PLANS TO PLACE SCHOOL ON A BETTER BUSINESS BASIS

A meeting of the Knox City School Board a number of matters were discussed and steps were taken to get upon a better business basis than it has ever been on. A definite time of meeting was agreed upon and hereafter the board will meet regularly once a month. A committee also appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws to govern the operations and activities of the board and all those who are under the direction of the board. It is hoped that copies of this document may be available soon for distribution to all interested persons in the district.

It is planned to keep the people informed as to the use made of school money. Financial statements will be published from time to time giving in full all receipts and disbursements. The board hopes to be able to publish the budget as adopted for the year at some time in the near future. It is urgently hoped that the patrons and taxpayers may be kept informed as to all school affairs. It is felt that only in this way may the highest degree of confidence be inspired and the greatest co-operation be secured.

September 4th was decided upon as the date for opening school. Let us have a full attendance from the first. The board to save the district more than fifty dollars this year by a waste of time that usually accompanies the opening. Instead of using a day or two to classify pupils in books, etc., after school has opened it is planned to carry out these formalities during the preceding week. If the following plans are carried out by all it will enable school to start in earnest on the morning of a school proper.

It is planned to have a town play to be in the office during the afternoon of the 25th and 26th at which time he would like to see the senior class and all others who may be interested in their classification. He will be glad to run over credits with any one, but the seniors are especially asked to be on hand.

Second: There are a great many pupils who failed on certain subjects last year and who have asked about an opportunity to make up that work. There are others who are trying to make a subject or two by home study. For the benefit of all such a series of special examinations will be given just before the opening of school. All persons who desire to make up any back work or who wish to take special examinations for any reason will please be at the school building on Monday morning August 27th, at nine o'clock. These special examinations will be given free at this time but if it becomes necessary to give others at a later date it is probable that charge of one dollar per examination will be made to pay the teacher for the extra work thus put upon her.

Third: All pupils in the elementary grades will please report to the school building on Friday morning, September 1st, at nine o'clock for the purpose of drawing their books and getting lessons for the year. It is hoped that all pupils from the first to the seventh inclusive will report at this time in order that the work of the lower grades may move off smoothly and without delay on September 4th.

HIGHWAY MEETING HELD AUGUST 1

Quite a number of our citizens went to Rochester Tuesday morning and met with the Rule and Rochester Folks to talk over the Highway that is being designated from Benjamin to Sagerton directly along the Orient Railroad.

C. L. Martin of Westover, Texas, recently elected Representative to the Legislature from Baylor, Haskell and Throckmorton Counties, was there and stated that without doubt the highway would be constructed and that State aid would be received. A meeting at Galveston is called for August 4th and Dr. Jas. M. Green was sent by these different towns to be present at Galveston to represent them and gain what information possible to show our interest in this most needed Highway.

Let's all pull for the good things that are in reach of us.

The State Farmers' Institute Will Not Be Held This Year

Austin, Texas, July 24.—Commissioner of Agriculture, Geo. B. Terrell, will not call a meeting of the State Farmers' Institute this year, because of bad financial conditions of the farmers and his inability to secure free transportation or reduced rates for the meeting.

His statement follows: "To Secretaries of Farmers' Institutes: This is to advise you that a delegated meeting of the State Farmers' Institute will not be held this summer, because of the impoverished financial condition of the farmers, rendering a great many of them unable to attend the meeting.

The State laws permit the Railroads to give free transportation for these meetings, and I tried to secure such free transportation, but the Railroads declined to grant the transportation in the following statement: In view of the established rule not to issue any free transportation not authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission Act, it would not be consistent for us to make an exception in this case and issue the transportation requested.

Since we cannot secure free transportation and cannot get reduced rates, except on the certificate plan, which requires the purchase of a large number of tickets at full fare, before the reduction is granted, on the return tickets and knowing the conditions under such conditions would not be large enough to secure any reduction in rates, I have decided not to call the State Institute this year. I regret this very much, as the farmers ought to come together every year and discuss plans

ACREAGE BEGINNING TO CHANGE HANDS OWING TO OIL ACTIVITIES

The Brazos Bend Oil Company are still actively engaged in getting things in readiness for the spudding in of their first well. They informed us that a telegram was received from John Tidwell, a driller at Mexia, Wednesday, and they are expecting him to arrive here by today. Upon his arrival he will line up the machinery and start drilling as soon as possible. A part of the machinery has not yet arrived. As soon as it gets here the date for spudding in will be arranged and the public will be notified in time for all who desire to be on hands to witness the event. It had been the intention of the company to have a barbecue on the date of this event, but it was not convenient for them to do so. However, we understand that citizens of the town are planning to have a barbecue and other attractions on that date.

Acreage has already begun to change hands as a result of the oil activities and lively times in the Knox City territory are indicated by the present prospects.

for bettering their conditions. But the conditions above stated make it impossible to have the meeting this year.

Respectfully,
Geo. B. Terrell,
Commissioner.

Opening of The Texas Theatre.

