"I CHRISTEN THREE N. S. SAVANNAH"

"I christen thee N. S. Savannah. Godspeed." With these words, followed by the explosion of a bottle of champagne, First Lady Mamie Eisenhower sent the world's pioneer nuclear-powered merchant ship sliding down the ways on the 21st of July.

The Savannah is named for the first ship to cross the Atlantic under steam power. That historic voyage was made in 1819, and it took 22 days. The new Savannah would seem inconceivable to those who lived in the time of her predecessor. She looks more like a yacht than a conventional merchant vessel. She will carry 60 passengers as well as quantities of cargo. And her atomic power plant will drive her for three years on a single feeding of fuel.

It will, of course, be a long time before atomic power is widely used in the merchant marine. The cost of building such a ship as the Savannah is, as of now, prohibitively high judged by commercial standards. She is a prototype from which it is expected, all-important knowledge will be gained. On top of that, she is a dramatic example of what the atom can do in the service of peace rather than war.

Then, there is another significance to the Savannah. The U. S. Flag Merchant Marine is an absolutely essential part of this nation's economic complex and its military security alike. And the fact that we have launched the first nuclear vessel of this kind symbolizes our intention to maintain leadership and power on the seas.

WINNEMUCCA, NEVADA, THE HUMBOLDT STAR: "Recent months have brought measurable improvements in the unemployment picture. And the signs suggest still further betterment as business continues to climb.

"But some political figures — and organizations — are still talking as if we were in the depths of the recession. They want to beat the drum until the skin wears through."

LEBANON, KENTUCKY, MARION FALCON: "Sometimes an editorial writer believes all his efforts are in vain, that nobody reads these lines, and much worse, nobody cares. We were going through our letter file this week, and we were amazed at the number of letters of appreciation we had received in our ten years here . . ."

NEWSPAPERS AND TV

Last year was a very bad year in the U. S. automobile industry. Sales were far under both past and anticipated levels. There was but one exception — American Motors, with its Rambler car, whose sales zoomed an astounding 80%.

So something reported by Editor & Publisher in a late issue is of great interest.

The television people claim the world for their advertising medium. But American Motors, in setting its 1958 record, spent more than two-thirds of its $6 million advertising budget in newspapers, and absolutely nothing on TV.

The other makes all spent large parts of their ad budgets on TV.

Editor & Publisher says: "It will be argued, of course, that 1958 was an unusual year, that too many other factors enter into automobile sales, and that these figures are meaningless. We disagree.

"It seems to us that the coincidence — the manufacturer placing the largest percentage of his advertising appropriation in television and having the largest percentage drop in sales together with the fact that the only manufacturer who spent no money in TV but had the only increase in sales — is too great to ignore."

TV is a great medium but nothing can supplant the newspaper.

A MARK OF RESPONSIBILITY

Just recently Soviet Premier Khrushchev said: "Capitalists are going to be kept in archives like old newspapers or newsreels. We will look at them as today we look at the remains of prehistoric monsters and say: 'Look, that was a capitalist.'" This is nothing more than a threat to every American's future.

When Tupolev, the Russian aircraft designer, visited our aircraft plants it wasn't the planes that astounded him; it was the crowded parking lots at the factories. He found it hard to believe that thousands of workmen owned a car and a home.

Maybe Russia will learn someday that capitalism is a mark of personal responsibility. Until then, every American should keep in mind Russia is bent on taking away from him the privilege of being a capitalist.

Texas homeowners can be assured of fuller protection in the quality of plants they buy under the improved Texas Nursery Law now in effect.

The new law, passed by the 50th Legislature earlier this year, will improve the quality of nurseries by setting minimum requirements for plant facilities and care, and by providing for increased inspection service. In addition to large-scale nursery operations, inspection also includes food stores and other stores which sell nursery stock. This is an added provision of the law to insure the quality of plants going to the consumer.

Primarily, the legislation redefines nurserymen into categories of growers and dealers, removes some loopholes of the old law's provisions more enforceable. It also provides for a slight fee increase, added at industry request to give the needed increased inspection service.

FIRE ANTS RETURN TO THE CITY

First, the vicious little fire ant from South America showed up in Houston, then San Antonio, and now it has put in an appearance in Dallas.

The fire ant, whose sting is painful and whose stone-hard earth mounds interfere with mowing and cattle grazing, has spread from East Texas to widely separated areas. In Houston, where more than 20,000 acres were infested, a co-operative city-county program was inaugurated and most of the area has been treated.

