

For Border Patrol, it's 'all in day's work'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Charles Hensley's job is to find and apprehend illegal aliens, a job he performs with respect and dignity. This is the last of a six-part series.

To Charles Hensley, his job is just like the majority of jobs — "you either know it or you don't."

Hensley knows his. He is a United States Border Patrolman stationed in Big Spring, and like the veteran officer portrayed by Charles Bronson in "Borderline," he has learned through years of experience how to look at a brown-skinned person and ascertain whether it would be worthwhile to check for papers.

His stubby fingers fold themselves across the steering wheel as he drives a Border Patrol unit across a north Midland housing development with red dirt as choppy as an angry sea. A pair of silvery handcuffs dangles from the gear shift and bang against the steering column in staccato-like fashion, then cease to clatter as tires jump a curb to find pavement.

Hensley stops and nods at the wire and steel of a building form, and in the dark shades that veil his eyes from the late winter sun one worker becomes reflected. He is young, 18, maybe 20, with white-kneed jeans and red T-shirt barely concealing his ribcage. He stands half-leaned on a shovel with the thin layer of whiskers hugging his chin buried along with beads of sweat into the bend of his elbow. He looks up long enough to catch the green of la Verde and then casually lowers his eyes to the shovel tip.

"THAT ONE THERE looks like an alien," the 40-year-old Border Patrolman says in a deep drawl between slurps on the gum that leaves the sickly sweet odor of snuff in the air. "Don't know why the other unit didn't check 'im."

"What makes you think he's from Mexico?" he is asked.

He turns his palms over in a shrug. "Well, it's just one of those things you learn to tell in this business.... The people, they act different, they dress different, they just refuse to look at ya. You can pass a truckload on the street and you can tell they're illegals 'cause they won't be lookin' at ya — they'll look straight ahead, off to the side, any place but right at ya. This one sure looks like he's from Mex'co. Let's find out."

He keys the radio mike and contacts the unit concealed by the skeleton-like framework of upgoing homes. "Say, you check this'n in the red cap and red shirt?" he asks.

"Ten-four. He's got an I-one-five-one (legal resident alien card)."

HENSLEY PLACES the mike back in the clip and nods. "I figured he was from Mex'co," he comments, feeling the edges of the brown handlebar mustache that droops at the corners of his mouth. "Got his work papers though."

Hensley knows his business, all right, and while he said he "kinda enjoyed" rough and tumble Charles Bronson in the 1980 movie thriller, he seems cast more in the Slim Pickens mold — replete with good ol' boy humor pouring forth from beneath the John L. Sullivan mustache in a nasal twang that leaves off the closing "Gs" and slurs syllables to create distinctly Texan words like "reg'lar" and "op'ration." And, too, there is something about the leathery face and broad shoulders which, while adding sinew to his 6-foot-2 frame even when sagging slightly at the USBP patch, arouse memories of the latter actor.

But he's neither Bronson nor Pickens — to his fellow agents he's plain "Charlie," a nickname he doesn't like but one he "suffers with purty reg'lar." But like the "sayin'," he adds through a half grin, "I don't care what they call me, long as they call me at eatin' time."

As he engaged in a "normal day's work" in checking construction sites for illegal aliens in Midland recently, Hensley reflected on his career with the Border Patrol and offered his personal insight into the ever-increasing deluge of Mexican nationals into the Permian Basin.

AND WHEN IT'S brought down to humanistic terms, Hensley — not surprisingly for someone so enmeshed in the issue — is able to display a measure of empathy for those whom he pursues, as though he realizes most of them are not criminals, but rather poor persons seeking survival for themselves and for their families.

An intense irony, in fact, pervades Hensley's situation. For when he discusses his job and his own family it becomes obvious that while he and illegal aliens are diametrically opposed in "The Game," they are each ruled by much the same desires and dreams.

"I love my job — it's the greatest thing that ever happened to me," he says, but at the same time he makes it clear that the real importance of his career is that it "feeds my wife and puts my girl through school." And so the very cause which allows his family to survive is the same which, paradoxically, is depriving others of the same opportunity, or at least placing an added burden on them. He readily admits that had fate led his wife, his 19-year-old daughter and himself to be born Mexican nationals, he would be in the United States too "till they put me in jail — and not knowin' any more'n I do, I'd probably still come back even then."

He pauses to look across the seat at the reporter who is riding with him this day, and his brow becomes ridged in seriousness. "As long as there's a disparity between these two economies, these people'll be over here. Let's face it — if you were down there, you'd be over here, and if I was down there I'd be over here." And it is this aware-

House condemned to fiery death

By PATRICK DEAREN

It was where the outcasts and misfits of society — the winos, hoboes and runaways — gathered in search of warmth on many chilled winter nights, and in its last explosive gasps at noon Thursday it finally succeeded in sharing that warmth with the educated and affluent of a reluctant city of steel and concrete.

The house long had stood sentinel by two elms near the railroad tracks at West Washington Avenue and South Colorado Street, a monument to a simpler era in full view of the towering pinnacles of a 1981 mountain range of girder and glass painted against the sky.

Today, only the elms remain, for the house met a viking's death, cremated along with the last vestiges of a multitude of transients' memories amid fire, smoke and cinders that belched skyward for almost an hour. Gerald Stautzenberger of Midland Insulation Company, situated just across the dirt street, often had stood and watched society's rejected loiter in the grassy lawn, lounge beneath the shady elms, seek refuge from the elements within the warped beams and planks. Thursday he stood and watched the fire, as saturated in orange as a West Texas sunset, destroy those same unpainted pillars and rafters until there remained only charred wood.

"It was real strange," he reflected philosophically, standing framed in the warehouse doorway and watching the smoke spew into the maze of skyscrapers, shrouding them in black until they seemed but the masts of an armada cresting waves through an eerie fog. "We got back from lunch about 12 and everything was OK. We went in the office to eat a bite and when we looked out the window it was engulfed in flames. It just seemed to go up all at once."

The blaze so overwhelmed the structure that 10 firemen all but resigned themselves to spectators' positions, to wipe sweaty brows, squint stinging eyes, taste smoke in their mouths.

Two firemen in dark asbestos coats briefly manned a ladder alongside the nearby post office building, where they perched within the clouds of soot like angels in black to spray water uselessly down into hell itself. Then they flooded the cinder-block wall and roof of the warehouse until 2,000 gallons of water cascaded onto the dirt of S. Colorado, where it slashed a moat about the blaze which castled chess-like from one beam to another.

Fire from the house suddenly leaped through air, snagged itself in twisted limbs of the elm in front, left it shuddering in a crisp, sharp snapping of leaves and twigs. And the firemen turned their efforts toward it, as though realizing it alone might stand in future years in mute testimony to countless tales exchanged by long-since forgotten vagrants.

On recent Halloweens the structure had been used as a "spook house" for charity purposes by a Midland high school organization, and for a long while the rectangular window in front framed an unearthly orange glow within as though it were indeed a window into Gehenna. Then it too went, as the front section accordioned in on itself.

The chimney remained almost until last, rearing its red-bricked tower defiantly into the smoke as if determined to conquer that for which it was built to contain. Then the bubble of orange burst around it, squeezed and wrenched until it tilted, toppled,

NASA shuttles astronauts out of rocketship

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The long-awaited test flight of America's rocketship Columbia was scrubbed for at least two days this morning when a computer malfunction occurred as two astronauts waited in the cockpit for their release to fly.

It never came; 16 minutes before lift-off, problems began. "We are stopping the clock," space agency spokesman Hugh Harris said at 9:59 a.m. — three hours after the scheduled launchtime.

"We're sending out a crew to open the hatch of the orbiter and take the astronauts out to their crew quarters," about six miles from the launch pad. He said the earliest time for launch now is Sunday morning at 6:50 a.m. EST.

The postponement had to be a severe disappointment to pilots John Young and Robert Crippen, and to the many other employees of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration who had labored through two years' delay in development of the shuttle.

Seventy minutes after postponement, the astronauts crawled from the Columbia, apparently relaxed but their faces strained with frustration. They took an elevator to base of launch pad 39A where a van waited to take them on a trip that they'd hoped not to make.

The Columbia was to make America's first manned space flight in six years; the mission called for 36 orbits around the earth in a delta-winged rocketship that is the first designed for reusable use in space.

On a beautiful, sunny day along Florida's Space Coast, an estimated half-million viewers arrived before dawn to see the launch. They moved into long and dejected traffic jams when the order to scrub was announced.

A space agency computer expert, patched through to the spacecraft, told the astronauts: "the probability that it will clear up is not really that great. It might be that it will, but we're not overly confident."

For good reason. It couldn't be done. Attempts to duplicate the problem in a shuttle simulator in Houston were unsuccessful. Meanwhile, the astronauts were seated, horizontal, in their cockpit seats for almost six hours — as much "horizontal time" as NASA doctors permit before flight.

"If you guys get to feeling like you're too tired, we sure want to talk about it," a launch official told the astronauts at one point.

Boardings at Midland Regional Airport skipped upward during the first quarter of 1981, despite the decline nationwide, according to Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city.

During the first three months, 119,008 persons boarded planes at the city airport, compared to 101,516 reported for the same period in 1980. This translates into an average of 1,329 passengers per day or 39,869 passengers per month.

Banks added that the recent figure is a 17.8 percent increase over that of last year.

Reagan's release from hospital expected Saturday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, recovering rapidly from a gunshot wound in the chest, will leave the hospital and return to the White House this weekend, possibly as early as Saturday afternoon, a medical spokesman said today.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary told reporters at a White House briefing that the president will be examined Saturday morning and will have a chest X-ray. If his condition is stable, he probably will be discharged from the hospital in the afternoon, O'Leary said.

"If I had a poker chip to put on it, I'd say it was Saturday," the doctor told reporters.

"He is a patient who is just about ready to go home from the hospital and take on his duties," he added.

Once the resident returns to the White House, O'Leary said "he's not going to require a lot of medical attention," beyond having his temperature checked "a couple of times a day" and followup chest X-rays.

"He'll need a full eight hours sleep and perhaps a nap in the afternoon. You'll see his physical activity increase," the doctor added.

Reagan will not be traveling for several weeks, however. White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said a trip to Mexico scheduled for the end of this month for talks with President Jose Lopez Portillo has been canceled.

O'Leary, dean of clinical affairs at George Washington University Hospital, said of White House press secretary James S. Brady, who suffered a severe head wound in the assassination attempt March 30: "His survival is extraordinary and his recovery is remarkable."

O'Leary cautioned that "We all ought to keep our expectations at a reasonable level."

He said he was optimistic about Brady's prospects, but noted, "He may not be precisely the way he was before." The doctor also said, however, "Jim Brady, the person you have all known, will almost certainly be back."

He said Brady is just getting started on physical therapy which could take "many months and maybe a year."

A .22-caliber bullet went through the left side of Brady's brain.

O'Leary said Brady "will have some motor impairment. It is reasonable to expect that he will be able to walk with a cane, he may do better than that."

O'Leary, the hospital's principal spokesman since the assassination attempt 12 days ago, said Reagan "is in a decent hospital room, but it's not home."

"His access to outdoors and fresh air is limited. We're looking forward to him sitting outdoors and getting a little fresh air," he said.

Reagan continues to receive an an-ticoagulant intravenously, the doctor said, but that treatment is expected to end Sunday. The only other medication Reagan is receiving is penicillin, which he will continue to take orally for 10 days.

"Penicillin is precautionary, like X-rays," O'Leary said, "more in the category of treating the doctor than treating the patient. The patient feels fine, but the doctor needs reassurance."

Doctors and aides said the president, itching to return to the fray over his economic program, "really can't wait to get home."

After a "very good, very restful" night, the president awoke at 6:35 a.m. EST today

Demos tax-cut plan said 'puny'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, calling the Democrats' alternative tax-cut plan "puny" and "less than half a loaf," says it is too early to talk compromise.

The Democratic plan, proposed Thursday by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, would scrap President Reagan's proposed three-year, across-the-board tax cut in favor of a one-year program tilted to low- and middle-income Americans.

After reading Rostenkowski's speech outlining the plan and conferring with the hospitalized president, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said he wanted to buy the congressman tickets to Neil Simon's production, "They're Playing Our Song." He said the chairman's bill amounted to an endorsement of the chief objectives of Reagan's economic program.

"The president also believes, however, that this new plan is less than half a loaf," Regan said. "The chairman's tax plan simply will not be as effective as the president's program."

Specifically, Regan said, Rostenkowski's proposed cuts in marginal tax rates were "puny" and were not applied across the board. He also said savings incentives proposed by Rostenkowski were "misguided and inadequate."

Rostenkowski called for about $40 billion in tax cuts during the 12 months beginning next Oct. 1. Regan wants $54 billion.

"The collective effect of these cuts is focused most directly on people earning between $20,000 and $50,000," Rostenkowski said of his plan. "This segment of the workforce makes up 43 percent of all taxpayers — and pays 50 percent of all individual taxes."

FIFTY-TWO PERCENT of the individual tax relief in Reagan's bill would go to the $20,000-$50,000 bracket.

However, because Rostenkowski presented only the broad outlines of his proposal, it is impossible to compare how a typical taxpayer would fare under the two tax reductions.

Rostenkowski said a multiyear tax cut designed to give taxpayers something on which to base spending and savings decisions is too risky, with inflation running at 12 percent.

He said there are no assurances that the deep budget cuts proposed by Reagan to pay for a tax cut will be passed, that the growing military budget won't bring more inflation, that unemployment will not soar or that the price of imported oil will stabilize.

"Yet we are asked to go along with the new supply-side theories and commit hundreds of billions of dollars in tax cuts for the next three years with the promise that if we throw on the automatic pilot, that David Stockman (Reagan's budget director) will land the plane on a balanced budget in 1984," Rostenkowski said.

"That demands more trust that I can give," he added. "I want at least one hand on the wheel — and so would you."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, praised Rostenkowski's plan but said it is not enough to offset the tax burden added by inflation and higher Social Security tax increases. The nation needs more than a one-year "shot in the arm," Dole added.

SEN. BILL ROTH, R-Del., an original author of Reagan's plan, called a one-year tax reduction a smokescreen by liberals "to make sure that when budget-cutting fever subsides, they still will have all the public's money around to indulge their big spending habits."

Here is an outline of Rostenkowski's proposal:

- Effective July 1, cut individual tax rates and/or widen some tax brackets, especially for those with incomes between $20,000 and $50,000.
- Starting next Jan. 1, reduce the marriage penalty, which causes some working couples to pay more tax than they would if they were single.
- Effective July 1, increase by an unspecified amount the $2,300 standard deduction for single persons and the $3,400 deduction for couples.
- Starting July 1, raise the earned-income credit, which now provides a tax saving of up to $500 a year for poor working families with children.
- Liberalize tax exemptions, starting next Jan. 1, for money invested in Individual Retirement Accounts. A worker not covered by a company pension plan already may defer until retirement the tax on up to $1,500 a year. Rostenkowski would raise that to $2,000 and provide similar increases for the self-employed.

Intense heat was the biggest danger from a fire in an abandoned house at West Washington Avenue and South Colorado Street Thursday afternoon. Here, a fireman uses his hose to cool off a fellow firefighter. The fire destroyed the house. There were no injuries.

House 'gives up ghost' in hot, short-lived fire

Although police quickly cordoned off the area after a patrolman reported the holocaust, the curious still gathered to watch. One young woman scurried up, out of breath, gasping, "I didn't want to miss this — It's the first time I ever got to watch my husband fight a fire."

Four hundred fifty feet of 1½-inch firehose from four trucks snaked along S. Colorado, entwining like confetti, but it was the one hose unconnected with a Fire Department unit which pointed toward a special irony, for it drew water from a yellow and green fire hydrant standing not 15 feet from the front steps.

Even beyond the hoses, the heat was intense. At a hundred feet it left sunburned skin; at half that distance the furnace-like temperatures soared above 200 degrees, bringing nozzles turning from fire, dousing firemen rather than flames.

"Do you think it was arson?" a Fire Department official was asked. He shrugged.

"What else could've caused it?" he asked rhetorically.

After it was over, and the only flames that remained were confined to a stack of lumber from which rose a decrepit air conditioner — which long had battled the heat which finally claimed it — two women hurried toward the lot.

"It was our grandmother's house," said cousins Barbara Webb and Jane Wooten, who explained the property had been owned by M.P. Friday until it was sold in January to First National Bank.

"But I'm glad, I'm glad it burned," added Ms. Webb, staring at the smouldering embers. "There used to be winos going in and out of it, staying all the time. They just treated it any way they wanted. Why, just not long ago, we passed by and there was a whole bunch going in."

Through the shimmering waves of heat a freight train suddenly pummeled past, doubtless carrying more skid-row derelicts on down the tracks where other flophouses would await them. They probably won't come to this lot seeking refuge from the wind and rain and cold anymore, unless it is to lie in the chill beneath the blackened elms and remember the sheltering walls and inviting fireplace.

If they do, the only warmth they'll find this time will be in the bottle.

Raising legal drinking age is back to drawing board

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Raising the legal drinking age from 18 to 19 to curb drunkenness in high schools didn't seem complicated, but the House and Senate can't seem to get together on it.

Senators rejected the latest attempt at compromise on Thursday, and a third House-Senate conference committee was appointed to try to find the right combination.

Rep. Henry Allee, D-Houston, House sponsor, begged his colleagues to back off on their demand that the bill contain a tough provision forcing sellers of alcoholic beverages to check the identification cards of young customers.

"If we have to be flexible on the ID issue, let me have that flexibility," Allee said, suggesting that the question of enforcing the law against selling to minors should be dealt with in a separate bill.

"I just want a 19-year-old drinking bill," he added.

Senators rejected the latest effort at compromise, 28-1.

The House has insisted that grocers, bartenders and liquor store operators be required to verify a person is not a minor before selling him alcohol.

When the first conference committee gave a seller an out if a buyer "looked 19," the House rejected that. The second conference committee drafted tougher language, saying a sale to a minor is done "knowingly" — and, therefore, illegally — if no ID is requested.

Senators said Thursday that was unfair.

"We are not talking about night clubs and taverns, we are talking about neighborhood grocery stores and 7-11s," said Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler.

"Next time this goes to conference committee we will have to have an amendment that is not strict but somewhere in the middle," said Sen. Bill Sarphalis, D-Hereford, the Senate sponsor.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said the latest version of the bill would make it practically impossible for a dealer to defend himself.

Senators refused, 9-20, to instruct the new conferees to come back with a bill that merely raised the drinking age from 18 to 19, with no ID amendment.

Allee told the House he thought senators would accept an ID provision that "allows judgment on the part of the retailer whether to ask for an ID or not."

Rep. Ronald Coleman, D-El Paso, said a bill without an ID provision would "be a fraud" and not enforceable.

"No more a fraud than the present law," replied Allee.

Chance of rain today, tonight

Those April showers in song-and-dance numbers may turn into pitter-patter notes today if those moisture-laden clouds release their cargo over Midland's domain.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has forecast a 20 percent chance for showers and thunderstorms today and tonight.

And if the 1-to-5 odds for rainfall pays off, Midland's current 1.79-inch rainfall for the year may be hiked by a few points.

Southerly winds today were to increase to 15-20 mph and gust and then decrease to 10-15 mph by tonight. Winds Saturday are to be southerly-to-southeasterly at 15-20 mph.

Thursday's high temperature reading was 85 degrees, which was within eight degrees of the record high of 93 for an April 9 in 1939. The overnight low of 59 degrees was way off the record low of 30 degrees for the date in 1952.

Psychiatrist diagnoses histrionic personality disorder in Vickie

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — After listening to a lengthy series of hypothetical questions, Austin psychiatrist Richard Coons diagnosed Vickie Daniel as having a histrionic personality disorder that could be harmful to her children — if the hypothetical facts are true.

"I didn't render an opinion about Mrs. Daniel, I rendered an opinion on the hypothetical facts that were presented to me," Coons said Thursday after 1½ days on the witness stand in a child custody suit involving Mrs. Daniel's two small children.

"If those facts are true, then she has a histrionic personality disorder," he said.

Coons based his opinion on a report by Nassau Bay psychiatrist Kenneth Wetcher, who examined Mrs. Daniel for 1½ hours and then said she suffered from a histrionic personality disorder characterized by over-dramatic behavior and problems with interpersonal relations.

Mrs. Daniel is charged with murder in the Jan. 19 slaying of her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, is seeking custody of the two children born during the couple's stormy four-year marriage.

Coons said he had never examined Mrs. Daniel personally and could not diagnose her specifically as being a hysteric.

"It's the same as if I rendered a diagnose about a person's vital signs in an examination," Coons said.

Coons was called to testify by J.C. "Zeke" Zbranek, Mrs. Murph's attorney.

The doctor did not testify, however, that Mrs. Daniel was an unfit mother or incapable of caring for Franklin Baldwin, 3, and Marion Price Jr., 1.

Judge gives Jennings 15 years and good luck wish

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

William Wayne "Willie" Jennings, the last of three co-defendants in a murder-for-hire scheme concocted and carried in a drunken binge last July, was sentenced to 15 years in prison Thursday by 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

He pleaded guilty to murder. The other co-defendants were found guilty in jury trials and were sentenced to from more severe prison terms — from 50 years to 99 years.

Jennings, who, at 20, was the youngest of the defendants, had testified against his co-defendants, pleaded guilty to the offense following plea-bargain agreements between District Attorney Vern Martin's staff and defense attorney Jim Eubank. He accepted his sentence without a quibble.

"Good luck to you, sir," the judge told the defendant on a handshake, shortly before he was ushered back to his awaiting jail cell.

Jennings admitted his role in the death of James David McPeters, 46, off an Interstate 20 service road near Warfield Truck Stop between Midland and Odessa last July 28. But he said that he used no weapon and only aided his then beer-whiskey-drinking buddy, Rex Bradley Shanks, 27, in the killing of McPeters. Jennings said Shanks attacked and stabbed McPeters but that he (Jennings) kicked McPeters twice after the struggling McPeters seemed to be getting the best of his attacker.

Shanks, who admitted to cohabitating with the McPeters' 27-year-old wife, was sentenced to 99 years in prison for ambushing and stabbing the man.

McPeters' wife, whom prosecutors had charged with plotted her husband's death out of revenge and for $39,000 life insurance money, was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

Shanks and Ms. McPeters had been school mates in Abilene in the early 1970s.

Jennings, who appeared to be a hapless party to the killing, was offered the lighter sentence in exchange for his guilty plea.

The case against him was purely circumstantial, and no witnesses were available to testify against him. His wife, Tammy, 22, who was a witness to the stabbing, was granted immunity by the Midland County Grand Jury in exchange for her testimony against Shanks and Mrs. McPeters. By law, she cannot be compelled to testify against her husband.

And neither Shanks nor McPeters would testify against their co-defendant; both maintain their innocence while they are in the penitentiary. Their guilty verdicts are on appeal.

Jennings is to begin his sentence as soon as the Texas Department of Corrections bus picks him up on its West Texas rounds.

Jennings conceivably could serve 2½ years of his 15-year sentence in prison. Usual prison time is a third of the sentence. And in Jennings' case, he could earn "good time," which would lessen his time in the TDC. He may be allowed "good time" since evidence indicated that he did not use a weapon on McPeters. He also is being credited with 252 days he has spent in jail since his arrest last August.

Shanks may serve a full third — 33 years — of his 99-year sentence.

Police looking for suspect in attempted burglary

Police today were looking for a man who attempted to hold up the Colonial Food Store at Midland Drive and Andrews Highway late Thursday night.

Officers said the man entered the store about 11 p.m., indicated he had a gun under his shirt, demanded money, looked around, noticed there were several customers in the store, and fled on foot.

He was described as white, about 6 feet, 2 inches tall, with long blond hair, wearing blue jeans ripped up the side and a green shirt. He also had a mole under his right eye.

Police also were looking for a man who entered a room at Midland Memorial Hospital shortly after 9 p.m. Thursday.

The man threatened a patient with a knife, then left. He later fired two or three shots into the patient's westside residence.

A 22-year-old Midland was in the city jail this morning after police said he was caught in the act of burglarizing some storage sheds at the Chandelle Apartments, 2100 W. Wadley Ave., about 12:30 a.m. today. Formal charges are expected to be filed later today.

In other police activity during the past 24 hours, Oscar Barr of 4602 Neely Ave. told officers two TV sets, two radios, a tape recorder, two Monroe calculators, assorted tools and a portable IBM electric typewriter were taken in a burglary of his residence. Total loss was placed at $2,185.

