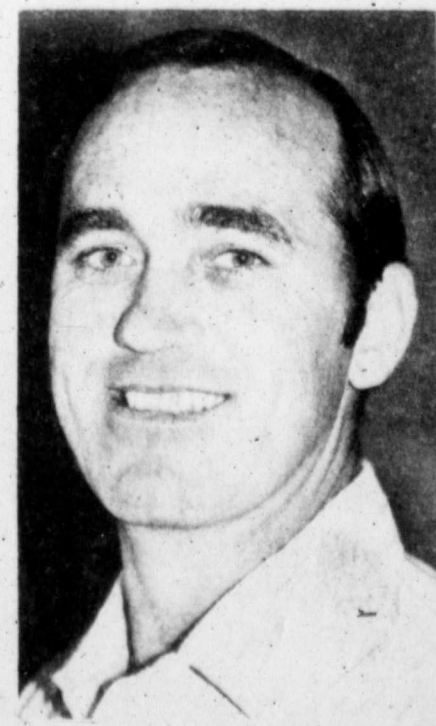

"Right now, I see that there's not really anyone informed about hiring procedures," she said. "The majority of new teachers aren't hired until August. We're missing the new college graduates and the cream of the crop."

Mrs. Page said if the teacher competency tests currently under consideration by a House subcommittee fail to pass, she would propose that prospective teachers score at least 500 on

Oil industry funded campaigns

Study shows 241 candidates got gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political action committees connected with the oil and gas industry funneled more than $6 million into the campaign chests of selected congressional candidates during the 1980 elections, according to a study released Saturday.

The study, released by the National Committee for an Effective Congress, a liberal political action organization, said 241 congressional candidates received $5,000 or more from the various industry groups.

"This type of massive expenditure by a selfish special interest poses a real threat to our political process and the well-being of every American," said Russell Hemenway, the organization's national director. "The fact is the oil and gas PACs outspent the national Democratic Party committees."

The organization said 40 percent of House incumbents receiving $5,000 or more were on committees of major importance to the industry, while an additional 20 percent served on committees of secondary importance.

Hemenway said the money also was targeted "to defeat key progressive senators and congressmen who tried to protect the consumer."

The committee compiled its study from financial disclosure reports filed by 190 political action committees connected with the oil and gas industry, ranging from small companies to the industry giants.

The study showed that four Senate candidates received more than $100,000 from the industry PACs, all of them Republicans, all in hotly contested races and all of whom were successful.

Quayle's office called the report "shoddy press releasing."

"We specifically took no money from a PAC that was connected with a major oil company," said Rich Galen, Quayle's press secretary. "The senator said early on that he would not be beholden to the major oil companies. None of those gave any money to us by design."

He said the total may have come from small contributions by a number of smaller companies, many with Indiana connections.

"There's a whole lot of oil and gas drilling in Indiana, most of it very small," said Galen. "There's also Standard Oil of Indiana, from which we received no money."

An aide to Grassley, who asked not to be identified, said the senator "feels no special obligation to respond to contributors, but does feel an obligation to vote on the issues." She said Grassley is "committed to free enterprise," and received many contributions from political action committees that share his views.

Abdnor's press secretary, Mike Freeman, said the figures were misleading.

"When you look at the magnitude of the spending in the Abdnor-McGovern race, we could be high on the list of a lot of PAC groups," he said. But, he added, "a lot did not come from the major oil companies."

He denied any implication that contributions would influence Abdnor's positions.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, right, interviews Texas Congressman J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin in the first of Hance's television series broadcast from the Capitol in Washington. Pickle is chairman of the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Social Security. The two congressmen will discuss the Social Security program and President Reagan's proposed budget cuts and how those cuts could affect the program. The Hance TV show will be broadcast on KOSA-TV Channel 7 April 5 at 10:45 p.m.

Byrd links budget, elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attempting to tie the Senate budget battle to the 1982 elections, Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday that Americans will feel the pain of Republican cuts and "will know who inflicted it."

Byrd readily agreed that Republicans who now control the Senate may be able to defeat all Democratic amendments to restore money for veterans, elderly people, subway riders and parents seeking loans for college students.

"They are the people who are going to feel the pain," Byrd said at his regular Saturday news conference. "And they are going to know who inflicted it."

"We're attempting to bring about adjustments that will plug some of the holes in the president's safety net," Byrd said.

He said Democrats agree with Reagan's overall effort to cut the budget to bring down inflation and said their attempts to restore money would not jeopardize overall cuts.

He said the Democrats seek to make all their restorations out of the $2.3 billion cushion in a bill now being debated by the Senate that would cut $36.4 billion for next year.

The president requested $48.6 billion in cuts but the budget bill now before the Senate affects $34.1 billion of Reagan's cuts, and would go $2.3 billion further by cutting the $36.4 billion.

But when Byrd was pressed on whether Democrats have a tally sheet to be certain their restorations do not reduce President Reagan's budget cuts, Byrd sidestepped the question.

"Numbers are the fetish of the moment," Byrd said. "Our concern is people — to protect them from falling through the safety net."

In angry wrangling Friday, Senate Democrats were maneuvered into cutting $200 million from foreign aid, transferring the money to make up part of the president's $1.6 billion cut in the federal school lunch program.

The Democrats were defeated when they tried to transfer $104 million from foreign aid to veterans programs.

Byrd said the Democrats will have amendments next week to restore funds for mass transportation, college student loans, regional economic development, funds to help poor people pay energy bills, and education programs.

But Byrd said he could not predict winning any of them.

Budget cuts could close hospitals

Some 15 to 19 Veterans Administration hospitals — two of them in Texas — are in some danger of being closed if the Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) proposed budgetary cut-backs of $963 million from veterans' programs in 1981 and 1982 go into effect as planned, according to the Disabled American Veterans (DAV).

Among the hospitals that may be affected are facilities at Big Spring and Marlin.

"We in the DAV do not want to criticize the administration of any president, particularly one so new to the White House," said Stan Pealer, DAV national commander. "But these cuts will definitely penalize America's wartime, service-connected disabled veterans, and we see them as another move toward the total destruction of the VA medical system."

Stunned leaders of the 686,000-member DAV said the action by OMB Director David A. Stockman "breaks campaign promises made by President Reagan and directly contradicts the veterans' plan of the Republican Party's 1980 campaign platform."

With heavy reductions slated for other federal health care programs, the vast majority of these veterans will be stranded with no adequate sources of medical treatment, Pealer said. In addition, the cuts will make it increasingly difficult for veterans to file claims for disability compensation and other veterans' benefits, he said.

Eliminating the VA's Operation Outreach as proposed would abandon at least half a million or more Vietnam veterans who need the psychological readjustment counseling the program provides, Pealer said.

"Perhaps Mr. Stockman, who has never worn a uniform though he came of age during the Vietnam era, does not understand the nation's moral obligation to veterans disabled in its defense," Pealer said. "But citizens whose lives were harmed physically or psychologically in our Armed Forces during our wars are not just another special interest group."

"This kind of treatment of disabled veterans and their families is totally unacceptable to the DAV, the organization congressionally chartered to represent these citizens before our government," he continued. "I hope Mr. Stockman's anti-war activism of yesteryear has not turned into anti-veteran activism today."

In a campaign speech on Aug. 18, 1980, President Reagan said, "To me it is unconscionable that veterans in need are denied hospital and medical care because of inadequate funding which has closed beds and cut health care personnel within the VA."

In addition, the 1980 Republican Party Platform asserts, "...it is of vital importance to continue and expand the health programs provided to veterans through the Veterans Administration hospitals. Here we see the need for increased access to care, especially for older veterans."

Despite these promises to veterans, the DAV officials maintain the Reagan administration's OMB direction has proposed cuts that far exceed the Carter administration reductions denounced in both the Republican Platform and the president's August speech.

"The Carter people beat the VA medical system to the ground," Pealer said. "Now the Reagan people are coming in for the kill." He said his group will pull no punches in its battle to defend the system upon which 2½ million veterans depend for treatment for their service-connected disabilities.

Other proposed cuts include: —A reorganization of and personnel reduction in the veterans' claims processing system —Reductions in medical staff, specific facilities and patients — 933 nurses; 297 doctors; more than 4,000 medical support employees; 1,800 hospital beds; 1.5 million outpatient visits and 3,268 nursing care patients in VA centers

—Termination of psychological readjustment counseling for Vietnam veterans

—Elimination of medical staff recruiting programs

—Cancellation of hospital construction projects in two cities (Baltimore, Md., and Camden, N.J.) and deferral of medical facility construction projects in nine cities (Brooklyn, N.Y.; Chillicothe, Ohio; Denver; East Orange, N.J.; Gainesville, Fla.; Long Beach and Palo Alto, Calif.; New Orleans, La.; and Washington, D.C.)

Other cities involved in the possible facility closings include Fort-Lyon, Colo.; Iron Mountain and Saginaw, Mich.; Miles City and Fort Harrison, Mont.; Grand Island, Neb.; Muskego, Okla.; Livermore and Los Angeles, Calif.; Newington, Conn.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Souix Falls, S.D.; Fargo, N.D.; Boise, Idaho; Boston; New York City; and Chicago.

Midland County Red Cross chapter to join celebration

The American Red Cross celebrates 100 years of service in 1981 and, according to James L. Roberts, chapter chairman, the Midland County Chapter is planning its participation in the nationwide centennial celebration.

The chapter, which was chartered in 1917, is collecting information relevant to the history of the Red Cross in this area, Roberts said.

The chapter board of directors request persons who have been, but are not currently affiliated with the local chapter or any other chapter or with the American Red Cross overseas to provide information on their affiliation.

The information, Roberts said, should include a brief description of the affiliation — date, location, posi-

Similar information regarding the affiliation of any other family member will be appreciated.

The information should be sent to the Midland County Chapter, American Red Cross, P.O. Box 1706, Midland, Texas 79702.

Winds to die down Monday

Skies will be partly cloudy today and Monday as the wind finally subsides and temperatures rise on Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Winds will continue to be strong and gusty today, however, as they come from the west to southwest at 20-30 mph. The high today should be in the upper 60s, so it should be a good day for kite-flying if you have strong string.

Temperatures will become warmer on Monday, climbing to a high near 80 degrees.

The low tonight should be in the mid-40s.

Saturday's temperatures reached a high of 65 degrees — far short of the record high for the date set at 92 degrees in 1963.

The low Saturday was a warm 53 degrees, although it may have seemed colder with the winds. The highest winds recorded Saturday at the airport reached a peak gust of 47 mph at 3:42 p.m.

The record low for the date was 18 degrees, set in 1944.

the National Teachers Examination before being granted an interview. She also is suggesting teachers write a few paragraphs at the time of the interview to test spelling and grammar.

"There are now no high standards that ensure our hiring the best possible teachers," she said. "Midland should not apologize for implementing a policy of high standards and expectations when it hires teachers. If a teacher cannot express himself well in writing, then I feel that he will have a hard time expressing himself effectively in front of a classroom."

However, her opponent, who decided to file right before the deadline because he "doesn't like to see anyone run for any position unchallenged," said teacher competency tests would be a discredit.

The proposed bill which has already been passed by the Texas Senate would require basic skills testing at the sophomore college level and a full exam after graduation prior to certification.

"It's one of the most degrading things we can do to a school teacher," Gatlin said. "CPA's take a test and afterward no one thinks to doubt their authority or integrity again. Once a professional is tested, certified, and licensed, I don't think there is a need for a test again."

"I would challenge anybody who came to me and said a teacher is incompetent," Gatlin said. "I just don't believe there are any incompetent teachers. I can't see that their peers would let them exist. I don't know anybody that's qualified to perform these tests. When you start doing this, you start threatening them."

Gatlin said the only way he would condone any such tests is if they were employed to determine salary increases. "As far as testing teachers for competency, they have already proved their competency. If you're going to challenge that, then challenge the university system."

Gatlin said the school district also is investing too much money testing school children. "We need to look at this very closely," he said. "We're spending too much time testing children and that takes away from teaching. The very most important thing is to get every child that wants an education, an education."

Although Gatlin said he has no complaints with current school board and administration policies, he said, "I don't like the way they shuffle around elementary school principals. My son has gone to the same school for four years and he has had three different principals. If one principal doesn't do a good job, he could say, 'well, I'm not going to be here next year. It's not my problem.'"

"It would benefit the parents and the children to have more continuity," Gatlin added.

Concerning the school bond election, Gatlin said he will vote yes on the entire package. "At this point, I don't see how I can vote any other way. We can't put this off. Odessa has kids going to school a half a day because they don't have facilities," he said. "Where are these kids going to be by the time they reach fourth grade? If you wait until you absolutely have to have a new school, then you're in trouble."

Gatlin, 35, is currently a graduate student at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin where he is working on a CPA license. He holds a valid teaching certificate and has a bachelor's degree in physical education and business administration.

With two children in Midland public schools, Gatlin said he and his wife have attended PTA meetings and helped support the PTA.

Editor's Report

cannot remember when an industry as vital to our economy as the car business has faced a problem so serious it needs candid consultation between the nations involved.

Nor are we the only country searching for solutions. Bernard D. Kaplan, Hearst European correspondent, writes how France solves the dilemma of Japanese car imports without hurting its own automotive industry. The French have made an art out of nit-picking: holding up the sale of Japanese models until they match imposed standards of road-worthiness. It's not protectionism, according to the French, simply defense of local products. As a result, only 80,000 Japanese autos — 3 percent of the market — will be sold in France in 1981, the same as last year.

Actually, the French are paying back the Japanese in their own coin. The Japanese go to great lengths to conceal from the outside world their own delays in moving foreign-made products onto the home market. So, they don't beef about the diabolical methods the French use in keeping Japanese-made vehicles down to a minimum. The French motorist, by the way, wouldn't mind buying a Japanese import, but the point is, as Kaplan explains merrily, they really can't.

AS A NATION, we've never been known to pursue a policy of national chicanery which, I suppose, rules out this kind of French connection. Obviously, the 3 percent of the Japanese chalk up with car imports into France is puny and accounts for little more than rock garden decoration in a teeming population of 116 million crammed into a hunk of real estate slightly smaller than Montana.

So, what gives then with Japan to make it one of the industrialized "miracles" of the modern world? It stems from the inter-relation of government, management and labor. Since Japan began to pick up the pieces after their shattering defeat in World War II, its home-front cooperation has even put the long-time model of West Germany to shame. The West German success has for years been highly publicized; the Japanese have only lately watched the world blink in wonder.

The United States in particular, blinks, wonders and, let's hope, learns from our ex-enemies. Pulling together except in times of war doesn't come naturally to Americans, traditionally free spirits, free enterprisers and in business, of course, fierce competitors. Our car industry, though, is in a desperately depressed state and emergency measures or even innovations borrowed from abroad are worth examining.

What made our capitalistic system great and vibrant in the recent past — indeed, the envy of the industrialized world — has been the willingness to take chances, to improve on products sometimes first developed abroad and then to make them better and cheaper. The American market has until only yesterday, it seems, been the biggest and the best and this isn't a mark of chauvinism or reaching out to grasp at nostalgia.

TAKE A QUICK LOOK at the dismal picture before us. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, the big three of the U.S. automotive industry reported staggering losses for 1980 that totalled $4 billion. The scene is made bleaker with the tens of thousands of auto workers who have been laid off. Hopelessness is hardly a stimulant for production.

A split in the Cabinet of President Reagan has already deferred one of the most important economic decisions of his young administration. It has been looking for relief for the troubled car industry by asking Japan to restrain auto exports into the U.S. voluntarily. The Japanese government tried to beat the administration and Congress to the punch with its own declaration of self-restraint but didn't spell out quotas or details.

Last year, Japanese car shipments to the U.S. hit 1.8 million and took about 25 percent of the new car market. A bill in the U.S. Senate would limit Japanese car imports to 1.2 million while another, a little more generous, would fix the total at 1.6 million.

The Japanese rush to try to fend off U.S. congressional legislation sounds to me like the first shot in a negotiating pattern. Their imports though this month are calculated to be around 2 percent below that of last year. That percentage exceeds substantially what Congress has in mind. A Japanese government declaration about voluntary self-restraint usually amounts to an order without the sanction of law, euphemistically called "administrative guidance." Japanese industries, which have far closer links to their government than do their counterparts here, always go along with the government for the greater good and national profitability.

IN HIS CAMPAIGN among blue collar workers in auto-producing regions, Reagan pledged that he would aim to convince the Japanese of the requirement for restraint.

Eager to please, people around Prime Minister Suzuki think that an accommodation could be devised with the U.S. before his visit to Washington in May. If I gauge the mood in Washington correctly, the Japanese had better begin talking specifics now!

As for us — as I mentioned earlier — there's nothing inconsistent about capitalist countries involving themselves in a cooperative way with government. After all, Japan is a successful exponent of the capitalistic system, too.

Policewoman dies of gunshot wound

DENVER (AP) — A 24-year-old Denver policewoman was shot fatally in the back of the head Saturday by a gunman who apparently waited in ambush until she arrived home from work, police said.

Kathleen Garcia died at Denver General Hospital at 2:40 p.m. Saturday, a hospital spokeswoman said, about 10 hours after she was wounded outside her home.

Extra detectives and officers were assigned to the case, a Detective Bureau spokesman said. Police were going over recordings of Ms. Garcia's radio transmissions for leads on what might have motivated the shooting, the bureau spokesman said. He asked not to be identified.

they see it, but cannot define it any more precisely in advance, the definition of drug paraphernalia is vague and overbroad.

"Being convinced that parts of the ordinances are vague and overbroad, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment right of due process, we reverse and enjoin enforcement of the ordinances."

Although local law enforcement officers agree that the bill proposed for Texas could stand some revision in the area of definition, they nonetheless would like to see it pass.

"It wouldn't stop the use of drugs," said Sgt. Joe Carr, a narcotics officer with the Midland Police Department. "But it would take away paraphernalia that's so easy get and make it harder to obtain."

"The bill should be narrowed down to things that are normally used for drugs and nothing else, things specifically designed for drug use. 'Power Hitters,' (plastic, bottle-type devices that are squeezed sharply to force marijuana smoke into the lungs at a high velocity) for instance. They're manufactured specifically for using grass and even have a picture of a marijuana leaf on them."

"SPOONS CAN BE used for heroin or beans, and there are still people who roll their own cigarettes. However, you can buy flavored and colored papers which are specifically used for grass."

"Yes, there'd be problems enforcing it — particularly in terms of manpower — but it would be a good tool for getting the criminal element off the streets."

Requesting anonymity, another narcotics officer concurred with Carr and added:

"No one can write a perfect law. But the key phrase in this (bill) is 'intended for use.' All this law does is try to slow the manufacture and marketing of items that are obviously intended for drug use."

"There is a danger in the law, though, because some officers will abuse it. Instead of enforcing it in the spirit in which it was written, they'll take it out of context and use it to get back at a store owner, maybe, who may have beaten another case."

"But you can do that with any law: use it for harassment. And people shouldn't say they don't want the law just because the Supreme Court might rule it's too vague. The Supreme Court has been known to reverse itself — based on the prevailing politics and public sentiment of the times."

"Back during World War II, the Court ruled it was constitutional to incarcerate Americans of Japanese descent. Yet after the war was over and passions had subsided, the Court said it was unconstitutional."

"Even if Texas courts rule the paraphernalia bill unconstitutional, it can be refined and re-refined until it meets court guidelines, like what was done with the death penalty in Texas."

"The paraphernalia bill might be too broad as written, but that doesn't mean the concept is bad."

Sensational custody trial excites Liberty residents

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — One local historian noted there hasn't been as much excitement in this thriving Liberty County seat since John Wayne rang the town's liberty bell here in 1956.

It is true that Wayne, while filming a movie nearby, did participate in a celebration here.

But he could not have created more attention that the pulsating child custody suit filed by Jean Daniel Murph to gain custody of her two nephews born to her brother, Price Daniel Jr., and Vickie Daniel during their tempestuous four-year marriage.

"It's more like a soap opera," sniffed 76-year-old pistol-toting balliff Will Autrey, whose difficult job it is to keep order as the drama of one of the county's most influential families unfolds daily in the courtroom.

During lighter moments last week, spectators witnessed attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes — who once offered to defend the person who shot J.R. Ewing of the "Dallas" television soap opera — rolling on the courtroom floor in a demonstration of how ambulance attendants subdued Mrs. Daniel the night her husband was found shot to death.

Theresa Jasper prefers jail over answering questions

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The stepdaughter of a convicted hit man considered a prime suspect in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., has chosen jail instead of immunity in a 22-month old investigation officials say is nearing an end.

Theresa Starr Jasper, 23, has been sentenced to an indefinite jail term after she refused to answer questions posed by a federal grand jury even though she had been granted immunity from prosecution.

Under an immunity grant, the person being questioned may not claim protection from self-incrimination by citing the 5th Amendment.

Ms. Jasper, stepdaughter of Charles V. Harrelson, who has been targeted by FBI agents investigating the May 29, 1979 shooting of Wood outside his San Antonio townhouse, was sentenced Friday by U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears.

"I don't want anybody I love to go to jail, either — like my mother," she told Spears when he informed her he did not want to confine her for refusing to answer questions.

Harrelson, being held in Houston on unrelated state drug and firearms charges, is married to Jo Ann Harrelson, Ms. Jasper's mother.

Don Ervin, a Houston attorney who represents Harrelson, his wife and Ms. Jasper, said the slender, attractive blonde was asked Friday during the grand jury session if she knew whether Harrelson killed Wood.

He said Ms. Jasper refused to answer 10 questions in the hour-long session. The panel is scheduled to resume its investigation Monday.

"I suppose you know I don't want to put you in jail," Spears told her as she stood quietly in the courtroom Friday, at one point asking a reporter to scratch her back because her hands were manacled behind her back.

Spears then asked her if she wanted to talk to Ervin.

"Your honor, I don't need to talk to him," she replied. "I'm not going to answer any (grand jury) questions."

Ervin tried to persuade Spears to stay execution of the contempt sentence and to free Ms. Jasper on bail pending an appeal of the contempt finding to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Spears refused the request after a half hour's consideration.

Fulton County, Ga., Medical Examiner Dr. Robert Stives checks an X-ray for clues relating to the slayings of 20 Atlanta children. For now, the spotlight has moved from street-smart cops to the pathologists and laboratory technicians as the search for the killer or killers of the children continues.

Atlanta search involves scientists, pathologists

By NANCY KENNEY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Scientists using microscopes and tweezers are taking the spotlight in Atlanta's child murder investigation as fibers and hairs emerge as tantalizing links among some of the deaths.

Police officers briefed on tiny wisps of material found on children's clothes and bodies have searched the homes and cars of suspects inch by inch, hoping to find matching fibers, said Byron Dawson, the assistant director of the Georgia Crime Laboratory.

But Dawson said nothing has been found which positively matches the trace evidence now mounted on slides at the crime lab.

"The key is finding a good suspect," Dawson said in an interview. "Until we find one and match up the fibers, they can't do us any good at all."

Twenty black children have been slain and two have disappeared here over the past 20 months. The fiber evidence reportedly links the slayings of seven children, and sources say the fibers are of several colors and types.

State crime lab officials have refused to divulge details of the fibers, fearing a killer may throw away a carpet or cloth which could be telltale evidence in a murder trial.

Because all of the bodies have been dumped at various sites after the slayings, authorities have no crime scene to comb for clues. That has forced medical examiners to take extra pains to preserve whatever evidence might be found on the bodies, according to Fulton County Medical Examiner Robert Stives.

Stives said each body is undressed on a white sheet, then placed on an examining table. The sheet, containing the child's clothes, is carefully folded and transferred to the Georgia Crime Laboratory.

Investigators equipped with magnifying glasses and fine-pointed tweezers peer over every inch of the sheet and clothes, mounting microscopic particles on slides under high-intensity light, according to Dawson.

"You can take a pile of stuff off any clothes from any particular case," said Larry Peterson, the crime lab investigator working on the case full time.

Dawson offered examples: "There's pollen on all of us, for one thing. If he's a nail biter, you'll find pieces of fingernail. If there was a coal-burning fireplace in his home, there may be coal dust."

Sightings called 'false alarms'

ATLANTA (AP) — Members of the special police task force investigating the deaths and disappearances of 22 black children rushed to an Atlanta neighborhood Saturday after volunteers reported seeing two missing teen-agers. But police determined both sightings were false alarms.

Investigators rejected the report that two volunteers spotted 16-year-old Joseph Bell, missing since March 3, saying it was a case of mistaken identity — as was the sighting reported by a volunteer searcher who believed he saw a 13-year-old boy who vanished March 11.

Bell's disappearance is being investigated by the special task force set up because of the deaths and disappearances of 22 black children since July 1979. Although police say 13-year-old Timothy Hill apparently ran away, and his case is being handled by the missing persons bureau, any missing child draws special attention in Atlanta.

After the sighting of the boy resembling Hill, about 50 of the 100 volunteers who had been checking a 10-square-mile area regrouped to search the west end neighborhood.

Search team captain Gary Williams called police after he saw a black youth wearing a red windbreaker, light T-shirt and blue jeans. The outfit matched a description of clothes worn by Hill when neighbors said they saw him earlier last week. But police said they found the boy Williams saw, and he was not Hill.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown has said police have received several reports of Hill being seen.

The other child whose case is being investigated by the special task force is 10-year-old Daron Glass, who vanished Sept. 14.

The other sighting that was ruled a case of mistaken identity was reported by two volunteers who said they saw a youth resembling Bell leaving a house, said Atlanta City Councilman Arthur Langford.

Police located the youth and determined he was not Bell, according to a source close to the task force. The source asked not to be identified.

Submarine delivered

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The attack submarine Bremerton was turned over to the Navy Saturday, becoming the 11th of the SSN 688 rocket-equipped subs that are the first string of U.S. anti-submarine strategy.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the guest speaker at the commissioning ceremony at the submarine base on the Thames River, called the Bremerton "a reminder that the U.S. can stand up to the Soviet Union."

Williams' search party, which included three members of Hill's family, concentrated on Atlanta's west end, where Bell and Hill lived. Several neighbors told the searchers Hill was seen often in the past several days.

"We've talked with numerous people who have seen him," said 76-year-old Joe Gainer, who has taken part in all 24 weekend searches by volunteers for clues in the deaths and disappearances. "If they pulled those police out of their cars and put some overalls on them, they'd find him this afternoon."

Search coordinators said Saturday's balmy weather was responsible for reducing the number of searchers. About 400 people have participated in some weekend hunts.

The volunteers knocked on doors, questioned passers-by and checked abandoned houses. In many previous searches, volunteers armed with long sticks tramped through wooded areas.

Williams warned searchers not to run toward Hill if they saw him. "He might get panicky. He knows what the armbands mean," Williams said, pointing to the green ribbons which have come to symbolize concern for the missing and slain children.

Senator reportedly said influence reached White House

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sen. Harrison Williams Jr., facing trial next week on Abscam charges, allegedly told an undercover FBI agent while discussing a mine deal that "contracts" would be "no problem" because he had contacts reaching into the White House, according to court records.

A transcript of the conversation, which the government said was videotaped in an Arlington, Va., hotel room on June 28, 1979, was made available Wednesday by a clerk of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

It was included in records of the Abscam trial of two Philadelphia councilmen who were convicted of accepting cash from an undercover agent. The convictions were overturned on grounds the defendants were entrapped.

Williams, a New Jersey Democrat, is scheduled to go on trial Monday in federal court in New York on charges of bribery, conspiracy and receiving a financial interest in a titanium mine in return for using his political influence.

The conversation in Virginia allegedly concerned a titanium mine that Williams was promoting and that a fictitious sheik, played by an FBI agent, planned to purchase. The sheik allegedly was to give Williams a secret interest in the mine.

"We have something that is of the highest value and most unusual in our country, in the world as a matter of fact," the transcripts quote Williams as saying. "Titanium is now coming on to be one of the most valuable minerals or metals for space, for aviation, for defense, submarines, for the skin of the submarine. The Soviets are doing it; we're not. We are behind in this respect ...

"I only involve myself in something that I just completely believe in. With great pleasure I'll talk to the president of the United States about it and, you know, in a personal way and get him as enthusiastic and excited because we know what our country needs."

The transcripts indicate Williams also said he had influence with then-

Vice President Walter Mondale — "He used to work for me, on the committee" — with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — "a neighbor back in New Jersey" — and the secretaries of the defense, Navy and Army departments.

"Well, in that respect, then, with you being in that position, contracts and the like would not be a problem," agent Tony DeVito, masquerading as the sheik's representative, was quoted as saying.

"No problem, no," Williams replied, according to the transcripts.

Williams has denied any wrongdoing, contending he was set up by a government informant, Melvin Weinberg, who allegedly coached him on what to say to the sheik.

According to the transcripts, Williams attended the meeting with Mayor Angelo Errichetti of Camden, N.J., who has been convicted in an earlier Abscam case.

Indicted along with Williams and Errichetti were Alex Feinberg, a Cherry Hill, N.J., lawyer, and George Katz, a North Jersey garbage contractor and Democratic fundraiser.

DeVito was quoted as making it clear that Williams would receive stock in the mine for his influence, allegedly an 18 percent interest, and that the certificates would be held in another man's name.

"I talked with the mayor and Alex and we were discussing your shares and how to conceal it best and we came up with who, who do you want, or what name or how are we gonna handle it as far as you're concerned," DeVito was quoted as saying.

Williams was quoted as responding: "Well, in my situation, with Alex, you know Alex, we're very close ... I would work my situation with Alex..."

In New York, meanwhile, another in a series of motions by Williams to have charges against him dismissed was rejected by a three-judge panel of the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals. Two motions to have his trial delayed are still pending before another panel on the circuit court in Manhattan.

Teacher wants curriculum control

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth teacher who had "serious reservations" about a public school curriculum bill said, with changes, it could be a "springboard for excellence" in the classroom.

Dorothy Rosson, history teacher at Dunbar High School, also told a Senate committee Wednesday the bill "could be the beginning of curriculum sanity for the state of Texas."

Ms. Rosson suggested local districts should determine curriculum on the advice of teachers and administrators, and the Legislature should stay out of the process.

The Education Committee was so impressed with the teacher's comments, even though it was critical of the Legislature's role in education, that an aide was told to make copies of her written testimony.

Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, testified the bill to establish a "well-balanced" curriculum results from a "hue and cry" for a return to basics.

Haley, a teacher for 12½ years, said the bill would make it state policy that curriculum "belongs in the hands of local school districts and the State Board of Education."

A "well-balanced curriculum" would include courses in 11 areas — English language arts; other languages; mathematics; science; health; physical education; fine arts; social studies; economics; business education and vocational education.

Ms. Rosson said if the Legislature was concerned about teaching the three R's — reading, writing and arithmetic — it should allow teachers to focus entirely on those subjects through the third grade.

She said teachers in grades one through three now spend part of their time teaching fire safety, drug education and career education.

"It should be stressed that legislative-mandated curriculum has eaten away time for the three R's in the early grades," she said.

Haley and Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, are sponsoring the same curriculum bill in each house.

Haley said there had been a "virtual hodge-podge" in curriculum since 1907. As an example he cited 12 bills pending before the Legislature which would add such courses as "how to be a parent," "racial tolerance" and "cardiovascular-pulmonary resuscitation."

"I don't necessarily agree with a lot of people who have total disdain for the State Board of Education," said Haley. "A lot of people are saying they are a horrible group of people. I disagree with that."

Several opponents to Snelson's bill testified, in effect, they did not trust the Board of Education to arrange a well-balanced curriculum. "I do not feel completely comfortable about the wisdom of some of their decisions," said Margy Waldrip, a former teacher and currently a school trustee at New Braunfels.

The bill was sent to a subcommittee for further study.

Teddy collector's paper prints only the bear facts

By LISA SCHROEPFER
Associated Press Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — As a little girl, Barbara Wolters had the usual child's complement of toys and teddy bears.

Some people might say that in the last five years things have gotten out of hand.

At most recent count — more keep swarming in — nearly 200 teddies have taken over two rooms in her home in St. Paul.

There's Lump-Lump, a 44-inch giant, and Douglas Bearbanks, who sports a smoking jacket, ascot and pinstripe pants. And a koala bear from New Zealand.

There's Bear Claus, a modern sort wearing a Santa hat with ear holes and a red T-shirt proclaiming his name. Another bear sings in German, and there's another furry brown bear with a startling, pink, person's face.

But the real star is Dumper, bear-in-chief of The Teddy Tribune. The monthly 12-page newsletter, which the 34-year-old bear collector publishes under Dumper's direction, has a following in Australia, New Zealand, England, Germany, Sweden, Austria and most states in the United States.

The newsletter first appeared in April 1980 as a sample. Barbara suspected there were many bear collectors like herself looking for a forum for finding out "what's the latest in bears."

The market was immense, the idea struck its readers, and now Barbara, her mother, May, and Dumper have a full-blown enterprise operating out of the bears' rooms in their house.

Barbara's bears have been featured on local newscasts and in newspapers.

Some people are disconcerted by Barbara's penchant for talking to her teddy bears. But that's the fun of it, Barbara exclaims.

"My bear gets a lot of mail from other bears," Barbara said, averaging 35 letters a week, more at Christmastime. So Dumper started his own page, and Barbara "consults" him about everything that goes into the paper.

The bears' daily adventures are cataloged in three hefty photo albums that read like books. They're full of scenarios, like partying bears who all end up zonked on a lawn chair. Or a day at the zoo, where the teddies line up on the railing and watch their favorites, the "real" bears.

But the fantasy only begins there. It's now in vogue to send your bear on extended trips, often out of the country to the homes of other bear friends. These trips are covered extensively in the Tribune, and describe traveling accommodations.

Short trips often mean a simple plastic bag. Packing becomes more complicated for trips to Illinois, California, or New Zealand. Wolter Bear's traveling gear includes a bed, nightclothes, a chest of drawers and a braided rug. Wolter's last trip was to Bermuda, and he hasn't returned yet. Hopes are that he didn't end up in the Triangle.

Barbara isn't oblivious to the fact that some people think her lifestyle is, well, unusual.

"People think it's silly and childish. And it is...that's why bear collectors are so happy there are others around. Their neighbors think they're..." and she rolls her eyes and starts to hum. She says it's fun and they don't care, as long as they have company.

Her subscribers tell tales that show Barbara is in plenty of company, and the bear escapades often appear in the newsletter.

Barbara is somewhat alone in the Midwest. Teddy bear-collecting is raging on the West Coast, especially in California, where clubs meet regularly, sometimes with more than 200 people at one event. Portland, Ore., is also a teddy bear stronghold.

Teddy bear rallies are becoming a regular thing in England, the next coming up in August 1981.

Who knows? Your favorite kitty may be star

NEW YORK (AP) — Many cat shows have a separate class for household pets. So a cat doesn't have to be pedigreed to compete and win an award.

In fact, according to the Pet Information Bureau, thousands of people have entered their housecats in competitions and have gone home with a ribbon.

The first step toward entering a cat in competition is registering with a local cat club, the bureau says. Ask each cat club about its regulations for showing cats and be certain your pet qualifies. The Cat Fanciers Association, for instance, requires that all competing cats be altered.

Just before the show, make sure your cat is clean and well-groomed. Brush and comb it to remove loose hair and polish the coat. If nails are too long, use pet nail clippers to cut them.

If your cat is prone to car sickness when on the road, choose a larger carrier that will accommodate a litter pan. A smaller carrier, however, will keep a nervous pacer confined while calming its nerves.

LOOKERS VS BUYERS

There are two ways to buy a house...quickly with confidence or slowly with Asiatic patience. Some "lookers" end up being just that-lookers. They can spend months, or even years, looking for the right house at the right price.

The longer they look, the more it eventually costs them to buy the same house as inflation keeps pushing their selections higher and higher; continually out of reach.

The confident buyer will make his offer when he sees the right situation. He can often find a good investment when the owner must sell quickly to meet the cash requirements of another purchase or is being transferred and is anxious to get to the new location.

Such sellers don't have luxury of time to wait around for the ultimate top price. They are happy to obtain a reasonable profit and appreciate anything the buyer can do to speed up the sale.

Nobody knows better than your local Realtor where such situations exist. He or she can structure a fair and fast sale to everyone's benefit. But you have to be a "buyer" not a "looker."

Mother filing suit for son killed by tire

By CAMILLA RECCHIA
Hearst Special News Service

BALTIMORE — The mother of a 20-year-old man killed three years ago when a tire allegedly exploded as he tried to install it is seeking $2 million in punitive damages from the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., manufacturer of the multi-piece tire rim.

Barbara Norton, who also is asking $500,000 in compensatory damages, filed suit against Firestone in Baltimore City Superior Court yesterday.

A CBS "60 Minutes" broadcast earlier this month involved alleged dangers of the rim. The TV show charged that the rims might cause tires to blow out while in use.

According to Sheldon Braiterman, Norton's attorney, she decided to take legal action after watching the CBS broadcast. The suit was filed three days before the statute of limitations on the company's possible liability would have run out.

Ronald A. Norton was fitting a tire to the truck when the tire exploded, hit him in the head and knocked him backward into another piece of equipment on March 29, 1978, according to the suit. He died the next day of massive head injuries.

The suit charges that not only was the rim defective, causing the tire to blow apart and explode when installed, but that Firestone knew its rims were defective.

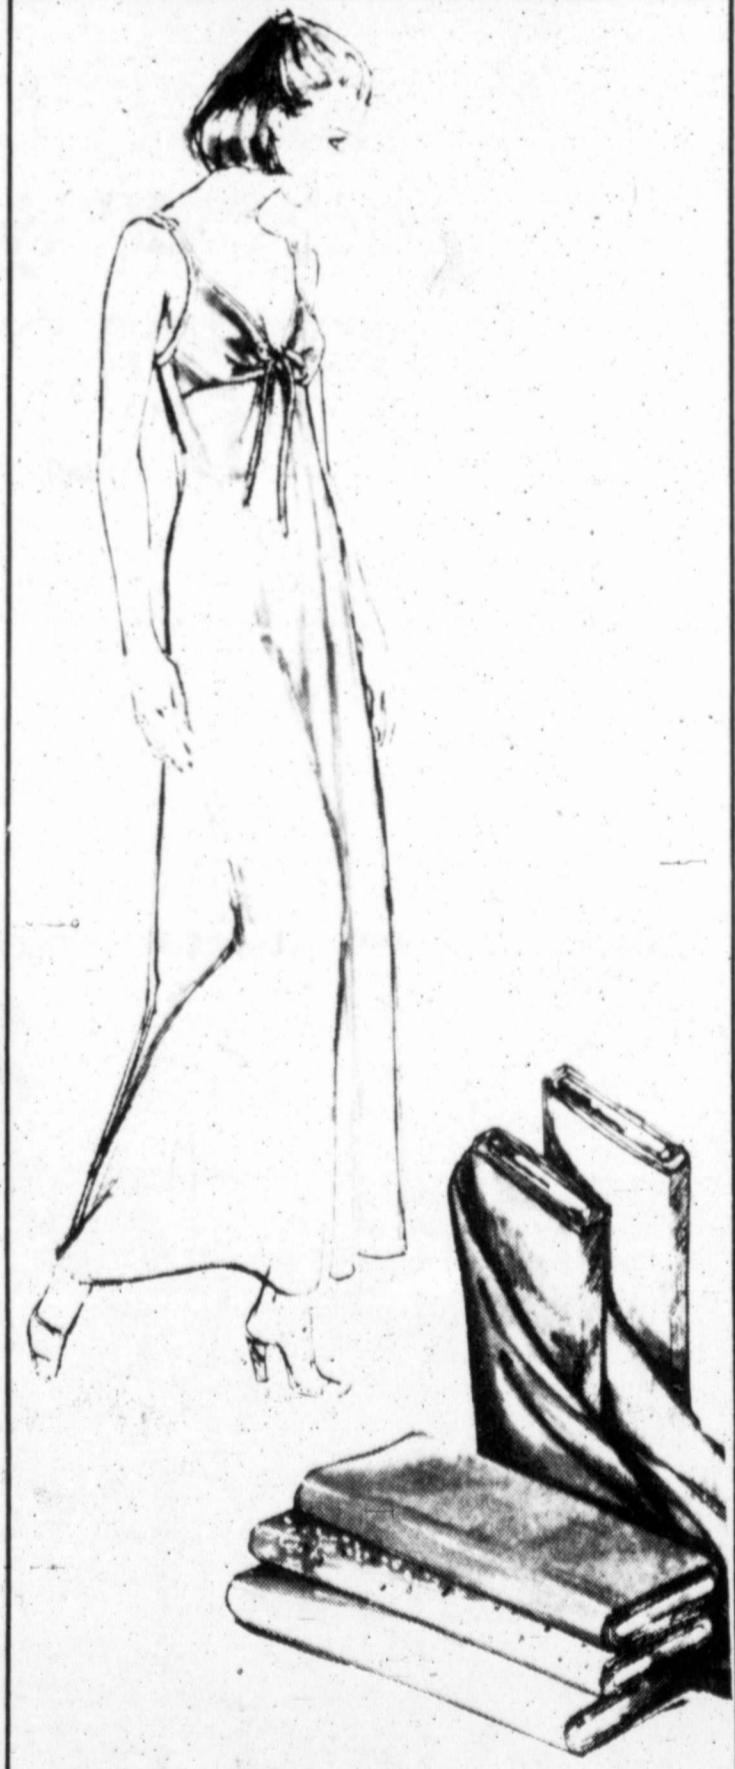

"Firestone deliberately and fraudulently understated and minimized the number of known incidents, claims and lawsuits involving multi-piece rims in testimony and official responses to inquiries by the U.S. Department of Transportation..." the suit claimed.

Ronald Norton was experienced at fitting multi-piece tire rims on trucks and was following the company's instructions for installing them, Braiterman said.

The dead man's mother argued in the suit that, even before her son was killed, Firestone knew the construction of the tire rim "presented an extreme and unusual hazard to the motoring public and particularly to anyone attempting to mount an inflated multi-piece assembly on a vehicle."

