Westley Teeter New coach starts career at Munday

Munday ISD has a new assistant coach motivating young athletes to do their best. Westley Teeter started his coaching career here at Munday this past January.

Coach Teeter graduated from Lockney High School and then he attended McMurry University in Abilene where he graduated with honors in December of 1994. He played football, basketball, golf and was on the track team while in high school and played football for McMurry for three years. During his senior year at McMurry he was wide receiver coach for the Indians.

Since coming to Munday in January, he has been teaching seventh and eighth grade math, coached seventh and JV boys basketball and coached the Mogul power-lifting team. During track season he will be directing boys' and girls' shot and disc throwers and will be the offensive and defensive line coach during football season.

"He is highly motivated and it carries over into the workplace," said athletic director Steve Gideon about Coach Teeter. "I am very pleased with his coaching ability."

Creating Healthy Menus

A one-hour national satellite seminar "Creating Healthy Menus" will be held on Wednesday, March 8 at 3:45 p.m. at the High School Library in Knox City.

The seminar, which will be beamed by satellite to all 50 states by the National Food Service Management Institute at the University of Mississippi, is the eighth in a series on managing child nutrition programs to promote healthy food practices among school-age children.

The target audience includes school lunch personnel and child nutrition specialists in all government feeding programs, in addition to school administrators and parents. The National School Lunch Program, serves approximately 25 million school lunches and five million school breakfasts per day in more than 93,000 schools.

Through seminar discussion, demonstrations and examples from across the nation you will learn how to create healthy menus through the use of production scheduling, standardized recipes, and production techniques. This program will also provide viewers an opportunity to learn how to:

- *Forecast and order proper ingredients and supplies for producing and serving menus with little waste and within the budget.

- *Plan menu production schedules that result in foods served at the peak of freshness.

- *Produce nutritious menu items using standardized recipes (with an emphasis on lowered fat, using salt and sugar in moderation, and use of herbs and spices).

- *Provide menus that can be served quickly and are satisfying and appealing to the customer.

This satellite seminar is provided through the National Food Service Management Institute's Nutrition Satellite Network and is being sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. If interested in attending, please contact Jane Rowan, (817) 454-2651, to pre-register by March 7.

Creating Schools for the 21st Century...

By Richard Kouri, President
Texas State Teachers Association

THE PROFESSION SPEAKS OUT

School-Community-Home Connections (Part 4 in a Series)

Today's American family is very different from that of a generation ago. Parents and children spend far less time together, and 40 percent of all parents believe they are not devoting enough time to their children's education. At the same time, research confirms that, regardless of the economic, racial, or cultural background of the family, when parents are partners in their children's education, the results are improved student achievement, better school attendance, reduced dropout rates, and decreased delinquency.

It seems clear that schools must find ways to encourage the participation of parents in their children's education and that parents must find the time both to encourage their children's work and to serve as role models for them.

It will not be enough just to increase parent involvement. Communities and other social services must be brought together to provide the kind of support that students need. Collaboration and cooperation among service agencies, business, community, parents, the media, and educators can promote the most efficient use of public resources and the most effective approach to helping children.

Teachers alone cannot be asked to do a job that needs the human and material resources of the larger society. Health and human services programs are designed to ensure that basic human needs are met. Education programs are designed to instill a desire for, and the skills to continue, lifelong learning in order to maximize a person's potential and enjoyment of life. While the two have very separate functions, they are both integral to the future of society.

In many communities schools are empty in the evening, weekends and most summers. Schools which are familiar and safe to parents and students may be a logical place to deliver some family services. Broad coalitions of people committed to education are needed by the schools as partners to cope with difficulties that schools have neither created alone nor are able to combat alone. Schools must make these partners welcome and provide for their participation.

Business should contribute one day per employee per year so that employees can visit their children's classrooms, attend parent-teacher conferences, volunteer their services, and be active participants in the school community.

Communities and parents must hold themselves equally accountable with educators for students' success. There is an African proverb that says, "It takes the whole village to raise a child." How true it is.