C.H. Brazwell of 311 S. Weatherford said a TV set and stereo unit worth a total of $400 were stolen from his home, while a digital alarm clock and $60 in cash were reported taken in a March 7 burglary of a residence at 1300 E. Chestnut.

And Laura Messer of 2601 North A St. told police a tool box containing $300 worth of tools was taken from a pickup truck sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning.

City firemen stood by at Holiday Hill Road and Interstate 20 late Thursday afternoon as wrecking crews worked to right a propane truck that overturned on the north service road of the highway.

Police said a semi-trailer rig driven by Willard Palmer of Seminole went off the shoulder of the service road, struck two guard posts and rolled over twice before coming to rest. The accident occurred about 5 p.m. and traffic was re-routed for a time.

Palmer refused medical treatment and police said there was no gas leakage in the mishap.

A 5-year-old Midland youth escaped injury in a car-bicycle accident about 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

According to police, Jamie Munoz of 106 W. Spruce was riding his bicycle on Spruce Street when it and a car driven by 30-year-old Daisy W. Scur-lark, 201 E. Dormand Ave., collided at the intersection of Main and Spruce streets.

Four persons escaped serious injury in two separate automobile accidents Thursday.

In the first mishap, Maria Gonzales of 1700 E. Pecan, and a passenger in her vehicle, 17-month-old Velinda Quintilla, no address available, were released following treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital after the Gonzales car and one driven by Louis Montez, Rt. 4, Midland, collided in the 3400 block of West Wall about 8 a.m.

Police said the accident occurred as Gonzales was attempting to turn into a private driveway. She was eastbound and Montez was westbound on Wall at the time.

In the second accident, 49-year-old Billy Avance and 42-year-old Lynda Lee Avance, both of Rt. 4, Midland, were treated for minor injuries after their 1979 Oldsmobile and a 1968 Chevrolet driven by Robert Baca of Truth or Consequences, N.M., collided at the intersection of Carter and Camp streets about 1:20 p.m.

The Avance vehicle was westbound on Carter and the Baca car was southbound on Camp at the time.

Britain faces dilemma over royal couple on T-shirts

LONDON (AP) — A royal ban is keeping the faces of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer off T-shirts made in Britain. Foreign manufacturers are threatening to corner the market.

Lover's knots, the names of Charles and Diana, a picture of St. Paul's Cathedral, where they will be married July 29, and the British flag, the Union Jack, are all on a list of acceptable commemorative designs sent to manufacturers Wednesday by the Office of the Lord Chamberlain, head of the royal household.

But the manufacturers were told the faces of the young couple should not be used on any articles of clothing except headscarves.

Although the ban has no legal force, British manufacturers normally comply with the royal family's wishes.

But plenty of foreign manufacturers do not.

Warren Hawkesley, a Conservative member of Parliament, reported the first imported T-shirts sporting the faces of Charles and Diana have appeared in a store in the Midlands town of Wolverhampton. He said they came from Pakistan.

Hawkesley asked Trade Secretary John Biffen "to impose an immediate ban on all foreign imports or allow our own people to compete on equal footing."

Seventy of the 635 members of the House of Commons introduced a motion urging that the ban be revoked.

The National Union of Hosiery and Knitwear Workers asked Prince Charles to intervene personally. He is touring New Zealand, and there was no immediate response.

The souvenir industry expects to make more than $250 million on the royal wedding. As the royal family always does on such special occasions, the prince and Queen Elizabeth II approved a temporary relaxation of the strict guidelines on commercial use of royal portraits and insignia.

However, the Lord Chamberlain, Lord McLean, decreed that products carrying royal faces must be in good taste and of a "permanent kind." That made it all right for Charles and Diana to smile from mugs, plates, jewelry and tea towels but not from clothing.

Commissioners under attack in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The power of the long-time kings of local government in Oklahoma, the county commissioners who reign unchallenged because they control the purse strings, is under attack in a statewide FBI investigation of alleged kickbacks on purchases of heavy equipment.

Sources close to the recently disclosed two-year investigation say that scores of commissioners will be indicted by a federal grand jury later this year on charges of taking kickbacks and artificially inflating prices paid for construction equipment, lumber and other goods.

The investigation has already cracked the commissioners' power base. Oklahoma House Speaker Dan Draper says the Legislature should look at the situation to see whether new purchasing laws with stricter controls are needed — and whether each of the 77 counties still needs three commissioners.

Such a statement, if made prior to the FBI investigation and resultant reports of widespread corruption, would have produced a major outcry from commissioners and probably would have spelled big political trouble for Draper.

The 231 commissioners have been perhaps the most potent lobby in the state because they approve the county budgets, appoint many county officials and hire crews for county road work. In Oklahoma, where long distances separate most towns and mass transit is almost non-existent, roads and highways are big political issues.

Legislators have always been careful not to cross commissioners because of their spending and patronage powers.

The commissioners, elected for four-year terms, have salaries ranging from less than $10,000 in some lightly populated counties to as much as $31,000 in Oklahoma County. But they have almost $100 million in state taxes to spend each year on road construction, and, until the FBI investigation started, they had little supervision over how they spent it.

One source close to the investigation, who, like the others, insisted on anonymity, said it will produce "the biggest scandal in state history" because of the number of present and former commissioners who will be indicted — 50 or more, he predicted.

Major state scandals in recent history were mild in comparison — a 1965 Supreme Court bribery case, in which two justices and one former justice were convicted, and the 1974 bribery-extortion trial of former Gov. David Hall, who was found guilty.

The Oklahoma investigation has spilled over into several northeastern Texas counties and sparked a grand jury investigation in Tyler, Texas.

"The investigation here started the one in Texas because of some individuals who were active in both states," one Oklahoma source said.

A key figure in both the Oklahoma and Texas investigations is Dorothy Griffin, a former equipment supplier from the tiny southern Oklahoma town of Farris. She reportedly is cooperating with federal officials and has tape-recorded several conversations with present and former commissioners in both states as part of the FBI investigation.

U.S. Attorney Larry Patton is conducting the Oklahoma City grand jury investigation, U.S. Attorney John Hannah the grand jury probe in Tyler. Neither will confirm an investigation is in progress, but vendors and commissioners in both states says the investigations are underway.

In addition, Oklahoma Auditor and Inspector Tom Daxon said earlier this month that he had given the FBI evidence of questionable purchases by county commissioners.

"We have found several counties where county officials have paid in excess of the listed price for equipment," Daxon said. "We turned that information over to the FBI."

Another source said some Oklahoma commissioners have used lease-purchase contracts to skirt a state law requiring them to take bids on major equipment purchases. "Then they buy the equipment in a month or two and pay twice what it's worth," he said.

He said there also are cases where one commissioner pays an inflated price for a single piece of heavy equipment, such as a $50,000 road grader, then sells it to a vendor for a much lower price, and the vendor in turn sells the road grader to another commissioner in another county for another inflated price. This process is then repeated several times.

"One piece of equipment changed hands like that about once a year for eight or nine years with the price going way up and way down each time," the source said.

Fred Jordan of Skiatook, an Osage County commissioner and current president of the Oklahoma County Commissioners' Association, has complained about the investigation. "They're making it look like every county commissioner in the state is a crook," he said.

But he conceded that his talks with other county commissioners indicate the investigation involves all areas of the state.

"If we've got some of these things happening that we've been reading about, then it has to be stopped," he said, "but I wish they would get on with it so the rest of us could get back to normal."

Junior Achievement members honored at banquet

Staff Writer

They gathered in the Hilton ballroom Thursday night to recognize the business leaders of tomorrow, those they hope will carry on the American tradition of the free enterprise system. The occasion was the 19th annual "Future Unlimited Banquet" of Junior Achievement of Midland, and more than 100 Midland high school students were honored for their accomplishments during the past year. "We certainly encourage you and appreciate the fact that you would take the time to see what makes business tick," board of directors president James Ingram told the students. He added that community support has been overwhelming for the program, with this year's goal of $77,000 already surpassed by more than $3,000.

Emcee Parker Humes of KCRS-KWJ Radio agreed, noting that "one of the reasons we have such a thriving, vibrant Junior Achievement Program in Midland is because of the corporate and private enterprise system we have."

A theme of the "American way" seemed to reign throughout the proceedings, and high schooler Wayne Reid, who was awarded the outstanding speaker award, gave a ten-minute address laced with patriotism.

"When you speak of Japanese technocracy, you get radios," Wayne quoted. "When you speak of German technocracy you get cars. When you speak of American technocracy you get a man on the moon—not once, but several times. It's time the American people turn back to the country that's been trying so hard to help them."

Bani-Sadr may be tried

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A spokesman for Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said today the Islamic revolutionary courts are likely to try the president for his alleged role in inciting supporters to violence at Tehran University.

The spokesman, reached by telephone, told The Associated Press in Beirut that Prosecutor-General Musavi Ardabili has said that if "the evidence is true and proven, we will carry out the trial."

The spokesman said the president's office had no comment on Ardabili's charges because "the people themselves have their own knowledge" of the incident last month.

Ardabili, who is also an ayatollah, has also said Bani-Sadr's political opponents, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and deputy Prime Minister Behzad Navabi, could also be indicted. But Ardabili did not mention them in his latest statement on the investigation.

Families suing elevator firms

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Families of two victims of the roaring explosion that gutted a grain elevator and left four men dead and two missing have filed damage suits against elevator operators and two other companies.

The damage suits, originated by the families of Alfredo Canales and Jose Valdez, were filed in state district court Thursday.

Diana Valdez, wife of Jose Valdez, is asking for $7 million in damages. An unspecified amount of damages is being sought by five members of the Canales family.

Named as defendants were the Corpus Christi Public Grain Elevator, Axelson Engineering, a Minnetonka, Minn., firm that installed a $4 million dust control system in the elevator last year and McKenzie Hague-Gillis Co., a grain dust control company.

An unrelated $10 million suit was also filed against the grain elevator by the wife of a man who died when he was buried under some grain in January.

Lawyer David L. Perry, who represents the Canales family, said the suit was filed because Corpus Christi Public Grain Elevator officials had "started their own investigation."

"We were concerned that the evidence be preserved intact and that we should gain permission to participate in the investigation into the explosion," Perry said.

The suit alleges that a $4 million dust control system installed last year by Axelson Engineering, a Minneapolis, Minn., company, was defective and caused the explosion which did an estimated $30 million damage to the facility. McKenzie Hague-Gillis Co., a grain dust control business was also named as a defendant.

No specific damage amount was requested in the suit.

State District Judge David Diaz granted a request by the plaintiffs to halt any search or rescue efforts that might "cause or result in the removal, alteration, destruction or any other change in any condition" at the site pending a hearing on a temporary injunction.

Under provisions of the order, searchers are allowed to look for bodies and prevent fire or further damage as long as the plaintiffs' attorneys are informed.

The search was to resume today for two men missing and presumed dead after the explosion. Ramon Garcia, 43, and Gilbert Garcia, 19, a security guard, have not been seen since the blast.

Officials said fires were seen inside two of the damaged 300-foot towers during an inspection tour Thursday.

Lawyers also are seeking court permission to participate in the blast investigation being conducted by federal inspectors and the port's engineering company.

Perry said he also has applied for a temporary injunction and an order to allow investigators for the plaintiffs to enter the site.

A hearing on the request was set for April 16 by Diaz.

House committee trying to protect farmers from future trade embargoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key bloc of House Agriculture Committee members is putting together a plan to protect farmers from the financial damage of any future trade embargoes on U.S. agricultural goods.

Members of this committee, representing rural America, simply will no longer tolerate the notion that you single out one segment of the economy to bear the burden," Rep. Tom Hagedorn, R-Minn., said Thursday.

During a meeting Thursday, the Agriculture subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains told its staff to draft provisions for the 1981 farm bill to require federal crop price supports to nearly double if another agriculture embargo is imposed for foreign policy reasons.

The proposal also make the increased support levels effective Oct. 1 if the existing embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union is still in place.

"It does not deal with the issue of whether or not food should be used as a weapon," said Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., subcommittee chairman, said of the proposal. "But if the president decides to do that, the farmers should be compensated."

While Foley said the new farm bill will include embargo protection provisions, he emphasized that the subcommittee's decisions Thursday were only tentative.

"This is not binding," he said. "This is just a test vote."

Later in the day, Budget director David A. Stockman told the Senate Agriculture Committee that his office would "most strenuously object" to a plan doubling price supports during embargoes for foreign purposes.

Gen. Bradley's lesson

An era came to an end Wednesday with the passing of Gen. Omar Bradley. He will go down in history as one of the great United States' military leaders of all times.

Gen. Bradley was an accomplished military man. He held the distinction of having commanded the largest force in United States history — 1.3 million men during World War II. He was the first man to chair the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Along with Gens. Dwight Eisenhower, H.H. Arnold, Douglas MacArthur and George C. Marshall, Gen. Bradley had the honor of being one of only five men to ever wear the five stars signifying a general of the army, a rank created during World War II.

Friends and foe alike could attest to the military prowess of Gen. Bradley; he was a formidable foe on the battlefield and yet a compassionate leader. He was known as a soldier's general.

It is, perhaps, paradoxical that while Gen. Bradley earned his reputation as a man of war, in reality the general detested war, saying "as far as I am concerned, war itself is immoral." Perhaps it is that paradox that separates great military leaders from those considered only extremely proficient at performing the duties of war.

Almost from the instant of his death in New York City, officials and military leaders throughout Texas and the nation began to praise the general for his leadership, his compassion, his selfless service to the nation. It should be noted that those who mourn his death number in the hundreds of thousands.

It's true that Gen. Bradley's death marks the end of the era of generals and that with it came the end of a violently romantic period, in the history of the nation and the world. But the general left us the wisdom to recognize that war in and of itself is "immoral."

That is the lesson from Gen. Omar Bradley we must not forget.

A 'socialist' confession

Weeks ago, the State Department released a carefully documented white paper tracing the flow of arms from Soviet-bloc countries to Communist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Predictably, the white paper and the evidence it contained was hotly disputed by the Soviet Union, Cuba and Nicaragua, all of whom piously disclaimed any involvement in arming Salvadoran guerrillas.

Just as predictably, domestic critics of the Reagan administration's policy in El Salvador attacked the white paper as a venture in speculation based on captured documents that may, they said, have been forgeries.

The net effect was to raise a cloud of doubt about the evidence detailed in the white paper and, in turn, about the State Department's conclusion that Cuba, Nicaragua and Vietnam were among the Soviet-bloc countries helping to funnel arms into El Salvador.

Unfortunately for the guerrillas and their friends abroad, no less an authority than Enrique Guatemala, spokesman for the Farabundo Marti People's Liberation Front and its political arm, the Democratic Revolutionary Front, has indulged in that rarest of Marxist practices — telling the truth.

Pressed by reporters at a Mexico City news conference, Mr. Guatemala confirmed that the guerrillas he represents are indeed obtaining arms from the "socialist bloc," the standard Marxist euphemism for the Soviet Union and its allies.

Enrique Guatemala was not so impolitic as to actually name the donor nations. No matter. What he did admit combined with the evidence compiled by the State Department leaves no doubt whatsoever that the Soviet bloc is actively intervening in El Salvador notwithstanding the disinformation being peddled in Moscow, Havana and Managua.

INSIDE REPORT

U.S.-Saudi Arabia arms deal endangers Mideast policy

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While President Reagan was lying in his hospital bed seven blocks away, the National Security Council (NSC), in secret session April 1, learned that his whole Middle East policy may founder on the U.S.-Saudi arms deal.

The nation's top policy-making officials for the first time were given an informal Senate headcount made by former Republican Sen. Jacob Javits at the request of the White House. It points to major defections sufficient to kill the arms deal if a vote were held today. The reason: Too many senators agree with Israel that Saudi Arabia is not giving enough in return for AWACS radar aircraft.

That raises this question: If Israeli opposition is viewed by other Mideast nations as strong enough in the U.S. Senate to overcome Ronald Reagan's first initiative in their region, what will happen to U.S. influence in the Arab world?

The Israeli government two months ago instructed its embassy here not to attack Reagan's plan to supply fuel tanks and missiles for the Saudi F-15's. Prime Minister Menahem Begin feared a bloody battle with the new, strongly pro-Israel president. But Reagan's decision to add the AWACS to the package changed Israel's mind, and the word from Jerusalem now is: Whatever the cost, stop Reagan's AWACS deal!

Evans

Novak

Helping that determination are the terms governing the AWACS sale, more favorable than the terms given West Germany several years ago. At the April 1 NSC meeting, Secretary of State Alexander Haig pointed this out and indicated he will try to win Saudi concessions when he goes to Riyadh on his current Mideast trip.

Haig repeatedly emphasized during the discussion that to get the deal through the Senate, critics would have to be persuaded that the U.S. was getting full money's worth from Saudi Arabia.

Countering Haig, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger argued that the Saudis have agreed in a formal memorandum to a "regional" defense concept for the first time in the history of that highly nationalistic, isolationist kingdom. That alone is a big concession, he said, suggesting that other cooperative defense moves may be possible in the U.S.-Saudi future.

But Haig asked whether the "regional" defense argument would be enough to persuade Congress. However valid that argument is in terms of Reagan's decision to foil Soviet intrusion into the Persian Gulf area, it may prove fatally flawed in terms of congressional politics.

Republican senators normally loyal to their new president have been getting signals from Israel that the Saudi deal will threaten Israel's military superiority in the Middle East. These senators protest that the AWACS are being sold to Saudi Arabia without any real quid pro quo.

That explains Weinberger's heavy emphasis on Saudi willingness to concede that its security is part of a "regional," anti-Soviet problem. But opponents of the deal, led by the pro-Israel lobby, want much more: a guarantee that in exchange for the AWACS the U.S. will get military facilities or base rights in the Saudi homeland. That, however, is regarded as out of the question by administration officials.

The opponents also argue that West Germany and other NATO states that have been sold AWACS automatically share with the U.S. all data picked up by these radar ships. No such arrangement has yet been negotiated with the Saudi government.

But the heart of Israel's objection has nothing to do with concessions to the U.S. It is the fear the Saudis could use their AWACS to monitor Israeli military actions or even to vector (set the course of) Syrian or other Arab aircraft on anti-Israel missions.

In the hospital, Reagan has not begun to concentrate on remedies to save his Saudi deal and the strategic plan for building power in the Persian Gulf it is supposed to preface. But he has almost three months before Congress will vote. That is time enough to avoid a defeat that would begin his administration with a show of weakness profoundly disturbing to U.S.-Arab relations.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Battle for North Africa continues in desert

WASHINGTON — On March 3, King Hassan II of Morocco announced to his countrymen that the five-year war for the Western Sahara had ended in victory. "The recovery of our Sahara has ended," he proclaimed.

Five days earlier and 500 miles away, Mohamed Abdel-Aziz, commander of the Algerian-backed Polisario rebel army, congratulated 2,000 of his guerrilla fighters on winning control of 90 percent of the disputed former Spanish colony.

The exchange of rhetoric was typical of this little-known desert war. There had been no dramatic change in the situation during that five-day interval. In fact, the boasts of both the king and the rebel leader were as empty of substance as the desert winds that whip continually across the desolate Colorado-sized territory.

I sent my associate Peter Grant to North Africa to take a first-hand look at the desert war. He spent a month there on both sides of the shifting "front lines," traversing more than 1,000 miles of the Western Sahara and interviewing dozens of officials, soldiers and prisoners-of-war. Here is his first report:

"At first glance, the Western Sahara — a dreary stretch of real estate encompassing craggy mountains, endless sand dunes and rocky planes that resemble the surface of the moon — hardly seems worth fighting over. What the war boils down to is prestige, phosphates and patriotism.

"Hassan laid his prestige — and possibly his throne — on the line when he declared the Western Sahara a part of historic Morocco in 1976. He also undoubtedly had his eye on the enormous phosphate deposits in the area, worth an estimated $6 billion. Most Western observers agree that the war has now become a matter of self-preservation for Hassan; they doubt that his regime would survive a withdrawal from the area.

"For the native tribes that furnish the Polisario guerrillas' manpower, the conflict is a patriotic war for independence. Like the fanatics of the Palestine Liberation Organization, their only alternative to fighting is a continued bleak existence in Algerian refugee camps, where they fled to escape Moroccan rule.

"I found that the Polisarios have organized the refugees — who include many nomads from drought-stricken areas of West Africa as well as an estimated 100,000 Saharoui inhabitants of the Western Sahara — into a spartan communal society where the state controls all activities. Children are put in boarding schools at the age of 6 and begin military training at 10. The struggle against Morocco is the overriding theme of the refugees' existence.

"Though heavily outnumbered by the Moroccan troops, the Polisario guerrillas have an equalizer: their intimate knowledge of the terrain. They have been able to force Hassan's soldiers into defensive perimeters around the major population centers, while the guerrillas roam the countryside at will.

"I traveled in Polisario Land Rovers all the way from a refugee camp in Tindouf, Algeria, to the Atlantic Ocean, and from the Mauritanian border on the south to abandoned Moroccan bases in the northern Ouarkiz Mountains. The guerrillas showed no sign of concern that they might meet enemy forces. We traveled in broad daylight, lit campfires at night and only rarely squinted up to see if Moroccan planes were attacking out of the sun.

"In an entire week, not a single Moroccan patrol was sighted as we crisscrossed the Western Sahara. We saw only one high-flying observation plane, possibly one of the OV-10s recently purchased from the United States.

"But there were unmistakable signs that the war is a real one: the silent ruins of Moroccan Army outposts, littered with destroyed vehicles, discarded weapons and decaying corpses.

"So far, the Polisarios' military victories have not brought the refugees out of their dismal camps. After every sortie, the guerrillas must retreat to safety across the Algerian border."

RENT-A-KEYSTONE-KOP: Administration plans to cut the Federal Protective Service from 2,300 officers to 600 will effectively turn the protection of Uncle Sam's property and personnel to the questionable competence of private guards who don't even have authority to arrest criminals they may catch red-handed.

This dubious economy move will hasten a 20-year trend toward the "rent-a-cop" system, which has increased from 107 guards covering 3 percent of federal property in 1960 to a projected 3,700 guarding more than half of our federal buildings this year.

The increase in rent-a-cop hiring has been paralleled by an increase in crime on U.S. property. Last year alone, property thefts in federal buildings rose 177 percent over 1979.

Police reports are rife with incidents in which contract guards shot at each other by mistake, mislaid their sidearms or had them stolen, and were found sleeping or drinking on duty.

When a rented guard does manage to nab a suspect, he must call Federal Protective Service officers on mobile patrol. These mobile units will be eliminated by the proposed budget cut.

Ironically, among the high-ranking government officials now protected by the FBS is the man who wants to cut their strength, Budget Director David Stockman.

CHARLEY REESE

Only three summers left to deter Soviet nuke strike?

As winter fades and spring creeps north from the tropics, the Reagan Administration has yet to fill important posts in the Defense and State Departments. Its whole attention seems focused on the economic program. Foreign policy seems left to press conferences and no grand strategy has been formulated, let alone adopted.

This may produce tragedy, for I suspect what the West has least of is time.

Now some Americans have a healthy faith in their government, particularly if it reflects their own philosophy. These are the people who say the government "knows" things we don't and so while it may appear to outsiders that mistakes are being made, that really isn't so.

It's true I, as one outsider, don't have access to CIA and National Security Agency intelligence, but I am a student of recent history and the study of history destroys your faith in the infallibility and expertise of political leaders. A government which can spend 10 years, $80 billion and 53,000 lives losing a war in Southeast Asia inspires confidence only in fools.

True, we can only guess at the intentions of the Soviet Union, but we can look at the cold record of their statements and of their actions and so draw some conclusions as to what their intentions are.

We know, for example, that the Soviet Union is ruled by revolutionaries, not politicians; we know that the basic dogma of their revolutionary creed is world revolution; we know that it is axiomatic to them that capitalism and communism cannot co-exist, that the two systems are locked into mortal combat; and we know that now, as in the beginning, they view the United States as the ultimate foe targeted for conquest.

We know that for more than 60 years no Soviet leader, publicly or privately, in speech or written word, has repudiated these beliefs nor has any Soviet leader acted in such a way that a reasonable person could interpret his acts as a repudiation of communist world revolutionary theory.

We know, too, from published Soviet material that the Soviet Union does not view nuclear war as either unthinkable or unwinnable.

We know that the Soviet military devised a strategy based on war-winning, not deterrence, and we know that the Soviet military machine is designed, equipped, and trained on that basis.

We know, too, that beginning in 1962, the Soviet Union embarked on an unprecedented military buildup which continues to this moment. We know this was undertaken at tremendous cost (they have outspent the U.S. by $200 billion in the last 10 years) and they have pursued it even though it has strained the Soviet economy to the breaking point.

