DR. DOMINGO JARIEL, Texas A&M Research Center postdoctoral associate, is studying different types of grasses to develop a year-round torage for livestock grazing in the Rolling Plains

Soil Chemist joins forage study at Texas A&M Research Center

The Texas A&M University and nutrient requirement of differ-Munday will be experimenting to develop integrated agricultural production systems for northwest Texas to provide year-round forage for livestock with the help of Dr. Domingo Jariel

Dr. Jariel is a native of a province about 300 miles southeast of Manila in the Philippine Islands. He received his bachelors degree in chemical engineering and masters in soil chemistry from the University of the Philippines. Jariel received his doctorate at Clemson University in South Carolina. His doctorate focused on soil chemistry and its interaction on growth of plants. His interest in soil chemistry evolved from an initial interest in inorganic chemistry.

The study will involve the evaluation of the adaptation of perennial and annual forage grasses to dryland calcareous soil conditions in the Rolling Plains.

'What it means is that we think that combining certain cool-season and warm-season grasses may give us year-round forage for cattle," said Jariel.

The objectives of the study are:

· Determine the adaptability of native perennial and annual forage grasses under variable soil moisture conditions in calcareous

· Compare the performance of forage grasses in terms of dry matter yield, leaf nutrient concentration, forage quality, and root weight distribution in the soil profile at different defoliation heights and frequencies.

· Determine the fertility level of the soil as influenced by growth

Research Center located here in ent forage grasses at different clipping frequencies.

· Develop management strategies that provide sustainable forage productions.

"In this region, most soils are low in organic matter, a source of nitrogen," Jariel explained. "We'll first attempt to select cold season and warm season grasses that are adaptable to moisture stress." The Rolling Plains have two problems, the annual rainfall is low and nitrogen has to be added to crops for growth. "We'll plant different forage grasses with a minimum of nitrogen applied. They'll also be subjected to moisture stress, and we'll see which performs best.'

'The grasses in this region now have a high fertilizer input. Those we select will not be commonly found here. They will be adapted to low levels of nitrogen applied and organic matter," he added.

The cool season grasses to be selected will be tall wheatgrass, Texas bluegrass, Canadian wild rye, and basin wild rye. Warm grasses will be sideoats grama, plains bristlegrass, alkali sacaton, and old world bluestem.

The grasses will also be cut to simulate grazing pressure, Jariel noted, which will help determine how different clipping (grazing) frequencies affect plants absorption of nutrients.

While Jariel concentrates on all soil-related aspects of the study, another post-doctoral associate will be hired to focus on the quality, production and ecology of the forage species. The project will be headquartered at the Texas A&M

Munday ISD Board of Trustees meets April 11

The Munday ISD Board of Trustees met in regular session on Tuesday, April 11, 1995 at 8:00 p.m. in the administration building. Following roll call, approval of previous minutes, and payment of the bills, several subjects were discussed or considered.

Use of the drug dog from the Haskell County Sheriff's office was the first item that was considered. The use of the dog was approved pending a program at the schools in which will explain how the dog works. The date of the program will be announced and everyone will be invited to Local policy DEA was amended. This policy is the local salary schedule that has been in effect for five years. This policy awards continued pay increases to experienced teachers who no longer receive state raises. This policy was approved pending a change in the state salary schedule. A new state salary schedule is included in Senate Bill 1 which has passed the Texas Senate.

The transfers to the Munday ISD were approved. Students who transfer to the Munday ISD must be approved before May 1st each year. Also approved was the band trip to Austin on April 21-22 to march in the parade to celebrate the rededication of the capitol building.

Also discussed was a proposal by Mr. Moeller to create career pathways in the Agricultural Science and Technology department. This would allow students to better prepare for jobs and college following graduation from high school. The proposal will be considered further at the May meeting when additional personnel will be considered.

Knox County HomeCare passes Medicare survey

With the completion of a recent survey, Knox County Hospital HomeCare is now officially certified by Medicare, according to Stephen Kuehler, administrator of Knox County Hospital. "Our professional HomeCare staff passed a rigorous Medicare survey without any deficiencies," he said. The survey focuses on policies and procedures that the service has put in place.

"Home health agencies across the country are held to the same tough standards by Medicare,' Kuehler said. "This is a good measure of the quality of service we are prepared to offer at Knox County Hospital HomeCare."

The formal procedure for opening a home health agency requires that the service open and then ask for a survey. "We are pleased that we got it right the first time, and that we can go on to build this new service, which fulfills another part of the mission that the hospital is committed to," he said.

The administrator explained that all the revenues from the Knox County Hospital HomeCare go to the Knox County Hospital District. "Since we are a tax-supported hospital, it makes good sense for residents to use a service that keeps the money at home," he said He explained that all the employees of the HomeCare service are employees of the hospital.

Since this service is associated with Knox County Hospital, the home health service provides a continuum of care for those who have been hospitalized, and others who may be suffering from illnesses or injuries that can be treated at home.

Cynthia Slayton, RN, Director of Knox County Hospital Home-Care, explained that the service provides intermittent care, seven days a week. "We can give injections, take blood pressure, care for wounds, change dressings, monitor a Foley catheter, and obtain blood and other specimens for laboratory tests," she said. "A Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Lockett, but much of the field work will take place at the A&M substations in Munday and Chillicothe.

Jariel is also involved in other, unrelated research areas, such as a study to measure soil responses to biosolid waste -sewage sludgeapplication on cropland.

"We can mix the sludge with shredded newspapers, wheat straw or cotton hulls before applying to the soil," Jariel explained. "Sludge is one source of organic matter, it is very rich in nutrients, but also in heavy metals as well.'

