Foard County Gets First Oil Producer; Making 75 Barrels

The Fain-McGaba Matthews No. 1 Roxana, located near the town of Tahlia in Foard county, is declared to be good for 75 barrels per day from a sand encountered at 1475 feet, and while a crew of men are engaged in building storage for the producer the drilling crew is making preparations to send the bit further into the pay. The strike is the result of a quest for oil which has been in progress in Foard county for a number of years. Although many wells have been drilled in the county the result has always been dry holes. Reports from the locality in which the producer was brought in state that acreage in the vicinity is demanding high prices and royalties are changing hands at high figures.

A TRIBUTE TO THE DOG

Most everyone has read, and probably re-read, Senator Vest's tribute to the dog, which is one of the most beautiful tributes ever paid to the canine. The occasion was the trial over the killing of the dog, which was held in a Missouri town when Vest was a young lawyer. Senator Vest appeared for the plaintiff, while Senator Francis M. Cockrell, then a country practitioner, represented the defendant.

W. H. Sheedy resided in Missouri at the time of the trial in the courts of Missouri and followed it closely until it reached the Supreme court of the United States, where Senator Vest paid his memorable tribute to the dog.

Young Vest took no interest in the testimony and made no notes, but at the close of the case arose, and in a soft voice, made the following address: "Gentlemen of the Jury—the best friend a man has in the world may turn against him, and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us, may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads.

"The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous is his dog. A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fierce, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert him, he remains. When riches take wings, and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens.

"If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against danger, to fight against his enemies. And when the last scene of all comes, and death takes his master in its embraces and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way; there by the graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death."

When he concluded his remarks there were but few dry eyes in the audience. The case was submitted without further argument, and the jury promptly returned a verdict for the plaintiff.

Tech Students Weave Likeness of Gov. Dan Moody On Toweling

The Times is in receipt of a towel bearing the likeness of Gov. Dan Moody woven into the cloth, and a letter accompanying the gift, which came from the Texas Technological College at Lubbock, states that the entire work is produced by students of the college, none of whom have been studying textile engineering for a longer period than two years.

We believe that too much support cannot be given this phase of industry in our great state. With the vast cotton production of Texas may be coupled the unlimited supply of natural gas available now in almost every town of size within the state, which, together with properly trained textile engineers will bring an era of prosperity to the South and to Texas such as we cannot conceive.

In speaking of the training of the young people of Texas for usefulness along these lines Col. E. O. Thompson, a member of the board of regents of the Texas Technological College recently stated in an address that the purpose of the engineering school in Texas Tech. was to turn out graduates, who, upon their graduation, could earn as much as a bricklayer, and it is stated that already there is a standing offer for all engineering graduates at a good salary.

FARM WOMEN'S SPECIAL

Phebe K. Warner

They say there is nothing new under the sun. But who ever heard of a Farm Woman's Special? There have been "Men Specials" of every species. And a few years ago Texas sent a "Farm Boy" special up through the northern States. Just last week the Texas Good Will Special with its hundred and twenty-five business and professional men headed by our own Boy Governor, Dan Moody, (this seems to be the day of YOUTH, and there never was a greater generation of young men in America) returned from their Good Will tour of the North and East.

Those men visited Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Washington, carrying to those great commercial centers the story of Texas resources and opportunities. They were greeted everywhere in the true American spirit. Why not? Aren't we all just Americans?

But the mission of the Texas Good Will Special was chiefly to teach. To let the rest of the world know where Texas is and what it is and what it is good for. For this reason our men folks went North and East where there are millions of perfectly good people going to waste who need homes and jobs and an opportunity to carve out a future for themselves.

And Texas has unlimited opportunities going to waste on every hand. With such a mission in mind our eastbound Good Will Special clasped hands with the commercial and industrial leaders of that densely populated section of our country.

But the Farm Women's Special is headed in the opposite direction. They're bound for the Pacific Coast, out where the West is. Out where the world is still in the making. Out where there is plenty of room for new enterprises and new systems and new ideas to grow.

