Game Management Projects Designed To Help Sportsman

Game management projects designed to benefit Texas sportsmen were described by the Executive Secretary of the Game and Fish Commission in Texas Outlook, official publication of the Texas State Teachers Association.

"Some years ago the area west of the Pecos was set aside for direct regulation and control by the Legislature," he wrote. "In 1950, the Legislature set aside 28-county area in the Panhandle for similar supervision.

"The last Legislature, while not approving a proposal for statewide regulatory power for the commission, blocked out another six-county area for direct handling.

"In these plots, all game species are inventoried with relation to range conditions. This data is combined with reports on hunter harvest and weather conditions to provide a basis for determining hunting seasons and bag limits from year to year.

"The pressure on wildlife has grown to the extent that most accurate conservation methods are vital to the welfare of most species. The number of hunters has increased at a rapid rate while the land areas for game propagation have shrunk.

"This chronic squeeze is one reason why the commission has established four experimental game management areas in four representative parts of the state.

Rochester Lad Loses Parts of Fingers In Peculiar Accident

A 15-year-old Rochester boy, Richard Goble, was painfully injured and lost parts of two fingers on his right hand in a peculiar accident Monday night.

The boy stopped a pony which had strayed from a neighbor's lot, and lacking a rope, fastened a short strand of barb wire to the animal's halter with which to lead the pony. The animal became frightened and in attempting to jerk away from the boy a loop in the wire was tightened on the first three fingers of the lad's hand before the wire broke.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. George Goble and City Marshal Bo Loper of Rochester carried the boy to the Knox City Hospital for medical attention. Physicians amputated the first joint of the boy's first and third finger, and said that amputation of the second finger might become necessary if complications ensued.

Mercury Dives To Low of 47 After First 'Norther'

First brisk "norther" of the season struck this area Saturday at 7 p. m., with the cold blast plummeting the mercury to a low of 49 degrees Saturday night—a drop of 36 degrees from the day's high of 85 degrees.

The 49 degree reading was the lowest recorded since early spring, and was the coolest spell for mid-September in several years. The foretaste of winter was accompanied by intermittent slow rains shortly after midnight Saturday which brought total precipitation of .39 of an inch here.

Continued low temperatures prevailed Sunday with the mercury ranging in the low 60's at mid-afternoon. Low reading for the night was 47 degrees, according to John B. Martin, local weather observer.

Farmers generally welcomed the advent of cooler weather as beneficial to late maturing cotton, which is still fruiting and has a chance to put on a crop of bolls if frost holds off until the average date.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our gratitude and sincere appreciation for the service and kindness of the Doctors and nurses at the hospital and clinic. Also to all our friends and neighbors for each and every kind deed shown us during the illness of our dear Mother.

By MRS. FLORENCE TONN
111 Galveston Street, Wichita Falls, Texas

Grieve not, the lonely his bed,
Breathe not a sigh for he is dead,
Shed not a tear for the life that has gone,
What he is, we will be, when our sun is gone.

Mourn not the one who calmly lies
By God's own hand composed to rest,
A voice from yonder sky
Proclaims him blest, supremely blest,
With him the toil and strife are o'er
His labors end, his sorrows cease,
For he has gained the blissful shore,
Where dwells serene eternal peace.

Mourn not the dead, though like the flower
Just opening to the morning ray,
Nipped by disease's cruel power,
He fell from love's embrace away,
He breathes no chill or tainted air,
Where falls no darkness of the tomb,
He's in the loving Saviour's care
And blossoms in immortal bloom.

Drop a warm tear, for Jesus wept,
Sorrow shall find relief in tears,
But let no secret grief be kept,
To waste the soul through nameless years,
He rests in hope, his hallowed dust
Is watched, and from the grave shall rise,
Earth shall restore his sacred trust
Made all immortal for the skies.

New Oat Variety Found Suitable To Southwest

By F. W. MARTIN, County Agent
A more winter-hardy and higher yielding oat variety for the Southwest has been developed by scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Farmers who seeded this new variety, known as Mustang, in the fall of 1950 state that it survived the severe winter of 1950-51 as well as wheat and far better than all other varieties of oats. In fact, about one-half of the Texas crop was killed by severe freezes of last winter, but many fields of Mustangs oats survived and gave from good to excellent yields of grain. During the period 1944-50, in which winter killing occurred at the Denton Experiment Substation in 5 of 7 years, 85.8 per cent of Mustang oats survived the winter, compared with 57.2 per cent for the new Nortex variety, 53.6 per cent for Frazier 51.2 per cent, for Fultex and 70.4 per cent for Stanton.

Tests at the Texas Experiment Substations covering most of the State show that over a period of 6 years the Mustang variety yielded an average of 60.9 bushels per acre, compared with 56.2 for the Stanton variety, 55.5 for New Nortex, and 53 bushels for Fultex. The Mustang oat outyielded these varieties throughout the State except at the Chillicothe Station in northwest Texas, where winter killing was not a factor during the testing period. However, during the 1950-51 season, severe winter killing occurred even in that area, and the Mustang variety gave much higher yields than the Red Rustproof varieties commonly grown in that section.

Resistance to crown (leaf) rust is also a characteristic of Mustang oats, and in years when this rust virtually killed stands of non-resistant varieties, Mustangs produced more than 50 bushels per acre. Resistance to crown (leaf) rust is of particular value when oats are grown in southern regions for winter pasture, because checking the development of early rust epidemics in southern counties often prevent outbreaks of the disease in central and northern sections.

The growth characteristics of Mustang oats make it especially valuable for forage production in the Southwest. Its early growth is close to the ground similar to that of winter wheat. By midwinter it begins to grow vigorously and produces abundant forage in late winter and early spring. Limited tests in south Texas indicate that the variety grows more vigorously and produces more forage throughout the winter than other oat varieties.

Mustang also has shown considerable resistance to a relatively new disease—Helminthosporium blight—which has caused serious losses in the more humid sections of Texas. However, growers are urged to guard against losses from this disease by rotating oats with other crops and treating all seed with a mercurial dust, such as Ceresan M or New Improved Ceresan.

The rapidly increasing popularity of this new oat variety has stimulated a strong demand for seed, and farmers are urged to obtain sufficient quantity for their acreage as soon as possible. The variety has been grown over a wide section of Texas during the past year, and while the supply is somewhat limited, most farmers should be able to secure sufficient seed for at least a small acreage.