Army hopes to follow Israeli example

By JOHN JACOBS
Hearst Special News Service

At 10 a.m. on the first day of the Arab-Israeli Six Day War in 1967, Israeli hospitals were about 80 percent full. Eight hours later, they were down to 20 percent, cleared and waiting for wounded soldiers to arrive from the battle front.

The American military is fond of that story because it provides a model for the kind of military-civilian health system it would like to emulate.

To reach that goal or at least something like it, the Department of Defense has launched what it calls the Civilian-Military Contingency Hospital System to link up with private hospitals in the event of a major war or confrontation abroad. A letter from Dr. John Moxle, III, assistant secretary of defense, explains:

"Because of technical advances in weaponry and the greater mobility of armies today, a future large-scale conflict overseas will probably begin and end very rapidly and produce casualties at a higher rate than any other war in history. The quickened pace and high intensity may not provide time to build the necessary military medical support base to care for all of the casualties returning to this country in the early stage of the conflict."

The most logical solution, he wrote, was to make prior arrangements with private hospitals to handle large numbers of wounded on short notice.

Some groups, however, say they are aghast at what the military is doing, especially now that the Reagan administration at the same time is proposing large cuts in health and social services.

The Pentagon is asking that hospitals with more than 150 beds and located within 50 miles of a major military installation or airfield (some 28 areas in the United States) sign memoranda of understanding to supply 50 or more beds to the military on 24-to-72-hour notice and only in grave national emergencies. It now has about 15,000 beds nationwide, but wants the capability to have 50,000.

"There are two reasons why we need more beds," said James Doherty, director of CMCHS in Washington, a civilian on loan to the Pentagon from the American Hospital Association, which supports the program, along with the American Medical Association.

"We would be dealing with a tremendous number of casualties. This is a hell of a lot different than Vietnam, which had considerable buildup and mobilization. This would be a situation where we'd have to react quickly."

"Also, if an incident occurs of this size and nature, we've got a number of military people heading out to the battlefield. That doesn't leave a lot of people here to treat the injured. Once the wounded are stabilized and returned home, the military capability would be limited."

Doherty said the concept has been in the works for the past five years or so, and planning for it only got under way last March.

But Andrew Sun of San Francisco is one of a number of health planners opposed to the Pentagon's request for voluntary cooperation.

"There's nothing wrong with planning for disaster," he said, "but I question the planning priorities when we don't have capacity for the underserved population. People are asking for cooperation among hospitals for taking care of the medical needs in case of major war when we don't even have that cooperation among hospitals for taking care of the medical needs of the poor."

"And second," Sun continued, "the whole idea of planning for the possibility of war or likelihood of military engagements abroad without adequate public discussion and identification of priorities is inexcusable."

Lee Halterman, district counsel to U.S. Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., was also angered by the proposal. He said the military is trying to camouflage the cost of military preparedness by doing it through the back door.

WASHINGTON — Senate minority whip Alan Cranston, D-California, revealed Thursday he warned Secretary of State Alexander Haig that an assistant's remarks have raised the specter of witch-hunting and a return to McCarthyism.

He urged Haig to clarify his department's intentions to ease the public's concerns.

Cranston disclosed the text of a "Dear Al" letter he sent to Haig saying he and others are "greatly perturbed" by remarks reportedly made Monday by Acting Assistant Secretary John A. Bushnell to the House Inter-American affairs subcommittee.

Bushnell was quoted as saying protests against U.S. policy in El Salvador were the work of a "well-orchestrated effort" by a "worldwide communist network."

Cranston told Haig such a suggestion "is an unfair slur on the motives and the reputations of many people who have an honest difference of opinion with us."

More dangerous yet, wrote the Senate's second-ranking Democrat, "fears have been expressed to me that Mr. Bushnell's remarks could be interpreted as signaling the rise of a new form of international McCarthyism under which all criticism of U.S. policy is to be branded as communist-inspired."

Such an overseas hunt for communists "might spill over into another witch-hunt for domestic communists, such as we sadly experienced in the Red-baiting days of the late Senator Joseph McCarthy," he wrote.

The Californian told Haig he basically supports the Reagan administration's El Salvador policies—"at least to this point"—and has no doubt Soviet and Cuban communists are trying to provoke criticism of the U.S.

The senator said a member of his staff had phoned Bushnell and received some clarification of his remarks.

The Midland Genealogical Society is sponsoring a seminar on the Maryland, Delaware, Southeast Pennsylvania and Chesapeake Bay area from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday in the Midland Woman's Club on East Wadley Avenue.

Guest speaker will be William Miller of Bowie, Md. Pre-registration fee is $12 per person, or $15 at the door. Fee includes the luncheon.

Miller, a past president of Prince George (Md.) Genealogical Society, attended school in El Paso and received a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from the University of Texas at Austin. After working as a civilian engineer at White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico, Miller was assigned to Washington, D.C. to manage NASA's ground instrumentation programs for the manned space efforts leading to the lunar landing in 1969.

During his last six years with NASA, he managed instrumentation testing for space station activities, leading to the joint program with Europe known as Spacelab. This Spacelab will fly as payload for the shuttle "Enterprise," which is expected to be launched in mid-April.

In 1976, Miller retired from government service and began pursuing his interest in genealogy. That year he began two years full-time study of

Elcor groups awarded safety honors

Roy E. Campbell, President announced that employees of four Elcor Corp. groups were awarded first place honors by the Texas Safety Association (TSA) for achieving the best safety records in 1980 among TSA members.

The four groups winning first place awards are The Orloff Corporation's Midland Division Construction Department and Midland Division Fabricated Industrial Systems Department; Elk Corporation of Texas, based in Ennis; and Mosley Machinery Company, Inc., located in El Paso.

Personnel from the four groups won their first place awards by competing in TSA's Occupational Safety and Health Contest with firms which provide products and services similar to the Elcor units. The awards cover all Texas-based operations of each group, including office and supervisory personnel, and is based on the lowest lost time injury frequency rate experience and man-hours accrued in 1980.

Among TSA members that worked between 200,000 and 1,000,000 man-hours in 1980: Orloff's Midland Division construction personnel won the first place award in competition with general contractors primarily engaged in the construction of heavy projects, including petroleum refinery and chemical facilities construction.

Elk employees won the first place award by competing with firms which manufacture asphalt and other saturated felts in roll or shingle form, either smooth or faced with grit. Mosley Machinery personnel won the first place honors through competition with metal working machinery and equipment firms which manufacture machines for pressing, hammering, extruding, shearing, die casting or metal shaping techniques.

Orloff's Midland Division Fabricated Industrial Systems Department (FIS) won the first place award for the TSA Metals Industry category that worked between 50,000 and 200,000 man-hours in 1980. FIS is primarily engaged in fabricating piping and pipe manifolds by cutting, bending, welding and threading pipe.

TSA officials presented the first place awards to representatives of the four Elcor groups during TSA's annual conference this week in Houston. Larry Fitzsimmons, Vice President of Construction, and Ed Mycock, Safety Manager, received the award for Orloff's Construction Department and Fabricated Industrial Systems Department.

Ray Varner, Production Manager for Elk's fiberglass mat plant received the first place award for the Ennis asphalt roofing operations.

Joe Walker, Manager of Human Resources, accepted the first place award for Mosley Machinery employees.

TSA, headquartered in Austin, was chartered by the National Safety Council in 1938 as a non-profit, non-governmental public service association, and is the largest state safety organization in the U.S.

Elcor manufactures roofing products and industrial products and engineers and constructs processing facilities for the energy, chemical and mining industries. Each of Elcor's principal operating subsidiaries is the leader or one of the leaders within its market. It's common stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Dave Coslett, center, president of the Texas Safety Association, presents first place safety awards to Larry S. Fitzsimmons, left, and Ed Mycock on behalf of The Orloff Corporation's Midland Division Construction and Fabrication groups. Orloff employees earned the 1980 awards as part of the TBA's Occupational Safety and Health Contest.

Suit dropped against TV makers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal judge Friday dismissed a $1.5 billion conspiracy and antitrust suit filed by two U.S. television manufacturers against their major Japanese competitors.

U.S. District Judge Edward Becker said there was no evidence to justify the U.S. companies' charges that they were driven out of the business by actions of the Japanese companies.

The suit had been filed in 1970 by Zenith Radio Corp., and National Union Electric Corp., which at that time was known as Emerson Radio Co.

The two companies contended they were victims of a price-fixing conspiracy in which Japanese companies sold TV sets, tape recorders, radios and other electronic products on the U.S. market at prices below what they sold for in Japan.

"Notwithstanding all its sound and fury and the generation of tens of millions of documents and staggering legal fees," Becker wrote in his 587-page opinion, "(plaintiffs) have produced nothing, which justifies our permitting it to go forward into a trial which will last a year or more with countless untold further burdens and expense upon the parties, their counsel and the court system."

Edward Rome, an attorney for the U.S. companies, said he would appeal the decision to the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. He said Becker's decision was "1,000 percent wrong, and ultimately it will be reversed."

The defendants included Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Toshiba Corp., Hitachi Ltd., Sharp Corp., Sanyo Electric Co., Sony Corp., Mitsubishi Electric Corp., the Japanese trading company of Mitsubishi Corp., and two U.S. companies that sell TV sets made in Japan — Motorola Inc. and Sears, Roebuck & Co. Fourteen other defendants are subsidiaries of the principal Japanese firms.

Little contest seen in area races

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

West Texas voters, who don't seem overly enraptured by the lack of issues and by the dearth of "hotly" contested races, may be going to the polling places Saturday in elections unmarked by controversy.

Don Stringer, superintendent of the Glasscock County Independent School District at Garden City-St. Lawrence, seemed to typify the pre-election atmosphere.

"There's not a big hassle or anything going on," he said. "It's all quiet on the Western front."

A rundown of city, school and, in some cases, water and hospital district, elections, in the Midland area follows:

GARDEN CITY

Four farmer-candidates in the St. Lawrence community are vying for two at-large places on the Glasscock County Independent School District's board of trustees.

Seeking re-election are board President Wilburn Bednar, 46, and board Vice President Eugene Hirt, 52. Both have been in office for six years.

Challenging them are Dennis Schraeder, 39, and Eugene Jost, 37.

Registered voters in Glasscock County total 862, according to County District Clerk Mary Lou Overton.

GREENWOOD

Owen Mobley, president of the Greenwood Independent School District, will be butting up against two challengers for the Place 5 slot in Saturday's school election here.

Mobley, an executive for The Permian Corp. in Midland, will be facing Charles Gardner, a car salesman in Midland, and Jane Vaughan, a Greenwood housewife and former oil-and-gas career recruiter in Midland.

Unopposed in the election are Greenwood farmer James Brooks, the Place 3 trustee, and developer Bobby J. Coffee, the Place 4 candidate.

Running for Place 7 is J.D. Hanson, a shop teacher at Odessa's Ector High School. He is seeking the one-year unexpired term of ex-trustee Bud Lea, who resigned last year. Hanson was appointed in Lea's stead.

"We have pretty good turn-outs (for school board elections)," noted Greenwood Superintendent James Warlick.

The 994 eligible voters in the Greenwood ISD may cast votes via the voting machine in the foyer of the Greenwood School Auditorium.

STANTON

Barring an onslaught of write-in candidates, city council and school trustee candidates will be shoo-ins here in Saturday's election.

Unopposed candidates on the Stanton Independent School District's board of trustees are incumbents Jeanene Wheeler, a businesswoman who is running for her second three-year term on Place 1, and Chuck Elmore, who is seeking re-election to Place 2. Elmore, who has been on the board since May 1978, works for Cap Rock Electric Co-operative.

Stanton City Council candidates are Bobby Graves, a farmer, and Bill Wheeler, an automobile dealer. Both are incumbents.

"You can still have write-ins," observed an insider, who exercises caution even in uncontested races. "You're not Scot free until the election is over."

Stanton Mayor Danny Fryar is not up for re-election this year.

GRADY

Trustees Eddie Odom and Myrl Mitchell and newcomer Buddy Stewart are seeking election to the Grady Independent School District's board of trustees this Saturday.

Not running for re-election is Board President Newell Tate, a farmer who has been president for nine of the 12 years he has served on the board.

The candidates are farmers in the Lenora-Tarzan-Grady area. Mitchell is manager of the Four-Way Cotton Gin at Lenora.

Superintendent of the Grady ISD is Gary Harrell, who succeeded Billy Baker.

LAMESA

Four candidates are seeking two places on the Lamesa Independent School District's board of trustees.

Watching and waiting as rescuers sift through the rubble of the Harbour Cay condominium in Cocoa Beach, Fla., are Ann and Con Nowakowski, sister and father of Darrell Nowakowski, a construction worker believed trapped by the debris.

Rescuers comb the rubble of collapsed condominium

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rescuers used giant cranes to lift slabs of concrete as volunteers picked through tons of rubble Saturday in a grim search for as many as six workers trapped in the collapse of a riverfront condominium that claimed at least 10 lives.

Cocoa Beach Fire Chief Robert Walker, asked if there was any chance that trapped construction workers could still be alive beneath the tons of dusty rubble left by Friday's tragedy, answered: "No, no way."

At a news conference Saturday evening, Walker said, "One individual definitely (is) in the debris. We can't see him but we know he's there. And we have possibly five more in there."

Walker attributed a number of "false alarms," in which rescuers thought they made voice contact with workers buried alive, to the high noise level on the site.

Cocoa Beach Police Chief Robert Wicker said that after several hours of searching, rescuers were unable to detect signs of life in an area where volunteers thought they heard someone yell from beneath the rubble.

At mid-day Saturday, Wicker set the official death toll at 11. But late in the day, he revised the count downward to 10, saying rescuers had counted twice a body trapped in the rubble.

Some officials had estimated during the day that the number of workers missing was as high as 25. Walker, official spokesman for the rescue groups, said estimates had varied because "we got calls from around the area and even other parts of the country stating they think they may have a friend or a relative (working on the building), but we have been unable to confirm those names."

Several dozen men were injured when the partially completed structure collapsed, and 12 remained hospitalized Saturday. Only one was in serious condition.

Meanwhile, workers searched through a second night under bright spotlights for still-missing workers.

Walker said it would take at least until Sunday, and perhaps until Monday morning, for crews to remove the huge slabs of steel-reinforced concrete that stacked up like pancakes.

Some survivors blamed the collapse — which occurred as concrete was being poured for the roof — on failure to let the concrete harden sufficiently as the five-story, 45-unit project was being built.

But a spokesman for the construction company, Univel Inc., said such talk was only speculation, and Assistant Labor Secretary Thorne G. Auchter, who sent eight investigators to the scene, said there were no indications of faulty construction work "at this time."

Ten bodies were recovered from the ruins of what was to be the plush Harbour Cay condominium, according to Brevard County homicide detective Charlie Slaughter.

Univel spokesman Mike Mervis said representatives of the contractor and rescue officials had agreed at a midmorning meeting that "there are only two to four people still underneath, still unaccounted for."

The accident site was somber, as hundreds of curious onlookers gathered on a bright, sunny day and quietly watched the grim search.

Giant cranes, including a 140-ton unit from the Kennedy Space Center, lifted sheets of concrete from the accident site. Jacks were placed beneath each sheet as it was slowly raised, allowing workers to peek for victims who might be trapped underneath.

Elsewhere, workers used jackhammers and acetylene torches to cut through the mangled concrete and steel. Only the elevator shaft remained intact.

Airmen from nearby Patrick Air Force Base helped in the cleanup, using shovels, pickaxes and their bare hands.

Two Roman Catholic priests stood nearby, comforting relatives and ready to administer last rites.

"It's like a bomb hit there," said the Rev. Paul Henry, surveying the mountain of rubble. "I've never seen anything like it."

Meanwhile, investigators from several state and federal agencies, including the U.S. Labor Department and its Occupational Safety and Health Administration, converged on the site on a thin strip of land between the Atlantic Ocean and the Banana River, about 15 miles south of Kennedy Space Center.

Authorities said the cause of the accident might not be known for months.

But several surviving workmen contended the poured concrete hadn't been given enough time to dry before extra weight was put on the building.

"Twenty-two years I've been pouring concrete and they've never pulled the forms in two days like they did here," said James Dockett, who was on the roof and briefly trapped under the debris until a crane removed a metal girder.

"They (the supports that shape wet cement) usually set there for a week or 10 days. They pulled the forms here in two days."

But Mervis said he doubted that the concrete had not been allowed to set and caused the accident.

Hijackers land in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A commandeered Honduran jetliner landed here Saturday night from Nicaragua and four hijackers surrendered to military authorities, where they released 34 passengers and then waited in vain for the U.S. citizens, officials reported. They said the hijackers were "detained" and had requested political asylum in Cuba.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Panama said the freed hostages, who he believed included eight Americans, re-boarded the Honduran jetliner after a brief stopover here and were heading back to Honduras. He said all the former hostages appeared to be in good shape.

The New Orleans-bound Boeing 737 of the TAN-SAHSA airline was seized Friday morning after leaving Honduras by the hijackers who were demanding that Honduras free 16 jailed Salvadoran leftists. They ordered the pilot to land in Managua, Nicaragua, where they released 34 passengers and then waited in vain for the Honduran government to open negotiations with them.

They had threatened to blow the plane up if a Honduran delegation didn't arrive and begin negotiations by 2 p.m. EST. When the Hondurans didn't show up, the hijackers — three men and a woman armed with pistols and submachine guns — then ordered the pilot to fly to Panama.

Following the aircraft's arrival here, it was announced by Panamanian officials that the country's ambassador to Nicaragua, Baltazar Aisprua, had negotiated with the hijackers in Managua throughout the day and flew with them to Tocumen airport outside Panama City.

Within minutes of the plane's arrival, the hijackers surrendered to Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega, chief of military security forces.

Noriega told reporters the hijackers were being "detained" in the airport offices of the Panamanian air force and have applied through the Panamanian Foreign Ministry for political asylum in Cuba.

There was no immediate word from the Foreign Ministry on a possible agreement with Cuban officials for the hijackers' asylum on the communist-ruled island.

Nicaragua's government station, Radio Sandino, had reported the plane left Managua's Sandino airport at 5:40 p.m. (6:40 p.m. EST) with its cargo of captives.

Suspect charged in most recent Cabrini-Green slaying

CHICAGO (AP) — Police charged suspect Saturday in the death of convicted drug user at the Cabrini-Green housing project, and a spokesman for Mayor Jane Byrne said the 11th killing there in recent months would not alter the mayor's plan to take an apartment at the crime-ridden project.

The slaying came a few hours after Mrs. Byrne announced she wants a former Green Beret commander to take charge of security for Chicago's public housing, and six days after the mayor announced she and her husband planned to move to Cabrini-Green as part of an anti-crime effort.

The mayor is to use the apartment as an occasional residence, and will keep her highrise condominium downtown.

Investigators said James Lawson, 28, was charged with murder in the shooting death of a convicted drug user, although he is not believed to be the one who actually did the shooting. Another man is being sought as the actual killer.

Police say the spate of slayings, and other violence that caused 35 injuries, stems from a gang war over the lucrative narcotics trade at the project. And while investigators said they believe the latest victim was killed because he cheated on a drug deal, police said there was no evidence either he or the suspect in custody was involved in the gang conflict.

The 11th victim, identified by police as 23-year-old Sylvester Carey, was found shot in the back of the neck Friday night in an 11th-floor stairwell at Cabrini-Green. He was not among the project's 15,000 residents, police said.

Detectives said Carey was a drug user and said he had an extensive arrest record for narcotics violations, robbery and burglary. They said he lived on the South Side.

The building here Carey's body was found is a block or two from the apartment the mayor plans to occupy. A boy playing nearby told police he heard a shot Friday and saw a masked man run down the stairs.

Mrs. Byrne's press secretary, Ray McCarthy, said the mayor had been informed of the killing, but "she still intends to move in there and stay as long as it takes."

Police said that in each of the 10 previous killings at the project in the past three months, a suspect has been arrested.

Also Friday, Mrs. Byrne said she has asked Michael D. Healy, a retired Army major general, to accept the new position of public health and safety officer for the Chicago Housing Authority, which runs Cabrini-Green and other housing projects.

The 54-year-old Healy said he has not decided whether to accept the job, adding, "I have some other considerations to determine."

Healy, who served 35 years in the Army, was the most-decorated general on active duty when he retired. His father was a Chicago police captain, and two of his brothers are police officers.

The mayor met Friday with police and judicial officials, including chief Judge Harry Comerford of Circuit Court and police Supt. Richard Brzeznek, to plot strategy the anti-crime campaign at Cabrini-Green.

Also attending were CHA Chairman Charles Swibel and representatives of the U.S. attorney's office and the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Gov. James R. Thompson took part via telephone.

Mrs. Byrne said federal officials have agreed to release $5 million in appropriated funds to improve project security and living conditions. And she said a new division of Circuit Court would be opened near Cabrini-Green to handle evictions and other housing-related problems.

Also discussed at the meeting was the possibility of conducting what they called an "inventory" of the project's apartments — a search to clear out weapons, drugs and other contraband.

The mayor routinely has police protection, and the officers will accompany her at the project when she moves in early next month.

Fuel tank on shuttle examined

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Workers on the space shuttle Columbia, buoyed by the prospect of its approaching blast-off, drained explosive vapors from the spacecraft's external fuel tank Saturday so they could examine it for any faults revealed by a last major test.

Officials said they might set the launch date on Tuesday, and said it could be as early as April 10 if no major problems turned up.

"Spirits are high," Liles Waggoner, a Kennedy Space Center spokesman, said as technicians prepared for a detailed physical examination of the craft. "As we get closer to launch, everybody's getting more excited."

Alcoholism meeting set

A public meeting on alcoholism will be held April 10 at 2:30 p.m. at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission conference room at Midland Air Terminal.

State Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa, who recently called alcohol and drug abuse "the most serious social problem in our state," announced plans for the seminar.

The meeting will involve presentations by Ross Newby, executive director of the Texas Commission on Alcoholism, and Becky Davis, TCA administrative assistant.

Gibson said the meeting would deal with federal and state funding for alcoholism programs, third-party insurance payment for alcoholism treatment, licensing for treatment facilities, standardizing of DWI offender classes and other related items. Persons interested in alcoholism issues have been invited from all over West Texas, he said.

Gibson said adequate treatment for alcoholics needs to be encouraged, noting that the stigma has been lessened in recent years for persons having this disease.

"In my capacity as a member of the Appropriations Committee, I feel that the state and local governments should do whatever is necessary to deal with alcoholism problems," Gibson said.

Gibson voted in favor of increasing the drinking age to 19, which passed the House of Representatives March 18.

Shuttle Operations Director George Page said visual inspections Friday did not reveal any damage, nor had any been revealed after a similar test on Wednesday.

Page was expected to hold a briefing Sunday afternoon to reveal the results of the weekend inspections.

The test, a pressurized fueling of the shuttle's huge external fuel tank, took most of Friday.

Center officials had said earlier that the results of the weekend inspection would in large part determine the first launch in the $8 billion program, now running more than two years behind schedule.

The tank was damaged in a first fueling test in January, when the super-cold fuel loosened 32 of the cork-like insulation panels covering the tank's surface. Repair problems added to the delay.

Council hosting forum

In conjunction with the International Year of the Disabled Person, the Midland Community Partner Committee of the U.S. Council of IYDP is hosting a forum for all interested consumers, advocates, parents and guardians of the disabled on April 11, from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the Midland Center.

Interested persons are asked to assist in surveying the existing programs and facilities, determining community needs and developing ways of meeting these needs.

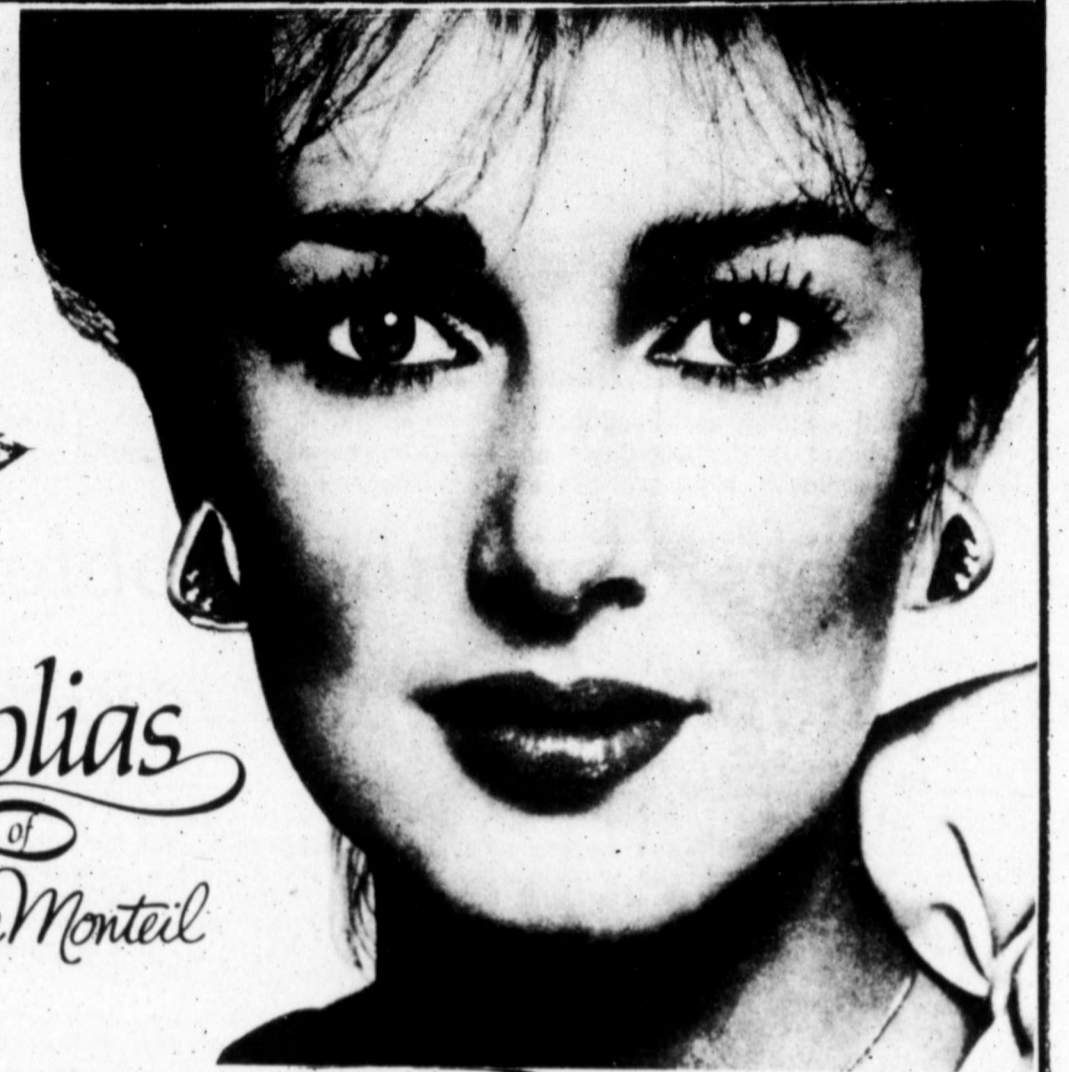

Patsy Shillingburg, vice chairman of the State Board of Institution Trustees for the New Jersey Department of Human Services, will be the featured speaker at the afternoon session.

Topics for discussion include health concerns, recreation and social concerns, economic concerns, educational concerns and communications.

The goal of IYDP is full participation of persons with physical/mental disabilities, according to the group. The Midland group's goal is "improving the quality of life for the disabled in Midland. The Community Partnership committee cannot determine the most crucial goals without your guidance," group members said.

Movie new adventure to Janice Archer

BY GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

NEW ORLEANS, La. — The expression "hurry up and wait" perhaps best summarizes an average day on a movie set. At least that's the way it was Wednesday and Thursday in New Orleans on the set of the currently being filmed Jack Weiss movie "You Never Gave Me Roses."

The Midland connection is singer Janice Archer, who played the role of Rosalinda in Midland College's first opera endeavor, "Die Fledermaus," which was staged last spring at Theatre Midland.

Ms. Archer sings the theme song for the movie and is cast as a nightclub entertainer. She has several speaking parts and will be on location filming a number of times before the movie is released in July.

"To me the movie is an new adventure and to be a part of it is a totally new experience," Ms. Archer said during one of the many breaks in filming. "Watching the technology involved in filming is as absorbing as playing a role in the movie."

"New Orleans is a charming city and all of the facets of life that this movie deals with are a part of the intrigue and allure that makes New Orleans unique," she added.

"I'm very happy to be involved in this project, but I'm not getting star struck," she said, laughing. "It's simply an opportunity to expand my knowledge and open a new avenue for my voice. And so far it's been a fun experience. The people involved in the project are very professional, congenial and intent upon making a successful movie."

The male leads are played by relative newcomers, Jeff Chamberlin and Alfonso Landa.

Chamberlin, who studied in Burbank under Charles Conrad, had a part in the television movie "Smash-Up On Interstate 5" and the feature film, which will be released by NBC-TV in April, "Rivals." The movie, which may appear on television under another name, is slated to be the April 20 Monday Night at the Movies.

At 27, most of Chamberlin's credentials are in the theater arena. He is quite professional in his approach and delivers his lines as convincingly to a blank wall as to another performer.

Landa, who is 20, came to this role from an Italian movie that he and Weiss were working on together. This is his first starring role in a full length film.

The crew members on "You Never Gave Me Roses" are all experienced hands. The director of photography, Irwin Blanche, worked with, among others, Cecil B. DeMille and John Ford. The cameraman, Theo de Rose, is a free lancer from England.

This week's filming in New Orleans includes staging several explosions and the car chase scenes which include wrecking nine vehicles. Joie Chitwood, who has Joie Chitwood's Automobile Thrill Show, is the stunt coordinator. He's been in this line of work since he was five.

"My dad started the show (the thrill show) in 1943 and I grew up around it. It's always been a part of my daily life," Chitwood said.

Perhaps one of his stunts next week will include bumping off Ms. Archer. She's returning to New Orleans for her next filming then and she's scheduled to be eliminated.

In fact many of the characters in the film meet a hasty demise. The story line centers around two guys who keep getting into trouble. They run to New Orleans to escape the law only to discover other people play even rougher.

Special guest appearances in the movie are set to be made by Artie Johnson, Flip Wilson, Mickey Rooney, Hermione Gingold and Broderick Crawford.

Also featured in the film is the Ronnie Kole Jazz Trio. Midlanders will have a chance to hear this trio May 14 when it performs in concert with Ms. Archer to kick off a money raising campaign for the Midland High School band. The band has been invited to participate in the next Rose Bowl Parade.

APRIL 15 IS DEPOSIT DEADLINE

If you haven't already made your 1980 contributions to your Individual Retirement Account — or even if you haven't opened one yet — you still can at First Savings and Loan in Midland through April 15.

To take advantage of your tax shelter for 1980, you must open or add to your IRA before you file your tax return.

And remember, we pay the maximum interest permitted on all IRA tax sheltered accounts. If you are not now covered by any other retirement plan and invest 15% of your annual salary (up to a maximum $1500 each year) you will not have to pay any federal income taxes on your IRA, or the interest it builds, until you retire or begin withdrawing the funds.

Not only can you reduce your income tax, if you also happen to be under 35 years old now, you could, by the time you retire, be a quarter-millionaire! Social Security might not be so bad with a quarter of a million dollars to ease over the rough spots!

Stop by First Savings downtown at 500 W. Wall or in San Miguel Square and open or add to your IRA account before time runs out. The few minutes it takes now can make a world of difference when you retire.

Symphony chorale, orchestra to give concert on Saturday

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale and the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chamber orchestra will present "A Lenten Offering" at 8 p.m. Friday in Odessa's First United Methodist Church and at 8 p.m. Saturday at Midland's First United Methodist Church, 305 N. Baird St. The performance is open to the public with single admission tickets available at the door.

The "Lenten Offering," a bonus concert for Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale subscribers, will feature the Mozart "Requiem in D Minor" and the "Symphony No. 5 in D Major" by William Boyce. Both the Chorale and the Chamber Orchestra will be directed by Dr. Stanley Engebretson.

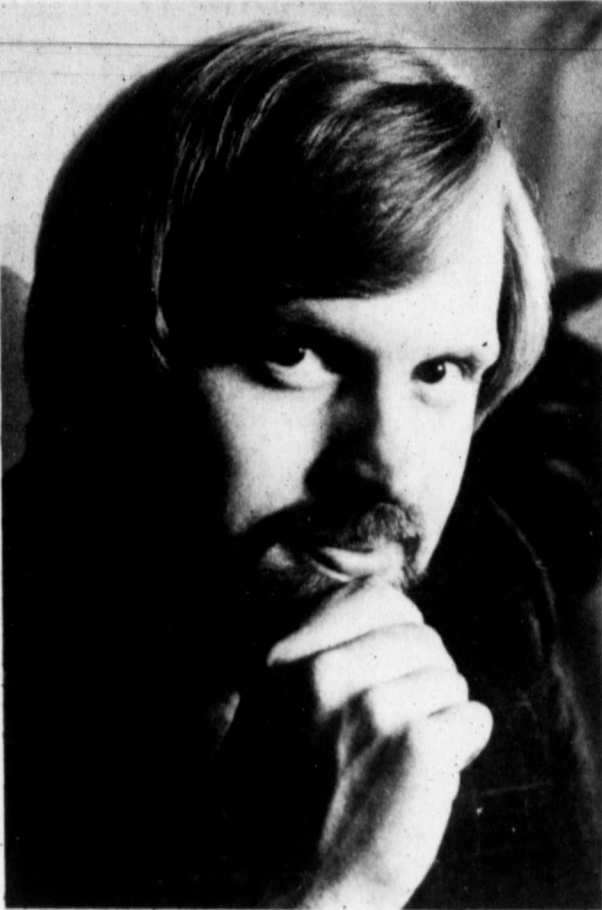

Engebretson, a native of the upper Midwest, is completing his second season as conductor of the Symphony Chorale and director of choral activities at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa.

A recent Stanford University graduate, Engebretson received the degree of doctor of musical arts in choral conducting there, with primary research in the field of the Venetian polychoral repertoire.

While a resident of the Bay area, he sang with the San Francisco Symphony Chorus, in addition to his activities as soloist and assistant conductor at Stanford. He was the chorus master of the West Bay Opera Company of Palo Alto, Calif., and has been an actor and director in several major Broadway musical productions.

Engebretson has been active throughout his career as a clinician and adjudicator in both the United States and Canada, as well as serving as an administrator of a National Arts and Humanities Council grant which commissioned Daniel Pinkham's "Pentecost Canticles."

In 1978, he was a member of the Aspen music Festival Chamber Choir, where he studied advanced conducting with Flora Contino. He has also studied advanced conducting techniques with Dr. William Ramsey of Stanford, Dr. Roger Wilhelm of the Eastman School of Music and Walter Ducloux of The University of Texas at Austin.

Rose takes stage Monday night

The final Community Concert will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Monday when pops pianist Earl Rose takes the stage at the Midland High School auditorium, 906 W. Illinois Ave.

This concert is offered as a bonus to new members who are joining for the 1981-82 series and a limited number of new memberships will be available for interested persons attending Monday's performance. This season's concerts include the Warsaw Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra, The New Christy Minstrels, the Romanian Folk Ballet and a Harlequin Theatrical production of "Camelot."

Rose, the assistant music coordinator for the "Tonight Show," has been written about favorably on numerous occasions by columnist Earl Wilson, "Voice of Broadway" columnist Jack O'Brian and his performance has been referred to as "pure entertainment" by New York's top entertainment magazine, "Cue."

He has composed, arranged and co-produced many of the featured songs for the Emmy Award winning "Captain Kangaroo" as well as recording several albums and composing the score for the motion picture "Cry Your Heart Out." He recently composed the score for his first musical, "Nobody's Perfect."

Born and raised in New York, Rose began his piano studies at the age of seven and by the time he reached high school was performing regularly for concerts, dances and other activities. He graduated from the Mannes College of Music in New York and has also studied at UCLA, the Vienna Academy of Music and the Juilliard School, where he studied conducting.

His concert performances include popular songs, classical selections and original compositions.

'Harrison Eiteljorg Collection shown

Showing through April 19 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is the impressive "Harrison Eiteljorg Collection."

The exhibit was organized by James K. Ballinger, curator of collections at the Phoenix Art Museum, in cooperation with Harrison Eiteljorg and the Western Art Associates of the Phoenix Art Museum. The show features a selection of oil paintings, drawings and watercolors on the Taos, N.M., theme from Eiteljorg's private collection.

The Taos Founders or The Taos Society of Artists were an early group of painters captivated by the Taos experience. The galleries in the United States at the turn of the century were filled with the imagery and techniques of the European impressionists, and the Taos painters were interested in establishing an American imagery in their works. As a whole, they depicted the landscapes around Taos and the Taos Indian's life during the years of 1882-1942.

The paintings and watercolors of Ernest Blumenschein, Bert Phillips, Joseph Henry Sharp and Victor Higgins, among others, of the "Taos Founders" compose nearly half of this exhibit. The remainder of the exhibit is stylistically varied and may be divided into one set of painters who continued the ideals of the Taos Founders; a second set of then avant-garde painters which includes Georgia O'Keefe, John Marin and Marsden Hartley; and a third set which consists of two Russian immigrants, Leon Gaspard and Nikolai Fechin, who according to Ballinger, "worked in personally abstracted Impressionist styles."

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays. There is no admission charge.

Helping raise the "Same Time Next Year" curtain with a $10,000 Dresser Industries sponsorship of the current production are, from left, Robert Verner of Dresser Titan; William Morrow, president of the Board of Governors of Midland Community Theatre; and Jack Bates of Magcobar. A special performance will be given for Dresser and its guests today. Open performances dates include Thursday through Sunday, April 9, 10 and 11. For reservations call 682-4111.

Dresser Industries expense co-sponsors of MCT production

Two divisions of Dresser Industries Inc., Dresser Titan and Magco, and their guests, will be treated today to a special showing of the current running Midland Community Theatre production of "Same Time Next Year."

"Both Dresser companies are participating in our corporation sponsorship program where a company contributes to the general operating expenses that help to produce a particular show," explained MCT assistant director Ted Strickland, adding that "eight of the nine productions will have a corporation co-sponsor."

The co-sponsor program helps "to maintain the quality of today's product." In this case Magco and Dresser Titan have donated $10,000 for the production of "Same Time Next Year."

The MCT production stars Colia Morrow as Doris and James Salners as George. It is directed by Don Bachmann, the theater's executive director, with Rhonda Hicks serving as stage manager.

This comedy, which was an instant hit when it premiered on Broadway in 1975, deals with a pair of moral philanderers who become involved in a casual pick-up that turns into a lifetime love affair. Their initial encounter occurs when she is on her way to a religious retreat while he, a CPA, has come west to work on a friend's income tax.

Reservations for the additional performances, set for Thursday through Sunday, April 9, 10 and 11, may be made by calling the box office at 682-4111.

Wedding dress will be romantic; Maybe not white

LONDON (AP) — The young couturiers designing the gown for Lady Diana Spencer's wedding to Prince Charles say they have in mind something romantic and not necessarily white.

"It will be the dress of the century, divine," said 28-year-old David Emanuel who with his wife, Elizabeth, and five seamstresses will design and stitch the creation for the July 29 nuptials.

Asked if the royal dress would be the traditional white, Emanuel replied: "It might not be. We once did one in palest pink which was absolutely beautiful."

He said he and his wife are taking into consideration the fact that the wedding at St. Paul's Cathedral will be watched by an estimated 500 million television viewers around the world.

"This has to be perfect," he said. "We will be going to St. Paul's to look at the color of the steps, stones and surroundings. In fact the whole atmosphere of the place."

He stressed it will be a gown to evoke romantic thoughts.

"One needs romance in the climate in which we live," he said. "To me, if there is an excuse to dress up, you should. It is very sad not to bother."

Emanuel talked to reporters Saturday after being bombarded with congratulatory telephone calls and a crush of photographers in the two weeks since 19-year-old Lady Diana announced her choice of designers.

He said he and his wife will dispense with the traditional paper sketches to ensure secrecy of the design, which will evolve as Lady Diana expresses her preferences.

The couple already has won acclaim for a stunning, strapless black silk taffeta gown Lady Diana wore at her first public function with Prince Charles after their engagement was announced.

The Emanuels are renowned for making frothy creations of sumptuous, extravagant materials such as silk and antique lace.

Lady Diana is by far their best-known client, despite her short time in the public eye. Other patrons include Bianca Jagger, the fashion-conscious ex-wife of Rolling Stones singer Mick Jagger, and actress Susan Hampshire.

Several other members of the royal family, including Princess Anne, Charles' sister, and Princess Margaret, his aunt, kept their wedding simple.

Although they won't reveal details of what they have in mind, they indicated they hope it will be seen on Lady Diana more than once.

"We have always believed it is not economic to wear something just once," David said. "Take any dramatic wedding dress, take away the veil, the underskirt, the satin bows and add a silk slip, and you have a useful party dress."

Burton may undergo surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Burton has left the touring company of the musical "Camelot" because of a painful back problem that requires surgery, and the producers may decide to close the show.

Burton, 55, is suffering from "severe degenerative changes of the cervical spine" which in recent days has kept him hospitalized for tests and out of the production, which reportedly cost $1.2 million to mount, his manager, Valerie Douglas, said Friday.

The actor, who was playing the role of King Arthur which he created on Broadway in 1960, checked into St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica on Monday. He was complaining of a virus and chronic arm pain which he first experienced last June, when it was diagnosed as bursitis, Ms. Douglas said.

Dr. William Dodge, a Florida neurosurgeon, will fly to Los Angeles Monday to examine Burton. Dr. Robert Hutcherson, a specialist treating Burton said the anticipated surgery was "not an emergency, but urgent."

