The hearts of men are their books; events are their lutors; great actions are their eloquence.

Make Work At Any Price!

As the government goes forward with plans to increase draft of fathers and as American battle casualties in every part of the world mount into the hundreds of thousands, a late issue of the "Oregon Voter" tells of some of the make-work rules still being enforced by the unions in the country's largest shipyards: "If a plank has to be laid across a couple of saw-horses, for a crew of pipe fitters to make an adjustment high up on a partition, a crew of shipwrights has to be routed to the place, as work with wood is shipwrig t work. The management has to plan this routine in order to avoid too much delay. When the time comes for the plank to be lifted off the pair of saw-horses, to be moved a few feet to put in an-other length of pipe, the crew of shipwrights has to be routed to the spot again to move the wood. Any delay in this routine means a suspension of work by the crew of pipe fitters while they wait for the stipwrights.

. . If a gadget one man can carry is needed from the warehouses, the pipe fitter, or machinist. or shipwright, must not go for it, the teamsters union must fetch it."

And labor leaders wonder why public wrath is rising against union managements

Winning Their Spurs

When Henry Ford came forth with the Model "T" he was ridiculed as an impractical tinkerer. Today he is recognized as the pioneer of mass production.

Close on the heels of mass production came another togical development, mass distribution. Again the pioneers had to endure a period of dogmetic attack. For years the chain stores, as originators of mass distribution, struggled upward through a morass of prejudice. But they too, together with the system they devised, have finally won their spurs. As Doctor Paul Nystrom, Professor of Marketing, Columbia University, has observed: "The chain store as a form of distribution has apparently grown up . . Chain stores have now become a regular and stable part of the system of distribution . part and performing their functions and duties in mand against the common enemy, fire.

Mass production can win the war. But the combined efforts of mass production and mass distribution will be needed to win the peace.

Every Town A Harbor

For centuries, commerce has followed the seaways and the waterways of the world. Hitler's grandiose scheme for world conquest had, as one of its objectives, the capture of Suez. water gateway to the fabulous ports of the East. The b nks of the Don and the Dneiper have been bloody battlefields because these rivers carry supplies to the army that controls them, even as they once brought food and ores and manufactured articles to a people at peace. Stalingrad and Kiev are important Russian cities because they are ports for river traffic, as St. Louis and New Orleans are important cities in this country. Boston and New York, and Seattle and San Francisco also became important because of their fine harbors. But now the picture is changing as a new means of transportation suges boldly to the fore. In the dawning Age of Flight, business centers will bloom about airports just as surely as they once sprang up around the quay sides.

Nature provided harbors for ships, but inland "harbors" for airplanes can be built by man. Conservative authorities have estimated that the airports of this nation will have to handle three or four times the present amount of air traffic immediately after the war.

Not only will airports become essential to a community's business life, but they will help provide jobs for many men now in the Air Forces who will return after the war with a desire to continue in the calling they know best.

Airport planning is not something that can be done overnight. It requires months, sometimes years of study, not only in determining the best possible location for a flying field, but in acquiring the land, arranging financing, improving roads, expanding public utility services, and myriad other details. Progressive communities are preparing now to receive the miracles of air commerce which will begin to spread over the world when the war ends. It will keep them humping to be ready for that day.

Modernizing Fire Prevention

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has just issued a modernized Code of Ordinances for Small Municipalities. Included are recommendations for bringing up to date the building and fire prevention codes of small and medium sized communities. It has been working to make American communities safer through the establishment of uniform fire prevention measures, ever since it published A Suggested Building Ordinance for Small Towns and Villages, in 1914. Untold lives and countless millions of dollars have been saved from fire destruction by this continuing endea-

The building ordinance in the new code contains specific provisions not heretofore found in suggested legislation for small municipallites. Among them are the assignment of specific duties to a building official; regulations dealing with light and ventilation in structures of practically all types; adequate means of egress; requirements for the location and construction of garages; and specific regulations for such details as plumbing sprinkler system and outdoor display signs.

