Stop Signs Lend "New Look" To Downtown Knox City

Knox City took on a new look Thursday afternoon when traffic lights were removed from the main street in the downtown section and stop signs were installed.

The City Council met with Mayor Buddy Angle in the City Hall Thursday afternoon and heard comments relayed from the district engineer of the Texas Highway Commission, V. J. McGee of Childress.

McGee had told the council some time ago that the signal lights used by the city at that time were not authorized by the state and were, in fact, illegal. When asked about blinking caution lights, McGee promised to look into the matter. At that time the council voted to repair the present traffic lights and wait on further information from McGee.

Last week one of the lights needed maintenance, no new parts could be secured and the original ones were beyond repair. McGee was contacted concerning the blinking lights and the spokesman was told that the state would not authorize anything for Knox City except stop signs on the side streets and a right-of-way for through traffic due to the size of the town and the amount of through traffic recorded.

The council voted to comply with the highway regulations prior to their becoming mandatory.

Benjamin Residents To Vote On Sewer Bond Tues., Sept. 9

The Benjamin Lions Club has given Benjamin Mayor Vernon McCanlies and the City Council its full support in Tuesday's election for the Benjamin sewer project.

The project has been under development for approximately three years with Mayor McCanlies, the council, and City Managers W. M. Hertel and Jack Hamilton working in cooperation with Joe Boone of Farmers Home Administration. Lions Club members, at a recent meeting, heard details of the sewer project as they were discussed by Joe Boone and former city manager W. M. Hertel.

Boone pointed out that the federal government has made available a $60,300 grant that will be used for the project provided the issue is passed in the September 9 election and explained that a loan of $73,600 will be available for the project through FHA. Boone added that the grant is an outright gift from the government and the payment on the loan will be financed from funds collected by local residents who use the sewer system.

Boone, Hertel, and Mayor McCanlies agreed that no increase in city taxes will be necessary to finance the project, they said that the project would pay for itself through fees collected from participants. According to Hertel, the sewer fee for residents will be $3.50 per month, businesses will be charged $5.00 and a slightly higher fee has been recommended for the courthouse and the schools.

partment in this area, verified the fact that his agency would cooperate with FHA in helping welfare recipients secure use of the sewer system and in making bathroom improvements. Boone stated that FHA could make loans to welfare recipients for home improvements and White agreed that his agency could help the recipients make the loan payments.

The mayor reported that the City of Benjamin is free of bonded indebtedness due to recently having paid the old lake bond in full.

In reviewing and summing up details of the meeting, Mayor McCannies, Boone, and Hertel stressed to Lion members that this is a 'now or never' situation. Boone emphasized the fact that if voters reject the project, the grant money will be given to another community and there is a strong possibility that another such grant would never be made available to Benjamin again.

City officials and interested individuals have worked tirelessly for this worthwhile project and they urge each qualified voter to go to the polls next Tuesday, September 9 and cast a vote for this sewer project which, as pointed out, will be a vote for progress in the community.

To vote 'yes' on this issue does not obligate any individual to tie on to the sewer; it will only permit construction to begin on the system for the benefit of those who do wish to secure its usage.

Local Man Receives Discharge From Army

Army Sergeant Eugene N. Montandon, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Montandon received his discharge from active duty in the U. S. Army at Fort Riley, Kansas last week following two years of service, one of which was an overseas tour in Germany.

Sgt. Montandon also received a citation from the army which stated that he had distinguished himself by meritorious service as Chief Administrative Clerk, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4 Office, 24th Infantry Division from January, 1968 to August, 1969. It further stated that his knowledge of administrative procedures and extremely high level of performance made an enormous contribution to the many missions of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4 Office. Always exhibiting a positive attitude, he accomplished every assigned task in a manner far superior to that normally realized from individuals of relative military experience and grade. Through his own initiative it read, he developed a standard of performance in all areas of correspondence relating to logistical procedures that was unequalled by any other Administrative Assistant in the G-4 Section.

During Operation REFORGER I, the citation read, Sgt. Montandon unselfishly devoted many long and arduous hours to assure that the unusually high number of status and equipment reports for the Commanding General's public relations program to visiting dignitaries, newsmen, and command interviews were properly prepared, processed and distributed, and his vast administrative abilities and unusual rapport with contemporaries were responsible for the smooth performance by the staff and were directly responsible for the enviable reputation he enjoyed within the Division.

Sgt. Montandon's untiring devotion to duty and many worthwhile contributions reflect great credit upon himself, the 24th Infantry Division and the United States Army, it concluded.

SCS Introduces Improved Irrigation Management

According to Wesley Robbins of the Soil Conservation Service, in Knox City, one of the more difficult practices to accomplish when irrigating a field that has not been leveled is to attain a uniform watering pattern for the entire length of the row.

Various methods are used, Robbins explained, one of which is to build a dirt levee at the end of the rows to keep water in the field. This method results in the crops at each end of the row receiving more water than those in the middle.

