There Is A Lot of Loose Talk About What A Bad Place America Is— It Could Be Worse—It Was In The 30's

Heritage of Mingled Memories
By JACK CRAFT

The old house with the side room, the barns, the sheds and the cow pens are long gone from the old home place. I found an old snuff bottle or two and some red rock from the top of the cistern about where I think our house sat. The hill over to the east was closer than I remembered. I hollered a couple of times and it echoed back just like it did when I was a country boy during the great depression of the early thirties.

They were hard years, but many of the memories are happy ones. Memories of things like snow ice cream, the smell of shoe polish and lye soap on Sunday morning, town boys spending the night and sleeping on beds in the yard, smoking cedar bark, doing without nice things and not knowing the difference.

About all the real excitement we had in those days was when a cat fell in the cistern or a candle fly got in the lamp globe.

We had 18 cats, and daddy milked four old half jersey cows to feed them. I never saw any white buffalo, but the hawks and skunks ate most of our chickens, and in 1931 about all we lived on was okra, rotten ended watermelons, cottontail rabbits, and clabber.

Mama wore tennis shoes and underwear made out of flour sacks. Once she was crawling through a barbed wire fence and tore her under pants right where it said "Light Crust Flour".

If there was any underarm deodorant on the market we didn't know about it. And we had no air conditioners. If we got galled we would slap a hand full of starch where it would do the most good and forget it.

In 1933 we all took the itch. Every night we would apply a liberal amount of sulphur and grease to our bodies, slip on a suit of long handle underwear, and crawl in bed. Scratching kind of broke the monotony and gave us young folks something to giggle about.

Daddy never did catch the itch, and mama said it was because he dipped so much snuff.

When we went to town we would cut off the motor and coast from the big hill to the forks of the road to save gas. Once we were in town an hour before we noticed the dead chicken on the running board of the car. We forgot to kick it off on the way.

The only way you could tell a rich man from a poor man was that the rich man had two cars standing on blocks instead of one.

The outdoor rest rooms we had were not very relaxing or comfortable, and not places for deep thinking or long range planning. Usually I was too busy trying to beat a warp or centipede to death with a Sears Roebuck catalog while fighting a cold updraft or 120 degree heat.

On winter nights we huddled around a red hot wood heater, roasting in the front and freezing in the rear. Daddy read Zane Grey books to us by a coal oil lamp.

I can remember like it was yesterday when daddy was out of money for gifts on Christmas Eve. He went out in the yard, fired the shot gun and came back in the house and told us Santa Claus had committed suicide.

The chickens roosted in a circle around the top rim of our drinking water barrel, and my job every night before going to bed was to go out and turn them all around to where they were facing in.

Yes, I remember the depression. I can't forget the bad things. Like people not having new clothes very often; like some people not having enough food or enough medical care, or enough money to hold things together.

But I remember good things, too. Like people coming over to visit on the porch at night without our wondering what they wanted. Like a stranger stopping on the road to help you fix a flat. Like people just pulling together.

The great depression, as bad as it was, had a little good in it. I'm glad I was here then, and I'm glad I'm here now. I just hope I don't catch the itch again.

NARROW-ROW COTTON INCREASING IN TEXAS

The production of narrow-row cotton has become a reality in Texas.

More than 15,000 acres were planted to cotton in narrow rows in 1972, pointed out Dr. Robert Metzger of Lubbock, area agronomist (cotton) with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Most of this acreage was on the High Plains although about 3,000 acres were planted in the Rio Grande Valley. He contended that 1973 acreage could reach as high as 50,000 acres with the use of more than 100 narrow-row harvesters.

Metzger discussed the narrow-row cotton situation in Texas at the recent Western Cotton Production Conference in Bakersfield, California.

Even though 1971 was a poor production year, yields from cotton planted in narrow-rows ranged from 5 to 30 percent more than that planted in conventional rows. Production costs were similar or lower and this is the real advantage for the narrow-row method of production.

What row patterns are producers using in this high plant population method production? These tend to vary with the soil and the irrigation system, according to the agronomist. "Double-row on a 40-inch bed is the most commonly used row pattern under furrow irrigation and on finer textured soil. In sprinkler irrigated areas, planting flat with a grain drill in row widths of 10, 12, and 16 inches is the most common pattern."

In the Valley, 10-inch row spacings have looked good under dryland, noted Metzger. Under irrigation, 28 to 30-inch rows as well as two and three rows on a 40-inch bed have yielded well.

"As far as seeding rates are concerned, four to five seeds per foot of row regardless of row spacing have given the best results on the High Plains," said the agronomist. "This is about 35-40 pounds of seed per acre with two rows on a 40-inch bed."

Many of the stormproof, stripper varieties presently planted on the High Plains fit well into the narrow-row pattern. Such varieties as Lockett 4789A, Rilook 90, Gregg 35, Paymaster 18 and Stripper N are characterized by earliness, close fruiting and little branching.

"Although the future looks rosy for narrow-row cotton, there are a few problems," said the agronomist. "Effective control of perennial weeds is a major obstacle. Non-uniform and soft areas in narrow-row fields present some difficulty in keeping the stripper head level."

Narrow-row production is still limited to some extent in certain areas due to a lack of harvester, but that condition will not prevail for long, noted Metzger.