"The Texas" Theatre was opened on Wednesday night, July 26, with Jack London in "The Son of the Wolf". Every seat in the new building was taken and the picture was shown the second time for those who could not get in for the first show. The new theatre is located in the new Tucker building, and Mr. J. B. Sanders, the owner has spared no effort or means in making "The Texas" one of the most modern theatres in this or any other section of the state, size of town considered, and in many respects it is more up to date than many theatres in larger towns. Mr. Sanders makes a specialty of securing only high class pictures and this feature of his show is especially appreciated by his patrons.

Mrs. Gillespie left Thursday for Fort Worth where she will visit relatives a few days.

News From O'Brien.

O'Brien, Texas, August 1.—The Sacred Harp singers met here Sunday and had singing. Every one seemed to enjoy the singing and dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Speck and daughters returned Tuesday from a visit to relatives and friends in Comanche and Eastland Counties.

C. G. Barnett and family and Mrs. Skeens and children returned Sunday from Comanche County where they had been visiting relatives.

Several Rochester people attended church at this place Sunday night.

The party given by Mrs. Cooner Saturday night was well attended and every one had a fine time.

Robert Gray is here visiting his parents Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Gray.

The Ladies Aid of O'Brien spent quite a pleasant week Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. A. Manolis in Rochester.

County Surveyor O. W. Lee, whose home is at Murday, was in town a short time Monday evening and made The Journal office a pleasant call.

ATTENTION, MOTHERS!

Frequently men tell us "this is sure a money and I must take it to her."

Statements of this character make us wonder if mothers are less friendly to banks than men? If banks are safe and a great convenience to business, why not to women?

Money is exposed to thieves anywhere you may have it out of a banker's vault. If stolen from a bank the insurance company makes the loss good.

Why take the risk of loss when we are eager to meet our account with you?

If the majority of mothers in this community would endorse the banks by opening an account with us our success would be assured and your worries are less than they are at present.

Mothers, if banks are safer than homes to keep money in, support them with your money. It will be just as good as if by check as it is hidden away at home and you will be reaching your little ones to save it again!

Long Lines Are to Be Fall Style

Every season, when fashion news seems dulled, a few high lights of style develop which prove to be the keynotes of the coming season, surviving the fire of criticism and wear and exposure. It is easy, notes a fashion writer in the New York Times, to look back then and see the fashion extravagances that have died by the wayside and those which have won the honors of the day.

We have kept a few essentials, added them to worthy survivals from the past, and now we stand ready to go into a new season for the accumulation of other and perhaps more important features of dress. This, then, is what is called the evolution of style. It is by this process that our clothes develop. We cannot long retain a trimming or a gew-gaw that is not useful, but if the fashion survives the test, it is bound to be a thing which will be generally satisfactory for many seasons to come, not just for the short span of months called a season.

The Long Coat.

No one with an aptitude for observing style as it develops can fail to see that the long coat with loose, graceful lines is one thing which has come out of this season as a surety. It has superseded the cape and, by that same process of evolution, has become a thing with all of the valuable points of the cape retained and graceful lines added.

The cape had gone a little too far. It had become too extremely popular for any claim to ultra-smartness. It was necessary that some new idea be thought of, and it happened to be the coat of longer, more flowing lines.

No many of these new coats, seen at the races, the country clubs and all outdoor gatherings, are made of the heavier silks in dark or neutral colors, with rather more startling tones used for the linings. Seen coming along the road, it is puzzling to know whether some garments are a coat or a cape after all so closely do the two types resemble each other. When the coat swings open it has those cape lines to which we have clung so long because of their womanly charm. But when the coat is closed it is more of an adequate street garment than the cape could ever hope to be. It has a bit of style all by itself, needing no other garment to make it successful.

The long coat is a Parisian interpretation of this newer of the outer garments. It is simple enough in its line and general makeup, but it has that attention to detail of style which places it in the class of the more important creations of the season. The stuff from which it is made is the heaviest of Moroccan crepes—a fabric with the heaviness of a serge or a velours, although woven entirely from silk threads. The coat is stitched around the rounded trimmings and is lined with a soft, warm shade of gray crepe that gives it a becoming quality. The way that the collar buttons around the throat is one of the newer features of the coats of this season, for it is a collar that looks graceful at all times—as well when the coat is opened as when it is closed.

Beads for Trimming.

Once in a while we make up our minds that beads for trimming have passed out of the category of fashion. Then they return in some new and surprising manner. This season beads have been larger and they have been put on with more attention to the decorative note supplied by each bead rather than with reference to masses of smaller ones.

An evening dress shows admirably the use of these larger beads. Each one has been used to tell a story of its own and there has been no attempt to have them run into each other. They are heavy beads, so that there could be no attempt to mass them unduly for fear of the heaviness that they would impart to a gown which must necessarily be light in weight and appearance to carry out the function for which it is designed.

This dress is one of the loveliest of the white dresses of the season and the beads are made of cut jet, showing up strongly against the purity of the background of rough white crepe. Of course there are many girdles and cabochon trimmings made of these larger and more effective beads, and each line the trimming appears the fact is made more apparent that the heaviness and the largeness of them is one of the season's developments in dress decoration which is bound to carry on.

Straight Versus Bouffant Lines.

The survival of the straight line through another season's struggle serves to show that in this style the American woman has found something to which her personality is eminently fitted. She may experiment with all of the innovations in the way of more generous widths, but back she comes to the straight lines, which have proved their satisfaction.

