

STORE OPENS HERE SATURDAY

Edwards, of Seymour, and a crew of carpenters are busy this week arranging fixtures for the Self Store that he is installing in the store room recently purchased by J. T. Orsborn. Keck, also of Seymour, will have the store management and he and his family have moved to Knox City and some citizens here. This store is rather a surprise for our city, the store system never having been introduced here in the full sense it will be in this store. Gentlemen promoting this store business have other stores of this character and are very familiar with that of merchandising.

Hackfield was in the Herald this week to comply with the custom long established that of paying his paper subscription the first of each year. Mr. Hackfield has a little delay this year having been confined to his bed with the flu which proved rather severe in his case as Mrs. Hackfield who contracted the disease also. Mr. Hackfield has been taking the city paper since 1904 at the time he came to the city and bought land. His land was the first business transaction to pass through the National Bank here which was organized in the spring of 1904. Mr. Hackfield now has 100 acres of land in Knox City. Independent district and the financial district it has been satisfactory to him.

Howell who believes in prairie soil and who has several mighty fine farms, also believes in good stock and so handed this week for 1929. He will make 98 bales of the land that he supervised this year and which he sent out in many bales. He has good stock. He killed this week that weighed 100 lbs. Mr. Howell raises some Poland China hogs that grow very large.

Boyle, music dealer of Law was a visitor in our city this week.

FIELD EDITOR OF HASKELL FREE PRESS VISITS KNOX CITY

W. M. Free, field editor of the Haskell free Press, and unquestioned authority on Cow, Hog and Poultry progress and needs in West Texas, was a caller at the Herald office Friday of this week. Mr. Free is boosting the Jersey cow and White Leghorn hen as the salvation of our section. He does not see so much profit in the hog and turkey unless they can be grazed and that goes for any kind of stock that must be sold for meat. The animal or fowl whose only value is its carcass is hard to turn into a profit unless they can be pastured. The milk cow and the laying hen are different. Their by-products yield a steady profit and the animal or fowl in their cases don't depreciate in value. Market conditions are not always favorable and in adverse circumstances one may experience difficulty in turning meat into a profit for when sold the meat animal or fowl can no longer be listed as an asset, but the cow and hen will remain in your possession with very little depreciation and in many instances their increase will more than offset that loss.

Another thing Mr. Free states is sure to come to our country is a market for whole milk. With that, will naturally come the demand for better cows that will give more pounds and gallons of milk. A cow that will give 6 gallons of milk will eat no more than a 3 gallon cow so she is worth twice as much to her owner. The cheese factory at Wichita that furnished that section a market for whole milk is flourishing and it has been found that better cheese can be made in the south than anywhere. Other factories are springing up and soon we will have a whole milk market. The man who understands milk cows and laying hens will do well to be in the business and be ready for that advantage which is surely on its way. Cow and poultry feed can be raised in abundance and with a little extra preparation can be turned into a fine profit and gives an opportunity to rotate crops and thus save the land the rapid deterioration now going on.

See R. K. Shaver if you have cattle or hogs for sale or trade.

To pluck doubts and plant hopes in the hearts of humans is a worthy work for any man.

PRESIDING ELDER WILL HOLD SERVICES HERE SUNDAY

Rev. J. H. Hamblin, presiding elder of this district will be in Knox City to hold the first quarterly conference at the church next Sunday at 3:00 p. m. and also to preach at the evening hour. Rev. B. L. Nance who is specializing in Sunday School work will also be present for the evening service.

H. D. Dutton, who manages to get along without any visible worries, and gets along fine at that, renewed his Herald subscription this week and also that of his father T. J. Dutton, of Tacoma Wash. H. D. is a good farmer because he farms upon a hypothesis of faith. No one can be a contented planter who exacts ideal conditions at all times of the seasons. It takes all kinds of weather to make a growing season and the crops like humans usually manage to stand the hardest of it and still come out not so much worse for wear.

Messrs Clyde Farmer, of Memphis, Texas; Carol Farmer, of Dumas, Texas; Guy Farmer of Seymour, and Oscar Farmer of Fort Sumner, New Mexico, are here on a visit to their mother Mrs. S. D. Farmer during her illness.

J. W. Smith who was among the first to discover the fertility of Knox Prairie soil and who at once fastened down on a good block of its land and has never regretted it, favored the Herald with a subscription to his daughter Mrs. Harris of Redwood City, California, and a renewal for himself this week. The Dixie Oil Company is now drilling for oil on Mr. Smith's land and if they strike it there we venture the prediction Mr. Smith sends the Herald to a large list of friends.

Rev. Woodie Smith has been called as pastor of the Crowell Baptist church and will preach there this Sunday night.