Many communities as a result of the war, have been muchroomed into hives of industrial activity. Leaders of such communities bear a heavy responsibility in seeing that scientific fire prevention programs keep abreast of community growth. It is the intent of the improved code to aid them, as well as civic leaders of every other community They are playing their in mobilizing every modern resource at their com

JESUS BETRAYED, DENIED AND CONDEMNED

GOLDEN TEXT: He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—Isaiah 53:3.

The time had come! Jesus was about to be condemned and crucified; and though sinful men thought thus to rid themselves of the One who had pierced their hypocrisy and unveiled their unrighteousness, His death was, in the providence of God, the giving of Himself for our sins.

What He endured as He went to the cross is enough to break one's heart, for here we see the denial, betrayal and compromise of men. I. Christ Sold for Money (14:10,

When one sees the awful things which have been done and are being done for money in this world, it becomes clear why the Bible repeatedly calls it "filthy lucre."

have been done for money. How many dishonest officials have secured high places in government by money! How many people have lost their lifesavings because some shrewd, crooked broker schemed to take their money away, because he wanted it. How many millions of people have been kept in poverty because men cared more to increase their wealth than they did to relieve the distress of those who worked for them . . . Money is what keeps the dance halls going; a lust for money is what keeps our breweries and distilleries open; it is money that makes men want to produce lascivious plays and motion pictures" (W.

M. Smith). Fundamentally, it was the love of money that made Judas betray his Lord. "What will ye give me?" was his question (Matt. 26:15). But money is not the only price with which men may be paid. We

Peter would not have risen to the suggestion that he sell his Lord for money, so Satan was too smart to stir his loyalty by such a suggestion. He used another method with Peter

Things had become very difficult for our Lord. He was led away to be falsely accused and subjected to persecution. It was no longer comfortable to be at His side, as it had been when He fed the multitude and healed the sick, and silenced His enemies.

This was cold unpleasant business. Why should Peter get mixed up in it? After all he could just as well keep a safe distance, and besides it was warm at the fire. Oh, yes, the enemies of the Lord had kindled it and stood around it, but that didn't need to make Peter an enemy of His-or did it?

How many Christians who would meet with hasty and courageous denial the suggestion that they sell their Lord, have betrayed Him by warming themselves at the fires of this world.

III. Christ Denied for Fear (14:

Peter, the staunch defender of our Lord, who had assured Him that no matter how cowardly the others might be, he would stand fast (Mark 14:29), now quails before a servant maid. He curses and swears to try to strengthen his words of denial. What had happened to Peter? He

IV. Christ Condemned for Convenience (15:12-15).

Pilate found no fault in Christ. He had no desire to condemn Him. He wanted to set Him free. But it proved to be politically inexpedient. To stand by his convictions concerning this innocent person would have greatly inconvenienced him in many ways. So "wishing to content the multitude" he delivered Jesus to be seourged and crucified.

Men and women today are willing to condemn Christ anew because to submit to Him and bear His name would require of them a sacrificial living which they are not willing to give. So they pass Him by, and go on to a Christless eternity.

It costs something to follow Jesus -to stand true to Him in a rejecting world. One wonders at times whether this is not one reason why God does not send a revival to the Church. We are probably not willing to bear the inconvenience. It would upset our regular order of life.

Back Congress

If news of military success influences our people as I trust it will, the Fourth War Loan drive will proceed with more enthusiasm and succeed easier than the other three. There is never a reason to wonder if the American people will support a patrictic cause with financial force, But, aside from patriotism, buying ponds is good business and my wish is that the benefits could be more generally distributed.

There are two possible changes in the over-all war-loan picture which I know would benefit a lot of people and I sincerely believe they both would improve bond sales. (1) A serious effort ought to be made to sell bonds to more people in the lowincome brackets. (2) The bonds themselves ought to be of smaller dimensions, which may sound like a trivial comment, but it is not. Reasons for Both