Hutcherson said Burton was being treated for "a viral illness and additionally was being extensively tested for severe neck and shoulder pain."

Mike Merrick, co-producer of the Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical, said he would wait until Monday before deciding whether to continue touring the musical with a replacement for Burton. Merrick said he would weigh "box office reaction" to the news of the star's departure.

Among those mentioned as possible replacements are Rock Hudson and Sean Connery.

Ridley sea turtles making comeback from near extinction

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Toward the end of April, about 1,500 year-old Atlantic Ridley sea turtles — making a comeback from the brink of extinction — will cross the beaches of Padre Island off the coast of Texas for their first dip in the Gulf of Mexico.

Their sandy trek will bring to more than 5,000 the number of dinner-plate-sized yearlings released under the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's "head start" program.

In 1979, the Ridley's impending extinction was the subject of a week-long conference here involving 40 countries. Last year, the Interior Department listed the turtle, which is believed to have survived for 125 million years, as one of the 10 most endangered species in North America.

But on Friday, NOAA officials said the Ridley may be on the road to recovery.

Until the agency's effort to relocate some of the turtles at Padre Island, the Ridelys' home had been at Playa de Rancho Nuevo on the Mexican coast 250 miles south of the border. In 1947 there were 40,000 nesting on that Mexican beach. But by 1978 there were only 200 to 500 — it's hard to tell just how many because one female may dig several nests, each containing about 100 white eggs about half the size of a chicken's.

The threat to the turtles begins even before they are born: their eggs are considered a delicacy in some quarters. They have a leathery skin that can easily be peeled off and the contents are hard, not gooey, even when raw.

"It may be considered very macho to wash them down with tequila," said Ryck Lydecker of NOAA, which is part of the Department of Commerce. "But our scientists say there's no indication they have any of the aphrodisiac effect some people expect."

Although Playa de Rancho Nuevo is a two-hour jeep ride from the nearest road and protected by Mexican officials, some eggs still are dug up by poachers.

Lydecker said the Mexican government, which has also been trying to protect the turtles, is delighted to let the NOAA have a few eggs every season. U.S. officials catch them before they hit the Mexican sand, because it is thought that contact with that sand may have something to do with the females' coming back to nest at the same beach every year.

Dr. Edward F. Klima, who works with NOAA's hatchlings at his Galveston, Texas, laboratory, hopes the flavor of the gulf water off Padre Island will persuade the turtles to return there to nest.

The hatchlings are black and about the size of a quarter. On land they are prey to raccoons, coyotes and seabirds, and in the water to fish, so NOAA doesn't release them until they are a year old.

"A baby turtle is a bite-sized morsel with no defenses," said James P. McVey, chief scientist of the "head start" project. "During that first year, until they become strong swimmers, they drift at the mercy of winds and currents which can take them into shipping channels or polluted harbors."

Some sea turtles weigh up to 1,500 pounds. The Ridelys are the smallest variety: adults usually weigh no more than 80 pounds and are about as big around as an automobile tire.

Reaching maturity takes five to 10 years, and Ridelys are thought to live to about 20. But sea turtles are mysterious. They have been seen as far north as Chesapeake Bay on the U.S. Atlantic coast, but no one really knows where they spend most of their time.

Wherever it is, they may now be able to spend more years there. Two weeks ago, NOAA announced invention of a device that may help the Ridelys escape another threat: shrimp nets.

Big Spring judge says hex being put on him

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — In the course of performing his duties in this West Texas town, Peace Justice Lewis Heflin says criminals often threatened him — but this is the first time he's had a hex put on him.

"I've been getting a call from this woman who says someone in town is trying to put a voodoo hex on me," Heflin says.

"She told me Wednesday that the voodoo priestess, or whatever, had sacrificed a chicken to make the hex work."

Heflin's encounter with the occult began after he set bonds of $100,000 and $75,000 last Tuesday for Eduardo Maidique, a Cuban national who came to the United States last spring and has been charged with murder and attempted murder.

Authorities say Maidique is responsible for the death of Linda Garcia, 26, and severely beat her sister, 19-year-old Martha Esquibel.

Heflin said he started receiving calls from an unidentified woman "at around midnight Tuesday" after he set Maidique's bond, and that the caller expressed concern about his health.

He says the phantom phoner says she calls at midnight because "that's when the ghosts are up and about."

"She tells me that she has talked to missionaries and they told her it was against the law to put hexes on people. Then she asks me how I'm feeling," Heflin said.

Heflin says the calls don't bother him and that he feels they are just designed to get on his nerves.

Midlander dies, four hurt in accident near Andrews

ANDREWS — A Midland man was killed and four other persons were injured about 8 p.m. Friday night in a two-vehicle collision four miles south of SH 176 on FM 181 in Andrews County.

Charles Robert Faust, 32, of 3607 Amelia Ave. in Midland, was pronounced dead at the scene by Andrews County Justice of the Peace Jay Williams. The body was taken to Singleton Funeral Home in Andrews.

Faust was the driver of a 1979 Ford four-door with Louisiana license plates traveling north on FM 181.

Robert P. Cypert, 56, of Pleasant Farms Route 5 in Odessa, was driving the second vehicle, a 1980 Ford pickup, south on FM 181.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, Faust's vehicle strayed over the center line while manipulating a curve and sideswiped the left side of Cypert's truck. Neither vehicle overturned, nor were any occupants thrown from the vehicles, according to the report.

The four persons injured in the accident were transported to Permian General Hospital in Andrews. Cypert was treated and released from the hospital; Timothy T. Hopkins, 24, of Midland, remains in good condition at the hospital; Andrea Jerner, 22, of Odessa remains in fair condition; and Bruce Johnson, 24, of Midland was reported in good condition.

Imagine your worst fear a reality.

State investigating tritium leak

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — State investigators on Saturday began looking into a leak of radioactive tritium from the Savannah River Plant, as an environmentalist said officials at the nuclear weapons materials facility should have notified the public sooner than they did.

Plant spokesman Jim Gaver said 33,000 curies of radiation escaped in two hours Friday morning after a broken pipe began leaking. He said the plant is not required to notify state and federal health authorities of releases of less than 50,000 curies.

Jim Setser of the Georgia Environmental Protection Agency called the leak "a moderate size release... (that) is not significant in terms of a major health impact, that we are aware of right now."

But Ruth Thomas of Columbia, president of Environmentalists Inc., said plant officials had a moral responsibility to disclose Friday's leak, regardless whether they were required to do so by law.

Mrs. Thomas said she was also concerned about scanty information about the release, which occurred less than a day before the second anniversary of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant accident.

"I think the consensus after Three Mile Island was that we let the public know as soon as possible" about nuclear mishaps, she said.

The huge plant, located on the Savannah River along the Georgia border, is owned by the U.S. Department of Energy and operated under contract by E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Dr. Samuel Finklea of the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control said the agency was conducting an investigation of the mishap and would have radiation samples by Monday. He said the investigation should be finished by the middle of the week.

Finklea said the cloud of tritium was monitored on the ground by six monitoring stations, which sampled surface water and vegetation. "In terms of potential health effects it's a minor release," he said.

The airborne tritium was carried by 10-mph breezes in an east-northeast direction and should have been well out at sea by Saturday, he said.

Mrs. Thomas said she was concerned that the accident was not publicized until several hours after it happened.

"Among people who are following this, I think, it is another indication... that government is not keeping the people informed" she said.

Finklea, asked if proper notification policy was followed, said, "You understand that from the Savannah River Plant's standpoint they didn't have to report it."

Gaver declined to respond to Mrs. Thomas's statements.

He said the room where the leak occurred has been closed off and plant personnel on Monday would begin "intensive" investigations of the accident.

7,000 protest nuclear energy

March marks second anniversary of TMI

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — More than 7,000 people marched through sun-washed streets Saturday, rallying and chanting opposition to nuclear energy on the second anniversary of the Three Mile Island accident, the worst commercial nuclear power accident in the nation's history.

The protesters, most of them young people wearing T-shirts and blue jeans, carried signs depicting pastoral scenes of flowers, trees and — most of all — the sun.

Organized labor was a visible presence, with groups from as far away as New Mexico and Indiana.

"I'm here because I think TMI represents locally what is potentially a worldwide problem, certainly a nationwide problem — which is the long-range dangers inherent in using this form of production of energy," said International Association of Machinists President William Wimpisinger.

Also marching were Quaker youngsters from Pittsburgh, the New York chapter of the Socialist Workers Party and such diverse groups as the New York Public Library Guild, the Audubon Society of Wayne-Pike counties in Michigan and environmental groups from Maryland, Virginia, Missouri, West Virginia, Georgia, New York, Ohio, Massachusetts and Illinois.

The demonstrators walked a mile from City Island in the Susquehanna River to a parking lot at the state Capitol, where they were greeted by a huge blue banner proclaiming, "No More TMIs." Button and book hawkers set up tents and stands on a grassy mall nearby.

Police estimated the crowd at 7,000 to 10,000 people.

The nuclear plant at nearby Three Mile Island leaked radiation and was shut down after the accident March 28, 1979, that crippled one nuclear reactor. Work on a $1 billion cleanup continues.

Many protesters waved placards in support of the striking United Mine Workers, signs that emphasized the anti-nuclear movement's focus on coal and its new alliance with organized labor.

"From this day forward, the environmentalists and the anti-nuclear alliances will march side by side with the unions," said Barry Commoner, an author and college professor. "This is a historic moment. This is the type of unity that will force Reagan out of the political woods. This is the beginning of anti-Reagan politics."

Commoner was among some 20 labor leaders, politicians and musicians featured at the rally.

Wimpisinger, whose union represents thousands of workers at nuclear plants, said in his speech that the IAM must concern itself with the public.

"We have a responsibility to the community and to the public at large to do something about the nuclear waste problem," Wimpisinger said. "That is the nuclear power industry's Agent Orange and don't you ever forget it. Everything it touches, it contaminates."

Many at the rally said the presence of organized labor was important.

Tactical training last set in Midland facility

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The five-day "Tactical Unit Training Course" for area police and sheriff's deputies that starts Monday at the Law Enforcement Academy will be the last training session held at the academy's present location, 310 N. Colorado St.

Starting April 4, volunteers from several law enforcement agencies in the Permian Basin will begin moving equipment and material to the academy's new location in the Armed Services Building at Midland Regional Airport.

"The new site will be more centrally located," said Vince Conklin, training coordinator for the school. "It will also give us more room, provide us a gym and indoor firing range, and allow us to conduct training problems both indoors and outdoors."

The academy serves an 18-county area from Lamesa to Sanderson and Big Spring to Pecos. The school has been at its present location since its formation in January 1973. A prime source of operating revenue are grants from the state Criminal Justice Department, which are administered by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Regarding the week-long tactical training school scheduled to get under way Monday, Conklin said: "It's a 40-hour course that will be conducted by FBI agents from Midland and El Paso."

"The idea behind it, as far as Midland is concerned, is to give both the police and sheriff's departments, interchangeable teams that are trained to work with each other."

The course will include training in Crisis Management, Basic SWAT Concepts, Police Stress, Defensive Tactics, Use of Chemical Agents and Barricaded Suspects.

In addition to classroom study, the YMCA, the police firing range at Cole Park and the Fire Department's traing tower will be used in mastering the fine points of physical training, rappelling and such specialized firearms techniques as team firing with automatic weapons, shotguns and sniper rifles.

With interchangeable teams, if a "situation" arises in the county and the sheriff's department is shorthanded at the time, it can draw on team members from the police department, and vice-versa, explained Conklin.

Besides the Midland police and sheriff's departments, the course will involve members of the Odessa police and sheriff's departments, the Pecos and Big Spring police departments and the Reeves County sheriff's department.

Evacuees allowed to return home

SEDRO WOOLLEY, Wash. (AP) — About 1,500 people evacuated after the derailment of two tank cars containing explosive butane were permitted to return home Saturday afternoon, authorities said.

Nearly one-fourth of the town's population was evacuated after the derailment at 10 p.m. Friday in the city's business district.

"At 4:30 we contacted the shelter areas and told everyone they could return home," Police Chief Ronald John said Saturday afternoon. "The tanks have been gone over and declared safe."

Sedro Woolley, a community of 6,125, is about 65 miles north of Seattle and 40 miles south of the U.S.-Canada border.

Thallium linked to water supply

ORANGEFIELD, Texas (AP) — Texas Poison Control Center officials say they aren't sure if there is a link between the death last fall of a Southeast Texas woman and traces of the poisonous metal thallium found in samples of her drinking water.

"I think it's terribly interesting, but I can't tell you what it means," said Mike Ellis, a pharmacist at the center, after medical records obtained by the Corpus Christi Caller-Times showed Roxie Owen Denney, 56, who died last Nov. 19, had traces of the rare metal in her body.

"Thallium is not a normal constituent of the water supply," Ellis said after a Houston laboratory found thallium in drinking water used by Mrs. Denney.

The rare metal, which was used in such diverse products as hair dye and rat poison until it was banned in 1972, also was found in tests run on four members of a San Patricio County family last year.

Texas health officials say they also have cases of suspected poisoning in other parts of the state, say there is no apparent link among the individuals.

Ellis said the presence of the metal Mrs. Denney's drinking water "doesn't necessarily mean it will cause you any problems...but it certainly merits repeat analysis."

The water was found to have 12 parts per billion of thallium, an amount Ellis says is "bloody low." He said laboratories use 10 parts per billion as the point below which some substances are considered "undetectable."

Toxicologists trying to track the rare metal say one of the problems is the ability of thallium to "hide" in body fat, bone and other body tissues.

Ellis said large amounts of the metal may be stored in the body with no ill effects until released by stress, weight loss or certain types of medicine.

Texas Department of Health officials said they were not notified of the presence of the metal in Mrs. Denney's urine until after her death and never received word of the tainted water supply.

The medical records obtained by the newspaper make no mention of the results of a urine analysis ordered performed on three family members who used the same water supply as Mrs. Denney.

Officials say they cannot now locate the test records.

Three samples were taken from water frequently used by Mrs. Denney, but medical records show only one sample was tested for thallium.

A second test sample listed in the medical record was for toxic metals. The origin of both samples is not shown in the records.

DIRT, SQUIRT, QUIRT

This is helpless time of year for farmers

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent - Agriculture

The March "flon" finally showed up and we're making up for lost time in wind and blowing sand. The wind erosion damage factor increases with each succeeding wind storm and although moisture conditions had permitted farmers to put up their land in good shape, the sandier areas are gradually breaking down under the onslaught of gale force winds. This is the "helpless" time for agricultural producers. They are caught at the mercy of the elements until more moderate weather (with rainfall) prevails.

We get calls daily from newcomers to Midland, many recently arrived from out of state, with queries concerning Midland's soil and water conditions and asking for information and advice on how to establish and maintain home landscape systems.

Two of our County Extension staff members, Sharon Hillis and Cindy Mann, have put together a program for four Tuesday nights in April on "How To Be A Texan". The sessions will be held in the Midland Civic Center, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The program will include sections on Lawn Establishment and Maintenance, Outdoor Plants for West Texas, Indoor Landscaping (House Plants) and Home Vegetable Gardening. The local extension staff - agriculture and Area Extension Horticulture Specialists will present this information.

In addition, "How To Be A Texan" includes cooking Texan, talking

Texan, investing Texan, dressing Texan, dining Texan, and dancing Texan. It all winds up with a Big Texan barbecue on the final night.

If you are interested, call the Extension office (682-9481, Ext. 433) for registration information.

Nematodes are small, microscopic, worm-like animals that live in the soil and feed on the roots of developing plants. Their damage is observed as decayed spots on the roots, stubby roots, enlarged root tips, sparse root systems or galls on the roots.

Nematode control is based on resistant varieties, soil fumigation and cultural practices. Whenever possible, use resistant varieties in nematode-infested soil. Tomato varieties having resistance to root knot nematodes include Big Set, Bonus and the cherry tomato Small Fry.

Some cultural practices help reduce losses to nematodes. Rotations involving corn, onions and garlic reduce nematodes as these crops are resistant.

Use of Vapam in flower beds and gardens is the only effective chemical treatment currently recommended by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for controlling nematodes. Apply Vapam with a hose-on sprayer using one quart per 100 square feet of garden space. After applying Vapam to the surface, immediately wash the chemical into the soil by applying one-half inch of water to the garden area. Apply the water twice more during the next 48 hours. Leave the soil undisturbed for seven days before tilling. Wait an additional two weeks to plant the garden. Vapam is not effective at either very low or very high soil temperatures. Volatilization does not occur if the soil temperature is below 50 degrees F. at application and above 90 degrees there is excessive loss to the atmosphere. Soil temperatures should be measured at 4 to 5-inch depth 7 a.m. and averaged out for about a week.

Vapam is effective for only one growing season and the garden may need treating again next year. Nematode control with chemicals is based on reducing the number at the start of the season. They will, however, increase during the season if susceptible crops are grown in the garden.

A cover crop such as cereal rye grown in the winter months (planted in September, turned under in January or February) helps reduce nematodes. Do not use common rye grass as it may become a weed problem. Rye roots act as a trap crop for nematodes in the soil. A trap crop is one in which the nematodes enter the roots but due to the physiology of the roots, nematodes cannot undergo Three students from Midland Freshman School placed in the recent Area Vocational Opportunities Clubs of Texas competition held at Lee High School. MFS students who won awards are, from left, Jeff Vanover, first place in micrometer reading; Bobby Garcia, second place in hand tool identification; and Terry Bagley, third place in valve installation. All three are enrolled in the Midland Freshman School CVAE-Small Engine Repair course.

The Ranching Industry... just another great part of Midland ...a great city!

Long before there were tall buildings, long before oil was discovered, Midland was settled by a breed of proud, tough, independent cattlemen. Today, the descendants of those early-day Midlanders may be found operating modern ranches, using modern technology along side of the sweat and hard work. Ranching in west Texas has changed greatly since the early days in Midland. But, some things will always stay the same, like the special sense of confidence and pride that every cowboy feels out on the range. It's that special independent spirit that has, and continues to make Midland great, and...at the First National Bank of Midland, we're working to keep that independent spirit alive!

City Council		What qualifies you for this position? Include education, business and professional experience, community service, etc. (75 words)	How would you propose to protect and improve the quality of life as our city continues to grow? (100 words)	What do you see as top priorities for Midland in the next two years? (100 words)
Place 1	Giffert Alstrin	NO RESPONSE	NO RESPONSE	NO RESPONSE
	Jesse Hatfield	14 years experience as Midland businessman, Midlander more than 30 years, graduate of Midland school system, college graduate, volunteer in many phases of youth development — Little League, YMCA, etc., past member of Chamber of Commerce Sports Committee, past president of San Miguel Merchants Assn., president of West Texas Dealers Assn.; genuine and sincere desire to serve Midland; willing to devote sufficient time during the next two years searching for answers to Midland's problems.	I believe the stability of Midland's economy depends on our determination to remain one of the most forward cities in Texas. I believe we must continue to strive for ideas and goals to meet the potential of Midland's true progress. I believe that we must keep our independent spirit and pride and our adherence to high principles in city government. I believe Midland's past and present progress was attained through diligent people working within a system of free enterprise. As a member of the City Council I will strive to keep it that way.	Street improvement without undue delay and inconvenience; easing the downtown parking problem; more efficient traffic control; increasing the size of an understaffed police dept. — resulting from Midland's rapid growth; aggressive planning for community development; fair and equitable taxation for ALL Midlanders — and the best use of those funds.
Place 2	Gordon Marcum II	I have lived in Midland for 21 years and have been active in the community. I have participated in or presently serve on the board of United Way, American Cancer Society, Chamber of Commerce, Permian Basin Landman's Association, State and County Bar Associations, Midland Country Club, Planning and Zoning Commission, Permian Civic Ballet and Mid-Tran Commission. I serve as treasurer and deacon of the First Presbyterian Church. I am married and have three children.	I expect to provide the coordination and leadership for planned future growth. An important part of this leadership is guiding the spending of our taxpayer's money. We must balance quality of service with the burden on the taxpayer. Growth without proper planning could also ruin the quality of life we enjoy in Midland. The needs of our citizens on the East and South sides have been ignored too long and we must start now to improve their situation. I hope through the use of Community Development Funds and other community programs that we can make some progress.	My top priorities are assisting in finding solutions to our housing shortage, traffic and parking problems in our central business district, proper maintenance and repair of streets and more of whatever it takes to provide better police protection.
Place 3	Carroll Thomas	Proven interest in good conservative government. Six years experience on City Council. Three years experience Planning and Zoning Commission. Director Regional Planning Commission. Governor Permian Basin Health Systems Agency. Member Objectives for Midland I and II. BS and MS in Geology. Former President WT Geological Society, PBS-SEPM and Central Division Arthritis Foundation. Former Vice President Boys' Club. Former Director Jaycees and Rotary. Member Chamber of Commerce and Deacon Body of First Baptist Church.	I will continue to protect and improve Midland's quality of life as I have over the last six years. We have improved airport, airpark, renovated downtown and built Midland Center Exhibition Hall. We are building three new city parks and purchased two sites for additional parks. A new Senior Citizens Center just opened. We completed nine more holes and a new pro shop at the golf course. We have renovated swimming pools and built tennis courts. All of these factors contribute to the quality of life in Midland and will need still further improvements during the next two years.	There are five top priorities the next two years: 1. Initiation of plans to provide a larger and better airport facility at a new location to better serve the aviation and business needs of Midland. 2. Continued private development of the downtown area with new traffic control patterns and systems and solutions to the parking problems. 3. Continued improvements to park and recreation areas. 4. Continued strict enforcement of zoning codes in all parts of the city to protect the private property owner. 5. Conservative fiscal management of the cities resources such that there will be no increase in city taxes.
	John Phipps	EDUCATION: Graduate of Texas Tech Univ., BBA in Finance — Money and Banking. PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE: 15 years experience in city and urban planning. Professional land planner and developer. 4 years experience in the banking and savings and loan industry. COMMUNITY SERVICES: 3 years on the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission, one year as Vice Chairman; Leadership Midland participant; Objectives for Midland conferee; United Way loaned executive; member Midland Downtown Lions Club.	Growth management is the key to protecting and improving the quality of life for all Midlanders. Midland is on the verge of what could be the most dynamic growth period it will ever experience. By using proper planning techniques, we can recognize future potential problem areas of our city and deal with these problems in a most efficient and cost effective manner. But until our immediate problems are dealt with and solved can we direct our resources towards improving our quality of life in years to come.	As a result of our accelerated growth, Midland is faced with a number of expensive capital improvement projects. New emphasis must be given to improving our parks and recreation system. Parking and traffic circulation downtown must and can be dealt with immediately. Many of our primary thoroughfares are in need of reconstruction. Redevelopment efforts towards improving the quality of life in south-east Midland need to be initiated. Our needs are many but our resources are few. My goal for the next two years is to deal with these and other problems without increasing taxes to do so.
	George Veloz	Graduated Peacock Military Academy; attended Sul Ross University and Odessa College. President of George A. Veloz Enterprises, DBA Monterrey Cocina Mexicana; Monterrey Products. President of L&T Enterprises DBA KJTT Radio Station; Amigos Investments, Vice-President of Marquez Enterprises DBA Monterrey Flower Shop. Director of Western State Bank. Vice-Chairman on Planning and Zoning Commission. Board of Trustees Member for Midland Memorial. Serves on National Advisory Council SBA, Objectives for Midland Advisory Board, Chamber of Commerce.	I will work to enforce the codes and ordinances that govern and protect our city, regardless of geographical location. I will work to change those laws that are outdated or ineffective. I will work to balance the growth and development of our city to all areas of town by using catalysts, incentives and planning and zoning to stimulate the private sector and governmental development. I believe in a balance budget, planning for long and short term problems, and periodic independent audits of city departments to monitor efficiency, effectiveness and growth for a more cost effective city government.	Some of the priorities facing our city today are housing for all income levels, adequate sewer facilities to accommodate city's growth. Traffic and access in the downtown business district should be dealt with in relation with both residential and retail areas. Encourage clean industrial development, an outpatient medical clinic, good planning for future services, Park land acquisition and a revitalization of our park services.

MISD Board of Directors		What qualifies you for this position? Include education, business and professional experience, community service, etc. (75 words)	What programs or facilities would you support to accomplish higher academic achievement in MISD? (100 words)	Do you support the bond election presented on the April 4, 1981 ballot? Why or why not? (100 words)
Place 3	Ann Page	I believe in and care about public education. Living in Midland 13 years, after having received my BA from UTA has given me the opportunity to be an active volunteer. I have worked extensively in our schools — from PTA to serving on the school board from 1976-1979. The experience gained when serving enables me to be immediately effective. Next year, my three public school children will be high school, junior high and elementary students.	I believe that strict ability grouping and leveling lends itself to high academic standards. I also think each course offered in the Midland schools should have stated objectives on which students are tested. Students who do not learn these objectives should not pass. A thorough evaluation of all programs and courses offered in MISD is necessary to determine that class time is spent striving for high academic achievement. By leveling, evaluating and ending social promotion, each student can better attain the level of achievement his capabilities allow.	The first years of elementary school, or early childhood education years are the most important years for shaping good students. Small classrooms with a low teacher-pupil ratio enable individual attention for each student. MISD elementary schools increased in population by 643 students from Aug. 29, 1980, to Feb. 28, 1981. If new schools with additional classrooms are not built, the elementary schools will become drastically crowded and classes will become so large that effective teaching and learning will be severely threatened. Midland owes itself the school facilities it needs to meet the exciting growth it is experiencing.
	Dicky Gatlin	I hold a bachelor's degree in arts and education (majors in physical education and business administration), also a valid Texas Teaching Certificate for secondary education. I am a member of the Permian Basin Petroleum Accounting Society. I also hold a Texas Plumbers license. I support PTA and have worked with YMCA Youth programs as well as Little League and Cub Scouts. The oil and gas business requires me to make responsible decisions daily.	I would like to see the school district's vocational programs expanded. I believe basic education (reading, writing and arithmetic) should be emphasized and encouraged. Academic achievement must begin at home and continued in the classroom. The schools cannot be considered day care programs. They are learning facilities and this should be remembered by everyone. Teacher-pupil ratios should be lowered in almost every area.	Like most Midlanders I hate to see our taxes rise. The facts are clear we need the new facilities and remodeling done now. A delay would only result in higher construction cost and possible higher interest rates. The construction plus more in the future is inevitable. Midland's economy is such that we may never be in a better situation to upgrade our educational facilities which everyone should realize must be very high on anyone's list of priorities. I sincerely hope we do not delay on this very important issue. I do support the bond election April 4, 1981.
Place 4	Michael E. Butler	Graduated from Texas A&M University with BA in Political Science/Public Administration. One year of graduate school at North Texas State University in Public Administration. I have served on a State Board for the Governor's Office of Traffic Safety. I have attended graduate level courses in management and budget of the University of Texas. I have been a key man for the United Way for the City of Midland. I have graduated from the Leadership Midland Class.	I would support three programs for higher academic achievement. 1. A system-wide policy concerning a minimum passing grade before an athlete be allowed to represent the MISD in an athletic contest. 2. Institute a system-wide "assertive discipline" program at all grade levels. This was given the highest priority in the "Objectives for Midland." 3. A Standard test given in the eleventh and twelfth grades that must be passed prior to graduation. At present all facilities are adequate for higher academic achievement. However, there are facilities that could be improved to make the learning environment more pleasant.	I support only certain parts of the April 4th bond election. I am in favor of constructing one elementary school to replace the DeZavala Elementary School in the DeZavala area. I would need more study before I could endorse or oppose the construction of a second elementary school. I am aware of the critical shortage of classrooms, however I do not think I could support a second elementary school at this time. I am opposed to the $898,000 set aside for the Courtyard Atrium and office expansion for both high schools.
	Gary Hopper	Midland has been my home for almost 28 years. I attended the Midland Public Schools and now have a daughter at Henderson Elementary. My job has provided me with valuable educational experience and has taken me into every aspect of school operations. My community involvement centers around young people. I serve as director of the Midland Optimist Club, director for the Midland Boy's Club and scouting coordinator for Midland Boy Scout Troop 211.	The Midland school system is something all of us can be proud of. Personnel, good facilities and top programs are the main ingredients in maintaining high academic achievement. Competitive educational salaries and good benefits will allow us to continue to employ high quality educators. Better planning in the future will allow us to keep up with Midland's growth and do it in a manner that will not cost the taxpayers an arm and a leg. We must also continue reviewing programs to make sure we are getting the best programs for our tax money.	To keep up with Midland's growth, the school system must grow too just like any business that is growing. A school to replace DeZavala is drastically needed. It is a shame for our school facilities to get in the shape DeZavala is in. The school proposed for northwest Midland will relieve the overcrowding many of our elementary schools are experiencing. Midland High needs a new library and more office space. Lee also needs more room. We're talking over six and a half million dollars. The cost to a homeowner with a $50,000 home is less than 20 dollars a year.

Hospital Board of Directors		What qualifies you for this position? Include education, business and professional experience, community service, etc. (75 words)	What do you see as the main issues facing Midland Hospital District? (100 words)	What improvements would you favor to control the cost of hospital care to Midland County residents? (100 words)
	Ed Magruder	NO RESPONSE	NO RESPONSE	NO RESPONSE
	Dr. Henrie Mast	B.A., Texas Tech, 1931. M.D., Johns Hopkins, 1935. Founding director, Citizen's Savings and Loan. Practiced general surgery in Lubbock, U.S. Navy and Midland until August, 1977. Founding director, Midland YMCA. Former director, Midland Chamber of Commerce. Former member of Executive Committee, Midland Community Chest. Chairman Committee on Health & Welfare, "Objectives for Midland, 1968." Various positions on hospital medical staffs and medical societies. Six years on Board of Trustees, Midland Memorial Hospital. Director, Midland County Hospital District.	The Allison Cancer Center must be gotten off to a good start and its quality maintained at a "second to none" level. We must recruit the employees necessary to operate all our facilities at their full capacities. Family practice physicians should be given help and encouragement to provide professional services to all those needing attention, particularly for Midland's newer citizens. A long-range planning program designed to anticipate Midland's requirements for the next fifteen years should be on the drawing board this year. Our main issue is to provide excellent care at affordable cost.	In one way, a hospital resembles an airline; if each carries a full load of patients (or passengers) the cost for each patient or passenger is at its lowest. We regretfully have had to close needed rooms because of a lack of nursing personnel. Right now, Texas is reported to be ten thousand nurses short of requirements. Recruitment is therefore difficult but essential. Various persons, foundations and institutions have given very generously to the hospital before and since it has had taxing authority. These donors should be recognized and encouraged by emphasizing that ours is a memorial hospital.
	Thomas P. Ingram	NO RESPONSE	NO RESPONSE	NO RESPONSE
	Wanda Mohr	Graduated from nursing school in 1966; employed as RN for three years at the medical center of Columbia University, and one year in the Public Health Service. Studied business administration for two years at City University of New York. Presently enrolled at UTPB; planning to do master's thesis on the crisis in nursing. Other: Objectives for Midland for the '80s; American Heart Assoc. instructor and instructor trainer in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.	The most immediate problems of MMH are the critical shortage of nurses and the low level of employee morale. Chronic and acute shortages of skilled staff are handled only by crisis, threatening health care, delaying elective surgery, trimming emergency and critical care and adding to an increasingly questionable hospital image. This results in reluctance of people to use our facility. Closely related to this is the tremendous budget deficits and the resulting spiral of financial burdens to the county hospital districts.	We must embark on a vigorous and immediate campaign to keep our present employees and recruit others to maintain a high level of patient care, thereby reducing underproductive and costly overtime hours and opening the hospital to capacity. We must improve public perception of MMH and encourage our people to stay in town rather than to leave for other facilities for their health care. Further, we must lessen the budget deficits by quickly identifying indigent patients on admission, so that immediate, sensitive arrangements for funding their bills can be made, thereby sparing the already beleaguered taxpayer.

RINGING THE BELL

Blacks must now realize power of advancement

With BOB TIEUEL

Black Leadership and The Challenge of Power: According to the new National Black Monitor, the turbulent period of the 60's raised the issue of the need for group power on the part of black Americans. Black Americans, unlike any major group of people who have come to this country, have never sought in a concerted way to develop and exercise group power.

In the past the focus of the black community in America had to be black survival. No group of people came to this country in chains, other than black Americans. No group of people in the nation's life have been considered chattel, other than black people. No group of people have been excluded from this nation's melting pot both in law and in custom as thoroughly as have black Americans.

As the Swedish social economist Gunnar Myrdal notes, no group of people may have contributed more to the cultural, social and economic character of American life than black people. Yet no group has been as systematically denied both group recognition and the economic and political rewards of citizenship as have black Americans. In the light of these hard facts, some national black leaders in church, in press and in civic and social groups have declared 1981 as the "Year of Black History" with special programs, exhibits, etc., to be sponsored throughout 1981.

Black Americans must come to know the tremendous power they have for self-protection and advancement when they represent a $100 billion annual market for the American business community. It is estimated that simply by selective buying, nationally, black Americans could drastically alter the entire American economy. Money talks, adds the Black Monitor.

Our thanks to Bellringer Marvin Marshall of Texarkana for his endorsement of our Black Press. Pass the word brother.

To put it another way, states the Black Monitor, blacks must come to function within American life as black people in order to be seen, heard and responded to as Americans. Separatism in terms of identity is not withdrawal. Rather, it is the one sure and weighty means of participation. Separate parts may unite. Without a distinct (or a separate) identity as a discreet power element, black Americans cannot unite with others as peers in the give-and-take of a representative democracy. Such is a further lesson which black Americans may learn from their Jewish brothers, concludes the Monitor.

Great quotes: "No people that has solely depended upon foreign aid, or rather, upon the efforts of those, in any way identified with the oppressor, to undo heavy burdens ever stood forth in the 'attitude of freedom.' The man who has suffered wrong is the man who demands redress — the man struck is the man to cry out — and he who has endured the cruel pangs of slavery is the man to advocate liberty."

Individual households must soften water for consumption

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Many Permian Basin residents complain about the water's taste, although it is safe for drinking, and the scummy deposit left on surfaces, hair and clothing when combined with soap. Since over 80 percent of city water is used for sprinkling lawns, flushing toilets, fighting fires, washing cars and industrial use, it is understandable that a city water supply would not be treated for hardness and objectionable taste, therefore it is up to each individual household to improve the water at the point of use.

Hard water, caused by invisible particles of dissolved rock — principally calcium and manganese — is present in over half of the homes in the United States. According to standards set by the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Water Quality Association, very hard water is defined as water containing over 180 parts per million. Midland's water supply alone contains 285 ppm.

Water is softened by the use of an appliance that removes sediment by filtration, an invisible dissolved solids by a process called ion exchange. According to Herman Blakley, general manager of Culligan Water Conditioning Co., the ion exchange process substitutes sodium ions for the calcium and manganese ions present in hard water producing water containing less than 20 ppm.

The two most frequently used methods of reducing water hardness are buying or renting water softening equipment or contracting with a company to provide water conditioning service. Soft water service is usually recommended for households with moderate water usage since the company merely hooks up a portable appliance to your water line, and periodically replaces the unit with a freshly-recharged one. No electrical connection or drain is necessary.

For those households where consumption is large, it may be more economical to buy or rent a permanently installed water softening appliance. The most automatic units use an electronic sensor to initiate recharging of the water softener, just before the water becomes hard. They are replacing the water softeners which are controlled by a time clock and recharged on a pre-set schedule.

In the past, claims have been made by a few water conditioning companies that could not be substantiated, therefore use the following guidelines when shopping for water conditioning equipment:

—You should be aware that no single type of water conditioning appliance will cure all water problems. A false claim is made by a salesman who promises the unit will remove the invisible dissolved solids and produce water equivalent to bottled water. Although there is a purifier available that uses reverse osmosis to remove the solids found in water, it affects only the water channeled through one faucet, usually water used in the kitchen.

—If you are not sure you want to invest in equipment, look for a company that will rent a water conditioning appliance. Check to see whether part of the rental cost will be applied toward purchase should you later decide to buy the appliance.

—Since prices can vary dramatically from one company to another, shop around. If the company charges a flat fee that includes the appliance and installation, you may be paying too much, particularly if your house is already plumbed for water conditioning equipment. The most reliable companies will send a qualified representative to review your situation, determine the costs and provide a written estimate. —Don't be pressured into buying an appliance by a fast-talking salesman. If he states he is giving you a special price today, and tomorrow the price will increase, look elsewhere. Do your homework by gathering manufacturer's pamphlets, reading ads and consumer product testing magazines, and talking to friends and neighbors who use water conditioning equipment.

—Find out about service after the sale by asking about warranties, the availability of parts and references. Be careful if a salesman claims the appliance has a lifetime warranty. Also, since salt must be added to the unit on a regular basis, determine if the company provides that service and what it will cost.

—When choosing a water conditioner, look for equipment that bears the Gold Seal of the Water Quality Association.

Water conditioning equipment can be considered an investment. Smaller quantities of soaps and detergents are needed, usually water systems last longer, and water is more palatable. For more information write for "Tips on Water Conditioners" from the BBB/Permian Basin, Box 6006, Midland 79701.

PUBLIC NOTICE OF TAX EXEMPTIONS AVAILABLE TO HOMEOWNERS

The City of Midland, Midland Independent School, Midland Junior College and Midland County Hospital District's tax office is currently accepting applications for 1981 homestead exemptions. The deadline for filing is April 1, 1981. Applications should be filed as early as possible to avoid inconvenience to the homeowner.

Two Types of homestead exemptions from school taxes are available to taxpayers who owned their residence homesteads in this school district on January 1 of this year. First, the general homestead exemption is available to all homeowners and exempts $5,000 from the market value of the homestead.

Second, any person who is 65 years of age or older or who is disabled can be exempted an additional $10,000 from the market value of the homestead. A property owner may not receive both the disability exemption and the $10,000 exemption for the elderly. Proof of age or disability may be necessary.

"Disabled," in this case, refers to the definition found in the Federal Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Act under the Social Security Administration. Disability is defined as inability to engage in any substantial gainful employment which exists in the national economy, or in the case of someone who is 55 and blind, inability by reason of such blindness to engage in the employment in which he was previously engaged. The person claiming disability does not necessarily have to drawing benefits from Social Security.

Homeowners age 65 or older who apply for their exemption will be granted a tax freeze. If application is not made, the tax freeze will be lost for this year.

In addition, the City of Midland and the Midland Junior College district offers an optional over-65 exemption of $8,000 from the market value of a residence homestead and the Midland County Hospital District offers an optional over-65 exemption of $12,000 from the market value of the residence homestead.

Disabled Veterans or their survivors may be entitled to an exemption ranging from $2,000 to $4,000 from the market value of any property they owned on January 1, of the year in which the application is made. The disabled veteran must be a Texas resident and provide any VA or armed forces documents verifying disability that may be required. The amount depends on the percentage of service connected disability.

Land which is being utilized for agricultural purposes may be eligible for tax relief. Qualified landowners hold the option of having an agricultural or open-space land valuation applied to their property. Details on what types of land may be taxed on productivity rather than market value are available from the appraisal office.

Application forms were mailed earlier to all homeowners who qualified for a homestead exemption in 1980. If you did not receive an application, or if you have questions about qualifying for exemptions or filing application forms, contact the tax office at 683-4281, extension 237, 238 or 239.

Application forms may also be picked up at the tax office at 300 North Lorraine.

Memorial fund set up for Bernardon family

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While friends and co-workers are setting up a memorial fund to benefit the children of slain Midlander John J. Bernardon, others may be plotting to avenge his baffling death.

"He was a fine guy," said Dean Sierman, a friend of Bernardon. "I don't think you could hardly have met a finer man than John. John was a good ol' boy, and most every body who knew John, liked John. He didn't have an enemy."

Foe or not, someone shot Bernardon, 34, and his fishing pal, David James "Dave" Adams, 32, to death, as they were fishing from a boat last Sunday in Spring Creek near Mertzon in ranching- and deer-hunting country of West Texas.

Each was shot, apparently by rifle fire, several times; their bodies were riddled. The ambushers or ambushers have not been found, though three or four firearms were found somewhere in the vicinity of the assault.

As a tribute to Bernardon and as a benefit to his widow, Linda, and, especially their young son and daughter, Bernardon's friends and co-workers at Berg Motor Co. have established a memorial fund in his name at Commercial Bank & Trust Co.

Steve Wood, a friend of Bernardon and a fellow car salesman, said that Bernardon "was very concerned about his children. He was a very kind man."

Sierman said that the memorial fund is "the best thing there is." He is giving to it.

And he also theorized that the deaths, already deemed as homicides, may never be solved and could have been perpetrated by landowners who want no one on their land or on their rivers and creeks.

"They're not going to try to do nothing (about the deaths)," Sierman said in sorrow and frustration over his friend's death. He figures that for one reason or another the investigating lawmen were lax in their probe into the death.

"I kind of got this idea that they didn't want him in his river and 'got' them. He and some wetback.

"They've all been ranchers down there for 50 years and think they own it all, and I guess they do," lamented Sierman. "But that doesn't give them the license to kill."

Sierman, a 43-year-old automobile mechanic who had known Bernardon since 1975, said his friend had asked in times past to go fishing with him in the ranching country.

"He tried to get me to go down to Dave's," Sierman said, "and I asked him if they had any problems with them ranchers, and they said they didn't, but I was afraid."

Bernardon's friend, Dave Adams, lived down there on and off the land, Sierman said.

Sierman said that some people, particular fellow "chopper" motorcyclists, have suggested that they avenge Bernardon's death. Bernardon's rode a "chopper"; Sierman said he prefers the more conventional "dresser" — a motorcycle with the windshield and fairing.

Sierman doesn't condone the get-even approach to the deaths.

"I'm a Christian, and I can't go down and avenge those guys (Bernardon and Adams). I know someone's who considering it very seriously, but I couldn't tell him not to."

But Sierman said that some motorcycleists from Kansas are considering coming to Texas to seek revenge.