At this moment, Soviet factories continue to pour out weapons at a war-time rate. To give you an idea of the prodigious rate of production, the Soviets have given Libya 2,000 tanks. By comparison, Great Britain, a major NATO ally, has only 900 tanks.

The key question is, why? The Soviets have known for a long time that the United States would never make a pre-emptive first strike. They reached equivalence in the strategic weapons area sometime in the 1970s. Why have they continued on past that point?

One answer could be that they are intent on having such overwhelming military power that they can pursue, through subversion and diplomacy, their goal of world conquest without undue interference from the United States. But another answer could be that several years ago, the Soviet leadership made the decision to launch a military attack on the U.S. and the West and conclude the 60-year-old struggle for world domination.

If the latter is the case, then time is very short for the West to act either to avoid the attack or to prepare to survive it. The Soviets must know that the mid-1980s represent not only their optimum time frame, but their last chance. The Soviet economy cannot continue the strain of the arms race, while the larger economies of the West could easily double their efforts if the political leadership had the will. As the trouble in Poland indicates, the Soviet empire shows serious signs of internal rot. China, while not now a credible threat, most certainly will become one in the late 1980s. Even the trends in the weather portend increasing problems for Soviet agriculture.

The most dangerous myth in the West, encouraged no-doubt by Soviet disinformation efforts, is that nuclear war would destroy the world and is therefore unthinkable. Not only do the Soviets not believe it, but there is no scientific evidence at all that the number of nuclear detonations necessary to defeat the United States would cause unacceptable damage to the northern hemisphere.

Furthermore, you have to remember that the Soviet leadership is composed of criminal psychopaths who have risen to and maintained their power at the expense of an estimated 44 million lives. Such people will surely weigh the price of victory on a different scale than Western politicians.

I believe there is enough evidence to make the scenario of a Soviet surprise attack at least a possibility and that's why I am distressed at the slow pace with which the Reagan Administration is moving. We may have only three summers left in which to act.

Border Patrol 'just doing its job' ness, more than any inherent compassionate tendencies, that brings him to treat the illegal aliens whom he apprehends with respect and dignity.

HENSLEY, WHO has worn the insignia of the Border Patrol and strapped its official weaponry — a .357 magnum — at his hip 15 years, started out in law enforcement as a Department of Public Safety trooper. He next moved on to duty as a city policeman in Littlefield, and then pursuit of financial stability for his wife and infant daughter led him to sign up with the Border Patrol.

"I turned 26 on a Dec. 31st and started in on Jan. 2nd," he recalls. "I was sent to the academy (in Port Isabel) in the winter, and I moved my wife into a little tourist court down there behind an orange grove." His family since has followed him to El Centro, Calif., Pecos, Big Spring, Eagle Pass and then back to Big Spring three years ago when he received a promotion to supervisor of the regional station.

At a north Midland construction site, Hensley stops the van beside stacks of lumber and watches through a chain-link fence as his fellow officers take an illegal alien into custody. The man, 35, perhaps 40, with blue cap and soiled hands, offers no resistance, only calm acceptance of his fate. As the agents escort him to the construction office to "clean him up" — Border Patrol slang for allowing him to collect his wages and belongings — Hensley is asked if it is uncommon for a wetback to go along so peaceably.

When Hensley begins talking in detail about his job and the exact procedure following apprehension of illegal aliens, the impression surfaces that it is all just a game, one without ultimate victors. He picks up wetbacks in the 10 counties patrolled by his Big Spring station, then within only hours, or days at the most, an INS bus transports them to Ojinaga, where directly across the Rio Grande they "get out and go their merry way."

THEIR "MERRY WAY," more often than not, is right back across the river into the United States, once they feel safely harbored by darkness against apprehension by la Migra. In a few days' time the very same illegal aliens may be working the identical construction or oil field sites, without losing as much as a week's pay.

"That's the way it's played," Hensley says, nodding. "When we put them in the back of the van they're us'llly singin' and whistlin' — they know they'll be back."

The most extreme example of what degree a game it has become, he says, occurred a few years ago when he picked up a wetback on a Friday afternoon in Dallas. The man was processed and flown to El Paso that night, then released across the international bridge in Juarez.

"Well," says Hensley, shaking his head, "he grabbed a freight train comin' outa Chihuahua and I caught him comin' through Big Spring on a boxcar Sunday mornin'." He said he didn't wanna miss a day of work.

Despite charges by some factions that his may be a useless job, Hensley has a different outlook. "I don't feel that way at all," he says. He nods to a two-story brick structure as the van again speeds down a Midland thoroughfare. "I feel like if we weren't out here, they'd (illegal aliens) be stacked up as high as that wall over there."

BUT EVEN SO, he says, he is aware that his station barely skims the surface. "We'd like to have a lot more efficient operation,"

Congressmen agree SS action needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Congressman Jake Pickle said other members of his subcommittee may not see eye to eye with his bill to shore up the shaky Social Security retirement fund, but said all agree with him that something has to be done soon.

"Those who depend on this great social program fear it will dwindle before their eyes. Those who do not yet receive benefits fear it will be gone when their time comes," the Democrat from Austin said Thursday in a speech on the House floor.

Pickle's bill includes all 23 proposals his Social Security subcommittee had agreed upon as part of a first-draft bill to be put before the House for its consideration. Among them is the recommendation that the full retirement age be moved from 65 to 68 by the year 2000.

But Pickle's proposal that the retirement fund balance be rescued by the transfer of $22 billion from the more stable Medicare fund is one of four proposals the subcommittee had not agreed upon.

"This is a Pickle bill, not a subcommittee bill. The transfer of funds from Medicare is controversial, but I would ask members if they don't want to take funds from (Medicare), what is their alternative?" Pickle asked at an afternoon news conference.

"We can pass a bandaid approach for next year, hope that all goes perfectly with the economy and hope that we will need to do nothing further. Or we can take more decisive action. Our answer here will determine whether the people have a Social Security program — or a social "insecurity" program — two, three and four years from now."

Current projections show the large retirement fund will run out of reserves to pay benefits some time next year unless more money is siphoned during this session of Congress.

"No more important challenge faces the government today than restoring confidence in social security," Pickle said.

Pickle said his bill is also an effort to comply with President Reagan's budget recommendations that call for $2.4 billion in cuts in social security.

Corpus Christi witnesses disagree on redistricting

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Proposed changes in state and congressional legislative districts have drawn mixed reactions from witnesses who testified before a state senate subcommittee.

Jimmie Lyles, executive vice president of the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce, told the redistricting committee Thursday the 14th Congressional District "should remain intact." He said the district, represented by Rep. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, "has served us well."

The 1980 census shows the district has 544,736 people, about 3 percent more than the size the subcommittee would like to see.

In Senate District 20, represented by Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, another 48,000 people are needed to bring the district up to size.

Tony Bonilla, national executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, told the committee that extra voters could be trimmed from Jim Wells and Brooks Counties.

The two counties are compatible with the rest of the district because they share common interests, Bonilla said.

The subcommittee also heard suggestions on possible changes in the 20th Congressional District and Senate District 1.

but we come up here and have 10 counties and just me'n those two men to work 'em," he says. "That's 2250 square miles per man, and we're one short right now." He takes a deep breath and readjusts his position behind the steering wheel. "Needless to say, we don't go down ever" little road.... We don't have enough men, and see that mileage on this truck? That 49,000 should have a 'one' before it."

He slings a gnarled hand toward the grillwork that separates the cab from the detention area behind. "We only got seven seats back there and us'llly just one unit workin'." The objective when you leave the office ever mornin' is to fill that truck up."

The other van stops at a residential construction site, and Hensley watches as officer Jim Stone talks with a young man sitting atop the cab of a pickup. Upon returning to his unit Stone's voice crackles

over the radio. "We were a little bit late on that one, Charlie — there's six pair of rubber boots (for concrete work) sittin' over there and nobody to wear 'em."

HENSLEY SHRUGS it off and drives onward, as though a feeling of complacency is commonplace in his vocation. "This is a very relaxed job, there's nothin' pressin' about it," he draws. "Maybe one of our guilts is that we take the easy ones. It doesn't make sense to wear ourselves out one place when there's more right down the road. And those we miss here today, they'll still be here tomorrow."

He nods toward a multi-storied skyscraper looming against the Midland horizon. "There's illegals all over that thing up there, but you never saw so much trouble in your life as you'd have once you tried gettin' 'em down.... One time we got after this illegal and he crawled out on the end of one of those cranes. You never saw anybody as scared as he was, or us either when we went out after 'im. We didn't enjoy it much, but we got 'im."

Danger, though, is a rarity in his profession, says Hensley, as long as "we don't get careless." His index finger never has squeezed the trigger of his .357 magnum in the line of duty, and when asked how often he has drawn his weapon, he merely shakes his head.

However, occasions have arisen during his tenure as a Border Patrolman in which he has found himself in a potentially lethal situation.

A FEW YEARS ago while stationed along the border at Eagle Pass, he recalls, he and another unit got involved in high-speed pursuit of a supposed alien smuggler who kept crashing into la Verde's patrol cars and knocking them off the road. Hensley's vehicle reached speeds of 120 miles per hour during the chase, which ended when the smuggler's engine blew up and became engulfed in flames, shrouding the roadway in smoke.

"Me and the other Border Patrolman ran right through it and somehow we switched positions on the road," Hensley remembers with a grin. "I was leadin' 'im goin' in, and when we came out there he was leadin' me."

The smuggler, meanwhile, had abandoned his fiery vehicle and was apprehended, along with seven San Salvadoran women.

While the Border Patrol is his profession, it is not his life, and when he turns 50 in 10 years he plans on "checkin' it to 'em" and moving on to "bigger and better things, like fishin' and sleepin' late in the mornin'."

But for now, more building sites loom ahead. He stops and assists his officers in escorting another undocumented worker into the van. The foreman comes up. "Aren't you the one that stopped our truck last week and picked up the same man?" he asks of the Big Spring supervisor.

THE FOREMAN IS partially right. The Mexican national had told Hensley on that occasion that his wife was living in Midland, so the Border Patrolman had carried him home and filed papers allowing them three days to leave the country.

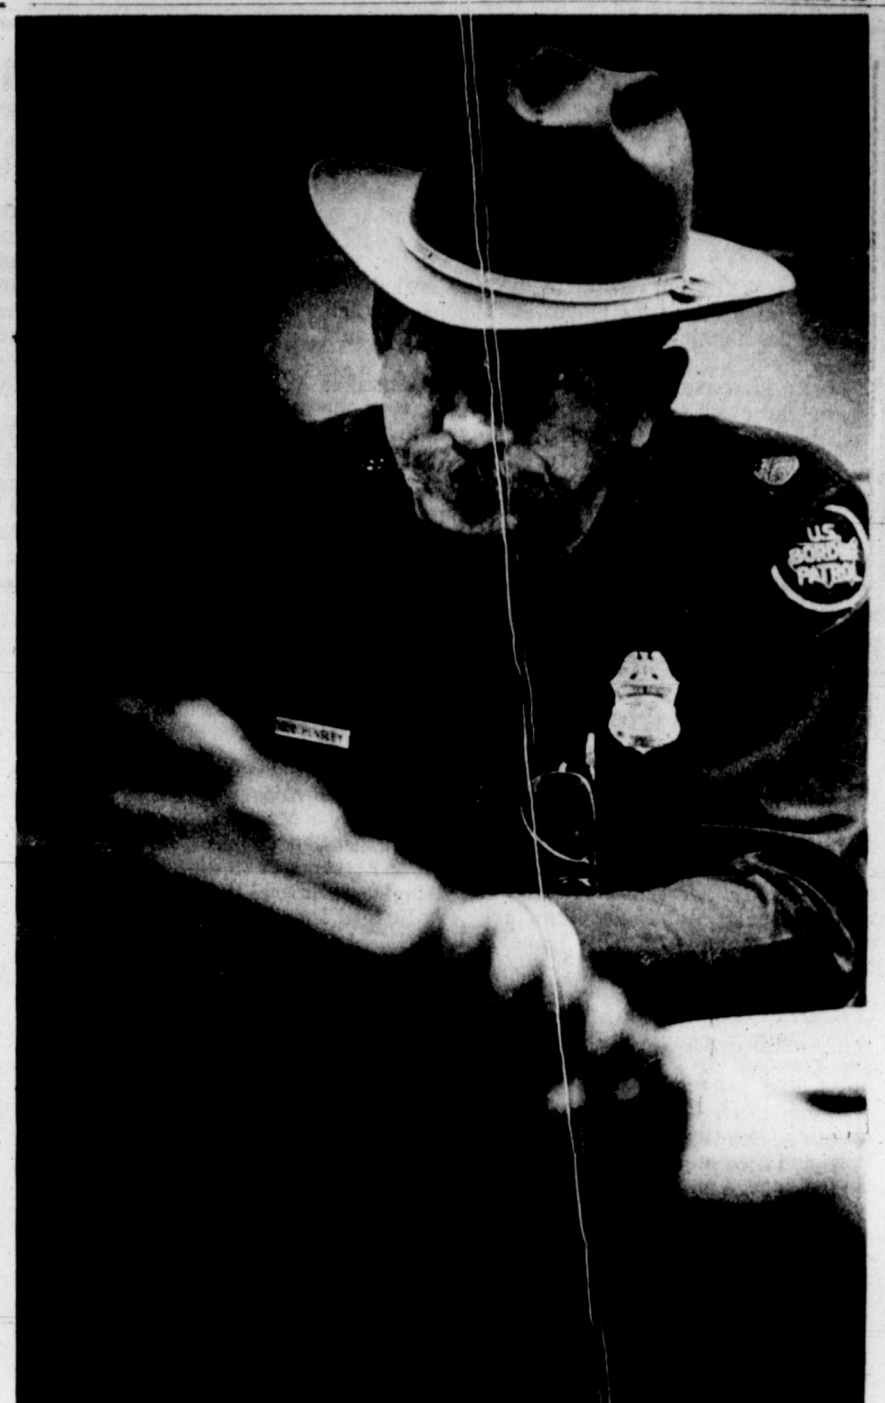

"He was back on the job in an hour," says the foreman.

Hensley nods. "We'll take 'im with us this time," he promises.

Inside the van the Mexican national eases back into the seat and stares through the window at the construction site. He knows he'll be bused back to Ojinaga, which likely will keep him off the job a week this time instead of an hour.

As for Hensley, well, he has more sites to check "down the road" and more wetbacks to apprehend. He knows his job, all right — even if it is just part of a game.

NOTE: Watch for editorial on illegal aliens on Page 6F of Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Border Patrolman Charles Hensley of Big Spring files papers on an illegal Mexican alien in a downtown Midland firm, allowing him one month to obtain legal resident alien status or face deportation. "I've been in the United States 10 years and don't know what I'll do if they send me back," says the mojado.

Volcano emits steam plume

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A steam plume laden with a "small amount of ash" blasted 15,500 feet into the air today as Mount St. Helens staged a small, "isolated eruption," the U.S. Geological Survey said.

The USGS had earlier in the day issued an "eruption alert" for Mount St. Helens, predicting the southwestern Washington volcano would erupt during the day.

An increase in shallow volcanic earthquakes on the cloud-shrouded mountain prompted the alert, which is the highest warning stage issued by the USGS and the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle.

"Seismicity at Mount St. Helens has continued to increase and an eruption will probably begin this morning," USGS geologist Susan Russell

Robinson said early today. "We don't know yet what kind of an eruption is likely," she said.

An eruption could take the form of the non-explosive "dome-building" eruptions of December and February, which added to the size of the lava dome in the volcano's crater, she said.

Or it could involve dome-building with minor flows of superheated volcanic debris and gas or a series of tiny ash eruptions or a larger ash eruption, similar to the mountain's blasts of last summer.

The restricted access U.S. Forest Service red and blue zones extending 20 miles around the mountain have been closed, the geologist said.

Federal, state and local authorities have been notified of the increased danger, as have private concerns such as timber companies, she said.

Chinese foreign minister planning India visit

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government said today that Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua will visit here this summer. It would be the first visit to India by a Chinese foreign minister since the two countries fought a border war in 1962.

"We hope the visit will take place in the next two months," Indian spokesman J.N. Dixit told reporters. However, he did not announce any date.

Dixit said that the two governments have been in touch about Hua's proposed visit, which was postponed last year following apparent Chinese displeasure over Indian recognition of the Vietnam-supported Heng Samrin regime in Cambodia.

In 1976, India and China exchanged ambassadors after a 14-year gap and in 1979, the then Indian external affairs minister, A.B. Vajpayee, toured China.

Brezhnev

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev says the most important problems facing the Soviet Union and its East bloc allies are economic, the Czechoslovak state news agency reported today.

"For all of us, the economic front is the main one at present," the Soviet president and party chief was officially quoted as telling Czechoslovak leaders.

In the account of Brezhnev's remarks provided by the Czechoslovak state news agency there was no direct mention of Poland, whose economy is the weakest in the bloc.

Brezhnev's comments followed the election of a new 123-member central committee of Czechoslovakia's Communist Party in a closed session Thursday. Foreign ministry officials said they would be his last public remarks at the Prague gathering, which ended today.

At today's closing session, Brezhnev was greeted with rhythmic clapping and chants of "friendship, friendship." Czechoslovak leader Gustav Husak, 68, announced his re-election as general secretary of the Communist Party, a post he has held since 1969.

He said the Soviet bloc entered the 1980s "stronger in all respects."

El Paso mourns Bradley

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Soldiers stood at rigid attention and an Army band played "Nearer My God To Thee" as a military honor guard brought the flag-draped coffin of Gen. Omar N. Bradley back to the fort that had become his home.

A 19-gun salute and brief ceremony was planned at Fort Bliss today to honor the country's last five-star general, whose body will lie at the post's adobe chapel until Monday morning. Burial is to be Tuesday at Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington.

The general's body was returned to Texas from New York aboard a presidential jet Thursday, with Bradley's widow, Kitty, accompanying the coffin.

Bradley, who was 88, died Wednesday night at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital in New York after suffering a heart attack while attending a dinner.

Military leaders and Mrs. Bradley attended a brief private service here Thursday night.

Later, soldiers and civilians filed past the closed casket in a quiet tribute to the first chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the last of the nation's great World War II commanders. He led American forces in the D-Day invasion at Normandy, France, on June 6, 1944.

"For 69 years he wore the colors of an American soldier — with courage, integrity, professionalism and, above all, honor," President Reagan said Thursday. "Even as he rose in rank, humility never left his side. He was the 'GI' general' because he was, always, a GI."

Shuttle facts listed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Here are facts and figures for the maiden flight of the American space shuttle, Columbia:

Mission length: Planned for 36 revolutions of the globe in 54½ hours. Could be extended an extra day if all is going well.

Astronauts: John Young, 50, veteran of four earlier space flights, and Navy Capt. Robert Crippen, 43, making his first trip.

Goal: Extensive in-orbit testing of major systems of the world's first reusable spaceship.

Boost power: Three main Columbia engines with thrust of 1.1 million pounds and two solid fuel rockets generating 5.3 million pounds of thrust. The solids, first ever used on a manned mission, are to parachute into the Atlantic Ocean for recovery and reuse.