And the special mission of the Texas Farm Women's Special is to learn. Texas produces more raw materials for food and clothing than any other two States in our nation. She produces more cotton and more wool than any other State. She produces more cattle and more hides than any other State. And yet with her billion dollar crop annually, her rural homes and her rural schools are not the equal to those of Colorado and California.

Our farm women work in the fields by the thousands and our farm children are kept out of school to raise these immense food and clothing crops for all the people. The Texas farm mothers are getting tired of such a life. They know there is something wrong with their system of living. They know there is a better way, so Miss Susan Landon, Educational Director of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association, as their leader, they are going to invade Colorado, Utah and California to find out what's wrong with rural life in Texas.

Already they have a suspicion that the source of their trouble is couched in our marketing system. That our farm people work enough and produce enough to live well has been demonstrated year after year by our surplus products.

So while our hand-picked men went East to tell the story of Texas resources, and her greatness, our hand-picked farm women have gone WEST to study what to do with our products after we get them.

Leaving Dallas, Saturday night, July 9, over the Fort Worth and Denver fifty farm women set sail for the bean fields around Colorado Springs. At that place they were the guests of the Colorado Bean Growers Association, where they feasted on pinto beans in varied forms, especially pinto bean bread. The next stop was at Salt Lake City where the Texas Farm women spent a day visiting this interesting city of the far west. At Sacramento they will visit the Almond and Poultry Associations and study their plan of marketing. At Petaluma they will be the guests of the Petaluma Poultry Association where they expect to get many good suggestions on how to handle Texas' fast increasing poultry output. There is no other crop growing so fast

Women Praise The Encampment Held At Seymour City Park

At the close of the Knox-Baylor women's encampment at Seymour on July 16th eighty-five enthusiastic women agreed that such a meeting could be held each month in the year.

Much interest was taken in the individual club reports, in which Mrs. Russell of Baylor county, won first place and Mrs. Bryan Lowery of Knox county second, having done the most outstanding club work.

Mrs. Ramsey of Wichita Falls, conducted the recreation program and kept everyone guessing what she was going to have them doing next. The pinks won in number of points over the blues in the recreational program.

At eight o'clock the women went to the city hall where they were entertained with a little playlet, "Let's Stay Married," through the courtesy of the Texas Light and Power Company of Dallas, and the presentation of the playlet kept everyone laughing.

After the play the women assembled back in the park and held one of the most interesting events of the encampment, and that was the stunts given by each of the clubs.

AKERS-DAVID

The marriage of Miss Ellen Francis Akers and Mr. E. Donna David was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Akers, on Sunday morning at eight o'clock, the Rev. J. H. Hamblin of Stamford officiating.

The home was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and ferns, and the setting was attractively arranged for this occasion. The bride wore a beautiful costume of rose blush crepe Elizabeth, with accessories to match and carried a lovely bride's bouquet of pink roses and ferns.

Following the ceremony the young couple left immediately for Oklahoma City, Fort Worth and other points on a honeymoon trip, after which they will be at home at Gorman, Texas.

The bride is one of Munday's most popular young ladies, having been reared in Munday, and having resided here since infancy except for a few years the family resided at De Leon. She is a young lady of culture and business ability as well, having been actively associated with her parents in the conduct of their business at Munday and De Leon.

The groom is a prominent young business man of Gorman, where he is associated with the Continental State Bank as cashier. He is a most excellent young man of exemplary habits and unquestionable business ability, and is a leader in social, business and religious activities in that city.

Those present at the marriage of these excellent young people were Mr. and Mrs. Newberry of Gorman, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Broach and son, Fred, Jr., Mrs. Hickland of Weatherford, Mrs. J. O. Stone of De Leon, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Macon and the daughters, Mickey Jesse and Emmett Ophelia of Gorman.