"I hope they don't, because nothing good could come out of it."

Nevertheless, Sierman said the investigation into the slaying was "too hush-hush."

Trilateral panel continues despite much defamation

WASHINGTON (AP) — In some quarters, it's pictured as a nefarious communist conspiracy. Elsewhere, it's a cabal seeking to subject the world's working people to the chains of capitalism.

This week, the group's leaders arrive in Washington. While here, they'll dine and talk with President Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, among others.

The Trilateral Commission has been dogged by bad publicity, and to hear its leaders, public misunderstanding.

"Originally, this sort of nonsensical defamation was easy to dismiss because it came from the left and the right," says David Rockefeller, the commission's founder and the departing chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank.

"Lately, though, the drumbeat of insinuations has grown louder," Rockefeller said last year.

The Trilateral Commission was founded in 1973, composed of many of the industrial world's most powerful men who were very disturbed over what they considered to be President Nixon's nationalistic foreign economic policies.

Its 250 members come from the United States, Europe and Japan; thus, the trilateral label. Early participants included George Bush, Jimmy Carter, Walter Mondale, Henry Kissinger, Cyrus Vance and Andrew Young.

Bush was dogged by his former affiliation while he contested Reagan last year for the Republican presidential nomination.

During the New Hampshire primary, a questioner asked whether Bush would allow himself to be "pressured to appoint Cabinet members from that commission and would be influenced in the same manner as Carter was to bring the shah into the United States."

Rockefeller had been instrumental in persuading the Carter administration to help the ailing shah, a prelude to the U.S. embassy takeover in Tehran.

Bush, responding to his questioner, chose to identify other members, including Reagan's close friend, Weinberger.

Reagan, in turn, retorted: "Cap Weinberger told me he's never attended a meeting" of the commission.

The commission's main goal is to establish better communication between the three industrial power centers, bringing key decision-makers together twice a year to consider matters of common interest — from energy to agriculture.

Last year, the commission held a similar conclave in London to discuss global security, including the unraveling crises in Iran and Afghanistan.

This week's session will hear reports on the Middle East and discussions on current political and economic changes in this country.

Commission coordinator George S. Franklin says the three-sided group has been instrumental in recent months in bringing the Japanese into "constructive international dialogue."

That may prove particularly helpful to the Reagan administration at a time when it is trying to hold down the onslaught of Japanese autos into the country, without a protectionist hard-line stand.

dria. Baldwin was convicted of bludgeoning an old woman to death during a robbery.

In Williams' case, the appeals court was asked to postpone the execution after U.S. District Judge Frank Polozola in Baton Rouge denied the plea Friday.

The warden said he wouldn't disclose for security reasons when the move to the death house would be made by Williams, who was among 14 death-row inmates living in one-man cells.

John Vodicka, head of the Louisiana Coalition for Jails and Prisons, said he was astonished at Polozola's decision.

"It is without precedent at this state of the appeal process for a federal judge to deny a stay," he said. "At least, I don't know of a single case."

In the 10-page ruling, Polozola said he reviewed the trial record carefully and found "no error of any kind," and delaying the execution date for another hearing would serve no useful purpose.

No breakthrough yet in Polish talks

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity and the government adjourned talks Saturday without a breakthrough on averting a general strike planned by the big independent union. The East German news agency reported "new units" were replacing military forces that had begun the spring Warsaw Pact maneuvers.

Polish air space was reported closed to foreign aircraft for five hours ending at 5:30 a.m. Sunday for "technical reasons" possibly related to the maneuvers. However, a State Department spokesman said it was "not unusual" for foreign air traffic to be banned during such exercises.

The East German news agency ADN said the "Soyuz 81" maneuvers continued Saturday and that replacements had been brought in. But the report did not say how long the exercises, which began more than a week ago, would continue in Poland and its Soviet-bloc neighbors.

The military report was issued as the stalemate continued in the talks between the communist regime and Solidarity despite a papal

to highlight show

The Queen's Contest will be a highlight in the all-breed schooling show hosted Saturday by the West Texas Appaloosa Horse Club in the WTAHC Arena 2.2 miles south of Interstate 20 and just off the State Highway.

The show will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday. Registration will be held at 9:30 a.m.

Show classes will include 1980 and 1981 halter foals, 1979 and earlier halter mares, 1979 and earlier halter geldings and 1979 and earlier halter stallions, and showmanship at halter, English and Western equitation, English and Western pleasure, lead-line, walk-trot, Western riding and horsemanship, and pole, barrel and flag racing.

Entry fee is $2 per class.

The WTAHC Queen will be selected at the show.

Queen contestants are Michelle Waibel, Robin Neighbors, Trina Brookshire and Lynn Warner, all of Midland, and Kelly Cooper of Monahans.

appeal and a harsh attack from the Soviets that accused the union of making "unacceptable political demands."

Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, in an interview broadcast on Warsaw television, was cautiously optimistic about progress in the latest round of his talks with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa to avoid the strike called for Tuesday.

"It seems to me that there is a possible opening for ending this conflict, that is we are closer to ending it, rather than farther from it," Ra-kowski said. Walesa, who did not speak to reporters after the meeting adjourned, went to the home of Poland's Roman Catholic primate, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, to discuss the negotiations.

In a sermon at St. Anne's Church, Cardinal

Wyszynski appeared to criticize some of Solidarity's tactics.

"One cannot incessantly shift responsibility onto the nation, the state, the social and economic system without seeing it for oneself," he said. "One cannot only pass judgment. Let us remember that a remedy used against an illness can sometimes worsen, not cure the disease."

Earlier Saturday, in a message sent to Wyszynski and broadcast by the Vatican radio, Pope John Paul appealed to his countrymen to find a way to avert the strike.

Williams visited by relatives as judges consider his fate

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — Relatives visited Robert Wayne Williams on death row Saturday, as three federal appeals judges in New Orleans considered whether to halt his execution, scheduled for Tuesday.

"He's having quite a few visitors today. Just various relatives," said Warden Frank Blackburn at Angola State Penitentiary.

"I had a long talk with him early this morning. He's in good shape and he's prepared either way," the warden said of Williams, a 29-year-old drug addict convicted of murder for shooting a security guard during a holdup.

An official at the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it was anybody's guess when the emergency panel might meet and rule on a request to stay Williams' execution.

He was one of two condemned killers who had been scheduled to die Tuesday in Louisiana's old rough-hewn electric chair. But on Friday, Timothy Baldwin, 43, was granted a delay by U.S. District Judge Naumann Scott after a hearing in Alexan-

POSITIVE THINKING

Five elements lie in successful achievement

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

"I want to go places and get somewhere," so said a 27 year old man. "Where do you want to go?" I asked. To which he fumblingly said he didn't exactly know. "When do you want to get there," I inquired. Seems he had never figured that one out, actually it had never occurred to him.

I pursued the matter for he was a likeable fellow, you might say a likely lad. "What would you like to do?" He didn't know exactly. "Well, then what can you do best?" Nor did he have a reply to that question either.

"Now take a look at the situation, Jack," I continued. "You want to get somewhere, but you don't know where; you have no plan for getting there and you are not even sure of what you want to do or what you can do best."

I knew that this boy had the makings of a successful man if he would just get organized in his thinking. So I suggested he go home, think it over, talk it over with his wife, then take a jacket-sized card and in as few words as possible write his goal. Then he was to state what he would like to do and what he could do best. Finally, he was to put down the date on which he visualized and expected he would reach that goal. He came to see me and handed me the card. I called my secretary and asked her to make a half dozen copies. "Put one in your pocket at all times and read it a dozen times a day. Put another on your desk, another on your shaving mirror, another on the instrument panel of your car, and so on. Then hold a picture of what you have written in your mind. Give it all you've got and believe you will attain that goal by that date." He did. It was a reasonable goal and he went on to other and bigger goals.

There is creative power in clearly defined, realistic goals, dated and positively determined. Add to this a positive follow through, a willingness to work plus a humble prayer for God's help and such goals become reachable and within the time limit. The latter completes the required focus.

Another proof of the effectiveness of the above stated principle is the woman who came to speak to me after I had given a talk in a East Coast city. She was very heavy and short of stature, but had a remarkably attractive face. Fixing a rather severe glare upon me, she said, "Do you really believe in all this positive thinking business you write and speak about?"

"Sure do," I replied. "Well, it hasn't worked for me." Then she said, "How old would you say I am; I really want to know what you would guess my age to be."

"Well," I replied, "I would say about fifty."

"Wrong by 15 years, I'm 35. Now isn't it pathetic for a woman of 35 to look like one of 50 and the reason is I'm so fat." She went on to tell me how she had tried to diet but just didn't have the will power.

I interrupted her, "Don't try to reduce your weight by will power alone, use imagination. That really adds the power." I went on to explain that if she formed a mental image as she wanted to be and held that vision in mind that she would find the strength she lacked.

I took a piece of paper and drew a picture of a woman. "Now," I asked, "What would you like to weigh." We agreed on 120 pounds. She had told me that her present weight was 190 pounds. Then I asked, "When do you want to weigh 120?" We agreed on a date sufficiently well ahead that she could reach it by proper dieting. But I went even further and asked her to indicate her desired breast, waist and hip measurements and wrote them at the side of the figure. I then directed her to get several copies made of the picture and to keep one in her hand bag, paste one on her mirror, and attach another to the door of her refrigerator. I grinned.

For some reason while this method rather startled the lady she went for it. "Get in touch with me around the date we have written on that picture and let me know how you come out." She followed the suggestions and would occasionally write me that weight reduction had become an exciting game, that she was having lots of fun. She reached her goal by the indicated date, and incidentally has held the 120 pound weight.

Both the young man and the young lady mentioned above gave me permission to tell these stories provided I would not use their names. And I assure you that the method employed in their cases worked as stated and in various ways in the experience of others. There are five elements in successful achievement: (1) specific goal setting, (2) definite timing, (3) belief, (4) positive follow-through and (5) positive thinking.

Open House

This Weekend

See how Capp Homes beats the high cost of housing.

Come see an open house that's totally unique...a Capp Homes Open House. What makes this open house so unusual? The house isn't even finished yet. The exterior is erected, but the interior is not yet complete. Why? Because we want you to see for yourself all the benefits of the "Finish-It-Yourself House" program. You'll see the excellent quality of Capp construction materials and workmanship. Capp Homes are custom built from your plans or ours. Nothing is pre-fab or modular.

At the open house, you'll learn that by finishing it yourself, or by acting as your own general contractor, you'll save a bundle — thousands of dollars, compared to having an ordinary builder construct the same house on your lot. And Capp has financing available...both construction loans and permanent mortgages for new qualified home buyers.

Find out more this weekend. Come to the Open House...rain or shine.

HERE'S HOW TO GET TO THE OPEN HOUSE.

Time: Sunday, March 29th TODAY ONLY

Date: 1 pm-6 pm

Directions: In Midland go south on Farmers Road (FM) 715 three miles south of I-20. Turn east on County Road 140 E then go one mile to County Road 1160 S. Turn north and follow the Capp Homes Open House signs.

Your Capp Host is: Ed Kriskchke (915) 683-9529 and Bill Born (915) 381-3291

Velarde blanks 'Cats for Rebs

By TED BATTLES

With Randy Velarde pitching a five-hitter and the Rebels unleashing a 12-hit attack, even a triple play couldn't help the beleaguered San Angelo Bobcats as Midland Lee squared its District 5-5A record at 1-1 with a wind-buffed 10-0 win at Lee High Field Saturday afternoon.

Saturday Lee got the hitting it lacked Tuesday when Alan Koonce fanned 14 while losing a five-hitter 2-1 in eight innings as Velarde and Koonce, playing left, collected three hits each to pace the Lee attack. The deadly duo also combined for five runs batted in as Lee upped its season's record to 7-5.

Koonce had a chance for the cycle after doubling home a run in the first, singling in another in the third and tripling home a third tally in the fifth, but grounded into a double play in the sixth.

VELARDE, who had singled, was on base when Koonce doubled in the first off Zeke Borron, the little left hander who absorbed all the punishment for the Bobcats.

Lee added two more in the third when Barry Corley led off with a triple, Velarde doubled and then Koonce dropped his pop up into short right for a single. The Rebs made it 5-0 in the fifth as San Angelo contributed three errors to the cause before Koonce tripled.

The Rebels then lowered the boom in the sixth when Bill Dern beat out an infield hit, Ricky Wright outlegged an infield hit and Kevin Bradshaw loaded the bases with a bunt single that hugged the third baseline. Randy Pepper's fly ball single to left plated one run and then Corley's grounder to third forced Wright at the plate to set up a run-scoring triple steal.

That brought up Velarde, who drilled his third hit, a single to right and Ron Smedley whistled a double off the fence in left for two more runs.

SAN ANGELO appeared headed for serious trouble in the fourth with Dern on first, a hit batsman, and Wright was on first on a fielder's choice sacrifice. With both runners breaking on a two-strike count, Bradshaw lined to first baseman David Ramirez who touched the bag for a double play and fired to Jeffrey Martinez at short for the triple play.

For a few minutes in the sixth it seemed Lee had executed a triple play as well after Kel Crain singled (See KOONCE, 6D)

Winds, sand herald baseball's arrival

By TED BATTLES

Mother nature is in the process of her annual house-cleaning, chasing away winter with 50 mph winds that bring relief for those lingering sniffles with sinus-cleansing sand. As that famous El Paso Bard of the Barrio, Nolan Richardson, might put it, "It's a time for transition."

It's that time of year when one looks at the greening clusters of crab grass and dandelions and studiously ignores what is taking place, but, contrary to what you may have been told, they and their half-breed lawn friends won't go away.

In West Texas, more often than not, natives bask in early March sunshine only to see the terrain depart for parts unknown as April approaches. One wonders who thought up the lion-lamb business, anyway.

WHAT'S IT all mean, dear fan, baseball season, in all its full-blown glory, is about to burst upon the land.

Looming less than two weeks away is the Texas League baseball season (San Antonio at Cubs Stadium April 10) and if you don't believe it, visit the Midland Cubs front office at Big Spring and Texas. But, be careful, those piles of seeming debris in front of General Manager Bill Schammel's desk are the entire season's tickets, the carton boxes are filled with concession-souvenir goodies like pennants, batting helmets, jackets, t-shirts...well, you name it.

And Schammel, beginning on his first season as Cubs GM since succeeding Bill Rigney, Jr., who resigned after last season, is beginning to get the stomach butterflies, like back in the days when he was a second team Juco basketball All-America at Weber State in Utah.

The butterflies come from equal parts anticipation, anxiety and the kind of eager excitement that comes with being a fan at heart.

"WE'RE IN great shape," Schammel thinks. "We do have some box seats available, mostly way down the first base line. It's amazing what we have sold. Thanks to the ground work laid by Rig, we topped 900."

"This year I sold most of the boxes by letter, because there were just too many people to see and my first job after getting here was to generate some operating revenue. The mail response was gratifying and we've paid off everything we owed and even have all our balls, bats paid for. We're ready to go."

"The rest is up to Roy Hartsfield," Schammel says. "What kind of club he brings here. But I was out in Mesa last week and everyone tells me how luck we were to get him as manager."

Hartsfield is in the process of molding a ball club from the players sent to him by the Chicago Cubs. And one thing Cubs fans will have, although the concession staple is being dropped like a hot potato in ball parks all over the land, is peanuts. "I'm a peanut freak," admits Schammel. Triple play saves win for Bulldogs

By MIKE CRUVER Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — In a District 5-5A baseball game that had something for everyone, the Midland High Bulldogs dumped the Big Spring Steers 13-11 in eight innings Saturday. The victory lifted the Purple Pack to 1-1 in district play while the Steers' record also stands at 1-1.

The score was even at 11 when Frank Garramone stepped to the plate to lead off the eighth inning. Garramone poled a tremendous homerun over the centerfield fence for the go ahead run and the Dogs added an insurance run on a bloop double by Teddy Bartley and singles by Wayne Sims and Kyle Ford.

BIG SPRING wasn't ready to concede in the bottom of the inning. Michael Feldt, pitching in relief of starter Joe Castaneda, walked Tom Olague and James Walker to start the inning. Rusty Hayworth stepped to the plate and tried to bunt. After fouling off the first two offerings, Hayworth popped a bunt in the air toward first base. Big Spring's runners were off and running at the crack of the bat, but Feldt made a desperate dive and caught the ball, he jumped up and fired the ball to Sims for the second out and Sims raced to tag first and complete the game-ending triple play.

If it hadn't been for sophomore Tim Davis the Bulldogs won't have had to worry about the eighth inning. With two down and a count of two balls on Davis, Big Spring pitcher Wayne Shipman, pitching in relief, got a fastball belt high that Davis hit high into the air and the wind carried over the leftfield fence to knot the game at 11.

A DRAINED Midland High coach

Tim Whalen said, "We just kept fighting back. There were several times we could have just quit but didn't. I am very proud of the way the kids played."

MHS took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first when Steer's starter Moe Rubio walked Feldt, Jerry Zachery followed with a triple to deep rightfield and Garramone plated Zachery with a solid single to right.

Big Spring bounced right back with a run in the first and added three more in the second to take a 4-2 lead. The Steers scored their single run in the first without the aid of a hit, but took advantage of two walks and three errors. Garramone kept the Steers from having a big inning by throwing out Dickie Wrightsil as he tried to steal third.

In the second, Big Spring's leftfielder Mark Warren rapped a 2-run double to left and Blake Rossen, dh, knocked in another rbi with a single. Garramone again came up with a big play as he gunned down a runner trying to steal second. The situation started looking bleak for the Dogs in the fourth inning when Steer's catcher Lupe Ontiveros hit a Castaneda fastball over the leftfield fence for two runs. The blow gave Big Spring a 6-2 cushion and it looked pretty solid as Moe Rubio was rolling along with a two-hitter going into the top of the fifth.

THE FIFTH started innocently enough as Fabian Ramos grounded out, Davis then outlegged a ball hit to deep short for an infield hit. Feldt walked before Zachery bounced a single over the firstbaseman's head that scored two runs. Rubio walked Garramone before Shipman relieved and walked Joel Castaneda to load the

It's Tar Heels, Hoosiers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Al Wood, North Carolina's smooth as silk forward, said the points didn't mean much, but when it was over, he had broken an NCAA tournament scoring record that had stood for 22 years.

Wood scored 39 points, including 25 in the second half, leading North Carolina to a 78-65 victory over Virginia Saturday, sending the Tar Heels into the championship game of the NCAA's 1980-81 college basketball tournament.

North Carolina will meet Indiana, a 67-49 semifinal winner over Louisiana State, in Monday night's title game. Virginia and LSU will meet in the preceding consolation game.

THIS WILL be the second meeting this season between North Carolina and Indiana. The Tar Heels won the first game 65-56.

"The main thing is we won. We're going to be in the finals," said Wood, whose total broke the record of 38 by Jerry West, then of West Virginia, against Louisville in 1959.

"That's something to look forward to. The points don't mean that much," Wood said.

Wood's second-half performance breathed new life into the Tar Heels, who had shot only 38 percent before intermission and had been unable to connect from the outside.

"He's a true All-American," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said of Wood. "I'm glad he's getting the recognition he has deserved for four years."

VIRGINIA COACH Terry Holland used three guards to try and stop

Wood, who stands 6-foot-6. Othell Wilson, a 6-foot freshman, was one of the three who drew that assignment.

"They tried to use quickness against him," Smith said, "and it didn't work."

Wood said the defense made it easier for him to be selective about his shots. "I don't think I dominated the game. It just so happens that they put a short guy on me," Wood said.

"Most guys who are 6-6, when they see a guy 6-2 guarding them, they get excited," Wood said.

The appearance in the title game will be North Carolina's third under Smith, who has coached the Tar Heels for 19 years. However, Smith has yet to taste the sweetness of victory in this game. This time, Holland believes Smith will break his long fast. (See TAR, 4D)

Indiana levels LSU Tigers, 67-49

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Get loose, Indiana Coach Bobby Knight had told his players, and junior forward Landon Turner took the advice seriously.

Turner, playing the best basketball of his career, ignited the ninth-ranked Hoosiers to an 11-point burst that started the second half, sending Indiana into the 1980-81 NCAA basketball final with a 67-49 victory over Louisiana State Saturday.

"In the first half we played pretty poor," Turner said, who finished with 20 points. "We were tight, and we just played. We were supposed to make four passes (on each possession), but we only made one or two.

"In the second half, we started to relax, make those passes, and things started to fall in for us."

TURNER scored the last nine points in that early second-half romp on a variety of short jumpers, layins and offensive rebounds, but it may have been his defensive work on the vaunted front line of LSU that turned the tide.

Turner, who had eight rebounds, combined with front-court mates Ray Tolbert and Ted Kitchel to hold LSU's front line to a total of 19 points.

In the first half, however, it looked like Indiana might never get going. The Hoosiers shot only 36 percent in the opening half, but Knight, the only coach here who has won an NCAA title, said he was unconcerned.

"We didn't need to do anything different," Knight said. "We just didn't hit our shots. We had a lot of opportunities."

"I reminded them to concentrate on certain things. I wanted them to relax a little bit."

LSU COACH Dale Brown, in his first trip to the Final Four, said it was interesting that, in the past two seasons, his team had lost in the tournament's earlier rounds to the eventual champion — Michigan State in 1979 and Louisville in 1980.

"I'd be greatly surprised if we haven't lost to the champion this year," Brown said.

Brown said that when Indiana (See LSU, 4D)

Sugar Ray stops garbage man in 10

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard knocked down Larry Bonds in the fourth round and continued to beat up on the garbage man from Denver until referee Arthur Mercante stopped the bout in the 10th round Saturday night to defend his World Boxing Council welterweight championship.

The end came shortly after Bonds got up from a knockdown in the 10th round. After regaining his feet, he was met by a barrage of head blows as he stood in Leonard's corner and the referee signaled the end at 2:22 of the round.

The bout in the Carrier Dome was all Leonard, who already is signed to challenge Ayub Kalule for the World Boxing Association junior-middleweight title June 25 in Houston.

Leonard, fighting for the first time since he regained the title from Roberto Duran last Nov. 25, took charge of the fight after Bonds, fighting for the first time since last April 19, held an edge in the opening round on the strength of good movement and his right jab.

Bulldogs take 2nd in Seminole Relays

SEMINOLE — There is now an indication that the Midland High track team is beginning to hit full stride after its second place team finish in the Seminole Relays Saturday with some of their best performances of the year.

Amarillo Palo Duro won the meet with 137 points while MHS tied Lubbock Estacado for second with 114 each. Lovington, N.M., followed with 102.

Sophomore Troy Bush was the biggest Bulldog surprise as he leaped to a 6-5 to win the high jump, an event the Bulldogs have been getting no points in recently. Of course, the 6-5 was Bush's best effort by far.

Sophomore James Beverley won his fourth race of the year in the half mile, but this one was 880 yards instead of 800 meters. All the races were run in yards here. Beverley posted a 2:02.7 in the wind and is not his best. However Mike Betteridge got a surprise fourth with a 2:08, his best ever. Betteridge also had a fourth in the mile with a 5:00.

Jim Kemper garnered his first pole vault victory of the year with a 12-6, his best this season and the Bulldogs also won the mile relay with a 3:30.8 behind Elston Montgomery, Bruce Philpy, Beverley and Bruce Crawford. That was not their best time, but it was the first victory of the season in that event.

Billy Taylor has yet to win an event this year, but he keeps coming close. Taylor was second in the 100 with an 11.2 and third in the 220 with a 22.6. Sophomore Ricky Madrid was fifth in the 220 with a 23.2 in his first varsity run. The Bulldogs continue to get hurdle points. Crawford had a second place 40.9 in the 330 intermediates in his first try at that event and Montgomery was fourth with a 41.2. Bruce Philpy continues to improve and had a third in the 440 with a 52.3.

Hank McClung was third in the discus with a 145-4 and Mike Velasco, fresh off the basketball team had a fifth place in the long jump. However, the long jump was a competitive event because Velasco's first effort was a 20-8½, a career best, and it was only good for fifth.

The Bulldogs will bring their improved show to Memorial Stadium Friday for the Tall City Relays.

Three marks set in Tech track meet

LEVELLAND, Texas (AP) — Three meet records were set Saturday in the Texas Tech Invitational track meet, won easily by Abilene Christian.

Gideon Cheruyot and Harold Ledet of Angelo State set two of the marks, and Martin Guerrero of Abilene Christian set the other.

Cheruyot took the triple jump with a leap of 51 feet 8½ inches. Ledet threw the shot 56 feet 5 inches, and Guerrero threw the discus 181 feet 3 inches.

The meet was run in Levelland because of repairs to the Tech track.

In the feature event, NAIA champion Joel Ngetich of Wayland ran a 1:50.1 in the 800-meter run to whip Texas Tech's James Mays, who was timed in 1:52.0.

Goddard's Jason Fuller knows he has a relay victory in hand as he approaches the tape in the seventh grade 1200 relay at Memorial Stadium Saturday in the finals of the Tall City Junior Relays.

M-Cubs upgrade concession menu

(Continued from 1D) ball game wouldn't be a ball game without peanuts. I sent for samples from all over the country before making a choice. They'll cost 60 cents for a 2-1/2 ounce bag."

"We're trying to upgrade our concessions and have added some new items, like pies, Polish sausage, sandwiches and ice cream. Because of the open air concession stand, there are certain things we can't handle because of flies and blowing sand...like hamburgers, fries and pizzas. Most products must be wrapped or boxed. Michelle Dooley will be in charge of our concession stand this year."

SCHAMMEL, who, as a board of director for the Phoenix Pacific Coast League Giants back in 1975, was in charge of the concession operation, in keeping with his intent to make Cubs Stadium a center for fun for the entire family, will move the beer stands for Two-Bit Beer Nights to the first and third base ends of the stadium. "This will keep the concession area behind home plate free for family trade and cut down the under stands congestion."

While there are some changes, fans will be happy to learn that ticket prices remain the same, $2 for adults and $1 for children. "Where else can you buy live entertainment with a new script every night for $2?" asks Bill.

The Cubs idea is to make money by putting people in the ball park and making every effort to see that they are having a good time.

"I'll miss the organ, but I think we can do more things with the cartridge machine to jazz things up during the lull...you know, like opening the door to Fibber McGee's Closet after a home run and maybe something appropriate for departing pitchers. We don't want to get like El Paso, but we can have some fun in good taste."

MIDLAND also will have something that no other park, besides Dodger Stadium, and that's the National Anthem by Sue Raney.

"Basically, we are trying to put on a little more show. Minor league baseball unlike the majors has to have a little show, fun without detracting from the dignity of the game."

Work has been completed on a 32-page program with a four-color cover. "It's a commemorative program with quizzes, a review of Midland's 10 years in the Texas League and sequential Lucky Number pages. I think the fans will like it and our Lucky number prizes will be worthwhile."

The Cubs' front office operation is not a one-man...uh, person, show as Schammel is first to admit. "Katharina Munz is invaluable. She has been my right-hand person. She has done much of the selling and will run the usherette crew and be in overall charge of the concession operation."

So, who is this 6-5 bundle of enthusiasm and where did he come from?

AFTER HIS Phoenix experience in 1975, Bill dropped out of baseball ("all the directors did was squabble over who was going to go to Hawaii with the team") and concentrate on being an advertising account executive.

"I'd known Bill Rigney since the Rosey Ryan days in Phoenix and I have known both owners of the Cubs, Max Christensen and Bernard Langford for years. And I wasn't unfamiliar with Midland. I've been here for all the Sports banquets and visited on other occasions. I liked the city, the people and because it is a fast-growing city with tremendous room for the future, when Bill decided to go into the oil business, I was receptive."

Although born in Milwaukee, a bouncing 12 pounds, seven ounces, and raised in Phoenix, his roots go back to Iowa where his dad, Zud Schammel, was an All-America guard at the University of Iowa back in days of Ozzie Simmons, Dick Crayne and Ossie Solem. "I guess Dutch Reagan (who broadcast the Iowa games in those days) had as much to do with my father making All-America as anybody," Bill says leaving through a 1930s program.

"Everybody always talked about me filling my father's shoes in football, that's why I stayed away from the game. I played in high school, but went to Weber, then a JC, on a basketball scholarship. We finished second at Hutchinson, Kan., in 1959-60 and I made second team all-tournament. I guess you'd call me a Paul Silas type rebound man, but I wasn't good enough to make the team at Arizona State. They had a great club in those days, the best I think until this year's team."

BILL'S DEGREE is in advertising with minors in mass communication, PE and English.

But that's the past and the big moment in Bill's life is now. He likes the idea and challenge of promoting baseball in Midland. "It's one of the few cities in Organized Baseball that draws more fans that it has population"...so put that in your cocked hat George Steinbrenner.

"We've got the bats and balls and we're ready for the season. We may make a few mistakes, but we hope to have a good time at the park by trying a few new things to heighten the enjoyment of the game." See you at Cubs Stadium April 10.

Lee Freshmen win WT Junior Relays

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

Despite high winds, blowing sand and a meet that ran almost two hours longer than expected, the boys version of the Tall City Junior Relays at Memorial Stadium Saturday turned out to be a pretty good day for Midland teams.

Lee Freshman won the ninth grade team title with 111 points behind four-event winner Billy Gibbs while Midland Freshman placed second with 97½ points. San Angelo Glenn was a distant third with 65½.

In the eighth grade division, Goddard rolled to an easy team victory with 135 points while its nearest competitor was Odessa Nimitz with 79.

San Jacinto was the seventh grade team winner with 101 points while Goddard was second with 86. Midland schools won five of the top six places in the team scoring.

But this was really a day for Gibbs to cherish. The freshman won the long jump (19-7½), the 100 meters (11.27), the 200 (24.41) and anchored the sprint relay team to victory for a 35-point performance. No other athlete came close to matching that total. In fact, Lee did not produce another winner on the day.

Midland Freshman won two events with Jesse Diaz in the 1200 meters and Cano in the shot put. Glenn's Mike Fanning was a two-event winner with the high jump and 65 meter hurdles and Odessa Bonham's Chuck Dawson won both the 400 and 600 meter events.

Goddard was paced by two-event winner Filel Ramon, who won both the 600 and 1200 meter races with a 1:36.05 and a 3:43.57. Ted Ray of Goddard also won the 65 meter hurdles. Alamo's Walter Jones equaled Ramon's effort by winning the long jump with a 19-11½ and the 100 meters with an 11.81. Joe Taylor of Alamo also won the shot put.

San Jacinto won the seventh grade crown without the help of any multiple event winners; but they had plenty of depth as five individuals won firsts. William Hernandez won the pole vault, Ali Supini took the high jump, Stacey Smith won the 65 meter hurdles and William Hernandez won the pole vault. SJ's Jake Madrid won the 300 meters, but also placed in three other events for a 26-point showing for himself.

Johnny Taylor of Alamo won the shot put in the seventh grade to keep up with older brother Joe in the eighth grade, and Goddard's Jason Fuller took the 600 meter title.

Odessa Blackshear's Randy Jackson was the only two-event winner in the seventh grade with victories in the 100 and 200 meters.

Times were not of much importance since high winds hindered the running of the meet, but all running times were records since this is the first year for the meet to be run in meters.

The meet also produced its share of controversy as three events were run again after various problems.

Cougs, Eagles triumph in District 5-5A games

Abilene Cooper took over sole possession of first place by beating Odessa High, 6-2, in Odessa Saturday to survive as District 5-5A's only unbeaten team at 2-0 going into Tuesday's game at Abilene against Midland Lee.

Abilene High scored five runs in the first and added four more in the second enroute to a 10-6 victory over Odessa Permian in Abilene Saturday. Boths clubs now stand 1-1 in loop play. Overall Permian is 4-8 while the Eagles are 3-5.

Home runs by John Arnold, Lanny Dycus and Cole Erwin pace the Cougars' attack.

Permian scored in the top of the first after Rusty Inzer stroked a single and came around to score on a wild pitch.

The Eagles quickly struck back, pushing five runs across to take a 5-1 lead.

Mojo bounced back in the top of the second to tie the game at 5-5. Richard Hanfield's bases loaded double was the big blow for the Panthers.

Chap Center or Garden, it's all the same to WTC

It was only a year ago that Nolan Richardson's Western Texas College basketball magicians were wowing 'em in Chaparral Center and a year later, disguised as Tulsa University, they were wowing 'em in Madison Square Garden on the way to a National Invitational Tournament title.

Nothing this big has happened in T-town since Henry Frnka's salad days as football coach back in the late 1930s and 1940s when the Golden Hurricane was sweeping down the plain and had a awful appetite for sugar and oranges in bowls on New Year's Day.

This was the most successful basketball season ever for Tulsa, even before the NIT championship. The Hurricane finished 26-7, a record unsurpassed in Tulsa annals.

In just one short year, Richardson has won a city. He has radio-talk and TV shows of his own and when it comes to basketball, folks in Tulsa ask, "Oral Who?"

STOPPING OFF to see an early round NIT game at Tulsa while on the way to Hutchinson, Kan., for the national junior college tournament, Midland College Athletic Director Delnor Poss described the hold Nolan, only five years away from coaching El Paso Burges, had on the town.

"A half hour before the game, the team comes out and warms up. There's some polite clapping, but no one really pays much attention," Poss relates. "Then, 15 minutes before game time, Nolan makes his entrance...and it is an entrance, complete with fanfare. The place comes to life and the bedlam begins. During the game, every time Nolan comes off the bench, the crowd is with him."

TULSA'S SUCCESS served to emphasize the kind of team Richardson had at WTC last year in a way that even a 37-0 record and National Junior College championship couldn't.

This was a team that handed Midland College four of its six defeats a year ago. But watching the Hurricane on TV the other night, it seemed, in the second half, that they had lost their intensity and for a while, it looked like it might take the ball game along with it.

This wasn't the run-run-run, steal-steal-steal, score-score club we were accustomed to seeing last year, the one that came at an opponent in waves.

Nolan made substitutions like a hockey coach, and as a new group went in, he implored, "Just give me two good minutes," implying that then relief would be on the way.

A YEAR ago during the regionals at the Chap Center, the Westerners set such a furious pace that an official whistled a time out during the heat of a game. Both sides looked perplexed and as the official approached the scoring table, both coaches accosted him, demanding, "Who called time out?"

The official, wiping his brow, and said, "I did. It's a TV timeout. I need one."

Wednesday, this was a Tulsa team that was standing around, resting and spectating, something last year's WTC didn't do.

In fact, if the Hurricane had played like it did at the Garden the other night, MC would have wound up making the waves at Hutchinson last year.

Rogers' 68 good for Heritage lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bill Rogers, his skinny frame rocking and swaying in gusty, swirling winds, fought his way to a 3-under-par 68 and took a commanding, three-shot lead Saturday in the $300,000 Sea Pines-Heritage Classic.

Rogers, acknowledged by his peers as a highly-accomplished player but the winner of only one PGA Tour title, put together a 54-hole total of 208, five strokes below par on the difficult, windswept, 6,650-yard of one-time swampland jutting into Calibogue Sound.

"It's my favorite golf course, the best golf course we play all year," Rogers said. "Shooting 68 on a golf course like Harbour Town anytime is a thrill. When you do it in wind and cold like this it just makes you that much more proud."

It was enough to bring him from five shots off the pace into a solid lead over Hale Irwin, who was very weary from his battles with the wind.

Irwin, twice a U.S. Open champion and a two-time former winner of this title that grows in prestige on an annual basis, once bogeyed four holes in a row on the way to a 73 and a 211 total.

He was tied for second with Gil Morgan, who had a 72, and former U.S. Open champ Jerry Pate, who shot 74.

Bradley takes 4-stroke edge

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Steady Pat Bradley, in search of her first Ladies Professional Golf Association victory this year, fired a 3-under-par 68 Saturday to take a 4-shot lead after three rounds of the $175,000 Women's Kemper Open.

Bradley, the fourth-leading money-winner among the women pros in 1981 despite the fact that she has yet to win, had a 54-hole total of 214, 1-over-par on the 6,134-yard par 71 Mesa Verde Country Club course entering Sunday's final round of the 72-hole event.

Bradley led after her first-round 71 Thursday and was tied with JoAnne Carner and Martha Hansen after Friday's second round. Birdies on the third and fourth holes put her ahead to stay Saturday.

Spinks flattens Johnson in four

It was Johnson's fight until Spinks unloaded at 1:22 of the fourth, knocking Johnson flat on his back and sending his corner into hysterics over the defeat.

Spinks, 23, stretched his undefeated streak to 17 with 13 knockouts and reinforced his claim for a shot at World Boxing Council champion Matthew Saad Muhammad.

LSU blitzed by Indiana

began the second half with it run, it took the fight out of his Tigers.

"Our spirits fell. We got down on ourselves," Brown said.

Knight said that the Hoosiers' 87-72 victory over Alabama-Birmingham in the Midwest Regionals had been the best preparation possible for Saturday's contest.

"LSU and Alabama-Birmingham have the same type of personnel, although not quite on the same level, and they play much like LSU," Knight said.

KNIGHT said another key to the victory was Indiana's rebounding in the second half.

Outrebounded 24-18 in the first 20 minutes, Indiana grabbed 25 rebounds to 17 for LSU after the intermission to hold an overall edge on the 43-41 edge on the boards.

"We played out of anxiety instead of poise in the first half," Knight said.

Indiana, winner of the 1976 NCAA title, will meet the victor of the Virginia-North Carolina semifinal, which was played later Saturday. The final and consolation games will be played Monday night.

Turner had only seven points in the first half on 3-for-8 shooting, but when he found the range it seemed to spark the other Hoosiers. In a 4:39 stretch that started with 13:40 to play, Indiana outscored LSU 12-2, taking a 52-34 lead with 9:01 remaining. Kitchell, Randy Wittman and Turner each had four points in that span, and they had broken free from their first-half shooting slump.

THE HOOSIERS stretched the lead to as many as 21 points, 62-41, on a pair of foul shots by Isiah Thomas with 1:57 left.

Thomas, Indiana's All-American guard, sat out practically the entire second half after picking up his fourth personal foul with 16:33 to play. Jim Thomas, unrelated, came off the bench for Knight and filled in with the success that is the trademark of Indiana's bench. Though scoring only two points, he rebounded, he made two significant steals and he hounded LSU guard Ethan Martin in the manner that only Isiah Thomas should have been able to do.

Knight used exclusively his man-to-man defense, the defense that has brought him so much success in his 10 years at Indiana, and it gave him his second shot at an NCAA title.

In addition to his scoring, Turner held LSU's Durand Macklin to four points, none in the second half.

Isiah Thomas scored 14 points for Indiana, and Kitchell added 10. Howard Carter led LSU with 10, and Leonard Mitchell, a freshman forward, had nine.

Weaver's protest continues

Earl manages team from stands

By The Associated Press
Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver is continuing his spring training cold war with umpires.

In protest over the continued refusal of one specific umpiring crew to give him lineup cards for exhibition games, Weaver changed into civilian clothes Saturday and directed his team from the stands as the Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays 10-1.

The incident was the latest in Weaver's feud with American League umpires Joe Brinkman, Rich Garcia and Mark Johnson. Saturday, Dan Morrison replaced Johnson.

The feud started March 19 in a game against Kansas City at Fort Meyers, Fla., when Weaver pulled the Orioles off the field when he did not get the lineup changes from the umpires. AL president Lee MacPhail suspended Weaver for three games, but in the first game he was back, last Thursday, Weaver was ejected by the same crew.

Prior to Saturday's game, Weaver met with the umpires and asked if he would get the lineup card.

"We're not going to give him the lineup card," said Brinkman after the game. "Not now, not ever. After that he just got huffy and left."

Weaver defended his actions over the lineup cards.

"I need a lineup card and the changes," he said. "In these games there are certain young players who are getting tryouts and I'd like to chart how my pitchers perform against them."

The Orioles were led in Saturday's game at Dunedin, Fla., by a two-run double by Al Bumbry in the fourth inning and a three-run double by Lenn Sakata in the seventh inning.

In other action, Rufino Linares drove in five runs with a homer and a double to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 13-7 victory over the Texas Rangers. Third baseman Joel Youngblood's second error of the game and seventh of the spring allowed the St. Louis Cardinals' split-squad to score an unearned run in the 11th inning for a 6-5 victory over the New York Mets' split squad.

Chili Davis drove in four runs with a pair of homers and Larry Herndon hit a three-run homer to lead the San Francisco Giants to an 11-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Cesar Cedeño doubled twice and singled to pace a 15-hit Houston Astros attack in a 12-5 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Carlton Fisk, catching his first game for Chicago, homered as the White Sox defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 5-2.

Pinch-hitter Lee May was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth, forcing in the winning run in the Kansas City Royals' 3-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Dwayne Murphy tripled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning, then scored on a suicide-squeeze bunt by Wayne Gross to lead the Oakland A's to a 5-3 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Reid Nichols drove in Chico Walker from third with an eighth-inning grounder to give the Boston Red Sox a 5-4 triumph over the Minnesota Twins. Gary Carter belted a two-run home run in the fifth inning and rookie Tim Wallach hit a solo shot in the eighth, powering the Montreal Expos to a 5-1 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Brian Downing and Butch Hobson combined for five hits and nine runs batted in to lead the California Angels to a 13-12 over the San Diego Padres.

Tom Verzyer's two-run single in the seventh inning broke an 8-8 tie and the Cleveland Indians went on to defeat the error-prone Seattle Mariners 13-8. Tom Herr had a triple and single and drove in a pair of runs as the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the Detroit Tigers 7-1.

Meanwhile, the Chicago White Sox sent Ken Kravec to the Chicago Cubs for Dennis Lamp in a swap of left-handed pitchers. In another trade, the New York Mets acquired pitcher Scott Dye from the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for infielder Sergio Ferrer and outfielder Dave Howard.

Bowden pin winner

MIAMI (AP) — Bo Bowden surprised four more-experienced bowlers, including top-seeded Marshall Holman 226-206, to win the $130,000 True Value Open Saturday for his first career victory on the Professional Bowlers Association tour.