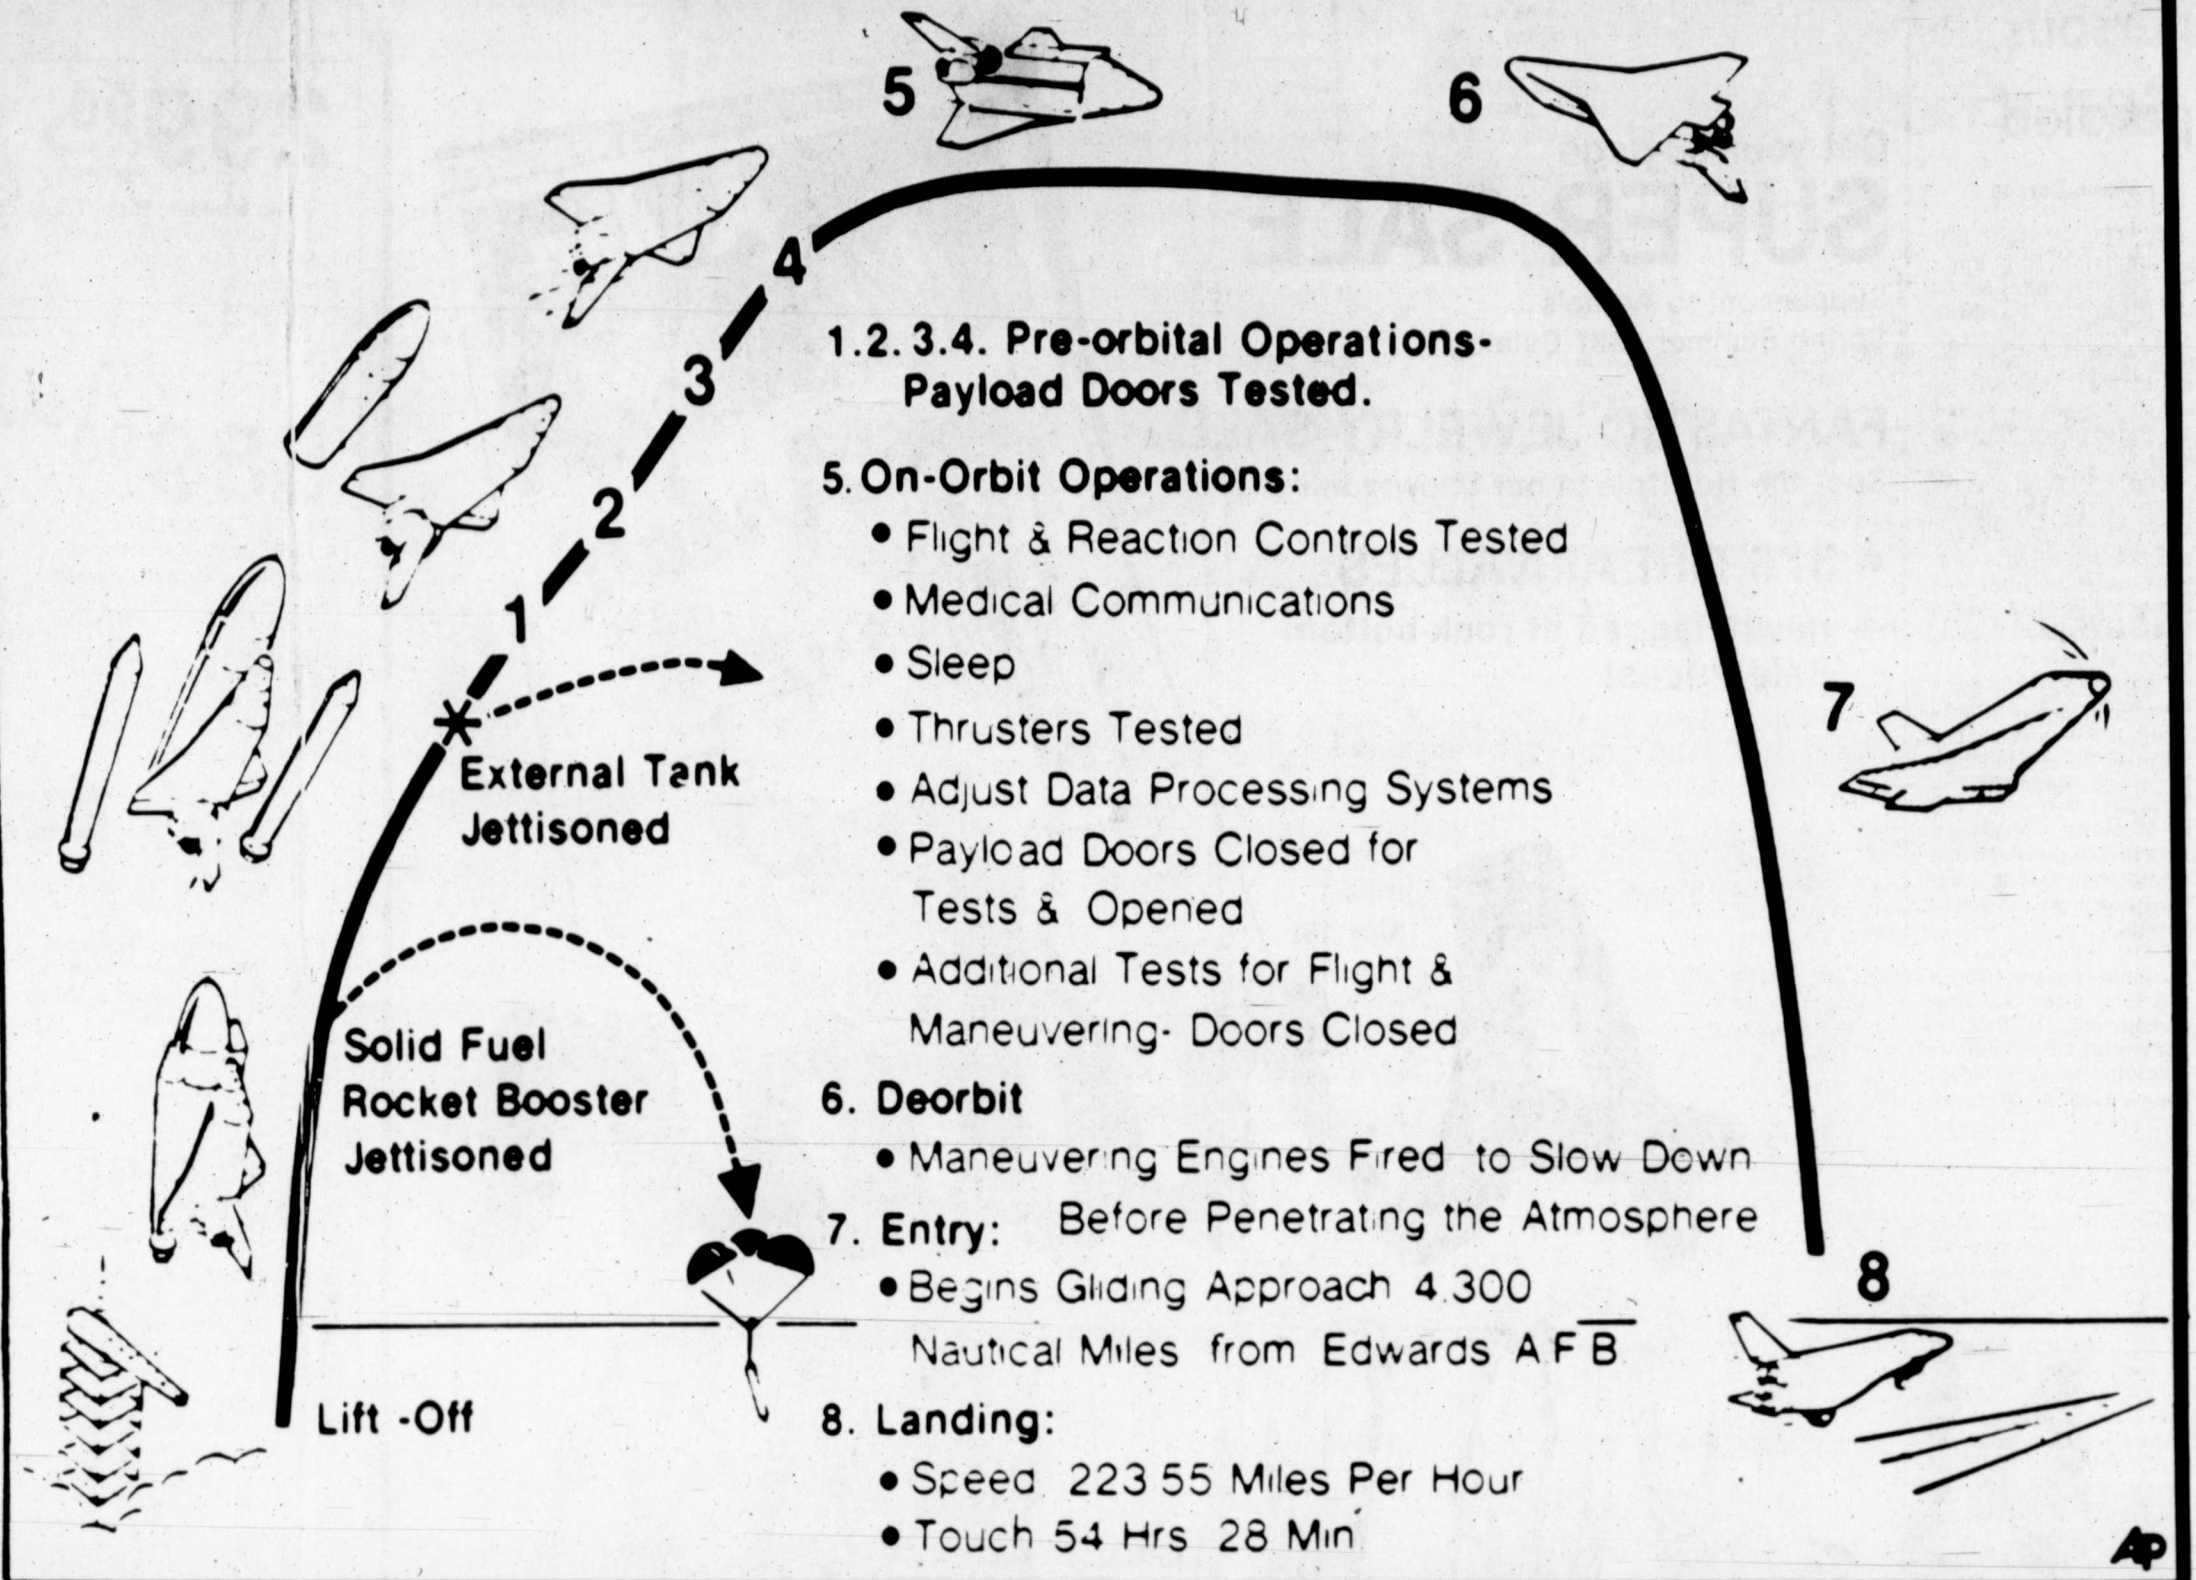

Landing: Like an engineless airliner, glides onto the Rogers Dry Lake at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Contingency landing sites: Cape Canaveral; White Sands, N.M.; Rota, Spain; Kadena, Okinawa, and Hickam Field, Hawaii.

Cost: NASA has spent $9.9 billion to develop the space shuttle. That, the space agency says, is 29 percent more than officials said it would cost when the project started in 1971.

The original cost estimate for design, development, testing, engineering and delivery of a test craft, the Enterprise, and the first flight vehicle, the Columbia, was $5.2 billion, in fiscal year 1971 dollars. When inflation is factored in, the agency said, the $9.9 billion cost actually equates to $6.7 billion in 1971 dollars.

FLIGHT OF THE COLUMBIA

After ten years and $9.9 billion—another delay

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia followed a long and tortuous path to the launch pad, suffering technical nightmares and the barbs of critics who called it a lot of unflattering things: Space Turkey, Aluminum Dumbo, The Spruce Goose of Outer Space.

Critics may sound off again today after computer problems delayed until Sunday the rescheduled launching of the revolutionary new machine into space.

More than two years behind schedule, it's a marvel the shuttle made it to the pad at all.

"From the very beginning of the program, a lot of things were done wrong," said Robert Gray, manager of the shuttle project office here. "The biggest problem has been money."

Budgetary and technological compromises, bureaucratic maneuvering, and underestimating the complexity of building a reusable spaceship all figure in the story.

It begins with the dropoff in the U.S. space effort after the first Apollo moon landing in 1969.

Euphoric after that success, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration prepared ambitious plans: Large manned space stations, moon bases and an astronaut flight to Mars before the end of the century, all based on the economics of reusable vehicles to shuttle between Earth and space.

But the political environment in the early 1970s was not conducive to such grandiose ideas, and NASA's dreams were derailed by Congress and the Nixon administration.

Only the shuttle survived, chiefly because any future space operations could be done much more cheaply with a reusable booster.

The original plan called for a shuttle ship the size of a Boeing 747 jetliner to boost a smaller craft, the size of a Boeing 707, into orbit. Both would be manned and the larger ship would land immediately after launch on a concrete runway near the launch pad. The orbiter vehicle would have jet engines to facilitate a landing at the end of a mission.

The space agency estimated the cost of this dual, fully reusable machine at $10 billion. President Nixon's budget directors told NASA to do it for half that.

Because the Defense Department would be a major user of the shuttle for its spy satellites and other military assignments, the agency also had to design the vehicle to meet more stringent weight, re-entry, thermal and other requirements than it had intended.

That military role, in fact, has kept the project from slipping even further behind. In late 1979, the Pentagon convinced President Carter that the shuttle was vital to national defense, and Carter provided more money.

Engineers redesigned, reprogrammed and rebudgeted and came up with the present shuttle configuration: An orbiter the size of a small DC-9 jetliner which is assisted into orbit by two solid fuel rockets, both intended for recovery and reuse. At super speeds, the craft glides through the atmosphere to Earth; there is no jet engine to aid a landing.

Congress was hesitant at first to fund even the pared-down project, but several defense-minded congressmen came to NASA's aid. In a major miscalculation, the agency told Congress the program would require no technological breakthroughs.

But two major areas called for such breakthroughs: the three-engine hydrogen-oxygen powerplant which carries the shuttle into orbit, and the shield tiles that protect the craft from re-entry heat.

Early in the program, it became apparent the high-powered engines would have to be developed as a new rocket system. They burn fuel at several thousand degrees hotter than the boiling point of most metals and deliver total thrust of more than one million pounds.

They pack three times more power for their weight than the J-2 engines that boosted the Apollo astronauts. Unlike the J-2s, they are not dropped into the ocean after takeoff, but are to be reused for as many as 55 flights and to be throttled up and down, producing more or less power as needed.

NASA was not prepared for this, technically or financially. It began cutting corners.

During the earlier Mercury, Gemini and Apollo manned programs, engine components were tested individually and then were assembled for final evaluation. For the shuttle, NASA and the engine manufacturer, Rocketdyne, adopted a "success-oriented" program that assumed all the major components — pumps, seals, lines, nozzles, bearings — would work and could be tested as a unit in the engine.

"They were gang-tested only after the systems were assembled," said one engineer. The result: Bearings overheated and started fires; seals ruptured or leaked, causing fires and explosions; turbopump blades cracked, and welded parts failed.

One by one, the problems were solved, and the engines were declared flight ready, two years behind schedule. Even if they had been ready on time, the project would have been delayed for at least that long by the thermal tile trouble.

Some 30,922 heat-resistant tiles are joned to the vehicle's surface, each individually contoured to fit the aluminum skin. Earlier spacecraft were protected with ablative materials that burned away during re-entry. But ablatives are not practical for the shuttle because they are not reusable.

When Rockwell International, the vehicle's prime contractor, delivered Columbia to Cape Canaveral in 1979, engineers discovered thousands of tiles would not withstand the 2,700 degree re-entry heat and thousands more had been poorly installed.

Technicians spent 18 months redesigning, retreating and reinstalling before Columbia was finally able to move to the launch pad last December.

In late January, another problem. During a fueling test, 34 of about 400 insulation panels on the shuttle's external fuel tank came unglued when liquid propellants were fed into the tank for the first time.

Several more weeks were lost while these sections were replaced. The March launch date was set for April.

NASA language explained

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Here is a glossary of words, phrases and acronyms that may be used in air-to-ground conversations during the flight of the space shuttle Columbia:

Abort — To cut short the mission, or a procedure, especially because of equipment failure.

Acquisition — Contact between spacecraft and ground.

AOA — Abort-Once-Around. A critical failure that would force the shuttle to land near the end of its first orbit at White Sands Missile Range, N.M.

ATO — Abort to Orbit. Launch abort in which enough power is available to reach a 120 mile high orbit, but not enough to reach the desired 172 miles.

Attitude — Orientation of a vehicle.

C&W — Caution and Warning.

Cryogenic — Very low temperature, as in a cryogenic fuel.

DCS — Display Control System. Tells astronauts the status of spacecraft functions.

EAFB — Edwards Air Force Base. The Mojave desert facility designated the shuttle's prime landing site.

Elevon — A horizontal control surface on the shuttle, combining functions of an elevator and aileron.

EVA — Extravehicular activity. Astronaut activity outside the spacecraft.

Flash Evaporator — A means of dissipating heat built up in the spacecraft.

Gimbal — Device that allows the engines to swivel.

HPU — Hydraulic Power Unit. Powers landing controls such as wing flaps and landing gear.

IMU — Inertial Measurement Unit. The device that tells the astronauts exactly where they are in space.

JSC — Johnson Space Center. The NASA facility in Houston that controls the spacecraft from the time it clears the launch tower.

KSC — Kennedy Space Center. The Cape Canaveral, Fla., facility where the shuttle is launched.

LOX-LO2 — Liquid Oxygen. Provides oxidizer for the hydrogen fuel that feeds the spacecraft engines until orbit is reached.

MECO — Main Engine Cutoff. The engine shutdown, 8 minutes 32 seconds after launch, when the shuttle is traveling 16,697 mph at an altitude of 74 miles. The orbiter is then 852 miles from the launch site.

MET — Mission Elapsed Time. The clock starts running at liftoff.

OMS — Orbital Maneuvering System. The phrase OMS-burn means an engine firing in orbit to speed up or slow the spacecraft and thus change height of the orbit.

PLBD — Payload bay door. The doors running the length of the airplane-shaped orbiter. A primary goal of the first flight is to test the opening, closing and locking action of the 60 foot doors.

Astronaut's mother didn't think son could pass physical exam

PORTER, Texas (AP) — Betty Crippen reared her son in this small southeast Texas community where old timers remember the boy talking of flying to the moon and pictures of the astronaut now line the walls of his mother's modest "Beer Place."

And despite heart and diabetic conditions, Crippen's 66-year-old mother planned to be at Cape Canaveral this morning to watch her son live out one of his dreams.

Mrs. Crippen and her husband, Herbert, who died about four years ago, moved their family to Porter 40 years ago from Ville Platte, La.

She runs a no-name "Beer Place" located next door to a neat, white stucco home where she and her husband, Herbert, lived and raised a family.

"Bob likes this place," Mrs. Crippen said. "He brings his friends from the space center here."

There are pictures of the astronaut son behind the counter and a space shuttle model autographed by the Crippen and Young.

"I'm on my 36th beer license," says Mrs. Crippen, who doesn't drink. "I can't drink the stuff."

"It was in my husband's name at first. They wouldn't let women have one then. This used to be a Gulf filling station, and for a time we served meals. It's just a beer place now."

Robert Crippen, 43, recalls the town he grew up in as a sleepy, country sawmill town southeast of Houston.

Former classmates remember Crippen playing tenor sax in a band, as president of his junior and senior classes, as the best dancer, the most likely to succeed, and as salutatorian.

Troy Jones, a regular customer, and Mrs. Crippen agreed that Bob studied almost every evening during his high school days.

"Before any of this stuff started, a long time ago, he used to talk about flying to the moon," Jones said.

Crippen's sister, Betty Monroe, says her brother bought model airplanes with motors at about age 11.

"He was talking about being a test pilot even then," she said.

"Bob is left-handed and he never could write worth a flip," Mrs. Crippen said. "We bought him a typewriter in, I think, it was the eighth grade."

She said his thoughts about being a pilot did not bother her.

"I wasn't worried about him getting in because I didn't think he could pass the physical," she said.

Betty Crippen, 66, mother of Columbia pilot Robert Crippen, sports a space shuttle T-shirt at the no-name "Beer Place" she runs in the country town of Porter, Texas. Betty, a non-drinker, has run the "Beer Place" for 36 years.

Shuttles named for ships

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia and the three space shuttles that follow — Challenger, Discovery and Atlantis — bear the names of famous American ships of exploration.

In the past, astronauts named their craft. No longer.

The names of the four craft, which may make a total of 400 flights in the next decade, were selected, naturally, by a committee at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Launched in 1835, Columbia was one of the first U.S. Navy ships to circumnavigate the globe. Challenger, also a Navy vessel, made a prolonged exploration of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans from 1872 to 1876.

Discovery of latest victim gives task force new clues

ATLANTA (AP) — The discovery of a retarded man's body in an abandoned building has given police "all kinds of fingerprints" to work with in the unsolved deaths of 23 young Atlanta blacks.

The body of Larry Rogers, a 20-year-old who looked like a teen-ager, was found Thursday in an apartment complex less than a mile from his home. He had been missing since March 30.

"We've got all kinds of fingerprints," state crime lab Director Larry Howard said Thursday night. "But the question is, who do they belong to?"

Medical officials were conducting an autopsy today to determine how Rogers died. Fulton County Medical Examiner Robert Stivers said the body bore no gunshot wounds, stab wounds or other obvious external injuries.

The body was partially decomposed, Stivers said, indicating Rogers was killed within days of March 30, when he was seen climbing into a faded green station wagon driven by a lone black man.

Stivers said authorities went over the abandoned building "inch by inch," collecting anything that might prove important. It will be several days before investigators will be able to determine the importance of any of the material, he said.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown refused to discuss possible new evidence when he announced the identity of the body.

Brown would say only that the crime lab, the medical examiners' office and the special 90-member police task force assigned to investigate the slayings and two disappearances would be evaluating the evidence in the coming days.

In most of the previous slayings, police have had little to go on because the bodies were dumped in rivers or isolated areas throughout metropolitan Atlanta, leaving few clues behind.

Only one victim before Rogers was found in a building. The body of 9-year-old Yusef Bell was found inside an abandoned school in November 1979.

An ambulance driver who asked not to be identified said Rogers' body was clothed only in underwear and gym shorts. Rogers was wearing a pullover and jeans when last seen.

Three other victims in the slayings dating to July 1979 were found clad only in undershorts, including 21-year-old Eddie "Bubba" Duncan, whose body was pulled from the Chattahoochee River last week.

Duncan and Rogers are the only adults on the task force list, and both have been described by police as being small in stature and mildly retarded.

The discovery of Rogers' body leaves two young blacks still on the task force's list of missing youths. Darron Glass, 10, disappeared Sept. 14, and Joseph Bell, 15, was last seen March 2.

Police were attracted to the boarded up housing complex where Rogers' body was found by a report of an abandoned car in front of the building. The car, a green Buick, had been reported stolen, reportedly by a light-skinned black man, from a fashionable neighborhood two days before Rogers disappeared.

Brown said police had found no link between the car and the slaying. He said the license of the car did not match that of the green station wagon in which Rogers reportedly was seen last.

The witness who last saw Rogers had told police the man driving the faded green car was a light-skinned black man, about 55 years old, with long gray-black hair and a "false-looking" moustache.

The witness' description enabled police to put together a composite drawing of the man.

"We are greatly concerned about the identity of the man in the composite," Brown said. "We again request that the person, whoever he may be, come to the task force headquarters."

Policeman charged in kidnap ring

MIAMI (AP) — In 1979 David Rogers was chosen policeman of the year in the nearby suburb of Medley, a town with a "fine police department," in the words of one official.

This week he and an ex-policeman are accused of being part of a multimillion-dollar kidnapping ring that has been linked to three killings, including that of a man found in a canal with cement blocks bound to his body, authorities said.

The ex-officer, 30-year-old Jose Prieto, surrendered to authorities Thursday on kidnapping charges. He faces a bond hearing today.

Prieto, who had been free after posting bond on a concealed-weapons charge, is a former officer of several South Florida police forces.

Police are investigating the possibility that other officers were involved in the gang, but there are no specific suspects, officials said.

Authorities said the victims, many of them high-level drug dealers, were stopped for traffic violations by people who identified themselves as plainclothes detectives.

The victims, told they were being arrested and taken to jail, would instead end up at a house — blindfolded, bound and held for $1 million or their lives, according to Dade County police Sgt. Mike Gonzalez.

"This caught us all off guard," said Medley City Attorney Maynard Gross. "We happen to have a fine police department."

The gang was responsible for numerous kidnappings around Dade

County over the past six months, police believe. But authorities say they're uncertain how many people were victims because some paid the $1 million ransom without reporting the crimes.

Rogers was in uniform when police arrested him Tuesday on kidnapping charges at his luxurious home in south Dade County.

Miami homicide Detective Andrew Sundberg said he became "sickeningly aware" a few months ago that rumors about police involvement in the scheme were more than just rumors. The men posing as officers were not imposters.

Escapee held in crime spree

BLYTHE, Calif. (AP) — A Monterey County jail escapee was in custody Thursday following a crime spree that began in Missouri three weeks ago and apparently culminated with the murder of a Texas woman near this Colorado River town last month, sheriff's deputies said.

Kelvin Shelby Malone, 20, of Seaside, Calif., was turned over to the Riverside County Sheriff's Department on Wednesday by San Jose police, who had arrested him in Northern California after a high-speed chase in which three squad cars were wrecked, Riverside sheriff's Sgt. Floyd Marlowe said.

Arrested with Malone in San Jose was Michael Terry Crenshaw, 18, of St. Louis, Mo. Riverside County murder warrants were issued against both men after credit cards belonging to Minnie Ola White, 51, of Silsbee, Texas, were found in the stolen car they were driving.

Keeping the sofa in place

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — The other day, when we had company at our house, someone sat on our living room sofa and made an amusing remark when the sofa slid into the wall. That started a general conversation about how difficult it is to keep this from happening on a polished wooden floor, as ours is. Several persons came up with suggestions on how to keep this from happening, but none appeared to be practical. Do you have any ideas on this subject, which seems to interest a lot of people?

A. — Many years ago we used to put a piece of 2 by 4 on the floor behind the sofa, the objective being to keep that piece of furniture from getting close to the wall because a long baseboard heater was located there. It worked fairly well, but the disadvantage was that the sofa could still slide sideways and often did. Also, the 2 by 4 had to be repositioned every so often. I finally cut out three pieces of 2 by 4 about 6 inches long and cut notches in each of them to enclose each of the rear legs of the sofa. Somewhat reluctantly, I screwed each piece of wood to the floor, after first drilling pilot holes for the screws and making certain the pieces were perfectly positioned. When the sofa was placed so that the rear legs fitted into the notches, there was no way for the sofa to move backwards or sideways, but it could still be moved forward for cleaning purposes. In considering such a method of keeping a piece of furniture in place on a wooden floor, you have to decide whether you want to make holes in the floor for screws and whether the blocks of wood will be visible.

(The techniques of applying varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, filler, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.

Easter egg dates back to pre-holiday era

By Georgia Ingersoll
Carl Byoir & Associates,
Inc. New York

When Peter Cottontail suits up to make his Easter rounds, the happiest folks in town — next to the kids, of course — are the egg merchants. After all, what would Easter be without a landscape graced by eggs colored every shade of the rainbow.

Tucked away in baskets and bowers, scattered across lawns and under living room furniture, the egg comes out of its shell at this time of the year. Nobody knows for sure just how many of the 70 billion or so eggs this country's poultry produces are destined for decoration. But the number is large enough that the egg industry is able to single out Easter as the egg extravaganza of the year.

When you're up to your elbows in eggs this Easter and the knee-high set is egging you on to color more, you may not be inclined to give a hoot about history. The fact remains, however, that you're honoring a tradition that is older than Easter. Though coloring eggs is one of the most popular Easter customs in America — a custom that traces its roots back to the early Dutch settlers in New York and Pennsylvania, the tradition of coloring eggs goes back much further in history, predating the Christian era and the celebration of Easter by several thousand years.

Poached Persian
Some 5,000 year ago the Persians celebrated the turn of spring by exchanging colored eggs as tokens of good will. The custom was also followed in Egypt during Cleopatra's reign, with the eggs usually being colored a bright red to signify blood and the life force.

The Persians and Egyptians were not alone in viewing the eggs as a symbol of creation and resurrection. Many ancient cultures believed that the earth was produced by the hatching of an enormous egg. And the early Greeks colored and ate eggs during the spring festivals as a sign of fertility and the regenerative power of nature.

With the dawning of the Christian era, the coloring of eggs was soon incorporated in the celebration of Easter. The egg, which has been treated in the past as a symbol of the renewal of life in spring, now represented the resurrection of Christ.

The customs of Lent strengthened the association of eggs and Easter, since eggs were on of the foods forbidden during the 40 days of fasting. Following the scarcity of winter and the self-denial of Lent, people were more inclined than ever to look at eggs as prized possessions and proff-positive that spring had come at last.

English Mandate
Such was the status of the egg in those pre-supermarket days, especially in England. Edward I, during his rule of Britannia in the late 13th century, took enough stock of the egg to include notice in his account book of the purchase of 400 eggs to be boiled, stained or covered with gold as gifts for the royal household.

On a less lofty level, it was once the custom in parts of England for children to dress up at Easter and canvas their neighborhoods in search of colored eggs or "pace eggs."

