

At NASA, they have 'stars in their eyes'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia and its jubilant astronauts, back from a remarkable maiden voyage, dramatically advanced America's chances of gaining a working foothold in space by 1982 — and someday, said Commander John Young, for "going to the stars."

The shuttle, resting comfortably in California, is A-OK. The astronauts, exuberant after Tuesday's pinpoint landing, are healthy and eager to participate in future space projects. Today they began an exhaustive week of debriefings with space agency technicians.

When Young and Robert Crippen brought Columbia down from orbit to a rock-hard lake bed in California's Mojave Desert, they demonstrated that the United States has a space machine that makes all others obsolete — a machine that can fly into space and return to Earth like an airplane, ready to fly again, a hundred or more times.

The astronauts, in their own way, probably said it best. "You can't believe what a flying machine this is," Young said. "I think we've got a fantastic and remarkable capability here. We're really not too far — the human race isn't — from going to the stars."

Said Crippen: "We are really in the space business to stay." America had left manned space flight to the Soviet Union since 1975.

Shortly after the wheels-down landing on Rogers Dry Lake, the two astronauts climbed aboard space agency executive jets for the trip back to the Johnson Space Center here.

For the next seven work days they will meet with National Aeronautics and Space Administration specialists, discussing in great detail every one of Columbia's systems to pinpoint any flaws in design or procedure.

They have few problems to analyze. From the moment of its fiery blast-off from launch pad 39A at Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Sunday, Columbia per-

Officials said initial inspection showed the spaceship to be in very good condition. There were indications a few non-critical thermal tiles on the top of the vehicle suffered some damage. But the important ones, those that protected the underside from re-entry heat, were in good shape.

Ground crew operations were stretched several hours longer than expected when toxic freon gas was detected around the ship. One NASA official the concentrations were small, perhaps from a vented cooling system.

If subsequent test flights are successful, officials may consider accelerating the shuttle program, perhaps cutting the last of three trial runs. That could advance to mid-1982 the date the ship can begin moving routinely into space, ferrying up payloads for military, scientific and commercial missions.

Donald K. Slayton, a former astronaut who heads the shuttle test flight program, said the desert landing at Edwards was so perfect that Columbia may return to Earth at a 15,000-foot runway at Cape Canaveral sooner than expected. The first landing near the launch site now is set for the fifth mission.

formed almost flawlessly. The astronauts had only a few minor problems to tend to.

Columbia was parked today at Edwards Air Force Base, where technicians will carefully check it for the next week or so before it is returned to Cape Canaveral, buckled to the back of a special Boeing 747 jetliner.

Its next flight, a four-day mission, is scheduled for August or September, with rookie astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly at the controls.

Group 'cares' to keep rental subsidies out

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Subsidized housing got snubbed and verbally thrown out of the neighborhood here Tuesday night by scores of Midlanders sporting "I CARE" golden yellow tags.

They were expressing fears that a proposed partially rent-subsidized apartment complex in far west Midland would transform their neighborhood into rioting slums and would slash their property values to zero.

They freely applauded when one of their numbers lambasted the opposition's stand. But disapproval by the "I CARE" protesters was by silence — no boos.

"I've seen them go straight to ruin," protester Laurence Lee said of tarnished neighborhoods which are bordered by and infiltrated by government-subsidized housing.

Lee, who registered fairly high on the applause scale, said he believes in the people-helping-people concept but only conditionally.

"I am for local help," he said, "but I am not for federal-subsidy for anything."

Lee, a retired accountant, was clearly in the majority, which made an en masse appearance in a 2½-hour hearing before the Midland City Council in a vain effort to elicit official support to kill off the $3 million project before any ground-breaking begins just off Delmar Street and Illinois Avenue.

THE PROPOSED apartment complex, which would include 40 rent-subsidized apartments out of 86 units, would be built by investors behind the K-Mart department store and would be ready for occupancy in about two years if the builders are intent on bucking the Delmar-area homeowners and get low (about 12 percent) bond money, which can be borrowed tax free.

"I'm not trying to defend subsidies," such as those in agriculture, food and "even the Chrysler Corp.," said Mary Rich Adams, the Carrizozo, N.M., builder who vouched that the project "is a fine plan."

"I'm here," she said, "for a profit organization... a company that builds for profits."

Testimony focuses on condition of cancer machine

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — In the second day of testimony at the Texas Health Facilities Commission, tempers of both Odessa and Midland hospital officials flared as the fight for the 6 Million Electron Volt Linear Accelerator continued.

Dr. Greg Garrett, radiation therapist at MCH, testified at length on why Odessa should be granted a certificate of need for the cancer radiation machine.

Garrett said the hospital's current Teraton 80 cobalt unit is worn out. He discussed breakdowns of the machine and repairs made during the year and four months while he has been a radio-oncologist at MCH.

"We are dealing with an old machine. The effective mechanical life is approximately 11 years or so," Garrett explained. "I foresee more problems in the future. The linear accelerator offers overall what we are speaking...to attain the improvement and quality that the 6MEV offers over the cobalt machine." The current cobalt machine has been in use at the hospital since 1971.

FREQUENTLY DURING Tuesday's testimony a comparison was made to automobiles.

Under cross-examination of Garrett, hearing Judge Kevin Reed asked "Right now you own a 1970 Ford. And instead of replacing it with a 1981 Ford, you want to replace it with a 1981 Lincoln, right?"

Garrett countered with "The Clinic 20 (MEV) would be more like a Lincoln. The AECL (Atomic Energy of Canada Limited) 6MEV would be more like a top-of-the-line Ford, compared to the Cobalt 80 which would be like a bottom-of-the-line Ford."

Throughout the rest of the day, the automobile comparison was alluded to under questioning of nine witnesses. Joe Webber, attorney for the Odessa hospital, was not amused by the analogy. "I was somewhat taken aback by that analogy, Mr. Hearing Officer."

Reed emphasized he had not made a decision in the case. He was merely trying to elicit a true comparison from the doctor.

GARRETT EXPLAINED that before arriving at MCH in January 1980, he had interviewed with Midland Memorial Hospital for a position as medical director of the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center. He accepted the position with Odessa because he said the hospital "would pursue acquiring a linear accelerator. It was mentioned at the time," he said.

Garrett emphasized when he joined MCH he went there not knowing whether or not they would get a linear accelerator. However, under questioning by Reed, he said if the hospital did not get the machine, his resignation was "a very real possibility."

Fred Davis, attorney representing Midland Memorial Hospital, also grilled Garrett during his morning-long testimony.

Davis questioned Garrett about his affiliation with the radiologist group in Odessa. He asked Garrett if he had told Dr. Alvin Lee Schlitemeyer, medical director of the Allison Center, that Schlitemeyer could not practice at Odessa without affiliation with the group.

"Isn't the point of this (questioning) that Dr. Schlitemeyer and others could not work at Medical Center Hospital unless they were a member of this group?" Davis asked.

AN ANGRY GARRETT answered, "May I ask you a question?"

Davis snapped back, "No, you may answer mine."

Garrett asked rhetorically if Schlitemeyer had applied to the hospital for active staff credentials. He then said, "Then how does he know?"

"He said you told him," Davis said.

"Then I believe Dr. Schlitemeyer is in error," Garrett said.

In later testimony, Schlitemeyer responded, "It was my impression that there is an agreement with the Odessa Radiologic Group for the exclusive right to provide services at Medical Center Hospital."

Testimony continued with other

'You can't have it both ways,' Hance wants to tell constituents

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year ago, congressmen were getting letters from people who said, "We demand a balanced budget." This year, the letters say, "We demand a tax cut, like President Reagan is calling for." They're the same people who wrote a year ago.

"You want to write them back and ask, 'What do you want — a balanced budget or a tax cut? You can't have both,'" said Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas.

"There's no way you can have a balanced budget, a major tax cut and increased spending for defense, all at the same time," said Hance, 38, who is playing a major role in the tax cuts legislation being hammered out in the House Ways and Means Committee.

Hance is one of 44 House Democrats who belong to the Conservative Democratic Forum and is head of the organization's tax cut group.

The organization, formed to strengthen the conservative position in Congress, has lined up basically behind Reagan's budget proposals. The Republican Party has a majority in the Senate, while the Democratic Party has a 26-member edge in the House. But with 44 members, the CDF has found itself the subject of a lot of interest.

With the Republicans likely to vote together behind Reagan's proposal, the support of the CDF would give Reagan a victory in a situation that has become — to the chagrin of the Democratic Party leadership — to be a battle between the Conservatives and the Liberals rather than the Republicans and the Democrats.

The Democratic leadership has tried, with little success, to persuade the maverick Democrats to stay with the party position.

"I think the key vote of the next two years will be the first budget vote" on the floor of the House, Hance said.

But the support from the conservative Democrats for Reagan holds true only for his call for widespread budget cuts. The president isn't faring as well in his call for extensive tax cuts.

"The thing the general public doesn't realize is that Reagan's proposal for $54 billion in tax cuts would result in a $45 billion deficit for 1982," Hance said.

"I don't know of five votes the president would get (from CDF members) for his tax cuts. I've only had two tell me they would vote for it."

But Hance, head of the CDF's tax cut group, says he also opposes the Democratic tax cut alternative offered by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the Ways and Means chairman.

"I'm for something that would create a smaller deficit than the president's bill, with incentives that would encourage people to put their money into savings," Hance said.

Hance has introduced a bill that would provide $2,000 tax free for an individual and $4,000 tax free on a joint return on interest earned on savings accounts or dividends.

"I think it's imperative something like that be in there. The economists have all said that for a tax cut not to create inflation it will have to generate more savings," Hance said. "If people just go out and spend their tax return, it'd be highly inflationary."

Councilmen question BTA request for heliport

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland's metropolitan aura will take a literal whirling move upward if the Midland City Council approves a specific-use permit for a heliport atop the three-story BTA Oil Producers building at 104 S. Pecos St. near downtown.

Appeal for the request, made by BTA executive Carlton "Carty" Beal Jr., was presented to the Midland City Council Tuesday by helicopter pilot Ed Harbold, regional manager of Lone Star Helicopters at Midland Regional Airport. Lone Star flies the Bell 222 twin-engine gas turbine helicopter.

The Midland City Council, concerned about the safety of helicopters flying over downtown Midland and about engine and rotary-blade noise, recessed its first public hearing on the heliport until 2 p.m. on April 28 in City Hall Chambers. Councilmen wanted more briefing on the proposal from the city's Airport Board.

Harbold assured the council that safety is his primary concern.

"We feel it's safe," he said of flying helicopters. "Noise abatement is of (primary) concern, but so is safety."

Councilman Tom Sloan wanted more safety and noise study on the traffic which BTA's heliport will generate.

"You see," Sloan said, "I have some concern. When you leave there (heliport), you're going over my house...and some other houses. And the houses were there first, contrary to some other houses around town," he said in alluding to housing developments to the west and north of Midland Air Park.

Sloan suggested "some noise study" before the City Council calls for a vote on the first of two public hearings on the heliport.

"I think it (the heliport) will be a real asset to the community," Sloan said.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II also called for a thorough investigation into the proposal, since, he said, the

Bradley wins again as L.A. mayor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite challenges from 18 people, including a former mayor he had faced twice before, Tom Bradley won a landslide victory in his quest for a third term with the highest percentage of votes ever cast for a Los Angeles mayor.

With 99.2 percent of Tuesday's vote counted, Bradley had 63.6 percent, or 279,501 votes, to former Mayor Sam Yorty's 32.3 percent, or 142,204. Bradley had needed at least 50 percent to avoid what would have been his first runoff.

The previous percentage record was 60.8, set by Norris Poulson in 1957.

A bare 4 percent of the vote was scattered among the other candidates, who ranged from a railroad switchman and a woman airline pilot to perennial candidate Eileen Anderson, a singer and dancer.

Yorty tried to win enough support to force a runoff by portraying Bradley, a former police lieutenant, as a do-nothing mayor and a foe of the police and fire departments at a time when crime has been skyrocketing.

Bradley, a 63-year-old Democrat and the first black mayor of the nation's third largest city, had been widely favored to win the non-partisan election by at least several percentage points, but the larger-than-expected margin bodes well for any hopes he may have of seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1982.

Bradley has made no announcement on his political plans, but he refused during the campaign to promise that he would serve all four years of a third term. He remained non-committal after victory.

"Let me savor this for a few days," he said. "I don't even want to think about any other possible run, but some time in the future I will."

The possibility of Bradley's arriving in Sacramento appeared very much on the mind of one of the mayor's longtime political allies, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who is expected to seek a U.S. Senate seat in 1982.

"We want to send a big signal to the rest of the state that Tom Bradley is a very popular candidate," Brown told a jubilant crowd of supporters at the downtown Biltmore.

As expected, 42 percent of all registered voters turned out for the municipal election, which also included races for city attorney and controller, eight seats on the city council and three on the board of education.

In 1969, with the memory of the 1966 Watts riots and the 1968 assassination of Robert F. Kennedy still fresh in voters' minds, Mayor Yorty fended off Bradley's first bid for city hall with a campaign bristling with anti-Communist speeches and racial innuendo.

But in the changed political climate of 1973, Yorty's approach failed and Bradley took office.

Four years later, Bradley faced state Sen. Alan Robbins, a long-time busing opponent.

Yorty, a longtime Democrat who became a Republican last year when he ran in the U.S. Senate primary won by Paul Gann, entered this year's mayoral race at the last minute after police Chief Daryl Gates decided not to pursue a Republican candidacy.

Yorty's low-budget campaign was financed mostly by the Police Protective League and the United Firefighters of Los Angeles. Bradley's coalition of labor, black and Jewish support contributed to a campaign chest that allowed him to outspend Yorty 5-1.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley raises his arms in apparent victory Tuesday night as took an early lead over former mayor Sam Yorty in the city's primary elections. If results hold true to early returns, it would be the first time anyone has ever won a third mayoral term in Los Angeles history.

Witnesses say 'Company' had sophistication, foulups

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — "The Company," allegedly the nation's largest drug smuggling operation, had a great deal of corporate sophistication and a few embarrassing foulups, according to testimony in the trial of a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., man charged in the case.

Marvin J. Zylstra, the only alleged member of ring to plead innocent to racketeering, conspiracy, and drug possession charges, went on trial Tuesday in U.S. District Court. Five others have pleaded guilty while five more remain at large.

The ring's chief pilot, Earl Zerbe, who has testified that Zylstra recruited him, is scheduled to undergo cross examination today.

Prosecutors read a lengthy document Tuesday signed by Zylstra which said The Company made at least 30 trips from Colombia, South America, to deliver about 155 tons of marijuana in the United States during a four-year period.

Zylstra's attorney, William Gagen, said his client was an unwitting member of the ring. "Our evidence will show that Marvin Zylstra is an alcoholic," Gagen told the four-man, eight-woman jury. "The evidence will be that Zylstra, rather than being a manager, was really a victim. He was really being used."

However, prosecutors said Zylstra procured aircraft, recruited pilots and maintained the ring's planes. Zylstra bought and sold airplanes through a front company, Custom Air Ltd. Inc., said Gregory English, special U.S. Justice Department prosecutor.

Grand jury investigates slayings

MERTZON — A special grand jury is meeting here today to examine evidence in last month's shooting deaths of two men.

John Bernardon of Midland and David Adams of Rollin Acres were shot to death March 22 in their rowboat on Spring Creek.

A suspect's name and a weapon are expected to be presented to grand jurors today. Irion County Sheriff Delmon West declined comment on the case, other than to say he had the option of either arresting the suspect or taking the matter to the grand jury.

He said he chose the grand jury after discussing the case with other law enforcement officials.

what amounted to a board room and plan smuggling operations."

Thorpe allegedly was the president of The Company, modeled along the lines of a legitimate corporation. Dugan was a top lieutenant responsible for supervising ground operations, prosecutors allege.

Dugan pleaded guilty while Thorpe is still at large.

The prosecution's first witness, Michael Grassi, testified Zylstra introduced Manuel Viana-Medina to Thorpe. Viana-Medina allegedly obtained marijuana in Colombia and brought it to the airstrips.

Grassi said The Company's first smuggling operation in 1976 ended in failure when a pilot identified as "Quaalude Bill" was too "messed up on drugs" to land the plane.

But Grassi also described elaborate smuggling operations which included alternate landing sites in the United States, sophisticated equipment to avoid detection by authorities and an elaborate warehouse and distribution system.

Zerbe testified he flew the first successful smuggling mission when "Quaalude Bill" was fired. Zerbe said he made at least six flights.

Zerbe also detailed madcap flights in which Colombian contacts delivered "the product" and gasoline to the wrong airstrips. On one flight, the contact showed up hours late "completely drunk and with a fine little lady and said he didn't know where the product or the gasoline was," Zerbe said.

The shootings came just a few hours after teachers broke up a fight between some black and white students at Oakdale High School.

After the incident, Principal Glenn Williams closed both the high school and Oakdale Junior High for the rest of the week. Mayor George Mowad imposed an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew that he said would be lifted when things calmed down.

Officer Larry McCullough, 33, was in stable condition at Rapides General Hospital in Alexandria on OAKDALE, La. (AP) — Schools were shuttered and a curfew kept Oakdale's residents off the streets after dark as investigators delved today into a confrontation between about 100 angry blacks and police that left two black men and one white policeman wounded.

"We've been in contact with the black community and they want peace, just as I do," said Sheriff Claiborne Durio of Allen Parish, a remote, sparsely populated area of rural southwestern Louisiana.

Durio, who reported all was quiet Tuesday night, said he didn't believe Monday night's violence was racially motivated.

"Certainly, blacks and whites were involved, but I think my colleagues feel the same way I do," he said.

The sheriff acknowledged that several people were

Tuesday with gunshot wounds in the chest and stomach.

Henry Green, 29, underwent surgery at Charity Hospital in New Orleans. He was in stable but guarded condition with buckshot wounds in the face, neck and hands.

Carlos Jackson, 20, was released from a hospital after being treated for a superficial gunshot wound in his left arm.

Durio said he had no doubts that the Monday night violence was somehow related to the high school fighting and an intrusion by young whites into black neighborhoods last Saturday night. He said the whites fired some shots in the air and shouted insults, but no one was hurt in that incident.

He would not say who did the shooting Monday.

"Right at this point, no arrests have been made," said Durio. "We're trying to find out who was involved."

The sheriff acknowledged that several people were questioned and then released "because they didn't want to say anything."

Durio said someone blasted away at McCullough when he tried to break up the mob at an abandoned service station in a black neighborhood on the south side of this community of about 10,000.

Durio said the crowd disbursed when more than two dozen riot-equipped state police were rushed in from Lake Charles and other surrounding communities.

Employees try to buy into airline

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Continental Airlines' Employees Association representatives have mounted an all-out effort to garner a 90 percent vote from the workers to support a proposal to purchase 51 percent of the airline's stock.

Chuck Widel, with the CEA board of directors, and Jay Miller with Kelso Co., an outside consulting firm, announced the plan during a news conference Tuesday at Midland Regional Airport.

The idea of employees owning part of the company isn't a new idea, according to Miller, who explained it falls under an Employee Stock Ownership Plan. However, if the move comes to fruition, Continental would rank as the first major public airline in which the employees owned a controlling interest of the stock, he added.

The two men were scheduled to speak to the 50 Continental employees based in the Midland-Odessa area, going on to San Antonio and Austin by the end of the week.

Chuck Logue, regional sales manager, said that as an employee, "I'm excited about it."

Widel denounced a theory that a recent move by Texas International airlines to buy 51 percent of Continental's stock prompted Continental employees to attempt ownership.

"Texas International has nothing to do with it," he said. "We're just trying to control our destiny."

Through employee ownership, he explained, "we're talking about working harder and more profit. There are many good things that could result from this."

Miller, in explaining the specifics of the proposal, said the employees would form a trust, and that trust would obtain the $185 million from banks to purchase the stocks. Continental has put up 50 million shares for sale and 15 million have been purchased, he said.

The stocks would be held in trust and divided according to each employee's proportionate share of salary. Miller pointed out that this move would involve a reduction of possible wage increases.

Miller also noted that the employees also could control who would be on the board of directors.

This move involves all 10,100 employees of Continental, said Widel. There is no difference between management and non-management employees on this type of proposal.

But for the current Continental board to approve such a move, there must be a strong mandate from the employees. "We need a very, very strong mandate...at least 90 percent of the employees who want to go with this," explained Widel.

A vote of all employees will be taken April 17, and the votes tabulated that following Monday. If the results show the 90 percent approval rate, then the proposal will be taken to the board.

"With such strong support, I don't see how the board could say no," Widel added.

"We definitely want to keep the proud bird flying," said Widel in referring to the airline's advertising slogan. "It's the American way to do things."

Midlanders attend French Symposium

HOUSTON — Several students from Midland's Lee High School placed in the French Symposium competition held here recently at Aldine High School.

A total of 76 high schools and 1,700 students participated in the symposium, which features competition in several events — all done entirely in French.

Events included grammar, vocabulary, listening comprehension, civilization, poetry recitation, prose reading, dramatic interpretation, prepared speech, extemporaneous speaking, music, art, costume and scavenger hunt.

Placing fourth from Lee were Lori Westbrook, Jana James and Janet Landenberger in choral ensemble. They sang two selections by Francis Poulenc.

Lee students advancing to the semi-finals were Cheryl Crumpton, Ana Garcia, Bobby Winter, Wes Coles and James Reinli, prose level II; Rosa Garza and Bobby Winter, poetry level II; and Lori Westbrook, piano.

Other students from Lee competing in the meet were Meg Brennan, Karen Carpenter, Maria Keener, Lee Hill, Derrick Killam, Meredi Frazier, Shun Harris, Brenda Barnett and Debbie O'Brian.

Accompanying the students was Lee french teacher Agnes Atkins.

Poe against PUC

Austin Bureau
 AUSTIN — Fred Poe, representing the city of Midland, spoke in favor Monday of legislation which would abolish the Public Utility Commission and return all original jurisdiction over rate-making to local governments.
 Poe noted that, in 1975, when the Legislature debated the Public Utility Regulatory Act, most utility companies opposed its enactment. Now, six years later, most support its continuation, he told members of the House Committee on State Affairs.
 "This may tell us something about what is happening," he speculated.
 In fact, Jon D. Lawrence, representing Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., testified that abolishing the commission would be a "step backward for this state."
 He said since the creation of the PUC, "the telecommunications industry has changed drastically," and local governments do not have the resources and expertise to properly decide the issues.
 Lawrence also contended that the cost of holding individual rate hearings for each affected locality "would be enormous" for both the utilities and the taxpayers.
 However, Poe said that West Texas cities have found that, as a group, they can hire sophisticated rate consultants and expensive lawyers to effectively oppose the large utilities.
 Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, sponsor of House Bill 1524, said the PUC has failed to hold down rates and "decentralizing what we're doing."
 Returning the rate-making process to "the people" can be accomplished only by "doing away with the PUC," Salinas said. Chairman Tom Uher, D-Bay City, referred the bill to a subcommittee for further consideration.

Midland group opposes subsidized housing plan vest in the development, opted to do so in lieu of investing their money in oil ventures, handing it over as taxes to the government or giving it to charities. "They attract people with large fortunes," Ms. Adams said. "You can invest in America with housing," drummed out her spiel.