Down go the skirts to a far lower level, but the straightness of the line of the frock remains intact. We have innovations, to be sure, but none of them are met with any enthusiasm. At the end of a very smart and successful season of dress the straight line is the one which has won the day—that is, for general favor and popularity.

There seems no chance, either, that the straight line will cease to be original, for with each new creation there seems to be some brand-new development in the way of applying this simplicity of cut. It is a line which never seems to grow old, and, because it is so well suited to the American woman's figure plus the life she leads, it bids fair to go on, with additions, subtractions and revisions, for a long while to come.

Draping in Long Lines

sleeves lovely which glide on, to fasten their ends to other portions of the gown, making a line that is flowing and beautiful and graceful in the extreme. Once this method has been employed in the making of a dress, there is not much room nor need for

The sleeves that are draped, the skirts that are draped, the waistlines that are draped and so on show trend toward using materials in this prescribed manner. We are becoming so accustomed to gracefulness in our everyday attire that we are really quite classic, and after a while we will find ourselves unable to do without this general stimulus of beauty.

Artists in dress have been working for this end a long while. They have insisted that, once the American woman came to know her own powers of displaying the beautiful, she would develop that art with an avidity never before known in the history of woman. And this summer as one walks along the street it is impossible not to be struck by the fact that there is a larger element of beauty in our clothes than there has been in all the years of our recollection.

The draping, so much a part of the accepted gown, is in a large measure responsible for this state of affairs. There is hardly a gown where some bit of it is not to be seen, and everywhere that the loose, long folds appear there is that certain sense of gracefulness which is bound to make its appeal and to give satisfaction.

The sleeves, made of long pieces of the material of the gown, are particularly beautiful. Especially are those trimmed. The line is enough in itself, and it has accomplished wonders in the way of a contribution to the season's style.

White and Red Frocks.

At New York's most fashionable hotel recently a dinner dance revealed that nearly every woman present was dressed in all-white frocks or bright red. It is easy to figure which was the choice of the blonde and which of the brunette.

When Baby Cries

THERE ARE MANY WAYS a baby has of expressing any pain or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness—sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and ited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

Children Cry For

Let's Think It Over.

There is such a thing as saying too much on any subject and the "grand-stand" talker sooner or later becomes a bore. Truth is always welcomed, and the truth reiterated and confirmed is more than welcome—it reaches your innermost soul.

Fletcher's Castoria is all its advertising has claimed for it. Scrutinized by the microscope of public opinion and used for over 30 years it stands without a peer in the hearts of thoughtful, discerning Mothers. And once used, mother love—there is no substitute for mother love—will scorn to try a "substitute" or a "just-as-good."

Maskerading under many names drugs that are injurious to the tender babe have found their way into some households, but the light of experience soon casts them out. Are they cast out before it is too late?

RADIUM FOUND IN THE CONGO

Belgian Society Erects Factory in Antwerp District for Treatment of Metal.

Further information in regard to radium in the Congo is quoted by Science from the bulletin of the Belgian Chemical society to the effect that the sample of minerals assayed by Professor Schieff of the University of Ghent yielded 424 kg. of uranium and 139 mg. of radium to the ton. The minerals came from the Upper Katanga, in the Congo, in the province of the Union Miniere, which is the uranium to the Belgian Society of Generale Metallurgique de Hoboken, which has put up a factory for the purpose in the Antwerp district.

Other deposits of the same minerals have been found at other points specified, and Professor Schieff has found two new kinds of minerals among them, extremely radioactive. He has named one "curite" and the other "kasolite," and announces that the crystals are soluble in nitric acid, and the radium salt can then be extracted from the fluid without passing through the usual calcination process.

Reached Away Back.

A headless society man told this one of himself. He was at a town party and a matron who thought he was too busy talking to a pretty girl to notice what she was saying remarked in a low voice to another man: "What a nice face Mr. Black has."

"Then what happened to remove his head?" she asked.

"Yes, and how much there is of it!"

You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your system like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tonic straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Advertisement.

Motor Troubles

Lack of original power and pep
Use of an excessive amount of gas and oil
Spark plugs continually fouled
Is choppy, especially when idling
Oil in crank case thinned with gasoline
New and expensive rings bring no results

All can be cured by REGRINDING

While Manufacturers of all high grade cars have long since recognized the value of ground cylinder bores, the average car owner is still in the dark. It is, however, so vitally important in helping the engine function properly that careful thought and study should be given it by every driver.

Not only on new motors, but it is equally true on worn or second-hand motors to bring them back to their original condition it requires grinding. Grinding with the fitting of new pistons, rings and pins.

In order that a motor may work properly and be correctly carbureted cylinder must be accurately ground so that the diameter does not vary more than .001" as to roundness, and the hole must be straight and square with the base of the cylinder. The piston will then be free without being in a cramped position, thus reducing undue friction and amount of scorch.

Negotiations to End Railway Strike Run Against Seniority Snag—France Consents to Moratorium for Germany—Conference at The Hague Ends in Failure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
PRESIDENT HARDING'S last plan for the peaceful termination of the coal strike failed of acceptance by the miners and by a considerable number of the operators. It was that the mines should be reopened under the President Lewis of the mine workers was not disturbed, apparently, by the pronouncement of the President's plan. He said that an immediate result of any attempt to operate mines by non-union labor would be the quitting of the maintenance workers, which would mean the speedy flooding of the mines. This would need no strike order.