Tar Heels beat Cavaliers

"I'd like to see an Atlantic Coast Conference team win this thing," Holland said. "This was a good matchup for a while, but they just overwhelmed us."

"We threw everything but the kitchen sink at them, trying to stop Wood," Holland said. "But nothing worked."

The Tar Heels took command in the second half with an 11-point spurt.

Wood capped that run with nine straight points, giving North Carolina a 48-37 lead with 9:52 to play. Wood scored the next four points for North Carolina, and with the help of freshman center Sam Perkins, closed out Virginia's biggest offensive weapon, 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson.

Perkins, 6-9 but whose reach spans 82 inches, outrebounded Sampson 8-6. Each had 11 points.

The first half ended in a 27-27 tie, and when Jeff Lamp took home a driving layup and Sampson hit one of two free throws for a 30-27 lead 1:17 into the second half, it looked like Virginia was off and running.

James Worthy and Black each had 10 points, and reserve Matt Doherty scored eight for the Tar Heels. Lamp and Raker topped the Cavaliers with 13 points apiece, and Jones had 10.

The victory gave Smith his third chance at a NCAA title. He reached the final game twice before, losing in 1968 to UCLA and in 1977 to Marquette. He has taken the Tar Heels to the Final Four six times without earning the ultimate victory, although he has more NCAA tournament victories than any other coach, 27.

Virginia, meanwhile, was making only its second appearance in the NCAA tournament. In 1976, the Cavaliers lost their first game, to De Paul 69-60.

The victory also avenged two regular-season losses to Virginia. Each time, North Carolina had led by large margins in the second half, only to lose.

Armstrong strikes again

ABILENE — Lance Armstrong, Midland Lee, won his second straight high school tennis tournament as he defeated Alan Smith of Abilene High School, 6-7, 6-1, 6-3, Saturday to capture the title in the "A" Boys division in the Abilene High Invitational Tennis Tournament. Armstrong advanced to the finals with a 6-7, 6-1, 6-1 win over Guy Coughran of Abilene Cooper.

Midland High's Richie Houdeck was defeated in the semifinals by Smith, 6-3, 6-4.

Longhorns capture first NCAA swimming crown

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Longhorns capped off their first NCAA Swimming and Diving championship Saturday night with a stirring victory in the last event of the three-day freestyle, thanks to Scott Spann's strong anchor, which just held off Auburn's Ambrose (Rowdy) Gaines. It was the only first place of the night for the Longhorns, who became the first Southwest Conference school in NCAA history to capture a national swimming title. Texas nipped Auburn with a time of 2:54.84 to 2:54.87 in the climactic event of the 58th NCAA championships. Texas finished with 259 points to 189 for UCLA. Florida was third with 180 points. Southern Methodist was fourth with 161 and Auburn was fifth at 146. Southern Methodist sophomore Steve Lundquist and Gaines each set American records Saturday night along with Florida's Craig Beardsley. There were 10 American records established during the championships in the ultra-fast Texas Swimming Center. Lundquist, who won the 100-yard breaststroke Friday night in American record time, whipped UCLA's William Barrett in the 200-yard breaststroke. Barrett had established a new American record 1:57.78 in the preliminaries. However, Lundquist exploded to the lead in the finals and won in 1:55.01 while Barrett was second in 1:56.06. Gaines, who won the 200-yard freestyle Friday night, shattered the American record in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 42.38. He owned the old record of 43.08. Beardsley lowered his American record of 1:44.26 in the 200-yard butterfly to 1:44.15 in his specialty. Texas coach Eddie Reese was voted the coach of the year by his fellow mentors at the end of the meet, which featured a pro-Texas crowd of 25,000 jammed into the swimming center the final night. In other events Saturday night, Indiana's Robert Bollinger won the three-meter diving, Rafael Escalera of UCLA established a new NCAA standard in the 1,650-yard freestyle with a time of 14:53.90, and Stanford's Wade Flemons won the 200-yard backstroke in 1:46.30. Lundquist said, "It was the race of my life and I'm glad I won. The rivalry between myself and Bill is just like two friends battling it out in the water. Last year he was 'better and this year I was.'"

Lee cindermen capture 5 firsts

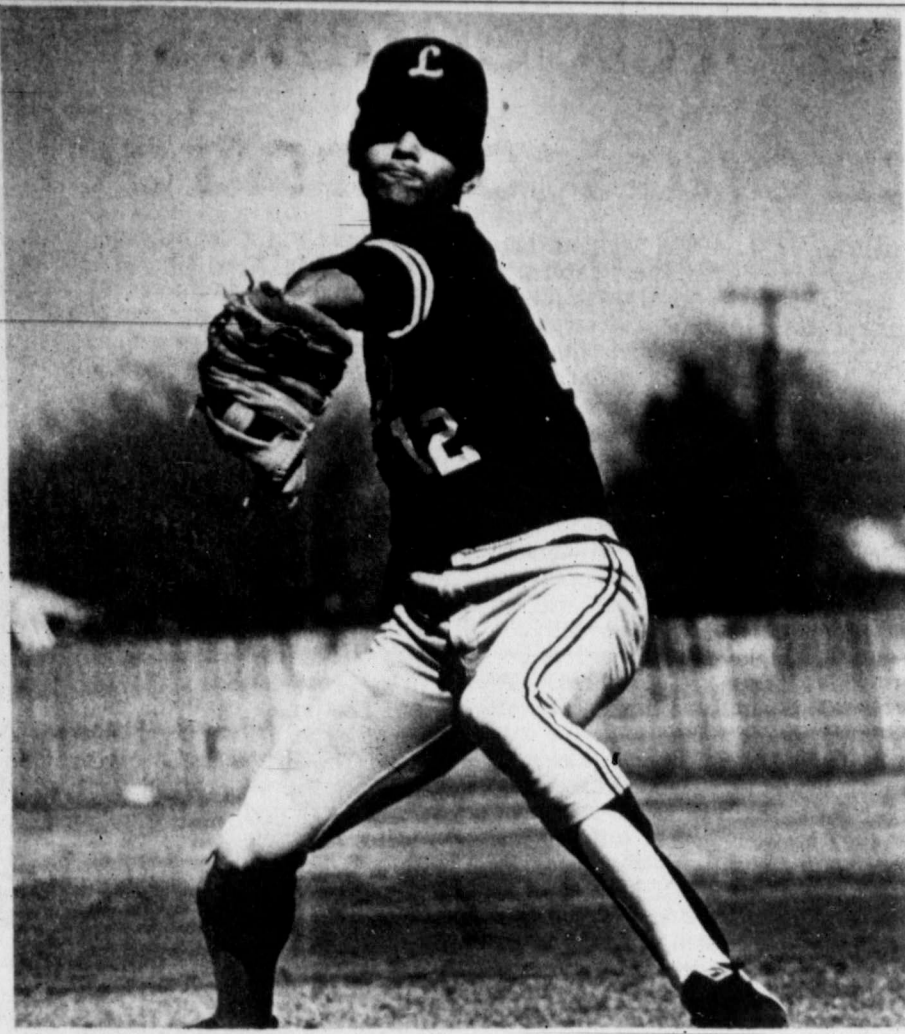

HOBBS, N.M. — The Midland Lee Rebels won five events here Saturday in the Hobbs Invitational track meet, but that was their lowest victory output this year as the Rebels finished third behind Lubbock Coronado and Hobbs in the team battle. Coronado won the meet with 80 points while host Hobbs was a near miss with 72. Lee had 57 points, five better than El Paso Andrews. Robert Schooler was a two-event winner for the fourth time this year as he won the 1500 meter run with a 4:07.9 and the 3000 meters with an 8:48.8. Schooler is used to running 1600 and 3200 races, but the fact is that he remains unbeaten this season at those distances. Arthur Williams turned in a career best of 21.2 in the 200 meters to remain unbeaten in that event this year, but younger brother Darrin suffered his first 100 meter setback with a fourth place 11.0. Coronado's Percy Hines won the event with a 10.8. David Piccolo failed to win an event for the first time this year after a second in the 120 highs with a 14.4, his career best. Piccolo also was fourth in the 165 low hurdles with a 21.3, but his favorite event, the 300 intermediates, is not run in New Mexico, so he remains unbeaten in that event. Keith Brown won the shot put for the second week in a row with a 55-7/8, but did not place in the discus after a 177-0 last week in Andrews. Lee also won the 1600 relay with a 3:22.1 with Troy Barber, Mike Goodley and the Williams brothers. That was one of their best times this year. Clyde Smith got a third in the discus with a 149-10, not his best, and Goodley pulled off a surprise third in the 800 meters with a 2:03.7, his best. Lee was also third in the 800 relay with a 1:33.2, another event not run by the UIL in Texas. The Lee junior varsity won the JV division by an 87-55 margin over host Hobbs. The Brig-wid won six events with Carl Piccolo winning both the 3000 (9:51.6) and the 1500 (4:27.5). Carleton Johnson captured the 200 with a 22.7 and Richard Barton won the high jump with a 5-10. Smith won the 100 with an 11.3. Lee also won the 800 relay, but was the only JV entry. Lee will be back in action Friday at Memorial Stadium for the Tall City Relays, an afternoon and night meet.

Fiesta Bowl slated for Jan. 1

TEMP. ARIZ. (AP) — The Fiesta Bowl will be played on New Year's Day next year, subject to certification by the National Collegiate Athletic Association's extra events committee, bowl officials said Saturday. The annual postseason college football game, entering its 11th year, is also close to a television contract with NBC and is expected to have a payoff in excess of $600,000 to each competing team in 1982, officials added.

and Henry Klapek, the inning's second batter, hit into a force at short and was out trying to take second on the overthrow to first in an attempt to get the double play. Lee trotted off the field and San Angelo took the field before it was discovered only two batters were out.

VELARDE walked six on his way to his third victory and only one batter, Robert Bolin in the second, got as far as third. Bolin singled, took second on an error and moved to third on Morry Hartgraves' line single to left. But Dern tagged out Bolin on an attempted steal of home.

In the seventh, Velarde's shutout was threatened when Hartgraves led off with a walk and pinchhitter Paul Timmons singled to center, but Corley cut down the runner trying to go to third on the hit.

Bulldogs outlast Steers

bases and a run scored when Bartley grounded to thirdbut Ontiveros dropped the throw at the plate. Wayne Sims followed with a sacrifice fly and Kyle Ford chased home the last run of the inning with a single to right as the Purple Pack took an 8-6 lead.

Big Spring came right back in the bottom of the inning to take a 9-8 lead. Tom Rodriguez opened with a single, Tom Olague walked, James Walker popped to the catcher before Rusty Hayworth grounded to short. Sims tried to make a play at third, but the ball got away for Bartley loading the bases for Warren. Warren came through with a 2 rbi single to left and after Wrightsil grounded out Ontiveros was intentional walked. MHS's strategy backfired when Castaneda hit Rossen with a pitch to force in the third run of the inning. Marcus Armendariz ended the Steers' threat by popping to third.

THE BATTLING Bulldogs bounced right back for two quick runs in the sixth inning. Feldt led off with a little nubber right in front of the plate an when no one could find the handle he raced to an unprotected second-base. Zachery, who went 3-for-4 with 4 rbi, followed with a single to left that Warren let the ball get by him and it rolled to the fence. By the time Warren had tracked down the ball Zachery had circled the bases for a 10-9 MHS lead.

In the bottom of the sixth, Olague walked, Hayworth was hit by a pitch, Warren walked and Feldt came on to relief Castaneda. Feldt walked Warren and gave up a 2-run single up the middle to Wrightsil as the Steers took the lead 11-10.

That set the stage for Davis's dramatic homer in the seventh and for the Pack's eighth inning fireworks.

Coach Whalen said, "Feldt did an excellent job pitching, and Davis, what a pressure shot he hit. Of course, we had so many different kids come through it was great."

Feldt was the winning pitcher. It was his first high school pitching victory in his career. The loser was Rodriguez, now 1-1. Midland High's next baseball action will come Tuesday at 4 p.m. when the Pack entertains Abilene High at the Memorial Stadium diamond.

AIWA finals set today

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The Lady Volunteers of Tennessee will try to emulate NCAA men's basketball finalist North Carolina when they meet undefeated Louisiana Tech in the women's college basketball championship game Sunday. Louisiana Tech, 33-0, beat Tennessee 77-53 early in the season. In men's basketball, North Carolina, a two-time loser to Virginia in the regular season, beat Virginia Saturday in the NCAA semifinals. Tennessee knocked off two-time defending champion Old Dominion 68-65 Friday night as Cindy Noble made a short baseline jumper with 10 seconds left.

Mary Ostrowski of Tennessee made two free throws with 3 seconds left to ensure the victory and send the Volunteers, 25-5, into the title game against the Techsters. The top-ranked Techsters defeated Southern California 66-50 in the other semifinal game of the 10th annual tournament of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

Old Dominion and Southern California, 26-7, will play Sunday for third place.

Old Dominion, 27-7, led 65-64 with 27 seconds left when the Vols worked the ball to Noble. The Monarchs turned the ball over after the score and were forced to foul Ostrowski.

Tennessee Coach Pat Head Summit said, "It is a great accomplishment for the team ... I'm very proud of us. Louisiana Tech has a great team. We'll have to play better than we did tonight to beat them."

Bird Stamp bill arouses sportsmen

Midland's J.C. Henderson and a lot of outdoorsmen are up in arms, pardon the phrase, over Senate Bill 709, which like Bruce Sutter's split-finger fast ball, almost slipped through the Texas legislature unnoticed.

Introduced by Sen. John Wilson of LaGrange, SB 709, or SOB 709 to those alarmed by its possibilities, calls for the establishment of a Texas Migratory Bird Stamp, an additional tax on all waterfowl hunters in addition to the Federal Migratory Bird Stamp, which they already are required to purchase.

THE BILL creating a $5 stamp for persons hunting ducks, geese, sandhill cranes, rails, snipe, Gallinules and woodcock, slipped through the senate 27-1 before many of those now opposed to some of its implications even knew it existed.

"It's not so much the bill, but where the money will go that has people upset," says Henderson, embarking on his modern day Paul Revere gallop.

Bill provisions would send 45 percent of the stamp's revenue to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. Another 10 would go for administration (that much?) and the rest would be sent to "an appropriate international nonprofit organization for the purpose of acquiring, developing and maintaining waterfowl propagation areas within the Dominion of Canada that provide the waterfowl for the Central Flyway." And, therein, that last stipulation, lies the rub.

DESPIITE The cloaked phrasing, the international organization is Ducks Unlimited. And Henderson, like others opposing the bill in its present form, is a member and supporter of DU. But Henderson doesn't think it's right for Texas tax money to be sent to Canada.

Dallas' Bubba Wood, another DU member opposed to the bill, says, "The problem is the singleness of purpose of the bill. Duck's Unlimited's single purpose is to purchase and manage wetlands in Canada so ducks and geese will have a place to breed. But I think there is a second factor that is equally important, and that is the wintering grounds of those same ducks and geese. Sixty per cent of the ducks and geese in the Central Flyway winter in Texas."

SOME 21 other states already have their own duck stamps and most keep the money and use it within their boundaries. Texans feel that $1.7 million raised by their dinners and donations for DU last year is reasonable support for the program.

Estimates are that DU and the TPWD both would receive some $315,000, the latter for preservation of habitat for migratory waterfowl. The TPWD would receive $630,000 if all the money remained in Texas.

If you are alarmed by the bill, a tentative hearing has been set for Monday in the House Environmental Affairs subcommittee on Local Game Laws, and now is the time to make your voice heard.

COLLEGE STATION — Winner of the 1981 Texas Outdoor Writers' Association Scholarship is Texas A&M University journalism major Todd Woodard, 21, of Crane a Texas A&M junior assistant managing editor for the university newspaper, The Battalion.

He says he is an avid sportsman, deer hunting being his most enjoyable outdoor activity. He likes fishing in small doses, and those doses usually come in the winter.

"MY DAD, John, always liked to get his rubber pants on, put on these funny looking fins and sit in an intertube for hours jigging for bass," Woodard said. "He would tell us about bass charging him, going between his legs, tearing holes in his pants in sub-freezing weather."

"I gave innertubing a chance and like it. Very private. Very cold. Makes the bed nice at night. One thing I don't like about fishing, I have eaten so many vienna sausages and beans because the fish don't give up the ship, I don't like to talk about it."

HIS MAJOR emphasis is on shooting and shooting related sports. When school permits, he travels home, and gives dove or quail a try. In the winter months during Christmas break, ducks on the Pecos River offer good hunting. "Mom (Zelda Woodard) can cook fried dove and gravy like a demon. It's great. Eating is as fun as hunting."

Woodard said, "I was disappointed a couple of years ago when the Texas Parks and Wildlife people ruled that hunting out of non-anchored boats would be no longer legal. Trying to travel along the banks of the Pecos is a hardship, and the number of lost birds at the water's edge increased with the kayak. It's just not as much fun."

WOOD IS a two-year letterman for the Texas A&M rifle team. He got most of his training in a 4-H program in Crane. Shooting since age 9, he won the state 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M when he was 14, shooting 291 of 300. His teammates shot well also, and they took first place. Both Woodard and the team set records.

The early exposure to Texas A&M led him to choose the university for study and electrical engineering.

"I knew all the time that engineering wasn't for me," he said. "But I got caught up in the salary numbers that counselors laid on me. I decided that money wasn't happiness, so I chose journalism, something I enjoyed."

His enjoyment has turned to success. Besides editing the Battalion, he has begun free lancing for magazines, selling a shooting profile to Texas Sports and two articles on mental management to the American Rifleman.

HE WAS recently selected as an intern for the American Society of Magazine Editors program in 1981, one of 60 students selected from schools nationwide that will get 10 weeks of magazine editing in New York.

"I directly credit the profs in the A&M communications department for the success I've had," he said. "They have been motivating and caring. I couldn't ask for more."

Outside school, Woodard splits his time between shooting, reading and building his business, TZ Associates.

He plans to go into magazine writing after finishing school, and the outdoor writing route looks good.

As president of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association this year, I felt we selected the best candidate in Texas for the award. Members of TOWA and this columnist salute you, Todd Woodard of Crane.

Deer harvest in Texas slips to nine-year low

In case you didn't know it before, it was a poor season for deer hunting. The white-tailed deer harvest slipped to a nine-year low, says the Texas Wildlife Department. The estimated harvest of 160,400 was 20 per cent below 1979-80 and was in line with a downward trend that began in 1972-73. 1979-80 was the lone exception, a year in which 326,000 deer were taken.

Glenn Boydston, technical program coordinator, said, "Highly favorable weather conditions caused the unusually good year in 1979-80."

More bad news for hunters was the decline in the wild turkey harvest, 26,900 gobblers taken, down from 38,400 the year before.

The TPWD acquired a 5,498-acre in the Franklin Mountains north of El Paso for use as a state wilderness park, marking the culmination of years of efforts to preserve portions of the rugged mountain.

Trying to top that 70-pound blue cat caught on a trotline at Marsh Lake back in 1965? Well, forget it. The new record is 78 pounds, at Lake Livingston Jan. 14 by Doyle Chaney and G.C. Dunsay, both of Livingston. With a girth of 36 inches and 54 inches in length, the blue cat was certified as a state record by the TPWD.

High winds kept most fishermen off Lake Spence and Lake Thomas last weekend and during the week as well. However, black bass fishing remained good at Thomas and channel and blue cat fishing was steady at Spence. Bass were taking artificial lure in three to five feet at Thomas and whites were biting along the dam, either trolling or casting. Catfish were cottoning to trotlines in deep water.

At Thomas, Herb Gardner, Slaton, took 14 yellow catfish on trotline while Pee Wee Newman, Snyder, had six white bass to 3 1/2 on artificial bait. Snyder's Bill Berry, hooked a 4 3/4 pound black bass.

At Spence, Doug Taylor, Odessa, used a minnow for a three pound black and J. Hubbard, Robert Lee, landed six blue cats to four pounds and Mark Williamson, Odessa, reported four blues to four on a trotline. Mrs. Shirley Bohannon, Robert Lee, reported 100 channel cats to two pounds on trotline and 20 crappie from 1 1/2 to two pounds. —TED BATTLES.

'Coal war' centers on taxation rights

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bitter battle is being fought over the right of resource-rich states in the West to tax their vast coal and mineral deposits even though that tax is ultimately paid by consumers in the East. The regional conflict comes to a head in the Supreme Court on Monday when the justices hear arguments on whether Montana has the right to impose a 30 percent tax on coal mined in that state. The tax is the nation's highest.

Most of the coal comes from federally owned land, and 90 percent of the coal goes to other states to be burned. The cost is passed on to consumers in those states in their electric bills.

THE ISSUE before the court: Do the energy-rich states, with the vast deposits that are America's hope for energy independence, have an unlimited right to tax their resources when the tax ultimately is paid by residents of other states?

If so, argue the 15 electric utilities and coal companies challenging the tax, then the "blue-eyed Arabs" of Montana and other states can shift virtually their entire state tax burdens onto consuming states in a domestic version of the Arab oil cartel.

The money involved is enormous. Montana collected $94.6 million last year. The state of Michigan, which filed a brief in the case against Montana, has estimated that its citizens alone will pay $1.5 billion into the Montana state treasury over the next 20 years if the tax is allowed to stand.

And just as important are other resources — oil, natural gas, oil shale, strategic minerals, even timber — that are subject to similar taxes.

Those opposing Montana warn that a decision upholding the tax could spur a new round of tax increases by resource-rich states seeking to pass their financial burden onto the citizens of consuming states. For most practical purposes, that translates into western taxes being paid by easterners.

MONTANA, BACKED BY the western states and the United States itself, argues that a decision striking down its tax would be an unwarranted federal intrusion into state affairs.

If Montana's tax is struck down, the state's backers warn, "all forms of state taxation will be in jeopardy of the same attack urged by the energy companies and utilities in this case."

And the United States, in a brief filed on Montana's behalf, says a Supreme Court effort to judge the "reasonableness" of state taxes would be a direct assault on federalism and result in chaos.

The Montana dispute has its roots in the 1973 Arab oil embargo, which forced the nation to look for alternatives to imported petroleum.

NATIONAL ENERGY POLICY focused on coal, and the vast, thick coal seams of eastern Montana and Wyoming offered bountiful supplies of easily mined, low-sulfur coal. The two states have 40 percent of all U.S. coal deposits, and 68 percent of all the low-sulfur coal.

Montana was not completely pleased with the impending bonanza, however. The state has gone through a series of boom-and-bust experiences with mining companies before — for gold, silver and copper — and many in the state are embittered.

A state legislative panel was given the task of coming up with a plan to prevent the state from being exploited for its coal — and then abandoned again.

The panel came up with the 30 percent severance tax, enacted by the legislature in 1975. Half the money was earmarked for regions affected by the massive coal development and was to be used for purposes such as schools, roads and sewer systems. The other half goes into a trust fund, to be used for economic development after the coal runs out.

"We've been exploited by the fur trappers," Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said during congressional hearings last year. "We've been exploited by the gold miners. We've been exploited by the copper miners. You name it."

"Now, for the first time, we're taking care of ourselves."

BUT WHILE MONTANA sees its tax as a way of carefully shepherding a valuable resource, those from the East and Midwest say the state is deviously forcing citizens of other states to pay for Montana's government costs.

"I think there are words that describe what Montana has done," said Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, "and I think those words are rape and exploitation."

"The (state) Legislature saw and seized an opportunity to enrich Montana's treasury without any burden to the state, without any effect on the state's residents, without any pain to the state's own taxpayers," said a brief filed by the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition.

"The effect of Montana's unlimited taxing power over the severance of coal...will be to transfer billions of dollars annually from consuming states in the nation to these few energy-rich states."

And the coal companies argue that other states following Montana's lead "can only lead to the Balkanization of this nation in the same way that OPEC's efforts have fragmented the world economy."

THE COAL COMPANIES and those supporting them do not contest Montana's right to impose some tax on coal. Indeed, one of those challenging the tax is the state of Texas, which took in $15.5 billion in mineral taxes last year and defends "appropriate" taxes on resources.

Strikers 'strike a match' to proposed contract

Church defends proposed contract

By The Associated Press

Striking coal miners gathered union halls Saturday to discuss a proposed contract, but at one meeting 200 miners walked out in disgust. United Mine Workers President Sam Church, meanwhile, denied charges that he had "sold out" or avoided facing dissident members.

Church, looking tired, said in Evansville, Ind., that, "I worked very hard. I was dedicated to getting a contract without a strike."

The union president, who has been touring Eastern coal states since Thursday to rally support for a new contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, has been heckled and jeered by miners on many of his stops — and criticized by others for avoiding some locals.

The coalfields were reported quiet as many of the union's 160,000 members, who struck Friday when their old contract expired, attended meetings to discuss the contract.

At a cinder block union hall at Monongah, W. Va., some 400 District 31 miners gathered to have the 44-page contract explained article for article. About half walked out after union leaders explained provisions dropping royalty payments paid to the UMW by Bituminous Coal Operators Association coal companies on purchases of non-union coal. Church has said the royalty was exchanged for a $100-a-month pension for some miners' widows.

Gary Fleming, one of the miners at the meeting, said "It's going to be like this everywhere else — they're just going to be walking out of the meeting."

Many of those who spoke at the meeting said they feared the contract would allow more use of non-union coal and that UMW miners would be gradually phased back to two- and three-day work weeks.

The miners will vote on the proposal Tuesday and UMW officials expect the results to be announced late Tuesday.

"I'm surprised and I'm disappointed. Something's very wrong that he's (Church) not coming to talk to us," said Bob Young, a UMW official in Kentucky. "The miners are angry. They all respected Sam Church but they don't understand why he got that contract."

As of Saturday, Church had not announced plans to meet with miners in Districts 17 and 29 in West Virginia, the union's largest. District 17 officials burned copies of the contract after a meeting on Friday, and similar bonfires were set in four other states.

Dennis Saunders, president of District 29, said, "I would expect him to come, but no one's contacted me."

Church attributed the attacks to internal politics and upcoming UMW elections. "I've been hoping politics wouldn't get into it. But it's causing us a lot of problems. That's what I caught in Ohio, western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia."

"If people would just get up and explain this thing truthfully, that's all I want," Church said. "Then, if the miners don't want it, I'll take it back."

In McClure, Va., local 2166 members said they didn't like the elimination of the royalty. The same sentiments prevailed at the Local 8939 meeting in Clintwood.

2,000 attend funeral of slain man

His death stoked fires of racial distrust in Mobile

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A quiet young black man found hanging from a tree went to his grave Saturday, the victim of a slaying that stoked the fires of racial distrust in this old Confederate port on the Gulf of Mexico.

In jail; unable to post bonds of $250,000 each, were three young white men, known to police as troublemakers and drug-users. They face arraignment Tuesday on charges of murdering Michael A. Donald, 19, a part-time newspaper mailroom employee who was studying to be a brick mason.

Over 2,000 mourners, including a few civil rights leaders from other cities, overflowed the Revelation Missionary Baptist Church for the funeral on a bright Saturday afternoon. Several police cars were parked outside the church.

In his eulogy over the silver casket, the Dr. Lon Taylor, church pastor, said, "Yes we are hurt ... but we will do no wrong."

"One wrong has already been done," Taylor said later. "And another wrong will not make a right."

While investigators insist they have no evidence the slaying was racially inspired, neither have they offered another theory about the motive.

At dawn a week ago, a man fetching his morning newspaper spotted the shape of a human body strung up in a three-pronged camphor tree almost at curbside of a quiet street in a racially mixed area of brightly painted frame houses.

Pathologists determined the victim had been beaten, cut and choked to death, already stiff before he was hoisted into the tree limbs with a length of plastic rope, his feet dangling to the ground. The mark of a shoe heel on the young man's face indicated how the noose was tightened.

Outrage and rumor swept the black community. But Wednesday, the three men, including two ex-convicts, were charged with the crime, possibly averting violence.

Police reported no incidents Friday night as hundreds of blacks attended Donald's wake.

Dr. Robert W. Gilliard, director of the Mobile chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who maintains the slaying was "a lynching," said Friday blacks were watching the case with "cautious optimism" now that suspects are in jail.

Donald, one of seven children, lived in a housing project, a sprawling complex of single-story red brick dwellings about two miles from where he was found dead. He had been watching television that Friday night at the nearby apartment of his aunt, as he often did. About 11 p.m. he borrowed a dollar from his aunt and left, saying he was going to buy cigarettes at a service station a few blocks away.

That was the last time he was seen alive. "We think he was just in the wrong place at the wrong time," said Donald's older sister, Cynthia Donald Koger.

Mrs. Koger and other family members firmly denied unsubstantiated reports that Donald may have been killed because he was romantically involved with a white woman or that he was mistaken for another black man with whom he worked.

Those who knew Donald said he was a man who said little and minded his own business. By day he attended Carver State Technical College. At night he worked at the Mobile Press Register. He liked loud music and basketball, playing on a recreation center team.

"He never started anything with nobody," said Thomas Millhouse, 19, who grew up with Donald and worked with him in the mail room. "He always walked away. All he did was go to work, to school and to the recreation center."

The three suspects, all lifelong residents of rural Mobile County, were described by police as "junkie types." They are Ralph Hayes, 23, and brothers Jimmy Edgar, 22, and Johnny Edgar, 26.

Hayes, a pulpwood worker, served time in Alabama's Kilby Prison for burglary and possession of marijuana. Jimmy Edgar, an admitted heroin user, has a prior burglary conviction.

Hayes had been occasionally staying in a one-bedroom apartment across the street from the hanging tree. The apartment was rented by two women who always paid the $200 rent in cash, according to the landlord, who did not want to be identified.

Hayes' mother, Jessie Mae Hayes, said after a bond hearing Friday, "We want the blacks to know we ain't prejudiced."

"Ralph's got a lot of black friends."

Kidnapper slashes tot as police close in on him

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A 3-year-old boy was in guarded condition at a hospital Saturday after a man who kidnapped him from his mother slashed his throat and abdomen as police closed in after a 40-mile chase, authorities said.

The child, Keith Kostelnick, underwent surgery for neck and stomach wounds following the Friday night abduction.

Charles Abraham, 32, of Logansport, was held without bond after being booked for attempted murder, auto theft, driving while intoxicated, resisting arrest and assaulting an officer, according to investigator Robert Davidson of the DeSoto Parish Sheriff's Office.

State Police Sgt. Jamie C. Hanna said the boy's mother, Monica Kostelnick, had left him in her car while she shopped in a store just outside Shreveport. She came out to find a man beside the car looking in, and when he asked her for a ride, she refused and ran back into the store, Hanna said.

"She came back out with some people, but by that time he had gotten inside the car and had the child," he said. The man persuaded Mrs. Kostelnick to give him the keys in exchange for the child, but once he had them he drove off with the boy.

A few minutes later, DeSoto Chief Deputy Billy Lynch said, he saw a car go out of control and flip end-over-end about three-miles south of Stonewall.

"When I got to the car, I heard the baby crying," he said, but when he tried to get closer, the driver grabbed the boy and threatened him with the knife.

"He said, 'Get back or I'll kill him,'" Lynch recounted. "Every time we tried to get close to him, he pushed that knife closer to the young'un."

He said the man tried to take the patrol car but couldn't start it, and drove off in a car belonging to a man who had stopped to help.

That car soon missed a turn and ran into a ditch, Davidson said. When police arrived at the scene, the suspect "comes out with the baby, with his knife to the baby's chest. The chief deputy noticed blood all over the baby at that time," Davidson said.

"They let him get into the police car and Deputy Allen Bounds sneaks to the back of the car while he's getting into it and cuts the back tire," Davidson said.

Davidson said the kidnapper floored the gas pedal when he heard the air seeping out, but ran into a deep ditch. As he tried to back out, police shot out the front tires out and ran to the car.

Living with cancer

By NANCY LORD
Lifestyle Writer

Cancer. The mere mention of the word frightens most people, and brings to mind unpleasant thoughts. It is often thought of in terms of hopelessness.

Many people survive bouts with cancer, however, and go on to live full, productive lives.

One such person is Midlander Patty Hodges.

Patty's cancer problems began about 12 years ago with the removal of one of her breasts due to breast cancer. Seven years later, her other breast had to be removed. Then she had a total hysterectomy. She is now in remission from bone cancer.

Mrs. Hodges is an outgoing, optimistic woman despite her many problems. She spends a great deal of her time helping other cancer patients deal with the disease.

"Because I have gained strength from my religious convictions, I really believe I can help others with this disease," she said.

Mrs. Hodges was one of the persons who initiated the "I Can Cope" program in Midland. The program is designed to help cancer patients and their families deal with the problems they have, both emotionally and physically.

She said that a cancer patient's family and friends play an important role in his or her life. "Families are very, very important," Patty noted.

"I have a real morale booster club in my husband, Bob, our children and our friends," Patty noted.

Mrs. Hodges and her husband moved to Midland nine years ago. They have three married sons — Randy and his wife, Nadine, live in White Oak; Kelly and Brenda are in Kilgore, and Mark and Sharla live in Midland. "My daughters-in-law are as much a part of my family as my sons," she said.

Patty was an outpatient at M.D. Anderson hospital in Houston until last August. While there, she made a decision to take experimental drugs to fight her bone cancer. She thinks this decision saved her life.

She said she had various unpleasant side effects from her chemotherapy and radiation treatments, including the loss of all her hair, eyebrows and eyelashes. She feels that she was lucky, though, in that she did respond to treatment.

"Even the bad days were good days," she remembered. Patty recalled one day in particular when she was sick and in a lot of pain. She was wondering why she had to go through all this suffering and said that she turned to her Bible for answers.

She found her answer and wrote it down — "Pain and discomfort get our minds off the temporary things of this world and force us to think about God. And it proves something to us — it gives us a gauge to measure the depth or shallowness of our commitment to God."

Mrs. Hodges, 49, is a member of Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, where she takes care of the flowers, teaches an adult women's Sunday school class and sings in the church choir.

She also works part time at Mildred's Flower Shop.

Patty thinks that a cancer patient's attitude toward the disease has a lot to do with getting well. She remembered that one of her doctors told her that positive thinking is 85 percent of whether or not a patient survives. He told her that he lost a lot of patients that he shouldn't have because they just gave up.

Mrs. Hodges summed up her philosophy on living with cancer: "You have to have a positive attitude, positive thinking and a whole lot of faith."

Another Midlander who has had cancer and learned to live with it is Marie Dillistone.

Mrs. Dillistone had cancer of the larynx, or voice box. Her larynx was removed in June of 1977.

The larynx lies in the upper front part of the neck, extending from the base of the tongue to the top of the trachea and contains the vocal cords.

When it is removed, the trachea is attached to an opening made in the neck called a stoma. After surgery, the patient no longer breathes through the nose and mouth, but through this opening. Speech, in the normal manner, is also impossible.

However, Mrs. Dillistone said, there are methods for a laryngectomee to communicate.

One such method is through the use of esophageal speech, which involves taking air into the esophagus, or food passage, and forcing it to return. The sound this makes can be used to form speech.

Mrs. Dillistone says she uses esophageal speech in her work in the medical records department at Midland Memorial Hospital. She also talks with an artificial larynx, a device which she places on her neck to help her speak.

Mrs. Dillistone and her husband, Vernon, moved to Midland from Houston six years ago to be near their daughter and her family.

She said she has not changed her way of life since her operation that much. "We do the same things we always did," she said. She noted that the only thing a laryngectomee cannot do is submerge the head and neck in water, therefore preventing her from swimming or participating in other water activities.

Mrs. Dillistone was one of the founders of The Lost Cord club, a national organization for laryngectomees in the Permian Basin. Meetings are held on the last Thursday of each month at the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center in Odessa.

She said the group helps members and their families deal with any problems they might have. She urged laryngectomees in the area to contact her or the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center for more information.

Mrs. Dillistone says it is important for cancer patients to go on with their lives. Like Mrs. Hodges, she believes that a positive attitude is essential.

"Fear is something we all have to live with," she said. "Your attitude and feelings about cancer are the best tools to fight it."

"Time is the most important possession," she continued. "And I believe that the quality of that time is more important than the quantity."

Running

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

There's a hundred and one reasons why people love to run. But, no doubt about it, running has become America's latest pastime. A survey of the streets and sidewalks of Midland at just about any hour proves it.

"Real runners have a tendency to group only with other runners," claims Andra Chamberlin, president of the newly organized Midland Road Runners Club.

"That's why we formed." At the first meeting last July, seven runners attended. Fifty-five members now compose the club.

"Our primary purpose is to promote and encourage running as a means to better health," said Ms. Chamberlin. "We do this through building cardiovascular endurance and as a means to meet and socialize with other runners."

"I am a diabetic and started running for health reasons," says Melinda Cherryhomes. "Some of the members originally started running to lose weight, some to get away from the kids, many because they wanted to get proficient in a sport."

"But I think everyone, if they stick with it, gets addicted. I know I did," she said.

Rick Green, treasurer of the club, has one goal in life. He wants to run a marathon in every state.

"I may be 50 before I do it, but I plan to try," he said. He's well on his way, having run in a few states already.

Ms. Chamberlin stresses that the club is not for competitive runners only. "We feel that we need to meet the needs of both competitive runners and those who jog two to three miles a day or walk as a means to better health," she said.

In order to promote this idea, the club sponsors "Fun and Fitness Runs" which are open to members and non-members every other Saturday. The runs provide a chance to meet with other interested runners other than at meetings, races or on the track.

She said that the fitness runs are informal and non-competitive. "Generally, we stretch, tell tall tales about injuries and awards we've won, and then begin the run," said Ms. Chamberlin.

Following the run, members usually meet for prize drawings and a meal.

"At all of our events, we always start together, but there are always some fast ones who can't hold back and then there are some slow ones like me who can't speed up. So we have all levels running," said Ms. Chamberlin.

Business meetings are held once a month in the Student Center at Midland College. The group meets on the third Tuesday of the month at 7 p.m.

Road Runners Club will sponsor its first big event, the Tall Town 10,000, a 5.2 mile run and a two mile event April 4.

Registration begins at 6:30 a.m. at Cub Stadium. Race will begin and end at the stadium, with a run out and back along Farm Road 868 on the asphalt surface.

Two distances are included in the competition. Divisions in both will be for all ages. Trophies will also be presented to the first three places in each division.

There will also be a drawing for two pairs of Brooks Shoe, along with T-shirts, certificates and race packets which will go to all runners. Race packets will contain a variety of prizes, too.

Entry fee is $5 per runner. Available at the race will be a policeman, two aid stations and a soft drink stand at the end of the race.

The two mile fun run begins at 8 a.m. The 10K race will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Sponsors who have helped make the first event possible are Midland Nat-tional Bank, First National Bank, Permian Corp., Michael-Brandon Vineyards and Mac Schumann.

For addition information about the race, or to pre-register, call Andra Chamberlin, race director, at 683-0922, Melinda Cherryhomes at 683-6226 or 694-8176, and Em Carnett at 683-4281. Or pre-register by mailing check along with name, address, city, state, zip code, age, sex, event entered and size T-shirt to: Parks & Recreation Dept., 300 Baldwin, Midland, TX 79701.

Deadline is almost here to get your registration in for the unique workshop on "How to Be a Texan" sponsored by the county Texas Agricultural Extension Service office.

To register Monday, call the County Extension Office at 682-9481.

The programs will be presented for four Tuesday night in April, and are open to both new Texans or native Texans.

The seminar will teach:
-How to cook Texan chicken fried steak, chili, red beans, pecan pie and many more Texas delicacies;

-How to have a beautiful yard when it hasn't rained in 100 days and none of the plants you grew "back home" will grow here anyway;

-How to invest in some "Texas Gold" and "Black Tea;"

-And how to dress and dance and talk Texas so you won't be spotted as a "Yankee" before you open your mouth.

Programs will be presented each night by Texas experts.

"Spring is here and everyone is ready to get out and do some outdoor cooking, work with the landscaping and gardening and be more active," said Sharon Hillis, county extension agent.

"We want to show you how. And it's fun to learn with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. We have lots of activities planned. It won't be a classroom situation."

The event will be held at Midland Center, 105 N. Main, at 7:30 p.m.

Fee is $15 a person. Mail check payable to Midland County Extension Service, along with name, address, city, state and zip code to Cindy Mann, county extension agent, P.O. Box 1070, Midland Texas, 79702.

This fee includes a catered barbeque, fashion show, cookbook, dance, and all printed materials with information on plants, investments, cooking and Texas vocabulary. Door prizes will also be given away.

The event will be limited to 200 persons on a first come, first served basis.

For more information, call 682-9481, ext. 433.

Drug education workshop set

A drug education workshop will be presented Monday and Thursday from 7-9:30 p.m. It is sponsored by the Midlanders Against Drugs (MAD) Advisory Board, a branch of the Texans' War on Drugs Committee formed by Government William Clements. The workshop is held in cooperation with Bowie Parent Family Life Education, and will be at the Bowie cafeteria, 805 W. Elk.

Subjects to be discussed are the effects of marijuana and alcohol on young people. Also to be explored will be the drug problem among teenagers and children in Midland. The workshop is a pilot program that will be made available to all sixth through twelfth grade schools through the local Parent-Teacher Association units and interested parent groups next year.

Technological breakthroughs have a way of finding applications no one would ever have dreamed possible. The laser was discovered by accident. Mathematics said it couldn't be done, but physics said it could. The research to solve the controversy brought us one of the wonders of modern science.

Today the laser's applications range from etching a design on an award plaque to speeding communications through fiber optics to mending a detached retina. It has even found its way into the diamond industry.

A laser is sometimes used to cut diamonds. Typically diamonds are cleaved or sawed, depending on the most advantageous cutting direction. Usually a diamond is sawed slowly with a blade charged with diamond dust. The process is slow as it is, but when a knot or twinning plane is hit, it can take days or weeks to saw through. Here is where the laser beam comes to the rescue. It can cut through these difficult stones in a flash.

