Brings J. T. Orsborn

Mr. J. T. Orsborn, born February 5, 1871 in Van Zant county, died August 26, 1933 in Knox County, Texas. Funeral services were conducted from the home, 16 miles west of the city, and burial was made in the Odd Fellow Cemetery of Knox City.

At the age of 22 years, Mr. Orsborn married and some 12 years later he moved to Knox County. During these past 27 years he has lived in and around Knox City. About 25 years ago he opened a little store west of Knox City and began the life of the community that is now Needmore. Mr. Orsborn operated this store for 14 years. At the time of his death he lived on his farm ten miles west of Knox City.

During the past summer Mr. Orsborn was bothered quite a bit with his heart but on Sunday, August 27 he suffered a stroke of paralysis. While he had not recovered from the stroke it is believed his death was the result of a heart attack. His funeral services were conducted by Reverend J. H. Sharp, pastor of the Knox City Methodist church, which church Mr. Orsborn became a member of shortly after his marriage.

Mr. Orsborn is survived by his wife and three children, three brothers, three sisters and one half brother, all of whom were in attendance at the funeral services. The children are Mrs. Gordon Oliver of Lockney, Texas, Tom Orsborn who lives west of Knox City and Miss Grace Orsborn also of this city. The sisters are Mrs. T. G. Scott and Mrs. Alice Scott both of Sweetwater; the brothers are Will and G. W. Orsborn both of Edgewood and the half brother is Ennis Orsborn of Merkel, Texas.

EDWARDS GETS LOAD OF BIRDSHOT

R. C. Edwards went out the other evening to bring in a bunch of doves but returned home with some twenty "stinging spots" which he received when Melvin Jones flierd hard at two flopping wings. R. C. had just fired at a bunch of birds and had gone to the spot to claim his shot. Melvin Jones, in another hunting party and unaware of the fact that R. C. Edwards was "in the woods" took a shot at the fast moving fowl from the location to which Edwards had just emerged.

R. C. received the shot and managed to put up sufficient resistance to turn them all, except one tiny shot that hit in the edge of his hair at the back of his neck. This one brought a drop of blood.

Except for the stinging, R. C. was in as good condition after being hit as before and continued with his hunt.

Knox City Gets New Doctor

Knox City welcomed the hawk, yellow haired doctor who arrived in our city about 4:50 Tuesday morning in the person of Thomas Rogers Edwards, second son of Dr. and Mrs. T. S. Edwards.

Before the sun had risen, it is declared by Mammy Smith, the Dr. T. S. was on the house top crowing. And according to Mrs. P. B. Baker, superintendent of the Knox County Hospital, the elder doctor strutted his stuff around the Hospital Tuesday morning like a five year old with his first pair of red topped boots. But Tuesday about ten o'clock when the editor chanced to see the veteran physician, he was calmly "stalking" about the halls of the hospital allowing the red rose bud, which he wore in the button hole of his lapel, speak his joy. As a matter of fact, at this hour Tuesday morning, Dr. T. S. looked like he might have to have treatment before he recovered. Mrs. Edwards and the boy were doing nicely.

The young son weighed 10 1/2 pounds. He is fair, has blue eyes yellow hair (not too much) and is perfect in every way. This description makes it clear, of course, that he resembles his mother. Nurses in charge state that Master Thomas Roger has the appearance of a Football Star.

At any rate, everyone heartily welcomes Thomas Roger Edwards to Knox City.

FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

Tuesday September 12, will mark a notable baseball anniversary, for on that date Cornelius McGillicuddy, universally known as Connie Mack, will complete fifty years in the game.

A half century ago Connie Mack began his baseball career as "a gagging kid catcher" with an East Brook field, Mass., team. He later played with clubs in Meriden, Hartford, and with the Washington team of the old National League. He was six years with the Pittsburg Pirates, three years as manager. He managed the Milwaukee club four years, and finally settled down with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1901.

And what a record he has made as manager of the Athletics! Nine league pennants and five world championship. In 1914 his team had become so superior that he deliberately broke it up and started to build another from new material. He came back 15 years later to win three American League pennants in a row and two world's series.

While Connie Mack always appreciated the ability of his own players, he concedes that the two greatest players were not of his team. He picks Matthewson as the greatest pitcher, and Ty Cobb as the best all around player of all time.