Lewis added that there were more men out than when the strike started sixteen weeks ago and that they would continue to refrain from work, "in peaceful and orderly fashion." That their methods are not always peaceful was demonstrated at Cliftonville, W. Va., where a large band of marching strikers from Pennsylvania encountered a sheriff's posse and killed the sheriff and four other men.

FOR several days it looked as if the shopmen's strike might be settled amicably through the negotiations instituted by Chairman Hooper of the labor board. Assurance was given, specifically to the maintenance of way men, that the board would grant re-hearings on wage disputes, and it was believed this not only would keep inspect all financial projects before they are sent to the reichstag and before they are put into execution. The members of the reparations commission are completing the details of the arrangement. Although Germany cannot pay much cash until it has been accumulated by the sale of German products abroad, she can deliver materials to the allies, and France hopes to get in that way a large part of the 900,000,000 francs she is entitled to this year. The Loucheur-Rathenau accord, reached nearly a year ago but held in abeyance, facilitates this delivery of materials and went into effect last week.

THE council of the League of Nations is in session in London mainly for the purpose of settling all matters relating to the mandates. Its task was made comparatively easy by the reaching of complete agreements between the United States and Great Britain and France concerning certain of the mandated regions.

old scale and that a commission should arbitrate a national wage scale. A large majority of the operators agreed to the plan, but it could not go through unless the acceptance was unanimous on both sides.

Then the President put forward his proposal for prevention of the fuel famine with which the country is threatened. This is that the mines be reopened at once and with whatever labor can be procured, and that the state governments in the respective states protect these workers and give assurance of the maintenance of order. This Mr. Harding set forth in a long telegram to the governors of the states, and he promised them the "prompt and full support of the federal government whenever and wherever you find your own agencies of law and order inadequate to meet the situation."

Responses by the governors were in the main highly satisfactory. That of Governor Kendall of Iowa, is typical: "As chief executive of the state of Iowa I pledge every resource of the state to the support of the program you have inaugurated for the relief of the fuel situation." From two governors—Morrison of North Carolina and Ritchie of Maryland—came responses expressing outright dissent from the President's program. The former said in part: "Your position is practically to use the power of the government against the strikers, and they will naturally have little confidence in the impartiality or fairness of soldiers or other agencies of force, however good the reason for such a stand may be." Ritchie declined to take immediate action, saying he would not send the Maryland National Guard to the coal fields until all peaceful methods had failed. He did not state what peaceful methods remain to be tried. Governor Allen of Kansas said the industrial court had ordered the resumption of mining and that about 50 per cent of the state's needs was now being produced.

In Illinois there is a situation, previously described, which seems to block the Harding plan in that state. The law provides that no one shall work as a miner without first obtaining a certificate of competency, and no miner can get such a certificate unless he can submit evidence that he has had at least two years' experience as a miner or with a miner. Moreover, the 90,000 miners of the state are 100 per cent organized. There had been some chance that the president, Frank Farrington, would have the proper time push the Illinois state agreement, but he said this morning of the

would be made applicable to the other disaffected unions. Moreover, President Grable of the maintenance men said Senator Cummins, who is chairman of the interstate commerce committee of the senate, had advised him that "he is going to hold hearings immediately on disputed points of the transportation act, principally to ascertain how the law may be amended so that the living wage principle would be made clear and so that every employee would be guaranteed a living wage."

All this looked very auspicious, and then up jumped the question of seniority and put the negotiations on the blink. The shopmen insisted that if they returned to work their seniority rights must be restored, and the carriers flatly refused to yield to this demand. Both sides set forth their arguments on this point, which have been heard before in many a strike, and as both stood firm, Chairman Hooper issued a statement saying that the negotiations had had no result "and are now at an end." Added to Jewell's demand for a national board of adjustment.

Though it was believed the strike of the maintenance of way men would be averted, the numbers of the strikers were increased by several thousands in various parts of the country. There were many disorderly incidents, but none of great moment. The government's determination that the mails shall not be interfered with had its effect and Attorney General Dougherty said they were delayed in only a few localities. He added: "It appears, however, that there is a relationship between the railroad situation and the coal strike. Whether this relationship is conspired or inspired I do not care to say at present. One thing is certain: the fault is not all on one side."

IN CHICAGO the employees of the surface and elevated roads were all ready to quit work and spent much of the week awaiting the permission of their international president, W. D. Mahon, who was in the east. His delay was taken to mean that negotiations might be resumed and the strike averted, but before this reached the reader it is likely the people of Chicago will be making their way about as best they can without the aid of the street cars and elevated trains.

after an hour's deliberation and after refusal to meet with a committee, at a plenary session went so far as to offer to submit proposals to Moscow under which the bolsheviks would agree to recognize debts to foreign nationals as well as to furnish satisfactory compensation for seized property through private negotiations, regardless of whether or not credits were received. But they spoiled all this by notifying the British delegates that the soviet government would expect immediate de jure recognition. Immediately thereafter the allies and neutrals adopted a resolution definitely ending the conference.