Munday Gets Next Veterans Reunion

On Thursday and Friday of last week the Confederate veterans and old settlers of Knox county were guests of Knox City, and we have it from a number of those who attended that the occasion was a most enjoyable one. An interesting program was carried out each day, and included a number of excellent speakers, such as Judge Joe A. P. Dickson of Seymour, Chas. E. Combs of Abilene, J. S. Kendall and E. Duval of Munday, D. J. Brookerson of Benjamin and others.

An old-fashioned basket picnic dinner was enjoyed each day and the music for the occasion was furnished by the Knox City orchestra, under the direction of Prof. L. D. Campbell.

On the closing day of the reunion an invitation was extended to the veterans to hold their next reunion at Munday, which was readily accepted, and we are sure that Munday will do all within its power to make the occasion here next year one of the most enjoyable that they have ever attended. The invitation was extended the veterans by E. Duval on behalf of the Munday Chamber of Commerce.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

(W. O. Logan, Co. Agent)

The Knox County Club Boys were represented at the District Stock & Grain Judging Contest at Anson July 12-13 by Earl Pruitt, Preston Childers, Euvert Pruitt, Weldon Parker, Ray Worthington all from close around Munday, and Ira Horn, Arthur Propps, Oliver Miller, and Omar Cure from around Gilliland. The entire bunch of boys judged each contest and proved his ability. While other boys from the other counties there judged specials.

There were some forty five boys there from six counties, three counties were not represented. Knox county won second place in the entire contest behind Stephens county.

Earl Pruitt won second individual place, while Arthur Propps, Everett Pruitt, Preston Childers, were climbing up in first ten and the nine boys from Knox county were all in the high 18 places putting them well up in the contests. Preston Childers won the Jersey judging contest with 94 points out of a possible 100, while his nearest rival got 96 points.

The counties represented at this district judging contest plans to send their boys to A. & M. College for the week's Short Course beginning July 25th and lasting one week. The Lions Clubs, Rotarians and Chambers of Commerce believe in the club work and the boys that can win. Knox county will be unable to send her winners and give them a chance to win the state prizes and honors. However, the boys have demonstrated their ability.

Two of the boys have been expected to win out on judging contests and thereby win trips to A. & M. Short Course, have now decided that they want to go bad enough to pay part of their own expenses. Knox county could well afford to send two to ten boys to these Short Courses yearly as other counties do and reap rich laurels from it by better farming practices and citizenship.

There are rumors of some fifty odd boys feeding one or two baby beeves this year for the Spring Fat Stock Show at Ft. Worth. The boys over at Munday and Goree believing they have the water and feed to beat the boys at Benjamin, Truscott and Gilliland. When these boys continue proving that they can feed profitably one or two calves it seems the farmers would decide that is their best method of marketing the grain sorghums and other feed grown on their farms.

How about fair or fairs? The business men over the county have been asked some weeks ago to express themselves for or against. If we show we will have to get busy today for it takes a full score card to get us anywhere. Send in your yellow slip at once and lets do or not do.

You can't look at a tire and tell how far it will run

YOU CAN'T SEE a tire carcass because it is covered by the tread. Yet the way this carcass is built tells how far the tire will run.

Dunlop has had 39 years to learn all the hidden points where tires wear. Dunlop carcasses are built from the best long fibre cotton, spun in Dunlop's own mills into the famous Dunlop cable-twist cord.

These cords are elastic, so they give and take as your tire runs; strong, so they resist constant load and pounding. They build the best possible foundation for the Dunlop tread—the toughest rubber development known.

Thus Dunlop's extra years of experience build added value into every vital tire-part. That is why, not one Dunlop—but every Dunlop—gives you more service than you can reasonably expect.

NON-ADVERTISERS FAIL

Ample statistics have been published from time to time to demonstrate that among businesses which fail, the vast majority are those which have refused to avail themselves of the benefit of advertising.

A check of the records of the Federal bankruptcy courts in Los Angeles has just disclosed that 92 per cent of the firms which have failed this year were non-advertisers. The average for 32 cities covered by survey was 83 per cent of failures occurring among concerns which did not advertise. In Troy, N. Y., not a single advertising firm failed.

There is a significant hint in these figures for the business man who is wise enough to profit by it.