 Speaking candidly, the business-woman said that her group was attracted to booming Midland, because "Midland is classic: I think any nice apartment can be rented and stay rented."
 The gray-haired woman, whose partners were unable to join her in what turned out to be a courtroom scene in City Hall chambers, told the suspicious protesters that her company operates on a "very tight" budget and would build, maintain and supervise quality ("brick or better") apartments which would be "designed to last for 50 years. We're not building in obsolescence."
BUT THE PROTESTERS seemed fearfully convinced that the complex would bring in a ready-made formula for deterioration of their middle-class neighborhood.
 "We'll be nice neighbors to you folks," promised Ms. Adams. "If they (renters) are not going to be nice people, we are not going to rent to them."
 But, Ms. Adams' stinger winged the homeowners: "Maybe you won't be nice neighbors to them (apartment dwellers)," she said.
 The Delmar-area protesters weren't exactly outgoing and neighborly to Ms. Adams. Attorney Mark Withrow, a former prosecutor who lives in the affected neighborhood, acted as their spokesman.
 Withrow, perhaps due to his criminal courtroom experience, tried to turn the proceedings into a courtroom hearing.
 "I'm not sure if I'm among friends or enemies in this crowd," the articulate Ms. Adams, an ex-newspaper editor, said.
 Withrow's caustic but sometimes ambiguous examination of Ms. Adams, who assumed the role of the defendant, seemed to frustrate both her and Mayor G. Thane Akins.
 "Mr. Withrow," the mayor chided, "this (ill will) is the very thing we're trying to avoid."
 The exchange between Withrow and Ms. Adams was hostile.
 "Is that a fair statement?" asked Withrow at one point.
 "No," tersely responded Ms. Adams. "That is not a fair statement."
 Ms. Adams again protested, as Withrow began questioning her about private financing and federal subsidies and the income-levels which some apartment owners require of their tenants. One apartment complex management reportedly requires that serious prospective tenants earn a $25,000-a-year income per household before it will lease dwelling units.

"I just don't understand the reason I'm being asked all these questions," Ms. Adams appealed to the mayor, who was flanked by attentive Councilmen Gordon Marcum II, Carroll Thomas, Steve Davidson and Tom Sloan.
 "I don't think I do either," said the mayor, who, like fellow conservative Thomas, is opposed to federally-subsidized housing in Midland.
MS. ADAMS TOLD Withrow that he was "torturing yourself" by his sometimes ambiguous questions and comments and by doubting her ability to carry out her intent to maintain a quality apartment complex which would "enhance" the neighborhood.
 "I intend to live up to my contract," said Ms. Adams. Earlier she had listed the maximum income levels for families seeking rent subsidies: family of one, $11,750; family of two, $13,450; family of three, $15,100, and a family of four, $16,800.
 Withrow intimated that low-income tenants might attract unsavory elements and lead to an unkempt neighborhood of noise, crime, litter, dilapidation and loss of pride.
 Ms. Adams took exception. "I truly don't think that income reflects the kind of person and neighbor (living next door)."
REGARDLESS of her "rosy" prospectus, Ms. Adams obviously did not convince the homeowners that the apartment complex would be a worthy complement to the neighborhood houses, which, in cases, are valued up to $100,000.
 "There is no buffer zone between us and the (planned) apartments," asserted neighborhood denizen Janice Rabenaldt, who was among several protesters who stood at the lectern and faced the mayor and the four councilmen; Councilwoman Doris Howbert was absent. "There are no duplexes, no townhouses (as buffers). We're not against the elderly and handicapped living in the neighborhood."
 "We're against rent subsidies if they will hurt property values," Mrs. Rabenaldt said. "I'm really scared. If I should want to sell my (and husband John's) property, I might not be able to get (a fair market value out of the house). I don't think I can trust the (Ms. Adams') company," Mrs. Rabenaldt said.
 Wayne Christopher, who recently moved to Midland's westside from Hobbs, N.M., said he eventually may regret his relocation.
 "If I had known, I've put everything I've had in it (his house in Midland). Your property does go down (in a rent-subsidized neighborhood)."
 Mary Johnson, who also wore an "I CARE" tag, drew applause when she told Ms. Adams that "You're bringing your (development) into our neighborhood to rent your subsidized apartments."
ELICITING NO handclapping or cheers was Charleen Rosebery, president of the League of Women Voters of Midland.

 "Midland lacks adequate low-cost housing," she asserted, "but doesn't lack for citizens desperately needing such housing. We also commend the developer who has seen a profitable business opportunity that will also serve the needs of Midland's citizens."
 "This type of enterprise helps people to help themselves, and, as such, the tenants will be subject to the same standards as any tenant renting in any section of Midland."
 "A development such as this — carefully designed, managed, and privately funded — should enhance the neighborhood, provide added customers for adjacent businesses, return tax dollars to Midland's economy, and should be a help in answering Midland's housing needs."
 Midland Housing Association spokesman Lynn Durham Jr. also drew no applause from the "I CARE" faction when he voiced support of the Houston developers, Freidman & Associates, and Ms. Adams. The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission favorably approved the Delmar site.
 "It will be an attractive addition to the section of Midland," said Durham. "The developers will enhance the residential property values in the area, notwithstanding the current disfavor by residents of the neighborhood."
 On behalf of the "I CARE" protesters, John Rabenaldt presented the mayor and councilmen with copies of petitions signed by about 650 Delmar neighborhood residents.
 The petition requested that city and other elected officials and officials of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) "do all in their power to stop this planned development which would be a blight to our area."
 The mayor explained that the city could not impede the private-development in the area and certainly could not withhold a building permit.
 But Councilman Thomas nevertheless made a motion to "go on record as opposed" to the $3 million Delmar-area apartment development outlined by Ms. Adams.
 "May I second the motion," meekly asked the mayor, who knew better; only a councilman may second a motion.
 The motion died but was unofficially seconded by some protesters in the "I CARE" lot. A motion by Sloan reaffirming the council's official neutral stance on the development passed 4-1; Thomas offered the dissenting vote. The council has no jurisdiction to approve or disapprove of free-enterprise development.
 After the hearing, Midland builder David Pine freely acknowledged that Midland indeed does "need low-income housing desperately."
 "Everybody says, 'We need, but not in my backyard.'"

witnesses on the same matter, pointing to the necessity for a cooperative agreement between the two hospitals over the cancer therapy machine.
 Also testifying on behalf of Odessa was Steve Thornberg, assistant administrator of finance at MCH. Thornberg said although current treatment costs for cobalt radiation are $23.50 per procedure, treatments with the 6MEV would cost an average of $25.01.
LATER, CONFLICTING testimony from Dr. Schlitemeyer brought out that the average cost of 6MEV treatments in Texas is about $50.
 "I don't see how you can do it for the price you've listed, but I am not a financial wizard. I would question your being able to say the charges in Dallas (where Schlitemeyer has been practicing) are inflated," Schlitemeyer said.
 Billie Cleveland, immediate past president of the Women's Auxiliary at MCH, testified that the Auxiliary would donate the linear accelerator no matter what the cost. Showing audit statements from the past fiscal year, Mrs. Cleveland showed the Auxiliary's net worth as of Feb. 28 at $650,000. She added that the value has increased with interest from Money Market Certificates.
 She said the Auxiliary planned to donate the machine and pay for it in cash. "The Money Market Certilinear accelerator at Medical Center Hospital."

 Weber, leery of Legg's testimony, asked if the Midland attorney had ever represented anyone connected with Midland Memorial Hospital. Legg admitted that he had legally represented Board of Directors President Ed Magruder and the late James N. Allison Jr., who was a member of one of the hospital boards. Allison was the son of the late Helon Y. Allison, who donated most of the money for the Allison Cancer Center.
 Legg's testimony drew a collective groan from the more than 20 representatives for Odessa.
"THE CONCEPT of the Allison Center is being a regional cancer center...and it should be given the opportunity to exhibit its potential," Legg said.
 Weber asked Legg, "Why didn't you get similarly riled about this deficit (the expected $261,000 deficit for the first year of operation) and go out campaigning against the Allison Center?"
 "I think health care has to be first, no matter what the cost," Legg said. Weber was still not convinced.
 Charles Aldridge, Legg's law partner, also was "an interested party" in the suit, Weber said. However, when Weber called Aldridge earlier this year to reschedule the hearing date, Weber said Aldridge yelled to the other room, "Reagan, did you make me a party to some application?"

 Legg admitted to Weber that Aldridge did not know he had been listed as a third party in the suit.
 Schlitemeyer said he thought the 6MEV would be a duplication of services. Asked by Weber why Midland was opposing the application, he said "I think the answer to that is the duplication of expenditure, and the competition for the Allison Center is the other part of it. The presence of a 6MEV would represent a competitive aspect to the Allison Center, thereby (preventing it from being) what is perceived to be a regional center."
SCHLITEMEYER ALSO said the Cobalt 80 can provide about "9,000 treatments a year." Earlier testimony had revealed the Odessa machine was working "at maximum capacity," providing some 6,000 treatments a year.
 Most of the afternoon session was taken up by the testimony of Hillman L. McKenzie, a facilities planning consultant for the Allison Center. McKenzie, a 56-year veteran of medical engineering, was vehemently opposed to the Odessa request, having done cancer surveys for M.D. Anderson Cancer Therapy Center and the State Department of Health.
 McKenzie testified there were approximately 998 new cancer patients a year in the HSA 12 area (which includes Midland and Odessa) based on 1980 census figures, 597 of which will require radiation treatments.
 McKenzie said the figures showed there could be a daily census of 18 patients from the HSA area, causing 177 treatments a day. "And that's assuming that all the new patients will be treated, because they're not. Some stay home and die, and some will be referred elsewhere," he said.
 Weber shot through most of McKenzie's expert testimony by reading previous testimony in Midland Memorial's applications to the THFC for the Allison Center. At one point, Weber read a quote from the testimony in which McKenzie said the cobalt machine was like "shooting with a shotgun, when you should be beaming with a rifle."
"I ERRED IN MY judgment when I made that testimony," McKenzie said.
 Frequently, during the more than two hours of testimony Tuesday afternoon, McKenzie said he didn't think the 6MEV showed many improvements over the cobalt machine.
 Earlier in his career, McKenzie was a salesman of the cobalt units.
 Testimony was slated to resume at 9 a.m. today, with McKenzie's testimony continuing. Four other persons representing MMH also were scheduled to appear today. Although testimony should be completed by this afternoon, a decision will not be rendered for at least two weeks.

Hundreds honor Bradley

By STEVE BREWER Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of mourners braved damp, blustery winds to pay homage to "the soldier's general," Omar N. Bradley, at a memorial service at Fort Bliss, the five-star general's home since 1977. Bradley, who died April 8 in New York at the age of 88, was eulogized Tuesday as a "great protector of freedom," a "legend," and one of the "greats" during the service that drew a crowd of 500 to the El Paso Army base. The services at Fort Bliss coincided with funeral services in Washington, D.C., where Bradley was buried in Arlington National Cemetery on a hillside overlooking the Pentagon. From a bandstand wreathed by dozens of floral arrangements, Brig. Gen. Archie Cannon proclaimed the late World War II hero as "the soldier's general," and recalled stories reflecting Bradley's modesty and soft-spoken manner. "Some of the stories may have been twisted in repeated telling, but seen as a group, they represent a man with a great heart and compassionate spirit," Cannon said. One of those legends concerned the D-Day invasion of Normandy. Ac-ording to the story, Bradley spotted a drenched, shivering soldier on the beach. Bradley took off his own field jacket and gave it to the young man. "Here son," he is said to have remarked, "I can get another one of these. You can't." "He was firm, to the point of rigidity; modest, almost to the edge of humility, he was a reassuring symbol of placid confidence in those sorely troubled days," Cannon said. "Beneath that calm exterior there was a passionate wish, an almost pious hope, that the young men of our nation will someday enjoy peace — the dream shared by all military men." Post Chaplain George V. Reswick said Bradley was a man who had joined the ranks of other great leaders in history. "Death has conquered the greats," Reswick said. "Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Washington, Roosevelt, Churchill, and now, Gen. Omar Bradley." The services opened with a 19-gun salute and a fly-over by two jet fighters. Brisk winds whipped flags held by a color guard, while an organist played "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Start average billing before you start your air conditioner

If you use the same amount of electricity this summer as you did last year, you're going to see a big increase in your summer bills.

Our Average Billing Plan can help, because it "averages out" your electric bills. You still pay for all the electricity you use, and your payments will still vary from month to month. But in high-use months you pay for less electricity than you use, and in low-use months you pay for more than you use.

Many customers find this helps ease the impact of high summer air conditioning bills. Our average billing plan is available to both residential customers and churches. If you'd like to know more, give us a call at Texas Electric.

Proposals for laws against crime unlikely to pass

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The attempted assassination of President Reagan has produced a catalogue of congressional proposals for new laws to deal with violent crime in America.

They range from familiar legislation like handgun control to new measures like televising punishment imposed on criminals.

And it is a pretty good bet that none of them will pass. That's the usual outcome.

Actually, Congress did respond to the shooting that wounded Reagan and three other men on March 30. It praised the bodyguards and the aide who were hit.

The Senate and the House both commended Secret Service Agent Timothy J. McCarthy and District of Columbia policeman Thomas K. DeLahanty "for their unselfish courage and patriotism." The Senate adopted another resolution honoring White House press secretary James S. Brady and expressing "the desire of the Senate for his speedy recovery."

Those ceremonial gestures are it for now.

Even the advocates of gun control acknowledge that the odds remain heavily against them, despite the assassination attempt. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., introducing the Handgun Crime Control Act of 1981, said it would take intense public pressure to overcome the organized opposition and give the bill a chance.

One provision would ban the kind of cheap handgun that was used in the Reagan shooting. "It is unacceptable that there are states today ... where the accused attacker of President Reagan could buy another Saturday Night Special," Kennedy said.

"We who propose a national handgun policy have been accused of knee-jerk response whenever a shooting tragedy or near-tragedy occurs," said Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., introducing the same bill in the House. "If that is true, I would suggest that the response of the opponents to these proposals has seemed the same."

The response is that gun control laws are not the right answer. The opponents say that episodes such as the Reagan shooting do not change that. Their argument has prevailed before, when Gerald R. Ford was menaced twice by women with guns, when the campaigning George C. Wallace was crippled by a gunman, when Robert F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr. and John F. Kennedy were assassinated.

There's no evidence to indicate that the outcome of the gun-control debate will be different this time. But there is an ample supply of alternative proposals. Among them:

—Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., has introduced bills to reinstate the death penalty in the District of Columbia, and to make it a federal crime to kill, kidnap or assault a Cabinet officer.

—Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., would make it a federal offense to assault any law enforcement officer or firefighter during performance of his duties.

—Rep. James L. Nelligan, R-Pa., has proposed a bill to permit capital punishment for an attempt on the life of a president. "The unsuccessful assassin can lay little claim to mercy because his aim was not true," Nelligan said.

—Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., is sponsoring the National War on Violent Crime Act, to include law enforcement training and aid, create a new federal agency to oversee the effort, and provide for television and radio broadcast of the identities of wanted criminals.

—Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, said Congress should set up a National Commission on Violent Crime. The Justice Department already has a task force on violent crime, created shortly after the new administration took office.

Those are samples; there are many more.

But the basic argument remains that between the advocates and opponents of controlling handguns by federal law. It is the debate that will continue when the rhetoric subsides.

AT&T opponents protest new services

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Computer companies, the communications industry and home and business security businesses are sounding the bell on American Telephone & Telegraph Co. this week in a test of AT&T's designs on new, lucrative services.

The three industries will be represented Monday in federal court when a hearing opens on Ma Bell's plan to offer "enhanced services" not now regulated by the federal government.

AT&T has asked U.S. District Judge Vincent P. Biunno for a ruling on a 1956 consent decree with the Justice Department that would permit the giant Bell System to enter these unregulated fields.

Publishers and other interested parties have asked for permission to intervene in the hearing so they can protest AT&T's plans.

The main fear among AT&T's opponents is that the company, with its vast resources and crack research unit, could use its monopoly over telephone lines to get a competitive edge in selling equipment that would connect to the system.

A trade association representing 75 percent of the alarm industry says it is worried AT&T could put its members out of business by using "miracle" computer chips in converting telephones to also act as smoke and burglar alarms.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association, representing 1,420 newspapers with 91 percent of the nation's daily and Sunday circulation, says press freedom could be threatened if Ma Bell enters the fledgling home-computer information service market.

An association with members supplying three-quarters of the nation's cable television service fears AT&T could be allowed to compete in its business.

Also joining the fray are two computer trade groups; Motorola, Inc., a competitor in the mobile telephone market; Southern Pacific Communications Co., a long-distance phone service company; General Telephone & Electronics Corp., the nation's second-largest phone company; and North American Telephone Association, with 346 member companies which make and sell terminal equipment.

In settling an antitrust suit with the Justice Department in January 1956 at U.S. District Court in Newark, AT&T agreed it would operate only in areas under government regulation.

But AT&T contends new rulings by the FCC and technological advances in the past 25 years have opened the door for it to enhance the services connected to its telephone lines.

An "enhanced service" could be a home computer with access via phone lines to advertising, weather, news and games. Newspaper publishers already are experimenting in this area, and they don't want the Bell System to step in and monopolize the infant field.

Whether to grant the many outside parties permission to enter the case is likely to be the first decision Biunno will face, court officials say.

The FCC says the company may enter the enhanced services market through a subsidiary fully separated from AT&T. But AT&T's opponents say they do not think the separation will help.

For example, the Independent Data Communications Manufacturers Association says if AT&T gets its way in federal court, it would open the way for it "to manipulate the availability or quality of essential communications services so as to persuade customers to select equipment produced by Western Electric," Bell System's manufacturing unit.

The newspaper publishers fear that AT&T would squeeze out competition in electronic information services. They also have raised questions about First Amendment implications if the Bell System is both a provider of information and the owner of the information highway. AT&T calls that concern a red herring.

Knight-Ridder Newspapers already has invested nearly $2 million in a home information system in Coral Gables, Fla. known as Viewtron, according to documents the publishers' association filed in federal court.

It connects a home terminal to a central computer via AT&T lines.

"With Viewtron you'll be able to order from your living room everything from a catered dinner to a new lawn mower, from a hair dryer to a theater ticket," says the service's brochure.

Business as usual

Anyone who was concerned about how the government would function while President Ronald Reagan was recovering from the bullet wound inflicted by a would-be assassin can breathe a little easier now.

Vice President George Bush, a former Midland resident, assumed and carried out the duties of the chief executive in an exemplary fashion, just as we knew he would. We in Midland had no doubts, but then the vice president used to live here among us; we know him and his abilities.

According to reports on the operation of the government following the assassination attempt, it was "business as usual" throughout the administration. The vice president and White House aides insisted that Reagan himself remained in control and that certainly was the appearance.

Vice President Bush performed his own duties and those of the president in a smooth and tactful manner, from all indications. And he performed those duties without any hint of self-aggrandizement. He ran meetings of the Cabinet from the vice president's chair and conducted business from the vice president's office.

In fact, it has been noted, Bush went out of his way to avoid any accusation that he had performed improperly during the president's incapacitation. While meeting with a visiting official from Poland, Bush posed so as to avoid having the White House pictured symbolically behind him reports detailed.

It was business as usual in Washington, D.C., because most in positions of authority performed their jobs admirably in the interests of the nation during that tense period. The shooting of President Reagan and the three others turned out to be something of a test run for the continued successful operation of the government during a period of crisis. The people of the nation learned that the administration can smoothly and successfully withstand such an assault.

It isn't the kind of thing Americans want to have to test; we hope it never will be tested again during this administration. But it is good to know the system works and that we have in high places the capable people necessary in order for it to do so.

Always a champion

Joe Louis died the other day in Las Vegas at the age of 66. The record will show that he held the world heavyweight boxing championship longer than any man before or since — for the 12 years from 1937 to 1948. But that distinction in the history of boxing will never explain who and what Joe Louis was.

The world into which Joe Louis was born, the world of his rise to fame as the Brown Bomber, died a long time ago, with no tears to be shed. It was a world in which a black youth from Detroit had to fight not only his opponents in the ring but an unwritten rule that denied black contenders a chance at the heavyweight title.

By the sheer force of his punches Mr. Louis made it impossible for boxing promoters to defend a racial prejudice which we see today as not only shameful but silly. Mr. Louis himself did much to discredit it. He came onto the scene as the pride of black Americans, and left it as a symbol of national pride — a tough, clean fighter who had beaten the best.

He treated his title with respect, as though it were something bigger than himself. In the ring, his attention to the rules was meticulous. "He ain't gentle, but he's a real gentleman," said one of the opponents he had floored. He wore fame with dignity. He was not one to brag, or to talk about himself. He let his fights speak for him.

The only thing that could beat Joe Louis was age. He was dogged by domestic and financial problems, but they didn't get him down. In later years he was forced into jobs that his old fans and friends considered to be indignities, but if he thought so, he never let it be known. The way things turned out could have made another person bitter, but that isn't how a champion behaves, and Joe Louis was a champion to the last.

NICK THIMMESCH

Is there no group that can stop the bleeding of Lebanon?

WASHINGTON — Whenever I study the plight of Lebanon, I am grateful that I live under the American system. Despite the pluralism in our society, with all measure of religions, races and politics, somehow we have managed to keep the country together, the War Between the States being the exception proving the rule.

Look at bleeding Lebanon. It has a mixture of religions, peoples, and politics, too, but not to the extent the U.S. does. Several years back, Lebanon was well enough glued together that it received the highest marks in the Middle East from Freedom House, the New York City organization monitoring the degree of civil and political freedom in the world's nations.

Lebanon was the Middle East's pleasant, prosperous marketplace, the tolerant, friendly host to anyone who came to trade, be educated, treated in a first-rate hospital, or have a good time. Lebanon's culture was a blend of Europe and the Arab world. Its democratic system ensured balance between Christian and Moslem interests.

But in the late '60s and early '70s, Lebanon's openness allowed trouble to intrude in the form of Palestinian refugees, followed by Palestinian activists, militia and guerrillas. Israel, living in peaceful armistice with Lebanon for many years, understandably became skittish with increasing numbers of Palestinians on its northern borders. And since most of the Palestinians were Moslem, right-wing

Christians also became leery. The result was a horrible civil war which left 60,000 dead. Proportionately, this means that 4.5 million would have died had it raged in the U.S. The war devastated Beirut, its commerce and charms, and left the central government feckless.

That government is so weak that it is grateful even to hear Secretary of State Alexander Haig re-assert U.S. support for Lebanon's integrity and condemn the "brutality" of the Syrian shelling of Zahle, whose Christian citizens search for refuge in bunkers, not churches.

Lebanon's one-time "live and let live" system is shattered, and the nation is a loose collection of anomalies. The Arab "peacekeeping" force (all Syrian) kill women, children and other hapless civilians by insane shelling which is supposed to be a political statement. The U.S. was acquiescent when the Syrian army arrived, and only wishes that their departure day isn't far off. Lebanese today are not motivated by patriotism but by religious identification. However, this "confession" inspires them to make war not peace. The fight appears to be between the Moslem majority and the substantial Maronite Christian minority, but there are also plenty of Christians shooting at Christians and some Moslems shooting at Moslems.

It is simplistic for the Israelis to proclaim that they might intervene in Lebanon to save the Christians. The surrogate guardian of their northern border, Major Sa'ad Haddad, is Christian, but most of his troops are Shiite Moslems grateful for the security he provides, and the opportunity to blast away at PLO forces, mostly fellow Moslems.

There are also left-wing Christians in Lebanon, who would drive Israel into the sea. Indeed, the head of the Lebanese Communist Party is Christian, and so is the leader of the Syrian Social-Nationalist Party. Has Israel ever faced a more brutal terrorist leader than Dr. Georges Habash, a Christian Palestinian long headquartered in Beirut?

One would think that any refugee group would be so happy to find land to camp on that it would try to assimilate and improve its condition. Not so with the Palestinians (latest estimate: 450,000), who seem determined to use Lebanon as a launching site for attacks on Israel, the most powerful military force in the Middle East, and quite willing to strike back at will.

There is no one in Lebanon big or strong enough to bind this bleeding nation and make it whole. Right-wing Christians want the Syrians to leave and the Palestinians to disarm and break camp. Left-wing Moslems and Christians back the PLO. The Syrians aren't liked by anybody anymore, but are determined to stay.

Those Lebanese in the middle — principally Greek Catholics — hope that the U.S. becomes more vigorous in supporting Lebanon's political and terrorist integrity; pray that all "outsiders" — Syrians, PLO and Israelis — get out; and feel that if the U.S. steps up aid (now quite small) to the central government, perhaps the day will come when Lebanon will stop bleeding and resume living the good life it once knew.

ART BUCHWALD

'Not guilty' sounds nice, but it won't win Pulitzer

WASHINGTON — It goes without saying that when it comes to book, film and TV rights, a notorious crime has a great deal more value than a run-of-the-mill one that hardly got into the newspapers.