It would be possible to write a book full of reasons why bonds should be sold to poor people as well as to relatively well-to-do folk and banks. The first reason is that there are infinitely more poor people, and their purchases amount to a lot more. Second, too many peo-ple with their first well-paying jobs are spending money foolishly and hastening inflation. Third, poor people are going to need money after this war. The bonds themselves ought to be smaller in size because small bonds cost less, and people who pay taxes this year deserve every economy they can be afforded. As a matter of fact, I was disappointed when bonds from the Third War Loan appeared in such ungainly size and shape. If it is safe to print a $100 bill 3 x 5 inches, surely a $25 bond does not need to be as big as a high school diploma. Chance for Economy Congressman Charles S. Dewey of Illinois, as long ago as May, 1943, made it very clear to everybody in Washington who attended his words that literally millions of dollars could be saved by printing smaller bonds. There are some exceptionally wise men in Congress. In most cases the title "Honorable" is as appropriate as it is proper. Congressmen are head-and-shoulder above the electorate or somebody else would have their seats, and Rep. Dewey won my esteem with one short talk, a talk on Government Economy. When Calvin Coolidge was President, Mr. Dewey was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, charged with supervising the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, which was a figurative headache to all concerned. The routine remedy recommended was to spend $10,000,000 for additional printing equipment in order to increase the plant's output of paper to require, but Coolidge said, "No." Then again did Mother Necessity bring forth an invention, and Mr.

What did he do? He figured out a ystem of printing 12 bills with a plate such as formerly printed only ight, and there was the 50 percent gain in output. Economy in paper, ink and shipping charges started right away saving two million dolars a year besides the original ten million dollars. And last Spring Mr. Dewey recommended that something of the same sort be done about printing bonds. His technical experience is an asset to the nation. and I think he ought to be heard and heeded. vere mounding it over with rocks Afterward, with that finished, they made a bareheaded circle writing for someone who could talk.

He couldn't. He didn't know the words. Religion of a church sort had never been in his life nor in the lives of any of these men. The words they used had never been in prayer, and yet, in their hushed silence and in their bowed heads, he felt a wordless kind of praying, deep from their hearts. Tom, he thought, would want it like this. Quarternight, Brownstone, Joe Wheat and Moonlight Bailey, these were his friends of many years and this was Texas soil. It was all he would have asked. Someone coughed and the little group moved. No one had spoken.

That brief moment was gone. "Clay," he said, "you go in now. Let Joy know. You and Steve."

He had seen Ed Splann stay off with the horses apart from the little group around the grave, and it seemed a kind of rank insult, the way the big man stood there casually rolling a cigarette, watching them and blowing out his gusty breaths of

As Steve and Clay got into their saddles and started toward camp Splann reached up for his own horn to follow them.

He called the man's name, walking toward him fast. Close, he said, "Not you. You stay here." The heavy arm came down from the horn and hung loose. Splann turned himself around with a ponderous deliberation. "You talkin" me?" His dusty fouled beard hid all expression. Then a quick hard mockery glittered in his pale eyes. "Maybe," he said, "I don't hear you any more. New owners make a new boss. You thought of that?" He knew a certain end was coming, that he'd held back so far on the trail. Quietly he said, "There'll be no change. There's something here you've missed." The urge toward the end he wanted drove him "If you can't take it like that you can ride out."

He saw the instant way the pale gray eyes sharpened. Splann's voice dropped, low and oddly droning. "So you figure it's that easy?" "I've done my figuring," he said.

"There it is." This big man was no hotheaded amateur when a definite time came. He could see the veiled coldness behind the drooping lids and the slack readiness that slid over the huge body. Then some thought loosened the bearded lips in a half

"All right." Splann turned a little from him. "You're smart. I've thought maybe you were only a damn fool." His right arm lifted again as if to reach the saddle

He understood this man's kind too well. He knew the move was false even as the arm rose and so was ready when that hand curved suddenly downward to the holstered gun. His own holster flap was buckled.

In that fraction of a second be wasted no time in trying to loosen it. He grabbed left-handed at the dull steel of Splann's rising weapon and threw all of his weight behind a blow of his right fist upward against the bearded jaw. It rocked the big head. But the man was solidly planted. He felt the gun's hammer rise in his palm and hooked his thumb around it. It snapped with no explosion and he hardly felt the metal's sharp cut in the flesh of his thumb. For the hatred dammed back in him so long had released something savage and cruel. He threw his fist again into a body blow. The gun came free into his hand with his thumb still blocking the hammer. He swung it, lashing across Splann's face. It half turned man around and he brought the heavy weapon's barrel once more against the side of his head, That dropped him forward onto his Standing back, he was aware then of the others who had come running up. He heard Quarternight's "What's he done?"