Turning to the "plus" side of the ledger, it was noted that reducing the cost of production while maintaining or increasing yields has been the major advantage of narrow-row production.

Much of the lower production cost is due to reduced harvesting costs as well as reduced cultivation and irrigation. It is estimated that harvesting costs can be reduced from the present $10-$15 per bale level to about $5 per bale.

In the Valley, shortening the growing season may be a real key in controlling some of the most damaging cotton insects. This will also reduce the use of chemicals for controlling insects.

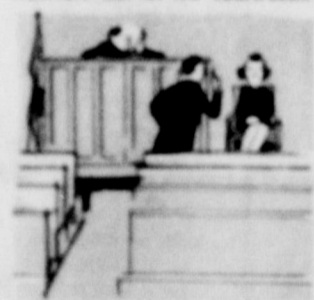

A coordinated research and extension program is being directed at the production of narrow-row cotton. "Outstanding progress has been made and the future looks bright," said Metzger. "Some tests in 1970 with lines adapted to narrow rows produced more than 800 pounds of lint per acre in a total of 128 days from planting to a killing freeze. Narrow-row cotton could indeed mean a revitalized cotton industry."

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Spicy Testimony

To sensation-seekers at the courthouse, this was the big day. A local politician was on trial for seduction, and the victim—a 16-year-old schoolgirl—was scheduled to take the witness stand and tell her story.

But the girl became so nervous about testifying in public that the judge ordered everyone except relatives and newspaper reporters out of the courtroom.

Later found guilty, the defendant appealed on the ground that he had not had a public trial. However, his appeal was denied. The court said clearing the courtroom was justified if that was the only way to get the girl's story.

Courts generally agree that a judge may exclude spectators if the modesty of a witness makes that necessary. But suppose the purpose is not to protect the witness but to protect the public. May a judge exclude spectators because he thinks the testimony might corrupt their morals?

Unless local law authorities or judges ordinarily do not have that power—no matter how laud the testimony may be. Thus:

In a rape case, the judge excluded spectators on the theory that their "lovely motive was to satisfy their morbid tastes." But an appellate court ruled that the judge had exceeded his authority. The court said the defendant's right to a public trial is too fundamental to be cast aside so easily.

"A judgment of conviction, where the defendant has been refused a public trial, cannot stand," said the court, "even against the meanest criminal in the land."

What if the defendant himself wants to keep out spectators, for reasons of his own? In a pandering case, the defendant took that position, demanding that the entire proceedings be conducted in secret.

But the court ruled that he had no right to that much privacy. "A crime is a public wrong," said the court. "The community is deeply interested in the administration of justice, and the presence of its members at a trial is as basic as (the presence) of a defendant. The people have the right to know what is being done in their courts."

Last Thursday morning at 6:00 a group of excited eighth graders boarded a bus—its destination—Six Flags Over Texas. We were going to spend the day there for our eight grade trip. We arrived there about 10:00 and everyone went their separate ways. We were

Band News

By DEBBIE WALL

Tuesday afternoon, March 28, the Knox City Greyhound Band loaded up into two buses and headed for Jayton for a Band Festival. There were two classes of bands; A and B; and the bands were judged in competition for concert and sight-reading. We played the three songs we will be playing for UIL Concert Contest—"March Lamar", "Battaglia," and "Overture for Winds". For sight-reading we played "Ballet Overture." The judge for concert playing then helped to clinch our band after we played the concert pieces. He helped us quite a bit, and we really appreciate it. The sight-reading judge, Mr. Thaxton, is the brother-in-law of W. Francis MacBeath, who wrote "Battaglia" and worked with our band on that song.

After all the bands had played and been judged in concert and sight-reading, the ratings were given. Trophies were given for the best concert band and best sight-reading band in both classes. The concert trophy in Class A was given to Albany, and Knox City received the sight-reading trophy. Class B trophies were given to Jayton and Roby.

Mr. Hays remarked that he was pleased with the band and glad we got the trophy for sight-reading. He said that a band who can sight-read well is on its way to becoming an excellent band.

to meet back at the bus at 6:00 that evening. We walked all around Six Flags again and again doing everything we passed. It just so happened the Grass Roots were at Six Flags that weekend so we all sat down and listened to them for about an hour. Later, when we all met back at the bus we found out we had only lost one billfold (which we found) and some money (which we didn't). We thought we came out pretty well on top.

The bus was mighty quiet on the way home. Everyone was very tired. We got home about 10:30 and everyone drug home. I'm speaking for the whole class when I say we had a great time. We would also like to thank everyone involved, (Mr. McLaughly and our mothers) who got us to Six Flags and back safely.

Seventh Grade News

By LYNN LAISON

Our track teams have been doing a great job in all the track meets that we've entered. In our Junior high meet, the boys placed first. The girls didn't place in their meet but they gave the other teams plenty of competition!! We had beautiful weather for the boys' track meet but, as it always turns out, the weather for the girls' meet was pretty bad. It had rained the night before and there was water on the track. The water had to be dried up and the running events were delayed two hours. We're very proud of the people who took part in the meet and especially those who made the finals and won a place!

Everyone is very excited this week because of the band contests that are going on in Cisco. Our band has been working on several songs and we think that we've got a fine arrangement for the contest. The twirlers have been working on their solos and ensemble, too.