There was a time when the person who was thought to have committed the offense received the lion's share of the money for telling his side of the story. But now, with legal fees so high, lawyers are demanding they get their cut of the action.

Last week, an accused murderer revealed that his lawyer would take his legal fee out of the potential proceeds of a book contract.

The D.C. Bar Association is looking into the matter because the arrangement could violate the District Bar Code of Ethics.

The reason why the District doesn't approve of lawyers sharing in the literary fruits of their clients' alleged crimes (although many states do), is that a lawyer might be more interested in how the book comes out than the trial. He could even knowingly, or unknowingly, tailor the defense to make a better story.

This fictitious conversation could take place in many states where a canon forbidding a defense lawyer from sharing in literary rights does not exist.

"Lefty, as you know, we're in the second week of the trial and I think

Art Buchwald

I've made a pretty strong case for you."

"I ain't complaining. You gave the D.A. a run for his money. I got a feeling the jury is going to come back with a not guilty verdict."

"That's what my editor thinks, too, Lefty. Originally, when we worked out the outline of the book, we thought it would make a better story if I got you off at the end. But now that the press keeps referring to our case as the 'Crime of the Century,' we believe it would be better if you got the electric chair."

"Are you crazy or something? Why would it be better if I got the chair?"

"It's more dramatic if, after a great defense, the jury still finds you guilty. A 'Not Guilty' verdict makes the book anti-climactic and a big let-down, particularly if we're going for a 'Book of the Month' deal."

"Wait a minute. I don't mind you taking your fee out of the literary rights to my trial, but I don't want to fry for it."

"Listen, Lefty, when you came to me, you didn't have a dime. You chose me because I was the best criminal lawyer in the country. But I'm not in this business for my health. I don't want you to go to the chair any more than you do. But if I don't make any money out of this book, I'll have wasted six months of my time."

"Can't you figure out some other way of ending the book without me going to the chair?"

"I could get you life, but every major Hollywood studio is interested in making a movie from the trial. We can't make a big deal unless you get capital punishment. My agent said the difference between you getting life and the chair is worth a half a million bucks."

"So what are you going to do?"

"I've got to persuade the jury in my summing up that all our witnesses have been lying through their teeth, and society would be much better off if you paid the ultimate price for your heinous crime. But I have to be subtle about it. I don't want to hurt my reputation in the legal profession."

"I think the whole thing stinks."

"Look, Lefty, I'll even throw in an appeal to the Supreme Court for nothing for you. But my first obligation is to my publishers. After all, they're the ones who are paying me."

"I could have done better with a public defender."

"You know you don't honestly believe that, Lefty. Have you ever heard of a public defender who has won a Pulitzer Prize?"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Records show IRS 'goes easy' on racketeers

WASHINGTON — Uncle Sam has an impressive arsenal of weapons to use against taxpayers who intentionally or accidentally skimp on what they owe the government.

Without warning or court order, the federal apparatus can seize all or part of your bank account, confiscate your paychecks or slap a lien on your business or personal property.

But for some reason, while the feds are sometimes overzealous in their pursuit of small-time chiselers and befuddled citizens, they have been strangely negligent in their pursuit of drug traffickers and big-time racketeers.

Two special acts of Congress, passed in 1970, empower the Justice Department to seize mobsters' assets in addition to civil fines. Yet the number of forfeitures under these provisions can fairly be described as paltry. In short, racketeers are getting better treatment than run-of-the-mill tax evaders.

Through March 1980, assets forfeited and potential forfeitures in narcotics cases prosecuted under the two statutes amounted to a piddling $3.5 million. Yet law enforcement officials figure that the illicit drug trade generates about $54 billion a year.

My associate Tony Capaccio has searched through the records and found some of the most flagrant examples of mobsters being let off the hook by federal bloodhounds who track petty tax cheaters to their financial graves. Here they are:

— Jose Valenzuela's organization raked in $10 million to $16 million a year from its heroin operations, which extended from laboratories in Mexico to the sidewalks of New York. Valenzuela lived high off the hog; he spent $63,000 in cash on luxury cars during one three-year period, and put down $396,000 — mostly in cash — to buy and redecorate a mansion in San Marino, Calif. Valenzuela and 69 members of his dope ring were convicted, but only $55,000 was assessed in fines. No assets were seized.

— The "Black Tuna" marijuana-smuggling ring headed by Robert Meinster and Robert Platshorn handled more than a million pounds of dope, earning gross receipts conservatively estimated at $300 million. The gang spent thousands on yachts and executive jets — and even ran up a $60,000 restaurant tab in a single night. Yet when the feds attempted to seize two residences worth $750,000, five yachts and an auction business that was used as a front, they wound up with $16,000 worth of assets.

— In his prime, Leroy "Nicky" Barnes ran the biggest heroin operation in the United States, according to the Justice Department. He and his gang earned millions pushing junk at the retail level in the streets of Harlem and the South Bronx.

Barnes himself had five Mercedes Benzes, a Cadillac, a Corvette and a Citroen Maserati. His 1974 and 1975 tax returns listed a total of $527,000 in "miscellaneous" income. He had $1.5 million invested in Michigan real estate.

The G-men put Barnes away for life and fined him — are you ready? — $125,000. There were no criminal forfeitures.

A convicted associate of Barnes, Joseph "Jazz" Hayden, listed $204,140 in miscellaneous income on his 1975-76 tax returns. He drew a 15-year sentence, a $25,000 fine — and forfeited not a penny.

— Jaime Araujo headed a heroin syndicate based in Los Angeles and Mexico before federal agents brought him in. He was sentenced to 35 years in prison and fined a whopping $1.2 million. But he had to forfeit only $260,000 in vehicles and real estate, though it was established that his dope ring had earned $33 million and had invested $1.5 million in real estate in the United States.

UNDER THE DOME: Evidently remembering the Gulf of Tonkin "attack" that got the United States involved in the Vietnam conflict, Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., have demanded documentation for the State Department's assertion that El Salvador is a "textbook case" of communist aggression. Among the documentation requested in a confidential letter are hard evidence of direct Soviet aid to Salvadoran leftists, the "adequacy of intelligence collection" in Latin America and "an assessment of the nature and depth of corruption in El Salvador's government."

— Veteran TV actor and dog-food huckster Lorne Greene toured Capitol Hill the other day to promote MedicAlert identity tags that warn of allergies and other sensitive conditions. He did OK with Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Dennis Deconcini, D-Ariz. But then he dropped in on House Speaker Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., and was offered a Boston stogie. Greene gave it his best shot, but had to give up when he began to turn, uh, green.

— Liberal Rep. Mike Barnes, D-Md., voiced his displeasure over the Reagan administration's hawkish foreign policy at a closed meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee with Budget Director David Stockman. Military action, said Barnes, is a short-term solution to foreign problems; if people are fed properly they won't pick up guns, so our goal should be to improve their living conditions. Stockman replied that he and Barnes "view the world a little differently."

Shuttle successfully launches new era in U.S. space travel

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The era of the space shuttle has begun.

Tuesday's near-perfect landing after a "100 percent successful flight" by the Columbia is testimony to the potential of the boxy, stubby-winged, space-going freighter, says Donald K. Slayton, shuttle flight test manager and a former astronaut himself.

It will, he said, become the workhorse of an era in which Americans will not only explore but exploit the unique properties of space for industrial, scientific and military gains that were impossible without low-cost round trips.

The shuttle's 60-foot cargo bay can ferry up to 65,000 pounds of instruments and components that could be orbited as high-flying laboratories or factories to produce superior metal alloys, pharmaceuticals and other products that benefit from the weightlessness beyond Earth's gravity.

The military foresees a low-cost way to place ever-larger reconnaissance, navigation and communications satellites in orbit, and talks of space-borne weapons such as satellite killers and anti-missile laser beams.

In addition, the spacecraft has re-established America as a space-going nation. For nearly six years, the high frontier was the exclusive domain of Soviet cosmonauts.

Slayton, test manager at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said at a post-landing news briefing here the historic voyage encountered no major problems and only a few minor aggravations. He said the ship seems in good shape after its 54½-hour journey.

"We've developed a transportation system that's going...to carry us out through the next 20 years," he said.

The Columbia, meanwhile, was already being reconditioned for its next flight: a leisurely two-day trip to Florida on the back of a specially equipped Boeing 747 jumbo jet.

Parked alongside the dry lake bed landing strip at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center, the ship had its fuel lines cleaned, its surface examined. Other preparations also were being made for the piggy-back ride, expected in about six days.

At Florida's Kennedy Space Center, the Columbia will be checked and re-outfitted for yet another test flight this fall. That one, with astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly aboard, is to last four days.

"The schedule is optimistic," Slayton said, "but we hope to turn it around (and be ready to go) in the next six months."

And while the nation was celebrating, the sister ships for the world's first space fleet were taking shape in a desert hanger at nearby Palmdale. The Challenger so far is just wings and part of a fuselage. Construction of the Discovery and the Atlantis should begin in a year or so, said contractor Rockwell International.

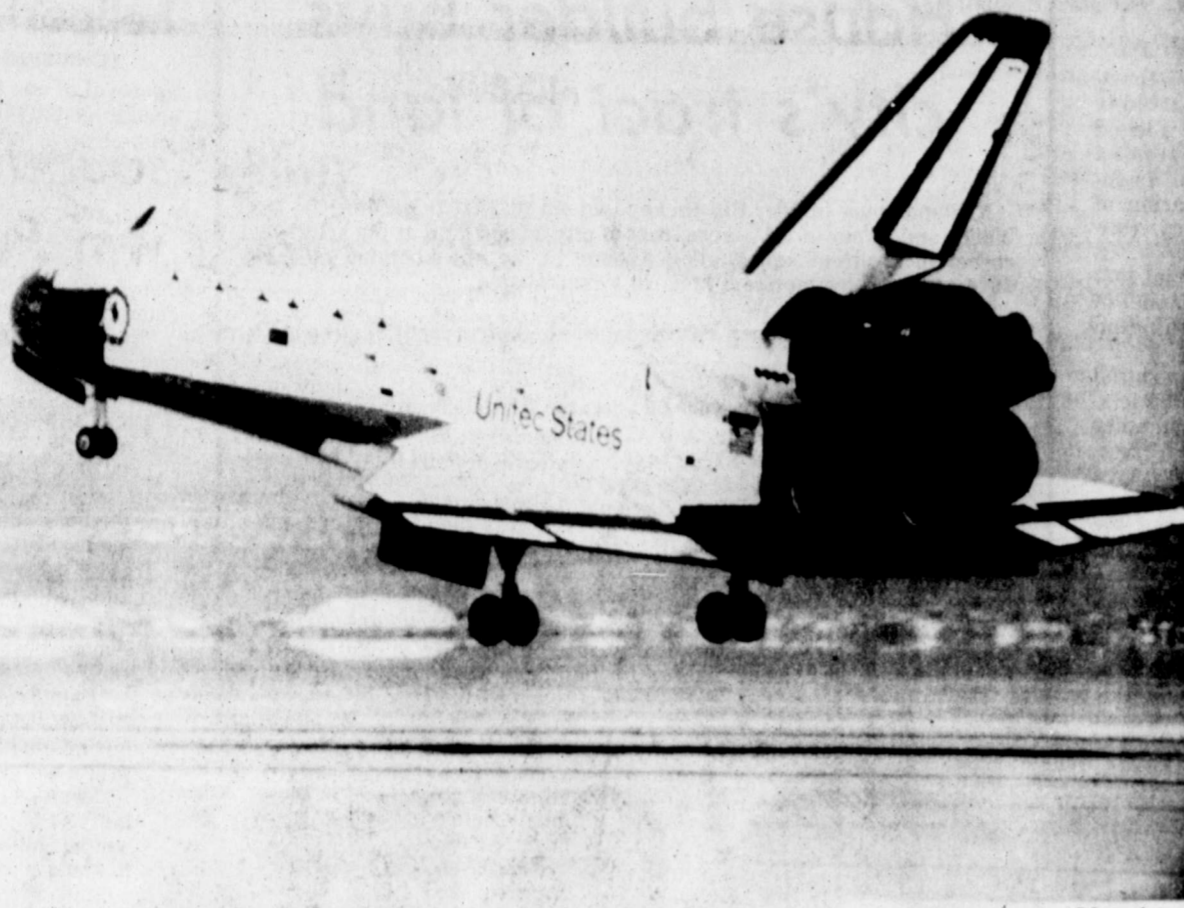

Each of them is to make 100 or more round trips into space.

"We're back in the space business to stay," said Columbia astronaut Robert Crippen.

And business, along with science and defense, is what the shuttle is all about. Though the reception has been lukewarm so far, NASA is offering shuttle flights to industry for $35 million each and small canisters called Getaway Specials aboard shuttles for as little as $3,000.

Slayton said the first of the cut-rate specials may fly on the third or fourth test flight.

John Young, who flew the Columbia — the biggest craft ever sent into orbit and the first one with wings — told mission control at the landing, "You can't believe what kind of flying machine this is. It is really something special."

The space shuttle Columbia lands safely at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., Tuesday, successfully ending a 54½-hour mission and the maiden space flight of the nation's first reusable space vehicle.

What went right? The shuttle flight

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — They were hoping for just two things here when they launched the space shuttle. Getting up and getting down.

Everything else was, well, out of this world. All that mattered was to prove that this ungainly thing, this stub-winged Batmobile clinging to the back of a blimp-like tank, could be rocketed to the heavens like Apollo and brought down like TWA Flight 531 from Kansas City.

Space Shuttle Columbia had more than its share of growing pains and doubters. It grew to flight status ignored by the public, shortchanged by Congress and jinxed by technology.

Its engines blew up on the test stand; its protective tiles blew off as it was ferried from California to the Kennedy Space Center; its development fell two years and billions of dollars behind.

Reagan praises astronauts for ushering in 'a new era'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the successful flight of the space shuttle Columbia opened a new era in space travel, putting "new worlds within closer reach and more knowledge without our grasp."

In a written statement after shuttle pilots John W. Young and Robert L. Crippen made a bullseye landing on a dry lake bed in California, Reagan said:

"Your brave adventure has opened a new era in space travel. You put new worlds within closer reach and more knowledge within our grasp."

"We thank God for your safe return. You were right, Captain Crippen, when you said the Columbia and her voyage would mean much to this country and to the world. Today the world watched us in triumph. Today our friends and adversaries are reminded that we are a free people capable of great deeds."

Young, Crippen back in Texas for debriefing

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen, awed by the success of their historic space adventure, were back in Texas today for several days of intense debriefing.

Young told a rousing, flag-waving crowd waiting to greet the astronauts at nearby Ellington Air Force Base Tuesday evening that the 54½-hour voyage and unprecedented landing by the Space Shuttle Columbia was "something just short of a miracle."

"Robert and I spent the most exciting 2½ days probably that we ever spent in our lives or ever will spend again," said the flight commander, wearing a blue flight suit and standing on a platform decked with red, white and blue banners.

About 1,500 onlookers whistled, clapped and let loose with yelps of glee. "It's always great to be back in Houston," said Young with a wide grin.

He and shuttle pilot Crippen flew into Ellington just before nightfall, barely six hours after the pinpoint landing of their 80-ton spaceship in a California desert.

"The spaceship Columbia is phenomenal. It is an incredibly amazing piece of machinery," said Young. "Anytime you can take something that big and put it into space and bring it back and land it, you have accomplished something just short of a miracle."

"I think the American public is going to get their money's worth out of this baby," he said. "It will allow us to do in the '80s and '90s things we must do for defense and to advance science and technology. We've got the capability right now, and so I say let's just press on and do it."

Young, 50, a veteran of four previous trips into space and one of the handful of men to walk on the moon, suggested there might have been some perilous moments during the maiden voyage that perhaps went unnoticed in an almost flawless mission.

"There were some moments up there where we had some very exciting...and complex tasks, and Robert did all those things...ignoring some potential personal risk," Young said without elaborating.

He said Crippen, 43, who was making his first space trip, "is a very smart man" who "kept me out of a lot of trouble on that flight."

As he spoke, Crippen stood behind Young grinning and shaking his head from side to side as his boss in space praised him.

"For me it was the darndest time I've ever had in my entire life," Crippen said. "I was just hanging on hoping he would point me in the right direction. I want to go back as soon as I can."

The astronauts and their wives were greeted here by a group of dignitaries including presidential adviser James Baker, who read a message from the president congratulating the spacemen on "your brilliant adventure."

"Today, both our friends and our adversaries are reminded that we are a free people, capable of great deeds," Reagan's message said.

The homecoming site was just a short hop from the sprawling Johnson Space Center, where the normally stoic men of Mission Control stood as one to cheer the shuttle's dramatic and safe return.

Even at $10 billion, the shuttle was a bargain basement spacecraft. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had to scrap plans to design a ship able to go into space under its own power and to come back like the Columbia did on Tuesday.

But who remembered all that after the ship rolled to a stop, the American flag prominent on its left side?

"We consider it 100 percent successful," said Donald K. Slayton one of the top shuttle program officials. "It went exactly as predicted all the way through."

Besides going and coming safely, what else went right?

A lot of people at emergency landing sites had nothing to do. The ejection seats, the slide wire, and the range destruct system were just as idle.

The solid rocket boosters, old standbys in space flight but never on a manned spacecraft, did their share in lifting the shuttle and did not turn it into an out-of-control cartwheel. They dropped off where they were expected to and did not sink. They were easily recovered to lift yet another and another after that.

The shuttle's main engines didn't melt. The cargo doors opened and closed. They did not warp in the 500-degree swing of temperatures. Their locks worked, and the Columbia did not have to return early.

Almost all of those worrisome tiles stayed on. So did the wings. The ship did not burn up in the atmosphere, and it did not spiral to a crash landing in the Pacific.

Rogers Dry Lake, the landing site, stayed dry. And the computers which stopped the launch last Friday because they weren't talking to each other were practically holding hands the entire time.

The favorite word on this flight, from Shuttle Control to astronauts, was "beautiful" and "super."

"Nominal" was popular too. Everything was nominal — all right, fine, within the limits, working the way it should.

"You can't believe what a flying machine this is!" Young exclaimed. "It's really something special."

Engineers will spend months looking at data to find what went wrong.

It was easy to tell what went right.

The flight.

Americans, others cheer Columbia's safe landing

By The Associated Press

From the stuffed couches of VIP lounges to American bars, from campers at a desert airbase to European capitals, whoops and cheers went up to herald the flawless landing of the first reusable rocketship.

"We are back in space...and proud of it," said Secretary of the Air Force Verne Orr.

About 170,000 people in recreational vehicles and mobile homes congregated in a remote area near the desert landing strip to wait for the shuttle's return after two days in space. Millions more in the United States and abroad watched on television.

"It just makes you proud to be an American, that's all," said Warren Steinbach of Lake Los Angeles, Calif.

VIPs invited by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were closer to the landing site than the campers.

"Come On, Come On" one person shouted from the VIP area, which was engulfed in whoops when the space shuttle finally came to a stop Tuesday. Celebrities on hand included actors Roy Rogers and Leonard Nimoy and former astronauts Scott Carpenter and Rusty Schweickart.

After the shuttle came to a stop, George Page, director at Kennedy Space Center in Florida, stood outside to bask in the congratulations of his co-workers.

"Over-all, one word describes it — fantastic!" Page said. "For a first-time in the mission, words are hard to come by to describe it."

Kleindienst indicted for perjury

By LARRY LOPEZ
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, who resigned amid the Watergate scandal and later pleaded guilty to testifying falsely to the Senate, has been indicted on 14 counts of perjury, state officials say.

Kleindienst was named Tuesday in an indictment handed down by a Maricopa County grand jury alleging he lied to Arizona Bar Association panels investigating his role in an alleged Teamsters Union pension-milking scheme.

Kleindienst, who maintained his innocence before the indictments were handed down, reacted to them by saying, "holy mackerel."

"I am not a liar," he said.

The three-time state GOP chairman said he had not seen the charges and referred questions to his attorney, George Carlock.

Carlock said the case "will be defended as vigorously as we can."

Kleindienst faces arraignment April 22.

Phil MacDonnell of the state attorney general's office said pre-trial motions could last six months and the trial itself could last a month or more.

"It's a very complex set of transactions," he said. "We'll have to explain it all to the jury."

The indictment capped a six-month investigation that started when Bar Association officials told prosecutors that Kleindienst allegedly lied to their administrative and disciplinary committees during their 1978 and 1980 inquiries.

The bar is recommending that the Arizona Supreme Court suspend Kleindienst from practicing law for one year because of his alleged perjury and unethical conduct during investigations of the alleged milking of $7 million in Teamster Union health and welfare funds.

The charges stemmed from hearings by the state Insurance Department after the department agreed to settle a suit arising from the alleged fraud. The bar association accused Kleindienst, who represented an insurance vendor in the 1976 hearing, of keeping silent when he heard testimony he knew was false.

It also said he had lied in 1977 testimony about the same scandal in U.S. District Court in Washington D.C.

And it said he had then perjured himself in 1978, when the bar association asked him about those and other matters.

Tuesday's indictment accuses Kleindienst of lying to the bar committees in 14 instances during the state bar investigations.

MacDonnell said Kleindienst's alleged perjuries in testimony to the Bar Association were virtually identical to answers he also gave to a U.S. Senate subcommittee. Copies of those answers were turned over to the U.S. Justice Department for investigation.

House builder buys city's tract of land

Midland house builder Bill Hickey laid out $653,786 to become the high bidder and owner of a 2½-acre tract of city-owned land at the southwest corner of A Street and Wadley Avenue in the now-booming business development area on Midland north's central side.

The Midland City Council awarded the sale contract to Hickey on Tuesday.

Also bidding on the tract were oil operator Windell Thomason, who bid $555,555.87 on the property, and E.R. West, who made three offers: $572,000 or $250,000 plus a 4.19-acre tract at South Midkiff Road and West Industrial Avenue or a 46.735-acre tract off U.S. Highway 80 and between Holiday Hill Road and Midland Regional Airport.

West, however, bid $56,129 to buy a 0.945-acre tract adjacent to The Hillender School at 1600 W. Wadley Ave.

I. David Porras' Petroleum Centers are just across Wadley Avenue from the 2½-acre tract, which Hickey said he may use to construct an office building. That tract is zoned for buildings or structures up to 2½ stories tall.

approval of one heliport likely would encourage the proliferation of similar mini-airports in Midland.

"We're going to have several of these (heliport) requests before we get on the deep end," Marcum said.

Sloan said that flying by helicopter is a "very safe way of travel."

And pilot Harbold reassured the council that he was keen on safety.

"We're the first ones (on safety), and you will have to do it (codes on heliports) right."

Dollar value up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against all major currencies in light pre-Easter trading today. Gold prices opened lower.

Dealers attributed the dollar's strength to higher Eurodollar deposit rates. A Milan dealer suggested the dollar might have been "taken higher by psychological effects of the successful conclusion of the Columbia space flight."

Senate to seek facts on redbfish, trout

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has voted to seek facts and figures between legislative sessions on the numbers of redbfish and speckled trout in Texas' coastal waters.

A resolution by Sen. Walter Mengden directs the Senate Natural Resources Committee to study a state agency's report of an "alarming decline" in redbfish and trout.

The committee would report to the 1983 Legislature. Reps. Ed Watson, D-Deer Park, and Bill Blythe, R-Houston, have introduced a resolution calling for the House Committee of Environmental Affairs to make the same study.

In another development, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby apparently sentenced the 1981 "redfish bill" to death by referring a House-approved measure to the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

An identical Senate bill, which would take redbfish and speckled trout off the commercial market, already has been tabled by the committee, 6-5.

Sen. Jack Ogg asked Tuesday of the Mengden resolution, "Are you quite certain this is not just an effort...by those of you who voted against the redbfish bill to wiggle off the hook?"

Ogg, D-Houston, said he was referring to committee members who voted against the redbfish bill.

"It's not an attempt by anybody I know of," said Mengden, R-Houston.

Mengden, who opposed the bill, responded that "something's fishy" if a senator does not want a study to settle conflicting reports about the number of redbfish and trout.

Mengden said figures compiled by a federal agency and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department vary greatly.

