by Cynthia

One Sunday a young child was "acting up" during the morning worship hour. The parents did their best to maintain some sense of order in the pew but were losing the battle. Finally the father picked the little fellow up and walked sternly up the aisle on his way out. Just before reaching the safety of the foyer the little one called loudly to the congregation, "Pray for me! Pray for me!"

Yes, we know Munday is a small town. Here are some reasons why we know that...

If a teenager uses foul language their parents know within the hour.

Almost everyone in our schools also have cousins in our schools.

Our social events are our children's.

If you're under eighteen you can't buy cigarettes here because all the store clerks know how old you are.

If you decide to walk to school for the exercise, twenty cars pull over and offer you a lift.

You can set your bookbag out in the hall at lunchtime and it will still be there when you come out of the cafeteria.

There are three generations of the players families in the same bleacher row at every home game and most "away" games.

All youth that will be validating steers are required to be present in order to complete all paperwork. At least one parent (or legal guardian) and supervisor must also be present at the validation.

Knowledge is the Key to Survival in Tornado Alley This Spring

The Knox Prairie has certainly seen enough severe weather this year but we all are aware that more could happen at any given time. The weather is not only deceiving at times but it also cries wolf. Many residents feel that even though the siren is blowing a warning cry of potentially devastating weather, that nine times out of ten it will only be wind and rain. While that scenario is true most of the time we should not become so complacent that we ignore the warning all together. This article presents facts that should help you understand the phenomenon of tornadoes and what you can expect to happen before, during and after an outbreak.

Tornadoes form under a certain set of weather conditions in which three very different types of air come together in a certain way. A warm layer lies near the ground with strong south winds and humidity. In the upper atmosphere lies colder air and strong west or southwest winds. Temperature and moisture differences between the surface and the upper levels create what we call instability...while the change in wind with height is known as wind shear.

Between the warm moist air at low levels and the cool dry air aloft a third layer of very warm dry air is established. This layer acts as a cap and allows the atmosphere to warm further...making the air even more unstable. When a storm system is aloft and moves east things start to happen as the various layers are lifted. The lifting causes the "cap" to become removed and begins to set the stage for explosive thunderstorm development as strong updrafts develop. If the updraft and the surrounding winds both at storm level and near the surface cause the updraft to begin rotating - a tornado is born.

The Knox Prairie area is well suited to bring all of these ingredients together, as is the rest of "tornado alley." The main factors are the Rocky Mountains to the west, the Gulf of Mexico to the south, and a terrain that slopes downward from west to east.

Southern winds bring in warm moisture of the Gulf at low levels, very warm dry air form over the higher elevations to the west and becomes the cap as it spreads eastward over the moist Gulf air.

Where the dry air and the Gulf air meet the ground a dryline is formed. A storm system moving out of the southern plains or Rockies may push the dry line eastward which can produce severe thunderstorms or tornadoes along the dry line or in the moist air just ahead of it.

During times of possibly severe weather the National Weather Service contacts the local 911 office. Local storm spotters are put on alert and if conditions worsen they will be launched into activity. In the meantime, the NWS is looking for large circulations that precede a tornado. Doppler radar shows "reflectivity" and "velocity" - tornadoes are too small to be resolved on the 88D radar. It is the spotters job to watch for the tornadoes that may eventually affect our community. The NWS will issue a watch or a warning. A watch may cover an area of 20,000 square miles or so and tells us that there is a potential for even one tornadic thunderstorm. A warning is issued when a funnel has been sighted or that a mesocyclone (often the parent of a tornado) has been detected by radar. If a tornado or extreme wind conditions are detected by watchers then the local fire department and city employees will sound the siren, thus warning that approaching conditions may be hazardous to residents. One important fact to remember is that in Munday there will never be a siren blown to signal an all clear condition. If Munday residents hear the siren it is to signal the possibility of damaging weather conditions - not that the conditions have improved.

Also in Munday it is important for warnings to be taken into consideration as quickly as

Minding Your Own Business

With Don Taylor, co-author of Up Against the Wal-Marts

Who do you call when you need legal advice?

It is common practice when you're starting or running a business to try to save every nickel you can. However, there are some areas where saving a few dollars may cost hundreds or even thousands on down the road. Seeking sound legal advice is often one of those areas.