As the centuries rolled on, the eggs were not ignored on the other bank of the Channel. Egg decorating was developed into a fine art in Eastern Europe, especially in the Ukraine. In the meantime, the rabbit continued to usurp the chicken in Germany, where the myth that the Easter Hare laid colored eggs flourished. Basic biology notwithstanding, the hare and egg liaison proved so winning that the Easter Hare rivaled Santa Claus in popularity with German children.

The children believed a large white rabbit with a basket of colored eggs on his back visited the homes of all good children on Easter Eve to hide the eggs for them in the morning.

Like the colored egg, the tradition of the egg-bearing bunny extends back into the dusty corridors of history. In the past these small animals were symbolically connected with the moon. Since both spring festivals and the holiday of Easter are based on phases of the moon, the bunny has been able to make it through the years undebunked.

Pennsylvania Duth tradition, lower left, is the Easter egg tree. Mother and daughter put the finishing touches on an Easter egg tree, lower right, a handsome accent piece for mantel or sideboard.

Pennsylvania and New York, they spread the custom of celebrating Easter by coloring large quantities of eggs as tokens of better times to come. The Pennsylvania Dutch also lived up to what had become a rather austere holiday in this country, observed mostly in churches. In addition to colored eggs, the Easter merriment included egg rolling contests and other games involving egg mayhem. The most popular of these was egg cracking. Two opponents knocked eggs together to see whose egg would crack first. Humpty-Dumpty would have taken a much kinder view of another egg custom introduced by the Pennsylvania Dutch: the Easter egg tree. Each year they brought a large branch or small tree into the house at Easter and decorated it with colorful eggs, the most elaborate of which they saved from year to year. The actual business of coloring eggs in the 19th century, when the secular celebration of Easter began to be popular, was a rather homespun proposition. Occasionally, commercial dyes were sold by druggists from bulk packages in small quantities for coloring Easter eggs. For the storekeeper, the powders left fairly strong stains.

Man invents, markets legal 'cocaine'

By LINDA DEUTSCH
AP Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. What's white and powdery, makes your nose feel numb ... and is legal?

Obviously not cocaine. It's a new product called "Toot," and it's selling like crazy in health food stores everywhere, apparently as a substitute for the drug.

"They say you can do a test blindfolded and not be able to tell the difference," says Toot's promoter, Marc Bernstein, who says the product is especially popular these days on the chic Beverly Hills party circuit.

Bernstein declines to disclose Toot's contents, except to say it's a compound of ingredients now found in over-the-counter diet pills.

"Our sales have been tremendous. We will do $20 million this year," he says.

The 37-year-old Bernstein became a millionaire two years ago with a natural stimulant taken in pill form called "Zoom," also sold in health food stores.

His second product, natural tranquilizer pills called, "Relax," has registered more moderate sales.

"I found out that people like to go up; they don't like to go down," says Bernstein.

Toot, he says, has surpassed the Zoom phenomenon in public response.

"We have had thank-you calls and letters from people all over the country who said they were spending hundreds of dollars a day on cocaine," he says. "Now, they've switched to Toot, which costs them $10 a package."

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is taking a hands-off position on Toot, at least for now. "We're aware of it," says Elaine Roentgen, a consumer affairs officer for the FDA. "It's being sold by the same man who made a fortune with Zoom. We didn't get anywhere with Zoom, and we haven't taken a position on this one."

In an apparent attempt to avoid legal complications, the Toot package warns buyers not to ingest the powder.

"I'm selling it as an incense," Bernstein says with a straight face. "I do not recommend that anybody ingest the product. ... I always intended to bring an incense into the market. That it's being used in other ways is a commentary on our times."

The term "Toot," by the way, is slang meaning to inhale or "snort" cocaine. And most Toot buyers apparently are snorting it in the same manner users take coke.

Bernstein concedes he's snorted Toot "to see what it was about," but he declines to say whether he's ever tried cocaine. "It did have a slight numbing effect; it suppressed hunger, and I was buzzing," he says of his product.

Bernstein, who calls himself "a merchandising entrepreneur," takes credit for funneling back into the economy millions of dollars that might otherwise go into the illegal dope market. "Eighteen per cent of the economy in this country is underground," he says. "Something should be done to bring this money back into the economy."

He stresses that Toot is safe and so far has shown no ill effects on users.

"If in any way I thought it was harmful or detrimental to the public, I would pull this product off the market," he says.

Meanwhile, Bernstein is contemplating new business vistas. He's now at work on a new children's toothpaste, and other projects are on the horizon.

"My dream is to make something that everybody has a need for," Bernstein says. "If I could re-design toilet paper and merchandise it, I'd do that. What I'd really like to do is make the next safety pin. I'm working on it."

DAUGHTERS OF THE REPUBLIC OF TEXAS

An interesting biographical sketch of the life of Clara Driscoll, a turn-of-the-century campaigner for the DRT, was given by Mrs. John P. McKinley based on a review of the book, "Clara Driscoll, An American Tradition" at the Tuesday meeting of the Aaron Estes Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

Preceding the review, Mrs. Stanley Erskine, club president, announced the 90th annual convention of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas will be held in San Antonio May 13-15. New officers were also elected.

Du Pont reassigns 50 women

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Fifty women of child-bearing age are being reassigned by the Du Pont Co. after a preliminary study indicated a chemical they used on the job might cause birth defects, company officials say.

"No one is going to lose their job; no one is going to suffer a loss of pay," Bill Bowers, superintendent of employee relations for the chemical company's Washington Works plant, said this week.

He said the women were placed in temporary assignments pending completion of the normal job-posting process.

Du Pont said it had been using the chemical, known as FC-143, for many years in its fluoropolymers division. Most of it was supplied by the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.

"We were advised (by 3M) that FC-143 caused birth defects in the unborn when fed by stomach tube to female rats in a laboratory experiment," said Howard Todd, plant manager.

"This was a preliminary, range-finding study designed to determine dosage limits prior to a full-scale study on FC-143's potential to cause birth defects in rats," he said.

DEAR ABBY

Abby's advice inspirational to priest

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a Jesuit priest who just finished reading your magnificent article, "Advice to Teens," in February's Good Housekeeping magazine. That dynamic article is so useful, so positive, so practical, I simply must take time out to say "Congratulations."

For 30 years I've been combining my work at the local university with teaching teens in high school, so I know from my contact with young people how very important your message is.

I am certain that parents and teachers everywhere will be grateful to you for his excellent article.

God love you and prosper you. —LONG-TIME ADMIRER

DEAR ADMIRER: Thank you, your letter made my day! That article in February's Good Housekeeping magazine was part of my booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know."

(Readers: The booklet can be obtained by writing to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose $2, plus a long, stamped (35 cents) self-addressed envelope.)

DEAR ABBY: MRS. B. FLEMING OF L.A. reportedly quoted Sam Levenson as giving credit to a Dr. Minofsky for the discovery of insulin. I don't know who Minofsky is or was, but my wife's relative, Sir Frederick Grant Banting (1891-1941), together with Charles H. Best, made that discovery in 1921. Dr. Banting was not Jewish.

(My source: Encyclopedia Britannica, 1962, Volume 3, page 79.)—C.B.H., CITRUS HEIGHTS, CALIF.

DEAR MR. H.: My apologies. Dr. Banting and Dr. Best (both Canadians) indeed were credited with having discovered insulin.

No doubt Mr. Levenson anglicized the name of Dr. Oskar Minowski, the German scientist who with Dr. Joseph von Mering introduced in 1889 the concept that diabetes results from suppression of a pancreatic substance later found to be a hormone that was named insulin.

(My source, Encyclopedia Britannica, 1977, Volume 6, page 917.)

DEAR ABBY: You recently quoted G.K. Chesterton, who said, "The truly great person is the one who makes every person feel great." May I share an anecdote that illustrates that point beautifully? In Queen Victoria's time, a young woman had the good fortune to be escorted to dinner by William E. Gladstone, who was considered one of the most brilliant statesmen of the 19th century. On the following evening, the same young lady was escorted by Benjamin Disraeli, novelist, statesman and twice prime minister of Great Britain.

When asked for her impression of these two great rivals, she replied, "After an evening with Gladstone, I thought he was the most brilliant man I'd ever met. After an evening with Disraeli, I thought myself to be the most fascinating woman in the world!" —A.H.C., BERWICK, MAINE

Tired of waiting, Indians take over sacred Black Hills

By TENA ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Fifty-eight years ago, Sioux Indians filed their first lawsuit asking that the Black Hills be returned to the Dakota nation. This week, some of them got tired of waiting.

The Dakota American Indian Movement set up teepees for a small group of men, women and children on Victoria Creek, in the Black Hills National Forest, on Saturday and laid claim to 800 acres of land about 12 miles southwest of Rapid City.

"If Indian people think we can get the Black Hills back only by going to court, then we must not remember our history," said Bill Means, a spokesman for Dakota AIM. "Indian resistance and Indian struggle must take place out of the courts as well as in the courts."

Law enforcement officers downplay the occupation, saying the Indians are like any other campers. The Indians can stay as long as they want, officers said, if they obey camping rules.

On Saturday, the group will meet with representatives of all the tribes affected by the 1868 Fort Laramie Treaty, which gave the Indians all of western South Dakota and parts of other states for, as it said, as long as grass shall grow and rivers flow.

That turned out to be less than 10 years.

GOLD WAS DISCOVERED in the Black Hills, which are sacred to the Sioux, and by 1876 the land was swarming with miners.

"Treaties were broken. I know they were broken," said Gov. Bill Janklow. "But there's nobody in this state that's alive today that ever broke a treaty. The history of this country is a history of takings."

The U.S. Supreme Court last June upheld a decision by the U.S. Court of Claims that the treaty had been broken.

But over the arguments of Indians who had been fighting for the land since 1923, the high court agreed that $105 million would be fair compensation for the land. Some Indians, who contend the Black Hills are not for sale, filed suit to stop the payment.

Not all Indians support the occupation, however. Elected officials from six of the eight Sioux tribes affected by the Black Hills claim say they won't attend Saturday's treaty gathering.

Oglala Sioux tribal attorney Mario Gonzalez said the occupation could jeopardize his efforts to halt payment of the $105 million.

But the protesters hope at least to draw the federal government into a court test of their right to claim land.

So far, the occupation at Victoria Creek has been peaceful.

Dakota AIM is a different group from the militant American Indian Movement of the 1970s, an era that saw a 71-day Indian occupation at Wounded Knee, S.D., riots at courthouses and two FBI agents slain on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

Means said the new group is committed to non-violence and will obey all laws. The 15 to 40 Indians from several states involved in the camp-in contend they're being watched and probably photographed by armed federal agents. Federal officials deny any surveillance.

MOST LOCAL RESIDENTS find the camp easy to ignore. It lies 4 1/2 miles back in the forest, far from any homes, on U.S. Forest Service land.

Some businessmen have worried the occupation could scare away badly needed tourists. Says Janklow: "Who cares? Nobody cares about it but you news media. I hope they become a tourist event all summer."

The Indians hope eventually to develop a self-sufficient community on the land, a right they claimed under an 1897 law that permits the construction of schools and churches on federal land.

Whether authorities will recognize the claim and allow construction remains to be seen.

"We are proud of you," Frank Fools Crow, 93-year-old tribal religious leader, told the gathering when he blessed the site. "Remain strong in your commitment and you will win."

Editor criticizes press takeover

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A leading Indian editor today criticized a government-funded study that recommends the government nationalize India's eight top privately-owned national newspapers.

"I think that they are talking through their hat," S. Nihal Singh, editor-in-chief of the Indian Express newspaper chain, told a reporter here. "Either you have a free press or a government press and for anybody to suggest this (takeover) is to misunderstand the role of a press in a democracy."

Excerpts of the report by the Indian Institute of Public Administration were published in some of the same papers whose nationalization the study recommends.

The report, written by Chalapathi Rao and S.K. Goyal, said newspapers have sometimes succeeded in "influencing governments to deviate from declared public policies."

It also accused the newspapers of promoting "big business interests" instead of public interests.

The researchers claimed that nationalization of the newspapers would not lead to a government press monopoly.

The current structure of newspaper management could be reconstituted to ensure the establishment's "operational independence," but "minimum guarantees" of publishing could be given to people and organizations holding opposing views to those of the government, the report said.

Haig, Carrington meet, discuss Mideast problems

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today his talks on the Middle East with British officials had "borne great fruit."

Haig met with British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, a prime mover behind a European peace initiative in the Mideast and was to meet later with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

He told a news conference after a morning round of talks that he and Carrington discussed his trip to the Mideast earlier this week, the peace process and the "problem of external threats to the Middle East region," a reference to U.S. fears of Soviet expansion there.

He did not respond directly when asked if the Camp David peace plan might be dead and said "there are as yet unachieved aspects of the peace process," and listed creation of a Sinai peacekeeping force and autonomy for the Palestinians.

When Haig was asked if he was ready to involve the Palestine Liberation Organization in peace talks, as the European initiative proposes, Lord Carrington cut in and told reporters "unless you let us get on we shall not get the rest of the agenda through" and ushered Haig off to lunch.

The United States is committed to the Camp David peace process, with no place for the PLO, which President Reagan has denounced as a terrorist organization. The European diplomats see their initiative as a supplement to the U.S.-sponsored Camp David process.

Whatever their differences on ways of attaining peace in the Middle East, the British were expected to be in broad agreement with Haig's warnings of a Soviet threat to the region and with his efforts to build a "strategic consensus" against Soviet intentions.

The secretary of state took his message to Egypt, Israel, Jordan and Saudi Arabia. Although the official reception to his words was often cool, especially in Jordan and Saudi Arabia, Haig proclaimed his mission a success.

Still on Haig's schedule are brief visits to Paris and Bonn this weekend before he returns to Washington.

Haig stopped in Madrid on Thursday to pledge "unflinching support" for democracy in Spain. That commitment had been questioned, especially in the Spanish press, because of a remark by the secretary several hours after the attempted coup on Feb. 23 that it was an "internal matter" for Spain.

He said his statement had been misinterpreted, because of "misunderstandings in some instances and mischief in others," as showing lack of concern for the outcome.

"Clearly I regret that. I regret it first because it was a fundamental distortion of reality, and secondly, I regret it because it in no way represents American policy," Haig said at a news conference in the Spanish capital. "Anyone who persists in maintaining that position is either not very bright or terribly mischievous."

Polish premier demands two-month strike ban

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski today demanded Poland's Parliament impose an emergency, two-month ban on strikes and threatened to quit if he doesn't get it.

"I can work only without the threats of strikes," Jaruzelski said in his first major address since his inaugural plea last February for 90 days of labor peace.

"The government asks Parliament to suspend strikes for two months," the premier and defense minister said in the televised speech. "The government counts on the suspension of the right to strike bringing a general calming.

"But I must remind you that when I took over as premier, I promised to step down if the government can't fulfill its duties," he said. "This is the moment."

Jaruzelski painted a grim picture of Polish problems in the wake of last summer's strike wave that spawned the independent Solidarity labor movement. The government guaranteed workers the right to strike in the agreement that ended the summer rebellion, but that right has yet to be formalized as a law passed by Parliament.

"Strikes too often have political and local motivations. We had some strike preparedness last week without the approval of Solidarity's national coordination commission," Jaruzelski said. "We can't work normally in such conditions."

He said he respects forces for calm in the 10-million member union and renewed his offer for a dialogue with the Solidarity leadership, but he claimed some fringe factions are "attempting to snatch power."

Rancher convicted

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A southern Arizona rancher has been found guilty of aggravated assault in the chaining a Mexican to a toilet and a tree for 24 hours last October.

A Pima County Superior Court jury reached its verdict on Walter Burris on Thursday.

Jurors convicted Burris, 29, of aggravated assault and reduced a felony kidnapping charge.

"MIDLAND AND ODESSA, THANKS TO YOUR SUPPORT WE'RE INCREASING SERVICE ALL OVER THE U.S. AND BEYOND."

JOHN J. CASEY
CHAIRMAN, BRANIFF

"Braniff has received tremendous support recently from people all over Texas, as well as from our employees. It has encouraged us to increase our flights in and out of our state by some 10% this spring and summer.

"There will be new nonstops from Dallas-Fort Worth to 15 U.S. cities, and we'll increase our London service to five flights weekly on May 1 and to daily service June 1. Then Braniff will be the only airline to offer daily nonstop service from DFW to both London and Hawaii. And we'll have new 747 nonstops from Miami to Bogota and Santiago. And a fourth weekly flight to Venezuela from Houston and New Orleans. These service increases have enabled us to recall some of the pilots and flight attendants we had to furlough.

"WE'RE WORKING HARD TO KEEP FARES LOW"

"Airlines are another good reason to fly Braniff this spring and summer. For example, starting April 26, we'll introduce new round trip fares to Florida which are 50% less than regular round trip coach fares. That's in addition to our low Good News Fares all over Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. And we have Super Saver fares everywhere we fly in the mainland U.S. which can save you up to 25%.

Key to better tire service is quality grading system

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

Recently, I suggested we all needed to give our cars spring check-ups and one of the items to check was our tires. For those whose check-ups hinted your tires need to be replaced, I'd like to try to explain the Uniform Tire Quality Grading System (UTQGS)...the key to a better tire buy.

First, the UTQGS is a checklist to help us choose the tire that is most suitable for our normal driving needs. That check list includes a "grade" on: treadwear, traction and temperature resistance. The grades are imprinted on the sidewall along with other various information so we can easily read them and not be at the mercy of advertising claims.

So, what does the treadwear grade tell us about a tire? This grade is a comparison number grade with 100 the norm, but can be 80, 90, 100, 110, 120, 130, 140, 150, etc. The higher the number, the greater the mileage you should receive. A tire graded 150 should give 50% more miles than one graded 100 — provided it is properly inflated, aligned and balanced. It does not tell us how many miles to expect...that varies due to personal driving habits and the elements.

The traction grade, then, is a letter grade...A being best, B average and C poor...which rates ability to stop on wet roads. "A" grade allows us to stop faster and in a shorter distance than "B" or "C"; "C" grade tires have poor traction on wet roads. Remember, though, regardless of traction grade, bald or low tread tires adversely affect stopping distance.

That leaves temperature resistance grading — again letter grades A, B and C. Sustained high speeds and excessive temperature can cause blowouts and tread separations. An "A" tire signifies the coolest running tire which means it should perform safely even in hot weather if properly maintained. "C" tires run hotter than "A" or "B" tires.

by the police after he drank six beers. He passed the test, so he promptly filed a complaint with the local consumer protection agency saying that the beer was under strength!

TRAGIC IRONY: Americans demand that their children be inoculated against diseases such as polio and smallpox. Yet most parents don't buckle their children into safety belts or child restraint devices for trips in the family car. Traffic accidents are the number one killer of children in

So, what does all this mean? If you often travel at sustained high speeds and in very hot weather, like most of us in the Permian Basin do, temperature resistance is the quality you should demand. If you frequently drive on wet roads, which we only occasionally do, high traction grade is important. And, if you frequently drive in both conditions, your tire needs to have high marks in both categories. Then, with the safety needs of traction and temperature resistance taken care of, you can compare tires with different treadwear grades to decide which one offers the best value for your driving circumstances.

JUST FOR FUN: In England, an angry driver was given a breath test the United States...

TRAFFIC TIPS: Garfield Ditch...the ditch work is complete and paving is under way. So, if the weather holds, should be open next week. Midkiff, under construction from Storey to Golf Course, is causing particular motorists problems at the south side of the Andrews Highway intersection. Motorists are urged to be extremely cautious when turning into this intersection...a lot of us are turning into the construction area.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ulcers don't choose between rich, poor

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a middle-level position in a comparatively small (150 employees) manufacturing plant. On a number of occasions I've remarked how my job will give me ulcers if the pressures don't ease. What surprises me is the number of unskilled, relatively low-paid workers (packers, warehouse employees, etc.) who actually suffer from ulcers. Isn't this unusual? I was always under the impression that lower-income people generally were spared. — Mr. T.P.

Dear Mr. P.: Ulcer disease is one condition that does not discriminate between rich and poor; the frequency is the same among all socioeconomic groups.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been on home dialysis for about a year, and have spoken in general terms with my physician about the advisability of a kidney transplant. I don't feel too strongly about it one way or the other, and will probably base my decision on the relative effectiveness of the two approaches. Have any studies been done which compare the effectiveness of dialysis versus transplantation? — Mr. S.G.

Dear Mr. G.: According to Dr. Pierre Tousignant, of McGill University of Montreal, home dialysis and kidney transplantation are equally effective; however, in the long run, home dialysis is a more expensive form of treatment. His conclusions are based on a study of 16 comparable dialysis and transplantation patients over a period of seven years.

Dear Dr. Solomon: People today are much more tolerant of alcoholics than they were several years ago, and I agree that they need help. But why does alcoholism seem to run in families? I know of a number of instances in which the father, children, and other relatives all drink to excess. Wouldn't this indicate some weakness in character? — Chris

Dear Chris: If alcoholism does tend to run in families, it may be because of an inherited susceptibility to the disease. For example, Dr. Donald W. Goodwin, chairman of the department of psychiatry at the University of Kansas Medical Center, has studied Danish children who were born to alcoholic parents. Specifically, he compared sons who were raised by their own alcoholic parents with their brothers who were adopted and raised by nonalcoholics. A third group of adopted children served as controls.

Dr. Goodwin found that the sons of alcoholics, whether raised by their own parents or by nonalcoholic adoptive parents, were four times more likely to become alcoholics than were the children in the control group. About 18 percent of the sons of alcoholic parents, whether adopted or raised in their own homes, had been treated for alcoholism by the age of 30; however, none of those in the control group had received treatment for alcoholism at that age.

Two other adoption studies, one conducted in Sweden and the other in Iowa, tend to confirm Dr. Goodwin's findings that alcoholism may be the result of a genetic factor rather than a reflection of some defect in character.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

'Postman Always Rings Twice' may be answer for Lange

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Lange starred opposite an ape in "King Kong," played an angel of death in "All That Jazz," became a murderess in "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and recently gave birth to a baby by ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov.

"It's a pretty weird career when you look at it that way," said the 31-year-old actress who once thought her film debut in the $25 million remake of "King Kong" would also be her movie swan song.

"I was absolutely convinced I'd never work again," Miss Lange said. "I came off that film and went into the most depressive time of my life. I never thought I'd be so affected by reviews or by reading where somebody said something bad about me. I soon realized how deeply it hurt."

Determined to become a serious actress, the daughter of a Minnesota schoolteacher pulled herself out of the depression and began studying the craft to which she would commit most of her time and energy.

Two years of acting class with some of the best teachers in the country paid off when Bob Fosse cast her in "All That Jazz." She immediately followed with a comedy called "How to Beat the High Cost of Living" and was then chosen to play a role originally created by Lana Turner in a remake of "The Postman Always Rings Twice," based on the novel by James M. Cain.

"You can't really call it a remake," she noted. "It's really just another version of Cain's novel. Because of censorship, the Lana Turner-John Garfield movie could only touch on the sexual-ty. We can do a lot more with it. Our film isn't pornographic, but it's erotic and very sexual. It's definitely 'R' rated material. I mean you're talking lust, murder and betrayal.

"Still, there's very little in common between Lana Turner's character and mine. My character is definitely down and out. She doesn't appear in white turbans, high heels and shorts like Lana did in 1946.

"She's a very desperate woman forced into a marriage with a man she doesn't love but tolerates because she sees no other way out," the actress said.

Three days after finishing "Postman," Ms. Lange was in the Minnesota woods working on a log cabin she had designed herself.

"I needed a total shift in perspective," she said. "I couldn't dwell too long on whether this movie is going to work or what people are saying about it. I felt good about the work I did because this was the first time I understood my character. I remember working on some films and waking up with a sense of dread over having to do a particular scene and not know how.

"One of the most important things in this business," she added, "is to keep some kind of perspective on what it is you're doing and how important it is so it doesn't become one extreme or the other. It's not the most important thing in my life but it has enough importance that I want to commit myself to it."

Having taken time out to take care of her daughter, Ms. Lange is thinking about her next project, which may be a film on Frances Farmer, an actress who was destroyed by the Hollywood system.

"One of my biggest surprises in becoming an actress," she said "was becoming aware of the magnitude of the business end of the entertainment industry and the loss of control. You're so dependent on other people to get a job. There's a great deal of politics going on."

Emile Zola novel comes to life on PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — The author of "Therese Raquin" thought of himself as a scientist who studied characters as if they were insects — he grasped them in his tweezers and held them up to light so that his readers could watch them squirm through sexual experiment.

For Kate Nelligan and Brian Cox, who star in the "Masterpiece Theater" production of Emile Zola's novel for public television, the problem was to take that experiment and create a drama that would explore the consequences of an awakening which comes about through brutal and passionate sex.