MASSACHUSETTS OBJECTS

We read that educational leaders in Massachusetts have at this late day discovered that the use of the abbreviation, "Mass," is detrimental to the dignity of their state, and have begun a movement for its suppression. They want the name spelled out in full in all cases.

But if Massachusetts feels slighted by the use of only four letters, other states have even more cause for complaint. Consider Ohio, which is usually represented by only one, "O." And the "O" might possibly be mistaken for a zero, thus adding insult to injury.

The question raised calls to mind the interesting fact that the name of every state has been commonly abbreviated except that of Utah, possibly because "Ut." in handwriting might be confused with "Vt." while "Uh." would suggest an unpleasant sound.

We doubt that the objection of the Massachusetts professors is well taken. Think how many barrels of ink have been saved by the employment of the abbreviated form, which saves nine letters each time it is written or printed, to say nothing of the economy of labor.

We recall one typesetter whose ideas would have pleased the Massachusetts brethren, however. He, too, disliked abbreviations, and when he set up a musical article in which reference was made to Mozart's 12th Mass, he evidently was thinking of military affairs and didn't do a thing but make it read "Mozart's 12th Massachusetts."

O'HIGGINS WAS STERN

The recent assassination of Vice-President Kevin O'Higgins of the Irish Free State, which threatens to plunge Ireland into another civil war, has brought out incidents which reveal the stern character of the dead statesman.

Believing that drastic measures were necessary to restore and preserve order in the country, O'Higgins as minister of justice had approved 77 executions, while citizens in great number were imprisoned.

In illustration of his inflexible will, the story is told of his execution of Rory O'Connor, a famous rebel, in spite of their former close friendship. Six months before O'Connor had acted as best man at O'Higgins' wedding. When O'Connor's will was read, it was found that he had left all his money to O'Higgins, the man who was responsible for his death.

O'Connor's friends swore vengeance, and it is possible that the action of O'Higgins in this case led to his ultimate assassination.

LEVEES THE BACKBONE

Amidst the wide discussion of flood control now going on, and the various methods being suggested for making the Mississippi Valley secure against a repetition of this year's disaster, some recent observations by Secretary Hoover stand out with clear significance.

Mr. Hoover, in addition to being one of the ablest men who ever served in a cabinet post, is an engineer by profession and therefore able to grasp the fundamentals of the flood problem.

He believes, as do the Army engineers, that the only practical solution of the problem lies in providing higher and stronger levees. He has little faith in reservoirs for holding surplus waters, although he admits that they would aid navigation. He recently said:

"The recent flood would fill Lake Erie in two months. You can get an idea from that of the impossibility of building reservoirs of sufficient capacity to take care of the excess water. On the other hand, it is perfectly possible to build levees to contain that water. The levee system must be the backbone of any practical program of flood control."

WHY NOT A SOUTHERN MAN?

How are the democrats of the South going to figure in the National convention of next year? Many thousands of them are asking that question seriously and wondering if they are once more to be led, bound and gagged into that convention and delivered gratis to the will of party manipulators who have never won a democratic battle and never delivered the electoral votes of their State to a democratic presidential candidate?

The makings of just that sort of situation are already being assembled. Southern democrats are having it whispered to them, as for sixty years past, that if they want the party to win the presidency they must stiek shut-mouthed on the back seats and let the leaders from New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the Middle Western States pick the candidates they are to vote for—and elect, if they should happen to get elected at all.

The Southern democrats have supinely submitted to that policy ever since they rejoined the National party in 1868 and what have they gotten for it? Mostly self-humiliation and the open contempt of red-blooded, two-fisted, fighting Americans. They have borne the charge of being too cowardly to assert their rights and refuse to be denied them.

Because we are the sons of men who wore the gray in the War, between the States are we to be yet attainted for treason, contrary to the Constitution?

Is it to be accepted for all time to come that no Southern man shall even be nominated to the presidency, solely because he is a Southern man?