A lady in Oklahoma recently wrote in to one of the newspapers of that state suggesting that the 32 beer be called "Beulder Beer."

When asked for her reasons for assigning such a name to the new and popular beverage she replied "dam near water."

In other words, those who thirst after the amber fluid may get some consolation out of the fact that the darn stuff's 97.8 something else, and that something is principally water.

We were glad to have Russel Boyd subscribe to the Herald this week for his sister Mrs. Lutts in San Antonio.

THE PUBLIC WEAIGHTER

From the looks of the Public Ya. d Knox City has very little or if any use for a public weigher.

Of course, we agree that by having the gins weigh their cotton, the farmers save about 25 cents per bale. But, when the public weigher is done way with, half the farmer in the Knox City trade territory will be on their ears, declaring every kid man is "skinning him" on the weight of his cotton.

Think it over!

With the rapid increase in population that Knox City is having now, it behoves every one, especially the young men who have business going places at night, to be careful. Only one night last week did one young man, a stranger, find himself in the wrong company and when he came to life again his pockets were empty, his belt and hat gone and his face considerably bruised.

Of course this incident can be given to a number of causes but it is not entirely impossible for such to happen to a Knox City boy.

The Goat Roping contests held here Saturday caused no little crowd to gather at the abandon base ball diamond. It was both entertaining and wholesome and it is expected that even a larger crowd will be present for the next contests which will be held on Saturday September the 16th.

It seems that no definite date has been set for the opening of the Knox City school. We regret that the school board has not been able to make a decision on this point for a school term shorter than nine months in Knox City would certainly be a swell black for the town.

Since no report has been made by the board, however, it can not be stated that the term will or won't be nine months.

One of the most contagious things that we know of is that of "improving". Knox City has had the largest amount of improving in homes this year that it has had in a good many years.

We hope the "tree planting" campaign to be sponsored shortly by the Christian Women's Association, will prove to be as interesting and as contagious as the improving has.

We were glad to have W. R. Terry manager of the Brazos Valley Gin in Knox City, subscribe for the Herald this week. This gin is ready for business now as you will see by their ad in this issue of the Herald.

We are glad to see Lee Smith due to be in town again even is he is on crutches.

Today and Tomorrow

By Frank Parker Stockbridge

ZEIN—an old friend

Ever hear of zein? Few people have—by name—but it is one of the commonest substances grown.

Zein is the name given by chemists to a hard, horn-like substance extracted from corn gluten, which is a by-product of the manufacture of corn starch. For more than a hundred years industrial laboratories have been trying to find economical and practical ways of extracting zein from corn in large quantities.

Once they get the process, there is almost no limit to the things that can be made of zein. Some time before the war I met a German scientist who had made rubber out of zein. It was good enough rubber so that he had made a set of tires for the Kaiser's automobile.

New steps in prosperity are usually based on new industries based on new discoveries. Maybe some application of zein will prove the permanent cure for the depression.

VALUE—unexpected sources

Practical minded people ask: "What's the use of such foolish thing as horse-racing, motor boat racing and round the-world flying?" It seems like a waste of money to many.

But—

Through the breeding up of horses to racing standards the armies of the world have a steady supply of cavalry mounts capable of high speed and endurance; and say what you like, the horse has not yet been supplanted by machines in war. And the other day T. F. W. Myer, who designed the propellers for Gar Wood's "Miss America X," the faster water craft in the world, told how that improved propeller design, applied to the circulating systems of electric and gas refrigerators, had reduced their cost and bulk and increased their efficiency.

Something practical comes out of almost every human activity. Most new ideas and devices originated in somebody's fooling around for amusement.

HOGS Wallace knows them

I have a good deal more confidence in the soundness of the Federal Government's scheme to reduce the nation's hog surplus, than I would have if it were in anyone's hands except those of Henry Wallace. For the Secretary of Agriculture probably knows more about hog-raising—which is really a branch of corn-growing—than anyone else in Uncle Sam's service.

There are 20 million acres to much planted to corn, says Henry. There are 5 million too many hogs. This year's corn crop is short, so his plan, which really originated with corn-belt farmers, is to kill off at once 4 million pigs or light hogs and one million sows due to farrow this fall, keep the pork off the general market but sell it at a low price to relief agencies, and pay the hog producer a bonus to be raised by a tax on processing hogs and hog products.