In the novel — which scandalized the Paris literary world in 1867, to Zola's delight — the two main characters, Therese and her lover, Laurent, become so violently attached to each other that they kill her husband. They then find themselves tormented by the murder and, though married to each other, they are unable to enjoy the fruits of their deed.

"I was taken by it," says Cox, "because they are people who are dullards for whom a sensual escapade opens up all kinds of possibilities. At the beginning, all Laurent is concerned about is getting a regular meal when he visits Therese and her husband. And if he can get some sex on the side, so much the better. He doesn't know what he's letting himself in for."

Miss Nelligan's Therese blossoms during the three-part series, which begins on most Public Broadcasting Service stations April 12. Living with her mother-in-law and her sickly husband, Camille (Kenneth Cranham), she plays a woman who has no idea that there is anything exciting in life.

Laurent, a bad painter who likes the painter's lazy life, assaults

Suspect held on child rape

DALLAS (AP) — A man police say is an ex-convict has been arrested in the abduction and brutal rape of a 7-year-old girl who was assaulted and left tied to a tree in a remote, wooded area.

Police Lt. Eddie Walt said the man, arrested Thursday at his home, "has a connection with" the family of the baby sitter where the girl was last seen Wednesday afternoon.

The first-grader was found tied to a tree by three surveyors working in a wooded area Thursday morning near the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport about 15 hours after she disappeared from the baby sitter's residence in North Dallas.

"It wouldn't have taken her much longer to die if those guys hadn't found her," Walt said.

Therese when her husband steps out of the room for a few minutes, and when their affair begins her character explodes with freedom and daring. In some of the most explicit scenes ever brought to American television, the two are shown making love in Therese's bedroom while Therese's mother-in-law enters the bedroom. Therese delights in hiding the naked and terrified Laurent underneath a bedspread.

Cox says he considered it important to do the scenes nude because the sexual impact of the encounters unlocks the characters — and the audience had to be convinced of it.

"We aren't exactly loose people," says Cox, noting that both he and Miss Nelligan have Irish Catholic backgrounds, although she is Canadian and he was born in Scotland. For the first nude scene, some prop men provided "V and O, more vodka than orange juice," and Cox says he broke the ice.

"The problem is that it has to look erotic — and it isn't," he says. "Rolling around was awful — very hard on both of us. You're doing it in front of hundreds of people. You have to consciously put your mind to it to make it look erotic, and you have to know exactly what you're doing. I think we played it very well."

After the murder of Camille, Laurent identifies the greenish, decayed body at the Paris morgue. But when they engineer a marriage, the couple is unable to make love because they see the drowned man lying in bed between them.

"It's an image of a man who becomes obsessed," says Cox. "This man, who had been a terrible artist, then becomes more sensitive, more feminine — while Therese is becoming more masculine — and he becomes a real artist."

A friend of Laurent's admires his new paintings, but notices that they show only one face — the dead Camille.

"The talent gets opened up," says Cox, who lost 14 pounds in a week of shooting and changed his hairstyle to show Laurent's increasing sensitivity to the world, "but he also starts to realize the cost."

In a series of well-played scenes, Therese and Laurent's relationship disintegrates, and the two lose any reason to pretend in the presence of Camille's mother (Mona Washbourne), who now suffers almost total paralysis, that they have an ideal relationship. Cox, who like Miss Nelligan is well known in England but unfamiliar to American audiences, says he feels the production is true to the novel Zola actually wrote.

"I think we were pretty close," he says. "The sex opens the doors, but they get lost. They think murdering Camille is the answer, but they really aren't smart enough to cope."

AT&T's new mobile phone systems to debut by 1983

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says it will be ready by 1983 to begin operating a revolutionary new type of mobile system that will make hand-held and automobile phones available to almost everyone.

But almost as soon as the Federal Communications Commission agreed to license the new cellular radio systems, the Bell System's rivals in the field vowed to appeal. They said the licensing scheme would give AT&T a monopoly over the new service.

An estimated 50,000 Americans are waiting in line for mobile telephone service, and AT&T announced immediately after Thursday's decision that it would be prepared to operate its first cellular system by 1983 and could be operating in 70 major cities by the mid-1980s.

The difference between cellular radio and current mobile systems is dramatic.

In New York City, for example, only 24 conversations can take place at any one time with the current system, which operates on a single, powerful radio transmitter.

That number would increase to hundreds of thousands with a cellular system involving computer switching equipment to transfer calls among several low-powered radio transmitters located geographically around a city.

The FCC voted to allocate enough radio frequencies for two cellular systems in each city. One of them, however, would be reserved for phone companies such as AT&T; other companies would have to compete for the second system.

Critics contend that means AT&T will dominate the industry while several firms fight for the right to operate the non-reserved system.

"By its action, the commission has in effect given AT&T the right to control the market for portable telephones — the only available alternative to the present phone service," said Peter Erb, the president of Millicom Inc., a New York firm that wants to enter the cellular field.

"We have no choice but to challenge the FCC rule-making in court," Erb added.

The FCC said its plan would spur competition because it would guarantee that AT&T would not have a monopoly in any city. At the same time, the agency added, the licensing system should speed delivery of a new service that is in great public demand.

Attorney general to pursue antitrust action against AT&T

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's new antitrust chief intends to press the government's suit to break up the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. despite Pentagon claims that such action could weaken the communications network controlling nuclear weapons.

"I do not intend to fold up my tent and go away simply because the Department of Defense is concerned," Assistant Attorney General William F. Baxter said Thursday. "It is a sound case and I intend to litigate it to the eyeballs."

Baxter said he received a letter Wednesday from Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci specifically asking for a dismissal of the AT&T suit now being tried in U.S. District Court here.

"Because the American Telephone & Telegraph network is the most important communications net we have to serve our strategic systems within the United States, severe problems will confront the Department of Defense if this network is broken up," Carlucci's letter said.

Baxter, an economist and former Stanford law professor, said he can fashion a breakup of the world's largest corporation with no more than "trivial" degradation of national defense. A final judgment in the case is expected late this year.

Carlucci's letter is the second Baxter has received from defense officials. He said it arrived after he called the Pentagon to point out that an earlier letter from Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger only implied that a dismissal of the suit was sought.

Weinberger described the Defense Department's worries March 23 at a closed Senate hearing. His testimony was released Wednesday. AT&T and the Pentagon had previously raised the defense issue as an argument against the government suit.

Baxter said he would consider seriously the Pentagon's position in any breakup. But he said he wants to see the communications giant's regulated and unregulated enterprises under separate shells.

He said he would put AT&T's 23 operating telephone companies, which are regulated by state commissions, into one entity along with AT&T's long-lines division, which is regulated by the Federal Communications Commission.

All of the AT&T component companies that produce products and services for users of telephone lines would be put in a separate entity that would operate in the competitive market without regulation.

Baxter said. These include Western Electric and AT&T's yellow page and contemplated data-processing services.

The rapid advance of new competition in transmission technology from microwave and fiber optics systems might convince him to put long lines in the unregulated company, he said.

AT&T now is under a 1956 consent decree forbidding it from entering unregulated markets, which the Justice Department has interpreted to include data processing. Baxter said his scheme would allow AT&T to enter that field.

Southwestern, Mountain Bell negotiating sale

Southwestern Bell and Mountain Bell have jointly announced plans to start negotiations to complete the sale and transfer of Mountain Bell operations in El Paso County to Southwestern Bell.

Zane Barnes, Southwestern Bell president, and Robert K. Timothy, Mountain Bell president, said both companies have signed a letter of intent expressing a desire to complete the transition by Jan. 1, 1982.

"This is the first of many steps required," Barnes said, "to reach a definitive purchase and sales agreement which will address all the many issues involved."

Presently, Southwestern Bell provides the majority of tele-communications service in Texas while Mountain Bell's only Texas operation is in El Paso County. Both companies are wholly owned subsidiaries of American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

This transfer would simplify the state regulatory process for both companies. The Texas Public Utility Commission regulates all telephone service in Texas.

Most of the approximately 1,200 Mountain Bell employees in El Paso are expected to transfer to Southwestern Bell.

A final agreement will be subject to approval of the Federal Communications Commission, Texas Public Utility Commission, AT&T and the boards of Southwestern and Mountain Bell.

Richardson indicted for threatening Reagan

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — While three more men were charged with threatening President Reagan, a federal grand jury indicted a 22-year-old man who was allegedly headed for Washington with a pistol, vowing "to finish" the unsuccessful assassination attempt on the president. In all, seven men have been arrested on charges of threatening Reagan since the president was wounded in an assassination attempt March 30. John W. Hinckley Jr., of Colorado, was arrested immediately after that shooting, which also wounded three other men.

A federal grand jury Thursday indicted Edward M. Richardson, 22, of Drexel Hill, Pa., on two counts of threatening the president. Each count carries a maximum penalty of $1,000 and five years in prison.

Richardson was arrested Tuesday, allegedly with a loaded pistol, in a New York City bus station after a maid at a New Haven hotel reported finding bullets and pictures of Reagan in a room Richardson had occupied.

HE IS BEING held in New York on $500,000 bond pending an April 17 hearing on returning him to Connecticut. U.S. Attorney Richard Blumenthal said Richardson will be given mental tests to determine his competence to stand trial.

In announcing the indictment, Blumenthal said investigators have found no connection between Richardson and Hinckley, "despite references to John Hinckley (in notes) and apparent similarities in the alleged actions or backgrounds of these two individuals."

He said, however, that an investigation was continuing.

Both counts of the indictment against Richardson involve statements allegedly made in notes left in the hotel or sent to actress Jodie Foster, 18, a Yale student who allegedly was the subject of Hinckley's fantasies.

Richardson has been linked by police with a bomb scare telephoned Monday to the dormitory where Miss Foster had been staying.

In the first count of the indictment, Richardson is charged with writing an April 6 note to Miss Foster that said: "Hinckley was only the beginning. Our dual realities have merged into a single vision. I will finish what Hinckley started. R.R. must die. He 'J.W.H.' has told me so in a prophetic dream... You too will suffer the same fate as Reagan and others in this fascist regime..."

The second count of the indictment charges Richardson with written use of threatening language in a note that was found at the Park Plaza Hotel. The note said that "ultimately Ronald Reagan will be shot to death and this country turned to the left. If I cannot get at the President, I am prepared to slay some other prominent right-wing political figure..."

Richardson's parents asked for compassion from the American people during "their time of crisis." In a statement released through their attorney Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Richardson, also of Drexel Hill, described Richardson as "a loving, generally attentive and obedient son" incapable of carrying out a violent act.

THEY SAID they had for some time observed "what in hindsight, were signs of emotional disturbance." They did not elaborate.

Joseph F. Moore Jr., attorney for the family, said the Richardsons had not spoken to their son since his arrest. Asked why Richardson might have made a threat, Moore replied, "I think the perception is that Edward wanted to get his name and picture in the paper."

Moore said he had been told by Edward Meyer, Richardson's attorney in New York, that Richardson had flunked two lie-detector tests since his arrest. He said the tests "concerned Edward's assertion that linked him to Hinckley."

"We were told by the government that after he flunked the tests he, Edward, said the relationship was cosmic," Moore said.

Texas League season here

Cubs, Dodgers open season

By TED BATTLES

When the Midland Cubs and San Antonio Dodgers square off at 7 p.m. today in Cubs Stadium, it will be more than just another Texas League opener. Dig a little deeper and you will find one of those professor vs. student matchups.

When Midland Manager Roy Hartsfield was managing Albuquerque's Dukes to a Texas League pennant back in 1965, San Antonio manager Ducky LeJohn not only was his stud third baseman, but his coach as well.

However, for the next five nights they'll bury the friendship and break out the hatchets.

AND LeJOHN will enjoy one edge over Hartsfield, starting all over in the Texas League as a rookie. His Dodgers have won the Texas League West Division the last two years while Hartsfield is returning after many years away, the most recent hitch a three-year tenure of Toronto's American League expansion Blue Jays.

But Roy's memory from his Dodger days is good. "One thing you don't do is underestimate a Dodger team." Complacency, warns the Midland manager, is one mistake you don't want to make against any Dodger team.

As far as experienced personnel is concerned, Roy and Ducky are in the same boat. "Most farm directors know the quality of a league and give or take a player or two, they will field a team that will be competitive," appraises the Midland manager.

LeJOHN feels he will have a good hitting club this year with no glaring weaknesses. His one area of hesitancy is in pitching. All five starters are up from Class A, including Butch Wickenshiemer, who will start tonight's opener. His bullpen, however, is proven.

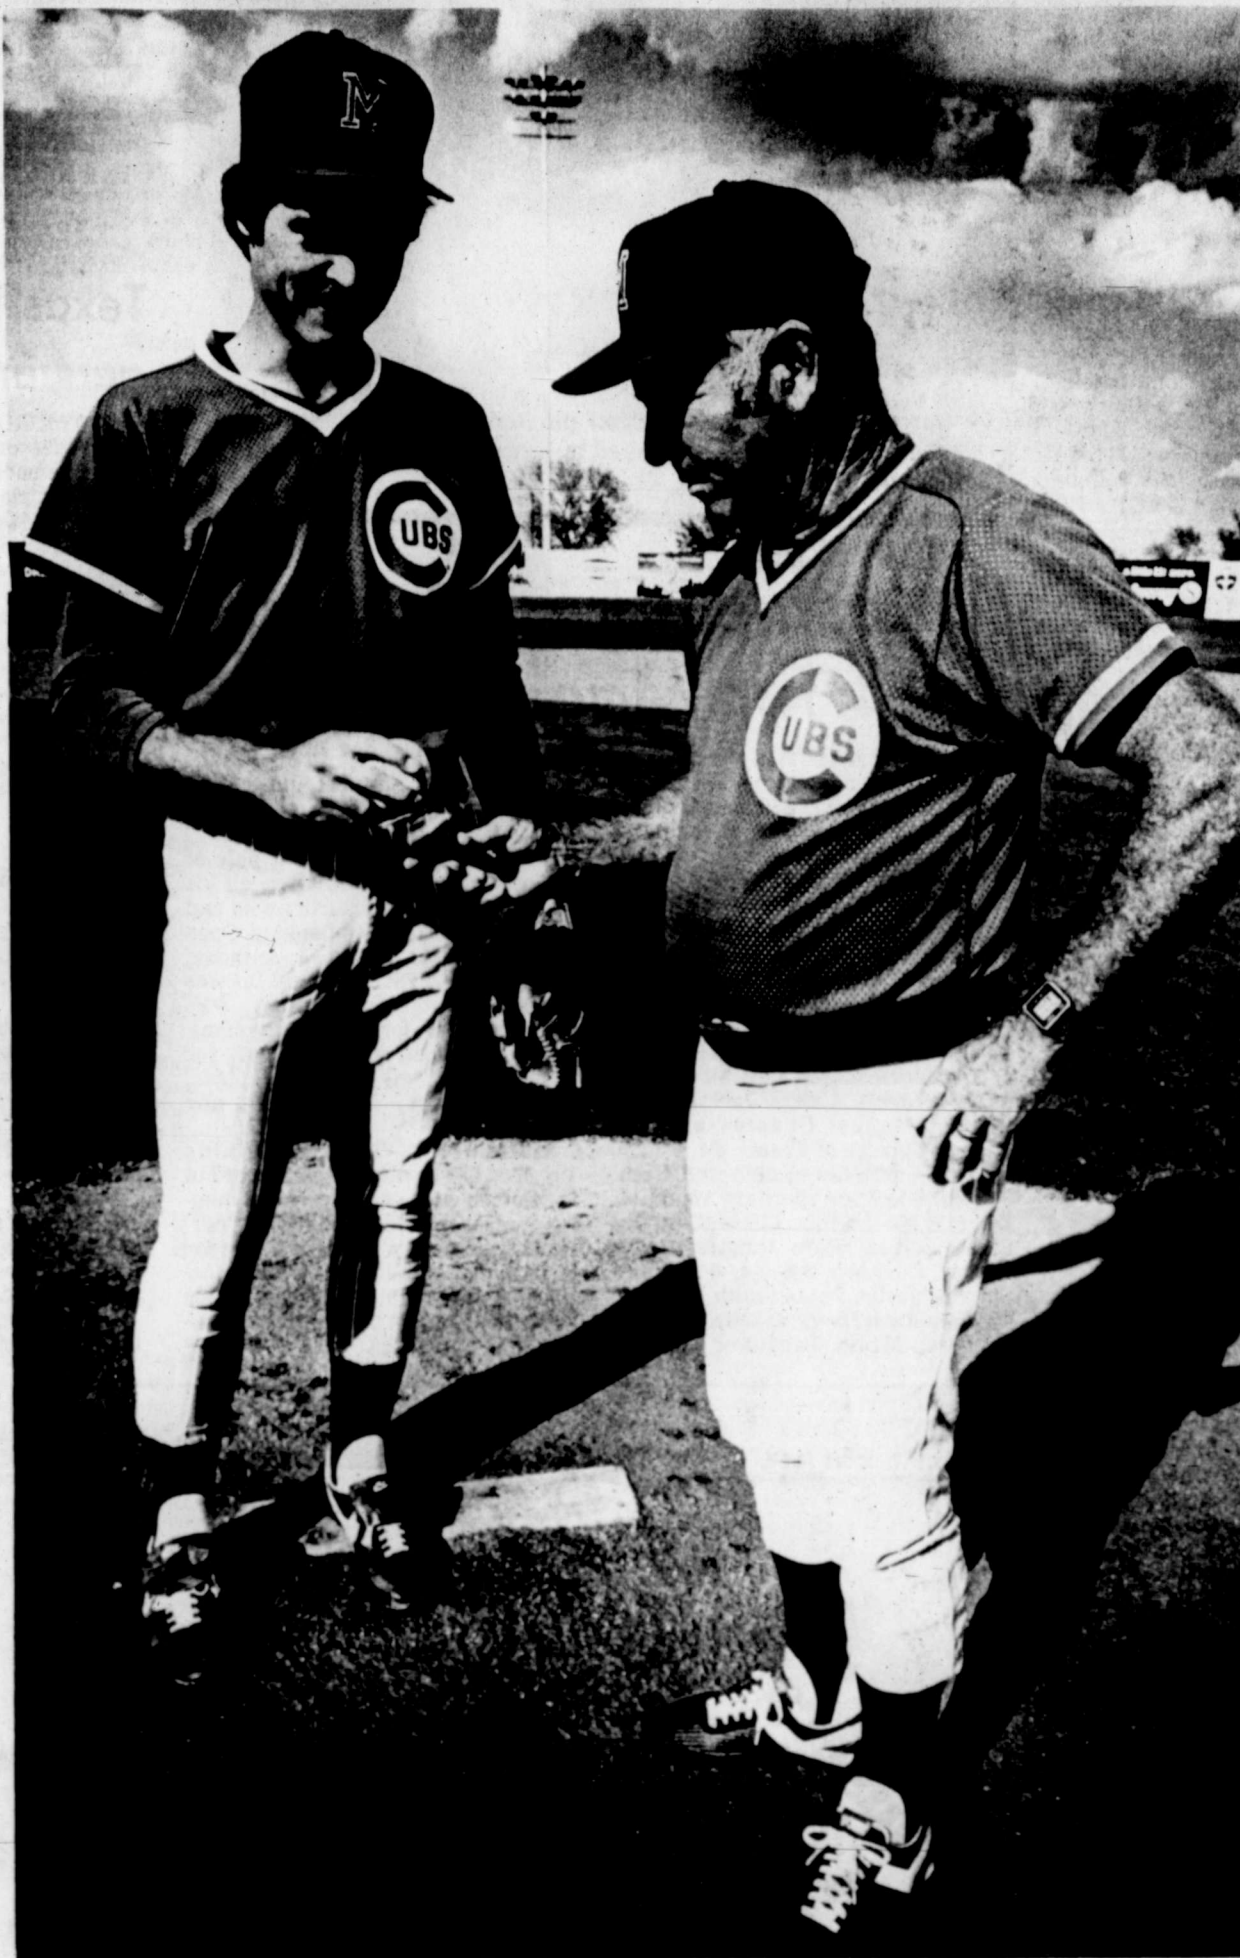

Hartsfield hasn't seen his club in action as a functioning unit as yet. His roster was completed the last day of spring training, but he predicts, "We'll have a bit of speed in Mel Hall, Craig Kornfeld and Dave Owen; and power in Randy LaVigne, Tom Grant and Jack Upton, who will hit a few home runs for us. Defense? That remains to be seen. There are areas where will be constantly working. Some of our players are in the learning phase.

"I FEEL better now with Joe McClain and Upton on triple A. I hope Jack continues to hit the ball like he did this spring."

He goes on, "I plan to utilize what speed we have to create pressure. I think it makes the game more interesting."

As for pitching, that's something the veteran manager will be playing by ear. However, he has seen enough to pick Joe McClain to start tonight's opener. "Carlos Gil has a good arm and I like what I have seen this spring of Craig Lefferts, but beyond that I'm not too familiar with the pitchers." Roy had a glimpse of most staff members at Mesa, but not enough to draw any conclusions.

THE STARTING batting

Diaz, Martinez, Kornfeld and Upton will be newcomers to Midland fans.

LeJohn's lineup will have Mike Zouras behind the plate, Craig Brock at first, Steve Sax at second, Ross Jones at short, Leo Hernandez at third, Gregg Schultz DH, Dale Holman in left, Tom Beyers in center, Mark Bradley in right, and, best of all, Fernando Valenzuela in Los Angeles.

McClain, a righthander from Johnson City, Tenn., in his fourth year of pro ball since graduating from Millican College, is drawing his first opening-game starting assignment in pro ball. Last year he underwent hand surgery early in the year and underwent a rehabilitation program at Sarasota before reporting to Wichita. But this is the year to find out if all is well. This spring he pitched well for Iowa and wasn't sent down to Midland until the final day of spring training.

Joe pitched in Midland briefly in 1979, "I learned one thing.

You've got to keep the ball low here or it will wind up in a cotton field. Of course, you get a few runs that way too."

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Completing the 1965 Albuquerque Midland reunion, KBAT's Scott Fleury was bat boy on that club. After McClain in Midland's five-man starting rotation will be Lefferts, Gill, lefty-ander Norm Churchill and Randy Clark. Tom Spino is billed as a starter, but for the time being will go long relief with Tim Milner. Mike Wright and Bob Blyth will handle short relief...

Miller's gamble pays off in share of Masters lead

By GEORGE STRODE

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Johnny Miller parlayed an 11th-hour gamble and a new, relaxed attitude into a share of the first-round Masters golf lead.

"I changed my putting grip overnight. I'm crazy to do that right before this tournament," said Miller, trying to regain the talent that once made him the world's foremost player.

His 3-under-par 69 in the baffling winds of Augusta National Golf Club Thursday tied Miller with Australian Greg Norman, Lon Hinkle and Curtis Strange.

"For some reason, I wasn't nervous. Playing with Fuzzy Zoeller helped. He's a nice, easy-going fellow. I usually get antsy at Augusta."

Miller's fresh approach reaped dividends — his best ever first Masters round by two shots.

SEVENTEEN players in the select, international field of 82 broke Augusta National's par of 72 despite severe pin placements, soft fairways and the unpredictable wind.

Three shots separated 27 challengers. Some of the sport's most feared golfers — Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Hubert Green and Bruce Lietzke — were lurking behind the leaders.

Nicklaus was in a logjam at 70 with Jim Simons, Japan's Isao Aoki, David Graham, John Cook, low amateur Jim Holtgrieve and Green.

Another shot back at 71 came Watson, joined by Ben Crenshaw, Jerry Pate, Gibby Gilbert, Don Pooley and Peter Jacobsen.

Lietzke, a two-time winner earlier this year, was among 10 players at 72.

South African Gary Player, seeking a fourth Masters championship, was another shot back at 73.

The warm, partly sunny day, however, was cruel to defending champion Seve Ballesteros, leading 1981 money-winner Ray Floyd, Lee Trevino, Sam Snead and Keith Fergus.

Ballesteros ran afoul of a double bogey and six bogeys amidst a 78. "It wasn't my day. Everything went wrong," he said.

TREVINO, needing a Masters victory to join four others with titles in all four majors, took a 77. So did Snead, the 68-year-old wonder from another era.

Floyd settled for a 75, but the most disappointed likely would be Fergus.

He went from 3 under to 4 over at 17, assessed six penalty shots for lifting his ball twice from the white-lined gallery fairway crossways.

Fergus says he thought the crossways were considered ground under repair, entitling him to free drops at 8 and 17. However, that is contrary to Masters rules.