A laser beam is also occasionally used to remove an unsightly blemish within a diamond. The laser is directed at the target, and a minute hole is drilled into the stone to remove the mark.

This is one of the latest developments in the fascinating history of diamonds. If you'd like to learn more, stop by and ask for our free booklet on diamonds. We can also answer any questions you might have because we're trained American Gem Society jewelers.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Heloise's Olive Nut Spread

DEAR FELLOW RECIPE BUFFS:

We have received many requests for a copy of an olive-nut spread we printed some time ago and, of course, it's our pleasure to be of help if possible.

So for those folks and others who might like to have the recipe for their files, we're happy to run it again. If you haven't tried this spread, grab your scissors and clip this column for future reference, 'cause I think you're going to agree it's delicious. Here 'tis:

Mash 6 ounces of softened cream cheese (room temperature) with a fork, then add 1/2 cup mayonnaise. Blend well.

Stir in 1/2 cup chopped pecans and 1 cup chopped salad olives. (Notice the recipe calls for salad olives. Since they are to be chopped up anyway, don't spend extra money for the more expensive whole ones.)

Now, add 2 tablespoons of the olive juice and a dash of pepper, but NO salt. Stir well.

This mixture will be slightly mushy, but it's supposed to be that way. Put it into a covered container and refrigerate for several hours and it will become firm.

This delicious spread is great served on very thin toast. Topped with shredded lettuce, it's super. Makes great finger sandwiches too for family fare or fancy parties. Keeps well in the fridge — that is, if you can find some way to hide it. Hugs till tomorrow. — Heloise

REMINDER LIST

Dear Heloise: I keep a constant list of small projects, which need to be done, but are not urgent or regular duties. My list includes such things as: sort recipe file box, fill in scrapbooks, dust light fixtures, go through old magazines for recipes and articles, clean a cupboard, re-do address book, etc.

Then, when I have an extra half hour, I can do some project without wasting time wondering what to do. — Rena Lautaret

Authorities have found that a number of diseases can appear when there is a deficiency of one or more nutrients. Most diseases caused by such deficiencies can be corrected when all

Interior contemporary decor

By ALAN BUTLER Copley News Service

A noted interior designer offers a solution to the problem of coordinating the rough-hewn interior in a country home with smooth glass and wood contemporary furnishings.

John Mascheroni, a New York-based designer, solved this decorating problem with an artful use of upholstery, indoor plants and imaginative displays of photographic art.

Mascheroni says the ideas used in this home can add color, form and a sense of family to any home that has a casual, rustic interior.

The setting for this design project is a three-bedroom dwelling that is part of a private four-season resort community in New Hampshire. The dwelling, designed by noted architect Emil Hansen for Yankee Barn Homes, features a stone fireplace, long-leaf yellow pine beams, a cathedral ceiling made of recycled timbers and a large balcony space that overlooks the main living area.

The firm reports more than 1,200 of these homes sold for installation throughout the United States and Canada.

To bring a sense of the outdoors into this rough-hewn interior, he installed a dramatic ceiling-high photomural in the dining area of the main room. The 81x101-inch photographic enlargement was printed on Kodak paper in 40-inch panels, seam-matched and adhered directly to the smoothed Sheetrock surface of the wall. The tall, straight trees in the woodland scene seem to stretch as far as the eye can see and give the photomural a three-dimensional quality.

Strategically placed plants and uncurtained windows add a feeling of nature to the otherwise traditional dining area that adjoins the two-story living room area.

Earth tones and soft greens predominate in the upholstery on the modular seating — floral arrangements in rust and pinks provide accent color. Cedar and long-leaf yellow pine wood beams set the tone in the room. The polished floor is made of pottlach, a wood commonly used on boat decks. The recycled timbers on the cathedral ceiling were acquired from old New England factories.

The balcony area that runs above the dining room is an open den with couch, recliner and low seating, a storage unit to accommodate a hi-fi equipment and an unusual arrangement of family portraits and dark wood-framed mirrors.

Mascheroni selected the restored and new portraits because he felt they added a warm, nostalgic touch that helps personalize the decor. The photographs of children and ancestors chronicle the family's heritage — births, school graduations and outstanding achievements — and provide a contrast to the contemporary furniture.

All photography used in the home — from small, framed portraits to huge photomurals — was professionally created for the interior.

Push the glass end of the bulb into the tubing, then use the tubing as a handle for turning the bulb into the socket. — Mrs. Charlotte Towler

APPLIQUE TRICK

Dear Heloise: For those who applique designs on quilt blocks, pillowcases, etc., try this slick trick:

Find a piece of plastic. The kind that comes from the cleaners over clothes is best but lightweight plastic wrap can be used.

Cut the plastic a little larger than the piece to be appliqued. Place it under the applique, then place a piece of heavy brown paper bag on top. Be sure it's larger than the plastic.

Iron with a hot iron — really press down for a few seconds — then let the material cool a bit before removing the paper bag.

The applique will be stuck to the material and Life Enrichment Center offers new counseling service to area

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

"We're trying to offer something to enrich people's lives and their relationships," explained Gary Haaland of the new Life Enrichment Center in Midland.

The center is being offered as a community service for Midland through the Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan.

"This service is not competitive with other social services offered here and we are not trying to provide an indirect way to tell people about the Midland Lutheran Church," said Haaland. "We will seek to join with the other services to meet the needs of the people of the Midland area," he added.

Haaland has been pastor of the church here since June. "I was a minister of counseling of a large church in Houston," he said. "My counseling was the main social service aspect of that church and it was there that I first saw the importance between the community and the church, and its role in the community."

After that, he developed a counseling center for the entire Highland Lakes area in Central Texas.

"And I wanted to carry on the same thing here," he said.

"A church exists to serve the needs of its people, not only in the church, but in the community," said Haaland. He is thankful to his church for allowing him to spend part of his time doing this even though he is its senior pastor.

"If you have a personal, parent-child or marital problem, you may need the help of a counselor," Haaland said. "Often people need the help of a trained person to understand themselves and others. They can then be helped to put a problem into perspective, to work out solutions to personal puzzles, and to make informed decisions. An informal, initial consultation will help you decide if you want or need further assistance."

All information is confidential between the people involved and the counselor.

Referrals are accepted from a telephone call, parents, friends, pastors, schools, physicians, courts and other community agencies.

Fees for the counseling service are determined on the basis of one's ability to pay. "No one is denied service because of inability to pay," said Haaland. The initial consultation is free.

Appointments may be scheduled by calling 694-4631 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Counseling will be scheduled at the convenience of both the caller and the counselor.

A special feature of the Life Enrichment Center will be programs to be offered from time to time. "Such groups are designed to aid people develop stronger, more productive individual lives and personal relationships," said Haaland.

He listed some possible programs to be offered on parent-child relationships, marriage enrichment, family enrichment, communication, personal growth, single living, preparation for retirement, chemical dependency, etc.

"These will all be enrichment programs, and are not counseling," said Haaland. "These are for people who want to take a good relationship and make it better."

Already being offered are several programs. For example, a Mother's Group meets at the Center every Tuesday morning from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. A free nursery is provided. "This is a very informal group and participants can come at any time," said Haaland, who meets with every group.

A popular program at the center is the Contemporary Life seminar, which lasts from five to six weeks. It is a lecture and discussion format. Topics are decided by the group, which meets Wednesdays from 10:30 a.m. to noon. It is open to the public and a free nursery is provided.

Subjects are varied. For example, Haaland is finishing a series on love now and plans one in the future on friendship.

He would also like to offer a program on self-understanding through dreams and one on couple communication.

A current program is the Formerly Married group, which operates through an informal, unstructured format. This group meets Sundays from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

"Some of these programs are for members of the church, but are open to the community if space allows," said Haaland.

Other programs under consideration: programs on planning for retirement, groups for personal growth, programs for parents and youth on drugs, alcohol and sex education for junior high and senior high school students, and programs on death and dying.

Haaland's special training is in marriage and family therapy, and his doctoral work was in child development. He received his undergraduate training at Luther College and his seminar training at Luther Theological Seminary. He received the master of theology degree in pastoral psychology from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, Calif.

His doctoral work is in child development and family relations at Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa, and he has completed a year's clinical residency in marriage counseling and family therapy at the Institute of Religion of the Texas Medical Center in Houston. He has had clinical training at the Adult Psychiatry Clinic of the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco and in the psychiatric ward of San Francisco General Hospital.

He has studied conjoint family therapy at the Mental Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif and Transactional Analysis at the Berkeley Transactional Analysis Institute.

Haaland has also served as counselor of the Ecumenical Counseling Center of Clear Lake, and as minister of counseling and family life at Memorial Drive Lutheran Church of Houston.

He stressed that the Life Enrichment Center is non-profit, and that any monies made through counseling would go toward the center or go back into the community to help with the needs of the city.

"The Counseling and Life Enrichment Committee at the church will guide this aspect of the church and will be guiding the church in its assessment of the city's needs and what the congregation can do to meet the needs," said Haaland.

"We will also try to work with Midland's 'Objectives for the Eighties' to see if we can support it," he added.

Look for fall is young, aggressive

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The look emerging during the Italian ready-to-wear collections for the fall-winter 1981-1982 season is young and aggressive, designed to please the career woman.

No frivolous lacy things, no tiny waists or tight skirts were shown at the week-long semi-annual shows at the fashion pavilion of the Milan Trade Fair.

Instead, lots of loose pants, wide bodices with drop shoulders and low waistlines, loose midi-skirts and bulky jackets dominated the event.

In the pants department, everything goes, from cuffed slacks to fisherman pants, jodhpurs, culottes, Bermudas and bloomers.

The favorite fabric for next winter is leather, which the 1981 tanning artisans have made look like everything from knobby wool to silk.

Every collection so far has had a vast selection of leather skirts and pants, with some designers even showing leather shirts and blouses.

Volunteers key to CIA's success

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

"Without our volunteers, we couldn't have Christmas in April," explains Kim Modisett, executive director of the Human Relations Council, which helps to coordinate the annual project.

A faithful volunteer to the program is Bobby Pollard.

He has been working with the CIA program since 1973, "when we at Alamo Heights Baptist Church got to looking and seeing the need for something like this," he said.

"We saw the needs of people, especially those on a fixed in-they require more than one day for repair, maybe even as much as two or three months of working nights and on weekends for a group.

Pollard's group, Alamo Heights Baptist Church, has traditionally taken on one "difficult" house, one that requires more than the average amount of remodeling or repair, and four or five smaller projects.

Many members of the church are not able to offer volunteer labor, but do donate funds for the project. This year's budget for the entire CIA project is $40,000.

Pollard and his

Christmas in April

come, and decided we needed to do something about it. Most of us have so much when you really think about it."

Pollard was named to the board of directors for Christmas in April when the committee was formed last October.

Christmas in April is Midland's only volunteer housing repair project for the elderly and handicapped.

Each year, houses which have been carefully surveyed are selected for the CIA list. This year, 110 homes are on the list.

Individuals and groups all over town take on a house or houses as their particular project, giving volunteer labor on one day in April.

That's how it works in theory.

In reality, however, most houses are in such bad shape that group has just completed a project. They built a floor and constructed a closet around a hot water heater in a home on E. Texas Ave.

Last year, the church group remodeled a tin house, taking the tin off the roof, and putting sheetrock and insulation on the walls. "We completely redid that home," he said. "We worked on it for two months, working at least two nights a week as late as 11 at night and on Saturdays. Sometimes we worked 14-hour days."

On the big work day, a work crew tries to arrange the schedule so that the house is ready for women and children in the church to paint and do other miscellaneous chores, explained Pollard. This year's workday is April 25.

"On a big work day, there are about 65 volunteers from the church who show up," he said.

There are many who have volunteered on the work day since it all began eight years ago and look forward to it every year, according to Pollard.

"We have a good time," he said. "It's work, but it's also fun. There's good fellowship and someone is always cutting up. A kitchen committee from the church brings us lunch and that's good, too."

Lunch is provided on the work day for all volunteers at Washington Park, picked there because of its central location to most of the homes, according to Mrs. Modisett. The food is donated by merchants and churches throughout Midland.

"I got involved in this because I saw the need," said Pollard. "When you considere that it takes some of these people all of their paychecks just to pay the gas bill on their homes, then you want to help in some way."

"I have a good time meeting the people who we are helping on this, anyway," he said. "It's always kids and older folks and I enjoy all of them."

For more information about volunteer labor or donations on the Christmas in April project, call 684-5866.

Hike-Bike to aid retarded set April 25

Get your walking shoes on. It's time once again for the annual Hike-Bike to benefit the retarded of Midland.

The event will be April 25, beginning at 8 a.m. and lasting all day.

New this year will be the starting point at the National Guard Armory, 3900 N. Lamesa Road. Pledge forms are available at all secondary schools and the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens office, 2701 N. "A" St.

The route will go along the Frontage Road of Interstate 20 to Stanton, a 20 mile hike one way.

Money which is pledged on a walk/ride per mile basis stays in the community and is used for the betterment of programs for the retarded in Midland and surrounding counties, according to Mrs. Cecil Aycock, chairman of the event.

"A group of Stantonites participate in the annual event by walking and riding hoses from Stanton into Midland."

The annual event involves approximately 200 hikers, bikers, runners and horseback riders from ages 5 to 65. There are also about 100 volunteers behind the scenes registering, making lunches, and patrolling the route.

Among the volunteers are the Texas State Guard, Sheriff's Department, Highway Maintenance Department, Police Department, Jaycees, Jaycee-ettes, Opportunity Center Auxiliary and Midland Association for Retarded Citizens members.

"The first Hike-Bike Ride was held in 1973 with the Teens Aid the Retarded (TARS) sponsoring it alone," said Mrs. Aycock. "The Midland TARS was the first in the nation to sponsor a Hike-Bike for retarded in 1973 and MARC joined them in 1974 to co-sponsor what has become the most successful Hike-Bike in Midland. For six consecutive years, MARC won first place in the nation as the ARC which not only had the most money pledged, but also the most pledges collected."

Lunch will be provided. Prizes will be given to the top money raisers.

Future togetherness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The solar and utility industries, which are currently viewed as competitors, have a future that is tied together, predicts Theodore Barry & Associates, a management consulting firm.

"If the solar industry is going to get off the ground in a meaningful way, utilities can be a tremendous source of support, as well as a source of credibility to help customers accept solar as a viable source of energy," says TB&A.

"Currently utilities are not permitted to sell, market or install solar devices, but many energy experts expect that situation to change," says TB&A, which has completed a study of solar marketing possibilities for one utility.

Kicking up their heels at the Junior League Charity Ball

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Bangles, beads, sparkle, glamour—It could only happen in Midland. And it happened last night in Midland Center as almost 1,000 party-goers turned out for the annual Junior League Charity Ball.

Leaguers were a little apprehensive in breaking tradition by changing location from the Midland Country Club to the new and larger Midland Center. But the bigger auditorium offered much more creativity in space, decorating, dancing and eating—which was what the crowd showed up for.

They danced into the wee hours of the night to the varied music of First Crossing and Mal Fitch and His Orchestra, who alternated tunes. Two dance floors on each side of the room offered spacious dancing room. The two band stages also held a parade dragon and Buddha statue.

Theme was "Oriental Fanfare."

and the League's decoration committee pulled all the stops this year with their efforts. Guests were greeted with a lush Japanese Garden scene in the foyer, complete with water pond, golf fish, lily pads and floating gardenias. Tropical and flowering plants abounded, and colorful birds to the authentic scene.

The key to decorating success was in the huge main hall where three large mobiles of paper lanterns were hung. Each provided subtle overhead lighting. Oriental fish kites were also suspended from the ceiling in a festive mood.

And no less successful was the outstanding catering by Don Strange of San Antonio. Among the servings were egg rolls, Moo shee pork crepes with fres plum sauce, legs of corned beef, chilled tenderloin sauteed in red wine, fresh fruit of papayas, mangos, fresh pineapple and kiwi, and chocolate crepes with whipped cream.

Chairman of the ball was Mrs. Ted Collins. Other chairmen included Mrs. Robert Houser, decorations; Mrs. Bob Koen, assistant decorations; Mrs. Ralph Arrell, League treasurer; Mrs. Reynolds Foster, assistant treasurer; Mrs. David Childress, arrangements; Mrs. Rodney Satterwhite, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Koziol, publicity; Mrs. Donald Hewett, invitations; Mrs. Kenneth George, sponsor; Mrs. Donald Pope, recorder; Mrs. Frank Cahoon, sustaining advisor; Mrs. Spencer Beal, Mrs. Steve Betton, Mrs. Steve Davidson and Mrs. Nicholas Taylor, members at large.

Sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Evans Blake, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Blanks, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney H. Cowden Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Rufe S. Bynum Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John M. Grimland Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Karcher, Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Craig Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dillard Jr.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Durham, Mrs. Jack Samples, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Fasken, Charles D.

Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald F. Hyer, Mr. and Mrs. Ted C. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Bob L. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kleine and Mr. and Mrs. Tony A. Martin.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Payton Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Berger, Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. J. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Leeper, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Donald O'Shaughnessy and Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Perry Jr.

Also, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Hover, Mr. and Mrs. Joe P. Liberty, Dr. and Mrs. Dean Strack, Mr. and Mrs. John Waddill, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Priddy, Mr. and Mrs. Russell J. Ramsland, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Redfern Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William G. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Southerland, Mrs. John W. Starr and Mr. and Mrs. Jack B. Wilkinson Jr.

Proceeds from the ball are returned to the community through the League's projects.

Bill Worley does an uninhibited jig to the music of First Crossing. Trying her best to keep up is Nadine Craddick.

Dipping into the egg roll dish are Dr. and Mrs. John L. Foster and Jerry Fullinwider.

First Crossing, a Fort Worth band, (shown here) and Mal Fitch and His Orchestra alternated tunes, affording guests a chance to dance to a variety of music on two dance floors.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: I have been "witchcrafted." This evil is more serious than people realize. I would not have believed it could actually happen until it happened to me. My doctor laughed and said it was all in my head. He said he had no idea how to treat this kind of problem and I should just forget about it. Well, I tried and I can't. It keeps getting worse.
 Abby, you help people with all kinds of problems. Can you tell me where to go to take this evil spell off my body? I am tortured by this hex on me day and night. I am not imagining things. I know that I am under the control of some kind of witch, but nobody believes me. I am not making this up and I am not crazy. Please help me. — E. IN PHILADELPHIA
DEAR E.: I believe you. Since the problem exists in your mind, in order to be cured, you need to see a psychiatrist — or psychologist — or some kind of therapist who specializes in problems of the mind. Your physician should have recommended several, but since he did not, consult your local mental health clinic. Explain your problem and let the clinic help you.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband retired two years ago, we moved into a nice, friendly mobile-home park. Once a month, about 15 couples in our immediate area get together for a potluck supper, each bringing a salad, casserole, cake, pie, etc.
 Everything looks delicious, but here's the problem. In visiting some of my neighbors, I've seen their kitchens, and the thought of eating their food turns me off. One widow has two cats who walk all over her kitchen counters. Another neighbor has chronic eczema and prepares her food with some kind of ointment on her hands. One couple cooks together, and the husband never washes his hands after using the toilet. The lady next door lets her parakeets fly around freely, distributing their droppings all over her kitchen! I've seen her squash insects with her fingers and scratch her dog while she bakes.
 My husband and I enjoy the company of these neighbors, but what excuse can we use for not eating their food? Or are we too fussy? — SANITARY SUE DEAR SUE: Too fussy? Not in my book. You could eat first, or eat only what you bring to the potluck supper.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago I read a book by a so-called "expert" on how to beat the crap tables. It fascinated me, so after reading it several times, I built a crap table, bought some dice and poker chips and practiced this system until I had it down pat. After six months I showed a considerable profit on paper.
 Now, common sense caused me to ask myself, "Why isn't the author of this book in Nevada cleaning up at the crap tables instead of sitting at home writing books to sell to people?"
 On the other hand, his system worked for me at home when I played just for fun.
 I am kind of old and living on a fixed income. Would you invest $500 on the crap table if you were me? — PUZZLED IN TACOMA
DEAR PUZZLED: No. If anyone ever figures out how to beat the crap tables, I'm betting he will be promptly barred from the casinos. Stay home and save your money.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J. IN WACO, TEXAS: To paraphrase an old Jewish saying, "From constantly rubbing up against a rich man, a poor man will get a hole in his sleeve."

Solar system costly

COOLIDGE, Ariz. (AP) — Farmers probably won't want to have solar energy plants to power their irrigation systems, says the manager of the nation's only such experimental plant.

The system operated since late 1979 by the University of Arizona works, despite some bugs. But it is costly and requires time and skills that would probably cause most farmers to ignore thoughts about turning to solar energy to run their irrigation pumps, at least for now, says Dr. Dennis Larson.

But Larson, an agricultural engineer and the project's manager, said "The solar plant as an experimental plant has operated about as reliably as one could expect it to. It's very hard to have specific expectations for an experiment."

The $5.7 million federal-state project on a cotton farm near Coolidge in south-central Arizona, financed principally by the Department of Energy, has operated 90 to 95 percent of sunlit hours, Larson said. He termed its running time "outstanding."

It uses 384 parabolic trough-shaped collectors lying north-south over 23,000 square feet to absorb solar energy for generating about 150 net kilowatts of electricity. Shiny aluminum surfaces reflect sunlight onto tubes in the troughs, to heat oil inside to about 550 degrees Fahrenheit.

That in turn heats a second fluid, toluene, which is vaporized and drives a turbine connected to a generator, producing electrical power.

It works. But there are problems. "The number of hours is limited by sunlight," said Larson. "We don't have enough collectors to operate from sunup to sundown."

In fact, he said, only about one hour's worth of generation is collected on winter days because the sun rests low in the sky and "not much high-temperature heat" is taken in.

Enough energy is collected during a typical June day to operate the turbine for about six hours, Larson said.

A few months ago, a natural-gas line was added to the plant to augment the energy supply.

Larson said the plant produced electricity to pump about 1,500 gallons of water per minute from wells about 300 feet deep, sufficient to cover about 150 acres of cotton. Farmers require about 10 gallons' capacity per minute per acre to irrigate cotton fields, he said.

The system has required about an hour daily in maintenance and perhaps another two to operate, Larson said. Troubles have cropped up with the surface of the collectors, with electric motors and with oil leakage, he said.

The system is not economically feasible currently, though Larson estimated that building another unit would cost only half as much as the prototype. But such factors as the cost of money, operating and maintenance costs and the relative cost of other energy prices will affect the future of such a system.

As for its commercial future, Larson estimated that "the amount of time and the skills required are probably such that an individual farmer probably wouldn't want one."

He said no comparison data had been gathered yet to determine cost-effectiveness, but that a solar power system used on a cooperative or interconnecting basis by groups of farmers tying into utility power grids might be realistic one day.

New plant planned by Conoco Chemicals

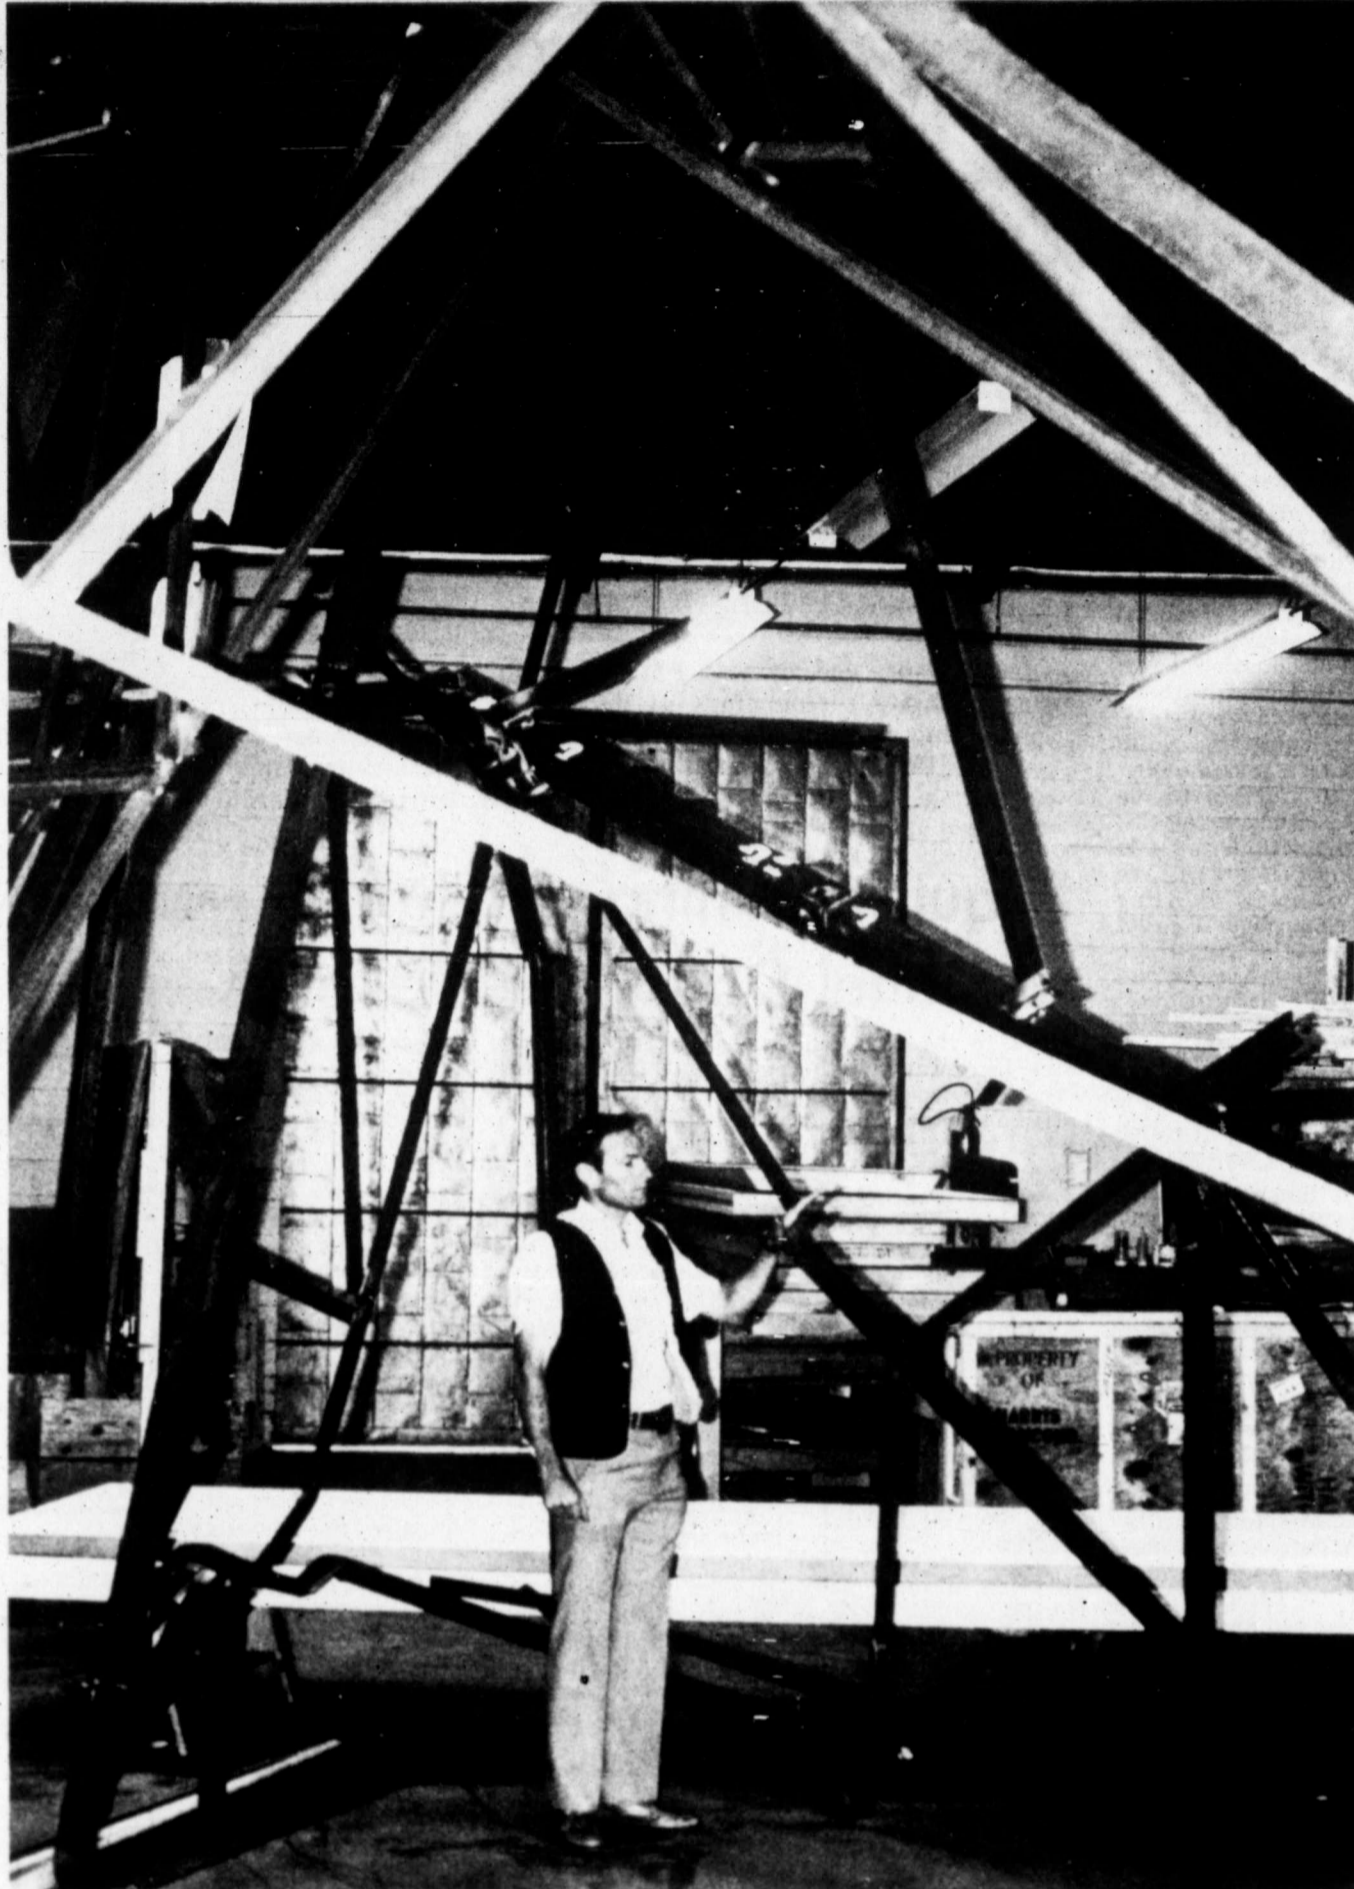

HOUSTON — Conoco Chemicals Company recently announced plans to become a major supplier of high density polyethylene and will construct a new chemical plant in Matagorda County to produce that plastic.

High density polyethylene (HDPE) is used in packaging household and industrial products. Commonly recognized products made from HDPE include milk and detergent bottles, pipe, merchandise bags, and industrial containers ranging from small jars to 55 gallon drums.

John D. Burns, executive vice president for Conoco Chemicals, said the new plant would cost about $150 million and would have a production capacity of about 200,000 metric tons of "high quality" HDPE per year. Construction is expected to start in June of this year with completion scheduled in the first quarter of 1983, he said.

The plant will utilize a commercially-proved technology developed by Japan's Nissan Chemicals Industry Ltd. Conoco has exclusive U.S. license for Nissan technology.

"This economically-competitive technology will offer significant benefits to Conoco's future customers," Burns said. "Products made with our

Petroleum museum projects opening of new north wing

Opening of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's new north wing is projected for this fall, Russell J. Ramsland, museum president, said this week.

The building itself has been completed and turned over to the museum, but construction of exhibits for the 9,200 square-foot addition is somewhat behind schedule, the Midland oil man said. No firm date for opening of the wing will be set until exhibits are closer to final installation.

Ramsland said the museum's bet guess was is that installation will begin in mid-July and be completed about five weeks later near August 24. However, technical problems on one of the more complex exhibits are still being worked on, and other possibilities for delay exist. The museum will select an opening date once these are known to be "locked up," Ramsland stated.

In a progress report on the new $1.3 million addition, Ramsland said that work on all exhibits has begun, and some are near completion. Almost all will be assembled and tested at the Universal Exhibits plant in South El Monte, Calif., then will be taken down for truck movement to Midland. A crew from the builder-firm will install the exhibits, augmented by local help.

The Midland petroleum museum was opened in September 1975, and occupies a 41-acre site on Interstate 20. Its innovative animated exhibits, plus other features, have attracted visitors from 74 nations and many VIP's, including President Gerald R. Ford and the current vice-president, George W. Bush. Its new wing will add about 40 percent to its exhibit space and will include several displays of kinds not heretofore seen in U.S. museums.

Weekly area rig count soars to 421

Donations may cost more than services rendered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is coming under fire for accepting $270,000 from oilmen to redecorate the White House. A consumer critic called the money "gratuities for services rendered," and a congresswoman said the tax-deductible donations may end up costing the government almost three times the $50,000 federal stipend turned down by first lady Nancy Reagan.

"The taxpayers are being taken to the cleaners," Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., complained Thursday. "If the oil donors are in the 50 percent (tax) bracket, and they're probably in higher ones than that, it could cost the government $130,000 in lost revenues."

The White House announced last month that President and Mrs. Reagan were declining $50,000 appropriated by Congress to refurbish the family living quarters and would finance the project instead with private contributions.

"It's more appropriate to do this with private funds, and to do it properly is going to cost more than $50,000," Sheila Patton, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said at the time.

The fund-raising drive brought in more than $735,000 — almost quadruple Mrs. Reagan's original $200,000 goal — including $270,000 in donations ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 from 23 individuals with oil interests.

Consumer representatives and some members of Congress assailed the Reagan White House on Thursday for accepting donations from the oilmen just a month after the president removed price controls on domestic oil.

Former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox said the fund-raising "shows a surprising insensitivity" to the danger of mixing money and politics. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., called the oil-connected donations "as blatant a presidential conflict of interest as I can recall in the more than 20 years I've been in Congress."

Peter McCoy, Mrs. Reagan's chief of staff, has said the donors "have absolutely no political interest, no political motives." Moreover, he said, the Reagans were unaware of the fund-raising drive among oil interests.

Some contributors said they were showing appreciation for the president's policies, particularly those favorable to the oil industry. But they insisted the money was not intended to gain Reagan's favor.

Ms. Schroeder noted that Reagan's budget-cutting is leaving 31 displaced homemaker programs without money as of this weekend.

"It only costs $1 million," Ms. Schroeder said of the programs, which help middle-age women who after years of homemaking find they have no employable skills. "Why don't they have a fund-raising drive for that?"

Cox, now chairman of the citizens' lobby Common Cause, said: "The White House belongs to all the people and should be refurbished by all the people, not just representatives of a select special interest."

Proxmire, who last week called for releasing the then-secret list of contributors, said "there is no way to escape the clear connection between the pro-oil policies of the administration, worth so much to the industry, and the payoff in contributions to the White House."

Edwin Rothschild, director of Energy Action, a consumer research group, said accepting the oil money indicated "where the administration's commitments and allegiance lie."

"Put together with their proposals on energy, they (administration officials) are being rewarded by people whom they have benefited," he said. "It's gratuities for services rendered."

One week ago, the White House reversed an earlier decision to keep the donors' names secret and announced that the fund had reached $735,912.

According to several donors, Holmes Tuttle, a member of Reagan's "Kitchen Cabinet," traveled to Oklahoma and Texas last month and solicited $10,000 donations from Reagan supporters, many with ties to the oil industry.

Tuttle's fund-raising came only four weeks after Reagan decontrolled oil prices — a decision worth an estimated $2 billion to the oil industry.

The administration also was debating other proposals that could have major economic impact on the energy industry.

Oil Department reorganization

Reorganization of The Reporter-Telegram's Oil Department is currently underway.

Although qualified personnel are being trained for oil staff positions, due to the technical nature of oil journalism there will be errors in the daily report.

The Reporter-Telegram appreciates the understanding which has been shown by our readers for whom we realize the oil report is important. Our intention is to return as soon as possible to the standard in quality and quantity for which The Reporter-Telegram has always been known.

Discovery completed

Fagadau Energy Corp. of Dallas has completed the Cecil Brown as an Atoka Conglomerate oil discovery from perforations at 3,662-3,682 feet.

On the 25-hour potential test, the well flowed 126 barrels of 39 gravity oil through a 8/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 690 psi and a gas oil ratio of 500-1.

Total depth of the well is 4210 feet with a 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,210 feet and is located 2 3/4 miles northeast of a 3,864 foot Dubber oil production in the Four J field.

Union Exploration of Lamesa will drill the 1 Clanton as a 4,500 foot new field wildcat in Stephens County, six miles southwest of Eoline and 6,300 feet east of a 3,816 foot Bond sand production in Hela field.

The drillsite is 2,262 feet from south line and 521 feet from the west line of section 42, block 7, T&P A-1422.

Lionel Daury and his wife, Patricia, invite you to share in the cozy, intimate surroundings at the Lionel Daury restaurant. Specializing in authentic french cuisine, Lionel is a chef of renowned fame. A French native, Lionel offers you a taste of the exquisite at Lionel Daury in the Plaza Center. Reservations are requested at 683-1444.

Exquisite dining available at Lionel Daury's restaurant

During the 18th century, there was a way of life which included magnificent meals. Such feasts accompanied by excellent wines were served in beautiful surroundings as music played. This way of life is still available, for a few hours at least, if you dine at Lionel Daury french cuisine.

Lionel Daury, a French chef from Paris, with his wife, Patricia, a fashion model, have moved to Midland to open his new restaurant here.

At his first restaurant in Paris, France, Chez Lionel, critics praised Lionel's work with his specialty in nouvelle cuisine.

"Lionel Daury creates, with great enthusiasm and talent, an ensemble of specialties (both) light and refined," a critic wrote in Gault Millau.

Another traveling critic wrote: "I lunched a few days later chez the best exponent of nouvelle cuisine I have yet encountered — the tiny Lionel at 26 rue Yvonne le Tac in Montmartre... A fricassee d'artichauts et d'esperges au basilic, for example (the two vegetables separated cooked in their own juices, then blended with the herb); salmon aux feuillettes; foie de veaux vinaigre de zele. I had come near to believing nouvelle cuisine was the restaurant's excuse for giving you even less food for even more money — and the performance of one famous hotel not 100 miles from Pall Mall confirmed this belief — but Lionel convinced me otherwise."

Dining at Lionel Daury begins at 7 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. A three-course dinner, including appetizer, entree and dessert and the finest wines, generally costs diners about $20-22 a person, due to use of only the finest ingredients from all over the world.

Lunch at the restaurant's "sidewalk cafe," Le Bistro, is less expensive (the most expensive item is $4) and includes a variety of items from Salad Nicoise to Steak Tatar. Le Bistro is open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Butler's Pantry features the finest imported foods in Midland. You'll find everything from cheeses to cold cuts to imported wines and truffles at 19 Plaza Center. Stop by for a taste of the exotic — in your own backyard.

Desert Energy Equipment, Inc. has announced the opening of a new store location to better serve the southeastern New Mexico area as of March 1, 1981. The store is located at 1900 West Marland St. in Hobbs, New Mexico.

Robert Welch is the Southeastern New Mexico manager and Merlin Black is the store manager.

Desert Energy Equipment Inc. also operates stores in Odessa and in Enid, Okla.

Desert Energy was founded in May of 1978 in Odessa by Sherril L. Easley, Ed Barham and Grady Bingham, who serve as its officers and directors.

Vernon J. Hines, former exploration manager for Maralo, Inc., Midland, has joined United Petrosearch Inc., as Regional exploration manager. He will continue to reside in Midland, and his duties will include management of the exploration effort of Trade-United, a joint venture between Trade Oil and Gas, Inc. and United Petrosearch Inc. Hines had been with Maralo since 1976. Prior to that time he was with Mobil Oil Corp. and Northern Natural Gas Producing Co.

Brint A. Albritton, former Sr. Landman with Tenneco has joined United Petrosearch, Inc. as Land Manager. His duties will encompass the management of both the Midland and Fort Worth land departments. Albritton will reside in Fort Worth.

R.O. (Jack) Major, President and Chief Executive Officer of MCF Oil Corporation, announced year-end 1980 financial and operational results.

Revenues in 1980 increased 54 percent to $73,639,000 from $47,933,000 in 1979 due principally to an 86 percent increase in oil and gas revenues and a 45 percent increase in contract drilling revenues. Oil and gas revenues in 1980 totaled $15,160,000 up from $8,159,000 in the previous year. Contract drilling revenues increased to $51,277,000 from $35,437,000.

Net earnings increased to $6,988,000 in 1980, 57 cents per primary share for 1980, assuming full dilution, was 56 cents per share up from 21 cents per share in 1979. Net earnings per share for 1979 have been restated to give effect to a two-for-one stock split which was paid in January 1981. The Increase in net earnings was due primarily to higher profit margins and utilization rates for contract drilling operations and to an increase in oil and gas production. In 1980 MGF's daily oil production average was 983 barrels per day, up 21 percent from 1979's average of 815 barrels per day. Daily gas production increased 20 percent to 5.9 million cubic feet per day as compared to 4.9 million cubic feet per day in 1979. In 1980 the gross profit margin from contract drilling operations was 31 percent, up from a 25 percent gross profit margin in 1979. The rig utilization rates in 1980 were 96 percent as compared to 78 percent in 1979.

For the three months ended December 31, 1980, net earnings were $2,285,000, 18 cents per primary share, on revenues of $20,439,000 compared to $775,000, 10¢ per primary share on revenues of $14,663,000 for the three months ended December 31, 1979. Fully diluted earnings per share for the fourth quarter was 18 cents in 1980 as compared to 10¢ in 1979.