Sounds complicated. Takes experts to handle it. But if Henry Wallace says it will work, I'll believe him.

BULBS—holland's worry

Holland is suffering from an over production of bulbs, and tulips, hyacinths and narcissi by the million are being destroyed by order of the "adjustment committee for rehabilitation of industry."

Just what we are trying to do with cotton, wheat and hogs!

Bulb growing is one of Holland's chief industries. It has been hurt by the American restrictions on imported bulbs, resulting in the importation of many Dutch farmers to grow bulbs in this country. Great fortunes have been made in bulbs by the Dutch. Two hundred years ago the great "tulip speculation" set the whole nation gambling in bulbs, just as we Americans gambled in stocks a few years ago, and with the same result: a financial crash that it took the nation years to recover from.

Times change but human nature doesn't. Every people has its problems of overproduction, and all seem to be adopting the same type of cure. How much more sensible it would be if, instead of destroying Dutch bulbs and American wheat, we traded one for the other.

ROADS—up our way

My home town has regraded and rebuilt three main highways in the past seven years. One of them, a macadam road running to the next town south, we are building all over again; it has worn out in less than seven years under motor traffic from the quarries. The second is an asphalt-surfaced road over the mountain to the eastward and the town has to spend a lot of money every year patching it. There was a lot of oppolion to the cost of the third main road, a broad, concrete highway leading to the county seat, 14 miles north. Even with State and county aid it seemed expensive for a little town like ours.

But that concrete road has proved the cheapest of all! It hasn't cost a cent for maintenance, and it brings thousands of motorists into and through our town who hardly knew of its existence before. It is a time-saver for everyone who has to go to the "shire town" and we get more mileage out of our gas, less wear on our tires and greater safety, especially in wet weather, than in travelling on any of the other roads, which are a constant drain on the taxpayers.

Early concrete roads were not always durable, but the modern reinforced concrete road, built on a deep stone foundation, is the best highway in the world from every point of view. We ought to have a million miles of them, and some day we shall.

PLANTING FALL GARDEN

Now is the time for planting gardens for fall use and in doing so the following points should be carefully considered. Don't trun under the weeds in the hot summer for the moisture supply is usually limited and plowing under this material will prevent the moisture from rising to the upper soil surface and the seed will germinate. Then too, the unrotted plant material seriously interferes with the cultivation of the young fall vegetables and the heat resulting from the turned under vegetation dries out the soil.

The soil for the fall garden should be plowed shallow to a depth of 4 or 5 inches, or thoroughly tilled. Immediately following the breaking of the soil it should be harrowed and the seed bed made as firm as possible to re-establish capillary attraction of the soil particles and to bring the moisture, if possible, to within 1 1/2 to 2 inches of the surface.

Where fertilizer is necessary, well rotted manure may be used, but quickly available commercial fertilizers are to be preferred at this time.

You will find that good seed are cheaper and in purchasing seed for fall gardens it is advisable to secure one-fourth more seed for this planing than for the spring garden. The germination of seed at this season is poor; consequently the extra quantity of seed will ordinarily be necessary to secure a good stand.

The dates for planting the vegetables in the fall garden depend upon the vegetable itself and the season of the state in which one lives. The dates for the planting of some of the vegetables most usually planted in fall gardens are:

Cucumbers, can peas August 5 to 20
Lady peas, pinto beans, Irish potatoes, squash August 10 to 25
Cabbage, radishes, cauliflower, carrots, bush beans August 25 to September 10
Beets, swiss chard September 10 to 25
Spinach, turnips September 25 to October 25
Kale, lettuce, mustard, parsley, onions October 10 to 25

For this section it will be best to plant these vegetables from 5 to 10 days earlier than is given in this table.

Knox County Home Demonstration Club Women Working to Standardize Hooked Rugs

"I took the design for my hooked rug from the churn dash and am working on my color scheme now," said Mrs. F. L. Bowley of the Munday Home Demonstration Club. The rug Mrs. Bowley is working on is simple in design yet promised to be quite interesting.