The allies and neutrals, finding all thoughts of a general agreement with Russia futile, did not see any use in risking a break among themselves, but each reserved the right to resume separate negotiations with Russia after the Hague conference. Litvinoff, head of the soviet delegation, said: "Russia will attend no more conferences. Genoa and The Hague have been enough for us."

PREMIER LEHNE of Russia has been killed again, this time according to a Swedish correspondent in Riga. His story is that Lehne was poisoned on a train when on his way to a Caucasian bathing resort and his body was thrown into the River Don. His "sixth sense" caused Robert Getz of Sunbury, a passenger engineer, to determine that something was broken under his engine as it raced along with 100 passengers on his train. A lawyer was defending a burglar accused of housebreaking.

"That argument is well put," said the judge. "I sentence the arm to 12 months' imprisonment. The man can accompany it or not, as he chooses."

The prisoner smiled, took off his wooden arm, and walked out.

J. F. Griffin carries mail on a Texas R. F. D. route. Read his letter.

Teel Garage,

Devine, Texas
April 26th, 1922

Gentlemen:

One dollar and eighteen cents per hundred miles is the amount my Superior Chevrolet touring car has cost me to deliver mail on a daily route of twenty-five miles, with an average of more than fifty stops per day.

20.98 miles per gallon of gasoline and 171 miles per quart of oil and 599 miles per pound of grease

is the average of material used for the 7196 miles I have driven the car.

I have had only three punctures and my tires are good for at least 3000 miles more. I have had no repairs or labor and do not contemplate any in the near future.

As you well know I have to deliver the mails regardless of weather or road conditions and since October 17th, 1921, the day I purchased this, my second Chevrolet, the road has been to up most of the time by road construction gangs and by many heavy rains, which has materially added to my fuel consumption.

My car runs as well today as it did the day I bought it and am highly pleased with its performance.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. F. Griffin

A CARNIVAL JOKE

SYNOPSIS—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jacobus Felt, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Gumberts, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably dressed as a Columbine, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, a wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Felt and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as a Columbine, seemingly known to Felt, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In the library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up by the Midnight Masquer. The Ledanois, the last of the family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's funds have been unaccountably missing. He is an old friend of her father and deeply interested in her. Prince Gramont, really Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with her father and the Masked Masquer. Gramont's chauffeur, a sergeant in the A. K. is with him. He was the Midnight Masquer, and Gramont had assumed the role of Hammond had been a robber for financial gain. Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed. Gramont and Hammond put the jewels and money in individual packages to be returned the next day. An explanation is included in each.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

Hammond stood staring after the swaggering figure; for once he was speechless. The jaunty words had a more thrilling effect on him. He advanced impulsively to pursue that impudent accoster—then he checked himself. Had the man guessed something? Had the man known something? Or had those words been only a chance shift which had accidentally flown home?

The next conjecture impressed itself on Hammond as being the truth, and his momentary fright died out. He concluded that the incident was not worth mentioning to Gramont, who surely had troubles enough of his own at this juncture.

As for Ben Chacherre, he sauntered from the alley, a careless whistle upon his lips. Once out of Hammond's sight, however, he quickened his pace and, turning into a side street, he directed it toward that part of the old city which in the days before prohibition had been given over to low and dives of various sorts. One of them, which appeared dirtier and desolate than Chacherre opened a side door that had once been the entrance to a saloon. At a table in the main room sat two men, who were the proprietor and a partner in an invitation to the underworld. These renown rested on the facts, this province in the country had a name of Memphis Izzy, a grizzled old bear who just by had been a leading organization covered every one of the diverted foot still the ne palmy Izzy, in any abaret and and forceful craft. "It's a cinch that nobody in this state is going to interfere with us. About them cars from Texas—any news?"

"I've sent orders to bring 'em in next week."

Gumberts nodded again, and the man departed. Into the chair which he had vacated dropped Ben Chacherre, and took from his pocket the money he had obtained at the bank. He laid it on the table before Gumberts.

"There you are," he said. "Amounts you want and all. The boss says to give me a receipt."

"Wouldn't trust you, eh?" Jeered Gumberts. "Why wouldn't the boss leave the money come out of the takin's, hey?"

"Wanted to keep separate accounts," said Chacherre.

Gumberts nodded and produced two large sealed envelopes, which he pushed across the table.

"There's a rakeoff for week before last," he announced. "Last week will be the big business, judgin' from early reports."

Chacherre pocketed the envelopes, lighted a cigarette, and leaned forward.

"Say, Izzy! You got to send a new man down to the Bayou Latouche right away. Lafarge was there, you know; a nigger shot him yesterday. The nigger threatened to squeal unless he got his money back—Lafarge was a fool and didn't know how to handle him. The boss says to shoot a new man down there. Also, he says, you'd better watch out about spreadin' the lottery into Texas and Alabama, account of the government riles."

The heavy features of Gumberts closed in a scowl.

"You tell your boss," he said, "that when it comes to steerin' clear of federal men, I don't want no instructions from nobody! We got every man in this state spotted. Every one that can be fixed is fixed—and that goes for the legislators and politicians clear up the line! Tell your boss to handle the local situation as well as I handle other things, and he'll do all that's necessary. What he'd ought to attend to, for one thing, is this here guy who calls himself the Midnight Masquer. I've told him before that this guy was playin' h—i with my system! This Masquer gets no protection, see? The quicker Felt goes after him the better for all concerned—"

Chacherre laughed, not without a swagger.