CHURCH WANTED

The church needs men, yes, but men need the church most, and every man can share equally in what it has to give. It is here because its founder, Jesus Christ, believed everybody worth while. The church has no substitutes.

Instead of the church looking for men, men should be going out of their way to go to church. They should do more than go to church, to attend funerals and special programs of various kinds. They should go to church every Lord's day. Of course there are few that have lost their faith; few whose religion is completely dead. But men will stay away from church Sunday after Sunday. They are careless. Their faith needs an awakening. Gentlemen, be sure to go to church and Bible School. H. N. Soliday

VISITS OLD HOME, FINDS LAND IS NO LONGER FERTILE

Will Herring of Route 2 has our thanks for a $3.00 check which sets his subscription to a future figure. Will recently made a trip back to the scenes of his boyhood days and was not so favorably impressed with conditions as he now finds them there. He was at Elgin and other towns near and found the country generally had retrogressed instead of progressed. The editor asked him why and he said the one crop (cotton) system had worn the land out to where it would no longer produce and the owners were permitting many of these farms to grow up in sagebrush and grass. Even the old standby of hauling wood to town for sale is now denied them as gas and modern utilities have taken its place. There is a great job for the future generations to take that land and rebuild it. How much better it would have been if the owners had rotated their crops and saved the fertility of the land as these years were going by. But they were anxious to get ahead raising cotton and so continued planting all cotton, until it will scarcely make them a living now and some of it is being abandoned altogether. Nature makes no mistakes in its processes, nature will rebuild this land when it has been allowed to grow up in timber and grass and rest many years in which time it will again store up the necessary fertility to produce profitable crops. Then it will have to be cleared by future generations and put to the plow again. What a peculiar process but those who fall under the influence and fascination of cotton raising can see no other way. The same thing is going on in Knox county but very few men seem to find time to ease up on cotton and give the land a breathing spell. Each year seems to be a crisis with them and all cotton must be planted to meet that crisis. Mr. Herring says the trip learned him one thing and that is that the fertility of the land must be preserved in order to maintain production, for without production one cannot hope to successfully operate a tract of land permanently in any country.

J. T. Humphries was kind enough to renew the Herald subscription of his sister Mrs. Ed Pilgrim, of Pauls Valley, Okla. Jim began tin and plumbing work here when Knox City was toddling in its swaddling clothes and his shop still has a rush of work, occasioned by the new developments of the town. The city water, sewer and later, gas fittings has each knocked its quota of plums into Jim's basket, and still he's ready for more.

SEARS-ROEBUCK AGRICULTURAL FOUNDATION

Increasing the egg yield during the months of soaring prices is one of the surest methods of swelling the profits from the poultry flock, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation points out. Prices paid to producers for eggs during the three months, November, December and January, are nearly twice as high as in the spring months. While extra care is required to obtain high winter egg production, all of the essential steps are within the reach of the average farmer.

"To produce a great man, start with his grandmother." Any chicken will lay in March, April and May, but the ability to lay from November to March has been developed only by many years of breeding and selection. To get winter eggs, early pullets must be hatched from vigorous, healthy stock of proven ability to lay during the winter. At the Massachusetts Experiment Station, pullets hatched in February produced 50 eggs before March 1 of the following year. March pullets laid 40 eggs before March 1, April pullets, 30, and May pullets, only 18. The spring and summer egg production from the early-hatched winter layers was just as good as from the late-hatched pullets that did not lay in the winter.

Careful feeding and management of the chicks are necessary if healthy, well-matured pullets are expected in the fall. In addition to the whole grain ration, a mash containing a liberal supply of protein and minerals is needed throughout the growing period. The chicks must have plenty of sunshine and the poultry house and yard must be kept sanitary to prevent disease.

A good flock deserves a good home, a poultry house that is well ventilated, light, clean, free from drafts, dry and free from vermin. Pullets should be housed at least by the first of October to become used to their new quarters.

By artificial illumination in the poultry house during the winter, essentially the same length of day can be produced as would normally occur in the spring. It gives more time to consume the feed necessary to keep warm and have a surplus for egg production in the fall and winter when the price is high.

A hen is a factory and cannot produce eggs unless her ration contains all the ingredients needed to make eggs. Also, she must be made to consume a large amount. Many farm flocks get poorly balanced, inadequate rations from November to March and hence lay few eggs during those months. For most farm flocks, the combined mash and grain feeding plan is best. The scratch grain can be varied according to the supply and prices of local grains, a standard mixture consisting of equal parts of corn, wheat and oats. The mash also varies, but one in common use consists of 100 lbs. of wheat bran, 100 lbs. of flour middlings, 100 lbs. of yellow corn meal, 100 lbs. of ground heavy oats or ground barley, 100 lbs. of meat scrap, 3 lbs. of salt, and 20 lbs. of steamed bone meal.