Miller returned to a putter he bought as a 12-year-old to handle the new, slick, bent grass greens. And he tried a new putting grip, too. He bent his thumb, forcing his thumbnail into the grip. "It keeps the blade straight. I tend to take the putter back on the outside," he explained.

"I make changes all the time, even during a round, looking for the perfect swing. Nicklaus does it. And Watson is really a piddler."

Miller, twice a winner this year, took another stride from his mysterious slump after his glory seasons of the mid-1970s.

"The players may not like me, but they respect me. I sucked in my gut after all those 74s and 75s. I accepted them. I could have quit," he said.

"I'm playing good, but not great. I don't think I'll ever be at the top again. I don't play enough. I don't really care about winning tournaments now," said Miller, 33, of his devil-may-care approach.

Hinkle, also enjoying his best Masters start, is trying to shake a slump that has kept him winless since the 1979 World Series of Golf.

"Things haven't been going very smooth. Somebody stole my putter two months ago. And I'm trying to learn to wear soft contact lenses."

"My little girl (3-year-old Monique) used to say when I left in the morning, 'Daddy, no bogeys, just birdies today.' Now she says, 'Daddy, no bogeys or double bogeys today.'"

Hinkle, 33, reached both par 5's on the front side in two, two-putting each for birds.

STRANGE'S aggressive approach on the greens of these flowered, 6,905 yards led to just 11 putts on the frontside.

"That's pretty much the way I play all courses," said the 26-year-old Strange, a two-time victor last year. "But I don't play wild, stupid golf."

Norman, buoyed by the confidence of 17 worldwide titles and earnings of $250,000 last year, believes he can win the first 1981 major in his opening bid.

"I was saying to myself before I teed off today that I could win this tournament. If you don't feel that way, you put yourself behind the eight ball," said Norman, 26. The sole lead belonged to the 1980 Australian Open champion until he bogeyed the last hole. "I was pumped up," said Norman of his 5-iron, 200-yard approach shot at 18.

Nicklaus called his 70 his best round ever, that from a man who has won the Masters an unprecedented five times.

"If I had, anybody putting for me, I'd be leading by five or six shots. But I'm pleased with the way I'm playing. Hopefully, I'll get some putts in."

WATSON, the winner of 20 tournaments the last four years, but none in 1981, said his round easily could have been up to three shots lower.

"I made two mistakes at 12 and 13," he said. The errors cost him back-to-back bogeys and a piece of the lead.

Still, that old confidence that made him golf's Player of the Year the last four seasons is creeping back.

"My game is on the upswing," said the 1977 Masters winner. "I'm making a better pass at the ball."

The field will be trimmed to the low 44 golfers and ties or anyone within 10 shots of the lead after today's second round. Portions of the last two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be carried by CBS-TV.

Marathon hangs in balance

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — The 85th running of the famed Boston Marathon later this month is in doubt today because the City of Newton is insisting the Boston Athletic Association provide additional police for crowd control.

BAA President Will Cloney wasn't available for comment, but state Public Safety Secretary George Luciano said the state would take "any action necessary to see that this great international event takes place."

Millions of spectators line the 26-mile, 385-yard route from rural Hopkinton to Boston. Some 500,000 persons line Commonwealth Avenue in Newton to watch the runners approach Boston, with some 200,000 thousand alone on the infamous make-or-break Heartbreak Hill.

Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann met with Cloney on Wednesday and told him the BAA would need a special permit to pass through Newton.

Free viewers ones who worried Walter

By MELVIN DURSLAG
Hearst Special News Service

LOS ANGELES — As the world's foremost purveyors of baseball tickets, the Los Angeles Dodgers always have been wary of free television, setting the pattern for many of their colleagues in the majors.

The late Walter O'Malley never trusted the free TV fan, envisioning him as a blackguard who would lift your lunch if you left it unguarded. Walter was partial to subscription television viewers whom he pictured as people of stronger moral fiber.

"A man who puts, say, 50 cents on the barrelhead to watch a game on television demonstrates that he is a fan," he once told us. "He is the kind who would pay to see as many games in person as he could at the going prices. I'm not afraid of him. It's the free viewer who worried me. Since it costs nothing, he can take it or leave it. If he wouldn't want baseball enough to spend 50 cents for it at home, how could he be trusted to come out to the park to support the team for $3?"

Walter had such contempt for this rotter that he never allowed home games to be shown on TV — and he offered but 11 on the road.

And, to this day, the Dodgers adhere to his home TV policy, but have since expanded their road coverage. This year, they will be showing 46 games, a record for the organization.

The wide range of philosophies in baseball on deployment of television is an interesting study.

In the National League, for instance, the Cubs and the Expos televise all 81 home games. The Braves do 77 and the Mets at least 50. Then Philadelphia does 14, Cincinnati 3 — and the rest of the teams do none.

The American League teams run the range from no home games (Seattle and Milwaukee) to 42 (New York).

Taking charge of the Chicago White Sox, the new owners have altered dramatically the TV policy. Whereas Bill Veeck televised almost all the Sox games, home and road, the current owners have reduced that figure to only 12 home and 52 road.

Veeck always has contended that free television doesn't exist.

"Talk of 'free' TV tickles me," said Bill. "Free my eye. I get a pile of dough for it."

Veeck also believes that television peddles tickets.

"Companies blow a fortune advertising on television," he said, "because it obviously sells the product. I figure that they spend millions for what baseball gets paid for. These industrialists are much smarter than baseball owners. If they feel TV does the sales job, baseball should go along."

It was O'Malley's feeling that if any case could be made at all for free television of home games, it would be only in what he called the "vertical" cities, contrasted to the "horizontal" cities.

By vertical cities, he had reference specifically to New York and Chicago where people, residing in great number in high rise apartments and tenements, would escape the ball park during summer even if home games were on TV.

But in horizontal cities, such as Los Angeles, Anaheim, Kansas City and San Francisco, whose following is largely suburban, a team could perish by putting home games on TV and expecting people to make long freeway journeys to the stadium.

With an inflexible policy against home games on TV, the Dodgers have built the largest attendance in baseball and they now are dabbling in a form of pay television by offering 15 home games to ON-TV.

The games are sold to the company for a flat sum, meaning viewers aren't paying individually for each game, but what baseball has in mind down the road is pretty obvious.

Once pay-TV is harnessed and the firms who run it are able to reach more viewers in the land, the time will then be close for assessments per game.

This concept isn't at all new. It was the prospects of pay television that played a big part in the move of the Dodgers and Giants west way back in 1958.

Lining up a deal for both clubs with an operator named Matty Fox, O'Malley pictured riches for himself and Horace Stoneham. While exploring the possibilities of pay-TV on the Coast, Fox guaranteed annual payments to the Dodgers and Giants.

He did, that is, until he tapped out, unable to crack the political obstacles blocking his project.

With a giant conglomerate named Lear-Siegler, O'Malley tried once again to arrange pay-TV, but was stopped this time at the ballot. The concept, though, retains a pulse and offers the only hope for widescale viewing of home games on TV.

ASU aide claims Kevin just lazy

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — An unwillingness to work hard in practice, not harassment, is what forced former punter-defensive back Kevin Rutledge off the Arizona State football team in 1979, former Sun Devil assistant coach Bill Maskill testified Thursday.

"I had to ask him to hustle on several occasions. He didn't do drills 100 percent," said Maskill, now an assistant coach at Tulane University. "I just told him that if he didn't want to give 100 percent, he shouldn't be out there."

Rutledge, who now attends the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, is suing Maskill, the university and former Arizona State head football coach Frank Kush for $2.2 million in damages. The 21-year-old Rutledge claims Kush and Maskill harassed him into quitting the team after spring practice 1979 through verbal and physical abuse and made him forfeit his scholarship.

Kush, hired to coach the Canadian Football League's Hamilton Tiger-Cats last December, has denied he harassed Rutledge. Kush was cleared by an eight-member Maricopa County Superior Court jury March 20 on a charge of punching Rutledge in the mouth after a poor punt in a 1978 Sun Devils loss to Washington.

In other testimony Thursday, ex-National Football League star J.D.

Hill, a former Sun Devil, defended Kush's controversial coaching tactics.

Rutledge has testified that Maskill and Kush used expletive-laced language with him and instructed him at least twice to "go to another school." He also alleges Maskill recruited "the best punter in Southern California in 1979," so the school had no further need for him.

Maskill retorted: "An individual should have a desire to compete. Some of the coaches who preceded me told me that Kevin showed some promise but once he got his full scholarship (in 1978), he gave up trying and went downhill. Getting the scholarship was his only goal."

In their 24 years in Los Angeles, the Dodgers never had started a rookie pitcher on opening day — until, that is, a chubby 20-year-old named Fernando Valenzuela strode to the mound.

Valenzuela, a left-hander from Sonora, Mexico, still hasn't learned to speak English, but he had no trouble understanding Houston's batters. He tossed a five-hit shutout and led Dodgers to a 2-0 victory Thursday over the Astros, last season's nemesis.

Valenzuela, the youngest player in the major leagues, was pressed into service when Jerry Reuss pulled a muscle in his calf on Wednesday. He now has pitched 262-3 major league innings without yielding an earned run since being called up by the Dodgers last Sept. 10.

"He pitched like a man with 10 years' experience," said former Dodgers pitcher Don Sutton, now with the Astros.

pinch single by Jerry White.

Woody Fryman, 40-year-old Expos reliever, held the Pirates hitless over the final two innings for the victory. Montreal starter Steve Rogers yielded four runs in the first, capped by Bill Madlock's two-run double, and gave up all five Pirates runs in five innings' work.

Mets 2, Cubs 0

Lee Mazzilli and Rusty Staub eached homered, and Pat Zachry combined with two New York relievers to shut out Chicago on seven hits.

Zachry checked Chicago on six hits through 5-2-3 innings. Tom Hausman got the final out of the sixth, and Neil Allen got the save with three innings of relief. The only hit off Allen was a ninth-inning double by Ken Reitz, his second of the game to go along with a triple.

Mazzilli's homer led off the fourth, and after Dave Kingman struck out, Staub homered in the same inning. Kingman, acquired from Chicago during the offseason, went 0-for-3, striking out twice, and was booed loudly by the crowd of 37,030 Cubs fans each time he came to bat.

Padres 4, Giants 1

Juan Bonilla drove in one run with a bases-loaded single, and Gene Richards added a two-run hit in the 12th inning as San Diego made Frank Howard a winner in his debut as a major league manager.

Frank Robinson, meanwhile, got off on a losing note in his first game as manager of the Giants before 55,420 spectators at Candlestick Park.

Giants reliever Al Holland loaded the bases in the 12th on a single by Luis Salazar and two walks. Bonilla's opposite-field single to right snapped a 1-1 tie, and Richards' bloop single to left drove in the final two San Diego runs.

John Curtis went 10 innings for San Diego, yielding one run on seven hits.

Atlanta opens its season at home today against the Cincinnati Reds, who won the first game of the 1981 major league season Wednesday, 3-2, over the defending world champion Philadelphia.

VALENZUELA said through an interpreter that he didn't expect to extend his string of scoreless innings much farther. "I'm not superman," he said. He did add later, though, that he felt no trepidation in filling the historic role.

"When I go to the mound, I don't know what it is to be afraid," Valenzuela said.

Joe Niekro, who pitched Houston to a 7-1 victory over Los Angeles in a one-game playoff for the National League West title last season, was the victim this time. Niekro worked seven innings, yielding a run in the fourth on Ron Cey's sacrifice fly and another in the sixth on a double by Pedro Guerrero, who also had two singles.

VALENZUELA struck out five Astros and walked two, using a wicked screwball that left Houston's right-handed hitters gawking.

"He would throw that screwball on a 3-2 pitch, and that is unusual," said Astros center fielder Cesar Cedeno. "But we will come to expect it."

A crowd of 50,511 pleasantly surprised spectators packed Dodger Stadium and cheered Valenzuela all the way. "It's nice to have a big cheer going for you," the pitcher said.

Canadiens, Bruins long for 1970s

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

If the last two nights are any indication of what the 1980s will be like, the Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins would like to go back to the last decade.

The Canadiens and Bruins, two of the National Hockey League's most dominant teams in the 1970s, winning a total of eight Stanley Cups in that 10-year span — six for Montreal and two for Boston — each stand one game from the ignominy of first-round playoff elimination. And each team must take to the road for the next two contests in their best-of-five series.

The Canadiens were beaten twice in the hallowed Montreal Forum by the Edmonton Oilers, a team which was 14th in the overall standings to Montreal's third. Edmonton moved ahead two games to none with a solid 3-1 triumph Thursday night.

And in Boston, where the Minnesota North Stars had never won in 35 attempts — 0-28-7 — prior to a 5-4 overtime victory on Wednesday, the Bruins fell behind by two games by dropping a wild 9-6 affair.

Oilers 3, Canadiens 1

The key to Edmonton's second consecutive shocker over the Canadiens was goalie Andy Moog, who made 40 saves. Moog, 21, played in just seven Oilers games this season, his first as a pro.

Defenseman Risto Siltanen scored the decisive goal early in the second period on a power play. Wayne Gretzky, the Oilers' record-setting scorer, had two assists, with rookies Jari Kurri and Paul Coffey scoring Edmonton's other goals.

North Stars 9, Bruins 6

Minnesota's shooters beat Boston goalies Rogie Vachon (six goals) and Marco Baron (three) on nine of 32 shots. Steve Payne, who had three goals in the first game, including the winning tally in overtime, had two more scores and two assists. Tim Young had a goal and four assists and Dino Ciccarelli had a goal and three assists.

The line of Payne, Young and MacAdam has been involved in nine of Minnesota's 14 goals in the series.

"We capitalized on about every opportunity we got," said Payne.

Islanders 5, Maple Leafs 1
The Islanders mauled Toronto for the second straight game, thanks again to Bryan Trottier (three goals) and Mike Bossy (one goal, three assists). In the opener, Trottier had five points and Bossy four.

Flames 6, Black Hawks 2
The Flames moved within a victory of winning their first playoff series ever as Bob MacMillan scored twice. The two triumphs in this series equals the number of previous playoff victories for the Flames.

Flyers 8, Nordiques 5
Philadelphia continued its assault of the Quebec net and has scored 14 goals in two games. Bill Barber has scored five of those goals, three on Thursday, while Mel Bridgman put in a pair of tallies and Al Hill had three assists.

Sabres 5, Canucks 2
Buffalo, which struggled to an overtime victory in Game One, had a much easier time as Andre Savard scored twice and John Van Boxmeer set up three goals. The Sabres connected three times on power plays.

"We were a lot looser tonight and we skated better," said Savard, who tied the first game with only 1:08 remaining in regulation.

Kings 5, Rangers 4
Andre St. Laurent found Dean Hopkins unchecked in front of Rangers goalie Steve Baker and hit Hopkins with a perfect pass, which the right wing sent home for the winning tally with 2:44 to play.

The game was marred by a donnybrook at the end of the first period in which 30 penalties — 200 minutes worth — were called.

Penguins 6, Blues 4
Randy Carlyle's two goals and a breakthrough score by George Ferguson paced Pittsburgh. Bernie Federko had a goal and two assists for St. Louis which, for once, did not get great goaltending from Mike Liut.

"We put ourselves in a bad position but it's not the end of the world," said Blues Coach Red Berenson.

Goddard dominates City Junior High cinder meet

Goddard dominated the Junior High City Track Championships at Memorial Stadium Thursday, winning four team titles.

The Goddard girls outscored Alamo by a 147-142 margin while San Jacinto had 108 in the seventh grade competition and won the eighth grade title by a narrow 164-160 margin over Alamo while San Jacinto had 76. In the ninth grade girls, Midland Freshman won the title, 109-70, over Lee Freshman. This meet ended the season for the girls.

The boys competition was even more important since the top two in each event qualified for the Midland-Odessa meet in Odessa later this month. Goddard again dominated the team run with a 187½-145 margin over San Jacinto in the seventh grade while Alamo had 49½ and Goddard won the eighth grade competition with a 179-126 margin over Alamo while San Jacinto had 91. In the ninth grade, Lee won a narrow 98-92 victory over Midland.

Three boys were two event winners in the meet, two coming from the eighth grade. Goddard's Ted Ray won both the 65 and 220 hurdles while Goddard's Fidel Ramon won both the 600 and 1200. In the ninth grade, Lee's Billy Gibbs won both the 200 and long jump, but missed out on a third title in the 100 when he fell to Midland's Terry McGowan. McGowan was second to Gibbs in the 200 and those two will duel again in the Midland-Odessa meet.

Midland Freshman's Mildred Henderson was the meet's only three event winner, winning the triple jump, long jump and 100 meters. Goddard's Diane White won both the eighth grade triple jump and long jump as the only other two-event winner among the girls.

Thursday's top two winners in each event from the Junior High City Track Championship track meet at Memorial Stadium. Top two places in boys division qualify for Midland-Odessa meet later this month.

Home Court myth takes a drubbing in NBA playoffs

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The homecourt has been anything but an advantage in the National Basketball Association playoffs, with visiting teams winning 11 of the 18 games played so far.

That's a striking contrast to the regular season, when 62 percent of the games were won by the home teams. And that's why the coaches of the playoff teams aren't worried about hitting the road, or over-confident about playing at home.

"You can play in a YMCA because the homecourt isn't that big a factor," said Billy Cunningham of the Philadelphia 76ers.

"You know what I think of the homecourt advantage? Not very much," said Cotton Fitzsimmons of the Kansas City Kings.

"We're looking forward to going to Houston. I don't think the homecourt means anything," said Stan Albeck of the San Antonio Spurs.

SO THE coaches are more concerned with tempo than location when the four best-of-seven conference semifinals resume tonight. In the East, Boston is at Chicago and Philadelphia at Milwaukee, while in the West, Kansas City is at Phoenix and San Antonio at Houston. Boston holds a 2-0 lead while the other three series are tied 1-1.

Chicago tried to slow the tempo in its first two games at Boston, but the Celtics' running game foiled that plan. So Bulls Coach Jerry Sloan is going to try a change in tactics tonight.

"We played those first two games like they were half-court games," said Sloan. "We didn't push it up the floor fast enough, and as a consequence, a lot of our ballplayers never got into the flow."

Sloan is hopeful that by picking up the pace, the Bulls will be able to put more pressure on the Celtics and disrupt their attack. But Boston's game is running, so any speedup by Chicago will be a calculated risk — but one the Bulls feel they have to take.

"We haven't put pressure on Boston," said Bulls guard Reggie Theus. "We've got to make them sweat, make them run when they don't want to run. They're jogging back on defense and we want to make them run."

MILWAUKEE and Philadelphia both ran in their opener, won by the 76ers 125-122, but the Bucks came back to take the second game 109-99.

"The first game was a track meet but the second one was played at a much slower pace," said Bucks forward Marques Johnson. "You would think that would be to their advantage since we like to run whenever we can, but we seemed to handle it very well."

The slower tempo enabled the Bucks to concentrate their half-court defense on Julius Erving, who had 38 points in the opener but just 18 in the second game.

"Julius missed a lot of shots that he had made in the first game, but we had two or three guys on him," said Johnson.

So now it's up to the 76ers to make some changes. "Adjusting is what it comes down to in the playoffs," said Philadelphia guard Lionel Hollins. And forward Bobby Jones added, "We have to get it inside, utilizing Darryl (Dawkins), and open things up more for Doc (Erving) so that he's not triple-teamed all the time."

THE KANSAS City Kings are still riding high following an 88-83 shocker at Phoenix Wednesday night. That upset came even though the Kings were without their two outstanding guards, Phil Ford and Otis Birdsong, and had been beaten by 22 points in the series opener.

Birdsong, who severely sprained an ankle Tuesday night, is out for the remainder of this series. Ford, who has been sidelined with blurred vision since suffering an eye injury Feb. 22, is a day-to-day proposition. "We won't know about Phil until gametime," said Fitzsimmons, who insists he will not let Ford suit up until his vision is perfectly cleared.

HOUSTON, which upset defending champion Los Angeles in the mini-series, will try to slow down the tempo against San Antonio.

The Rockets were successful with that strategy in the opener, winning 107-98, but the Spurs got their fast-break going in the second game and won 125-113 to even the series.

Brenner-WBC trial continues as Raymond Clarke testifies

NEW YORK (AP) — In sworn testimony at the Teddy Brenner-WBC trial, Raymond Clarke, chairman of the World Boxing Council's disciplinary committee, testified that in five years the committee has not heard a case.

"It's been a very inactive committee," Clarke, a member of the British Boxing Board of Control, said in a deposition at Brenner's antitrust suit against the WBC and its president, Jose Sulaiman, in Federal District Court.

Brenner is suing because he was suspended by the WBC May 2, 1979, and couldn't utilize a multiple-fight contract he said he had with Alexis Arguello, then the WBC super featherweight champion. He said the suspension came because Brenner stopped payment on a $25,000 check to Don King that Sulaiman ordered him to make to settle differences with King that enabled Brenner to get title sanction for a Feb. 4, 1979, Arguello-Escalera fight that he said he promoted with Top Rank, Inc., which he now serves as matchmaker.

Brenner, who now is Top Rank matchmaker, contends he stopped payment on the check because King would not recognize his multiple-fight contract with Arguello, who stopped Escalera in 13 rounds.

Testifying Thursday was Paul Ruiz, who was business manager and financial advisor for Escalera, the former WBC lightweight champion from 1978-80.

Ruiz testified that he signed a contract with Brenner for the Feb. 4, 1979, fight and not with King. He testified that he had signed an agreement with King but that King did not. He also testified that he was told by phone by Sulaiman that Sulaiman had a signed contract by King for the fight. He told Sulaiman that Dr. Eduardo Roman, Arguello's manager, had told him he had no contract with King.

In Class B singles, Bobbie McCormick is tied for third at 577. Jerry Carpenter of Clute is first at 602.

Marvis Frazier tries out jaw tonight against Epps

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvis Frazier gets a chance tonight to begin proving that he can take the kind of punch needed to make it big in the sport which his dad once ruled as heavyweight champion.

"It will be a test," said the 20-year-old Frazier, who will fight a scheduled six-round heavyweight bout against Melvin Epps of New York in his first fight since he had a neck operation because of ligament pressing on a nerve.

Frazier was knocked out in the first round of a Golden Gloves competition by James Broad with a punch to the forehead which left him conscious but helpless on the canvas. Then last November, after he had won his first two pro fights, it happened again during a sparring session at his father's Philadelphia gym with Canadian Gaston Berube.

"It could have happened even if he wasn't a fighter," said Joe Frazier, who manages and trains his son.

Murcer Slam ruins Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a baseball fairy tale acted out in front of 55,123 fans — the largest opening day crowd in the 58-year history of Yankee Stadium — and Bobby Murcer turned out to be Cinderella.

Hanging onto his roster spot by the narrowest of threads, Murcer responded to a standing ovation from the record stadium crowd Thursday by walloping a pinch-hit, grand slam homer in the New York Yankees 10-3 rout of the Texas Rangers.

The fans are aware of Murcer's shaky status with the club. He will be 35 next month and there are a glut of outfielders already on the roster. So, they saluted the veteran with a roar for old times sake when he came up to bat in the seventh.

"THE anticipation started when I got to the batting circle," Murcer said. "They cared that I was here. I didn't expect that. It was pretty hair-raising. It sent some chills through my body."

The count went to 3-2 — just like in the fairy tales — and Murcer connected for the sixth grand slam of his career and fourth as a Yankee. The roar of the fans was a factor, he said.

"Fan reaction plays a big part for a player, I think. It built me up a little extra. When you have their support you give it that little extra. It really got me going. It showed me the people are behind me all the way. It was very gratifying at this time."

In other American League openers, Oakland downed Minnesota 5-1, Detroit walloped Toronto 6-2 and California downed Seattle 6-2.

Murcer has been on the trading block all spring, but the Yankees have had no takers. With Reggie Jackson on the disabled list, there still was roster room for him, but whether there will be space when Jackson returns a week from today is questionable. Manager Gene Michael wouldn't say whether the slam saved Murcer's job, but it certainly didn't hurt his chances.

UNTIL MURCER connected, the Yankees were hanging onto a 5-3 lead, built on a three-run homer by Bucky Dent and a two-run double by Rick Cerone. Don Zimmer, new manager of the Rangers, remembered another three-run shot by Dent — the one that beat Zimmer and the Boston Red Sox in the 1978 pennant playoff.

"Tell Bucky Dent I've got to eat too," said Zimmer. "He keeps beating me with three-run homers. I'll go to Japan, and he'll probably hit a three-run homer off me there, too."

