POTATO VARIETY DEMO.
Knox County Irish Potato growers, USDA variety demonstration is located on the Herb Partridge farm for 1967. Dr. Jack Kyle with the South Plains Research and Extension Center at Lubbock is cooperating with the growers and county agent demonstration. There are 28 varieties replicated 4 times plus 12 other observation varieties in one demonstration area. Dr. Kyle and the county agent are making growth habit and wind and heat damage notes on these varieties.

rainfall over the Rolling Plains, also indicates this planting time should be about right for receiving moisture to aid in maturing the crops.

It is expected harvesting dates on these demonstrations will be June 21-22, at which time yield, size, quality for market potatoes will be observed. Several of the more promising varieties will be observed in 1968 with other new ones. Many of the less desirable varieties will be dropped from the 1968 demonstration. Many potato growers and other interested people in Knox County will want to observe and keep up with this demonstration.

Other cotton producers in the county using longer staple cotton for irrigation consider they need a longer growing season. These producers have planted earlier and most have their cotton up at this time.

COTTON PLANTING
Many cotton producers in the Vera and Gill communities planted May 22-24. There are producers in Knox City, Rhineland, Goree and Munday areas who planted their cotton during this time, although several in these communities have planted earlier.

Most cotton seed planted has been treated with a systemic insecticide.
Herbicides combination improves mesquite control — A relatively new hormone-type herbicide, picloram, in combination with the well-known 2,4, 5-T has shown superior results in mesquite control on West Texas ranges. Aerial application tests begun in 1964 boosted mesquite root kills from two to five times above kills obtained with 2,4, 5-T alone, according to the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. Picloram, however, is not yet U. S. Dept. of Agri. approved for rangeland. Further testing is necessary.

More Boll weevils Survived the Winter — Recent U. S. Dept. of Agri. report says that boll weevil survival in 1967 is higher than in 1966. In Central Texas, the average count this spring was 1,292 weevils per acre compared with 1,098 in 1966. In nearly all areas of the South where counts were made, the report said enough weevils will emerge to cause serious trouble if the weather is favorable.

Ozelle Stephens

How can one be unhappy, ungrateful and unloving when God has provided for his every need? Only when one fails to accept God's promises and His powerful love will he be a failure and unhappy. The Word says, My God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus. His riches are unboundless, without number. However there is one thing one must do. It is simple and easy. One must seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness: And all these things shall be given unto you—He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? — All things are yours—whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come: All are yours, and ye are Christ's and Christ is God's—as having nothing, and yet possessing all things. Whosoever is wise and will observe these things shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord and rejoice in His love.

Girl Scouting offers the opportunity for girls to learn to live with nature, with herself and with others—an opportunity to develop self-reliance and new skills. The Girl Scout camping program is supported by the annual cookie sale—proceeds of which are used to purchase equipment, insurance and program materials used by girls in camp. If you would like more information about Girl Scouting contact Mrs. J. L. Grindstaff in Knox City or Mrs. Doris Dickerson in Munday.

On Friday, the girls will be coming out to the campsite at 4 p. m.

Parents are invited that same day at 7 p. m. and bring a picnic supper. There will be a campfire and closing program at 8 p. m.

Planting & Care About Guar Planting time for guar is May 15 to July 15. For maximum seed production the optimum planting time is from May 15 to June 15. While other type planters are being studied and adapted for the purpose, most guar is planted with a row-crop planter equipped with grain sorghum plates with straight holes and no bevel or taper on the under side. This helps to prevent clogging. A little graphite in the planter box so helps to smooth the flow of seed. On land where weeds are not a serious problem, or where row-crop equipment is not available, guar may be planted with a grain drill. By stopping some of the drill holes the plants can be spaced for row cultivation. Leaving all drill holes open gives a wider distribution of plants and an earlier ground cover which may help in competing with weeds. Recommended seeding rate for guar under the row-crop system is six pounds per acre, adjusted upward to offset any adverse conditions such as a poor seed-bed or low germination due to poor quality of seed. Recommended rate for drill planting is 12 to 20 pounds per acre with all holes open or adjusted downward according to number of holes stopped for row spacing. Optimum planting depth is 1 1/2 to 2 inches depending on type and condition of the soil. Guar should not be planted in a deep furrow but on the level or near level so that the plants will be on the apex of a slightly raised bed after final cultivation. This allows for maximum recovery of beans at harvest. Cultivation requirements for guar are about the same as for cotton except for one caution. The guar plant is very tender and is therefore extremely susceptible to mechanical injury. Cultivation that is too close, too deep or too late may do more harm than good. Irrigation to supplement soil moisture insures maximum production of both forage and beans. In dry weather the guar plant may cease to grow but will spring into growth and bloom again as soon as moisture is available. A consistent moisture supply is required for best results. Water applied by irrigation should be generous but not excessive and no more often than necessary to keep plants in good growing condition. Guar should be grown in rotation, mainly for the benefit it gives to succeeding crops. It rotates well with cotton, sorghum, corn and vegetables. It is a very good summer cover on small grain land, and will produce good yields of beans when planted soon after grain is harvested if moisture is available. A common practice in some areas is to alternate strips of cotton and guar in a 2-year rotation. Any fertilization of guar should be based on soil analysis. Only on very poor soils is a complete fertilizer ever needed. Phosphate is the element most often required. The equivalent of 200 pounds of 20% super-phosphate is the usual rate. The seed should be inoculated before planting with a special guar inoculant. This is to insure nitrogen fixation in the soil. HARVESTING AND YIELDS If planted reasonably early in the spring the guar plant usually matures and defoliates before frost. This allows for early harvest when conditions are favorable. Guar beans do not shatter and the stalks stand well except for windstorms or other mechanical injury. Guar is harvested with an ordinary grain combine with little adjustments. The cylinder should be slowed and the tractor speed reduced to a rate that will permit the proper threshing of the beans. The heavier the yield the slower the machine must move. Yields of over 2000 pounds of beans per acre have been reported. Yields of 1500 to 1600 pounds per acre are not uncommon. An average of 1200 pounds per acre is a conservative estimate for yields generally where improved varieties are grown with the attention and care normally given to a main crop. A fact to remember in considering economic returns from guar is that it has no peer as a soil-improving summer legume. Influence on succeeding crops is truly amazing.