"We've attended to all that, Izzy—we've dropped on him and settled him! The guy was doin' it for a carnival joke, that's all. His loot is all goin' back to the owners today. It needn't worry you, anyhow! There was nothin' much to it—jewelry that couldn't be disposed of, for the most part. We couldn't take chances on that sort o' junk."

"I should say not," Gumberts regarded him with a scowl. "You've got the stuff?"

"The boss has. Look here, Izzy, I want you to use a little influence with headquarters on this deal—the boss doesn't want to show his hand there, and leaning forward, Ben Chacherre spoke in a low tone. Then, Gumberts heard him out, chuckled, and nodded assent.

At two that afternoon Henry Gramont was summoned to the telephone. He was greeted by a voice which he did not recognize, but which announced itself promptly.

"This is Mr. Gramont? Police headquarters speakin'. You laid a charge this morning against a fellow named Chacherre?"

"Yes," answered Gramont.

"Must ha' been some mistake, then," came the response. "We thought the prints fitted, but found later they didn't. We looked up the Chacherre guy and found he was workin' steady and strictly O. K. What's more to the point, he proved up a dead sure alibi for the other night."

"Oh!" said Gramont. "Then there's nothing to be done?"

"Not yet. We're workin' on it, and maybe we'll have some news later. Goodbye."

Gramont hung up the receiver, a puzzled frown creasing his brow. But, after a minute, he laughed softly—a trace of anger in the laugh.

"Ah!" he murmured. "I congratulate you on your efficiency, Mr. Felt! But now wait a little—and we'll meet again. I think I'm getting somewhere at last, and I'll have a surprise for you one of these days!"

CHAPTER VII.

In New Orleans the carnival season is always opened by the ball of the Twelfth Night Revelers soon after Christmas, and is closed by that of the Krewe of Comus on Mardi Gras night. Upon this evening of "Fat Tuesday," indeed, both Rex and Comus hold forth. Rex is the popular ball, the affair of the people, and is held in the Athenaeum. From here, about midnight, the king and queen proceed to Comus ball.

Comus is an assembly of such rigid exclusiveness that even the tickets to the gallery are considered social prizes. The persons of the Krewe, on this particular year, as in all previous ones, would remain unknown; there is no unmasking at Comus. This institution, a tremendous social power and potentially a financial power also, during decades of the city's life, is held absolutely above any taint of favoritism or commercialism. Even the families of those concerned might not always be certain whether their sons and brothers belonged to the Krewe of Comus.

Henry Gramont did not attend the ball of Proteus on Monday night. Instead, he sat in his own room, while through the streets of the French quarter outside was raging the carnival at its height. Before him were maps and reports upon the gas and oil fields about Bayou Terrebonne—fields where great domes of natural gas were already located and in use, and where oil was being found in some quantity. Early on Wednesday morning Gramont intended to set forth to his work. He had been engaged to make a report to Bob Maillard's company, and he would make it. Then he would resign his advisory job, and be free. A smile curled his lips as he thought of young Maillard and the company.

"The young gentleman will be sadly surprised to discover that I've gotten out from under—and that his respected father holds my stock!" he reflected. "That was a good deal; I lost a thousand to old Maillard in order to have the balance of thirty thousand!"

A knock at his door interrupted the thread of his thought. Gramont opened, to find the concierge with a note which had been left at the door below by a masked Harlequin, who had then disappeared without awaiting any reply.

Gramont recognized the writing on the envelope, and hastened to the note inside. His face changed, however, as he read it:

"Please call promptly at eleven tomorrow morning. I wish to see you upon a matter of business."

"LUCIE LEDANOIS."

Gramont gazed long at this note, his brows drawn down into a harsh line. It was not the first time, in its tone, somehow, he sensed something vague, something vaguely but mostly decidedly out of tune. "Eleven tomorrow morning, eh?" he murmured. "That's queer, too, for she's to be at the Proteus ball tonight. Most girls would not be conducting business affairs at eleven in the morning, after being up all night at Proteus! It must be something important. Besides, she's not in a class with anyone else. She's a rare girl; no nonsense in her—full of a deep, strong sense of things—"

He forced himself from thoughts of Lucie, forced himself from her personality, and returned to his reports with an effort of concentration.

When Gramont went to bed that night it was with a startling and audacious scheme well defined in his brain; a scheme whose first conception seemed ludicrous and impossible, yet which, on second consideration, appeared in a very different light. It deserved serious thought—and Gramont had made his decision before he went to sleep.

The following day was Tuesday—Mardi Gras, Shrove Tuesday, the last day before Lent began, and the final culminating day of carnival. Henry Gramont, however, was destined to find little in its beginning of much personal pleasure.

At eleven in the morning Hammond drove him to the Ledanois home, where Gramont was admitted by one of the colored servants and shown into the parlor. A moment later Lucie herself appeared. At first glance her smiling greeting removed the half-sensed apprehensions of Gramont. Almost immediately afterward, however, he noted a perceptible change in her manner, as she led him toward the rear of the room, and gestured toward a mahogany tilt-top table which stood in a corner.