Approximately 1,000 acres was discovered infested with the pest in Dallas and the county had to be placed under the provisions of the imported Fire Ant Quarantine. The quarantine prevents the movement of soil, soil bearing plants or other possible carriers from infested plots without permits from the Texas Department of Agriculture.

The known infestations are in isolated plots with the largest area centering in a county gravel pit. All materials moving from infested points is being fumigated by inspectors from the department.

Mr. and Mrs. Doug Moore and Melinda visited her mother, Mrs. Maurysse Blacklock, and other relatives here and Goree over the week end.

295 Fishermen Pay For Fishing Without Licenses

Fishing without licenses topped the list of game and fish violations in July, according to the Director of Law Enforcement, Texas Game and Fish Commission.

Game wardens charged 295 persons with fishing without licenses during the month. Four persons were arrested for hunting without licenses and an equal number of bait dealers were arrested for failing to purchase the required licenses.

A total $7,020.15 in fines and court costs was paid by 393 violators. Thirty cases were dismissed in court, six persons served time in jail, 12 appealed to higher courts, and two were found not guilty.

"These violations are usually committed by persons who fail to realize the importance of game laws," said the law enforcement director. "They fail to understand that without the laws, Texas' fish and wildlife soon would be destroyed completely."

Trespassing remained highest on the list of game violations with 18 arrests, while closed-season hunting arrests ranked second with eight.

Seven persons were caught using seines and nets illegally and eight were arrested for having too many hooks on their lines.

Seven cases of water pollution were reported by wardens across the State.

Poachers Face Stiff Penalties Under New Laws

A new trespass law will be effective in Texas, October 14, it has been announced by the assistant secretary of the Game and Fish Commission. The law which is covered in HB 36, will become effective without the signature of the governor.

It provides penalties of up to 30 days in jail and a $500 fine and forfeiture of hunting or fishing licenses for a period of three years, upon conviction.

The law makes it illegal for any person to hunt, fish or camp on the enclosed property of another person without the consent of the owner or other person in authority.

The new law is enforceable by any peace officer and arrests may be made without a warrant.

"The trespass problem is a major one in the protection of wildlife," the secretary said. "Persons who climb fences to illegally hunt on the property of others don't usually regard either the season or the bag limit. As a result, prosecutions have been heavy."

"Under the new law, however, enforcement of the trespass law is the work of peace enforcement officers, which preclude the game warden. Now when the game warden finds a poacher the only thing he can do is to notify the landowner. The landowner then can make a complaint and cause the arrest to be made by a peace officer."

Mr. and Mrs. Alois Schumacher moved to Canyon last week to make their future home.

Holding summer rainfall on the land where it falls can mean additional income through better crop and pasture yields, says Jack Parton, extension soil and water conservation specialist. Terraces, farming on the contour and the use of mulches are methods which will help hold rain where it falls. Cover on the land will also aid in holding the moisture.

Cotton root rot damage is reported as widespread in the sections of the State where this disease is a problem. Farmers are advised to contact their local county agent for information on practices which may be used to aid in its control.

Weekly Health LETTER

Issued by the State Health Department

Parents, especially mothers are as a general rule extremely careful with their young children; careful in what they eat, careful that they have their shots, careful in their play.

Uppermost in the parents' mind is safety.

While the child is home, the mother has a direct control over the safety of her child.

When a child leaves home, for school or other activities, the responsibility becomes more complex.

It becomes necessary for parents to do their part to see that the community is doing its best to safeguard children from preventable accidents.

What parents can do about this is well worth looking into. The school, police, fire, recreation and health departments all have a part in planning for child safety.

A child is fortunate if he has attended a well-conducted nursery or kindergarten before school. Here the youngster learns very early to play safely and happily with other children, and he begins to learn the rules of safety.

If he walks to nursery school with his mother, or even if he goes to school in a bus or the family car, the rules of safety can still be taught.

The wise parent finds out what safety rules the school is teaching and then sees to it that the same rules apply at home.

He makes doubly sure that nothing he says or does runs counter to what is being taught in school, because such conflict only confuse and undermines the child's confidence in both his teachers and parents.

It is well to follow this same practice throughout the early years of the child's schooling. Safety is an important part of the elementary curriculum, as in secondary schools where older children get instruction in safe driving and the rules of the highway.

Police and fire departments take an active part in promoting safety practices for children in cooperation with parents.