He answered without turning. "Splann's quit. He's through." He released the gun's hammer and shook away the blood. Behind him Jim Hope blurted out as high and shrill as a girl, "Judas priest! Was he figurin' to kill you?"

"Kid!" Quarternight said, "shut

Splann bent over and wiped his face and got onto his legs unsteadily. He held the back of one hand against his cheek. His hot eyes glared over it. "You've started something, Burnet. I warned you once to stay clear."

"You've got a month's pay com-ing," he said. "You can take the horse for that. Now get out!" The neated rush of anger was gone now in the way of a storm's tumult that has passed and left only a knowledge of the damage in its wake. This wasn't a clean end; a killer's savage blood was not in him. "When you go," he said,
"stay away from camp. I'll throw

He pulled his horse around and

"Not my way, I guess," he said. 'Anyhow, Splana's only one. It wouldn't have settled anything."

Enough time had passed, he felt, for Steve and Clay in camp. He moved back to his horse. From the saddle, with the others up around him, he said, "I know we've all done enough riding in the past twenty-four hours, but I'm going to ask you to ride some more. We're lucky in getting ourselves bunched. That thunderstorm was bad and it must have given a stampede down at Doan's. Those herds were all camped too close together. If they ran they mixed, and it'il take a week to get them untangled. This gives us a chance to trail shead. So we'll go in and eat and then we'll eross.' There was another reason also he had for moving now. Times like this work was better than anything else. 'He didn't want Joy, or the job of crossing would ease the bad nours that were bound to come. Riding toward the camp's smoke, he was not quite sure what he would find there. But instantly, entering the little open space, he knew he should have understood the girl better than that. There had been no outburst of grief here, no crying. With the men going past him to get their meal from the fire pit he stepped down from his saddle and walked toward her.

She stood at the end of her wagon, both arms rigidly down at her sides. Clay had just stepped back from her. He didn't locate Steve. She remained like that, motionless and dry-eyed until he was close; and then it was as if something violently released drove her against him. His arms were around her and he felt the silent, wracking way in which she let go. He bent his head and laid his cheek against her hair and let that moment's grief spend itself. He saw Clay start back toward them.

She drew her head up and raised her eyes to his. "I'm all right." He seemed to look far down in them and see all of this girl's quiet courage and something else in their steady gaze, unreadable to him.

Then Clay was at his side. His hand took her arm. "Honey, you'd better rest." His blue eyes turned with a hot stare. "That goes for the whole camp, I figure. Any objections, Lew?

He saw where Clay was leading The challenge was thinly veiled And that a man even with Clay's surly temper should force any is-sue now showed him how unex-plainably bitter the reasons must

"Joy." Lew said, "never mind. We're all of us on edge. It'll be all right." He moved to Clay's side and put his hand on his arm, his body covering the hard grip of his fingers. He turned Clay and walked him, the grip digging in. They were beyond her hearing when the arm

"You haven't made it any easier. What kind of a devil's driving you, Clay? I'll tell you one thing. You needn't hide so much maybe. Splann's quit."

"Quit?" Clay turned and was suddenly rigid and still. "You mean he pulled out himself?"

"Well, no," he said. "I fired him. We had a run-in." He waited, watching that desperate, driven look set across Clay's big face.
"Splann will go to the Open A. I know that. What does it mean?" There was no hot violence that he had expected in the answer. "It

He had learned that himself in the way all men had learned it, by grief. Yet he felt that now was the one time to cross. A man shouldn't wait for the high water to drop to normal level. apart from them along the creek. He sailed a yell into camp and saw the men start toward him, all except Clay and Steve. And then, waiting for the riders to come out, and with that sign of Clay's growing rebellion so clear, his mind went to a thing he had not thought of before. Tom Arnold had said for him to look in an old account book that Joy's wagon carried if anything happened. A moment's spec-ulation held him, but afterward in the rush of work he did not think of it again.

Riding on toward the horse herd. he could see the dead-tired heaviness of his crew. Yet there was no complaint and there would be "We'll get across and camp