Part 5 of this series looks at technology.

HAVE A NICE DAY!

From A Carpenter's Son

Don Whetsell - Pastor
First Methodist Church, Munday - Goree

I would like to propose to the general church, here in the U.S., an idea so shocking, so revolutionary, that many people will think that I am insane. I realize that this thought of mine is so radical that if accepted, it may totally restructure the way most churches in the U.S. approach their ministries. But after much careful thought, I have decided that this must be said, so here goes . . . I think we should focus our evangelism efforts on people who aren't already believers.

Sounds crazy, right? But think about all the possibilities! Instead of just moving people's names from one church membership to another, we would actually be adding to the Kingdom, bringing hope to people who had no hope, sharing the incredible love of Jesus with people who had never felt that love before. Then the Holy Spirit would get all excited because of our obedience and start to run amuck in the United States again!

Of course there are a couple of problems with this idea. New born Christians have a nasty habit of asking really tough questions about their faith like: "How does this relate to my marriage?", "What if I still have doubts?", "How come I have to change my life if I'm no worse than you are?" You also have to spend a lot of time training them and supporting them, not to mention that pesky problem of them not knowing where to sit and always ending up in your pew! Then, there's the matter of having to learn new names and faces. And, worst of all, no matter what they do, you have to care about them just as much as you do your own relatives; they are your brothers and sisters in Christ.

a good idea after all. It really is a lot easier to work with people who are already Christians. Since they grew up in the church they know better than to ask all the awkward questions, and we don't have to train them, because someone else already did. (we hope . . .)

The more I think about it, the more I realize that the best way for us to grow the church is for all of us hordes of young people that are filling all the American congregations to go out and have more babies and raise them up in the church. I'm sure we can have enough to make up the for the million or so members American churches lose every year. And best of all we won't have to worry about them doing anything that makes us uncomfortable because we'll be their parents and we will have total control.

There's one thing that bothers me however. There's this story that Jesus told about sheep. It was something about leaving the ninety-nine sheep in the pen to go find the one sheep that is lost . . .

You don't think that still applies today, do you?

Technology advances cotton price information for Texas/Oklahoma

"Texas and Oklahoma have been on a hotbed of new, modern technology in both production and marketing for several years," says Dr. Don E. Ethridge, Economist at Texas Tech University, "and more developments are on the way." Dr. Ethridge has designed a computerized price analysis and reporting system. This system is known in the cotton industry as the Daily Price Estimate System (DPES).

According to Dr. Ethridge there is, "... more market price information at our fingertips than anywhere else in the world." The DPES system gives producers daily spot market price reports. This program is connected to the Plains Cotton Cooperative Association's TELCOT system and to

The Network. Daily results are also available on the National Cotton Council's COTNET computer bulletin board.

Before the system was developed, producers had only the spot quotations furnished by the USDA to use as a reference. Research has shown that the USDA quotations are not as accurate as the DPES program. There has been a tendency for the daily spot quotation premiums to understate actual producer premiums for higher qualities and to overstate actual producer discounts for lower qualities. Cotton producers can now receive accurate and current prices on over 25,000 different qualities of cotton.

Dr. Ethridge is the principal designer of the system; however, the Texas State Support Committee (TSSC) has kept the project afloat with funding. TSSC has funded this program for the past three years. Texas Tech University also helps fund the DPES program. For the system to be maintained, a minimum of $50,000 a year is needed. Now that the system is in place, Dr. Ethridge's next goal is to find a way to develop this for other cotton producing regions. Eventually he hopes to expand the system to the other end of the market to track textile mill prices.

"On A Wizer Note"

By Paul Weiser,
Knox County Extension Agent - Agriculture

In a few short months the lawns will begin to show signs of "thawing out". This green-up will also bring lawn weed problems. Now is the time to control annual warm season weeds like annual bluegrass, crabgrass, goosegrass and sandbur.