The animal protein can be obtained also from skim milk, buttermilk or tankage. In addition, some green feed, such as cabbage, rape, or sprouted oats must be given to keep the hens in good physical condition. Oyster shell for lime and grit must also be included.

The use of a mash feed, either home-mixed or purchased, as a part of the ration offers one of the easiest means of improving the winter production of farm flocks, the Foundation continues. Probably not over 10 per cent of farmers give a mash, although it is not possible to force the hens to consume a balanced diet without it.

Trouble-Proof Corn Found by Science

Super seed corn that can rout its natural enemies in the shape of root, stalk and ear rot diseases, drought, frost, wind storms, and the corn borer, and that can make the most effective use of plant food in the soil of ferns hope of a material increase in farm income, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation declares. Such seed corn is being developed by the United States Department of Agriculture, several agricultural experiment stations and the Funk farms in central Illinois.

It is estimated that corn diseases take an annual toll of 5 to 10 per cent from the crop. They are most destructive to the corn belt, and in the south, owing to the frequent return of corn to the same field in the rotation and the fact that many farmers do not make germination tests. The loss may take the form of seedling blight, or death of the plant soon after germination, causing poor stands. Those not so badly infected may survive, but be stunted, spindling, off color, and will early on hot days. They may show late tasseling and poor pollination, leaning or down stalks due to weakened roots, broken stalks, barrenness, premature death of stalks and leaves, or delayed ripening, broken shanks, soggy ears, or shrunk, unnaturally rough kernels. Corn rot diseases can be controlled to a considerable degree by careful physical selection of seed, by germination tests, and by treatment of the seed with organic mercury compounds at a cost of a few cents an acre. Since the average farmer's seed is rather badly diseased, these measures may increase yields from 10 to 15 bushels per acre. But, results can be made still more dependable by using seed bred for resistance to these diseases.

Diseased corn is more likely to be blown over or broken by high winds than sound corn, but big differences have been found in the ability of healthy corn of different strains to withstand windstorms. They differ in the number and strength of brace roots. In addition, some strains have three or four times as many main roots as others, which probably means a big difference in the ability to forage for plant food and moisture in the soil. Some strains make little or no response to added plant food, while others will respond with cumulative increases in yield to each additional gain in soil fertility.

All corn is not alike in its resistance to low temperatures. Some strains can stand a freeze of 27 degrees in either the early stages of development or when approaching maturity without being killed, while others catch cold and develop a frosted appearance if night temperatures fall to 45 degrees for a week or two. Early planted corn usually outyields late plantings by a substantial margin and a long ripening season in the fall improves the market quality, hence the great value of frost resistance even in ordinary seasons. Fortunately the strain which has been found most resistant to low temperatures on the Funk farms is also resistant to the corn borer, showing only 12 per cent of infestation when grown in corn borer territory alongside other strains which were 90 per cent infested.

The Foundation concludes that since the scientists have found strains of corn that are much more vigorous than any that were available a few years ago, it is logical to expect that they will develop still better strains in the future. If the average yield of corn could be increased by as much as 5 bushels per acre through the use of superior seed, it would mean millions of dollars to producers through reducing the acreage needed for the crop and lowering the cost of production.

Dairy Herd Tested

For the benefit of his milk customers, on last Monday, Jan. 21, 1929, Mr. McGee had the writer to go out and test his herd for T. B. We gave them the Temperature test which we think is the best of all tests, and found the herd free from T. B. and in first class condition otherwise, all fat and healthy.

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture. A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

A further improvement in braking performance is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in steady, uniform contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent in operation.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

GRANDMA WOOLEY PASSES ON

On Friday, last, Jan. 18th, Grandma Elizabeth Wooley
 passed peacefully to her rest,
 at the age of 90 years and 4
 months: Grandma Wooley's native state was Kentucky.
 From that state she moved to Mississippi thence to Louisiana and finally to Falls county Texas in 1874. She was preceded in death by her husband 15 years ago. Of the 8 children born to this union 5 are now living but illness prevented almost all of them from attending the funeral except J. R. Wooley of this city, in whose home she suffered her final illness. The funeral was held on Saturday
 by Rev. Henry Cash, a Primitive Baptist Minister of Charley Texas. She was first a member of the Missionary Baptist Church but in the latter years moved to a place where there was no church of that faith and her husband being a member of the Primitive church she joined, to unite the family in the order of worship. She was ever faithful in the service of her Master and patient in all suffering.
 Her's was an experience of rich spiritual benefactions and simple, profound faith in her Redeemer. Her full life of Christian fortitude should deeply implant the reality of her spiritual blessings and divine guidance in the hearts and minds of her children and associates as they have made the journey of life together. Burial was made in the Odd Fellow cemetery of this city.