I find that not only do pre-start-up entrepreneurs struggle with the issue of legal advice but also veteran business owners grapple with this issue as well. The answer to the question of whom to call for legal advice is both easy and difficult. The easy answer: call an attorney. The difficult part: which firm and which attorney?

In this column, I want to address three basic legal issues. First, why should you work with an attorney? Second, how do you find a good attorney? And finally, how can you minimize legal costs?

Why have a legal partner?

I've stated in previous columns that business owners need external partners or advisors to help them through difficult problems or uncharted territory. Attorneys, tax advisors and bankers are common external partners.

A good small-business attorney can help protect you and your assets from numerous business losses. Your legal partner can keep you out of trouble with employees, government regulations, vendors and customers. He or she can assist you with real estate purchases, legal structures, contracts and personnel policy issues.

Finding the right attorney

Selecting the right legal partner may not be as challenging as you think. You can call your state's bar association, consult legal directories or use your local yellow pages.

My favorite method is to seek referrals from business friends and acquaintances. I call a few business associates. When the same name comes up a few times, I start with that firm or attorney. Remember, selecting an attorney is a personal issue. Find a person you're comfortable with and who has experience in small-business issues.

Here are some characteristics and experience I'd look for:

- A positive attitude. I want to work with an attorney who can not only point out the legal problems but also propose positive, practical solutions.
- Common sense explanations. While attorneys are trained to work in "legalese," I expect simple, concise terms and everyday language when we talk.
- Respect for my business. Even though my business is small now, I don't expect it to stay that way. I want a partner who wants my business now and will help me grow into a bigger, better client.
- Broad-based experience. I want a partner with a broad, generalized knowledge of business law who won't hesitate to bring in a "specialist" if needed.