"All members of the Senate are very concerned about our natural resources and will take whatever action necessary to prevent their depletion," said Mengden. "We need much more data to get to the bottom of this controversy.... We need a careful, unbiased 19-month study by the Natural Resources Committee."

Mengden said the committee "needs to get the testimony of six sister states around the Gulf."

Mengden's resolution was approved on voice after the Senate voted 26-1 to suspend the rules and consider the measure.

Farm income forecasts now thought somewhat optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only four months ago many Agriculture Department experts expected farmers who saw incomes plummet last year to be well on their way to recovery in 1981.

But the experts did not reckon entirely with depressed livestock prices, a slowdown in exports and a continuing creep in costs of producing crops and livestock.

The department's latest report, issued Tuesday, said U.S. net farm income this year "is now anticipated to average at the low end" of the $27 billion to $32 billion range forecast last fall.

Last Dec. 12, a similar report optimistically predicted that net farm income would improve and wind up "perhaps regaining all the loss of 1980."

Farmers' net income last year dropped to $22 billion from about $31 billion in 1979. Thus, last December's forecast held out the possibility of 1981 income being about that level.

"Increased production estimates for beef and hogs have not offset price declines, leading to lower cash receipts than expected earlier," the new report said.

"As a result, total 1981 livestock receipts are now forecast at $75 billion to $78 billion — still 9 to 13 percent above the estimate for 1980."

Sales receipts for cattle are expected to rise less than 10 percent from 1980, while hog and broiler receipts could be up by 20 percent or more, the report said.

"Hog receipts will reflect higher farm prices, caused in part by a projected decline in pork production," it said. "Broiler prices are expected to rise sharply as pork production declines, and this, on top of a modest rise in output, will yield receipts a fifth or more above 1980."

Cash receipts from dairying are expected to rise about 10 percent from last year.

Officials said farmers' cash receipts from the sale of crops in 1981 are forecast at $76 billion to $79 billion, up 7 percent to 11 percent from 1980.

Wheat receipts are expected to rise about 20 percent as production and prices increase, the report said.

Cotton and tobacco receipts are expected to go up by more than a sixth "because of strong prices and expected larger production." Vegetable receipts could rise by a tenth, it said.

"For corn and soybeans, marketings during 1981 will be mostly from the drought-reduced 1980 crops, so despite prospects for strong prices throughout the year, cash receipts for these commodities will show smaller gains from 1980 than might be expected," the report said.

Alternative farm bill introduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Republicans are joining congressional Democrats in taking aim at Agriculture Secretary John R. Block's plan to secure almost unprecedented leeway in setting farm price support loans.

"I cannot see how we can alter the balance of government incentives and production controls until the world market can be made truly free," Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas says.

Dole, the second-ranking Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee, has introduced an alternative to the administration's 1981 farm bill that retains through 1985 a statutory minimum for most crop loans, the government's primary price-support mechanism.

It is those minimums that President Reagan and Block want eliminated from the new farm program. For some major commodities, the most recent per-bushel loan rate is $3.20 for wheat, now selling about 75 cents higher, and $2.40 for corn, now selling about 80 cents higher.

Sen. Walter Huddleston of Kentucky, ranking Democrat on the Senate Agriculture Committee, has offered his own version of the farm bill that also retains minimum loans. It's similar to the farm bill that both Republican and Democratic members of the House Agriculture Committee are working on.

"The nearly unlimited discretionary authority requested by the president is an assault on farm program expenditures masked as economy measures," Huddleston says. "Over the years, federal price-support programs have provided a degree of stability in uncertain markets and protection from prices far below the cost of production."

Even Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the Agriculture Committee chairman who introduced President Reagan's proposal, offered his own farm bill that retains minimum loans.

The farm program proposals coming from within Congress already were well developed by the time Block gave a general outline of the administration's plan on March 31.

AGRICULTURE

The bill itself wasn't delivered to Congress until last week.

Block, assuring Congress that he and not other Cabinet members drew up the Reagan farm policy, said the level of price-support loans should be left to the complete discretion of the agriculture secretary.

He said minimum levels set in the law would make it easier to administer the crop loan program, "but I think we run a serious risk of writing in something tying loan rates to things we wish we hadn't."

Only with that discretion can loan rates be tailored to existing supply-and-demand conditions, insuring "they aren't enough to encourage excess production in other countries or we price ourselves out of the market," Block said. He promised, if given complete discretion over rates, "to provide an effective safety net and help farmers with their short-term financing."

But Dole, skeptical as other senators about Block's real role in formulating farm policy, said that "at times, that discretion has been used to drive market prices down."

Dole said that more than revamping domestic farm programs, the government needs to deal with unfair foreign export policies and import barriers.

Until that is done, he said, "I could not, in good faith to the American farmer, reduce the modest amount of support which the government currently provides."

Farmers Export Co. board approves reorganization plan

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The board of Farmers Export Co. has approved a reorganization plan that will reduce the number of cooperative owners from 12 to six and result in the sale of two of the company's three export elevators, an official has announced.

Harlan Lunday, vice president and general manager, announced Tuesday that the company will sell its export grain facilities at Philadelphia, Pa., and Galveston, Texas.

Lundas said Far-Mar-Co Inc., the grain marketing subsidiary of Farmland Industries Inc. and the largest user of the Galveston elevator, has agreed to buy the facility.

Two private companies are considering the purchase of the Philadelphia elevator, a board member said.

Under the reorganization, Farmers Export — once considered one of the top four grain exporting firms in the United States — will market grain for six regional agricultural cooperatives through its Ames, La., export elevator.

Potato stockpile smallest in years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's stockpile of potatoes is the smallest in seven years, the Agriculture Department says.

As of April 1, there were an estimated 68.3 million hundredweight of potatoes in the nation's inventory down 26 percent from a year ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Tuesday.

That was the smallest April 1 inventory since 1974, officials said.

Potato output, which depends mostly on varieties harvested in the fall has declined the last two years from a price-depressing crop of 312 million hundredweight in 1978 to 253.9 million last year.

Whether they're turned on by tennis, golf, bicycling, swimming, softball or other recreation, many will discover they're placing a strain on muscles and tendons that are out of condition.

Sports and accident-related injuries can be expected to increase along with the spurt in outdoor activities. Should you be one of the unlucky individuals who suffer a limb, fracture or serious sprain requiring a cast, it's important to maintain some sort of conditioning program within the limits of the injury to speed the recuperation process.

...AN UNUSUAL PROGRAM was presented by the kindergarten class Tuesday at Fannin Elementary School.

Rhonda Lacy, teacher, wrote the songs and the script for the program which was a presentation of material they had learned for each month of the year.

"The children acted out each song" she said. They also wore costumes made by both Ms. Lacy and the student's parents.

This is the second year this program has been done. "People are just amazed at what these kindergarten students can do," said Ms. Lacy. "They do what you would expect third or fourth graders to do."

"Of course, it's an easy program for us, the teachers," she added. "Because if the children mess up, they are so cute that no one minds." Ms. Lacy wrote some of the songs with her students in mind. For example, she wrote "Rooting-Tooing Cowboy" for a set of twins in her class. Another number, "I Don't Want to Go to School" was written specifically for several of her students...

The group also performed for the fifth graders from Travis and West Elementary and for primary grades at Washington Elementary.

Removing labels, price tags

By SHARON A. HILLIS
County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Removing price tags and labels from household items can be sticky work, but it's far from hopeless. Several precautions will prevent damage to metal, plastic or wood items. A bit of "trial-and-error" may be necessary in finding the best method in each case, so if one procedure doesn't work, try another one.

Don't use strong abrasives or solutions until you adequately test them on the material in question, since they might soften, scratch, discolor or damage the item. Here are a few suggestions for removing four of the most common kinds of labels:

PRESSURE-SENSITIVE ADHESIVES

Stickers or labels that are peeled from a baking or roll and pressed in place on a product are pressure-sensitive adhesives. Often, these simply can be peeled off the product. Adhesive that remains then can be rubbed off with your fingers similar to the way you "thumb-roll" rubber cement into small balls.

For older adhesive — or adhesive that has been exposed to high temperatures and/or humidity, other methods of removal may be needed.

Surface of the household item will determine which methods and materials are safe. Always pretest detergents, solvents, ammonia, acetone and other materials to assure they won't permanently damage or soften the product's finish. Pretest on the backside, bottom or inside of an item in a hidden place.

Some pressure-sensitive adhesives will come off if you use a solution of warm water, liquid dishwashing detergent and vinegar or ammonia. Depending on the surface in question oil, fingernail polish remover and acetone are other suggestions. Commercial pre-wash spot removers are effective on some adhesives.

Whatever you choose, work the solution underneath or through the label to release the adhesive. If you try cleaning fluid, remember it can soften some plastics. One cleaning-fluid procedure is to saturate a folded white cloth or paper towel with the solution, then place it over the label or tape for a few minutes, and when the adhesive softens, rub the label with another cloth or towel.

WATER-SOLUBLE GLUE

Any label that was attached by moistening the adhesive with water requires a very simple procedure for removal: Simply soak it in water, if possible. One way to soak the label — without soaking the product — is to saturate a sponge or several layers of paper towels with warm water and place it over the label. This method works effectively on water-soluble glue, but if used mistakenly on pressure-sensitive adhesives, it can make them more difficult to remove.

Researcher says anemic, smoking mothers linked to crib death

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Analysis of thousands of pregnancies indicates there is a greater risk of crib death among infants whose mothers suffered severe anemia or were heavy smokers during pregnancy, a medical researcher says.

The theory was developed by Dr. Richard Naeye, chairman of the pathology department at the Pennsylvania State University Medical School, located at Hershey Medical Center.

Naeye said the research was based on studies of 60,000 pregnancies over a six-year period.

"Through statistics, we've found these factors are independent of other factors that can cause SIDS (sudden infant death syndrome)," Naeye said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

"Smoking and anemia, however, won't explain all the SIDS deaths. We don't know the rest of the reasons."

Naeye said smoking reduces the oxygen flow in the blood vessels feeding the unborn infant. He said one cigarette can constrict blood vessels for five to 15 minutes.

He said research has determined the control centers in the brain stem, responsible for such basic functions as breathing and heart action, have a higher requirement for oxygen before birth.

"The mechanisms controlling breathing and heart action are only a primary control within the first few months after birth," Naeye said.

He said within the first three or four months after birth, the brain has not developed a backup system for breathing and heart action and if the primary system fails, death generally follows. Naeye said he believes this occurs in one-half to two-thirds of the crib deaths.

Naeye said anemia has an adverse effect because of the reduced number of oxygen-carrying red blood cells. As with smoking, he said, this results in less oxygen going to the developing fetus.

The doctor said researchers throughout the nation are concentrating on developing an early detection of infants who most likely could be crib death victims.

"If that's possible, we can prevent many deaths using monitors," Naeye said. He was referring to a device attached to a sleeping infant that sets off an alarm if breathing ceases. The alarm startles the infant into resuming breathing and alerts parents who can help the child resume breathing.

"I'm hopeful in the next few years to have some answers, but we're not sure yet. It's not a bird-in-the-hand yet," Naeye said.

Naeye said crib death usually strikes no sooner than age 2-3 months. It reaches its peak at 2½-3 months and tapers off after 8 months, he said, adding that it's very uncommon after age 1.

He said parents should notify their physician if they notice their child not breathing while sleeping for periods exceeding 20 seconds. He said it's not uncommon for an infant to stop breathing for up to 5 seconds while sleeping.

Memorizing Bible

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When Rex Keener starts quoting the Bible, you'd better sit down. It could take a while.

The junior at Carson-Newman College in nearby Jefferson City says he worked 15 months memorizing nine books of the Bible and won't quit until he can recite the entire New Testament.

"I guess my highest motivation is to know the Bible well," said Keener, 20, a religion major and part-time Baptist minister from Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

"I would like to be a religion professor, and I want to be able to pull a verse out of my head without having to look it up."

DEAR ABBY

A gigolo does more than just tango

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm curious. How many hundreds of letters have you received from gigolos protesting your hurting their business by telling folks that gigolos do NOT provide sexual services? — FRED M. IN HONOLULU

DEAR MS. VAN BUREN: I was amazed to read your reply to JUST WONDERING, the 15-year-old girl who asked why a gigolo wasn't considered the same as a hooker. In fact, they are quite similar. The Random House Dictionary of the English Language describes a gigolo as follows:

"1) a man living off the earnings or gifts of a woman, esp. a younger man supported by an older woman in return for his sexual attention and companionship; 2) a male professional dancing partner or escort."

While a gigolo might be defined as the latter, as you informed JUST WONDERING, the former definition is far more prevalent. I feel that a 15-year-old should be told the entire definition, as I believe that a gigolo is just another name for a male prosti-

DEAR ABBY: You missed it with IRKED, who is irked when a child answers the phone and keeps saying, "Who is this?"

People who place calls and do not have the sense or courtesy to say "This is so-and-so calling" are the ones who irk ME! — IRKED IN PALO ALTO
DEAR IRKED: Let's hear it from the East Coast:

DEAR ABBY: IRKED IN EDEN, N. C., complained about people who let their youngsters answer the phone when all they say is, "Who is this?"

When that happens to me, I always say, "This is Santa Claus!" That always brings a grownup to the phone quickly with plenty of commotion. — OTTO IN CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a person who helps a man cheat on his wife by carrying messages and acting as a go-between for a couple of back-street lovers? — DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: He (or she) probably looks upon it as doing a friend a favor. I'm reminded of something my father used to say: "Never look for an honest person to help you with a crooked deal."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Restore colors on cloths with crayons

DEAR HELOISE:

I shall never forget the fun I had as a child restoring the colors to the roses on one of my mother's beautiful linen tablecloths with my crayons.

Afterwards, the colors were "set" by ironing over them with waxed paper. There were no really special washing instructions except the avoidance of harsh soaps, hot water and sunlight.

By today's laundering standards, I would suggest that after the above treatment, items be washed in cold water and a mild detergent, then fluff-dried without heat or hung in a shaded area.

I recently put this technique to work for me in another money-saving way. I found a gorgeous cotton evening dress (the homespun look). When I put it on, several faded streaks in the bodice were revealed.

It was a bargain price so I whisked it out of the store, picked up a box of crayons, went home and colored in the light areas, then ironed over them with waxed paper.

After three wearings, and scores of compliments, I feel especially good about my bargain. — Loretta Lampkin

Small wonder! Thanks for helping us out with the method of using crayons, heat and wax paper to set designs on fabric. Your letter was one of hundreds we received on the subject and I'm very grateful to each of you for taking the time to write. Please take this note as a personal thank you. A big hug to all of you for being so sweet. — Heloise

FILTER LINERS

Dear Heloise: An easy and inexpensive way to line those round tins before storing cookies and candies in them is to use a coffee filter for quick-brew-type coffee makers.

When pressed out flat, the filter fits the bottom of many of these cans perfectly and looks very neat. — Mrs. Gene Kohlen

DOC'S GOOD IDEA

Dear Heloise: Waiting in a doctor's office can sometimes make one tense and impatient. My gynecologist's receptionists helped alleviate the problem by using a photograph album as a recipe file.

Inside the cover, they glued a paper pocket containing blank index cards and a pen and mounted a few of their favorite recipes on the sticky pages of the album.

Patients were encouraged to browse through the album and copy those which appealed to them. In return, they were to jot down one or two of their favorite recipes and add them to the rapidly growing "cookbook."

Now when the doctor is ready to see me, I'm not ready to see him! — Karin Pietrini

THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: When having bridal or baby showers, it would be so thoughtful, to my way of thinking, if each one would put on the gift card her name and address and what was given.

It would greatly help out the busy bride or mother-to-be with thank-you notes and, additionally, if a card should get separated from the package, there would be no doubt as to who the gift was from. — Mrs. G.M. Elliott

EASY THREADING

Dear Heloise: It's hard for me to see to thread needles. While looking in a store for some with large eyes, I came across needles which have an open end or slit across the top.

All I had to do was just place the thread at the top, press down and it slips into the eye of the needle easy as can be. It surely saves a lot of time and frustration. Hope this helps others as much as it has helped me. — B.M.M.

Transforming leftovers into delicacies

By HARVEY STEIMAN
Hearst Special News Service

Fish bones. Chicken wing tips. Asparagus bottoms. Pork fat. Orange peel.

These may seem like garbage to some, but to the creative cook, such culinary miscellany can produce delicious dishes in countless numbers. In these days of increasingly painful food prices, these items have another distinct advantage. They're cheap. In some cases, they're free.

Take fish bones. If you buy fish and have it filleted, don't let the fish store keep the bones; after all, you paid for them. Most fishermen leave quite a bit of meat clinging to the bones.

Simmer the bones in a pot with some sliced aromatic vegetables (onions, garlic, carrots, turnips), a few herbs and pepper. After about 25 minutes, remove the bones and take the meat from the bones. It slides right off. The result is a wonderful chowder.

If you don't want to buy the fillets, most fish stores will sell you — cheap — the bones other customers didn't want.

The culinary spectrum is filled with such unexpected sources of delight. Some examples:

Poultry wing tips. Save the wingtips that you trim from chickens, ducks and other birds. There's very little meat on them if you cook them normally but a long, slow braising reduces the bones to gelatin, rendering them soft and flavoring the broth richly.

Chicken skin. Render it to make chicken fat, which can be used as an unsaturated substitute for butter in cooking (but not in baking). The crisp skin resulting after the fat is poured off makes a crunchy appetizer, especially if a sliced onion is thrown into the pan as the fat renders. To East European Jews, this delicacy is known as "gribbeness."

Meat trimmings. If you buy a roast and cut it up into steaks, you are left with a few miscellaneous pieces of meat and fat that aren't usable for anything except this: grind or chop them for hamburger. You can adjust the fat-to-lean ratio to your own specifications.

Meat bones. The same procedure results in a few extra bones. They make wonderful stock.

Pork fat. If you trim a pork roast, you wind up with a few extra bits of fat. Cut the fat into quarter-inch cubes. It makes a superb shortening for baking. The crisp cubes, rendered of fat, can be lightly salted for a delicious, if caloric, appetizer.

Asparagus, broccoli and other vegetables that have pretty tips attached to long stems can be thought of as two vegetables in one. Use the flowerets for one meal, steamed or boiled and dressed in butter. Boil and puree the stems to serve as a vegetable puree with another meal, or use the puree as the basis of a cream soup.

Peelings of all vegetables (except cabbage) can be added to simmering stocks for additional flavor. Carrot and turnip peels, onion skins and scallion greens are especially welcome.

Except for apples and citrus, fruits are not so versatile.

Should you have some apples that are beginning to show their age, salvage them by baking them at 375 degrees F. in a covered dish for 50 minutes. When they are cool enough to handle, scrape the apple moosh off the skins and cores. Stir in sugar to taste, and serve it as applesauce.

Orange, lemon and grapefruit rind freezes well stored in a small, tightly covered jar (baby food jars are perfect). Shave it into strips with a vegetable peeler, or grate it and place the grated rind in a little foil packet, then into the jar. You'll have a ready source of fresh-tasting peel when a recipe calls for it.

Citrus rind, cut into thin strips, makes a great candy. Boil it in syrup for 20 to 30 minutes, drain it and roll it in superfine sugar. Orange rind is also delicious dipped in chocolate.

Leftovers are another source of inspiration.

Where would fried rice be without already-boiled rice? You can't make a rice salad without cooking the rice first. A handful of leftover rice makes a nutritious and gastronomically interesting addition to almost any soup.

Leftover rice is so useful, in fact, that one might be advised to cook twice as much rice as one needs for any specific occasions, just to have some on hand.

Stale bread is not to be disdained. A half loaf of sourdough French bread suffering from second-day hardening of the arteries makes the perfect base for French toast. The French name is "pain perdu", which means lost bread.

Bits of stale bread come out of a bout with a food processor as perfect crumbs for coating food to be fried or sauteed. Bread crumbs freeze admirably.

Bits of cheese too small to slice can be grated and reserved for any recipe calling for grated cheese. They freeze well, too.

Eat in moderation and don't worry

"The best nutritional policy is to practice moderation and don't worry," according to Dr. Curtis Smith, professor of biological sciences at Mount Holyoke College.

Years ago, people worried about how to obtain enough nutrients, while today people worry about what to avoid. The best bet is just to eat all foods in moderation.

Dr. Smith addressed the question of sugar in the diet, saying, "Refined sugar, maple syrup, honey or a baked potato...are all practically pure carbohydrate and carbohydrates should be the major source of energy in a nutritionally balanced diet."

Demons to stay Demons

CARNATION, Wash. (AP) — Demons will be Demons.

Tolt Junior-Senior High School's sports teams will keep the name "Demons," the Lower Snoqualmie School Board decided Monday.

The board ruled unanimously that the word has no evil influence on the students, despite testimony from some of the 300 parents who last month asked that the name be changed.

The Rev. Fred Reiter of the Snoqualmie Baptist Church said, "We feel the name is detrimental to the community, morally, socially, physically, psychologically and emotionally."

Fig liqueur makes debut

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

One of the world's oldest cultivated fruits, the soft, sweet fig, has long been popular served fresh dried and preserved. Now figs are becoming popular in other roles, as an ingredient in puddings, jams and breads, and most recently as a German-made fig liqueur known as Askalon.

There are legends gal-lore about the ambrosial fig. Buddha was said to have found enlightenment while sitting beneath a wild fig tree. The ancient Hebrews looked upon the tree as a symbol of peace and plenty. Mohammed's followers called it the "Tree of Heaven," and the Romans offered up the sap of the fig tree to the goddess Juno.

Even today, some tribes in central Africa build special huts for the spirits of their ancestors in the shade of fig trees.

The fig is said to have been the favorite fruit of Cleopatra, which may explain why it became known in olden days as a love potion.

There are more than 600 varieties of fig varying in shape from round to oblong and in color from near-white to purple-black.

The new fig liqueur is named after the ancient city of Askalon on the coast of Palestine. It changed hands over the centuries and was finally destroyed by the Moslems in 1270. In its heyday, Askalon was a prosperous city famed for its high living standard.

Fig liqueur is not only served straight up or on the rocks but is an ingredient in a number of desserts. Here's a parfait recipe.

- 6 heaping tablespoons vanilla ice cream
- 2 teaspoons chocolate syrup
- 2 tablespoons whipped cream
- 1-3rd cup Askalon liqueur

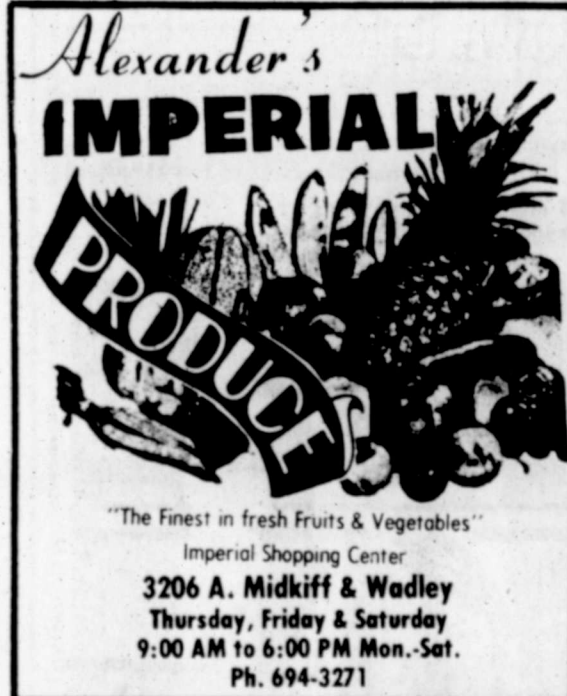

In a parfait glass, place 2 tablespoons ice cream, top with chocolate syrup, add 2 more tablespoons ice cream, then 2 tablespoons whipped cream, add the remainder of the ice cream and finally the Askalon. Place in the freezer one hour. If desired, add dollop of whipped cream on top.

Dog eats pennies

MARIANNA, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Ben Willis of Marianna Animal Hospital didn't know what to think when Steve and Sandra Stewart brought their Boston terrier, Sweetie Pie, into the clinic two weeks ago.

The Stewarts' said the 3 1/2-pound dog wouldn't eat and had thrown up several pennies.