A's 5, Twins 1
Mike Norris, ace of the Oakland staff, tossed a six-hitter to get the A's season off to a winning start before another record opening-day crowd, 42,658 at Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, Minn.

Norris, who posted a 22-9 record last year, no-hit the Twins until Mickey Hatcher beat out an infield single in the fifth inning. Norris walked four and struck out three.

Tony Armas drove in the first run off Twins lefty Jerry Koosman in the fourth, and Armas scored later on a double by Jeff Newman. Mike Heath and Armas also homered for Oakland.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 2
Richie Hebner belted a three-run homer in the seventh inning and Jack Morris scattered five Toronto hits as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Blue Jays 6-2.

Angels 6, Mariners 2
"I was hoping for a single to maybe score two runs, but it worked out much better. I hit the jackpot," said California Angels' catcher Brian Downing. The jackpot was Downing's first major league grand slam. Downing's slam came with two outs in the first inning following a single by Fred Lynn and walks to Don Baylor and Dan Ford.

"It burns me, I usually don't walk that many men. But in this park you're just asking for trouble, especially against a powerhouse club like the Angels," said loser Glenn Abbott. "Everyone in this lineup can hurt you."

"With a lineup like this, when we get in the groove we're gonna terrorize this league," said Ford.

Jury clears Oregon aide on theft charge

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A Lane County Circuit Court jury acquitted Ron Billingslea, former University of Oregon assistant basketball coach, Thursday night on a theft charge in connection with unused airline tickets.

Billingslea was accused of diverting $1,680 in unused tickets, bought with university funds, to his own account at the Bronson Travel Agency in Eugene.

The jury of seven men and five women voted 10-2 in favor of acquittal after six hours of deliberations following a five-day trial.

Billingslea, 30, left the coaching staff two years ago when he was an assistant to former head Coach Dick Harter, now coach at Penn State.

Prosecutors said the tickets were purchased with funds in a secret account used to finance trips to the campus by high school athletes.

Winners in the Midland Country Club Hi Low tournament were, from left, Mrs. Gene McDaniel and Mrs. Elizabeth Locker, first; Mrs. Lloyd Uglan and Mrs. Robert L. Spears, second; Mrs. Ike Lovelady and Mrs. Richard Lamphere, third; and Mrs. Phil Roberts and Mrs. T. Stall, fourth.

Kenty risks title against O'Grady

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — Hilmer Kenty defends the World Boxing Association lightweight champion Sunday against Sean O'Grady and he hopes this time his opponent is the only challenger.

Beginning with his title-winning performance against Ernesto Espana in March 1980, Kenty has battled cramps in his right leg as well as his opponent.

"Everybody thought I was hurt in the seventh round against Espana because I stopped punching," said Kenty. "I got cramps in the seventh round." He knocked out Espana two rounds later to become the champion.

In his first title defense Aug. 2 in his hometown of Detroit, Kenty again suffered cramps in the seventh round, but kept the title when he knocked out Yong Ho Oh of Korea in the 10th.

A four-round knockout of Espana followed Sept. 10. Then came a 15-round decision against Vilomar Fernandez Nov. 8 in which it appeared in the late rounds that the champion was in serious trouble.

"I was never hurt in the Fernandez bout," said Kenty. It was, he said, leg cramps again.

"They can't pinpoint it," said Kenty of the cramps. "It could be a lot of things. One is, I was low in potassium."

There was a report that Kenty underwent eye surgery. He denies this.

Berbick hopes to ring Holmes' bell Saturday

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Trevor Berbick's name may not ring a bell in this country to any but the most ardent fans of boxing. But that situation will change drastically if he rings Larry Holmes' bell Saturday night.

Berbick, Canada's heavyweight boxing champion, gets what he acknowledges is "a great opportunity" when he challenges Holmes, the World Boxing Council titlist, at Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion. The bout will begin about 7:15 p.m. PST.

Berbick, a 27-year-old native of Jamaica who represented that country in the 1976 Olympic Games, brings an 18-1-1 pro record with 16 knockouts into the ring. The biggest triumph for the WBC's fifth-rated contender was a ninth-round knockout of former World Boxing Association champion John Tate last June.

Holmes, of Easton, Pa., is 36-0 with 27 knockouts. Since capturing the WBC crown with a 15-round decision over Ken Norton on June 9, 1978, Holmes has defended successfully eight times, all by knockout.

Holmes, 31, is a prohibitive favorite, but the well-muscled, soft-spoken challenger appeared calm and confident as he completed preparations for the biggest bout of his life

"I think...no, make that I definitely know it's going to be a good fight," said Berbick, a resident of Halifax, Nova Scotia. "If I didn't think I had a good chance, I wouldn't get in there."

"I think I'm qualified for a title shot. I've proved myself. After Tate, I had three knockouts that lasted a total of six rounds. I deserve this, and I'm going for the top."

"I'm very confident. I'm not even thinking about Larry Holmes. I like Larry as a person and I think he likes me. But when we get in that ring, I'm going to try to win. It's going to be a war."

Holmes is scheduled to defend his title again on May 22 against former WBC champion Leon Spinks, presuming, of course, that he dispatches Berbick. The mention of Spinks clearly sent Berbick's blood pressure up a few notches.

"Larry's supposed to fight Leon Spinks; they're making a big thing of it," said Berbick. "If I fight Leon Spinks tomorrow, it wouldn't go 10 rounds."

"The whole thing is, I'm not an American citizen. All the American fighters have been built up.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, resuming Thursday's rally after an early pause.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off a fraction at mid-morning, was up 3.06 at 1,001.89 by noon.

Analysts said traders were heartened by recent signs of weakness in oil prices.

They also noted continuing confusion over the interest-rate outlook.

Airline issues were strong, benefiting from hopes for a break in the oil-price spiral.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 28.38 million shares at noon, against 25.40 million at the same point Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index gained 22 to 78.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.19 at 368.91.

States consider boosting taxes

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Don't count on extra dollars in your pocket because of tax cuts this year. Increases in state levies could eat up any reduction approved by Congress in the federal income tax.

A survey by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit research group based in Washington, D.C., shows proposals that would boost taxes by $3.8 billion are pending in state legislatures.

The foundation surveyed the 49 states holding regular legislative sessions this year. (Kentucky is the exception.) It found a wide range of tax plans under discussion, including proposals to increase sales and motor fuel taxes.

The Tax Foundation noted that tax decreases as well as increases are pending. The decreases, however, add up to only $800 million.

The Census Bureau says state tax collections of all kinds in 1980 added up to $136.9 billion, an increase of 9.6 percent from 1979. Federal income tax collections alone are more than twice that amount.

It is impossible to balance President Reagan's plan for a federal tax cut and the proposals put forth at the state level to determine exactly who would win and who would lose.

In terms of sheer dollar volume, the potential decrease in the federal bite is much bigger than the potential increase in state collections. During the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30, the Reagan program would cut income taxes by $6.4 billion and business taxes by $2.5 billion. But individual categories of taxpayers — those hard hit by an increase in the sales tax, for example — could find that the smaller federal bill doesn't make up for a bigger state bill.

The Tax Foundation said its survey showed the states say they need the added money to balance operating budgets, provide more funds for highway maintenance and help local governments with programs of property tax relief.

Adding up the pluses and minuses of the various proposals, the foundation found that tax decreases outweigh tax increases in only eight states: Arizona, Georgia, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

Even in those eight states, however, the picture is mixed. Some taxes would go down; others would go up. In Arizona, the governor has proposed a one-time, $25 million rebate in personal income taxes. But a hike in the gasoline tax is also under consideration.

Ban on 'head shops' faces legal challenges

CLEVELAND (AP) — Lawmakers throughout the nation are trying to fight drug abuse by passing laws against the sale of cigarette papers, waterpipes and other drug paraphernalia, but court rulings threaten to send the laws up in smoke.

Fourteen states and hundreds of communities have adopted laws banning the sale of drug paraphernalia on the ground that the "head shops" where the pipes and papers are sold glamorize and encourage drug abuse, according to the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

The trend shows no signs of slowing. The Oklahoma Legislature has passed a "head shop" bill that may go to Gov. George Nigh today.

The Texas House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee — referred to in news accounts as the War on Drugs committee — this month recommended a bill that would punish both buyers and sellers of drug-related items.

"The whole intent of the bill is to shut down the head shops," said state Rep. Terral Smith of Austin. The paraphernalia industry is worth an estimated $500 million to $3 billion a year.

The Drug Enforcement Administration has helped lawmakers by providing a model for a law against drug-related paraphernalia.

Some judges, in overturning "head shop" laws, have said these items can have legitimate uses and that the laws give police too much power in deciding whether the items are intended for use with illegal drugs.

Rolling papers for marijuana "joints," for example, can also be used for tobacco cigarettes. A paper clip can be used to hold the end of a burning marijuana cigarette.

The issue of whether the sale of drug paraphernalia can be banned appears headed for the U.S. Supreme Court, possibly from the Cleveland suburb of Parma.

Under the Parma law, making, selling or possessing drug paraphernalia is a second-degree misdemeanor, carrying a fine of $750 and 90 days in jail. It bans sale of devices such as hashish pipes, waterpipes, cocaine spoons, and prohibits advertising of those and similar items.

Peter Schlievin, owner of Record Revolution No. 6, challenged the law before it could be applied to him. Schlievin says his legal fees are being paid, in part, by industry groups.

He says most record dealers can't get by simply by selling records, which he says have a low profit margin. But he thinks the campaign to rid the country of drug accessories is "ridiculous."

So far, seven state laws based on the DEA model have been upheld in federal district courts, he says.

Local youths scoop free coal into pickup trucks on U.S. 23 near Jenkins, Ky. Striking union miners had set up roadblocks on the highway near the Virginia-Kentucky border and forced non-union truckers to dump their loads.

Church gets confidence votes; challenges the coal industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers President Sam Church, armed with a vote of confidence from the union's top governing council, is challenging the soft-coal industry to resume contract talks as the coal strike enters its 15th day.

The union's 21-member International Executive Board approved unanimously on Thursday a resolution backing the bargaining efforts of Church and the UMW's negotiating teams and issued a companion resolution expressing general support for moves Church has taken to protect the financial integrity of the union during the strike.

The actions gave new negotiating leverage to the embattled Church, who squared off in a fistfight with the union's safety director earlier in the week and had been criticized by miners who rejected a tentative contract settlement March 31.

The union's 39-member bargaining council was meeting here today to discuss strategy for reviving talks with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, bargaining agent for some 130 coal companies.

Meanwhile, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said the administration was "disappointed that miners rejected the (contract) package," but he reiterated that the government has no plans to intereene in the stalemated talks.

In the coalfields, thousands of striking miners received their last paychecks and pickets were thrown up around non-union operations in West Virginia, Kentucky and Virginia.

State welfare officials in West Virginia and Illinois said they had set up temporary field offices in preparation for next week's anticipated rush of food-stamp applications from the strikers. Some 30,000 applications are expected in West Virginia, while Illinois officials say they are expecting 12,000.

Senators give the administration's energy proposal the cold shoulder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Senate Aging Committee are giving the cold shoulder to the Reagan administration's plan to cut federal energy assistance and weatherization programs for the elderly, poor and handicapped.

"In this instance, to subject these programs to across-the-board cuts is to victimize elderly Americans by contributing to their fears, anxieties, uncertainties and perhaps to the destitution of health and spirit," said Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine.

Cohen said the cost of heating oil in his state has risen in the last three months from $1 a gallon to $1.40 a gallon.

Budget director David A. Stockman argued, however, that the $1.3 billion included in the president's budget for energy assistance will be adequate because it won't be siphoned off by federal bureaucracy.

He said the federal money will go directly to states to meet the energy needs of low-income and older people.

"I think $1.3 million is not being niggardly," he said. "It will do the job if the states and localities target it to low-income and the elderly."

Last year, Congress appropriated $1.85 billion for that purpose.

To emphasize his point, Cohen read a letter from Ruth Steward, 75, who lives near Farmington, Maine. "What are people like me going to do?" she asked. "I get scared when I think of not having these services."

The administration wants to lump together all energy assistance money into block grants for the states. In turn, each state will determine how best to distribute the money — whether for weatherization or to meet fuel costs of the poor — and which communities are most in need.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., the committee chairman, said those living on fixed incomes cannot renege their finances to pay for escalating energy costs or make their homes more energy efficient.

And Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said he was worried that state bureaucrats charged with allocating the money might start playing politics with distribution. That, he said, would be detrimental to the poor.

"I don't believe we are any more astute or humane here in Washington than they are in state capitals," Stockman responded.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said he hopes the elderly poor in hot weather states get their share of energy assistance to purchase cooling systems.

But Stockman said the formula for distribution ought to be weighted toward meeting the rising costs of heating. That formula, which tilts toward cold-weather states, is now in the law.

The ten of spades was covered by the jack and king, and the spade return was ruffed in the closed hand. A club to the king left declarer on the table with no way to get back to his hand, unless he ruffed with his last trump while West still had a club stopper. He ended up with only nine tricks.

Once he discovered the friendly 3-3 heart division, declarer should have paused for reflection. He could afford to lose two club tricks and a spade. By giving up the chance for an overtrick, the contract could have been guaranteed.

Declarer can simply concede two club tricks. However, on the actual play, when West puts up the ace of clubs on the second round, declarer should jettison dummy's king! When South regains the lead, he leads high clubs from his hand, forcing out the queen, and will lose only the three obvious tricks.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Two sisters receive probated sentences for child neglect

Two Midland sisters who were indicted for injury to a child after their young children were severely burned in a house fire Dec. 12, 1980, have been meted probated sentences in lieu of prison or jail sentences.

Both pleaded guilty to the offense, but in different courts.

The mothers, Kathy Williams and Brenda Williams, were accused of criminal negligence after their four children were burned shortly after midnight on a chilly Dec. 12 when a rigged extension cord carrying power to the house apparently shorted out and set the house aflame.

The mothers, who are about 18 to 20 years old, were not at home, and the children, ages 1 to 4, had been left alone in the two-room shack when the fire was ignited.

A passerby, Joe O'Neal, spotted the flames at 209 N. Madison St. and rescued the children.

Receiving the stiffer of the two probations was Kathy Jean Williams, who pleaded guilty before 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin. She was placed under felony probation for two years and was ordered to pay $332.53 in restitution. She allegedly was aware of the faulty electrical set-up, did nothing to correct it and knew of a previous fire there. Her sister reportedly was not aware of the hazards or of the previous fire.

Brenda Williams, whose offense was reduced from a felony to a misdemeanor, pleaded guilty before Midland County Judge Bill Anders and was placed on probation for one year.

If either violates conditions of probations, one sister could be jailed and the other could be placed in prison to serve out the terms.

Since she is on felony probation, Kathy Jean Williams could be sentenced to the state penitentiary if she breaks any law or court order. For similar infractions, Brenda Williams could be kept in the Midland County Jail for a year.

The injured children were Lakephine Williams, 3, daughter of Brenda Williams; and Hobbett Williams, 4, Karen Williams, 3, and Tyrone Williams, 1, children of Kathy Jean Williams.

Subcommittee OKs wiretapping bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Lanell Cofer bottled up Gov. Bill Clements' wiretap bill in subcommittee for more than a month but finally uncorked the bottle Thursday.

She convened her subcommittee, which voted 3-0 to send the electronic surveillance measure to the full House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee.

Committee Chairman Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, predicted the panel would vote next Wednesday to send an electronic surveillance bill to the House.

"Oh, I think something is going to come out on the floor. I feel the votes are there on the committee to bring it out," Nabers said.

Ms. Cofer, D-Dallas, sat on the wiretap bill since March 4 without convening her subcommittee.

But pressures built, not the least of which came from Speaker Bill Clayton, who wants the wiretap issue aired on the floor of the House, where he predicts it will have "rough sledding."

"I suggested to her early this week that if we were going to have it, we ought to move it," Clayton said.

The speaker said he was unsure how he would vote if called upon to break a tie.

Ms. Cofer called her subcommittee together Thursday morning but consumed the time reading a substitute bill and 28 amendments of her own without every calling for a vote.

Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, exploded, "You have wasted the time of this committee and insulted everybody by your conduct."

"This is too important to kick out in 20 minutes or an hour. You are saying you want to take a vote without any discussion. ... You can't report out something that affects the rights of all Texans and invades their privacy without having a hearing or a discussion," Ms. Cofer said.

But a later meeting, attended only by Ms. Cofer and Reps. Larry Browder, D-Coldspring, and Terral Smith, R-Austin, took less than 20 minutes to whip out the governor's bill.

It allows wiretaps only in drug cases. Nine judges, scattered across the state, could issue wiretap orders. Only the Department of Public Safety could possess wiretapping equipment. And there would be possible prison sentences for illegal wiretaps.

Ms. Cofer said she let the governor's bill out because "it was obvious" the votes weren't there for anything else and there was no chance for a compromise.

"I have more important issues. ... I don't need this headache any more," she said.

Nabers said he was ready to send a wiretap bill to the floor and might even vote for it although he has never been strong for wiretapping.

"I don't think it is an answer or a panacea that a lot of people think it is to solve the drug problem. But that does not mean I will not support a bill or vote against a bill," he said.

Nabers said the mail from his district favors wiretapping.

Helicopter falls on city street, kills two

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Federal Aviation Administration officials launched an investigation today into the crash of a helicopter that fell onto a residential street, killing the two Canadian occupants.

Police Lt. Carlos Pinon said no one on the ground was injured in the crash Thursday and said the flames from the helicopter that hit in the middle of the street did not spread to any of the nearby houses.

Pinon said the two-passenger helicopter was flying toward the El Paso International Airport when it began losing altitude.

"Apparently he was looking for a open landing spot, then all of a sudden it just dropped," Pinon said. The helicopter crashed about one-half mile from the airport.

The pilot was declared dead at the scene and a woman passenger was rushed to nearby Eastwood Hospital, where she was pronounced dead, Pinon said.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Al Pospisil identified the victims as Jacque Dagenais and Roxanne Francoeur, both of Montreal, Canada.

Israeli warplanes bomb guerrilla positions in Lebanon

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes bombed and strafed guerrilla positions south of the Lebanese capital early today, a few hours after helicopter-borne paratroopers carried out Israel's first attack on guerrilla tanks in southern Lebanon, officials from both sides reported.

The military command in Tel Aviv said four guerrillas and one Israeli soldier were killed as troops knocked out two Soviet-made tanks in a raid on Arab Salim, 11 miles northwest of the Israeli border town of Metulla.

The command said planes attacked guerrilla bases about 10 miles south of Beirut, scored precise hits and returned safely. A Palestine Liberation Organization communique said several buildings were destroyed and three civilians wounded in the 30-minute air raid by six F-4 Phantom fighter bombers, but it said ground fire and shoulder-fired missiles prevented "enemy jets from accomplishing their mission."

Another PLO communique, describing the attack at Arab Salim, conceded only three guerrilla deaths and said five others were wounded.

Meanwhile, in the eastern Lebanese city of Zahle, Syrian forces and Lebanese Christians took advantage of a tenuous cease-fire to consolidate positions, bury their dead and aid the wounded.

A PLO spokesman said the overnight attacks confirmed Palestinian claims that Israel and the rightist Lebanese Christian militias were coordinating a "pincer movement" from southern and northern Lebanon to "wipe out the guerrilla movement."

the Syrian-Christian confrontation, Israel had said it would not stand idly by if the shelling of Christian strongholds continued.

Israeli Maj. Gen. Avigdor Ben-Gal, the northern front commander, said today the raid in southern Lebanon was executed to "suggest that wherever the terrorists have tanks, they are vulnerable to our attacks."

Fighting also spread to Israel's northern Galilee panhandle, which was hit overnight by several rounds of Soviet-made rockets, apparently fired by Palestinian guerrillas in reprisal for the Israeli cross-border strike. There were no injuries and little damage, the Israeli military command said today.

The Red Cross used the lull in central Lebanon to evacuate badly wounded civilians from the Christian city of Zahle under the watchful eye of Syrian troops who were reinforcing tank and gun positions around the besieged city, 30 miles east of Beirut.

Lebanese Defense Minister Joseph Skaf, a Zahle native, told The Associated Press that between 350 and 400 wounded were sheltered in make-shift clinics in Zahle's wine cellars. The city's hospitals and clinics were heavily damaged by artillery, tank and rocket bombardments unleashed by the Syrians.

However, Red Cross officials said they believed the number of seriously wounded casualties was no more than 60.

The truce, which took hold Wednesday, ended eight days of Syrian-Christian-Lebanese fighting in Zahle and Beirut that left 265 civilians dead and 1,000 wounded, according to Lebanese police. The Lebanese army command said 12 soldiers died and more than 125 were wounded. Syrians forces and the rightist Christian militias did not issue casualty reports.

Western diplomats here predict it will be difficult to maintain the truce. And intense military preparations under way at Zahle and along the three-mile Christian-Moslem demarcation line in Beirut indicated no one was taking chances the cease-fire would hold.

Western diplomatic sources said the United States and France brought diplomatic pressure for the truce while consulting with the Soviet Union as well as European and influential Arab states on the fighting.

A Kuwaiti newspaper, Al-Hadaf, quoted sources in Syria as saying the Soviet Union would "come to the aid of Syria and the Palestinian resistance movement if they were exposed to large-scale attack by Israel which may take advantage of the explosive situation in Lebanon."

Japanese freighter, sub collide

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese freighter sank after colliding with an American nuclear-powered submarine, the U.S.S. George Washington, off the southern tip of Japan, the U.S. Navy said today.

The Japan Defense Agency said 13 of the freighter's 15 crew members were rescued.

The Pentagon in Washington said there were no injuries aboard the submarine, and Navy officials who asked not to be identified said there was no damage to the vessel's nuclear propulsion system or the weapons systems on its hull. There were no reports of damage to the hull.

A statement issued by the Pentagon said the submarine was on a routine training operation when it collided Thursday with a small merchant vessel, later identified as the the Nissho Maru, in shallow waters about 110 miles southwest of Sasebo, Japan.

The submarine surfaced immediately after the collision to offer assistance, but the freighter was hidden from view by fog and rain, the Navy said.

The submarine was unable to observe personnel casualties or damage to the Japanese vessel before it disappeared. A U.S. aircraft operating with the U.S. submarine conducted a low-level search and sighted no vessel or persons in distress, said a Navy spokesman, adding that the Navy regrets the incident.

The Navy spokesman said a Japanese destroyer rescued most of the freighter's crew early today.

The Japanese Defense Agency said the 2,350-ton freighter left the western Japanese city of Kobe on Tuesday and sank late Thursday, a day before it was to have reached Shanghai with a load of general cargo.

It sank about 15 minutes after hitting something under water, the agency quoted survivors as saying.

One Japanese official, who declined to be identified, said some of the survivors claimed the freighter had "collided with a black submarine," that surfaced shortly afterward, then submerged and disappeared.

He said the crewmen, who had taken refuge in rubber life rafts, also saw a propeller-driven plane with "stars and stripes" overhead.

Meanwhile, rescue craft continued to search for the two missing men, including the captain, Taizo Noguchi.

There have been several previous incidents involving submarines in or near Japanese waters, the most recent being a mysterious fire that killed nine crewmen and disabled a Soviet nuclear submarine off Okinawa last August.

U. S. trying to absolve Salvadoran military in Tuesday's murder of 30

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is trying to absolve the U.S.-backed armed forces in El Salvador of the slaying of 30 people earlier this week in a low-income suburb of San Salvador.

State Department spokesman William Dyess and White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes issued separate statements Thursday saying the identity of those who carried out the killings is not known.

State Department sources, who asked not to be identified, said the 30 men, women and teen-agers were killed Tuesday after police forces were fired on during a post-midnight patrol in the San Salvador suburb of Soyopango.

Salvadoran officials and other State Department sources said Salvadoran Treasury Police were involved. They called the U.S. statements an attempt to draw a distinction between the regular armed forces, which receive U.S. aid, and the Treasury Police, which do not.

Meanwhile, Robert E. White, the former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, disputed suggestions that four American churchwomen were slain last December because they were perceived as running a roadblock.

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday, White termed "inexplicable" earlier testimony by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. that the roadblock theory is a leading one among investigators.

White, who was withdrawn from El Salvador for publicly disagreeing with President Reagan's policy, said investigators know the three nuns and one laywoman were not killed at the roadblock late last year but rather several hours later, after being detained by local security forces.

Haig's testimony and other administration statements are "misinterpretations, whether deliberately or not, to find excuses for one of the most brutal forces in the world, that is the security force," White said.