Saving money

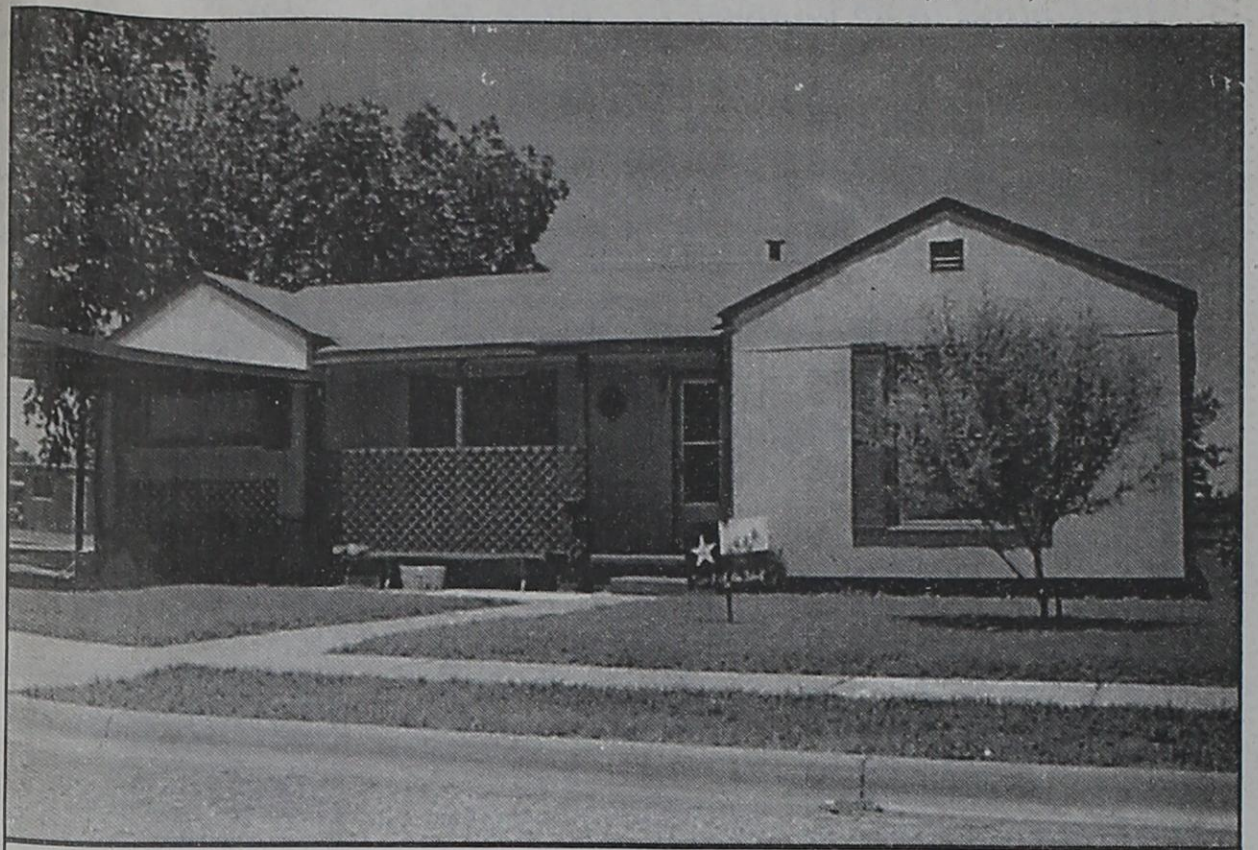

Attorneys usually sell their knowledge, experience and skills by the hour. Charges vary from $50 to $500 per hour and more. My advice to small-business owners is to buy only the hours you need. Good friend, good relationship aside, it's still your money.

Here are some ways to lower your legal costs:

- Don't visit or call your attorney until you gather all the facts on the issue you wish to discuss.
- Write down notes and questions prior to your meetings or calls.
- Do your own "rough draft" and have your attorney look it over.
- Be honest with your attorney and give him or her all the facts both good and bad.
- Keep good records and take all related papers to meetings.
- Call your attorney early if you see a problem developing.

Finally, as you build your legal relationship, remember that no attorney can guarantee legal outcomes. However, having a legal partner in your corner does improve the odds of your success.

Former Munday Woman to be Honored in Philadelphia

She was born on the Fourth of July and was appropriately named. And now Liberty Bell Cotton will have the opportunity to view the very piece of history that she was named after.

Ms. Cotton will be one of 100 participants of The Photo of the Century presented by Kodak. More than 25,000 people from across the nation submitted applications to participate in this historic event. The photograph will be taken in front of Independence Hall this July 4, 1999, of 100 Americans born on the Fourth of July, one born each year from 1900-1999. All 50 states will be represented and The Photo will even include a baby born July 4th morning in Philadelphia.

The event will take place during Philadelphia's 10-day Sunoco Welcome America! Fourth of July festival and is the official kick-off of Philadelphia's 18-month

Millennium celebration. "The Photo of the Century presented by Kodak represents a slice of 20th century America, including a diverse group of people with a common bond - the birthday of July Fourth," said Philadelphia Mayor Edward G. Rendell. "What better place for this 'Century of Americans' to celebrate than in American's Birthplace, and what better backdrop than Independence Hall."

Some of the stories behind the participants include the following people who were born on the Fourth of July: a heart transplant survivor; two sisters born on the Fourth of July to be married in a double wedding on July 4, 2000; a farmer; a mayor; a Catholic sister; a food columnist; several musicians; descendants of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; a Cherokee native; a set of quadruplets; a set of triplets; two sets of twins; a husband and wife; a mother and daughter; a mother and son; a cowboy; a soap opera star; a movie star; a man and his dog; and three cancer survivors, among many others.

Born in Jefferson County, Texas, on July 4, 1936, Ms. Cotton was raised in an orphanage in Galveston.

Ms. Cotton was nominated for The Photo by her son Alton, the ninth of Ms. Cotton's 10 children. He hoped this would be a touching tribute to his mother's dedication to family - a way to say a special thank you to a woman who sacrificed everything for her children.

Ms. Cotton lived in Munday from the early 50's until 1978 when she moved to Wichita Falls. Alton, who now resides in possible. Especially if you live in a mobile home or if you have an elderly neighbor or family member then you may need to take cover immediately when the siren is blown. It is also important to remember that local storm spotters are watching activity in the area and that Mother Nature may "cry wolf." This is especially difficult for the spotters who fear that the public will become complacent and ignore the warnings. On the other hand, if they don't sound the siren in an appropriate amount of time and a tornado strikes the community, it will be the same group of gentlemen who will be digging through the rubble in an effort to rescue survivors and look for victims. Theirs is a difficult job, indeed.

Tornadoes can form within one minute in rotating clouds. They can also descend to the ground in mere seconds and destroy whatever is in their path. Most tornadoes last only two or three minutes but the kind we see on the news and that do unbelievable damage last about fifteen minutes. Tornadoes that have been timed seem to move at an average of about 35 miles per hour but every year some are seen to stand still and other are clocked at 60 miles per hour. Tornadoes have been known to range in diameter from 3 feet to two miles.