Is it an unwritten law for the National democracy that in our great section, comprising a third of the union in States and population, we have not had among us a man of character and statesmanship worthy to lead the great party of Jefferson and Jackson?

How much longer, then, will we of the Southern democracy continue a cringing and cowardly submission to the dictation of the impotent wings of the National party?

The fact is that the democratic party would cease to have substance and hope without the solid and loyal support of Southern democrats. Can one imagine Caesar always keeping his Tenth Legion in the rear, or Napoleon always preferring non-combatant corps over the Old Guard? Yet that has been the practice of the National democracy for six decades and is now again threatened.

Will Southern democrats submit any longer to such unjust and ungenerous treatment from their own party? An emphatic and final answer, "No!" should be given in the convention of every Southern democratic State next year and delegates sent to the National convention solemnly pledged to demand too long denied justice to the Southern democracy.

There are democrats in the South as capable and worthy to represent and lead the party as its presidential candidate as any that can be found in the North and West. They have been found eminent enough and qualified enough to serve with distinction in cabinets, and to lead the party wisely and successfully in both houses at the same time in repeated congresses.

There is as much reason to believe it probable that Georgia, or Arkansas, Missouri or North Carolina democratic candidate taken from either of those States can certainly carry Kentucky Florida or Oklahoma.

The policy of smothering Southern leaders has won the party no outstanding victory in the National field. The times now argue for another policy that will subordinate considerations of "official pap" to great principles of democratic administration with the South sharing equally and justly in the programs of the party.—The Atlantic Constitution.

LIFE FOR SWINDLER

A life sentence for cashing a bogus check for only $300 seems to be drastic punishment, but that was the penalty assessed against Bert N. Garstin, former newspaper man, in New York a few days ago.

This sentence was imposed under a provision of New York state's Baumes law, which makes life imprisonment mandatory in the case of a person convicted of a felony for the fourth time. The prosecution is said to have established that this was Garstin's fourth conviction on such a charge.

The life sentence was imposed in spite of a recommendation for clemency on the part of the jury which convicted him, and the appeals of a number of friends, who testified to his honesty in dealings with them during the last five years. Garstin had been pardoned from the Maryland penitentiary in 1914, and since that time had become business manager of the Louisville Herald-Post.

It is said that the stern provisions of the Baumes law have materially reduced crime in that state since it became effective a year ago, and several other states are framing new laws along the same line.

ITALY'S GREAT FLYER

While sounding the deserved praise of America's intrepid aviators, who have made history during the past few weeks, we have perhaps failed to pay proper tribute to the gallant Italian, de Pinedo, who recently completed an air journey of 25,000 miles, with two companions.

De Pinedo's flight carried him over portions of Africa, South America, North America and Europe and twice across the Atlantic. His first plane was accidentally burned in Arizona, and on the return to Europe he was forced to land in the Atlantic, near the Azores, but was soon rescued.

His adventures were as thrilling as any ever experienced by man. He was tossed by a tropical storm over the Atlantic, flew through a hurricane while crossing the jungles of Brazil, and nearly met disaster while crossing our own Rocky Mountains in a dense fog.

But the most dangerous hours were when he was chased by flock after flock of condors, the largest birds of flight, measuring four to five feet from beak to tail. This happened while flying over the Brazilian jungle, where a forced landing would have meant inevitable death in terrible form. His fear was not so much of actual attack by the great birds, but of the danger that one or more might come into contact with his propeller and disable the plane. He said:

"I began to perform my most erratic maneuvers to dodge the huge condors as they circled around the machine. I flew higher and higher, and then again lower, always followed by a flock of condors or meeting new flocks that appeared from behind the clouds. They came and went, reappeared and vanished again until I reached my immediate destination, after the most thrilling experience of my life."

Upon his return to Italy, de Pinedo was accorded a tremendous ovation in recognition of his daring exploit, which places him among the greatest flyers of all time, worthy of a place beside our own Lindbergh, Byrd and Chamberlin.

SIDELIGHTS

By Marcy B. Darnell

Even the best of writers and proof readers nod occasionally. In the usually impeccable Christian Science Monitor we read of a pianist possessed of a "shy" almost truculent, manner.