The health department is often thought of chiefly as responsible for controlling sanitary nuisances and contagious diseases.

However, it is vitally concerned about accidents, because they are the commonest cause of childhood death.

News From The U. S. Congress

By Congressman Frank Beard

As Congress moves toward adjournment and most Members prepare to return to their homes, two top news stories during the next few weeks will undoubtedly be the visit to this country of the Russian strong man, Khrushchev. We can all hope that something fruitful will come out of the talks between Khrushchev and President Eisenhower and that many of the differences that exist between our two countries can be peacefully settled; however, past experience indicates that anything really fruitful coming from his visit is highly improbable. The Geneva Conference of Foreign Ministers which has just concluded did not accomplish anything, and the Russians did not give one inch on any problem or question, and their ultimatum with respect to Berlin still stands. The greatest contributing factor to the failure of the Geneva Conference no doubt was the desire of the Russian Leader to come to this country and to meet personally with our President. This he has now accomplished. In some respects the meeting here in the United States between the two Heads of State could be described as a Russian victory, for we had stated that there would be no such meeting as long as the ultimatum with respect to Berlin existed. Perhaps, however, the greatest danger with the Khrushchev visit is that we will be lulled into a false sense of security with the thought that the cold war is thawing. While we are absorbing the onslaught of Soviet propaganda which necessarily will accompany the Khrushchev visit, we must be ever mindful of the fact that the basic aim of Communism is world revolution and the eventual overthrow of our form of Government.

With the passage of a labor bill in the House this week, the Congress took a long step toward adjournment. Still to be enacted is a program for financing the interstate highway system, a housing bill, and several appropriations. At the present time it looks as if adjournment date may be September 5th.

Recent visitors from home were Miss Maxine Ussery, Justin; Mr. and Mrs. Arch A. Harrison, Mrs. Jack Larson, and Mr. W. R. Whitely, of Seymour; Miss Bobbye Zinkar of Haskell; Mr. and Mrs. James E. Totten and daughters, Sally and Becky of Electra; Mr. A. J. Pinkerton, and Mr. W. H. Finley of Decatur; Mr. J. R. McClung of Bonaville; Mr. J. D. McElhaney of Chico; Mr. W. E. Bruton of Newcastle; Mr. John G. Loftin of Loving; Mr. R. C. Rainwater of Oklaunion; Mr. Wayde Williams, Mrs. Louise Williams, and Mr. Gene Williams of Whitesboro; and Mr. Homer Lexson of Wichita Falls.

Guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Layne Womble last week were Mrs. C. E. Jackson of Austin, Lynn Jackson of Houston, Mrs. Alice Holloman of Corsicana and Mrs. W. H. Hoffman and daughter of Paducah. Week end guests in the Womble home were Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Womble and son of Plainview and Mrs. Joe Womble and sons of Sherman.

Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Barton and children of Pecos visited her mother, Mrs. Dessie Fields, and other relatives here over the week end.

Electronics Get Into Agriculture

Farmers may be standing on the threshold of electronic agriculture, thinks Cecil Parker, extension farm management specialist. Don't look for electronics to take over the plowing and milking just yet, the specialist explains, but it might perform an even more vexing chore — the complicated brainwork necessary in modern agriculture.

Electronic computers, through a technique called 'linear programming', can give a more precise and accurate answer to many farm management problems than the most experienced farmer in the country," he says. "A typical farmer must choose between many crop and livestock combinations. When all the possible variations between crops and livestock are considered, with the mass of different management practices, there are thousands of possible combinations," Parker adds. "Yet, only one of these thousands of combinations will bring the highest net profit."

Since it might take months — or even years with ordinary pencil methods — to compute the point of highest profit, farmers have been navigating by sight instead of by instruments, so to speak. Now, says Parker, we can feed problems into an electronic computer which makes 4000 multiplications a second. Almost instantly, the machine spools out the exact crop acreages, the number and type of livestock and the management practices that will give the one highest possible profit.

As yet we don't know how this new linear programming technique can be brought into practical use for the individual farmer, but the Texas Agricultural Extension Service is now using the A & M College computer for family sized farm result demonstrations and we think farmers will actually be using electronic computers in management decisions in the not-too-distant future, said the specialist.

Don't go shopping for one of these electronic wizards, Parker adds, as they cost about 2 million.

Guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hannah over the week end were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Choate and children of Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. Troy Denham and children of El Paso and Miss Charlotte Hannah of Lubbock.