Major noted that 1980 results do not include any of the operations of NFC Corporation which was acquired on January 16, 1981 in a purchase transaction.

Roy E. Campbell has announced that employees of four Elcor Corporation groups were awarded first place honors by the Texas Safety Association (TSA) for achieving the best safety records in 1980 among TSA members.

The four groups winning first place awards are the Ortloff Corporation's Midland Division Construction Department and Midland Division Fabricated Industrial Systems Department; Elk Corporation of Texas, based in Ennis; and Mosley Machinery Company, Incorporated, located in Waco.

Personnel from the four groups won their first place awards by competing in TSA's Occupational Safety and Health Contest with firms which provide products and services similar to the Elcor units. The awards cover all Texas-based operations of each group, including office and supervisory personnel, and is based on the lowest lost time injury frequency rate experience and man-hours accrued in 1980.

Amongst TSA members that worked between 200,000 and 1,000,000 manhours in 1980:

Ortloff's Midland Division construction personnel won the first place award in competition with general contractors primarily engaged in the construction of heavy projects including petroleum refinery and chemical facilities construction.

Elk employees won the first place award by competing with firms which manufacture asphalt and other saturated felts in roll or shingle form, either smooth or faced with grit.

Mosley Machinery personnel won the first place honors through competition with metal working machinery and equipment firms which manufacture machines for pressing, hammering, extruding, shearing, die casting or metal shaping techniques.

Ortloff's Midland Division Fabricated Industrial Systems Department (FIS) won the first place award for TSA Metals Industry category that worked between 50,000 and 200,000 manhours in 1980. FIS is primarily engaged in fabricating piping and pipe manifolds by cutting, bending, welding and threading pipe.

TSA officials presented the first place awards to representatives of the four Elcor groups during TSA's annual conference this week in Houston.

Larry Fitzsimmons, vice president of construction, and Ed Mycock, safety manager, received the award for Ortloff's Construction Department and Fabricated Industrial Systems Department.

Ray Varner, production manager for Elk's fiberglass mat plant received the first place award for Mosley Machinery employees.

TSA, headquartered in Austin, was chartered by the National Safety Council in 1938 as a non-profit, non-governmental public service association, and is the largest state safety organization in the U.S. The primary activities of TSA are in public information, safety education and training, liaison with state and federal governments, and supplying and producing materials to support safety programs.

Elcor Corporation has 3,494,751 shares of common stock presently outstanding. Its common stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil company said today that it has acquired nearly 700,000 shares of Marathon common stock for its Treasury account through unsolicited transactions since January 1. The company anticipates that it may acquire up to an additional 800,000 shares during the year 1981.

The purchases may be made from time to time subject to market conditions and applicable regulations and requirements. All shares acquired are to be used for general corporate purposes.

DALLAS — It's hard to imagine a cow being a problem for Barbara Brown in her Dallas office of Sun Gas Company. But things are not always as they seem.

Each month Brown and her Gas Volume Determination staff interpret more than 18,000 'clock' charts to make a permanent record of the amount of natural gas produced by the Sun Company operating unit. The charts are circular cardboard sheets that mechanically measure gas at more than 3,000 meters located at wells, leases and gas plants.

Operators and metermen collect the charts, fill in the pertinent data and forward the charts to Brown's office. Normally, the charts are protected by glass doors and the recording-interpretation is fairly smooth. But sometimes the unexpected makes Brown's job difficult.

She keeps a file of mutilated charts that are impossible to measure. One of her favorites has red ink smears across its face; that is what's left of the face. One-third is missing. On the back is a cryptic note from the meterman: 'Door open: cow ate!'

Sun Gas is the nation's 10th largest supplier of natural gas and natural gas liquids, producing and marketing about two percent of the gas energy consumed in the United States.

Tips from CPT on what to look for in a word processor

CPT offers a plain English explanation of exactly what word processing is, and some helpful pointers on how to choose from over 70 makes.

Word processing is simply a faster, easier, less expensive way to type.

With a modern word processor (such as the CPT 8000, right), you type on a screen instead of paper.

You can type at full-fledged draft speed without worrying about errors. Leave out a word or a paragraph? No worry. Just go back and type it in. You can adjust the entire text without retyping.

"Electronic filing"

Most word processors have some form of memory. This may range from a magnetic card, which holds a single business letter, to the disks used in the CPT 8000, which hold over a hundred full-page letters.

This electronic storage allows you to recall individual pages to the screen in seconds. So you can make changes at any time as easily as you corrected the original.

Only when the document is letter-perfect do you transfer it from screen to paper—at up to 540 words a minute.

Things to look for

Your search for the right word processor will be greatly simplified if you begin with these basics:

1. Don't buy too little—or too much—word processor. Least expensive are "intelligent typewriters" with very limited functions. At the other end of the scale are expensive shared systems.
2. Most popular by far are the "standalone" models. The CPT 8000, for example, fits easily on a desk top, yet has nearly all the automated features of even the largest systems.
3. Be sure the word processor you select is easy to use. Look for things like a standard keyboard, and plain English commands. The CPT 8000 is so easy to learn, most secretaries will be turning out actual work after a short period of instruction.
4. Plan for your needs. It is tempting to use your word processor as a "fancy typewriter" just because your procedures are set up that way. However, a relatively new feature, called "software programming," can enhance your word processor so it can perform many other office tasks.

The CPT 8000, for instance, can also be used to prepare your office payrolls, keep ledgers, handle inventory and bookkeeping, and more. Be sure the word processor you choose has this important feature.

There are more things to look for than we can touch on here. For a thorough explanation of word processing, and more tips on what to look for, send for our free booklet "CPT Takes the Mystery Out of Word Processing."

Rice is sentenced to five year term

HOUSTON (AP) — A state jury has sentenced a former regional land man for Standard Oil of Ohio to five years in prison and ordered him to pay a $10,000 fine for misappropriating $355,000 in company funds.

Kenneth Murray Rice, 56, was fired by the firm in March 1980 after a company audit revealed $10,000, Assistant District Attorney Ross Rommel said. Evidence showed the money was used as payments on a house Rice once owned in Houston and a ranch in Tarpley, Rommel said.

The audit also showed extra payments were made between December 1979 and February 1980 by escrow agents to companies under Rice's direction, Rommel said.

Funds were funneled into the Tierra Viego Exploration Co., headed by Rice's mother, and BSE Investment Advisors, described by its owner and founder as a clearing house for the person with a small to medium amount of money to invest, has recently opened in Midland at 4500 W. Illinois Ave., Suite 203.

Stephen Stine is owner of BSE. "Many people who can afford to invest from $1,000 to $50,000 don't realize that there are many money-making opportunities in addition to stocks, real estate and government securities," Stine said. And, he says, even those who know of investments are sometimes unclear as to which are best suited to achieve their particular financial goals.

Stine

"Our advisory service is for people and businesses, not large corporations," Stine said. "We charge a single flat fee and, after an in-depth interview with each client, provide him with a written recommendation based on the financial goals he has established for himself."

Stine was born and raised in Midland. He recently returned to Midland after working with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in New York and various areas of the Southeast. He holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Texas Tech University and a master's degree in banking from Rutgers University. He also attended Texas Tech University Law School and has done graduate study in real estate financing at New York University.

Capp Homes will be holding an open house in Midland, Sunday, March 29, 1981, between 1 to 6 p.m. From Midland go south on FM715 three miles south of I-20. Turn east on County Road 140E then go one mile to County Road 1160S. Turn north and follow the Capp Homes Open House signs.

Unlike most open houses, the interior of this custom-built home is unfinished to show the public the quality of materials and workmanship in a typical Capp Home. Each visitor will have the opportunity to see how the Capp "Finish-It-Yourself House" building program works.

Capp also offers various financing programs for qualified buyers. "And we don't ask for a large down payment either — just a small deposit and their lot get them started," stated Kriskchke.

A buyer can either finish the home himself or act as his own general contractor, but either way, he saves. "Normally, most buyers do some things themselves, but subcontract various projects out to specialty trades, depending on their own capabilities."

Capp Homes is a division of Evans Products Company (NYSE and PSE). With corporate headquarters in Portland, Oregon, Evans operates in two business areas. In building products, the company is a leading building materials retailer, a major producer of custom-built homes and a manufacturer of building products. In transportation/industrial products, Evans is a major lessor and manufacturer of railcars and truck trailers and a producer of specialty metal products.

The Midland Hilton recently received Mobil Travel Guide's Four-Star Award, one of the most prestigious honors in the food and lodging industry. This is the third consecutive year the Hilton has been a winner.

The Four-Star Award means that travel experts consider The Midland Hilton "outstanding — and worth a special trip." Of the more than 21,000 hotels, motels, resorts, and restaurants rated in 4,000 cities and towns in the United States and Canada, only 485 are 1981 recipients.

"It is a great honor to award four stars to the Midland Hilton," said Arnold J. Fury, manager, travel programs, Mobil Oil Corporation.

"We congratulate the entire staff for their excellence and consistent level of outstanding service."

"We're proud to receive this rating for a third time and thrilled to know that Mobil has seen fit to bestow this honor on the Hilton. As the only hotel in the area to receive this high rating we will continue to strive hard to meet the needs of both our out-of-town guests and local patrons by maintaining our quality service and eating area," said Al Stepp, general manager of the Midland Hilton.

Industrial production in Texas rose in December at an estimated 10.8 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate to a level 1.6 percent above a year earlier. The gain reflected increased output in all major components of the index.

The rise in factory output was almost equally divided between durable goods and nondurable goods. All durable goods industries posted gains in output with the exception of nonelectrical machinery and stone, clay, and glass products. The largest production increase posted in nondurable goods manufacturing was in printing and publishing, followed by chemicals and apparel. Production, however, was off in food, paper, textiles, and petroleum refining.

Increased production of crude oil accounted for the rise in mining output. Production of metal, stone, and earth minerals also rose, but the increase in drilling activity was smaller than usual for the month.

Reflecting the gain in factory output, the manufacturing capacity utilization index rose in December to 100.7 percent of the 1972 base.

Firm celebrates 30th birthday with reception

MIDLAND ATHLETIC CLUB

ODESSA — Womack/Claypoole/Griffin Advertising, Inc. celebrated its 30th birthday with a reception for Midland/Odessa clients at the Petroleum Club in Midland recently.

The Odessa office staff was joined by account executives from Dallas, Lubbock, and San Antonio offices.

"More than celebrating our agency's existence for 30 years, we recognized several clients who have been with us over 20 of those years," said T.W. "Jack" Womack, founder of the 1951 agency.

The Odessa-born agency today services 49 major clients with 1981 projected billings at $8.8 million. W/C/G offices employ 33 account executives, artists, media buyers and administrative staff.

The cost will climb

When they go to the polls Saturday, Midland voters will be asked to approve bond propositions calling for the construction of two new elementary schools at a cost of $5.6 million, and remodeling and renovation projects at both high schools at a cost of $1.05 million.

Both bond proposals should be approved. One of the proposed new elementary schools, each to be built at a cost of $2.8 million, would replace De Zavala Elementary in East Midland. The oldest portion of that facility was constructed in 1928 and additions were made later. Time and use have taken their toll. Today De Zavala suffers overcrowded conditions in the library, cafeteria and classrooms. Plumbing, heating and structural problems are apparent.

With a new school constructed for De Zavala students and another new elementary built in Northwest Midland, one problem of the school district that's nearing the critical stage would be addressed — overcrowding. Eight of the district's elementary schools already are at either capacity level for students or above capacity and in adaptive stages of use. In some schools stages, hallways and bookrooms are being used for classroom space.

Eight other elementary schools are nearing capacity. Contributing to the overcrowding in Midland's elementary schools are the in-migration to Midland, said to be growing at the rate of 7% per year, and the local birth rate, boosted by the fact that children from the 1950s baby-boom period are now at childbearing age.

While not solving all the problems for the city's elementary schools, the two new facilities would be helpful in relieving the situation.

The remodeling and renovation projects at Midland High and Lee High, while not as crucial as the two new elementary schools, are needs that should be addressed now.

Midland High's plans would involve the construction of a new library to replace the small, inadequate facility now available, renovation of the office area, and increasing the size of the band hall which was built to house 80 students but is now serving 180.

Office space problems at both high schools are similar in nature. Space is not available for private parent-teacher conferences and facilities for counseling services are inadequate. Those situations, too, need to be remedied.

Criticism has been levelled at school officials for allowing the schools to deteriorate to their present condition before addressing the problem; to a degree, that criticism appears justified.

We believe the board should consider designating more funds on a regular basis from the normal budget for minor repair and renovation projects before they become major and necessitate bond action by voters. That would help in the future, but it doesn't change the fact that repairs are needed now.

Midland children and young people deserve the best educational facilities that can be provided on a prudent basis. The longer the construction or renovation projects are postponed, the higher the ultimate bill will be. Latest figures show that construction costs in Midland are increasing at 2% per month. That means these proposals could cost an additional $1.4 million if postponed only one year.

That's too costly. It's time to build the two new schools and make the needed repairs to the high schools. The package may not be a bargain, but the price won't get any better.

Benjamin Hooks getting mileage out of Atlanta tragedy

WASHINGTON — As the NAACP's top man, Benjamin L. Hooks could shout and try to get mileage out of the children's tragedy in Atlanta, but he hasn't, and won't. Instead, Hooks says there's "no evidence of a racist plot," denounces those making "irrational and inflammatory" statements about the killings, and commends the Reagan administration's efforts in Atlanta.

Nick Thimmesch

He speaks this way when Atlanta is being trafficked by a stream of yahoos, charlatans, psychics, quick-buck artists — all exploiting the tragic situation. He talks common sense when many black leaders, including Washington's top two, are uttering dangerous nonsense.

A few weeks back, D.C. Mayor Marion Barry virtually suggested it was the Reagan administration which encouraged violence against blacks, and claimed that if the Atlanta children were white, the feds would rush in with bucks. Two weeks later, he changed the letter to read that if the victims "had been Jewish, the federal government would have moved faster."

The Rev. Walter Fauntroy, D.C.'s delegate to Congress, and a black, also tried the glandular approach by questioning the competency of the Atlanta police (whose top leadership is also black).

"We don't know whether the killer or killers are white or black," Hooks says. "It is very dangerous to ascribe race to a situation like this. We have enough race relations problems without finding them where they don't exist. If it develops that the killer is white, we can deal with that situation then. Meanwhile, such charges confuse and inflame the public. They also upset police work because inflammatory talk stirs up new situations. (Like vigilantes.)"

Hooks says that because of the Fauntroy challenge, "I made it a point to say that the Atlanta mayor, the police chief, and the special federal task force are doing as much as anybody can do. The FBI was working informally on the Atlanta cases during the Carter administration, and since then, Reagan put 25 agents in there. The task force Reagan sent is operating very efficiently and effectively."

According to Thaddeus Garrett, Jr., domestic policy adviser to Vice President Bush, the value of federal assistance to Atlanta for this case was $1.8 million, not counting the special $1.5 million grant recently announced by President Reagan. The investigation and special police work is costing Atlanta $7,700 a day, and police overtime is costing $116,000 a month. Some $100,000 is being spent to train teachers in how to instruct and counsel children about the dangers to them in Atlanta.

"There is no justification for the kind of critical remarks made in Washington recently," Garrett says. "Mayor Maynard Jackson himself said the Reagan administration responded swiftly and responsibly. I am a black man, if that makes any difference, and I am very proud of our work on this situation."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Strong aid program needed to save Haiti

WASHINGTON — Haiti, the world's oldest black republic, is in desperate economic straits. Through the Agency for International Development, the United States has been trying for seven years to alleviate the suffering of the impoverished Haitian people.

But the effort has been crippled by a unique combination of corruption among Haitian officials, incompetence by U.S. officials in Port-au-Prince and either ignorance or indifference on the part of AID higher-ups in Washington.

As I reported last week, Haiti's financial crisis can be traced partly to rising world fuel prices and the failure of the country's coffee crop last year. But insiders lay much of the blame on the systematic looting of the Haitian Central Bank by President Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier. In particular, he has diverted to his personal use millions in International Monetary Fund credits, with the result that IMF is about ready to cut Haiti off at the loan window.

The situation is made more order for a strong, decisive U.S. aid program. I reported last January that there is a sound selfish reason for the United States to help Haiti get back on its feet: The worse conditions become in Haiti, the greater will be the flood of poverty-stricken refugees from the island nation to our shores.

But the AID program in Haiti is a fiasco. One U.S. official in Haiti complained bitterly that our assistance effort is drifting hopelessly, like an overloaded refugee boat that has run out of gas. He told my associate Bob Sherman: "No one knows why we are here, what our interest is or what we are trying to achieve. By maintaining a large mission here we are just condoning the practices of the Duvalier government."

Jack Anderson

U.S. officials in Washington and Port-au-Prince explain that AID has never understood how to deal effectively and firmly with the Haitians.

"The program needs competent, skilled, experienced, adept leadership," said one source. "Our approach is wrong. We lump Haiti together with the Latin-American nations. But Haiti's culture — its heritage — is African, and should be approached from that perspective."

One disgusted AID official on the scene said the office he works in exists only to perpetuate itself. The AID director, he said, seeks continued funds for the same reason that some generals seek out war. "What's the point of being a general if you don't have a war?" the disgruntled official asked. "Generals keep old wars going and seek out new ones to legitimize their position."

Critics of the Haitian AID program have recently acquired a powerful ally — Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee's foreign operations subcommittee. The veteran legislator toured Haiti last month, and was appalled by what U.S. officials showed him.

"I was absolutely unimpressed with what I found there," he said. "They showed me proudly their 'appropriate

Desperate Tech degree could be your last chance

With education tuition soaring, student loans being cut to the bone, and the 1960s baby boom coming to an end, many colleges are desperately looking for warm bodies to fill their freshman classes.

For the first time schools are advertising for students in newspapers, magazines and on television.

An advertising agency recently made a presentation to the board of Desperate Tech University, which had decided to spend a million dollars trying to attract students.

Honeybee, the account executive, said, "Gentlemen, our surveys indicate that today's students are interested in sleeping late, partying and not being bugged about their studies. We have to go after this market and persuade them to come to Desperate Tech."

"How do you propose to do it?" a board member asked.

"First, we need a catchy slogan. How does this grab you? We show a TV commercial with John Belushi throwing food at his fraternity brothers, while they're teaching the science lab. A voice-over says, 'If you liked the movie 'Animal House,' you'll love the real thing at Desperate Tech.'"

"Won't that put Desperate Tech in a bad light?" one of the board members asked.

"Gentlemen, we have to resort to a hard sell. Our competitors are offering free cars to the kids, two-week paid vacations in Fort Lauderdale, and remedial rock music classes. If you expect to get a share of the freshman market, you're going to have to top them. Now here is a magazine layout I believe has tremendous student appeal. As you can see, it shows a co-ed in a wedding gown in front of the student chapel. The text reads, 'I went to Desperate Tech to get an education, but I wound up with something much better — a husband. He is going into his father's oil business, and we will start married life on a 10,000-acre ranch just outside Dallas. If I hadn't gone to Desperate Tech I might have wound up working in a massage parlor. There are many men like Ted and you won't have any trouble finding 'Mr. Right,' if you just fill out the coupon on the bottom of the page!'"

Honeybee continued his presentation. "Now I think we should also go into newspapers in a big way — on the comic pages. Here you see a puzzle. It is a series of numbered dots and the copy reads, 'If you can connect all these dots to each other, and make a football player out of them, then you've passed your entrance exam to Desperate Tech. If you fail to do it, we'll permit you to take a make-up exam in next week's comic pages.'"

"What else do you have?" someone asked.

"Well, this is another TV commercial. We show the president of the university standing in front of the administration, like Lee Iacocca does for Chrysler. He says, 'Desperate Tech is now offering the largest close-out sale in university history. We have to get rid of 100,000 college degrees by April 15. That's why we're offering $700 rebates to every college freshman who applies this month. Whether you're looking for a B.A. or a B.S., or just want to waste four years of your life, stop into one of our showrooms today and see why so many students are turning to Desperate Tech as an alternate to book-guzzling schools like Harvard.'"

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Because of the revelations of Rita Jenrette and lobbyist Paula Parkinson, I think we can safely say that the Congressional Record might be losing some of its readers to Playboy.

When more and more information on the Congress is increasingly to be found in the pages of Hugh Hefner's magazine, one has no choice but to forgo the titillating text of the Congressional Record and force oneself to yawn through the dreary pages of Playboy.

The lobbyist Parkinson wanted three members of Congress to vote against a federal crop insurance bill, although I realize you shouldn't talk about crop insurance in a family newspaper.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Don't expect perfection in partisan, political redistricting efforts

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a few days, legislators will be fully engaged — now that the Census Bureau data has been delivered — in the long-anticipated and premier issue of the 1981 Legislature: redistricting.

Redistricting never is an easy thing for legislators to undertake, since it involves the political existence of lawmakers.

And there are few things which inspire such passionate debate, obstinate stands, intricate planning, complex maneuvering or reports of wheeling and dealing.

An apocryphal story which captures the spirit of that wheeling and dealing during the "good old days" contends one congressional district's twists and convolutions were to take in some of the incumbent's relatives (and he apparently had been blessed with a large family).

Another story, more founded in fact, comes from a former legislator who relates how he was called in by some of his colleagues who had been charged with drawing up new legislative districts. He was shown his new district and was told that he was "protected" and would be expected to support the plan because that's what the leadership wanted.

In 1971, redistricting was used, in some instances, as an attempt to punish some members who hadn't gone along with the leadership in some instances — and the entire process was long, unpleasant and less than wholly successful, with a number of court battles resulting.

Ten years later, it appears that the House and Senate leadership are going into the new redistricting battle with the determination that the worst aspects of the 1971 struggle should be avoided.

Now, that's not to say there won't be lots of fighting, many hurt feelings, charges of "deals" being cut and minorities of all kinds (including individual lawmakers) not getting adequate representation.

Getting politics out of the redistricting process is impossible; it's, by its very nature, a political matter and partisan issues will be a part of the decisions. But, going into the fray, it appears that lawmakers are more conscious than in past sessions that partisanship has to be restrained, and other matters given consideration in redrawing district lines.

In part, that recognition is due to court decisions which have shown that the federal judiciary will tolerate a little fun and games redrawing districts, but any wholesale tampering with the idea of "one man, one vote" will result in those districts being redrafted down at the courthouse.

And, for the first time, Texas will redistrict under the Voting Right Act, which involves all sorts of guideline, suggestions, mandates, orders, clearance and pre-clearance procedures — all aimed at seeing that minority groups are given representation.

As Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, head of the House redistricting effort, points out, the only certain thing under the VRA is that lawmakers must carry out redistricting in a more conscious and informed way than ever before.

Both the House and Senate have been attempting to do that by a series of hearings in various parts of the state — and additional hearings are planned over the next month.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, head of the Senate's redistricting crew (the Senate is doing its work as a committee of the whole), says he thinks the redrawing of Senate districts won't result in any great shifts in the political balance.

The rural/urban balance, Santiesteban believes, will remain much as at present, although some rural districts are going to have to expand their territory. (Perhaps the best example there is Midland Sen. Pete Snelson's massive area, which may become the Austin-to-El Paso district by the time the process is completed.)

But while the rural districts may balloon further than they did 10 years ago, it's the metropolitan areas where the headaches will result, Santiesteban feels — and that's where the VRA requirements will come into play.

And the placement of the three new congressional districts which Texas will be adding also may cause some difficulties, although Santiesteban feels the districts will go one each to the Dallas, Houston and San Antonio-South Texas areas.

Where the House is concerned, Von Dohlen feels there won't be much change in the rural/urban division, but believes the change in metropolitan areas, with a shift of power between the central city and its suburbs, may result in some significant differences.

Metropolitan areas are being asked to identify their problems at the "out-reach" hearings and the delegations from those areas are being asked to help in working out problems.

And no one doubts there will be lots of problems — but it appears that the Legislatures should be in a better position to solve them this session than it has been in prior redistricting sessions, although the results are foredoomed to less than perfection.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not the problem

To The Editor:

This is in regard to the handgun control letter by Mary Cakl in last Sunday's letters section. I, too, am concerned about the violent crimes committed in this country, but do not believe a handgun ban is the answer.

History is a good teacher. Thirteenth century England had a per capita murder rate higher than any of our worst present day cities. The interesting point is that thirteenth century England had the purest form of handgun control — there were no handguns at that time. Murders were committed using knives, clubs, axes, etc. England's violence rate began dropping drastically only after sweeping social and economic changes were made in the nineteenth century, long before England's strict handgun laws were enacted (1920).

Ms. Cakl should know the facts when she talks about handguns. In a recent survey, over 3½ million Americans reported they use handguns for hunting wild game. Handgun hunting is a fast growing sport. Other uses for handguns include protection, target shooting and collecting. Of the estimated 60 million handguns in America, less than four tenths of one percent will be used in a violent crime in a given year. If a handgun ban was enacted, how effective would it be? How effective was prohibition? How effective are our very strict drug laws?

In my opinion what is needed is an improvement in our revolving-door justice system. Our country needs stricter courts to help curb violent crime.

Right (of) way

To The Editor:

This morning was just about the last straw! Almost every morning, coming to work is an experience in frustration, and it could be because I misunderstand the driving rules involved. Perhaps one of your reporters could find out how people should drive, at this trouble spot, for the most speed and safety.

We live off Highway 80, past FM 1369 (Holiday Hill Road), and weekday mornings between 7:40 and 8 a.m. are hectic. Traffic is extremely heavy then, with commuters rushing to work, and we drivers can't seem to agree on what the traffic layout really means for us to do.

Where southbound traffic on FM 1369 swings off to go west on Highway 80, there is no stop sign at the junction of the exit lane and the 80 access road. There is, however, a stop sign at the entrance to Highway 80 itself. My understanding is that cars coming off 1369 to go west on 80 have the right of way, and therefore do not need to stop for traffic on the 80 access road. (Traffic swinging east onto 80 itself must stop, of course.)

My frustration comes from really nice people who, wanting to give drivers on the access road a chance, will stop, instead of going on through to the highway entry lane. Drivers on the access road are taking their lives in their hands if they trust the first driver's courtesy, because the next guy in line may not be so considerate!

If I read the signals right, access road drivers are to wait until there is an opening in traffic on the exit road before crossing — and if this is so, the driver who stops on the exit road may close the "opening" just behind him. On a morning when traffic is heavy (and one is late for work), this can be a real irritation.

Do I read the signs wrong? Am I getting upset over someone's doing the right thing? It could be that more people than I would like to know the way it should be done.

In the long run

To The Editor:

I attended the school board meeting on Feb. 24, the day on which the items to be included in the school bond issue were decided. The Reporter-Telegram covered the bond election in detail the next day; however, there was an item earlier on the agenda which took well over an hour to present but was never reported to the public. That was item #2, Presentation of Objectives for Midland High School. This was a 6-page report given by a large group of Midland High School parents — a committee which included the wives of current school board members.

The first page of this report was titled "Action Items for the School Board" and is a list of improvements the committee wants immediately.

Briefly, "A" consists of: 1. new library; 2. larger band and choir rooms; 3. new gymnasium; 4. more office space; 5. new field house; 6. paving for marching band; and 7. a landscaping plan.

"B" describes a need for a competent building engineer. "C" reads, "Investigate the feasibility of relocating Midland High School in a completely new plant in approximately ten years."

After this report was completed, most of the seven items were placed on or built into the bond election. Only items 3 and 5 were not included this time.

There are those who believe the halls of MHS are hallowed and the grounds sacred and both should be preserved under any circumstances. Others acknowledge that the school is now in the middle of the business district and should be relocated. I do not think the taxpayers should be asked to remodel a school that might be abandoned in the near future for a new building (and another bond election). Maybe we can afford one or the other but not both!

I am in favor of academically equal high schools, but I oppose expensive short-term solutions to a long term problem. The citizens and the school board should decide definitely on whether to remodel permanently or rebuild before the public should be asked to support any bond at all!

Laser technology

To The Editor:

In 1977, T. Coleman Andrews a California business executive and CIS Director along with Ronald F. Docksa traveled through the Soviet Union as officially authorized U.S. representatives to an American conference in the U.S.S.R.

When the Soviets were questioned about the Soviets' developing a so-called "charge particle beam" or "death ray," conversations would stop. These representatives were not permitted to travel to Novosibirsk, the Soviet city where the laser weapon was reputed to be in the final stages of development. They weren't even permitted to ask questions about the matter.

The Soviets are spending three to four times as much as we are to develop what laser-beam technology has made possible, no doubt the deadliest, most invulnerable weapon of all time.

The U.S.S.R.'s military "space city" of Plesetsk in northwest Siberia is believed to be one of the largest space facilities in the world which is completely under military control. It was in this region a few years ago where reportedly the Soviets used a powerful laser to "blind" two U.S. satellites believed to have attempted to photograph the area.

Many among the international intelligence community believe the Soviets will use these laser weapons in a satellite or orbiting space station. You can imagine the additional power it would give the Soviets.

We need to urge our congressmen to set funds aside for American laser development. It's important so we can maintain our freedom. Write today!

On Agent Orange

To The Editor:

I wanted to take this opportunity to thank you and the newspaper as well as your reporter Sue Fahlgren for the stories you have been presenting in the paper on the issue of Agent Orange and how it has had an effect on the men involved in the Vietnam Conflict.

You have presented the case against Agent Orange and the plight of the Vietnam veteran as well as the battle the Viet vet is having with the military, the government and the Veterans Administration, not to mention the chemical companies, honestly, responsibly and with a caring that shows that The Midland Reporter-Telegram is concerned with justice to all involved.

My wife and I found that you took the time to check all of the facts to validate every statement with fact, and I believe you presented every side of the issue with absolute clarity.

The battle my wife and I had with the Veterans Administration in Houston could not have been won without the reporting you did on our case, although a large portion of our records are still "unaccounted for," we now have sufficient proof that our problems exist and that the cause can only be my contamination by the Dioxin-based poison "Agent Orange."

Also because of your involvement the Vietnam veteran has won important concessions from the VA that were not available before. The VA, of course, will deny this but we know that the timing of the new directive to the VA to let the veteran review his records with the VA doctors was not possible until after you went to work on this issue. So for the thousands of us who carry on, for the 65,000 who have committed suicide because of their sickness with this disease, for the thousands in hospitals today, for the 1,500 Australian vets who are dying of this malady, we want to thank you again for caring about what is happening to the "Ugly Americans" everyone wants to forget. We wish that everyone only knew how much the Vietnam veterans love America, so much in fact that he is still dying for it.

New line of fire

To The Editor:

I felt I must make my views on gun control public after reading the anti-gun letter to the editor published on March 22. I, too, grieve for the Dennis family. Indeed, it was a senseless loss of life. But, let's tackle the problem from an easier angle rather than try another prohibition-like solution. (We all know how well that worked.)

What I am in favor of is this:

1. harsh, mandatory sentences for any illegal act involving firearms
2. legislation (or whatever it takes) to prevent known felons from escaping prosecution because of technicalities in the judicial system
3. public seminars on firearm use and safety given by law enforcement officials or other qualified individuals (especially for women)

When my husband is gone, I feel much safer with the knowledge that I have a gun to use should a situation arise that I would need one. Unfortunately, it is law-abiding citizens like myself and Bill Dennis who must learn to protect themselves and their families. If we lived in an ideal society where everyone was God-fearing and law-abiding we wouldn't have this controversy. Our society, like people, is not perfect.

New York City is an excellent example of how well forced gun control will work in the U.S.A. if it is ever established. New York has very strict gun control laws and one of the highest crime rates in the U.S.

I would like to clarify a false statement made about handguns. People DO hunt wild game with handguns. My husband is one of the many that do. To say that handguns are manufactured for the sole purpose of killing human beings is totally and obviously false.

The last point I would like to convey is this:

If it ever came to pass that only law enforcement officials were allowed by law to have firearms, does anyone honestly believe that the gun owners of the U.S.A. would voluntarily hand over their guns? Some, maybe. Me, never.

'School supplies'

To The Editor:

Thank you and your staff for the excellent coverage of the Midland Independent School Board meetings and the listing of agendas prior to each meeting. Your factual reporting has been appreciated regarding the coverage of all aspects of the upcoming school bond election.

Citizens of our community who do not have school-age children could not have been aware of the ever increasing crises of the shortage of classroom space in our elementary schools. Eight elementary schools are now at or beyond capacity enrollment. Fifteen portable buildings are used as classrooms on these campuses. DeZavala Elementary is short of needed space in all areas of the school, but more importantly, it is appalling to have any child attend such an inadequate facility which was initially constructed in 1928.

The library at Midland High is very small and does not allow the library to be a satisfactory resource to the total instruction program. The band hall was originally built to accommodate 80 students, yet the band at MHS now has 186 students in the program. Inadequate office facilities at both our high schools hamper the overall administrative functions.

Our MISD School Board has done an admirable job in keeping the total cost of all these items as low as possible. The new elementary school in north Midland would be constructed on land already owned by the district, and the library at Midland High would be constructed in the existing patio area using existing walls and adding a translucent roof.

The board has also offered the voters of our district a choice by listing these items under two distinct votes. They have given us a chance to greatly improve our facilities and maintain our high-quality education. The cost of these improvements is a $19.69 increase in taxes each year on a $50,000 home.

Thank you for your factual coverage of this important issue.

My motives

To The Editor:

Two contributors to the letters column have observed that John Phipps and I have business connections with John Billingsley and are both on the City Council ballot. They appear to imply a conspiracy to control the council for personal gain. It's true that I'm president of Western State Bank and that Billingsley is a stockholder and chairman of the board. I serve as president at the pleasure of the stockholder and directors. We do not have a parent company.

The writers assume that both John Phipps and I would strictly vote Billingsley's interests. This line of thinking implies that anyone who works for a company, or bank, would vote only in the interests of his employer and suggests that only self-employed individuals should run for office. My main concern in seeking a council seat is to contribute to the critical decisions that affect the quality of life in Midland in the decades to come. That is why I am giving my time to the community of Midland by being a member and/or director of the Planning and Zoning Commission, Industrial Foundation and the Chamber of Commerce.

The fact is I am running independent of any particular interest, party or coalition. It is also a fact that most former and present councilmen have real estate interests in the city, which is their right. Property-owning taxpayers have a legitimate interest in the city's future.

Some people will always see conspiracies in random events. Most, however, are more reasonable about the motives of those who offer their time and energy to serve their community.

Caring candidates

To The Editor:

In response to the two letters in the paper last Sunday regarding the upcoming City Council election, let us consider the facts. It is obvious by their list of qualifications that each of the three candidates in question has a history of donating his time and efforts to civic organizations.

This history in each case predates any association with John Billingsley. To ignore the experience, talents and dedication offered to our city by George Veloz, John Phipps and Giffert Alstrin would be unfair and unfortunate not only to the candidates, but also to the citizens of Midland.

It seems obvious that someone is making a concerted attempt to discredit the three candidates. We should not let unwarranted and unjustified attacks mislead us into rejecting the contributions offered by these men.

More on guns

To The Editor:

This is in reply to Mary Ann Cakl's letter last week on handgun control. The killing of a Midland grocer was indeed senseless, but it does not necessarily demonstrate a need for handgun controls.

Why penalize all for the acts of a few. There are millions of hunters who like to hunt with a handgun, myself and two brothers included. Hunting with a handgun offers a challenge one does not get with a rifle. To take away one's right to possess a handgun means that we are one step closer to being a communist state.

How many of the 20,000 people killed by handguns are shot in self defense? Handgun control is not the answer and it is not the place to begin. Rather people should stop and think before they break the law, and ask themselves are the consequences worth it. Any one who supports handgun control should look at all aspects impartially.

See for yourself

To The Editor:

I urge anyone who doubts the need for the upcoming school bond election to visit our schools and to consider the obvious growth of Midland.

The items for which this bond money will be used are absolutely essential; and unless these needs are met, it will be impossible to maintain, much less improve, the quality of our public school education. In any community, the quality of education available affects everyone, young and old; and although none of us likes higher taxes, a first hand look at the current conditions will make the modest tax increase appear to be what it really is, a wise investment in the future of Midland.

Go see for yourselves and then vote in favor of education in the April 4th school bond election.

Old wives' tales tell what you want to hear

"I hear if you sneeze seven times in a row, you'll just die."

"That's not true," countered an enlightened friend.

"But seven times?"

"That's a lot of sneezes and an old wives' tale, which, like all tales, is embedded in truth. Somebody, somewhere, sometime probably died on the seventh sneeze."

Without the coincidence of experience, there would be no fiction, no "old wives' tales," no folklore, no vicarious living, no drama, nothing. Imagination is nourished by the fuel of experience.

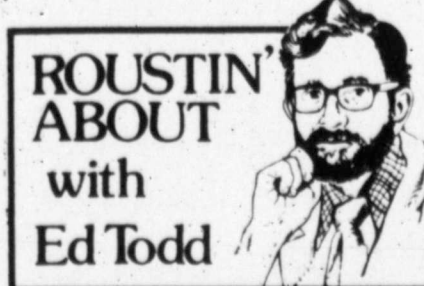

The black cat tale, just like the one about the broken mirror bringing seven years of bad luck, is rooted in experience. Some unfortunate soul may have shattered a mirror under circumstances he easily could not forget and connected the broken glass to an unhappy seven years. Maybe the busted mirror coincided with the cyclic seven-year drought or the seven-year itch or the last seven years of the Hundred-Year War.

There's a rotten apple in every crate, and busted crackers in every box.

A squirt of chewing tobacco will take away the sting of a wasp. That's true. A rolled bird, cat, ant, dog will attack, scratch, sting, bite or bark. So will a boss or spouse.

A dirty rag bears tales.

A shot of whiskey and a dram of honey may not cure your aches and coughs and minor pains, but the prescription could lessen your consciousness. Given enough shots, you may discover that the booze may lead you, and others, to tell tales of a different sort.

That apple a day may not help you avert the physician's bitter pill and big bill, but it's wholesome food. Like carrots, cabbage, lettuce and other raw foods, the favored apple will help purge the more obvious "poisons" from your amazingly durable and forgiving body; but it can survive punishment and abuse for just so long before it starts to collapse.

Rats in the house will keep company out. So will a hostile host.

Enough. Just for your own amusement, you could conjure up your own taboos and folk superstitions. They might catch on and become a part of folklore.

The enterprising people who were marketing the Dr Pepper soft drink years ago came up with the 10-2-and-4 formula. That could have been the beginning of an old wives' tale: three bottles a day of the old carbonated prune-juice drink supposedly restored regularity and vitality and saved on the doctor's bills.

But for some reason, the bottlers no longer harp on 10-2-and-4. But they still want to pep you up. And plain ol' prune juice will do that; that's no empty tale.

Strength to Families Seminar: Focus on transition

When the Jackson family moved here from Houston they immediately found themselves in a confused state of transition.

While they were pleasantly relieved to be away from the traffic, congestion and overcrowding inherent in a larger city, they were thrown into a new environment; absent of family, friends and other social ties. Attempts to readapt to a different situation did not bring the family closer together and each member rapidly isolated themselves from another. Involved in their own feelings of unhappiness and loneliness, conversations at the dinner table stopped and every discussion became heated and explosive.

The "Strength to Families Seminar," conducted by Family Services of Midland will be held here April 4 to address some of the problems related to relocation in a new town and to explore methods to overcome a sudden uprooting. Seminars which will be held throughout the day include, Humor and the Healthy Family, Life Maps: Planning for Change, Adolescence: A Time of Transition, The Corporate Wife: Dilemma or Fulfillment? and Switching Roles: From Businessman to Family Man.

"Some families move here from other parts of the country and like it and don't like it at the same time," said Sara Ellingson, director of family life education for Family Services. "With the amount of mobility in this community, it is difficult to establish close relationships."

Because Midland's growth has tended to create a "corporate family," there are more social pressures than in less class-conscious communities. "Family members may feel as though people are constantly watching," said Mrs. Ellingson. "There is a lot of pressure here on measuring success by power and money. This competitiveness creates a lack of confidence if people aren't making the 'X' amount of money they've set themselves up for. They tend to view it as a personal failure."

ording to Mrs. Ellingson, is to set aside a set of "healthy family characteristics" to help families become aware they can iron out their problems, instead of avoiding them, by realizing they are responsible for their own decisions. At issue is whether the husband has chosen to make $100,000 a year and stay away from his family 40 hours a week or has chosen to make $20,000 a year in order to maintain closer family ties.

In a strong family, "each individual takes responsibility for his/her thoughts, feelings and actions," Mrs. Ellingson said. The language of responsible families avoids such phrases as "he made me feel," "you should," or "you have to."

A strong family also has a set of values which is shared and understood. The family may not frequently speak of these values, but they are present. The values may be based in a common religious or spiritual orientation. The phrase, "the family that prays together, stays together" reflects this characteristic of family strength.

This is not to say, however, that all families who are strong have a Christian faith, Mrs. Ellingson said. "Indeed, other cultures and value systems have similar strengths depicting a family unity, but with an atheistic or agnostic value base.

Family strength is evident in the ability of adults to continue their interpersonal and individual growth. The adults or parents share the power of decision-making," Mrs. Ellingson said. "They are not in the relationship to win or lose, or to make points against each other by colluding with an outsider. The feeling of respect for each other is present, even though the conditions may differ — yes, they can and do disagree."

People often feel if they're healthy they won't disagree. "That's unrealistic," Mrs. Ellingson said. "A healthy family isn't always a happy family. The health of a disagreeing couple is that they do not try to undermine or humiliate, but they allow each other room for expression and growth.

Some families often have a difficult time sliding through relocations and moves to new towns.

Above all, they listen to each other. Strong families are also characterized by the ability of adults to show affection openly and spontaneously to each other."