According to a speaker at a recent convention of candy manufacturers at Atlantic City, various races of people have aversions to certain colored confections. Chinese will not buy yellow candy, people of India refuse the purple kind, while in Africa licorice preparations are unsalable.

The cultured ears of folks living along the Burlington route will no longer be jarred by the raucous screechings of locomotives. A new type of harmonious four-toned whistle has been adopted.

Certain inmates of the Oklahoma penitentiary evidently felt that lack of practice was likely to impair their professional efficiency. So they cracked the sale in the prison shirt factory.

Opinion is divided over the efficacy of a new rule adopted in some European factories, whereby girl workers are forbidden to powder their noses during working hours. While the average girl consumes eight minutes out of an hour in this beautifying process, psychologists claim that she would be even less efficient were she conscious of having a shiny nose.

After holding out all these years, Peter Curran's New York livery stable has capitulated. Horse-drawn funeral hacks have been sold and automobiles will be used to convey mourners in future.

O'HIGGINS WAS STERN

The recent assassination of Vice-President Kevin O'Higgins of the Irish Free State, which threatens to plunge Ireland into another civil war, has brought out incidents which reveal the stern character of the dead statesman.

Believing that drastic measures were necessary to restore and preserve order in the country, O'Higgins as minister of justice had approved 77 executions, while citizens in great number were imprisoned.

Six months before O'Connor had acted as best man at O'Higgins' wedding. When O'Connor's will was read, it was found that he had left all his money to O'Higgins, the man who was responsible for his death.

O'Connor's friends swore vengeance, and it is possible that the action of O'Higgins in this case led to his ultimate assassination.

LEVEES THE BACKBONE

Amidst the wide discussion of flood control now going on, and the various methods being suggested for making the Mississippi Valley secure against a repetition of this year's disaster, some recent observations by Secretary Hoover stand out with clear significance.

Mr. Hoover, in addition to being one of the ablest men who ever served in a cabinet post, is an engineer by profession and therefore able to grasp the fundamentals of the flood problem.

He believes, as do the Army engineers, that the only practical solution of the problem lies in providing higher and stronger levees. He has little faith in reservoirs for holding surplus waters, although he admits that they would aid navigation. He recently said:

"The recent flood would fill Lake Erie in two months. You can get an idea from that of the impossibility of building reservoirs of sufficient capacity to take care of the excess water. On the other hand, it is perfectly possible to build levees to contain that water. The levee system must be the backbone of any practical program of flood control."

WHY NOT A SOUTHERN MAN?

How are the democrats of the South going to figure in the National convention of next year? Many thousands of them are asking that question seriously and wondering if they are once more to be led, bound and gagged into that convention and delivered gratis to the will of party manipulators who have never won a democratic battle and never delivered the electoral votes of their State to a democratic presidential candidate?

The makings of just that sort of situation are already being assembled. Southern democrats are having it whispered to them, as for sixty years past, that if they want the party to win the presidency they must stick shut-mouthed on the back seats and let the leaders from New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the Middle Western States pick the candidates they are to vote for—and elect, if they should happen to get elected at all.

The Southern democrats have supinely submitted to that policy ever since they rejoined the National party in 1868 and what have they gotten for it? Mostly self-humiliation and the open contempt of red-blooded, two-fisted, fighting Americans. They have borne the charge of being too cowardly to assert their rights and refuse to be denied them.

Because we are the sons of men who wore the gray in the War, between the States we are to be yet attainted for treason, contrary to the Constitution.

Is it to be accepted for all time to come that no Southern man shall even be nominated to the presidency, solely because he is a Southern man?

Is it an unwritten law for the National democracy that in our great section, comprising a third of the union in States and population, we have not had among us a man of character and statesmanship worthy to lead the great party of Jefferson and Jackson?

How much longer, then, will we of the Southern democracy continue a cringing and cowardly submission to the dictation of the impotent wings of the National party?