"Come over here, please. I have something which I wish to show you."

She needed to say no more. Gramont, following her, found himself staring blankly down at the symbol of conservatism which overwhelmed him. For upon that table lay all those boxes which he himself had packed with the loot of the Midnight Masquer—the identical boxes, apparently unopened, which had been stolen from his automobile by the supposed thief, Chacherre!

"Tell me, Henry Gramont, what mad impulse brought you to all this?"

Exceptions.

"Sometimes, John," said Brashkin's wife, "I do get a little discouraged, and think you are hard to please." "You don't say so," was the astonishing rejoinder. "Yes, but I must admit there is one thing you never found fault with—the way I look when I wear my last year's clothes."—Detroit Free Press.

Harding Asks That Coal Mines Be Reopened and Promises Federal Protection.

URGES GOVERNORS TO HELP

Negotiations to End Railway Strike Run Against Seniority Snag—France Consents to Moratorium for Germany—Conference at The Hague Ends in Failure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HARDING'S last plea for the peaceful termination of the coal strike failed of acceptance by the miners and by a considerable number of the operators. It was that the mines should be reopened under the old scale and that a commission should arbitrate a national wage scale. A large majority of the operators agreed to the plan, but it could not go through unless the acceptance was unanimous on both sides. Then the President put forward his proposal for prevention of the fuel famine with which the country is threatened. This is that the mines be reopened at once and with whatever labor can be procured, and that the state governments in the respective states protect these workers and give assurance of the maintenance of order. This Mr. Harding set forth in a long telegram to the governors of the states, and he promised them the "prompt and full support of the federal government whenever and wherever you find your own agencies of law and order inadequate to meet the situation."

Responses by the governors were in the main highly satisfactory. That of Governor Kendall of Iowa, is typical: "As chief executive of the state of Iowa I pledge every resource of the state to the support of the program you have inaugurated for the relief of the fuel situation." From two governors—Morrison of North Carolina and Ritchie of Maryland—came responses expressing outright dissent from the President's program. The former said in part: "Your position is practically to use the power of the government against the strikers, and they will naturally have little confidence in the impartiality or fairness of soldiers or other agencies of force. The reason for such a stand may be." Ritchie declined to take immediate action, saying he would not send the Maryland National Guard to the coal fields until all peaceful methods had failed. He did not state what peaceful methods remain to be tried. Governor Allen of Kansas said the industrial court had ordered the resumption of mining and that about 50 per cent of the state's needs was now being produced.

In Illinois there is a situation, previously described, which seems to block the Harding plan in that state. "The law provides that no one shall work as a miner without first obtaining a certificate of competency, and no miner can get such a certificate unless he can submit evidence that he has had at least two years' experience as a miner or with a miner. Moreover, the 50,000 miners of the state are 100 per cent organized. There had been some chance that the president, Frank Farrington, would have the proper time push the idea of a state agreement, but the state board of mining of Illinois is opposing it."

President Lewis of the mine workers was not disturbed, apparently, by the pronouncement of the President's plan. He said that an immediate result of any attempt to operate mines by non-union labor would be the quitting of the maintenance workers, which would mean the speedy flooding of the mines. This would need no strike order. Lewis added that there were more men out than when the strike started sixteen weeks ago and that they would continue to refrain from work "in peaceful and orderly fashion." That their methods are not always peaceful was demonstrated at Cliftonville, W. Va., where a large band of marching strikers from Pennsylvania encountered a sheriff's posse and killed the sheriff and four other men.

FOR several days it looked as if the shopmen's strike might be settled amicably through the negotiations initiated by Chairman Hooper of the labor board. Assurance was given, specifically to the maintenance of way men, that the board would grant re-hearings on wage disputes, and it was believed this not only would keep the strike from becoming a general one but also would be made applicable to the other disaffected unions. Moreover, President Grable of the maintenance men said Senator Cummins, who is chairman of the interstate commerce committee of the senate, had advised him that "he is going to hold hearings immediately on disputed points of the transportation act, principally to ascertain how the law may be amended so that the living wage principle would be made clear and so that every employee would be guaranteed a living wage."

All this looked very auspicious, and then up jumped the question of seniority and put the negotiations on the blink. The shopmen insisted that if they returned to work their seniority rights must be restored, and the carriers flatly refused to yield to this demand. Both sides set forth their arguments on this point, which have been heard before in many a strike, and as both stood firm, Chairman Hooper issued a statement saying that the negotiations had had no result "and are now at an end." Added to the seniority barrier to peace was Jewell's demand for a national board of adjustment.

Though it was believed the strike of the maintenance of way men would be averted, the numbers of the strikers were increased by several thousands in various parts of the country. There were many disorderly incidents, but none of great moment. The government's determination that the main shall not be interfered with had its effect and Attorney General Dougherty said they were delayed in only a few localities. He added: "It appears, however, that there is a relationship between the railroad situation and the coal strike. Whether this relationship is conspired or inspired I do not care to say at present. One thing is certain: the fault is not all on one side."

IN CHICAGO the employees of the surface and elevated roads were all ready to quit work and spent much of the week awaiting the permission of their international president, W. D. Mahon, who was in the east. His delay was taken to mean that negotiations might be resumed and the strike averted, but before this reaches the reader it is likely the people of Chicago will be making their way about as best they can without the aid of the street cars and elevated trains.