Area farmers, cooperating with Robbins and technicians from the Wichita-Brazos Soil and Water Conservation District, have discovered two improved methods for "Irrigation Water Management." Where crops will permit, a furrow leveling system is used whereby water can be held evenly for the length of the row. Where crops must be open on the end, a tailwater recovery system is used and water is returned to the field through ditches or pipelines for repeated use.

Farmers have noticed a marked improvement in plants growth and production when either of the above mentioned methods were used.

Last week the rain came at last, whether due to school starting, the hurricane season or the fact that air conditioners were being installed at the school, it did come and every drop was welcome. A total of around six inches fell in and around O'Brien in heavy showers, with no hail or high winds. It's too late to help many crops, but the green lawns look good and spirits seem lighter.

Future Schedule Slated For RPCG

From CHARLES BRAGG

Have you heard the phrase "As busy as a one-armed paper hanger with the itch?" That's a good description of RPCG. We have been busy. Some highlights of our activities for the future, are as follows:

On September 4, we meet in Munday to plan the Rolling Plains Cotton Queen Pageant at Munday on September 30, September 8 through 13 - West Texas Fair at Abilene. RPCG will have a prize winning exhibit. Don't miss it!

September 9, 11, 16, 18 - Cotton Producer Institute ($1 per bale) meetings in Ballinger, Colorado City, Stamford and Childress. Very important! Plan to go!

September 22 - RPCG Board of Directors meeting in Abilene.

September 23 - THE BIG ONE - RPCG annual meeting. The biggest and best yet, at West Texas Fair's new $2.5 million coliseum. Several agribusiness firms have already promised exhibits. Top speakers, short program. Every director and gin manager should mark this a MUST! This is the SURE way to show U.S.D.A. that you support an extension of the Act of 1965. Plan now to bring a car load!

About the boll weevil - Bob Cooke has just completed a survey of gins and farms in Scurry, Fisher, Stonewall, King, Cottle and Hall counties to determine the reaction to a proposal to include those counties in the High Plains Diapause Control program.

Most favorable reaction was in Hall County where the weevil has punctured 60 to 80 percent of the squares in some fields. Farmers in other counties realize they need help, but are worried about the cost. Consensus: The program can be put into effect with a lot of work. Would take selling, some arm-twisting. It is hard to get the man who lives on high ground to support flood control. Enthusiasm often stops short of the pocketbook.

AT SIX FLAGS
Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tankersley and Gayle were at Six Flags Over Texas last week.

LUBBOCK FIELD DAY SEPTEMBER 9

The Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center's Sixtieth Annual Field Day at Lubbock will be Tuesday, September 9, 1969. Interested Knox County producers are asked to mark this on their calendar and attend.

LEAF WORM DAMAGE TO COTTON

Leaf worms have added to the other insect problems in Knox County cotton fields. The several days of wet and cloudy weather has been ideal for a fast build up of this pest.

The bollworm has done extensive damage in some fields and of course is still a threat to late maturing cotton.

Even though the cotton boll weevil has not been so much of a factor through August, it is expected to show an increase on into fall.

Producers who were having their cotton sprayed before the rains have continued on schedule. Some producers who were not spraying before may find it necessary to do so.

Streams In Desert Places

BY OZELLE STEPHENS

"Jesus' raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow: so as no fuller on earth can white them." Mark 9:3.

Scientists tell us that an aura, or glow of light surrounds each of us. Although this aura is not ordinarily visible to the naked eye, it develops and increases in intensity as one grows in spiritual understanding. Affirmative prayer and spiritual thinking releases a tremendous energy from the body cells creating a luminous aura sometimes visible to others who are spiritually uplifted.

Jesus' soul radiation aroused others, as it does today, to a quickened awareness of new life, light, and love. Peter, James, and John became aware of the Christ light when they were on a 'mountaintop' of spiritual thought. When we have an experience of recognizing the holy presence of Christ as our savior, we are aware of God's light in and around us and we feel all is right in our lives. It is then we radiate a light of love, faith, joy, and wisdom. We radiate this light by looking on the bright side of situations, praising God, rejoicing in divine guidance, and by loving service.

So let there be streams of light in your life by faith.

J. C. MOORHOUSE WHEAT FERTILITY DEMONSTRATION

The preplant application of 18-46-0 on wheat to be grazed yielded 34.1 bushels per acre with the check plot yielding 29.9 bushels on the J. C. Moorhouse Ranch west of Benjamin.

While this showed only an economic gain of .75 cents per acre over fertilizer application cost, Mr. Moorhouse estimates he received additional benefits from improved grazing.

Fertilizer cost was figured at $4.20 per acre and wheat at $1.18 per bushel.