There are two ways to control weeds with chemicals -- pre-emergence and post-emergence. Pre-emergence herbicides like Surflan, Scott's Weed Grass Control, Scott's Weed Grass Preventer, Lescro Pre-M, Betasan and Dow Elanco XL work well on warm season annual grasses. Surflan, Lescro Pre-M, and Scott's Weed Grass Control work on the widest assortment of weeds. The other chemicals are weak on either goosegrass or annual bluegrass. Consult the labels for recommendations on rates of application.

Of the chemicals listed for warm season weed control, Surflan is one of the most popular. Some lawn fertilizers have this mixed in them to provide a one application process. I have seen some of those advertised on T.V. Be careful in selecting one of these fertilizer/herbicide products. Some say "Extension approved" or "follow Extension recommendations". The Texas Agricultural Extension Service recommends a soil test and base your fertilizer selection accordingly.

In instances where a soil test is not conducted, a fertilizer with a 3-1-2 (N-P-K) ratio is good. Fertilizers containing either sulfur coated urea or ureaformaldehyde as a nitrogen source allow for slow, even growth. The soluble forms, such as urea or ammonium sulfate, tend to produce very fast growth for short periods of time. If post-emergent herbicides are being applied to control cool season annuals watch your timing of application. If applied late in the season, the weeds will be larger and harder to kill. Also watch for seedheads. Once these weeds produce a seedhead you know there will be problems next year. By knowing this, you can make plans on applying a pre-emergent herbicide in late summer (August-September) for those cool season annuals.

When applying any type of chemical -- fertilizer, herbicide, insecticide, fungicide, etc. -- be sure to follow the directions on the label. Some pre-emergence herbicides require watering for good results while watering some post-emergence herbicides reduces the control. Application rate, and timing are also important for good results.

This information is given for educational purposes only. Reference to any commercial products or trade-names is made with the understanding that no discrimination is intended and no endorsement by the Knox County Extension office is implied.

The Christian Life

Jeff Christian - Minister

Munday Church of Christ

We are quickly approaching the end of the 1900s. Before we know it, the year 2000 will be upon us. Almost needless to say, much has changed in the last hundred years. We have gone from single-engine airplanes to supersonic jets; from crank telephones to outer-space satellite communications; from typewriters to multi-task computers. The new technology has taken over our world.

This "new technology" was supposedly set in place to make our lives easier. But has it really made things easier? And whatever happened to respect for churches? There was a time when churches were respected and appreciated. Now, many people see them as nothing more than another welfare society.

It is time that we realize that no matter what technological age we are in, there are some things we cannot afford to let go. We now live in an era where Christianity is no longer revered, but made into a mockery thanks to movies and other medias. It is time that we stop forgetting the history of such nations as Israel, for when their trust in God began to fall apart, so did their society.

A dollar bill professes, "In God We Trust." I hope I never see the day when that saying is removed from the back of the dollar. But unfortunately, that day may be swiftly approaching.

The benefits of variable annuities

Variable annuities are investments that combine the features of mutual funds with the tax advantages offered by insurance. Until recently, only a limited and knowledgeable minority understood the benefits of variable annuities, but they appear to be growing more popular.

Today, major insurance companies are teaming up with established mutual funds to offer variable annuities. These partnerships could mean a major concentration of financial resources going into variable annuities.

Variable annuities are long-term investments -- they're not for in-and-out trading. While most annuities have no up-front sales charge, they typically impose a fee for early withdrawal. The fee generally decreases the longer you hold the annuity. Additionally, because the income and growth of annuities are tax-deferred, the IRS can impose penalties if funds are withdrawn before age 59-1/2. Therefore, variable annuities are best for money that you would like to accumulate and compound. For money that you might want access to before age 59-1/2, mutual funds may be a better investment.

In choosing a variable annuity, the strength of the insurance company and the reputation of the money managers are vital. After you decide on the insurance company, you have a variety of investment options for your annuity, such as growth funds, government funds, international funds, bond funds and more.