The fact is that the democratic party would cease to have substance and hope without the solid and loyal support of Southern democrats. Can one imagine Caesar always keeping his Tenth Legion in the rear, or Napoleon always preferring non-combatant corps over the Old Guard? Yet that has been the practice of the National democracy for six decades and is now again threatened.

Will Southern democrats submit any longer to such unjust and ungenerous treatment from their own party? An emphatic and final answer, "No!" should be given in the convention of every Southern democratic State next year and delegates sent to the National convention solemnly pledged to demand too long denied justice to the Southern democracy.

There are democrats in the South as capable and worthy to represent and lead the party as its presidential candidate as any that can be found in the North and West. They have been found eminent enough and qualified enough to serve with distinction in cabinets, and to lead the party wisely and successfully in both houses at the same time in repeated congresses.

There is as much reason to believe it probable that Georgia, or Arkansas, Missouri or North Carolina democratic candidate taken from either of those States can certainly carry Kentucky Florida or Oklahoma.

The policy of smothering Southern leaders has won the party no outstanding victory in the National field. The times now argue for another policy that will subordinate considerations of "official pap" to great principles of democratic administration with the South sharing equally and justly in the programs of the party.—The Atlantic Constitution.

LIFE FOR SWINDLER

A life sentence for cashing a bogus check for only $300 seems to be drastic punishment, but that was the penalty assessed against Bert N. Garstin, former newspaper man, in New York a few days ago.

This sentence was imposed under a provision of New York state's Baumes law, which makes life imprisonment mandatory in the case of a person convicted of a felony for the fourth time. The prosecution is said to have established that this was Garstin's fourth conviction on such a charge.

The life sentence was imposed in spite of a recommendation for clemency on the part of the jury which convicted him, and the appeals of a number of friends, who testified to his honesty in dealings with them during the last five years. Garstin had been pardoned from the Maryland penitentiary in 1914, and since that time had become business manager of the Louisville Herald-Post.

It is said that the stern provisions of the Baumes law have materially reduced crime in that state since it became effective a year ago, and several other states are framing new laws along the same line.

ITALY'S GREAT FLYER

While sounding the deserved praise of America's intrepid aviators, who have made history during the past few weeks, we have perhaps failed to pay proper tribute to the gallant Italian, de Pinedo, who recently completed an air journey of 25,000 miles, with two companions.

De Pinedo's flight carried him over portions of Africa, South America, North America and Europe and twice across the Atlantic. His first plane was accidentally burned in Arizona, and on the return to Europe he was forced to land in the Atlantic.

near the Azores, but was soon rescued.

His adventures were as thrilling as any ever experienced by man. He was tossed by a tropical storm over the Atlantic, flew through a hurricane while crossing the jungles of Brazil, and nearly met disaster while crossing our own Rocky Mountains in a dense fog.

But the most dangerous hours were when he was chased by flock after flock of condors, the largest birds of flight, measuring four to five feet from beak to tail. This happened while flying over the Brazilian jungle, where a forced landing would have meant inevitable death in terrible form. His fear was not so much of actual attack by the great birds, but of the danger that one or more might come into contact with his propeller and disable the plane. He said:

"I began to perform my most erratic maneuvers to dodge the huge condors as they circled around the machine. I flew higher and higher, and then again lower, always followed by a flock of condors or meeting new flocks that appeared from behind the clouds. They came and went, reappeared and vanished again until I reached my immediate destination, after the most thrilling experience of my life."

Upon his return to Italy, de Pinedo was accorded a tremendous ovation in recognition of his daring exploit, which places him among the greatest flyers of all time, worthy of a place beside our own Lindbergh, Byrd and Chamberlain.

SIDELIGHTS

By Marcy B. Darnell
 Even the best of writers and proof readers nod occasionally. In the usually impeccable Christian Science Monitor we read of a pianist possessed of a "shy" almost truculent manner.

a deceptive headline. The story did not refer to a discontinuance of military exercises, but told of the employment of Mexican soldiers to prevent unauthorized drilling for oil.