"I've taken everything out of dogs from corn cobs, nuts, bottle nipples, rubber stoppers, bones, needles with thread — you name it," Willis said. "But I've never seen or heard of anything to compare with this highly irregular behavior."

By the time Willis surgery was over, doctors had extracted 80 cents in coins from the pup's stomach, as well as a metal shoe from a Monopoly game, a piece of lead the size of a quarter and a staple.

No one, including the Stewarts or Willis, can figure out how the dog got attracted to a diet of metal, but Willis suggested, "I think she just likes to eat metal."

Missile site would be 'unobtrusive'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Air Force's huge, multi-billion dollar MX nuclear missile system won't disrupt life around it any more than Minute-men missile silos currently do, an Air Force spokesman says.

In the first of four Texas meetings, officers explained Tuesday night that the site could be "unobtrusive, almost unnoticeable," and that damage to a nearby community would be minimal. A second Austin meeting is set for today.

At the Tuesday hearing, about 100 people, many openly opposed to locating the $33.8 billion system in the Texas, watched an Air Force slide show that said the MX was necessary to "swing the pendulum back" from equality with Soviet missile strength to U.S. superiority.

Superiority, according to Air Force spokesman Maj. Dick Bryan, would "preserve peace through strength — what is commonly called 'deterrence.'"

Federal officials have said the preferred site for the MX missile system, which would hide 200 missiles among 4,600 launch sites, is in Utah and Nevada. However, an alternate plan calls for basing part of the system in the Clovis-Dalhart area of New Mexico and Texas.

Bryan said the Air Force had conducted a number of studies on minimizing damage to the environment, including water, soil, air, wildlife, and vegetation.

But at a press conference earlier in the day, opponents called the system an "environmental disaster."

"It would devastate the region," said Bill Crawford of the American Friends Service Committee.

"This would have a tremendous impact on agricultural land in the Panhandle," said Sen. Bill Sarpaluis, D-Herford, author of a resolution asking Congress to cancel the Air Force plans.

"This would force 1,400 property owners off their land in Texas and New Mexico," said Pat Smith, executive director of the Texas Farm Bureau. "All this land taken by the federal government would be tax exempt and this would raise everybody's taxes."

"We want to do our part in national defense," said Rep. J.W. Buchanan, D-Dumas, "but this is ridiculous. It would take 143,000 acres of productive land out of production. This thing should be put on government land."

Jim Butler of the Sierra Club said the New Mexico and Texas region is one of the driest in the nation and the MX missile system would become a competitor for already scarce water. It also would strain facilities for electric power in the area, he said.

Maj. Bryan said the system would use about 30,000 acre-feet of water per year during the construction phase of the project, but only 13,000 acre-feet thereafter.

He said research had discovered previously unknown supplies of water, and hinted that farmers and ranchers might be able to use excess water after construction was complete.

Further public hearings are set for Thursday in Lubbock and next week in Amarillo and Dalhart.

Probe of judges winding down

By JUDY BOCKLAGE
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Taking bribes and kickbacks from out-of-town salesmen was a way of life for some county judges in Arkansas until federal investigators got wind of the schemes.

It's been four years since the Justice Department began investigating public servant bribery in Arkansas. So far, 18 former and current county judges have been indicted. Fifteen of them have pleaded guilty or been convicted by federal court juries.

Three salesmen who did business with the judges and agreed to tell investigators about their dealings were sentenced to 15 months in prison. At least one other salesman was given complete immunity from prosecution in exchange for his testimony.

Although investigators say the probe is winding down, more indictments are expected. "I anticipate it will continue for at least nine months to a year," said William E. Kell of Little Rock, who is in charge of the FBI in Arkansas.

"It's really one, big single investigation," said former FBI Agent Howard Cecil of Little Rock. "You're working on a vendor, and a vendor becomes cooperative and names 20 other county judges. It's just one huge case."

Investigators said tens of thousands of dollars were passed between vendors and judges during the years that were investigated.

The ripple effect began in early 1977 when the judge of Craighead County asked the FBI to investigate records of his predecessor, Bill Clark. By the end of the year, the scope of the investigation had broadened to the point where the Legislative Joint Auditing Committee was asked to investigate records of all counties that did business with eight companies during 1974, 1975 and 1976.

The list of judges who might be involved grew as vendors with the companies began talking.

One vendor, Louis "Joe" Spilka of Germantown, Tenn., told investigators he had bribed 17 county judges across the state. Another, Paul Baldwin of Hernando, Miss., agreed to testify against six county judges.

The county judge is the chief administrator of a county. He approves all purchases for the county, from soap for the jails to expensive pieces of road equipment.

Cecil, who recently retired from the FBI, described in a recent interview the way the investigations were conducted. An investigator first checked county records against the records of a supplier. In one instance, a county's records showed purchases of grader blades from a company that didn't sell grader blades. The need for an investigation into those records was evident.

An investigator also looks for cases where a county judge is authorizing payments to an out-of-town supplier that are four, five or 10 times higher than the price he could get in his hometown. "The tremendous profit allows the vendor to give a substantial kickback to the county judge," Cecil said.

George Proctor of Little Rock took over prosecution of the cases in the Eastern District of Arkansas when he became U.S. attorney about two years after the investigation had begun. U.S. Attorney Larry McCord has investigated cases in the Western District of Arkansas.

Proctor said some vendors had a technique to determine whether to try and bribe a county judge.

The salesman would visit the shop where the county's equipment was kept to check for extravagant supplies of gear lubrication, diesel fuel and other products from out-of-town vendors. "That meant that this judge might be bribeable," Proctor said.

Sometimes a vendor would masquerade as a bona fide salesman. Other times he would be more outspoken, detailing to the judge what he could expect if he bought a certain amount of supplies.

Kickbacks generally were offered for 10 percent of the purchase price for materials delivered, and 40 percent for bogus invoices, Proctor said. In some cases, an invoice was padded, and the difference between the actual price and the inflated price was split between the vendor and the judge.

A bribery investigation is complicated by the fact that bribes are often made in cash, and no records are kept of the transaction. "So you have to rely on somebody telling you something," Proctor said.

Committee sends wiretap bill to House floor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he is delighted a legislative committee has approved his wiretapping and bugging bill and is "optimistic" the House will pass it.

But he didn't bother to comment on a remark by the executive director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union that Clements' push for wiretapping sprung from paranoia.

"Oh, he didn't pay any attention to that," said gubernatorial press secretary Jon Ford.

The House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee approved the bill, 7-3, sending it to the floor for debate.

"This was no surprise. I had anticipated that this would happen. It was just a question of when," the governor said.

Clements made wiretapping the biggest item in his anti-crime package, saying it would help state police convict kingpins in the illicit drug trade.

The bill would allow bugging or wiretapping only in drug cases.

Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, the committee chairman, said the House vote on the bill "is going to be close," and Speaker Bill Clayton last week predicted "rough sledding" for it.

Nabers has been less than enthusiastic about wiretapping, and observed after the committee voted that the words of innocent people could be intercepted and recorded if the bill becomes law.

"If a person called a person whose phone was tapped, they do run the risk of having that conversation recorded or subject to interception. ... The target can call you and you would be recorded," Nabers said.

John Duncan, executive director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said Clements was "more interested in legalizing surveillance than in controlling drug abuse."

Duncan recalled Clements' insistence on Department of Public Safety "security checks" on his employees when he took office.

"To make that sort of request is symptomatic of paranoia," Duncan said.

The committee rejected an amendment that would have prohibited covert entry of homes and offices to plant "bugs."

Bell dispute should be terminated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The lawyer for the Public Utility Commission says the dispute between Southwestern Bell and a newspaper group should be handled quickly because PUC faces another rate request from the "mammoth in Dallas."

Allen King told PUC hearing examiner Rhonda Ryan that the Texas Daily Newspaper Association should not be given extra time to prepare its case against Bell's proposed experiment in electronic home information service.

A July 6 hearing date is set in the case, with pretrial proceedings set for May 10, but TDNA attorney Earnest Casstevens said the newspapers need more time. He said he doubted Bell would answer questions fully and quickly or provide needed documents and information without legal prodding.

"This is a very complex case," Casstevens said. "... We think there is so much misrepresentation and broad-brushing of facts that we need time to find out exactly what's going on."

Bell attorney Jon Laurence ridiculed Casstevens' argument, calling it "something out of 'Alice in Wonderland.'"

King said any delay would put the hearing at PUC's busiest season.

"We're expecting a visit from a mammoth in Dallas (Bell), and if Casstevens delays the case by much it will become infinite delay," he said.

King also hinted that telephone company workers are worried about losing their jobs if the suit succeeds, and "that's the reason the CWA (Communications Workers of America) want to intervene."

The TDNA is trying to stop the telephone company from doing an experiment in which computer terminals would be installed free in 700 Austin homes. Users would be able to call up on the screen information such as telephone numbers and advertisements.

Poultry additives serve number of purposes

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why do farmers give drugs to poultry? Is it a preventive measure to keep them from getting sick, or are there other reasons? — Lester

Dear Lester: The use of antibiotic feed additives for poultry serves a number of purposes. First, it substantially reduces death rates. Secondly, antibiotics improve feed efficiency, so that a lesser amount of feed is required to produce the same amount of weight gain or egg production. Finally, antibiotic feed additives improve reproduction rates and the quality of the meat product.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do all college seniors adopt every fad that comes along? My son phoned home this evening and, during our conversation, informed me that he is now a vegetarian. From what I have heard about some of the other activities kids his age get into, being a vegetarian is a minor-league effort. But I am concerned about his health. Can a vegetarian diet provide all the nutrients needed for good health? — Mrs. T.M.

Dear Mrs. M.: According to the American Dietetic Association (ADA), you can set your mind at rest: A vegetarian diet that is carefully planned — and I would emphasize "carefully planned" — can provide all the nutrients a person needs. In fact, says the ADA, it may even help prevent certain diseases, such as heart disease, cancer, and obesity.

Vegetarian diets, however, are not for everyone. Pregnant women and nursing mothers, for example, should not adopt such a diet without close medical supervision. In some cases, a doctor may recommend that a pregnant woman take iron or folate supplements. The same precaution holds true for infants, children, and persons with health problems. Infants and children who follow a vegetarian diet are at risk of developing nutritional deficiencies because of their rapid rate of growth. Here, too, however, a carefully planned diet plus appropriate supplements can meet their nutritional needs.

Midland not affected by state redistricting efforts

By Ken Ortolon
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The senatorial district represented by Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson probably will not have to undergo major alterations during this year's redistricting effort according to census statistics released recently by the Senate redistricting committee.

According to the data released by the Senate Committee of the Whole, which is handling the redistricting effort, Snelson's District 25 experienced a 23.3 percent population growth from 367,975 in 1970 to 453,671 in 1980.

That puts the district only 5,309 persons, or 1.2 percent, below the ideal senate district size of 458,980 persons.

The racial composition of District 25, as of 1980, was 3.2 percent black and 28.6 percent Hispanic.

A breakdown of the population changes by counties in the district (with 1970 figures in parenthesis, followed by 1980 figures) includes:

—Bandera, (4,747) 7,084, an increase of 2,337 persons or 49.23 percent.

Rewards in 'behavioral program' not same as 'bribe'

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

Question: I have been told that my 7-year-old son, who is quite a problem, should be put in a "behavioral program." I'm not quite sure what that is. From the description given me, it sounds like you bribe the child to be good by giving him candy and other rewards. If this is how it works, I can't see how that does any good. How does the child ever learn self-control if he is always looking for rewards?

Answer: Behavioral programs are based on learning theory which, simply stated, says that behavior which is rewarded tends to be repeated and learned while behavior which is ignored or punished tends not to be repeated. The principles of behavioral training may be used to train animals or to train people.

A common misconception of a behavioral program is that the reward constitutes a "bribe." In reality, the reward is given following the desired behavior rather than prior to it, as the term "bribe" would suggest. Since ignoring behavior tends to diminish the frequency of that behavior, the idea of not rewarding desired behavior will always tend to decrease its occurrence, thereby making less desirable behavior more likely.

Rewards can consist of anything pleasing to the person or animal being trained. The most basic of rewards is pleasant food or drink. This type of reward is used most extensively in animal training or in working with severely handicapped individuals. Other kinds of rewards are more social or symbolic in nature and may be as simple as a word of praise, a smile, or an approving glance. It is easy to see that all of us are constantly rewarding, ignoring or punishing the behavior which we encounter in others. It is impossible not to do one of these three alternatives, so, depending on which one we engage in, we are using a behavioral technique.

A formal behavioral program for an individual identifies desired behaviors, undesired behaviors, rewards and punishments. Sometimes desired behaviors must be broken into smaller steps or units of behavior to be learned. Sometimes undesired behaviors are diminished not by ignoring or punishing, but by teaching another behavior which is incompatible with the undesired behavior. An example of this is that frowning may be decreased by rewarding smiling.

With enough repetition, the learned behavior does become part of oneself and not dependent on the outside reward. Of course, behavior problems in children are very complex phenomena involving many possible combinations of reward, punishment or being ignored. To be successful, a behavioral program needs to be enforced in all aspects of the person's life — home, school, playground, etc. Inconsistency in delivering rewards and punishments is the largest single factor in the failure of behavioral programs to achieve the desired result.

Handicapped program bill OK'd

Austin Bureau

AUSITN — The Texas Senate Monday gave final approval to a bill by Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson that establishes a statewide system of early childhood intervention programs for handicapped children.

The Senate passed Snelson's Senate Bill 630 without opposition, with Snelson telling senators the bill will close a gap that exists in services of developmentally delayed children under three years of age.

Currently, early childhood intervention services for children under three years of age are divided between the Texas Education Agency and the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, and are not coordinated with programs offered by private organizations.

Also, funding for such programs is scattered through several state agencies and local governments.

SB 630 would establish a statewide system of early childhood intervention services of developmentally delayed children under the age of three, create an interagency council to develop and implement a state plan for such services and would include children under the age of 21 in the Education for the Visually Handicapped plan and the Regional Day Schools for the Deaf program.

New clue found for mystery of diabetes, obesity

ATLANTA (AP) — University of Colorado researchers have proposed a new explanation for one of the mysteries of diabetes: why some sufferers of the disease don't respond to the insulin their bodies manufacture.

The discovery may help clarify the nature of a key metabolic defect that afflicts both diabetics and people who are grossly overweight, said Dr. Jerrold Olefsky, the head of the research group.

"This may point to new approaches to therapy" for both conditions, he said in an interview Monday night. But so far, investigators haven't developed a therapy to treat the metabolic defect.

Insulin is the hormone that controls the level of sugar in the blood. Diabetes results when blood sugar levels are persistently too high.

Some diabetics have simply lost the capacity to make insulin. They require daily insulin doses to stay alive.

But the vast majority of the estimated 10 million American diabetics — some 80 percent — fall into a second category of patients who may manufacture enough insulin but whose bodies have lost the ability to respond to it. They are usually treated by diet.

It was this latter group — once called "adult-onset" diabetics but now called Type II diabetics — that were studied at Colorado, Olefsky said.

He presented the research Monday to the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology. More than 10,000 scientists are attending the meeting, which ends Friday.

Olefsky, Orville Kolterman, John Scarlett and Theodore Ciaraldi of the School of Medicine in Denver set out to find the metabolic defect that underlies this lack of response to insulin, which is found both in some diabetics and in very fat people.

Most scientists believed the defect lay in the surface "receptors" for insulin found on most cells of the body. These receptors latch onto the insulin molecule and drag it into the cell, setting off a chemical chain reaction that leads to the cell removing sugar from the blood.

It's well known that constant exposure to high levels of insulin decreases the number of insulin receptors, Olefsky said. The receptors literally are used up faster than they can be replaced.

Since obese people and Type II diabetics commonly have high insulin levels, he said, this seemed a likely explanation for the lack of response to insulin. Very fat people have high insulin levels in part because they eat more and have more sugar to handle.

Instead, the Colorado researchers found that a more profound reason for the unresponsiveness was blockage of a second kind of cell receptor, the "glucose transport protein."

Keeper of the fort wants a cannon in every gun port

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Charlie Hawkins' goal is to have 126 cannons in his Civil War fortress.

He currently has seven in the huge brick fort constructed by Army engineers in 1853-61 to prevent a hostile fleet from entering San Francisco Bay.

Hawkins would like to have a cannon in each of the fort's 126 gun ports.

"But I'm not holding my breath," said Hawkins, 64, curator of the National Park Service's Ft. Point Historic Site beneath the Golden Gate Bridge.

Almost all of the original cannons in the fort were scrapped years ago. None was ever fired in anger from Fort Point because no enemy ship ever tried to make it through the harbor entrance.

Hawkins would like to show off his seven cannons by firing hot shots — cannon balls heated red hot in the old days to set ships on fire.

"But it isn't safe to fire the heavy artillery hot or cold under the Golden Gate Bridge," the keeper of the fort said.

Fort Point is a popular spot for San Franciscans and visitors to the area. It is the only brick fort west of the Mississippi, one of 30 of its kind constructed in America prior to the Civil War.

Hawkins and a dozen National Park rangers dress in Union Army uniforms while conducting tours of the 120-year-old fort.

Half the rangers are women like Jo Ann Jeong, 27, lifelong resident of San Francisco's Chinatown.

"Sometimes we're asked why we wear the uniforms when women did not serve in the Army during the Civil War," Jeong said.

"Actually a number of women disguised themselves in both the Union and Confederate armies," she explained.

"In the rush to process men sometimes the recruiters failed to give inductees a physical exam and the women slipped in. One woman, Loretta Velazquez, called herself Lt. Harry Buford, headed a cavalry unit and was twice wounded in action.

"Many of the women were discovered when they were wounded or killed on the battlefield. Historians say as many as 400 women were in the Union Army alone.

"So I'm not in disguise," Jeong said with a big grin.

The oldest cannon in the fort was made in 1674 in Peru and was one of 13 cannons in a Spanish fort that preceded Fort Point on the bluff overlooking the entrance to San Francisco Bay.

The Fort was designed to house 600 soldiers. Within the structure were quarters for the troops, powder magazines, storerooms, kitchen, mess hall, hospital and jail.

For Hawkins, being curator of Fort Point is a dream come true.

It was while he was a sergeant and public information officer at the Presidio in 1958 that he became fascinated with the Civil War fort which was being used for army storage and was closed to the public.

Hawkins was a founding member of Fort Point Museum association, an organization established to preserve and restore the old structure.

The group leased the fort from the federal government for $1 a year and hired Hawkins, who had retired from the Army, as its only employee.

The Fort Point Museum Association continued to operate the fort after it was designated a national historic site by Congress and President Nixon in 1970.

When the National Park Service took over the fort in 1977 Hawkins continued as curator. He has been its caretaker for 23 years — first for the Army, then the museum association, and now for the National Park Service.

"I love the old place," Hawkins said.

New England takes part in wine business

PRUDENCE ISLAND, R.I. (AP) — Bill Bacon was driving his rattling van between the fields of Chardonnay and Beaujolais grapes when he pointed to a sparrow hawk perched in a cedar tree.

"We're lucky to have that family of sparrow hawks," said Bacon, 63, who carved Rhode Island's first successful vinifera vineyard out of a hard-scrabble island farm in his wife's family for eight generations.

"I've seen that sparrow hawk stand off a whole flock of starlings trying to get at those grapes," Bacon said.

Bacon's Prudence Island Winery is part of an increasing effort in New England to challenge California and France in growing the vinifera grapes which produce the Burgundy and Bordeaux wines favored by connoisseurs.

Given the inherent problems of New England's demanding weather and learning from scratch the complex process that produces a good wine, the sparrow hawks have been a big help to Bacon.

"There are so many damn factors that go into making wine — the weather, the soil, how quickly the grapes were picked, the yeast — and then in the end it is all so subjective," Bacon says.

"One thing I'm sure of. I've got a job seven days a week for the rest of my life."

Efforts to grow in New England the grapes which produce the great wines of France go back to the Pilgrims. In 1643, Gov. John Winthrop tried to grow vinifera grapes on Governor's Island in Boston Harbor, but they were killed by fungus and root lice.

Until recently, it was thought the only place in the United States the vines could thrive was California. But Russian immigrant Dr. Konstantine Frank proved that notion wrong by growing vinifera grapes in the Finger Lakes region of upstate New York.

Since then, nine wineries have sprouted in New England and more than 225 exist in 28 states outside California. The biggest producer of grape wines in New England is Jim and Lolly Mitchell's Sakonnet Vineyards in Little Compton, R.I.

After searching the country for the proper soil and climate, they bought a potato farm within sight of the ocean which they say nearly duplicates the soil and climate of Burgundy and Bordeaux.

Bacon, a former systems engineer for Timex watches, is slowly building his winery with money from outside jobs like digging septic tanks for summer residents of Prudence Island, and still depends on sales of vine grafts and grapes while he works on wine production.

But the Mitchells jumped into the operation with both feet.

"We thought it would be more prudent to have a mixed planting of hybrids, which we were almost certain could succeed, and the vinifera, which make the fine wines but have yet to prove economically viable in this region over the long haul," said Mitchell.

Mitchell got his first taste of making wine in Libya during the 1970s while working as an Arthur D. Little oil consultant to the Libyan government.

Mike Dunleavy (10) of the Houston Rockets and James Silas (13) of the San Antonio Spurs battle for possession of the ball in this action from their western conference NBA playoff game at San Antonio Tuesday night.

Houston needs just one more win

HOUSTON (AP) — The late-blooming Houston Rockets, who surprised the world champion Los Angeles Lakers earlier in the National Basketball Association playoffs, need just one more victory to deal the same fate to the Midwest Division-champion San Antonio Spurs.

The Rockets, who powered to a 123-117 win over the Spurs in San Antonio to take a 3-2 series edge Tuesday night, can wrap up the Western Conference semifinal series with a victory tonight.

"It all boils down to one game," San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck said after watching feisty Calvin Murphy bomb his team for 36 points from the outside while super center Moses Malone hit 34 points and grabbed 13 rebounds.

"As I've been saying, the home court means nothing in the series," Albeck said. "It's vital now we go to Houston and return the favor."

Tuesday night, Murphy came off the bench and connected on 16 of 23 shots, most of them from long range, while Malone muscled his way for eight goals and hit 18 of 20 free throws.

REFEREES DARRELL Garetson and Hugh Evans awarded 84 free throws in the physical contest and the Rockets made 37 of their 43 foul shots. But the Spurs managed only 29 of 41 free throws, causing Albeck to remark, "our free-throw shooting was atrocious."

Malone, who complained Sunday that he was taken out of the game for 8 minutes, played all 48 minutes Tuesday night and had the stamina to score 10 of Houston's last 15 points to stave off a furious rally by the Spurs.

Houston led by 14 points early in the final period, but San Antonio cut the margin to a point twice in the last 4 minutes with George Gervin, who had only one basket in the first half, scoring 15 of his 23 points.

San Antonio started fast behind a 14-point first-quarter outburst from Reggie Johnson, who led his team with 25 points, and twice led by eight points.

Rain washes out Cub game with Dodgers

A steady rain washed out the final game of the San Antonio-Midland Texas League series at Cubs Stadium Tuesday night and the contest will be made up as part of a doubleheader later in the season.

Midland begins a 10-game road trip at Amarillo tonight and winds up at El Paso. Randy Clark is slated to make his mound debut in the Panhandle contest. San Antonio, which opened on the road, spends five more days living out of a motel room at El Paso before returning to the Mission City for their home opener.

Despite a 34-8 win Sunday, San Antonio could do no better than a split with Midland in the two-game series. The Cubs return home April 25 to begin a 10-game stand against

Fisk makes Milwaukee blue

By The Associated Press

Carlton Fisk has changed the colors of his Sox from Red to White, but he's still making the Milwaukee Brewers blue.

The veteran catcher, who became a free agent when the Boston Red Sox were late mailing him a contract and subsequently signed a long-term deal with the Chicago White Sox, has hit 21 of his 164 career home runs against the Brewers.

THE LATEST was a grand slam that highlighted a six-run fourth inning and powered the White Sox to a 9-3 victory Tuesday before a record opening-day crowd of 51,560 at Chicago's Comiskey Park. Last week, Fisk belted a three-run homer to help defeat his former Boston teammates in the season opener.