Sometimes a group of tornadoes are spawned by a single thunderstorm. A "family" has had as many as 7 tornadoes, although two is much more common.

Tornadoes have been described as sounding like a train. Others have been described as sounding like a jet plane, or a waterfall. The sound probably depends on how strongly the funnel is interacting with the ground. Tornadoes that are passing just above ground level may sound more like bees. The sound of the swirling column has never been recorded without the distortion caused by the wind rushing towards the tornado.

Most tornadoes occur from 5:00 to 9:00 p.m. They can occur after dark, but are much less likely. A few of the deadliest tornadoes in history have occurred in total darkness. The odds go down after dark, but they don't go to zero. The best advice is to be aware of weather conditions and watch or listen to a weather report at least once a day during tornado season.

Tornadoes have life cycles. They start out thin, get wider and stronger and then weaken and wider or perhaps get thinner, even "ropey." Another thing to consider is that at any one time we probably don't see all of the tornado. Depending on the moisture and dust available, we only see part of the funnel. Sometimes all we see is the central core. Sometimes the central core is clear and we see only the walls. The third consideration is that the air flows are constantly changing and the thunderstorm above the tornado is weakening and strengthening.

Tornadoes pull in huge amounts of air - this is called "inflow." The thunderstorm itself is pulling in air - this is called "updraft." The inflow is often warm and humid, supplying the storm with energy.

There can also be air moving downwards on the outside of the funnel as well as in the core of the funnel. The air in the walls of the funnel is moving upward. The downward movement on the outside of the funnel is probably related to an air flow called the RFD, or rear flank downdraft. The RFD may be one of the triggers of the tornado, and moves downward out of the back of the thunderstorm adjacent to the updraft. Since this downward moving RFD is an important ingredient, it is not surprising to see downward movement of air. A multiple vortex tornado is a tornado inside a tornado, and can be very intense, with both big and small vortices to create small areas of incredible damage. A picture of a multiple vortex tornado looks like one large cloud with several small funnel tails encompassed closely together.

When the Oklahoma City tornado took place several weeks ago media began to mention the Fujita-Pearson Tornado Scale. This is a form of measurement of wind speed, velocity, damage, etc. The following is a depiction of that scale:

F-0: 40-72 mph, chimney damage, tree branches broken.

F-1: 73-112 mph, mobile homes pushed off foundation or overturned.

F-2: 113-157 mph, considerable damage, mobile homes demolished, trees uprooted.

F-3: 158-205 mph, roofs and walls torn down, trains overturned, cars thrown.

F-4: 207-260 mph, well-constructed walls leveled.

F-5: 261-318 mph, homes lifted off foundation and carried considerable distances, autos thrown as far as 100 meters.

Wide Variety of Uses for KARATE®

To produce a high-yielding, quality crop in our area, growers must be crop protection experts. Most insecticides are crop specific, so growers need to know about a vast array of products to combat each problem. Multiple crops, multiple insects and one solution. That's what Karate insecticide offers growers. Karate is labeled for use on a wide variety of crops, including corn, soybeans, cotton and peanuts, as well as many vegetables, such as broccoli, tomatoes, onions and more.

Karate offers excellent control of yield-damaging insects. In addition to controlling budworms, bollworms and boll weevils in cotton, Karate also is tough on corn pests like fall armyworms and corn borers. The insecticide consistently works well on troublesome soybean and peanut pests, including bean leaf beetles, earworms, cutworms, stinkbugs and more.

Karate even works where most pyrethroids fail. It suppresses secondary pests, such as aphids and mites. Not only does Karate provide superior insect control in many crops, but it offers growers several other benefits.

Karate offers longer residual control than other pyrethroids or chemistry classes. Longer lasting control can mean fewer insecticide applications throughout the growing season, which saves growers money.

Additionally, research studies show cotton fields treated with Karate out-yielded those treated with other pyrethroids 70 percent of the time and those treated with non-pyrethroids 82 percent of the time.

Try Karate for all your insect control needs. Contact your local ag chem dealer to find out more about Karate insecticide by Zeneca Ag Products.

©1999 Zeneca Inc. Zeneca Ag Products is a business unit of Zeneca Inc. KARATE® is a trademark of a Zeneca Group Company. Karate is a restricted use pesticide. Farm Safety: Always read and follow label directions.