The family, like the marriage, learns about power and decision making. When children are present, the strong family finds a pattern or routine for making decisions. Perhaps the decision-making powers are shared equally among all members or only between parents. Another pattern may occur when one parent is the dominant individual and makes most of the decisions or at least has the final say or veto power.

The strong family has developed a pattern which is accepted by all members. If no pattern for power or leadership is present, conflict and confusion may seem to be ever present.

Too often, families are viewed from a point of pathology or "what's wrong." In view of the fact that strong communities are made up of strong, healthy families, the Family Services staff will emphasize the positive characteristics, rather than the negative aspects in the one-day seminar which marks the 2nd Annual Family Day held in Midland.

Humor and the healthy family

Dr. Douglas Brady, who is in group practice with the Neurology Associates of Fort Worth and is a clinical psychologist, will be conducting the April 4 workshop on "Humor and the Healthy Family."

Dr. Brady will discuss the characteristics of healthy families and examine the importance of humor in families. He will guide workshop participants to an understanding of humor as a healthy characteristic in contrast to its use as a destructive manipulation.

The topic of humor is a relatively new area of study, but it is a quality which is always present in family interactions in some form.

"Too often people are drawn to focus on the problems of their life," Dr. Brady said. "We are quite aware that families experience problems. We can even list the behaviors which troubled families or individuals exhibit."

Recently the Family Service of America and other professionals involved in the helping professions have begun to examine the characteristics of healthy families. "Not only does this provide a more favorable tone, but it allows families to look at their own behaviors and dynamics and set a goal to attain," he said.

Dr. Douglas O. Brady

Previous to entering group practice, Dr. Brady was chief clinical psychologist at the Child Study Center in Fort Worth.

His expertise in the psychological dynamics of adults and children has afforded him the privilege of consultation with Mental Health/Mental Retardation centers, the Fort Worth Independent School District and the Child Study Center Autism Project.

Corporate wife: Dilemma or fulfillment?

What is the role of the corporate wife? Relocations and job promotions are accepted in corporate families, however, often the wife questions what is expected of her. This can cause stress and guilt for the woman whose situation, until recently, has not been addressed.

Research has shown that many women spend less than two hours conversing with their husbands and the same amount of time in interaction with their children. What about the remaining hours? What if she is in a new location without family or friends?

Most companies dispense information, sympathy and money to ease the pain of uprooted families. Still, this may not be enough to lessen the import of relocation.

Relocation and other issues affecting the corporate wife will be explored by lecture, discussion and handouts in a seminar conducted by Family Services staff member and counselor, Linda George.

She will lead participants in discussing the most effective solutions in overcoming feelings of depression, loneliness and stress.

The need for services from an agency such as Family Services comes when help from relatives, friends, neighbors, churches or other community groups is not enough. Even though such supportive environments are present, they, at times must be supplemented with some extra professional help from the staff at Family Services.

Adolescence: A time of change, rebellion and apprehension

Why is it so difficult to live with your teenager? Many parents respond to this question with a shrug of defeat and go on with little hope of establishing a harmonious relationship with their adolescent.

Some parents anticipate the teen years with apprehension. Others approach these years with enthusiasm, soon to discover that their open, level-headed child has become secretive and rebellious.

As part of the Family Services of Midland Second Annual Family Day, staff members, Karen Wickmire and Sara Ellingson will present a workshop on understanding the adolescent. The workshop will focus on three major areas: emotional and mental development of the adolescent, typical behaviors of adolescence and parental coping skills. A short film entitled "Becoming an Adult: Psychological Tasks of Adolescence" will also be presented.

The first area of focus includes an examination of the transitional process from childhood to adulthood. During the teen years, the adolescent no longer thinks as a child nor does he or she yet react as an adult.

As workshop participants gain an understanding of the mental process peculiar to adolescence, they will then explore the types of behavior the thought processes elicit. Finally, participants will have an opportunity to examine their feelings and explore varying methods of coping with adolescence.

Most difficulties between parents and children stem from the misconceptions among parents that they have total control over their children, according to Mrs. Ellingson. "If I told my daughter not to wear lipstick to school, she's going to find a way to do it anyway."

Mrs. Ellingson said in the past, parents initiated a strictly authoritarian approach to treatment of their teenage children, but with the onset of social unrest in the 60s children suddenly were treated as adults. "It was the total other end of the pendulum," she said. "Both extremes can't work. Just because your child has reached the age of 13 or 14, doesn't mean he's a different person. Parents kick themselves real hard when they wonder what they have done wrong."

Parents often seem to forget their own childhoods and lose perspective on what it was like to be a teenager. Mrs. Ellingson said the seminar will try to bring parents in focus with the average characteristics of a typical adolescent.

"They're moody, rebellious and secretive," she said. "There is a lot of polarities in their attitudes and behavior."

Life maps: Planning for change

Success or failure. All individuals, marriages and families face a number of predictable transitions and crises that can lead either to greater growth and fulfillment or toward bitterness and emptiness. Life maps can help individuals, couples and families identify, plan for and even use these transitions and crises as opportunities for growth and renewal.

This will be the subject of the presentation, "Life Maps: Planning for Change," conducted by John Young, Family Services staff member and counselor.

In her book, "Passages: Predictable Crises in Adult Life," Gail Sheehy provides one such life map in terms of various stages of adult life — from the young adult pulling up roots, (age 18 to 22) to the later years of renewal or resignation, (age 40 to 65).

Each of these stages of adult life requires one to deal anew with the issue of who one is and what life is about.

It is particularly when one enters the transition periods between one stage and the next that the most transitions occur. These transitions are often marked by change in jobs, divorce, remarriage or a general attempt to recapture what seems to be missing from life.

Just as Gail Sheehy provides a map of the stages of adult life, Susan Campbell, in her book, "The Couple's Journey," provides a map of the stages of marriage. She discusses the negative pitfalls and positive responsibilities of the five stages of intimacy: romance, power struggle, stability, commitment and co-creation.

This last stage, co-creation, involves the use of what has been learned in establishing a creative and fulfilling relationship to work for a better world.

In the book, "The Family Life Cycle," Elizabeth Carter and Monica Gold describe five stages of family development. Each stage requires the successful managing of specific emotional and organizational tasks for the family to best provide for the physical and psychological needs of each family member. The additional stages involved in divorce and remarriage are also discussed.

Based on these books, seminar-presenter John Young will conduct his workshop on how participants can use these and other life maps to achieve richer, more satisfying individual, marital and family lives.

Mapping out stages of adult life better enable one to successfully manage transitions and move toward identity rather than confusion, toward intimacy rather than isolation and toward integrity rather than despair.

Switching roles: From businessman to family man

Charles and his wife, Elaine, have been married for 15 years. They have two children, aged 11 and 9. Charles has worked his way up in the company and now enjoys prestige, respect and a good salary.

He and Elaine have everything they wanted; everything they planned for when they were married. Charles is happy with his life. He loves his work and finds himself spending less and less time at home. One day, his wife tells him she is unhappy and is going to see a marriage counselor and would like him to come with her.

This scene is played out in Midland and across the nation on a daily basis. Family Services staff member and counselor, David Hickman, will explore this issue in the presentation, "Switching Roles: From Businessman to Family Man."

A film entitled "Men's Lives," will be shown, dealing with the socialization of men from childhood to adulthood. A presentation of issues facing men caught in the role of businessman and family man will also be discussed, followed by a group discussion of those issues.

Topics that will be confronted include: competitiveness, aggressiveness versus nurturing, developing intimacy, the effects of changing roles of women and switching from manipulation to honesty.

The seminar is being conducted with both men and women in mind; for men who want to be able to handle their two roles in life more effectively and for women who are interested in understanding men better. There will also be handouts and a display of some of the latest literature written in this area.

Workers prepare land near Fort Stockton for a vineyard. The University of Texas owns the land and hopes to begin producing commercial quantities of Texas wine within the next five years.

UT may soon be banking on another precious liquid

By MARK MITCHELL
The Odessa American

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas, already wealthy from more than 2 million acres of oil-rich West Texas endowment land, is hoping the same land will yield another precious liquid in the future — wine.

Workers planted 170 acres of grapes in the desert off Interstate 10 between here and Bakersfield last month, establishing the largest infant vineyard in the state. School officials envision a fortune from the harvest for the university system eventually.

"It is by far the largest single planting that ever took place in Texas," said Billy Carr, university lands surface rights manager. "I've been in lots of projects, but this is by far the most exciting because of the potential."

At present the planting site is little more than a sea of thin wooden stakes driven into the bleak prairies of the Permian Basin. But planters believe those stakes may mark the beginning of a giant new industry in West Texas.

"We've never seen a hotter world market than the one for wine," Carr said.

Experimental university vineyards on school-owned acreage in Pecos, Culberson and Reeves counties have already grown grapes that are hardy, cold resistant and not glutinous for water. Carr says they are well suited to the sunny, dry climate here.

They also yield high profits — if you can stand the initial investment. Gene Drennan, vineyard project director, said it takes $4,500 to $6,000 per acre to get started — "assuming you own the land and equipment and are already in the farming business."

But — once the vines are mature, they can bring $750 to $1,000 per area per year, and Drennan said a healthy grapevine can produce grapes for up to 50 years.

He began planting the vineyard last month, hiring laborers in Fort Stockton for such chores besides planting as inspecting water pipes for leaks and distributing hoses for a low-pressure drip irrigation system.

A fence-building crew drove 80,000 stakes into the ground and dug holes for the baby plants. Land clearing and well-digging began in the area last year.

The 170 acres is just a start, said scientific advisor for the project Charles McKinney of Odessa. If it works here — and researchers will know after a couple of years — they plan to turn 40,000 to 60,000 acres of school-owned land into vineyards.

"One thousand acres yield a million gallons of wine. The statewide consumption for wine last year was 30 million gallons. So if we went ahead and planted the 60,000 acres, you'd have twice as much wine as the state consumes," said McKinney.

The trick, Carr said, is to get wineries to locate on school lands next to the vineyards, buy the locally grown grapes and send the wine to national and world markets.

"There are a lot of people who are interested," he said.

If the project fulfills the dreams of its planners, years from now wine connoisseurs in New York or Paris might sit down in a gourmet restaurant and demand "Pecos, vintage 1985."

Is human life priceless?

By MOLLY SINCLAIR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a recent court case here, the estate of an unborn fetus was awarded damages totaling $75,000.

The federal government is willing to pay $30,000 a year to provide dialysis treatment for a kidney patient, but refuses to pay $70,000 for a heart transplant.

And an economic index used by the government for health planning puts the "value" of a 34-year-old white man at $328,475 and an 85-year-old black woman at $236.

How is it, in a society where life is supposedly priceless, that the courts and government have come regularly and routinely to place price tags on human life, particularly price tags that vary so enormously?

In part, the answer is that there really is no choice. Judges and juries have to make those decisions in everything from airline crashes to nightclub fires. In the case of government, as a federal economist has put it, "whenever public spending decisions are made, values are implicitly attached to life," whether it be for public health or highway safety appropriations.

And, as the same economist, Dorothy P. Rice, said in one study:

"Attaching a dollar figure to death — that is, determining how much a life is worth — is an emotion-laden issue."

HOW, THEN, is it done?

Essentially, economists calculate the earnings that a person can expect to collect over a lifetime, based on normal life expectancy as well as sex and race. The earnings figures, which in this case do not attempt to take into account such variables as education and type of job, typically are available through the U.S. Census Bureau and the Department of Labor. Since many women are full-time homemakers who don't have a salary, economists traditionally have factored into the earnings chart a "value" for housewives' services. Without that added value, the price tag for women would be even lower than it is.

Economists also determine the pattern of earnings for a person from birth to old age. They plot the point in midlife when a person's maximum earnings are still ahead. For a white man, for example, that tends to be around the ages of 30 to 34; for a woman, 20 to 24. Then, working backward from that point, the economists assign $ present-day value to the lifetime earnings for the very young who, like a bottle of newly made wine, haven't reached their prime. Finally, working forward from the midlife point, the economists take into account the gradual decline in earnings as the person ages. And then they plot all the data on a chart.

Critics say such charts are discriminatory because they imply that men are more valuable than women, whites more valuable than blacks and the middle-aged more valuable than the very young and the very old.

But the earnings approach, which dates to 1915, is the most common formal method used by economists to compute the value of life. And despite complaints about its shortcomings, it is regarded by economists like Rice as the only method that yields consistent, reliable numbers.

THERE IS ONE OTHER WAY that value is sometimes attached to life for statistical or legal reasons. It is called "willingness to pay," and it reflects how much a person or an institution will spend to combat accident, illness or death. For example, a sick person may be willing to pay $25 for a doctor's help but not $50. And an institution may be willing to spend $10,000 to install a safety device but not $100,000.

It was the life earnings calculation that formed the basis for the decision in the case of the fetus. And it was the earnings index that represents the chasm between the assigned value of the 34-year-old white man and the elderly black woman.

ECONOMIST RICE, an author of this index and director of the National Center for Health Statistics, said the first time she gave a paper discussing an earnings chart, "a well-known doctor on the panel with me was horrified. He said a life is a life is a life and how dare you put a value on it."

"But I really feel that if you understand how to use these numbers, there is no problem in using them."

There are times, however, when the index isn't appropriate, Rice said. "When you are talking about a program to save a child's life...and compare that program to one that would save an adult, obviously the one for the adult would come out most favorably (on the earnings index)."

"For such comparisons, you should pay attention to other measures — you must be careful how you apply those numbers."

She said, however, that the index can be "an excellent tool" for comparing programs affecting similar age groups.

As for "willingness to pay," the other main method of determining the value of life, it is at the heart of the federal government's decision, so far, to pay for kidney dialysis. The government also paid for heart transplants during one eight-month period. But last year officials stopped funding the transplant program because, in their opinion, it was experimental and therefore not eligible for federal funding. Now there is some concern that the dialysis program also may be affected by the administration's efforts to trim federal spending, but no official decision has been made.

WILLINGNESS TO PAY is also at the center of an ongoing battle between business and regulators over cost and benefits of an array of pollution, health and safety rules.

One of the most revealing of those disputes is the cotton dust case now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

On one side is the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which wrote standards to limit cotton dust exposure in mills and thus limit the risk of a serious lung illness, byssinosis or brown lung.

On the other side is the textile industry, which opposes those standards as expensive far beyond their supposed benefits.

OSHA says that, without the standards (which it says would cost $655 million to implement), 83,760 workers would get byssinosis. That translates to $8,000 per case avoided.

But the industry estimates that fewer than 8,000 would develop brown lung without the standards and that the cost to conform would be $1.1 billion. That works out to more than $100,000 per case avoided.

Baker determined to make 1981 'Reagan's year'

His commitment includes passage of budget; tax cuts

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Chief, Washington Bureau
Hearst Special News Service

WASHINGTON — "I want this year to be Ronald Reagan's year," said the Senate majority leader — who not long ago was hoping desperately that 1981 would be Howard Baker's year.

With that comment, Baker signalled not only his loyalty to the man who defeated him in the 1980 Republican presidential sweepstakes but also his determination to prevent peripheral, emotional issues from slowing congressional progress on Reagan's economic recovery program.

The Tennesseean's commitment is to forestall until next year Senate consideration of the controversial Moral Majority-New Right social agenda that includes constitutional prohibition of abortion and busing, provisions to permit prayer in public schools and tax credits for parents who send their youngsters to private schools.

Baker is convinced that the success or failure of Reagan's presidency — and the future of the Republican Party — depend on expeditious congressional action on the monumental package of budget and tax cuts submitted by the administration.

By the time the 1982 elections roll around, said Baker, "the public perception has to be that we're on the right track" — which means a decline in the rates of inflation and unemployment, increased productivity and economic activity and a stronger U.S. position on the international scene.

His priority and his target, therefore, are to concentrate Senate attention on the president's economic program so that Congress can adjourn by Oct. 1.

If this is to be Ronald Reagan's year, suggested Baker, then Congress must defer consideration of "those important issues...those emotional issues" that formed the fundamental core of Reagan's campaign for the presidency over many years.

In declaring that position publicly at a breakfast meeting with a small group of reporters Thursday, Baker may have endeared himself to Reagan and his White House team. But he also, for the first time since becoming majority leader in January, drove a wedge between himself and the ultra-conservative wing of his party.

The Republican right, led by senators like Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Orrin Hatch of Utah, has made clear its intentions to move forward with consideration of social issues this year — whether Baker approves or disapproves of such action.

In the end, Baker, with the support of Democrats and moderate Republicans, should prevail. But, in seeking to ensure Reagan's success, he probably will further alienate himself from the Republican right, while Reagan himself drifts along unscathed.

The Baker-Reagan relationship — in which the Senate majority is led by a man whose presidential bid was killed by the man in the White House — has had no parallel since the beginning of Gen. Eisenhower's presidency in 1953. In that era, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio — the "Mr. Republican" of his day — took command of the Senate GOP forces after being beaten narrowly by Ike in his third campaign for his party's presidential nomination.

But within a few months of Ike's inauguration, Taft was dead of cancer. The following year, the Republicans lost control of the Senate to the Democrats and Lyndon Johnson became majority leader.

Unlike Taft, who was 62 and ailing when Eisenhower became president, Baker, at a vigorous 55, may still harbor presidential ambitions. Along with Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State Alexander Haig, he could prove a serious contender to succeed Reagan.

At some point down the political road, he may have to carve out an independent position for himself. For the moment, however, he is totally loyal to Reagan.

Had he been nominated and elected in 1980, Baker was asked, how would his legislative program have differed from Reagan's?

Throwing his head back and laughing, the Tennesseean replied, "Oh, the indignity of it all."

He then explained that while "I might have views that differ from those of the president...it would undermine my position to express them."

Baker added: "One of my jobs in the Senate is to carry the president's flag."

Deep on the ocean floor some 50 miles east of Cape Charles, Va., lies the hulk of the S.S. Merida, still glutted with a treasure of gold and silver bars and jewels estimated to be worth anywhere from $2 million to $20 million.

Untold thousands of dollars have been spent by treasure hunters to get at the loot, but all the stubborn old wreck has yielded is a safe with nothing of value in it and one silver bar worth peanuts.

The Merida sank May 12, 1911, on a trip from Vera Cruz, Mexico, to New York, carrying some of Mexico's wealthiest families fleeing that country's revolution. She was rammed by the United Fruit Line ship Admiral Farragut and went down without loss of life, but her treasures, supposedly including Emperor Maximilian's jewels, sank with her.

There is quite a story behind those jewels. Count Hermann of Hapsburg reportedly stole them from the temple of Aama in Burma and took them back to Austria. When the theft was discovered, the high priest of the temple put a curse on the thief and his family and anyone else who would come in contact with them.

Emperor Franz Joseph took the jewels away from Count Hermann and threw him in jail, where he died a maniac. Later Franz Joseph gave them to Maximilian and his wife Carlotta, who took them to Mexico. Maximilian was shot to death by a firing squad, and Carlotta died after a long period of insanity.

I throw that in for the benefit of any future treasure hunters who want to take on the Merida.

Some attempts to get at the treasure failed because the salvagers simply couldn't find the wreck. Others were ill prepared.

The most determined effort was made by Capt. Harry L. Bowdoin, an adventurer and inventor who was to die at his Baltimore home in 1935 at the age of 66, still planning another assault on the ship.

Capt. Bowdoin believed that the proper approach to treasure hunting was intelligent engineering, and he designed a remarkable all-metal diving suit with jointed arms and legs. The arms could be moved in four different directions. The claw-like hands could pick up an object as small as a coin. Large searchlights sat on the shoulders.

His suit reportedly could take a diver 60 feet down.

In addition he constructed a diving bell to be used as an observation chamber. That was to be manned by two men who would give instructions to the diver by telephone and report progress to the men on the salvage ship.

Confident his apparatus would lead to success, Bowdoin found backing from a group of wealthy New York bankers and, in 1931, set out to find the wreck. With him were his son Laurence and Theodore Miller, both students at Johns Hopkins University, and a nephew, David A. Hughes, also of Baltimore.

That first year the captain struck out, but the following year he located the wreck and his find was duly reported in the newspapers. That led another expedition to get in the act, and in 1933 Bowdoin and the other group arrived at the scene at the same time. For a while there was a standoff as to who would do the salvaging.

Eventually the competition retreated, although claiming Bowdoin's ship had committed an act of piracy by crossing their ship's bow and cutting an anchor chain.

Left to the wreck himself, Bowdoin sent his divers down, but they were unable to find the strong room containing the treasure. The captain returned to Baltimore empty-handed, still determined to find backers for another attempt. He died before it could be made.

The last attempt on record to salvage the Merida was made by a group of Italians who found the wreck in 1938 and set off a dynamite charge which was supposed to open the way to the strong room. Instead it caused the upper deck to collapse.

America's morning ritual: How dangerous is it?

By MOLLY SINCLAIR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Each morning, in Lou DeMouy's Maryland home, there is a small but unchanging ritual that provides him with a large measure of comfort and a little bit of a kick before he heads to his job as a government economist.

That ritual, of course, is built around the coffee that DeMouy drinks. "It gives me a lift, and I like the taste," he said, as he waited for the clerk at the coffee specialty store to grind and bag the Colombian blend that he had just purchased for $3.95 a pound.

DeMouy — like millions of other Americans — continues his morning coffee ritual, day in and day out. Yet an increasing number of reports by government and other researchers are raising new questions about the safety or health effects of caffeine. The studies have linked caffeine to a wide range of disorders from insomnia and nervousness to heart disease and birth defects.

THE FINDINGS HAVE NOT been sufficiently conclusive for scientists to condemn caffeine outright. But enough evidence has been compiled that they generally aren't willing to give caffeine a completely clean bill of health, either.

"We don't know if caffeine is safe or unsafe," said Dr. Sanford Miller, director of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's bureau of foods. "But the questions are there, and my recommendation would be that if you are in a susceptible group — a pregnant woman or a young child still undergoing brain development — you should limit your intake of caffeine. It is the prudent thing to do."

"Why take a chance?" he concluded.

Here is the essence of the concern:

— Pregnant women are advised to avoid caffeine because tests show it can pass from their bloodstream through the placenta to the fetus. Caffeine also has been detected in the milk of mothers who breastfeed. Although there is no proof that caffeine causes birth defects in humans, the FDA has found that high doses of caffeine force-fed to pregnant rats caused birth defects in the rats' offspring. Defects included cleft palates, deformed faces and partly or completely missing digits — the equivalent of missing fingers or toes in humans.

— Young children up to about 8 years of age whose brains still are developing should have only limited amounts of caffeine, which they typically get from soft drinks. "The concern is that caffeine might impair the development of the brain or central nervous system," an FDA spokesman said.

— Adults who consume excessive amounts of caffeine — usually more than one gram of caffeine a day, the equivalent of 10 cups of coffee — have been found to suffer from "caffeinism," a syndrome characterized by nervousness, irritability, agitation, headaches and muscle-twitching. When a heavy caffeine user suddenly reduces his consumption, perhaps by drinking less coffee or cola, the person often develops severe headaches.

DOES THAT MEAN coffee drinkers should abstain?

"I drink coffee and I will continue to drink it — but I'm not in a susceptible group," the FDA's Miller said. He and other experts generally agree that, except in the case of pregnant women and young children, moderate consumption of coffee and other sources of caffeine by the average adult hasn't been shown to cause harm.

But what is moderate for one person may be excessive for someone else.

Lee Johnson, a 29-year-old Washington writer, said that he limits himself to one cup of coffee a day, explaining: "If I drink two or three cups, I really feel it...so I have just one cup."

But Muriel Anderson, a cheery blond of 64, said she drinks as many as seven cups a day (some of them only partly filled) without side effects.

"I make three or four pots of coffee a day, and always one at 10 p.m. just before my husband gets home from work," she said.

America's passion for coffee — the main source of caffeine in the U.S. diet — dates to the American Revolution, when unhappy colonists sought a substitute for tea, which had become politically symbolic and unpopular at about the time some of them dumped it into the harbor during the Boston Tea Party.

ORIGINALLY DISCOVERED in Ethiopia, coffee is grown today mostly in Latin America. Through the years it has become the cornerstone for the typical American meal. An estimated 56.6 percent of the U.S. population over age 10 now drinks coffee.

In a report issued earlier this month, Harvard University scientists said that they had found a link between coffee-drinking and cancer of the pancreas. But the scientists said they think something in coffee other than caffeine may be the cause, although caffeine was not ruled out. The Harvard group also acknowledged that the association between coffee and cancer of the pancreas isn't yet proved, and that more studies are needed.

In its pure state, caffeine is a white powder that has been described as a mass of glistening, white needles. It occurs naturally in an estimated 63 plant species that include, besides the coffee bean, the leaves of tea, the cocoa bean and the kola nut.

A drug that acts on the central nervous system, caffeine constricts the blood vessels, speeds up the heart and stimulates the brain, stomach, gut, kidneys and gonads. It has the effect of an amphetamine on some people who consume large amounts of caffeine, pepping them up at least temporarily and leaving them with withdrawal pains if they suddenly reduce their caffeine intake.

Coffee, tea and cola drinkers generally are aware that those beverages contain caffeine: 75 to 155 milligrams in one five-ounce cup of coffee, 28 to 44 milligrams in one five-ounce cup of brewed tea, and 32 to 65 milligrams per 12-ounce can of cola or "pepper" drink.

But besides those three basic sources of caffeine, there is a variety of foods and products from which consumers regularly and routinely receive a dose of caffeine. They get it when they sip cocoa, munch a candy bar or take a stay-awake pill, a diuretic or a headache tablet other than aspirin. The amount of caffeine ranges from a modest 5 milligrams for a cup of cocoa to a hefty 200 milligrams for a Vivarin alert tablet.

CONSUMERS ALSO GET TRACE AMOUNTS of caffeine when it is added — generally in the form of a coffee flavoring — to baked goods, frozen dairy products, soft candies, gelatins and puddings.

The Food and Drug Administration estimates that 2 million pounds of caffeine is added to foods in the United States each year. Most of this goes into soft drinks, in accordance with traditional corporate recipes for cola and "pepper" beverages and in compliance with government rules intended to standardize those products.

The basis for the federal regulation goes back nearly a century to Atlanta druggist John S. Pemberton. Working over a three-legged pot in his backyard, Pemberton produced a cola drink from kola nut extract and an added pinch of caffeine. The extra pinch supplemented the caffeine naturally present in the kola nut and helped give Pemberton's cola drink its distinctive taste. Pemberton later sold the rights to the drink to The Coca-Cola Co.

Still later, federal regulators sought to impose a standard for soda water contents and labeling and decided to require the extra pinch of caffeine in any drink bearing the cola or "pepper" name on the label. The maximum amount of caffeine in such drinks is .02 percent of the total weight of the product. If no caffeine is added, the company must use a name other than cola or "pepper."

NOW, BECAUSE OF GROWING QUESTIONS about caffeine, the FDA wants to change its rule to eliminate the requirement that caffeine be added and allow the marketing of decaffeinated cola and "pepper" drinks.

Soft drink manufacturers, however, oppose the proposed rule change.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Scabies outbreaks run in cycles

Dear Dr. Solomon: The nurse at the school my child attends has sent home a mimeographed notice to all families informing us that some of the children have been found to have scabies. She suggests we be on the lookout for any signs of the disease. I can't imagine why this should be a problem in this particular school because we live in a nice neighborhood and all the children usually seem neat and clean. Although my child has not been affected, I would like to know what scabies is and what can be done about the condition, as well as any complications that may result. — Mrs. A.H.

Dear Mrs. H.: Scabies is a disease caused by a parasitic organism that attaches itself to the skin. It is found among all social classes and age groups. Among children and adults, the disease usually becomes evident between the fingers and toes, as well as on the wrists, ankles, and groin; in most cases, the head, neck, and scalp are not affected. Infants generally develop blisters on the face, scalp, palms and soles.

While scabies is not life-threatening, it can be extremely uncomfortable. The condition is marked by severe itching which is caused by the body's allergic reaction to the organism. Occasionally, it may be mistaken for other problems, such as eczema or chickenpox.

Dr. Steven A. Schlachter, an assistant professor of pediatrics at the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, explains that outbreaks of scabies (also known as the itch-mite) occur in cycles. Schools frequently serve as a source of infection because the children are in close contact with each other. The mite does not jump from one person to another, but is transferred through skin-to-skin contact — for example, when children hug each other.

The female mite burrows beneath the surface of the skin where she lays the eggs over a period of a month. After the female dies, the newly matured mites repeat the process, crawling around just below the surface. Scratching the affected areas tends to spread the disease even further by carrying the mites to other parts of the body. This in turn, can result in a bacterial infection called impetigo.

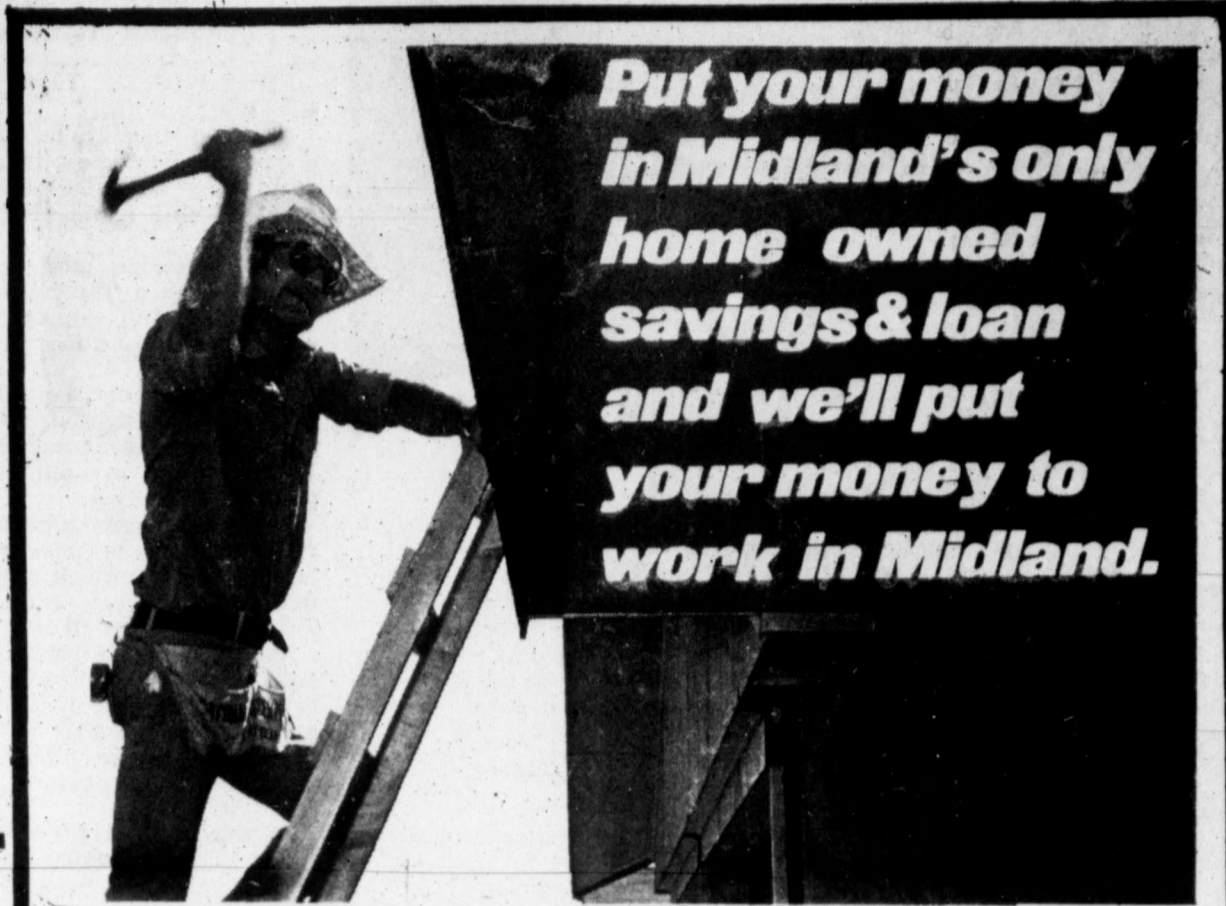

The mites' path becomes evident from the blisters and bumps that develop, resembling a thread. The diagnosis of scabies can be made on the basis of the location of these lesions.

Cambodians given aid

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The producers of the rock album "Concerts for the People of Kampuchea" have presented the United Nations with a check for $400,000 to aid Cambodians suffering from years of war and famine. The money represents an advance against proceeds from sale of the album, which features the Clash, Elvis Costello and the Blockheads, Paul McCartney and Wings, the Pretenders, Queen, Rockpile, the Specials and the Who. The groups were recorded Dec. 26-29, 1979, in London concerts that earned about $50,000. Actress Liv Ullman, who is a goodwill ambassador for the U.N. Children's Fund, accepted a check.

New ZIP + 4 Postal code will not be available before June

In response to numerous requests as to when the new ZIP + 4 Postal Code will be available, Postmaster D.E. Holster of Midland stated that they will not be available until after June 1.

On that date, the National ZIP + 4 Address Directory will be available to customers who desire to have printed on their stationery the new ZIP + 4 Code designation.

The first wave of ZIP + 4 notifications will be sent to large users of the mails who have had a unique ZIP + 4 Code assigned to their address; to government agencies, all post office boxholders and to Business Reply Permit holders near the end of July, 1981.

Holster reminded the postal customers that the usage of the new ZIP + 4 Code is voluntary although it is hoped that it will become universally accepted and used in the same way that the present five-digit ZIP Code is used.

The usage of the new ZIP + 4 Code will enable the Postal Service to sort and distribute mail more efficiently by increasing the usage of electronic mail processing. Although the first five-digit of every present ZIP Code will remain the same, the addition of four more digits will allow the complicated electronic mail processing equipment to sort the mail to a specific city block, building or post office box.

Former actor deals in Liars Poker

Long also claims 'high card' in lying

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Mike Long is a liar.

In fact, if Mike is to be believed, he is the world's foremost liar.

"Playboy Magazine says it," he grinned, "so it damn well better be true."

What Mike lies most about is a game of chance. The game is called Liars Poker. And, said he, "I am the world's leading authority on the game."

He's also a drifter, a quasi-con man and a totally delightful, refreshingly unabashed, semi-reformed bandit.

"Work's not my thing," he explained.

The lean, bewiskered vagabond, 32, rumbled into town last week touting his "book," which is stretching things a bit. The epic, entitled "Liars Poker Anyone?" is all of 11 pages.

But it's a clever little booklet which, even more cleverly, he sells for $1.95, or $2.55 if you order by mail.

For anyone wanting "A complete guide to the game of Liars Poker," it's a steal. So to speak.

AS MOST KNOW, Liars Poker, also called Dollar Bill Poker, is a rather simple gambling game commonly played by barflies and bureaucrats, or anyone with time on his hands and a few dollar bills in his pocket.

Players use the eight digits in the serial numbers of the bills to form poker hands, the best possible bill being eight aces, or ones.

Bluffing is a key element of the game, thus the "liars" tag.

Not content to be merely the foremost authority on Liars Poker, and an author on the subject, Mike Long may also be the only serious collector of poker bills.

HIS IS THE ULTIMARE collection, 100 bills with five or more of the same number in the serial numbers. Like five "3s" or five "8s" or whatever.

He's got one dollar bill with seven "2s," a $50 bill with six zeroes and a $5 bill with six "5s."

"Eight aces (ones) would be the best possible hand," said Mike, "but to me, because I'm into numbers, eight "8s" would be more personally valuable."

How valuable?
"I would pay $1,000 for a dollar bill with eight "8s," said Mike.

HIS COLLECTION, compiled over the last six years, is mounted handsomely in a display case, and represents almost the sum total of his worldly goods.

"I've got some clothes and a car and my well being," he said. "I sold my furniture and leased my house in El Paso."

"I'm just travelin' around promotin' my book and my collection and thinkin' of ways to make money."

Working is scarcely among his favorite options.

"I'm not very good at holding jobs," he shrugged. "I guess I'm running from something. But I don't know what it is, so it doesn't make much sense worryin' about it."

A MILITARY BRAT, Mike grew up for the most part in El Paso, drifted off to Hollywood for an acting stint and still figures he's more an actor than anything else.

"I spent eight years as an actor, and I suppose I'll go back into acting one of these days," said Mike, who is twice married, twice divorced.

His Hollywood career was hardly distinguished, he admitted, consisting largely of sporadic parts in such television shows as "Room 222," "Mod Squad," "The FBI" and "Medical Center."

He spent a year in a forgettable soap opera, "Bright Promise," and appeared in one acclaimed TV movie, "God Bless the Children."

Mike liked the money and the hours but was hardly impressed with the uncertainty and fickleness of show biz.

BUT THE IDLE HOURS on the set provided ample time for long running Liars Poker games, which in turn led him into his mild obsession with the game.

"As far as I know, I'm the first to formulate a firm set of rules," he said of his booklet. "These are guidelines that settle arguments and teach people the finer strategies of Liars Poker."

In between poker games, and acting stints, Mike worked as a hotel desk clerk, a hospital therapist, a rent car credit official, a waiter, a liquor store deliveryman and a variety of other odd jobs.

For two years, he chauffeured around an aging singer who, he said, did decidedly more drinking than singing.

ABANDONING HOLLYWOOD, he returned to El Paso and soon found himself a "human guinea pig" in some kind of weird nutritional study. He also went to work on a book, called "Trim Trio King." It was based on an 11-month cross country odyssey he said he took as a youngster of 17.

He had, he said, perfected the art of "trimming" vending machines by prying open coin boxes with a compact combination fingernail clipper and file, known colloquially as a "trim trio."

"I made over $25,000 in one year," said Mike, "and blew most of it in Mexico City and Acapulco."

His latest scheme may be even more unconventional, but at least it's legal. Sort of.

IN MOST INSTANCES, gambling is illegal, and Liars Poker is, if nothing else, a gambling game.

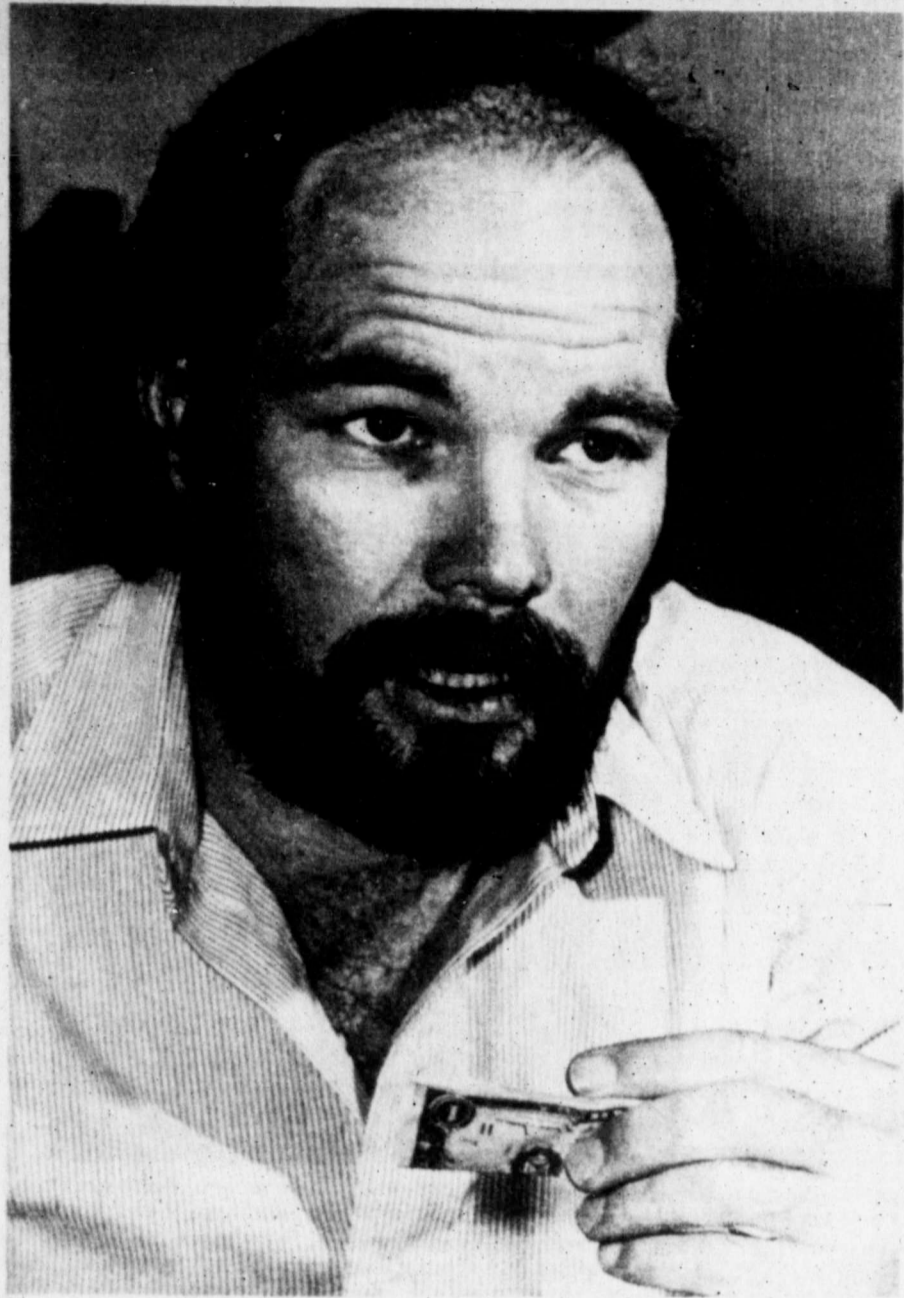

"But there's very little risk involved," Mike insisted, "since there are no cards or dice or other gambling devices."

What's more, he said, he thinks Liars Poker would be a wonderful vehicle for a TV game show. And how about a Liars Poker Club? For $10, members receive a photograph of his bill collection, a copy of his booklet and a membership card.

He has not yet been besieged by potential club members or television studios, nor has his book flirted with any bestseller list.

"But you've got to have goals," Mike insisted.