"I never try to top anything," Fisk said. "All home runs are special, but this one had to be extra special because it came in the home opener before a big crowd and put the game out of reach."

Elsewhere in the American League, the unbeaten Oakland A's made it six in a row by blanking the California Angels 5-0, the Detroit Tigers edged the Kansas City Royals 6-5, the Minnesota Twins nipped the Seattle Mariners 5-4 for their first victory of the season and the Cleveland Indians trimmed the Texas Rangers 7-1. Baltimore and Boston were rained out, while New York and Toronto had the day off.

THE BENEFICIARY of Fisk's homer, as well as his expertise with the mask and mitt, was lefty Ross Baumgarten, who won only twice in 14 decisions last season as the White Sox scored only 25 runs while he was on the mound.

Baumgarten was ecstatic, even though he failed to finish when Gorman Thomas hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning after Don Money hit a solo shot in the fifth.

"Getting a lead like that was great," he said. "And Fisk is just great behind the plate. He gets you to move the ball around and not get into a rut. He makes you change speeds, change pitches and concentrate."

Fisk hit his grand slam off loser Pete Vuckovich just after the right-hander "made me look silly on a breaking ball." Catcher Ted Simmons said he "called for a fast ball on Fisk because I thought we could get him out. But he hit a good pitch, and when he hit it I knew it was gone."

A's 5, Angels 2
Mike Norris hurled a four-hitter and Tony Armas delivered the key hit in a three-run sixth inning. The A's snapped a scoreless tie when Dwayne Murphy, Cliff Johnson and Armas opened the sixth with consecutive singles off Geoff Zahn. The other two runs scored on grounders and Johnson delivered a two-run single in the ninth.

Norris recorded his second straight complete-game victory although he was in constant difficulty by issuing eight walks. But Norris also struck out six and the Angels didn't get a runner past second until the ninth, when they scored on sacrifice flies by Bobby Grich and Rod Carew.

Tigers 6, Royals 5

Lou Whitaker doubled with two out in the ninth off Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry and scored the winning run on a single by Rick Peters to spoil the Royals' home opener. The Royals had tied the score with three runs in the bottom of the eighth. Al Cowens and John Wockenfuss drove in two runs apiece for Detroit and every starter hit safely. Wockenfuss hit a solo homer in the fourth inning and added an RBI single in the Tigers' three-run sixth. Cowens followed with a two-run double.

Twins 5, Mariners 4

Ron Jackson homered twice and Roy Smalley hit another as Minnesota broke a string of 26 scoreless innings in recording its first victory of the season. Jackson slammed Seattle starter Glenn Abbott's first pitch of the fifth inning into the left-field bleachers for the Twins first home run of the season. He homered again in the seventh after Smalley connected in the sixth. Julio Cruz and Jim back to first on a pick-off attempt by the Atlanta pitcher Bob Walk during Monday's game.

Indians 7, Rangers 1

Toby Harrah's wind-blown pop fly triple in the first inning keyed a two-out, four-run rally and Cleveland spoiled the Rangers' home opener as Rick Waits scattered 10 hits. Loser Jon Matlack walked Mike Hargrove with two out in the first inning and Joe Charboneau singled. Harrah then lofted a short fly to right which dropped just under diving Johnny Grubb's glove and rolled to the wall, scoring Hargrove and Charboneau. Jorge Orta followed with a double to score Harrah and Bo Diaz singled to score Orta.

He just pitches like Koufax

Outside of throwing from the left side, Fernando Valenzuela bears little physical resemblance to Sandy Koufax.

A chunky version of the great Dodger southpaw, Valenzuela has started out on the right foot this season with strong showings in his first two starts — including Tuesday night's 7-1 decision over the San Francisco Giants.

VALENZUELA, WHO pitched a five-hit shutout against Houston on opening day, gave up but four hits and struck out 10 in his second start. The run he gave up against the Giants was the only earned run against him in 352-3 innings of major-league pitching and 70 straight innings dating back to Class AA ball last summer.

IN THE only other NL game, the Houston Astros routed the Atlanta Braves 8-2. Two games were rained out — Chicago at Montreal and St. Louis at New York.

Valenzuela, a 20-year-old from Mexico, extended his streak of scoreless innings to 32 before giving up the Giants' run with two outs in the eighth on a double by Larry Herndon and a single by Enos Cabell.

Ron Cey drove in the Dodgers' first run against San Francisco left-hander Vida Blue with a sacrifice fly in the fourth inning. Yeager opened the seventh with his first homer of the year, and Cey delivered a two-run double in the eighth for the Dodgers, who are off to a 5-0 start this season.

Reds 4, Padres 0

Pitching in his first start of the season, Berenyi was in command throughout while allowing just one Padre to reach second base. Loser John Curtis lasted only three innings and was tagged for four runs on four hits, including a two-run double by Dave Concepcion.

Astros 8, Braves 2

Joe Niekro scattered seven hits and drove in two runs with a fifth-inning single to lead Houston over Atlanta for the Astros' first victory this season after four losses.

The Astros, who had scored only seven runs in their four games prior to Tuesday night's 13-hit assault, also got a solo homer from Terry Puhl.

Pacific Coast League obviously airline league

SEATTLE (AP) — With franchises under two flags, six states and two provinces, the Pacific Coast League is obviously an airline league — during the course of a season, it uses up lots and lots of airline fuel.

Hawaii has one PCL franchise and two clubs are in Canada — a new one in Edmonton, Alberta, and an old one in Vancouver, British Columbia.

There's a team in Tacoma, just 28 freeway miles from Seattle and the American League Mariners, and there's another in Spokane. That takes care of Washington state.

In Arizona, there are franchises in Phoenix and Tucson. Albuquerque, N.M., has a team as does Portland, Ore., and Salt Lake City.

In these days when energy costs are threatening to go out of sight, minor league baseball that is based on airline travel would seem to be threatened.

At least on the surface. But the PCL is alive and well — and gaining momentum, says president Bill Cutler, 60.

"I think we're probably in the best shape we've been in for several years," Cutler said in a telephone interview from his Tempe, Ariz., headquarters.

TED BATTLES

It happens every year at Cubs Stadium

It happens every year. The flirtation with the musty pages of history and national infamy at Cubs Stadium, the Ebbets Field of the Texas League, where anything can happen and frequently does.

What transpires on these smoothly manicured grounds frequently causes a nation to wake up the next morning and smirk "Did that really happen?" or snort cynically, "It's too early in the morning for jokes."

IT CAN be something out of Believe It or Not, like the night the second game of a doubleheader was called because of "Grasshoppers", or was it "Locusts"? It was locusts, if memory serves, back in the 1950s.

Or it can be something mundane like Tom Brunansky's four home runs for El Paso last year.

Probably Cubs Stadium began acquiring its reputation for the bizarre back in 1972 when Ernie

Gallagher, a little umpire with a big temper, cleared some players out of the visiting dugout in the late innings and feelings ran higher than most realized. As soon as the game was over, Gallagher sprinted across the diamond, intent on carrying on the argument with the offending player on a bit more physical basis.

Out of the Midland dugout came Cubs Coach Jim Duffalo to make a flying tackle on Ernie and probably save his umpiring life. This spring in Mesa, Ariz., Jim was told the rest of the story, about how Ernie was shot and killed a couple of winters ago in a tavern argument. Jim, who hadn't heard, shook his head, "I wasn't around to save his life a second time."

AND THEN there was Monday night, San Antonio's 34-8 flogging of the Midland Cubs in full view of women and children. It wasn't a pretty sight to behold. No one wanted to sit through it, but Tuesday that's all anybody was talking about. "Hey, I saw that score and figured it was a mistake."

It was a game in which Midland Cubs third baseman Carmello Martinez made five errors in one game.

"What's the Texas League record. They must both be records, 34-8 and five errors..."

The last edition of the Texas League record book came out in 1972 and covers phenomenal feats and sins since 1888 and unless something has slipped by unnoticed in the interim, we find it our sad duty to report both records escaped Cubs Stadium.

If you think 34-8 was bad, how do you think Texarkana felt back on June 15, 1902 after Corsicana finished with them. It was 51-3. We have no proof, but we think that's how Texarkana got its name. Humiliated, they wanted to secede from Texas, but couldn't muster enough votes, so there was a compromise.

CORSICANA not only banged out a league-record 58 hits, but Nig Clark hit eight homers and three players went 8-for-8.

But if there hadn't been a law against Sunday baseball in Corsicana at the time, it probably never would have happened. Because of the Blue Law, the game was moved to Ennis, which had a very small ball park. In fact, an ugly rumor just started here claims the Ennis Little League is using the field unaltered today.

There's no doubt about the final score, but George Moreland, a one-time American League statistician, challenged Clark's eight-homer feat, claiming a box score of the game in the Dallas News showed Clark hitting 3 homers. In defense of the record, it's pointed out that the 3 and 8 resemble one another and any conscientious proof-reader would have changed an 8 to a 3. After all, eight home runs in one game...in those days...no way.

However, the game's official scorer, officials of the Corsicana club and even players have sworn under oath that it happened that way.

INCIDENTALLY, Corsicana's win was the ninth in a 27-game streak.

That sigh of relief heard in the background is from Carmello Martinez, who would just as soon forego a lasting niche in the Texas League record book. His five errors is two short of the seven committed by Dallas third baseman J.J. Maloney on April 18, 1899.

Despite the nightmarish performance, Manager Roy Hartsfield hasn't lost faith in his 20-year-old third baseman from Dorado, P.R., in his third year of pro ball. "I think he has put a lot of pressure on himself and sometimes when something like that gets started, it just snowballs. I think it's good that we are going on the road. He can settle down and be himself."

OF COURSE, the existing records are more than half a century old, but even in a modern era game, Midland-San Antonio can't eclipse Albuquerque's 21-18 win over El Paso at El Paso Sept. 7, 1970. Del Crandall, a catcher by trade, was the winning pitcher and the teams rattled the fences for 50 hits. Last season, Midland-San Antonio came close on opening night as the Dodgers beat the Cubs 17-15.

Alas, the 34-8 margin could be the most lopsided score in the modern era. The 26-run difference eclipses a 22-0 Midland win over El Paso at Cubs Stadium Aug. 24, 1979, which somehow seems to be a more appropriate side of the score to be on in these record-breaking bids.

Rain slows heated race

Rain has slowed the heated District 5-5A baseball race to a crawl and for the second day in a row, Midland High and Midland Lee were unable to end their first half schedule against each other.

Midland High coach Tim Whalen said today that he did not know when the MHS-Lee game would take place now, "I don't know when we will get this one in. We are scheduled to play Odessa Permian at Memorial Stadium diamond Thursday, but it looks like we will need some industrial strength wind and sun for that game to take place. My field is under water."

At press time no decision had been made when the MHS-Lee game would be played, but Whalen said Thursday's game was still on until a decision could be made.

All 5-5A games were rained out Tuesday with Abilene Cooper needing a victory over Abilene High for the first half championship. An AHS victory, however, could leave the loop will leave the first half in a deadlock and Midland Lee has a chance to join in that.

But right now, the second half games may start before the first half ends.

His mother, Our Sharo, who may have been born Zelda Fink, raced at Caliente, but banked at Wells Fargo. Her lifetime deposits never came to $1000.

And the four foals she dropped prior to Johnlee N' Harold, who, at the passport office, may list his mother's maiden name as Yetta Fagioli, earned a combined $6775.

Given a lip tattoo at birth, Johnlee N' Harold has never tried to pass as Spectacular Bid, but, from a humble start, believed to be the product of a $200 stud fee, he has risen admirably in the horse universe.

He has been nominated, in fact, for the Triple Crown -- races which Harold Smith doesn't want to miss. Harold never before has been photographed in the winner's circle at Churchill Downs. Like most tracks, it affords check cashing privileges for those with established credit.

Not surprisingly, the question is raised whether Johnlee N' Harold is bred for the Derby distance. On breeding alone, he would show aptitude for nothing beyond the first turn.

His bloodlines, in fact, would indicate a problem merely coming out of the gate.

But many appraising Johnlee N' Harold never reckoned with his heart, which has been big enough for this gray to have won $117,200.

Derby contender has his troubles

By MELVIN DURSLAG
Hearst Special News Service
 ARCARDIA, Calif. — It first must be established that Johnlee N' Harold, a contender in the Kentucky Derby, was named for Harold Smith, his wife, Lee, and his son, John.

The only problem is, it now develops that Harold Smith is Ross Eugene Fields and his bride, posing as Barbara Newman Smith -- nicknamed Leo -- is Alice Vicki Darrow.

Then son, age 4, has been Johnnie N' Harold, but the horse, Johnlee N' Harold, started out under the nom de cours Cow Buyer.

No evidence exists that Cow Buyer passed bad checks, leading to his name change. When he was purchased for $32,000 by a business associate of Harold Smith, named Michael I. Blake, he was to become known as Johnlee N' Harold.

Blake worked for that giant of American industry, Muhammad Ali Professional Sports, but now lists his occupation as horse player, an honorable calling.

The day Johnlee N' Harold, winner of three in a row, rolled home in the $75,000 California Breeders Handicap at Santa Anita, Harold Smith was photographed with the revelers in the winner's circle. That was a break for sheriffs looking for him in as many as 31 states.

Contract offer is matched by Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler Executive Vice President Ladd Herzog said Tuesday the Oilers have matched a contract offer from another National Football League team for the services of free agent guard Bob Young.

Young, a key offensive lineman for the Oilers last season, played out his option and sought offers from other NFL teams. If no other team makes an offer for Young Wednesday, the 16-year veteran will remain with the Oilers.

Young, a native of Brownwood, attended Southwest Texas State and Howard Payne universities and participated in the Pro Bowl following the 1978 and 1979 seasons.

"The Oilers have exercised their right of first refusal in accordance with the terms of the collective bargaining agreement and have agreed to match the terms of the other club's offer," Herzog said.

Derby contender has his troubles

By MELVIN DURSLAG

 ARCARDIA, Calif. — It first must be established that Johnlee N' Harold, a contender in the Kentucky Derby, was named for Harold Smith, his wife, Lee, and his son, John.

The only problem is, it now develops that Harold Smith is Ross Eugene Fields and his bride, posing as Barbara Newman Smith -- nicknamed Leo -- is Alice Vicki Darrow.

Then son, age 4, has been Johnnie N' Harold, but the horse, Johnlee N' Harold, started out under the nom de cours Cow Buyer.

No evidence exists that Cow Buyer passed bad checks, leading to his name change. When he was purchased for $32,000 by a business associate of Harold Smith, named Michael I. Blake, he was to become known as Johnlee N' Harold.

Blake worked for that giant of American industry, Muhammad Ali Professional Sports, but now lists his occupation as horse player, an honorable calling.

The day Johnlee N' Harold, winner of three in a row, rolled home in the $75,000 California Breeders Handicap at Santa Anita, Harold Smith was photographed with the revelers in the winner's circle. That was a break for sheriffs looking for him in as many as 31 states.

Contract offer is matched by Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler Executive Vice President Ladd Herzog said Tuesday the Oilers have matched a contract offer from another National Football League team for the services of free agent guard Bob Young.

Young, a key offensive lineman for the Oilers last season, played out his option and sought offers from other NFL teams. If no other team makes an offer for Young Wednesday, the 16-year veteran will remain with the Oilers.

Young, a native of Brownwood, attended Southwest Texas State and Howard Payne universities and participated in the Pro Bowl following the 1978 and 1979 seasons.

"The Oilers have exercised their right of first refusal in accordance with the terms of the collective bargaining agreement and have agreed to match the terms of the other club's offer," Herzog said.

Big dream of Olympics causes Walker to delay

ATLANTA (AP) — Hopes of becoming an Olympic sprinter are keeping Herschel Walker, Georgia's All-America running back, from signing with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, according to team owner Nelson Skalbania.

Skalbania was quoted in The Atlanta Constitution on Tuesday as saying team officials met twice last week with Georgia's freshman sensation. But the team owner said he could not make the trip to Georgia himself because of business conflicts.

SKALBANIA WAS quoted Monday by the Calgary Sun as saying that no progress had been made in the talks with Walker, but that money was not the roadblock. Rather, he said, it was Walker's determination to do nothing that would disqualify him from competing in the 1984 Olympics as a sprinter.

"Our problem has nothing to do with dollars," the Alouettes owner was quoted as saying. "If he earns his money as a mailman, he can compete in the Olympics. In football, I don't know if he can. If it's true he can't, then it's highly unlikely he'll come to Canada."

Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley said he had no knowledge of either meeting last week with Alouettes officials, adding that he talked to Walker last Friday and "I just reminded him of NCAA rules" regarding talking to professional teams.

THE NCAA allows an athlete to compete professionally in one sport and remain eligible as an amateur in another, but there is no such provision under Olympic rules.

That issue arose in the celebrated case of Olympic sprinter Jim Thorpe, who was stripped of his medals when it was learned that he had played semiprofessional baseball.

In any case, Skalbania said there would be a big adjustment for Walker if he moves to Canada.

"The thing is, he's an absolute god down there," Skalbania said. "And it would be an enormous adjustment for him to leave down there and come to Canada. As far as I know, no progress has been made."

St. Louis struggles past Penguins, 4-3

By The Associated Press

If the St. Louis Blues don't ever see another penguin, it will be too soon.

The Blues, heavy favorites to win their best-of-five preliminary round series with the lowly Pittsburgh Penguins, were extended to the limit Tuesday night before surviving to continue their chase of the National Hockey League championship. St. Louis' Mike Crombeen, who had been on the bench since midway through the game, scored at 5:16 of the second overtime to boost the Blues over the Penguins 4-3.

In Tuesday's only other playoff action, the Philadelphia Flyers topped the Quebec Nordiques 5-2 to win that series.

THOSE RESULTS set up the following best-of-seven quarterfinal matchups, beginning Thursday:

Edmonton at the New York Islanders; Calgary at Philadelphia; the New York Rangers at St. Louis, and Minnesota at Buffalo.

St. Louis finished second in NHL standings to Pittsburgh's 15th but the Blues were severely tested by the gutsy Penguins. In fact, if not for All-Star goaltender Mike Liut, the Blues would be sitting on the sidelines right now.

Liut and his Pittsburgh counterpart, Greg Millen, were phenomenal Tuesday, especially in overtime. Each team had 13 shots on goal in the first OT period, with Liut making wondrous saves on shots by Mark Johnson, Rick Kehoe and Peter Lee. And Millen was equally excellent, stopping Jack Brownshilde, Brian Sutter and Rick LaPointe.

"I just came out and happened to be at the right spot," said Crombeen, who played only four shifts in regulation. "For a game that had been so physical, I guess that most of the guys were kind of tired. At least I prayed that they were, anyway."

"I didn't want to look up at the net for fear it would throw me off my stride."

MIKE ZUKE found Crombeen all alone in front of Millen when both Pittsburgh defensemen went to the corner after the puck. His shot was partially deflected by Millen but not enough to stop it from trickling in to give St. Louis its first playoff series triumph since 1972.

"I just wish St. Louis could go all the way," said Millen, who like Liut made 48 saves. "I'd like to see them win it all."

"The people of Pittsburgh should be very proud of this hockey club," said Penguins Coach Eddie Johnston. "I really felt we should have won it. We got a great effort."

The Flyers also put forth a great effort, outshooting the Nordiques 37-18 and putting the game away with three goals in the 5:07 of the third period.

Ken Linseman started the onslaught on a 2-on-1 break at 18 seconds, then Paul Holmgren connected at 2:38. Brian Propp closed it out and Philadelphia coasted into the second round.

"They scared the heck out of us," said Philadelphia Coach Pat Quinn. "For four games, it looked frustrating, like Montreal being beaten by Edmonton."

THE QUARTERFINALS will continue Friday in the cities where they begin before switching sites for Games 3 and 4 on Sunday and Monday, respectively. If necessary, the fifth, sixth and seventh games will be held April 22, 24 and 26, respectively.

The Blues swept four regular-season games from the Rangers. But the Rangers are fresh after resting since Sunday, while the Blues are bound to be tired.

"Everybody is a team player on St. Louis," said the Rangers' Dean Tala. "Each player knows his limitations and plays within his ability. They don't have three or four guys you can key on."

The Flyers and Flames split their four games in regular season. Calgary ended up with 92 points, five less than Philadelphia.

"I don't think we have to worry about anyone losing his emotional self-confidence," said Flames Coach Al MacNeil, whose team advanced with a three-game sweep of Chicago. "We came up with a sharp effort in the Chicago series and we all realize it'll take the same kind of effort in the next series."

Kush says he had no animosity toward player

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — An attitude problem caused by an inability to "adjust psychologically to college football" was the reason Kevin Rutledge didn't succeed as a player at Arizona State University, according to ex-Sun Devil Coach Frank Kush.

But Kush testified Tuesday that he "had no personal animosity" toward Rutledge and "definitely did not" run him off the team.

"Kevin was very young. He had ability. He had potential," Kush said. "I didn't use him (in the final four regular season games in 1978) because I didn't feel that he was doing the job."

"In the spring of 1979, I had a talk with him about changing his attitude. He was very lackadaisical. He had no desire. He would not participate in drills and he would not take the direction of his coaches on kicking techniques."

"But we had a scholarship available for him (in 1979)," Kush said. "We assumed he was coming back."

The 21-year-old Rutledge, who transferred to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, is suing Kush and others for $2.2 million in damages. He claims Kush and ex-Arizona State assistant coach Bill Maskill harassed him into quitting the squad in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

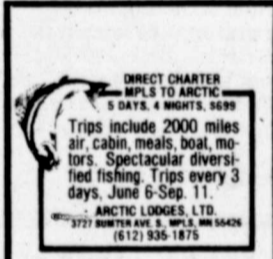

"That's ridiculous," Kush testified. "If they depart, they do give it (the scholarship) up. But they are not forced to by any means."

Kush also defended his collegiate coaching methods to the 11-member Maricopa County Superior Court jury, claiming he "made practices more difficult than games to eliminate the fear factor and cut down on injuries."

He said his "hamburger drills," in which he forced players "to repeat drills over and over until they get them right," was designed "so that injuries were almost nil."

"They must do the fundamentals properly. And if a player is not in top condition, that's where they're going to get hurt," said Kush. "Football is a difficult game to practice. It's like boxing. You're by yourself. Nobody's going to help you. You have to defend yourself and the only way to do that is to be physically and mentally prepared."

United States tumbles to 'B' pool in hockey

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — The Sweden national hockey team, quicker than expected, defeated the United States 4-2 in a rough ice hockey match Tuesday night and reached the finals of the "A" pool competition at the World Ice Hockey Championships.

The defeat sent the United States into the "B" Pool with two defeats in two games.

The Americans twice came from behind to tie the score, but penalties and sloppy defensive play cost them the game.

At one point in the third period, three Americans and two Swedes were in the penalty box.

WEST TEXAS SPORTS Aggies sign Chaparral netter

Texas A&M tennis coach David Kent announced the signing of Midland College's Teresa Landry, the Chaparrals' MVP, to a tennis scholarship. The Plainview High School grad finished as 1980 NJCAA runnerup and Kent, who once coached at Midland High, said she was undefeated this year against junior college and four-year college competition.

"Teresa is very good at keeping the ball in play on the last point and she will add to the consistency and depth of next year's team," assistant coach Joe Cannon said.

Haven wins in Andrews

ANDREWS—Brenda Haven, Midland, competing in the 17-under class, won the one mile race in the Andrews Running and Jogging Club Invitational race here with a time of 5:59. Diana White was second in 7:01 and Rebecca White was third in 7:02. Both are Midlanders.

Francis John, Midland, took third in the 40-49 group with a 6:02 and Richard Kleinhaus, Midland, was second in 30-39 with 5:23. Other Midlanders: Robert Sauvval, 2nd 18-29 in 5:21; J. Fuller, first in 17-under in 5:45. In five mile races: Donna Repman, first, 18-24 division in 31:50; 40-49 Jay Pierson second in 31:45; 30-39 Fred Stricklin first in 28:40; 2. Richard Kleinhaus, 29:43; 3. Rick Ricketts, 29:53.