As a result, tests will be conducted to see just how far into the soil "profile" the metals go, and how much sludge could be applied before toxic levels of the metals reach groundwater supplies

He'll also be using two methods to test for levels of organic matter in conservation reserve program (CRP) lands. One procedure uses dichromate, an EPA-classified toxic chemical that oxidizes the carbon in a soil sample.

Jariel will be comparing results with a "dry combustion" method that dries the sample at very high temperatures to burn off the carbon as carbon dioxide.

In another project, Jariel will be trying to determine the effect of repeated burning for brush control on rangeland soils; he'll be measuring nutrients in the soil of burned areas to compare the levels to those of non-burned soils.

Sending my tax return to support the government got me to thinking. Allow me to think, or dream, or wish outloud some thoughts about our country and society.

that our government didn't take so much out of the hands of its citizens. The U.S. Government has become a fat sow that will soon collapse under her own weight. I wish we would cut the fat. We cannot continue to finance more and more.

As I considered what my check would support, I wished I could change some things. I wished I didn't have to pay for the continuance of "art". The finer things of life have always existed without the support of government.

I wish I could tune up our educational system. It is a pity that children don't fail anymore. Not because they deserved to pass, but because the system says "move'em

One teacher told me that any more than the rest of you, recently that she was not allowed to give a child a report card grade of below 50, regardless of the child's average. For Heaven's sake--and society's--if the kid earns a 30, give them a 30.

I wish I could change the way parents parent. I would cut the pop psychology and bring back common sense. I would forget the advice that you should count to three before the child is expected to act. > I wish I could change our welfare system. If every church member in America would follow the Biblical order to tithe, there would be no need for a government sponsered welfare system. The church could afford it, and would be better equipped to give needy people emergency aid. My tax check supports too many people who need to get off government assistance and into a job. The Bible says "He who does not work, does not eat."

I wish I could change my society and my government. You do too. The good news is--We can! We have the kind of government that is plyable, because we have a government "of the people, for the people, and by the people." People, let's do something about our society and our government.

Jeff Christian - Minister Munday Church of Christ

Early last week we had a funeral at the Church of Christ. As is usual in these situations, I met with the family the day before to learn a little more about Effic before the service on Monday. One of the things that really struck me about her was the fact that they were constantly going back to how much she loved her family. She always asked about her kids, grandkids, and her great-grand- memory of a very special lady.

This made me stop and think about something. Wouldn't it be great if when we die, people talk about what a loving person we were? It is funny, because it is easy in this world to get caught up in a number of different habits; and it is easy to get angry. But it should be a goal of all of us to show other people that they are special, even if we have not had the best relationship in the past. Jesus had to have meant something by, "Love your enemies." There is a lot to be said for love in this world. This article was written in

Try Electric Water Heating Instead!

The trouble with some water heaters? They produce fumes — like carbon monoxide. So they need rooftop exhaust vents that can leak and corrode.

With a new, high-efficiency electric water heater, you can say goodbye to flue symptoms. Today's electric water heaters cost less to purchase than other models. They last longer. They save energy. And, with no carbon monoxide or fumes to worry about, you can install them just about anywhere in your home.

So don't put up with those old flue blues. Electric water heating is simply the matchless choice for your home. To find out more about hot, new electric water heating options, simply give us a call.

promise big results. Investors can choose from more than 4,000 mutual funds, and new funds are joining the market at the rate of two a day. Often, managers of these new, smaller funds stress short-term performance and unusual investing techniques. Some of these managers may say that large funds are sluggish, unmanagable and unable to maintain positive results. Investors who hold shares of larger, established funds may listen to these fund managers and mistakenly begin to focus on daily performance. They may forget their long-term goals and switch to a start-up fund. However, a recent study by Mutual Fund Forecaster showed the value of investing in larger, more-established funds. the study analyzed mutual fund perfromance from December 1987 (the beginning of the stock market's rise) through the middle of 1994. In looking at all mutual funds available, the study found that the six largest funds -- all with assets of $10 billion or more -- achieved gains of anywhere from 112 percent to 212 percent. In the stock fund category, the study showed that the five largest stock funds all outperformed the average stock fund.

The six giant funds were represented king-size beds. Most consumers believe equally by no-load funds (which charge that bigger really is better. But when it no up-front fee but impose annual exing to invest in smaller, start-up funds that one-time commission when purchased but no annual fees). They all follow conservative, value-oriented investment philosophies, using a tremendous amount of research, most of it internally generated. Obviously, if these funds didn't perform well, investors wouldn't be pouring billions of dollars into them.

When trying to hack your way through the jungle of mutual fund information, don't fall prey to the short-term performance claims of some newer, smaller funds. While a strong stock market may entice you to jump into one of these funds, you could be unpleasantly surprised if the next 10 years don't produce the remarkable results of the past 10 years.

A better strategy might be to stick with established funds that have long histories of consistent results. Clearly identify your investment objectives, and choose a fund that has historically met these objectives. Then invest for the long haul. Don't bail out when the inevitable market downturn occurs -- mutual funds are designed to meet specific objectives over time.

To help you find one of these established funds, listen to the conclusion of the Mutual Fund Forecaster study: bigger is often better.

For a Wonderful Mother

There's a wonderful mother who's always been there When her family had any need... She often gave up hopes and plans of her own To enable her child to succeed She encouraged, believed in, supported each goal -Knew when it was time to let go And allow all the dreams she inspired through the years To mature on their own and to grow. There's a wonderful mother who plays a big part In the life of her family now too, And with every year she becomes more dear... That wonderful mother is you Happy 57th Birthday Connie Dockins