Variable annuities also offer a death benefit. When you purchase an annuity, a contract is issued by the insurance company promising that, upon the death of the annuitant, the beneficiaries are guaranteed no less than the net contributions into the annuity. For example, if you deposited $50,000 into your variable annuity with no withdrawal, even if the investments are worth only $40,000 at the annuitant's death, the beneficiaries receive the total net deposit of $50,000. If the investments are worth more than that, the beneficiaries receive the full value.

One attractive benefit of annuities is tax control or deferral. If an investor in the 31 percent tax bracket deposited $50,000 in a mutual fund earning 7 percent, 20 years later the investment would be worth $128,434 after deducting taxes each year. If that same amount was placed in a variable annuity earning the same return, it would grow tax-deferred to $193,484. If the investor then withdrew the full amount and paid taxes on the gain (assuming a 31 percent tax bracket), the account would still be worth $149,004, or 16 percent more than the taxable investment.

Variable annuities are not for the short term. Their value fluctuates with the market, charges are generally higher than those of mutual funds, and there are penalties for early withdrawal. However, if you like mutual funds but would prefer to defer taxes on your long-term investments, ask a financial professional about variable annuities.

David Counts to serve on military affairs committee

Texas House Speaker Pete Laney has announced the appointment of Representative David Counts, Democrat of Knox City, to serve on the House Select Committee on Military and Veterans Affairs.

Speaker Laney created the committee Thursday by proclamation. The seven-member committee will study and report to the full House on the impact of national military and defense policies on Texas. It also will look at issues affecting Texas veterans that may be addressed by state law.

"The State of Texas has a long and proud history of concern for its military veterans and their families," Speaker Laney said. "Representative Counts is a devoted veteran, having served 32 years in the military service of our country. I believe he will make a thorough and complete study of these issues that are important to us all," the Speaker concluded.

tension Agent, talked to the Court about the need for a structural pest control license to spray chemical along roadside. He also informed that the survey of Commissioners Courts of all counties was used to determine the topics and agenda for a County Judge and Commissioners Training seminar to be held in Vernon on March 23.

Judge Perdue presented the bid for county depository for 1995 and 1996 from Citizens Bank in Knoxville City, which was the only bid received. Parker made a motion to accept Citizens Bank as the county depository. Birkenfeld seconded the motion. All voted in favor with Commissioner Homer and Judge Perdue abstaining.

All commissioners agreed to attend the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association meeting in Abilene. Judge Perdue is to send in to pre-register all attending.

Judge Perdue talked about some of the Legislative activities on proposed bills that will be coming up before the legislature. No action needed.

Judie Whitten, County Treasurer, presented all accounts and financial statements. Phipps made a motion to approve all accounts. Second made by Birkenfeld. All voted in favor.

Sheriff Mike Carlson approached the Court about the problems the Sheriff's Department has been having with radio communications. The Court directed Carlson to get more information on what needs to be done to correct the problem and report back to them.

Carlson also reported that the County is paying for a maintenance agreement on the computer system in the Sheriff's office. He was informed that the system is outdated and parts are not available anymore. The Court agreed to have Monroe Co. look at the system.

Carlson talked to the Court about the need for new floor coverings in the office and living area. The Court decided that the roof needed to be repaired before anything on the floor coverings was decided.

Judge Perdue talked to the Court about the compensation paid to the members of the Juvenile Board. The payments have been paid out of the salary fund and not the general fund in the past three years and need to be paid from the general fund by law. If compensation is paid out of the general fund no withholdings are taken out. Treasurer Whitten went on record that she was not the person that requested to be placed on the agenda. Judge Perdue stated the law speaks to how payment of compensation is to be paid and that it has been that way for the past years he has been in office. Homer made a motion to contact the auditors, Condley & Co., to get their opinion on the matter. The motion died for lack of a second. The Court agreed to have Judge Perdue contact the auditors and get an IRS ruling on the matter.

Parker made a motion to adjourn. Phipps second the motion. All voted in favor.

The foregoing minutes have not been approved or accepted.