"We couldn't forecheck as well as we figured. The Swedes were faster than we had thought they would be," said American defenseman Alan Hangleben of the Washington Capitals.

Hangleben also said it would have been easier to play and bodycheck on an North American hockey rink, which is smaller than the European one.

The Americans, who assembled only a few days before the championships, greatly improved on their ragged performance in Sunday's opening game, when the Czechs swamped them 11-2. Ed Walsh replaced Gregg Moffett in goal and made some fine saves in the first period.

But he made a fatal mistake and gave away a goal, dropping a high shot from Roland Stoltz over his shoulder, allowing the Swedes to tie the score 1-1 at 16:02 of the first period.

The United States led 1-0 with 6:25 gone in the game when Bobby Miller lost the puck, regained it and sent a pass to Dave Debol to score for the United States.

The second period went at a furious pace, and tempers started to flare. With the United States playing four men against five, Stig Ostling made it 2-1 for Sweden at 13:41 of the second period. The U.S. team tied it 2-2 with a goal by Warren Miller at 18:17.

At the end of the second period, when America's Reed Larson was serving a penalty for cross checking, both teams swarmed onto the ice.

The referee and linesmen struggled to separate the fighting players. The scene ended with Jim Korn of the United States and Tomas Steen of Sweden being sent to the box.

Sweden finally put the game away in the third period with two goals. Twenty-three seconds into the period, Bengt-Ake Gustafsson of the Washington Capitals made it 3-2 for Sweden on a power play. With 10 minutes left, Craig Norwich lost the puck in front of his goal, and Anders Hakansson scored from the crease for the final margin.

Another melee followed and four men — Warren Miller and Larson of the United States and Stoltz and Peter Helander of Sweden — all drew penalties.

Earlier, Czechoslovakia beat West Germany 6-2 to earn a place in the final round along with the Soviet Union and Canada, who qualified from group A in Stockholm. The final rounds begin Saturday.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers are still waiting on Darryl Dawkins.

Dawkins, the 76ers' flamboyant, inconsistent young center, has had one good game and three bad ones in the National Basketball Association playoff series against the Milwaukee Bucks. The teams are tied 2-2 in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal, which resumes here Wednesday night.

The 6-foot-11½, 260-pound Dawkins, who turned pro straight out of high school and is completing his sixth NBA season at the tender age of 24, scored 23 points in the third game of this hard-fought series and Philadelphia won 108-103. But he got into early foul trouble in the other three games, and as a result his series totals are a very ordinary 12.3 points and 4.5 rebounds in just 24 minutes per game. In addition, he has not had a single assist and has only blocked three shots.

"We've got to get more out of Darryl or we aren't going to win this series," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham says flatly. "He just doesn't seem to do well against the Bucks and I can't figure it out."

"If he keeps going like this, I've got to play Caldwell Jones and Bobby Jones too much," Cunningham added. "We won't be able to last against a team that runs like the Bucks do."

BUCKS CENTER Bob Lanier had 23 points and nine rebounds in Sunday's 109-98 Milwaukee victory which evened the series. He has outplayed Dawkins in every category, averaging 17.5 points, 7.0 rebounds, 4.0 assists and 1.5 blocks in 31.5 minutes per game.

"Friday we were able to stay out of foul trouble the entire game," said Cunningham, referring to Philadelphia's last victory and Dawkins' lone good game. "Sunday, all of our key people had three fouls by the third quarter."

Dawkins fouled out with 4:48 to play, and without him the 76ers did not have anyone to muscle Lanier away from the boards. As a result, Milwaukee was able to run when it wanted to and also score off offensive rebounds.

SO KEEPING Dawkins out of foul trouble and in the game becomes vital to the 76ers' success, especially if they want to use defensive ace Caldwell Jones, a starting forward who doubles as backup center, to try to contain Milwaukee's high-scoring forward, Marques Johnson. But that is easier said than done.

Phoenix tries to stay alive tonight against KC

By The Associated Press PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—The Phoenix Suns, apparently plagued with another case of playoffitis, try to stay alive tonight in the quest for their first National Basketball Association championship. Down three games to one in a best-of-seven playoff series, Phoenix has been pushed to the brink of elimination by the Kansas City Kings in the Western Conference semifinals. "The situation for us is simple now," said Suns Coach John MacLeod. "We must win. And that's all there is to it." KANSAS CITY Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons has the luxury of seeing his team at the other end of the spectrum. "We've won the last three games. The momentum is going our way," he said. "But we don't expect Phoenix to fall down and play dead for us." Guard Dennis Johnson said the Suns' chances for winning the series in seven games "still look good." "If you look at the games we lost, we had a chance to win in the last 45 seconds of each," he said. "But it has seemed we've made a turnover or missed a shot or failed to box out or lost a key rebound when we've needed it. "We can beat them (tonight)," Johnson added. "And we'll have pressure on us Friday (in Game 6) in Kansas City. But if we beat them badly, it might put some pressure on them, too." THE SUNS still appear to be smarting from the after-effects of a 105-68 setback to the Kings at Kemper Arena March 8. It was the most lopsided loss in Phoenix's 13-year NBA history. Kansas City also beat the Suns in Phoenix March 25 — breaking a nine-game winless streak at the Coliseum dating back to December 1976. After dropping the playoff opener April 7 here 102-80, Kansas City rebounded to post its first post-season win over Phoenix at the Coliseum in three years the following night, 88-83.

Soviet treated for back by acupuncture

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet gymnast Elena Mukhina is receiving acupuncture treatments for a severe spinal injury she suffered in a training accident last year, Tass said today. The 1978 all-around world champion is in a Moscow hospital which specializes in treatment of spinal injuries, and will soon be taken to a Crimean spa for further treatment, the Soviet news agency said. Leading Soviet neurosurgeons who operated on her several times are optimistic about her chances of recovery, Tass said. "They say that Mukhina is recovering much faster than other people with similar injuries. She can stay seated for a long time and is allowed to stand up two hours a day," the agency said. Mukhina suffered a paralyzing neck injury last summer when she missed a somersault in floor exercises while competing for a berth on the 1980 Soviet Olympics team.

Profit-loss picture is the key

By The Associated Press

Good management in baseball means a lot more than turning 25 players into a winning unit. With inflation, the rising costs of salaries, transportation and ballpark maintenance, baseball's bottom line is not found only in the standings. It's also the profit-loss picture. Some of the owners say free agency without significant compensation could ruin them. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, warns that the free agent system will place a greater premium on effective, intelligent management in baseball. "Teams will have to be more conscientious about doing their homework," he said. "Mistakes will be more costly." TWO OF the biggest free-agent spenders in baseball have been San Diego and California. Each finished sixth in its division last year. Meanwhile, the New York Yankees have spent millions on free agents who helped them to four division titles in the past five years. Miller was talking specifically about teams acquiring the right free agents. His call for business savvy applies off the field as well.

Fighters not as good now

CINCINNATI (AP)—Carmen Basilio, former welterweight and middleweight champion, believes today's fighters are not as good as those in former years, but adds that it's not their fault. "These days, all you need is 20-25 fights and, if you're any good, you get a title shot. I had to fight a long time — five years and 50 fights — before I had a chance at the title," said Basilio, 54, here Tuesday in a public-relations role for a beer firm. Basilio said there were many more fighters in the post-World War II years than now, all seeking a title fight. "If a kid (today) has any ability and desire, and is willing to work, he can make a lot of money now," Basilio said. "But today it's too easy. Most of the kids today don't want to pay the price. They're not willing to work hard. (Sugar Ray) Leonard looks like a hard worker, and that's why he's the champion," said Basilio, who spent 19 years directing intramural athletics at LeMoyne College in Syracuse, N.Y., not far from his home. Basilio lost his first welterweight title fight with Kid Gavilan in 1953. He fought eight more times in 1954 and had four more bouts in 1955 before he got another title shot, when he knocked out Tony DeMarco. He lost the title in March 1956 to Johnny Saxton but won a rematch the same year to regain the title. Basilio defeated Sugar Ray Robinson in September 1957 to capture the middleweight championship, only to lose it back the following year. Basilio retired in 1961 and went to work at LeMoyne.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is saying that about half the 26 clubs lost money last year, while several long-time owners, including the respected Carpenter family in Philadelphia, are trying to leave the game because of the financial direction it's taking. The financial publication Barrons surveyed the average annual increase of team expenses and revenues from 1970-78. According to the study, gate revenues were up 7.7 percent; broadcast revenues up 7.5 percent; attendance up 4.4 percent, and ticket prices up 4.3 percent. MEANWHILE, INFLATION has soared, and Barrons also found significant increases in expenses over the same period. Salaries, the major team expense, were up 20 percent, player development was up 8 percent and stadium expenses up 14 percent. For the eight-year period, expenses rose at a faster rate than revenues, forcing teams to find new and better ways of making money. The trends continued through 1980. "You have to keep digging for all sorts of new income centers," says Peter Bavasi, president of the Toronto Blue Jays, one of baseball's biggest success stories. Bavasi, 36, grew up in the Dodger organization. When the expansion Blue Jays tapped Bavasi as president, he tried to follow the lessons learned at the knee of his father, Buzzie, and the visionary Dodger owner, Walter O'Malley. THE BLUE Jays, who have finished in last place all four years of their existence, made a "reasonable profit last year," said Bavasi, who believes a ballclub should be run like a small corporation. "We try to operate frugally, dollar in, dollar out," said Bavasi. "My mandate from my owners is to work on a cash basis. Amortization and depreciation (income tax benefits derived by some owners) should not be considered in the day-to-day management of the ballclub. "The opposite philosophy — 'We can write that off' — gets teams in real trouble. Those five words are the worst words in baseball." Under the influence of O'Malley and now his son Peter, the Dodgers operate on a cash basis. They own Dodger Stadium, its concession facilities and parking. They also own their luxurious spring training complex in Vero Beach, Fla., and their own jet. They have averaged a record 3 million fans the past three seasons, yet still raised ticket prices by a dollar twice in the past five years in order to maintain the same profit margin. The team does not say what that profit is, but it is believed to be the healthiest in baseball. THE MILWAUKEE Brewers don't have the benefits of the Los Angeles market, second largest in the nation, nor do they have the capital of the Dodgers. But the Brewers are writing a success story nonetheless. The Braves left Milwaukee for Atlanta in 1965, and the city was written off as a bad baseball town. "They were wrong and I knew it," said Bud Selig, who spearheaded a local syndicate that bought a floundering Seattle club and moved it to Milwaukee. Selig runs his ballclub like the successful car dealership he owns in Milwaukee. "You've got to market your product," he said. "Promoting the team and promoting Ford's are similar. Buy a car this week and whitewalls and AM-FM radio are thrown in. Come to the Wednesday night game and get a Brewers jacket or a 25-cent beer." Selig will not say whether his team has made a profit, but other baseball sources say that it did well financially last year. The Brewers' attendance has risen from 1 million in 1976 to 1.6 million in 1978 and 1.8 million in 1980. Apart from better promotion, part of the reason for the increased attendance is a better team. SELIG GIVES Harry Dalton credit for the on-the-field improvement. "Hiring Harry Dalton as general manager was the best thing I've done," says Selig, who dabbles very little in the team's baseball affairs. "I really believe he's the catalyst for our resurgence." Hand-in-hand with that resurgence has been the Brewers' improved image and performance. They have acquired two significant free agents, Sal Bando and Larry Hise. Milwaukee was not considered the sort of city that could compete with New York, Chicago and Los Angeles for high-priced talent. "It's tough," said Selig. "I don't think anybody understands the strain of operating a club such as ours under the (free agent) rules which now exist. It's a strain, but so far, so good. We've been able to do it, even though our expenses have increased dramatically." ONE BREWER advantage is that Selig negotiated a favorable stadium lease before buying the franchise. He also has no trouble making money from in-stadium beer sales in the city that made the beverage famous. The conservative city of Toronto is another matter entirely. Beer sales are forbidden in Exhibition Stadium, even though Labatt's Breweries is one of the owners of the Blue Jays. Toronto, in fact, is the only suds-free ballpark. Bavasi estimates that the no-beer local law deprives the ballclub of $1.5 million in gross revenues. But Toronto has made up for the lack of beer with a plethora of money-making Blue Jay products. "We're in the food licensing business, our own chain store," Bavasi said. "We sell Blue Jay hot dogs, mustard, peanuts, popcorn, potato chips, granola bars and frozen pizza." The logo of the Blue Jay has been sticking its beak into a lot of areas. As Canadian teams, the Blue Jays and Expos do not operate under baseball's promotional arm, the Major League Baseball Corp. This means the Blue Jays don't have to split their licensing revenue with the 24 American clubs. In the Blue Jays' first two years, some $13 million in team-labeled retail items were sold across Canada. "In Vancouver in our first year, we sold 120,000 caps. And Vancouver is 3,000 miles from Toronto," Bavasi said. THE BLUE Jays split licensing revenues with a distributor and the local merchant. "We get a percentage. It's not a huge amount, but we make more than most clubs," Bavasi said. "Licensing hasn't been as important as an income generator as it is an awareness vehicle. All these sales are walking billboards for the Blue Jays." Bavasi estimates that 70 percent of the team's revenues come from gate receipts. The Blue Jays drew 1.4 million fans last year and Toronto's four-year attendance is better than the first four years for any other expansion team. And in those four years, the Blue Jays' record was 233-413. Bavasi, however, insists that "the fact the club has not performed well has not hindered our ability to sell tickets. The fans in Canada have a history of expansion in hockey, and they know how long it took the Expos (the Montreal baseball team) to build a winner." But being in Canada has forced Blue Jay management to be a little sharper to overcome the negative currency exchange. With the U.S. dollar sagging, it takes $1.20 Canadian to buy a U.S. dollar. "The exchange rate is hurting us," he said. "We pay for our goods, services and salaries in U.S. dollars which we buy with the Canadian dollars we take in as revenue." IF THE club has operational costs of $8 million this year, Bavasi said the Blue Jays would have to generate an additional $1.6 million (for total revenues of $9.6 million in Canadian dollars) to break even.

Baryshnikov, Nureyev together for first time

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov and Rudolf Nureyev, performing together for the first time, was the drawing card for the opening night "gala" of the Paul Taylor Dance Company on Tuesday night.

They didn't dance much — nobody did — because the vehicle was Taylor's 1965 spoof-on-America dance, "From Sea to Shining Sea."

For good measure, Hermione Gingold, Gwen Verdon, Betty Comden and Adolph Green also were in it, with 10 dancers from the company.

"From Sea to Shining Sea" is a dance of "moments" and many were quite amusing, though not all were bright enough to elicit a chuckle.

The Statue of Liberty sits on what seems to be a rock covered with green cloth. But the rock sinks under her, and out from under the cloth, come Nureyev and Baryshnikov. An Uncle Sam points that he "needs them" and the two heroes follow him, entering and exiting with lies down and Nureyev skips around her and Baryshnikov jumps over her legs, all looking as pleased as backyard child stars.

Nureyev, who has the best costumes, slouches around in cap, leather jacket, jeans and red boots. Baryshnikov poses as Washington shakily crossing the Delaware while dancers roll along as the boat. Miss Verdon is Betsy Ross, with a discouraging snag in her thread. Miss Gingold is Mae West. Green and Miss Comden brush their teeth.

twinkling ballet steps. Nureyev wears a costume of such hilarious hayseed proportions it wouldn't be given a scarecrow as wardrobe.

Green, in blue Pilgrim bathrobe, arrives on the shores to be met by Baryshnikov in brown Indian bathrobe and headfeather, doing intricate sign language. Green strangles him.

The season at the City Center will last through May 3. Opening night began with two Taylor dances by the company, "Esplanade," which has an amazingly vigorous last movement, and "Polaris," in which part two repeats the steps of part one, with different music and different dancers. It looks like a totally different dance.

company begins a three week engagement at New York's City Center, with a program to include "From Sea to Shining Sea," "Polaris," and "Esplanade."

Shooting of engineer may be result of labor dispute

PRICE, Utah (AP) — Rewards totaling $20,000 have been offered for information leading to the arrest of a gunman who wounded an employee of the engineering firm designing Utah Power & Light Co.'s Hunter power plant units No. 3 and No. 4.

Authorities said the shooting appeared to be the result of a labor dispute.

William R. Stilson, shot in the shoulder Monday night, was due to be released from the hospital today.

Stilson was one of the intended victims of pipe bombings here last week, and he and other employees of the engineering firm had received letters several employees of the engineering firm to receive threatening letters.

Stilson suffered a wound in his right shoulder when the gunman stepped from a red pickup truck that had flashed its lights at Stilson, an employee of Brown and Root, a Houston firm.

He told officers the man went up to him, said, "Hi, Scab," and shot him.

Stilson was able to drive his car to an all-night convenience store where he found Utah Highway Patrol Trooper Steve Douros, who gave him first aid.

Investigators believe the shooting is related to the pipe bombings Thursday at the residences of Stilson and Phillip Chavez. There were no injuries in the bombings.

Stilson, Chavez and Rick Chenault were among Brown and Root employees to receive letters last week demanding they get off the job site because they were taking union construction jobs, Chenault said.

He said the Brown and Root employees were involved in engineering, and were not doing construction work.

Grant Pendleton, Utah Power and Light spokesman in Salt Lake, also denied the Brown and Root employees did construction.

Utah Power and Light and Brown and Root have each offered $10,000 rewards for information leading to the arrest of the gunman.

Brown and Root has six employees working at the site.

Nicholas Dereta, an agent of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol and Firearms, said the incidents had "the earmarks of a labor dispute," but that the theory has not been confirmed.

He said agents have been at the Hunter plant, "primarily interviewing people and eliminating suspects."

Joe Stevens of Houston, director of employee relations and corporate affairs for Brown and Root, told a news conference Tuesday night, "Brown and Root is not accusing anyone of doing this. It's unfair to dub it as labor violence. That is an assumption people are making."

Bell Young, Brown and Root resident engineer, said about 20 notes, photocopies of an original, arrived at the Hunter plant Thursday afternoon. He said no group or organization was identified as having written the note.

"They asked us to remove ourselves from the job site and promised violence to us and our families if we didn't comply. They made us aware they knew of our residences," he said.

"Elsewhere in the country Brown and Root does engineering and construction, but on this job there should be no problem," Stevens said.

Atlantic City burns, arson ring suspected

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Officials suspect a sophisticated arson ring with links to land speculators may be responsible for a rash of fires in Atlantic City's predominately black and Hispanic South Inlet neighborhood.

Fire officials say the city's crumbling and vacant houses are burning down at an alarming rate and 22 percent more fires have been reported this year than last.

No residents have been hurt so far, but officials say arsonists are laying booby traps for firemen trying to fight blazes in vacant buildings.

Officials recently have reported more than 50 injuries to firefighters, mostly leg wounds caused when unsuspecting firemen slipped through false steps, loosened boards and holes cut into floors.

"Their latest trick is to lay their fires at our change of shifts," Battalion Chief John Brenner said Tuesday. "Another favorite is lighting one fire and then, when we commit ourselves, they set another one. We've had at least a dozen instances of that."

About 40 percent of the fires have occurred in the city's South Inlet neighborhood of about 2,000 residents along the Boardwalk, about five blocks from Resorts International Hotel Casino, Brenner said.

Firefighters have recorded more than 1,050 fire "incidents" so far this year, up 22 percent over the same period in 1980, Brenner said.

Of the 113 fires in occupied buildings this year, about 15-percent were suspicious, Brenner said. All of the 118 fires in vacant buildings were suspicious, Brenner said.

Fires have ravaged the South Inlet's aging three- and four-story frame houses for more than a decade, the most noticeable sign of Atlantic City's decline during the '60s and '70s.

Immediately after New Jersey voters approved casinos in November 1976, outside speculators began gobbling up cheap South Inlet properties to cash in on skyrocketing land prices.

Officials say an ongoing controversy over whether to zone the South Inlet for casinos or keep it residential may be fueling some speculators' desires to burn down the area and ease the way for casino hotels and high-rise apartments.

"One of the areas we're pursuing is the possibility of arson for profit," Brenner said.

"We're amassing a list of homeowners, owners of vacant buildings, people who own vacant lots next door, businesses, Realtors who list vacant buildings, or large-scale speculators — anyone who can profit by having a vacant lot where a house once stood. We're looking for a pattern," Brenner said.

The investigation has turned up few leads, officials say.

Subcommittee will question Othal Brand

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate Nominations Subcommittee will question McAllen Mayor Othal Brand on April 28 about his appointment to the State Prison Board, says subcommittee chairman Peyton McKnight.

Sen. McKnight, D-Tyler, said Tuesday the hearing had been set at the request of Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

Brand was scheduled to appear before the subcommittee April 7, but Uribe asked for a delay to review allegations that Brand had ordered the destruction of videotapes showing city police beating prisoners.

McKnight said Uribe "has since withdrawn his objection to proceeding with the hearing."

Gov. Bill Clements named Brand, 61, to the nine-member Prison Board last month.

Another appointee to the board, Robert Gunn of Wichita Falls, also has been asked to appear on April 28, McKnight said.

Brand and Gunn would have to be confirmed by the full Senate.

Tax revolt leaders indicted on violations

DETROIT (AP) — Two leaders of a highly publicized tax revolt involving thousands of workers in the Pontiac area have been indicted on charges of violating federal tax laws, U.S. Attorney Richard A. Rossman said.

Dean S. Hazel, an organizer of We The People ACT and Lee B. Hall Jr., a coordinator of the group, were indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday for allegedly filing false and fraudulent income tax withholding certificates (Form W-4) with their employer. Both work at General Motors Corp.'s truck and coach plant in Pontiac.

Hall, 47, of Pontiac, also was charged with failure to file tax returns for the years 1978 and 1979.

The indictments apparently were the government's first steps in a long-promised crackdown on the tax protest group.

Hazel, 28, of Drayton Plains, helped form We The People ACT over two years ago. The group now boasts a membership of several thousand in the Flint-Pontiac area. The workers file false forms in an effort to prevent the government from withholding income taxes.

Hazel says the income tax is unconstitutional.

"Even if the income tax was legal," Hazel said recently, "the legal tender issued by the federal government, paper money, is illegal because the constitution prohibits the use of anything but gold and silver coins in the payment of debts."

We The People ACT spokesman Bill Hughes said the indictments were a sign of "selective prosecution" in which tax officials single out leaders of the tax revolt for punishment.

If convicted, Hall and Hazel face up to a year imprisonment and a $500 fine on each of the charges of filing false withholding certificate. In addition, they would be subject to additional civil tax penalties and interest.

Hall also faces up to a year imprisonment and up to a $10,000 fine if convicted on charge of failure to file returns.

No date was set for the men's arraignment before a federal magistrate.

Hazel was delivering a presentation on the tax revolt to a Philadelphia audience and had not been informed of the indictment, Hughes said Tuesday. Hill was reported to be out of town for several weeks.

Women who aided dog bite victim sought

A Midland woman who was aided by two other women after being mauled by a dog last week would like to know who the women are so she can thank them.

"Two Mexican women stopped, tied a towel around my leg and took me to the doctor's office," said Neta Dill of 901 Princeton Ave. "They were so kind. They couldn't have been nicer."

Mrs. Dill said she was walking in the 600 block of Cuthbert Street about 11 a.m. Friday when a Doberman Pinscher came off a nearby porch and attacked her without provocation.

"I started screaming, but there was no one around," she said, adding that the dog suddenly stopped biting her and returned to the porch. Twenty-six stitches were required to close the wounds on her left calf.

A crew in a Bob Boydston Pest Control truck stopped to take Mrs. Dill to the hospital, but the foreign-made pickup was too small to accommodate her. "They were going to take me anyway, then these two women came by and took me," said Mrs. Dill.

"I can't thank those women enough. They even called the doctor's office later to see how I was."

The Boydston crew stayed at the scene and notified authorities. The dog is now under routine rabies observation at the city's Animal Control Shelter. Mrs. Dill has already called the Boydston company and expressed her appreciation for the help they offered.

"But I wish I knew who those women were," she said. "I'd like to thank them, too."