Mrs. Bowley as well as other home demonstration club women in the county is working toward standardization. To get these rugs standardized and on the market, the design and color scheme must be original and the finished rug must be approved by the Home Industry Department, Extension Service, College Station. These rugs when standardized bring approximately one dollar per square foot. They can be made of old materials such as blankets, overalls, sheets, woolen and cotton clothes. The silk materials are used mostly in making mats, which, when standardized bring a very good price.

"I was determined to make a hooked rug and once I started I could not rest until it was out of the frame," stated Mrs. J. E. Edwards, Munday Home Demonstration club, in showing her first hooked rug. "I have just started on rug work and whether I get my rugs standardized or not I will have added beauty and charm to my home."

Mrs. Edwards is working on several original designs and color schemes and plans to have several rugs to exhibit at the County Exhibit in Munday, September 22 and 23.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

JONATHAN
Lesson for September 10th, 1 Samuel 18-20

Golden Text: Proverbs 17:17

History records some noble friendships. In ancient times there lived Damon and Pythias, and, more recently, we think of Shelley and Keats' friendship immortal in Shelley's noble elegy, "Adonais," and Tennyson and Hallam, whose golden affection for one another is celebrated in the music of "In Memoriam."

Our lesson deals with as fine a friendship as any of these that of David and Jonathan. So completely adapted were they to one another that they grew together as one soul. Both were courageous, gifted, and noble-hearted. "Jonathan loved David," wrote Charles Kingsley, "because his soul was like the soul of David. Because he was modest, he loved David's modesty; because he was brave, he loved David's courage; because he was virtuous, he loved David's virtue; he saw that David was all that he was himself."

Dr. Matheson calls Jonathan "one of the sweetest souls that have yet breathed." He is a rainbow in a storm full of tenderness and generosity. Certainly his career is all beauty and sunshine, avoiding the dark spots that mar the biography of David. He was a popular Crown Prince, trusted implicitly by his father. All the qualities needed to make friendship a success, fidelity, love, disinterestedness, and self-sacrifice, were present in him.

Now note that there was no envy in Jonathan. He was the logical successor to the throne. David was his rival. Yet he was not the slightest degree jealous. His love for David was so complete, so unselfish that all thought of his superior claim to pre-eminence was entirely a mother's. "is perfect devotion is well expressed in that vivid verse, "Jonathan tripped himself of his robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle." No wonder David loved him, and composed a magnificent lament in his honor! "O Jonathan, my brother! You were my dear delight, your love for me was a wonder, far beyond a woman's love."

"WHAT GAINETH IT?"

In Jesus' hour of the second crisis he proved his right to be the silent partner in every modern business; to sit at the head of every director's table. There is no mere theorizing in his world; he speaks out of what he himself has proved. If he says that a man's work is more eternally important than any title, he has a right to speak. He himself refused the highest title, "King". If he says that there are things more vital than merely making money, let no one question his authority. He was handed the wealth of a nation and handed it back again. Idealist he is, but there is nothing in the whole hard world so practical as his ideals. "There is a success which is greater than wealth or titles," he says. "It comes through making your work an instrument of greater service, and larger living to your fellow men and women. This is my Father's business and he needs your help."

He told one business story which should be published every year in all magazines of business, all trade papers, all house organs. It concerned a certain rich man whose enterprise prospered beyond all his expectations. His land "brought forth plentifully," so much so that he said to himself: "What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?"

And he said: "This will I do, I will pull down my barns and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods."

And I will say to my soul, "Soul thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, drink and be merry."

But God said, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee."

The poor fool had regarded his business as nothing but a means to escape from business. He had hoarded his wealth, denying every generous impulse, spent his health, for feeling every chance for wholesome enjoyment; sacrificed the joy of living for a selfish satisfaction that he hoped was coming when he had made his pile. And Fate laughed in his face. He thought he had provided for every contingency, but the one great event which is always unexpected came like a thief in the night and found him unprepared.

With that business anecdote should be published another, which is also a tragedy. It concerns the little hotel in Bethlehem, "the inn."

The mother of Jesus of Nazareth knocked at its doors and could not come in. It might have sheltered the greatest event in human history, and it lost its chance.

Why? Why was Jesus born in a stable? Because the people in the inn were vicious or hostile? Not in the least. Then inn was full, that was all; every room was taken by folks who had affairs to attend to and money to spend. It was busy, it was so busy that the greatest event in history knocked at its doors and could not come in.