Dear Billye Bess:
I am enclosing our check for the Herald. The year has gone so quickly that I didn't realize it was that time again. We look forward to receiving the Herald each week, but we do miss the Benjamin News items. Do keep Melanie Meddin, as I always enjoy her column so much!
I hope you are getting some cooler weather there now. We were in Texas two weeks ago, and I've never seen the weather so hot! There is a definite feeling of fall in the air here now with the temperature at 60 degrees this morning.
Regards to you and Buddy, Malcolm and Judy Shipman *****

RANDOM RAMBLINGS

All over Hawaii and throughout most other islands of the South Pacific tropical plants and trees grow profusely, many of which demand little or no care at all, but which still produce many unique kinds of exotic fruits and nuts.

Possibly the most plentiful native fruit is the coconut, which can be found growing on palm trees even in the driest parts of the island of Oahu (here at Barbers Point, for example) and in the rain forests of the island. Although palm trees all over the tropics of Texas, Florida, Africa, Tahiti, and Australia, it seems that most people think of Hawaii when they think of the rustling palm fronds and hairy coconuts. I suppose maybe the Hawaiians make the best use of the tree's many resources. The coconut milk is fed to babies. (It's also a dandy laxative if one is not used to it!) Coconut shells are used for dishes, toys, and tourist items such as ash trays and ornaments. There are also many more uses of various parts of the coconut. I can see some big fat Hawaiian now lying on a couch and being fanned by two or three of her ten kids; or some ninety-year-old lady daintily weaving the palm leaves into baskets, hats or floor mats.

As you know, peanuts are grown in the central Texas area, around the Gorman vicinity. The Fiftieth State has its own state nut, too, which is grown mostly on the Big Island of Hawaii. There, macadamia nuts are raised in abundance. Unlike peanuts, round macadamia nuts grow on trees and are harvested after they ripen and fall to the ground. These people have made good use of these nuts. They've got luscious macadamia nut ice cream, macadamia nut cream pie, macadamia nut coconut cake, macadamia nut brittle, and chocolate covered macadamia nuts. The plain old nut itself is rich and crisp with an absolutely unique flavor. They have caught on as a favorite of the "in" groups at parties here and on the mainland.

Another 'nut' is the kukui nut, which is not really a nut at all. It resembles a strawberry in appearance, but has a tough, leathery peeling and a grape-like fruit on the inside. It's not sour like a grape, but is sweet, sorta like an almost-overripe grape, and has a big seed in the middle.

Some of those exotic fruits I mentioned above are the mango, the papaya, and the guava. Mangoes, when ripening on the trees, look like Christmas tree ornaments on a big tree, turning yellow, red, and green as they ripen. After peeling off the apple-like rind, a person finds the fruit inside tastes like a combination of peach and orange. Very good either fresh off the tree or after being refrigerated for a while. Papayas are shaped like a large yellowish-orange squash and its mushy fruit tastes similar to muskmelon. It is delicious when served in salads or with cottage cheese, and is also famous as a meat tenderizer. Guavas are small lemon-like fruits which taste like a cross between a cantaloupe and a peach. The guava nectar is popular as a drink at Luau's or straight from an aluminum can.

Then, of course, there are the commercial fruits and other products. Pineapple is the big industry of Hawaiian agriculture. Throughout the state a person can see the dark green splotches which are pineapple fields covering the mountain sides, and the seemingly endless rows of pineapple plants in the higher elevations. The Dole and Del Monte pineapple canneries are located in Honolulu, and the pineapples they sell there are more expensive than those on sale at local grocery stores or at stores on the mainland. The tangy fruit is a favorite here in Hawaii and throughout the world. Sugar cane is also an important commercial product, and like pineapple, is grown all over the state. Its waving stalks and long sharp leaves remind me of a patch of giant Johnson grass or a patch of cattails.

Coffee is grown on the Big Island and is sold only here in Hawaii under the Kona brand name.

The Hawaiian bananas (Chinese bananas actually) are smaller than the South American kind which you have at home. They are not grown as a commercial product to be exported, but I believe they taste better than Chiquita's. Maybe because they don't have to be picked green to be fresh by the time they reach the kitchen table.

All of these luscious Hawaiian fruits are experiences in eating pleasure, but I still prefer Texas' juicy plums, peaches, apricots, dewberries, watermelons, or cantaloupe. Can't very well beat 'em.

For now, that's pau . . . Aloha . . .

Coaches' Comments

By Coach Hibbits
First of all we would like to thank all the fans who came to last Friday's scrimmage at Throckmorton. Many people have asked us how we feel about the results of the Throckmorton scrimmage. We feel that we gave a good account, although we did not score, we moved the ball quite well. Had our passing game been better, we would have scored. On defense we held their running game. Our pass defense will have to improve, although we did intercept one.

I would honestly have to say that we are ahead of last year's team a great deal. We are stronger at nearly every position and much quicker. Our timing seems to be improving each day. If our interest, pride, and determination continues as it has through two-a-days, we will win some big ones.