Head shop bill goes to Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislation designed to stamp out "head shops" that sell gadgets and accessories for use with illegal drugs has cleared the Texas House.

Members of the Texas War on Drugs Committee were in the gallery when the bill passed, 135-9, on Tuesday and broke into applause.

The committee, created by Gov. Bill Clements and headed by H. Ross Perot of Dallas, recommended the bill, which imposes jail time and fines for possessing, selling or delivering drug paraphernalia.

Debate on the measure Monday night was emotional and included an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation over what Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, called an insult to his family.

Rep. Frank Eikenburg, R-Plano, said no insult was intended and sent Washington a letter that Washington took as an apology.

"I accept your apology," Washington wrote back. The dispute arose after Washington tried to knock the bill off the calendar with a parliamentary point of order.

Washington said he "probably threatened" to hit Eikenburg, but the two did not make physical contact.

Washington said Eikenburg told him "he hoped my kids would get hooked on dope and be junkies for life."

Eikenburg said he had told Washington, "Let's get off this point of order and get this bill passed because if we don't, your children may get hooked and become junkies for life."

Curriculum reform bill passes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Bill Haley, a former history teacher, has won House passage of a bill eliminating what he calls the "hodge podge" of courses inflicted on the public school curriculum by past legislatures.

A 90-52 vote sent the bill to the Senate. Haley, D-Center, said it would help the "back to basics" movement.

Speaker Bill Clayton spared the House a record vote on a politically touchy subject, creationism vs. the theory of evolution.

On Monday, Clayton gaveled home a voice vote rejecting an amendment by Rep. Mike Martin, R-Longview, to give calls the "creation-science" equal billing whenever the theory of evolution is taught.

Martin brought the amendment up again Tuesday in an attempt to force a record vote.

This time, Clayton sustained a point of order that the amendment did not belong in the bill.

"Though Mr. Martin may have a good amendment, it is not germane," Clayton ruled.

Martin later said Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, would offer the same amendment in the Senate and predicted senators would adopt it. That would force a House vote on the subject if senators passed the bill.

"The Senate's a push-over," said Martin.

Cullen Davis, a "born again" Fort Worth millionaire acquitted of murdering his stepdaughter, sent letters last week to legislators endorsing Martin's proposal.

"As a businessman with many employees throughout the state, I will be most pleased if I can report to my associates in your area that you have affirmed a positive position on these bills," Davis wrote.

Gov. Bill Clements had endorsed such a bill as a step toward strengthening instruction in basics.

Odessan charged in attempted rape

ODESSA — An Ector County man remained in the city jail this morning after being charged Tuesday with the attempted rape of a 9-year-old Odessa girl.

Municipal Judge Otis Moore set bond of $50,000 on 26-year-old Jimmy Hal Haney, who gave officers conflicting addresses.

Police said Haney entered a North

Texas Street residence through a bedroom window about 4:15 a.m. Tuesday and was in the process of assaulting the girl when her 8-year-old sister, who was asleep in the same room, awoke and ran into their parents' room.

The girl's father subdued Haney and held him until police arrived.

Lebanese cabinet meets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Alarmed at escalating cease-fire violations, the Lebanese government today held its first meeting in 11 days to try to head off a new round of fighting between Syrian soldiers and Lebanese Christian militiamen.

A spokesman for Lebanon's police department described artillery and gunfire exchanges in Beirut and Zahle, 30 miles to the east, as the gravest threat yet to the cease-fire that last week quieted eight days of fighting in the two cities.

An official spokesman said Moslem Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and Christian President Elias Sarkis huddled with other ministers around midday at the hilltop presidential palace in suburban Beirut.

The spokesman said the session was prompted both by the continued siege of Zahle, a Christian stronghold, and by the shelling Tuesday of the Lebanese Parliament building, Villa Mansour, which trapped the speaker, four government ministers and 11 legislators for three hours. The building is located on the capital's mid-city Green Line, which divides it into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Rescue operations mounted from both sides of the demarcation line brought the trapped officials and legislators to safety. Later, three shells slammed into an army post 100 yards from the presidential palace, about five miles east of the parliament building, wounding four presidential guards.

The palace and the neighboring residence of U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean suffered no damage.

In the latest round of fighting, the Syrians gained control of the hills overlooking Zahle.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Then he ruffed a heart on the table, but that was his last trick. When he led a club to his king, West won the ace and drew the remaining trumps, and the defenders took two heart tricks to earn a two-trick set.

When dummy appeared, it should have been obvious to declarer that he could afford to lose two trump tricks and a club and still make his game. It was correct to start drawing trumps after winning the ace of hearts—but declarer could not afford to draw more than one round!

The right approach is to win the ace of hearts, cash the king of spades and then start on diamonds. On the third diamond declarer sluffs a heart from dummy. It makes no difference if a defender ruffs the third diamond—declarer has time to ruff a heart in dummy and force out the ace of clubs.

If neither defender ruffs a diamond, declarer clears the suit, conceding a ruff if the defenders choose to take it, and then drives out the ace of clubs. Declarer thus retains trump control, and no matter what West does he cannot make more than two trump tricks and the ace of clubs.

What if trumps are 3-2 and the hand with short trumps ruffs the third diamond? The defenders will still get only two more tricks, and all that declarer will have blown would be an overtrick.

Distributional quirks can upset even the soundest contract, so prepare for the worst. North used the Stayman convention to probe for a 4-4 major fit. When South showed a spade suit, North opted for the major-suit game because of his ruffing value. West led the queen of hearts, and declarer foresaw no problems. He won the ace of hearts and cashed the ace-king of trumps. He was rudely jolted when East sluffed a diamond on the second trump. Declarer tried to recover by running his diamonds, but West showed fine appreciation of his defensive prospects when he refused to ruff; instead, he discarded a club and a heart. Had he ruffed, control of the hand would have reverted to declarer. On his high diamonds, declarer discarded a heart and a club from dummy.

The Newspaper BIBLE

A COVENANT SEALED WITH BLOOD

Jesus and the others arrived, and at the proper time all sat down together at the table; and He said, "I have looked forward to this hour with deep longing, anxious to eat this Passover meal with you before My suffering begins. For I tell you now that I won't eat it again until what it represents has occurred in the Kingdom of God."

Then He took a glass of wine, and when He had given thanks for it, He said, "Take this and share it among yourselves. For I will not drink wine again until the Kingdom of God has come."

Then He took a loaf of bread; and when He had thanked God for it, He broke it apart and gave it to them, saying, "This is My body, given for you. Eat it in remembrance of Me."

After supper He gave them another glass of wine, saying, "This wine is the token of God's new agreement to save you—an agreement sealed with the blood I shall pour out to purchase back your souls."

"But here at this table, sitting among us as a friend, is the man who will betray Me. I must die. It is part of God's plan. But, oh, the horror awaiting that man who betrays Me."

Then the disciples wondered among themselves which of them would ever do such a thing.

Vienna unsure what to do with gun towers

VIENNA (AP) — Decades after World War II, Vienna's skyline is still marked by the aging hulks of old anti-aircraft gun towers officials say are just too big to get rid of.

Municipal and federal officials say any city should be happy to have the giant concrete towers, but then are hard-pressed to explain what they should be used for.

Five of the windowless hulks survive, holding now-empty gun platforms high in the air above nearby buildings. Each is made of about 150,000 tons of concrete and stands more than 10 stories high.

If they were properly outfitted, officials say, the towers could shelter 15,000 to 20,000 people in times of emergency.

But two of them stand sealed and empty as they have for 25 years, monuments to the past and anachronisms in a determinedly unimilitary Austrian present. One houses a public aquarium, two others are used to store documents by the Austrian Army.

Klaus Satorius, a spokesman for the Defense Ministry, said after a number of studies the ministry had decided it was not economical to dismantle the towers, and in some cases it would be impossible to do so without risking damage to nearby buildings.

Although the towers seem of little use to anyone, Satorius said, they have a great deal of potential.

"Those towers are still what they were — fortifications," he said. "I guess they could always be used for military purposes or civil needs in case of emergencies."

"For a minimum of investment these towers could house 100,000 Viennese and that's potentially a very useful thing to have," commented Otto Dalsky, an official at the Ministry of Construction.

But at the Office for Administration of Federal Buildings, a spokesman said there wasn't really "that much interest" in the towers.

There have been occasional studies in past years on turning the towers to different purposes, but plans were never implemented, he said.

The towers, built between 1942 and 1944, ring the city's ancient 1st District. They were never fully completed, but were put into action by the end of 1944.

In addition to their primary use as anti-aircraft weapons, the towers' 12.8-centimeter guns were turned on the Russian tanks that eventually captured the city in April 1945.

Countries in Far East want to tame elephants

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesia plans to try animal trainers, and neighboring Malaysia is counting on electric fences to curb wild elephants.

The elephant is a protected species in both countries, but officials are having trouble reconciling the needs of man and beast.

Reports of pachyderms rampaging through cropland are common.

Indonesia's Antara news agency recently carried a dispatch about "herds of wild elephants, in groups of five to 20, playing havoc again in Muara Basung area devastating at least five acres of ripening (rice) paddy crops...."

Malaysian officials estimate some 4,250,000 palm oil and rubber trees on 65,000 acres have been devastated in the past five years. The loss was put at $98.7 million. About 5,000 farm families were affected.

"We are trying to invite guides from Thailand and Sri Lanka to teach us how to tame the animals," Indonesian agriculture minister Sudarsono Hadisaputro said after conferring with President Suharto.

He warned rural residents not to kill, but try to catch marauding elephants.

"If they cannot, they must report it to the government and we will catch the animals," he said.

Malaysia's 1978 attempt to restrain wandering elephants by digging hundreds of 6-foot-wide trenches was abandoned as ineffectual due to erosion by heavy rains.

The Federal Land Development Authority now pins its hopes on 340 miles of electric fencing, known as "fence-fence" for the combined felda-elephant-fence. About 44 miles of it has been completed in four separate areas of Malaysia.

Each mile of fence costs $2,152, a spokesman said.

The authority also financed the purchase of two tame elephants from Thailand to help game wardens capture wild ones for transfer to more remote jungle areas. Wild elephants are hit with a drugged dart that tranquilizes them for movement while roped between the two trained animals.

Peninsular Malaysia is home to 500 to 600 wild elephants, according to official estimates. Farm expansion, timber cutting and new roads encroach on their traditional lowland jungle home and the future is not bright.

Only an estimated 35,000 are believed left in all Asia compared with more than 100,000 at the turn of the century, said the Asian elephant specialists' group which met last year in Sri Lanka. India has about 15,000 and Bangladesh fewer than 250.

Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, India, Burma, Nepal, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka participated in the meeting which concluded that the elephant population would dwindle further and faster than in the past unless urgent conservation measures were adopted.

Texas competition feared

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — High Point is currently the furniture capital of the world, but industry officials say they fear competition from Texas may change that.

"If we don't treat these people (retail buyers) right — with proper accommodations and services — there is a real possibility that this market could move elsewhere," said Bob Spilman, president of Bassett Furniture Industries of Bassett, Va. "The only regional market that could accommodate it is Dallas."

Spilman spoke at the Southern Furniture Market, which is the national market where new furniture lines are introduced. It is held in April and October.

The market generates about $45 million in visitor spending along the state's 150-mile corridor from Lenoir to High Point and about $1.8 million in state sales tax revenue.

The market has already moved four times in the past 100 years — from New York to Grand Rapids, Mich., to Chicago and to High Point — and furniture retail buyers say it could happen again.

FBI agent defends boss on child death statement

ATLANTA (AP) — An FBI agent, alleging some of the children were slain by their parents, says his boss had "the full facts behind him" in announcing that several of the 23 slayings of young blacks were "substantially solved."

FBI Special Agent Mike Twibell told a civic club in Macon that FBI Director William Webster was on target when he made the statement, published in Tuesday's editions of the Atlanta Constitution. The statement has been disputed by Atlanta officials.

Questioned by reporters after the meeting, Twibell said that "some of those kids were killed by their parents."

Twibell's comments Tuesday coincided with the funeral of the 23rd young black found dead in the Atlanta area since July 1979.

About 150 mourners attended the funeral of 20-year-old Larry Rogers, described by police as mentally retarded and small in stature. His decomposing body was found April 9 in an abandoned apartment building less than two miles from his north-west Atlanta home.

Police, meanwhile, continued to search Tuesday for a man who was last seen with Rogers on March 30, the day he disappeared. A police composite drawing pictures the man as black, between 50 and 55 years old, with long gray-black hair, heavy eyelashes and a mustache.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown, at a news conference Tuesday, disputed reports that police have a man in custody who resembles the composite drawing.

"We have not arrested anyone that we've charged with any cases associated with the children's cases," Brown said.

Brown used the news conference to challenge statements attributed to Webster in the Constitution. Webster was quoted as saying three or four of the 23 slayings have been "substantially solved." Officials say no prosecutions are imminent.

"The question is, have we solved the cases? The answer is no," Brown said. "We know more about some than others, but we do not have sufficient evidence to indict."

Mayor Maynard Jackson, in a letter to Webster, asked him to stop making "casual press statements" that "undermine the public's confidence in our investigation."

In related action Tuesday, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services announced a $305,586 grant to the city to fund special mental health services for Atlanta children and their families affected by the slayings.

Reagan advised to start seeking compromise plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the administration tries to get its budget-cutting package back on track, a key House Republican says President Reagan is likely to get a smaller tax cut than he wants and should start laying the groundwork now for a compromise with Congress.

Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., top Republican on the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, said Reagan will win "less than 10 percent (annual reduction), and I think there are going to be some targeted savings (incentive) plans."

The administration is calling for deep spending cuts and a 30 percent, across-the-board cut in individual income taxes over three years.

A Democratic alternative in the House, proposed by Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., envisions a one-year cut of varying amounts, changes in brackets to offset inflation and savings and investment incentives.

Speaking at a conference Tuesday, Conable said he told the president late last month that he would lose in the Democratic-controlled Ways and Means Committee.

"I was not sure Reagan understood that," Conable said. "He's got so much momentum going for him."

If there is to be a compromise — which the White House has said it is not now considering — Conable told the president, "you ought to do it now because you can probably make a pretty good deal" with Rostenkowski.

According to Conable, Reagan replied, "If I start compromising before we even start, I'm going to look like I didn't mean what I said."

Conable said he believed Reagan would compromise later, "but he's not about to start compromising at this point."

The White House on Tuesday dispatched emissaries to three Republicans who joined Democrats last week in defeating Reagan's spending program in the Senate Budget Committee.

The three, William Armstrong of Colorado, Steven Symms of Idaho and Charles Grassley of Iowa, said they believed the plan would not achieve a balanced budget in fiscal 1984.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the decision to lobby the three senators was made during a 30-minute legislative strategy huddle with Reagan, his top aides and Vice President George Bush.

"We're very hopeful that we can convey (to the three senators) that the '83 and '84 cuts will be forthcoming," Speakes told reporters. "It's obvious to us that it can be done."

"We feel there's an increasing tide of public opinion that favors the president's program and we think that's the message the members will bring back to Washington" when the congressional recess ends April 27, Speakes said.

A telephone survey of 3,459 adults commissioned by a conservative group and released Tuesday indicated strong support for the president's proposed budget cuts but reported evenly divided opinion on whether his tax-cut plan would worsen inflation.

The poll was taken for the Heritage Foundation by Sindlinger & Co. from March 12 to April 8.

Critics say Reagan's tax-cut plan will fuel inflation by spurring consumer demand and widening the budget deficit. Reagan counters that offsetting budget cuts would limit the deficit and that the tax cut would spur saving and investment more than consumption.

At a gathering of New York financial writers Tuesday night, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan called alternative tax-cut plans proposed by Democratic leaders in the House "well-intentioned" and "serious."

School bailout plans may be too late

BOSTON (AP) — Instead of an Easter break, Boston's 64,500 public school students could be dismissed for an early summer vacation Thursday unless feuding city officials set aside their differences and find emergency funds to keep schools open.

The outlook for a settlement looked bleak Tuesday, when Mayor Kevin H. White vetoed a City Council bond issue-and-tax plan that would have raised up to $38 million for schools while curbing the mayor's nearly total control over the city budget.

The mayor, instead, suggested stripping the elected School Committee, which makes up the budget for the city's School Department, of its fiscal autonomy. Even if White had approved the council's plan, it would have had to go to the Legislature before it could have been implemented because it provided for new taxes.

The school system, which will have used up its $210 million budget for 1980-81 as of Thursday, says it needs the $38 million to keep the schools open until the end of the school year.

Meanwhile, a special master appointed by Superior Court Judge Thomas Morse was to meet today with school officials and attorneys to conclude his investigation into how much money — if any — is available in the city treasury to bail out the schools.

The state Board of Education has asked Morse to order the city to keep the schools open until June 19, noting that state law requires a school term of 180 days.

City officials have said the School Department doesn't have enough money to meet its payroll past Thursday, and the city auditor won't let the department spend money it doesn't have. White says the city is in no position to bail out the School Department because three other departments also are running deficits.

Gov. Bill Clements crowns Mary Clifton LaForce 1981-82 Bluebonnet Queen in a ceremony in the governor's reception room Tuesday. Clifton is a junior at the University of Texas at Austin. She is 20 years old and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. LaForce Jr. of Midland. See related story, Page 1B.

Survey shows foreign affairs stump students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most college students know little about foreign affairs and a sizeable minority seems to care less, a government-sponsored survey indicates.

The survey of 3,000 students on 185 campuses found 65 percent of the seniors were stumped when asked what nations belong to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Less than 30 percent realized OPEC has members outside the Middle East.

Overall, seniors answered only 50 percent of the foreign affairs questions correctly, freshmen 41 percent and two-year college students 40 percent.

Less than one senior in 10 scored above 67 percent and no one got more than 84 of the 101 questions right on the complex multiple-choice test prepared by the Educational Testing Service.

ETS and the Council on Learning, a non-profit research group, sponsored the project. It was paid for by grants totaling $500,000 from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Department of Education and $130,000 from the Exxon Education Foundation.

The results were released today at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, where educators and experts on foreign affairs expressed alarm and called upon colleges to upgrade their teaching.

"The lack of knowledge of international affairs... (appears) to be related to the general lack of interest in other nations and world issues among these students," ETS said in its findings.

In questionnaires accompanying the test, more than one-third of the students indicated they were not interested in foreign relations. One senior in five and one freshman in four said they rarely read articles about international affairs.

History majors scored the highest on the test, getting 59.3 of the 101 questions correct. "Surprisingly, foreign language majors were slightly below the average (50.2)," ETS said.

The lowest scorers were future teachers — education majors — who averaged 39.8 answers correct. Math (54.1) and engineering (53.3) majors were ahead of those majoring in social sciences (52.8).

Most students said they gleaned what they know of world affairs from watching television, not from their courses. Regular readers of newspapers and news magazines were more knowledgeable, the researchers said.

The test results indicated: —Most students mistakenly thought oil-poor Egypt was a member of OPEC.

—Although almost 90 percent of seniors had studied a foreign language, only one-third felt able to use it to order a simple meal or seek directions.

—Fewer than three seniors in 10 could answer a graph question on fossil fuel consumption. Forty-two percent thought the world was consuming more than 10 billion tons of fuel annually in the Middle Ages.

—More than 25 percent mistakenly thought the Helsinki accords set up a court to hear human rights complaints.

—One out of three thought world population growth was accelerating. —Only one in three could rank five major religions in descending order according to the number of their adherents (Christianity, Islam, Hinduism, Buddhism and Judaism).

Students indicated "they had considerably more exposure to world problems and issues in high school classrooms than in college," the ETS report said.

On a question attempting to measure students' chauvinism, 27 percent of freshmen and 19 percent of seniors agreed with the statement, "I'm for my country, right or wrong." Fifty-three percent of freshmen and 63 percent of seniors disagreed and the rest were indifferent.

Students were asked to select four articles they would read from a list of fictitious newspaper headlines. The four international topics were less popular than stories about the economy, medicine and science.

FTC says coaching can help on tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The staff of the Federal Trade Commission, dropping an investigation of commercial test coaching schools, says coaching can improve scores on standard college admission tests.

The staff report Tuesday said the finding raised "far-reaching educational implications" and asked the Department of Education to study the fairness of an examination if coaching is not available to everyone taking it.

The finding had been foreseen in earlier studies.

The Educational Testing Service, which makes up the widely used Scholastic Aptitude Test, said for years that coaching did no good in improving scores, but recently has backed off to admit that some coaching can.

One test conducted for the FTC found that a commercial school helped raise scores an average of 25 points each on the mathematical and verbal sections. Scores of the SAT range between 200 and 800.

On the closing of the investigation into allegations of deceptive advertising by coaching schools, the report said the schools have toned down their claims since the controversy over the ads began.

The schools offer a variety of services, ranging from a few hours of drill to intensive instruction on test-taking strategy and the material to be tested.

The FTC staff noted that the College Board, sponsor of the SAT, in the 180-81 academic year gave students its first "comprehensive explanation of the possible benefits of coaching," which the staff called "an important move toward full disclosure."

Urban neighborhoods likely to lose hospitals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Urban black neighborhoods are somewhat more likely than white communities to lose their local hospitals, even when both are in low-income areas, according to a new analysis of hospital trends.

The findings add a fresh dimension to continuing policy debates over health care needs and costs. Many health planners have attributed the trend of hospital closings in black neighborhoods to the poverty of those areas, discounting racial influences.

The research, conducted by Dr. Alan Sager, assistant professor of urban and health planning at Brandeis University, was designed to develop a system for accurately predicting which hospitals are vulnerable to financial and social pressures to close or move from the city.

"Once you identify those hospitals, then you have more time to evaluate the impact on the community," Sager said in a telephone interview. "In some cases, closing the hospital might be desirable. In other cases, it would not and there would be time to consider alternatives."

Sager studied hospital closings and relocations in 31 U.S. cities from 1937 through 1979, and his report was delivered recently to the Office for Civil Rights of the Department of Health and Human Services, which had commissioned the study.

The study dealt only with non-profit voluntary hospitals, which "provide the great bulk of care for residents of most U.S. central cities" and are operated by religious or civic organizations or universities, Sager noted.

Sager found that 14, or 3.8 percent, of the 369 hospitals open in 1937 had closed or moved by 1950. But 59, or 13.3 percent, of the 443 hospitals open in 1970 had closed or moved a decade later.

During the 42-year period, 175 new hospitals were built in the cities and others were expanded, resulting in a net gain of nearly 76,000 hospital beds in the 31 areas. The population rose by 5 million during the same period.

In the 1970s, the hospitals that were closed or moved were in census tracts with black populations averaging 46 percent, while the hospitals that remained open were in tracts averaging 27 percent black, he reported.

The black neighborhoods which lost hospitals were, on the whole, no worse off financially than the primarily white neighborhoods which kept hospitals.

In the 1970s, the median income in the closed-hospital communities was about 65 percent of the figure for the metropolitan area as a whole; in the communities keeping their hospitals, it was 67 percent.

"A surprising finding was that the size of residents' income did not seem to matter" in determining a hospital's future, Sager wrote.

He also expressed surprise that "a hospital's 1937 policy on admitting blacks proved significant during the decade of the 1970s," though the correlation was weaker than for other factors.

Of the hospitals that had been in business in 1937 and closed or moved during the '70s, about 16 percent adhered to "a formal policy restricting admission of blacks in 1937," Sager said. Of those remaining open, 13 percent had such policies.

Among other findings, the report said the closed hospitals were relatively small, averaging 160 beds, and were less likely to offer specialized treatments or to be affiliated with medical schools.

The closed or relocated hospitals also were less expensive, the report continued. At the hospitals closed or relocated in the '70s, the average cost per patient per day was $80, compared to $85.60 at the other hospitals.

If the trend persists, Sager said, "we are likely to be left with large hospitals and expensive hospitals."

Sager's study involved hospitals in these cities: Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Atlanta, Miami, Tampa, Fla., Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Ohio, Detroit, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Dallas, Houston, New Orleans, Kansas City, St. Louis, Denver, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Jose, Calif., San Francisco, Seattle, Newark, N.J., Portland, Ore., Buffalo, N.Y., and the Brooklyn and Bronx boroughs of New York City.
