Southwest School of Printing Open to Non-Veterans

A campaign to acquaint high school graduates with advantages of the printing trade has been started by the Southwest School of Printing located in Dallas. A shortage of printers exists throughout the Southwest, accord-ing to officials of the school. Since the first of the year they have received more than 100 requests for men to fill vacancies in newspaper and commercial print shops.

For the first time since the late war, the school is enrolling non-veteran students because entrance into training under PY 346 of the GI Bill of Rights terminated last July 25. The next class, which starts December 4, will be open to non-veterans.

The Southwest School of Printing, owned and operated by newspaper publishers and commercial printers, is a non-profit institution founded to give young men an opportunity to enter the printing trade. The school has a large building on 18 acres at 3800 Clarendon