FRANCE has yielded so far as to consent to a moratorium for Germany on cash payments for from three to six months. In return she has agreed that the allies maintain the strictest supervision over German government finances, being allowed to inspect all financial projects before they are sent to the reichstag and before they are put into execution. The members of the reparations commission are completing the details of the arrangement. Although Germany cannot pay much cash until it has been accumulated by the sale of German products abroad, she can deliver materials to the allies, and France hopes to get in that way a large part of the 500,000,000 francs she is entitled to this year. The Loucheur-Rathenau accord, reached nearly a year ago but held in abeyance, facilitates this delivery of materials and went into effect last week.

THE council of the League of Nations is in session in London mainly for the purpose of settling all matters relating to the mandates. Its task was made comparatively easy by the reaching of complete agreements between the United States and Great Britain and France concerning certain of the mandated regions.

FULFILLING predictions, the conference at The Hague has come to an end without results. Russia refused to meet with a committee, at a plenary session went so far as to offer to submit proposals to Moscow under which the bolsheviks would agree to recognize debts to foreign nationals as well as to furnish satisfactory compensation for seized property through private negotiations, regardless of whether or not credits were received. But they spoiled all this by notifying the British delegates that the soviet government would expect immediate de jure recognition. Immediately thereafter the allies and neutrals adopted a resolution definitely ending the conference. The allies and neutrals, finding all thoughts of a general agreement with Russia futile, did not see any use in risking a break among themselves, but each reserved the right to resume separate negotiations with Russia after The Hague conference. Litvinoff, head of the soviet delegation, said: "Russia will attend no more conferences. Genoa and The Hague have been enough for us."

PREMIER LENINE of Russia has been killed again, this time according to a Swedish correspondent in Riga. His story is that Lenine was poisoned on a train when on his way to a Caucasian bathing resort and his body was thrown into the River Don. An accomplice of the assassin is said to be impersonating Lenine at the resort. Soviet officials say the premier is in Moscow and almost well.

IRISH FREE STATE officials announce that their forces are now in control of twelve counties but are strongly opposed in Donegal, Sligo, Galway, Limerick and Tipperary. Waterford, Cork, Kerry and Mayo, they assert, are in "subject" to the irregulars. Waterford was taken by regulars toward the close of the week, and in Limerick the rebels were cooped up in the barracks and King John castle after some heavy fighting. The two assassins of Field Marshal Lord Curzon were tried in London, convicted and sentenced to death, the one being hanged with a postscript of dispatch that arouses the envy of those who contemplate the outrageous criminal court procedure in the United States.

SCORE yet another victory for the progressives in the Republican party. In the Nebraska primaries Robert B. Howell, former Hull Mosser, was nominated for the United States senate, defeating the "regular" candidate, Representative Jeffries, who is classed as a conservative. Senator Hitchcock is expected to be renominated by the Democrats.

"SIXTH SENSE" SAVES TRAIN

Railroad Passenger Engineer Had "Hunch" and Stopped Just in Time.

His "sixth sense" caused Robert Getz of Sunbury, a passenger engineer, to determine that something was broken under his engine as it raced along with 100 passengers on his train. Getz stopped and found a brake rigging hanging by a small shred of a broken chain under the tank of the locomotive. Had it dropped, railroad men said, nothing could have prevented a bad wreck. Getz said "something" just told him all was not right under him, and he stopped.—Sunbury (Pa.) Dispatch.

Fooled the Court.

A lawyer was defending a burglar accused of housebreaking. "I submit, your honor," said the lawyer, "that my client did not break into the house at all. He merely saw a window, inserted his arm, and removed a few articles. Now, my client's arm is not himself. Why punish his whole body when his arm is the guilty member?"

"That argument is well put," said the judge. "I sentence the arm to 12 months' imprisonment. The man can accompany it or not, as he chooses."

The prisoner smiled, took off his wooden arm, and walked out.

Chevrolet Proves its Economy in Mail Delivery

J. F. Griffin carries mail on a Texas R. F. D. route. Read his letter.

Teel Garage, Devine, Texas
Gentlemen: April 26th, 1922

One dollar and eighteen cents per hundred miles is the amount my Superior Chevrolet touring car has cost me to deliver mail on a daily route of twenty-five miles, with an average of more than fifty stops per day.

20.98 miles per gallon of gasoline and 171 miles per quart of oil and 599 miles per pound of grease is the average of material used for the 7196 miles I have driven the car.

I have had only three punctures and my tires are good for at least 3000 miles more. I have had no repairs or labor and do not contemplate any in the near future.

As you well know I have to deliver the mails regardless of whether or road conditions and since October 17th, 1921, the day I purchased this, my second Chevrolet, the road has been up most of the time by road construction gangs and by many heavy rains, which has materially added to my fuel consumption.

My car runs as well today as it did the day I bought it and I am highly pleased with its performance.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. F. Griffin

Again it evidences the reliability, economy and satisfaction Superior Model Chevrolet affords. This sturdy, flexible motor car will go anywhere. Its valve-in-head engine requires a minimum of attention and cost of operation considered, it is the lowest priced Chevrolet is all there when you buy it—nothing more.