According to a speaker at a recent convention of candy manufacturers at Atlantic City, various races of people have aversions to certain colored confections. Chinese will not buy yellow candy, people of India refuse the purple kind, while in Africa licorice preparations are unsalable.

The cultured ears of folks living along the Burlington route will no longer be jarred by the raucous screechings of locomotives. A new type of harmonious four-toned whistle has been adopted.

Certain inmates of the Oklahoma penitentiary evidently felt that lack of practice was likely to impair their professional efficiency. So they cracked the sale in the prison shirt factory.

Opinion is divided over the efficacy of a new rule adopted in some European factories, whereby girl workers are forbidden to powder their noses during working hours. While the average girl consumes eight minutes out of an hour in this beautifying process, psychologists claim that she would be even less efficient were she conscious of having a shiny nose.

After holding out all these years, Peter Curran's New York livery stable has capitulated. Horse-drawn funeral hacks have been sold and automobiles will be used to convey mourners in future.

The Editor's Vacation

Phebe K. Warner

Next to mother with a household of little children and no help, the country editor stands about the slimmest chance for a summer vacation. Like a woman's work, his work is never done. Even while his latest issue is hot on the press, the country editor is out on the trail of news for his next issue.

Every week at a certain hour on a certain day that best of all publicans must be in the mail bag. And when I say "best of all publications" I mean it. The Home Paper is the cleanest and the most wholesome piece of literature on the market. It does not have time for scandal. It is the most honest and the most looked for paper in the whole country. Most of us never see our names in print in any other paper. And no matter how often we deny it or lie about it, most of us like to see our name in the paper a few times before our funeral notice goes to press.

The average editor knows all this and he wouldn't disappoint us for anything. He knows we are looking for this week's births, deaths, weddings, parties, visitors, accidents and wrecks. Especially those we already know about. And most particularly those in which we or our family have had a part.

And most of the editors I have known take their publication so seriously that they actually feel like the world would miss something if for any reason under the sun they happened to fail to get that paper out for one week. And that's a good reason to feel and a good reason to form.

So here's a suggestion to the country editor from one who knows absolutely nothing about running a county weekly newspaper. And sometimes advice so had since it is innocent of all the little troublesome details that get in the way of the real editor.

It's like rearing children. To see who have had the least or no experience often have the most beautiful theories. They've never had anything get in the way of their theories and they act by them.

This is our suggestion: The country editor needs and deserves a vacation the same as any other business or professional man. In fact he actually owes this vacation to himself and all his patrons, even if he has to let his paper go one week.

Let's suppose so many of our patrons never say a good word to you and your paper is because you never give them a chance to read it. They haven't an idea what your paper is worth to them until they want to know something and they can't get it.

When you need a rest, from the dirt and the dust and the noise and the office. And your patrons need a rest from you. And you need to get clear of your home town and hear how the folks are getting on.

You might want to see some of your own folks and get a good rest and one of the best ways to do it is to go to the country for a few days.

Let's suppose you've been in the office for a year and you've never seen the country. You've never seen the folks. You've never seen the home town. You've never seen the folks. You've never seen the home town.

Let's suppose you've been in the office for a year and you've never seen the country. You've never seen the folks. You've never seen the home town. You've never seen the folks. You've never seen the home town.

thousand editors in Texas. How many of you ever spent a week at your own A. & M. College during the Farmers Short Course and saw the whole State in action? How many of you ever attended a pig judging or better kitchen contest?

I will not dare speak for the city editor, but it would pay any country editor to shut his shop, lock the door and take next week off and give himself a vacation at the Texas A. & M. College. You would get enough inspiration to make a better paper for the next 51 weeks. Your patrons could well afford to go without their paper next week in order that you might go unhampered to that great school and become thoroughly imbued with the spirit of a new agricultural day. Your agricultural patrons need and deserve the inspiration and knowledge you would bring back home to them.

Of course you are all economically independent and don't have to economize. But in case you are not a spendthrift, you couldn't have a better vacation on so little cold cash.
