YOUR SENATOR REPORTS
 by Lyndon B. Johnson
 U. S. SENATOR

Tax Revision Bill: The vote in the Senate on the 1954 tax revision bill was 63 for to 9 against. I voted for the bill. It is not a perfect measure, but it does afford some needed relief to individual taxpayers and I considered it an improvement over the House bill.

What the Bill Does: In all, this bill provides, for the 1955 fiscal year, tax relief to individuals totaling $652,000,000. Here are some of the most significant items: The first $1200 of retirement income received by retired employees is not subject to income tax.

Working mothers, widows and widowers who pay for the care of their children under 12 years of age will get some tax relief. Up to $600 paid for this purpose in any year will be free of tax.

The bill provides more liberal deductions for medical expenses. Under present law, the taxpayer can deduct only those medical expenses amounting to more than 5 per cent of his income. Under the Senate bill, he can get a deduction for all medical expenses totaling more than 3 per cent of his income.

Exemptions for dependents under 19 years of age, or who are students, are permitted even though they earn over $600 a year—provided the taxpayer furnishes over half their support. The bill provides that foster parents and foster children may be claimed as tax dependents.

Farmers can spend up to one-fourth of their farm income for soil and water conservation purposes and not pay taxes on income spent in that way.

You have been filing your income tax return not later than March 15. Under the Senate bill, you will have until April 15.

Tax Bill Sidights: Efforts were made in the Senate to reduce the 27 1/2 per cent oil depletion allowance, so important to Texas. Both Senator Daniel and I opposed these proposals and spoke against them. They were defeated.

The 52 per cent tax rate on corporations, scheduled to drop to 47 per cent this year, was continued for another year. This will result in the Government receiving $1,200,000,000 more from corporations than would have been received under the lower rate.

This is the first comprehensive revision of the tax laws since

Texas Federation of Women's Clubs Urges Women to Vote

Mrs. L. E. Dudley, Abilene, president of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Frank Malloy, Orange, chairman of the Federation committee, "Get Out the Vote," in a recent conference cleared plans urging all Texas clubwomen to vote in the coming primary and to influence other citizens to do so. Mrs. Dudley reiterated the statement, "We never tell you how to vote, but we do everything in our power to make you vote."

The Texas Federation, founded in 1897 as a benevolent, educational and charitable organization, is non-political and non-sectarian. Interest in public affairs stems from the ever present desire for better living conditions, better educational facilities and better understanding. Eight departments of study are promoted in communications, community affairs, conservation of natural resources, education, fine arts, home, international affairs and public affairs, with divisions of the departments slanted toward specific interests.

Great Ore Producer

Over the past twenty-five years, International Nickel mined 187,000,000 tons of nickel-copper ore from deposits in the Sudbury District of Ontario, where it conducts one of the largest underground non-ferrous mining operations in the world. The company, in 1953, mined more than 11,000,000 tons of ore from underground and about 2,500,000 tons from surface for a total of over 13,500,000 tons, the highest in Inco's history.

1929. Rio Grande Flood: As soon as news of the Rio Grande flood reached me, I wired city officials of Langtry, Eagle Pass, Del Rio, Ozona, Sheffield and Laredo, as well as county judges of Maverick, Val Verde and Webb Counties, offering the facilities of my office for any aid we could give.

After receiving word that a number of Mexicans were stranded in Villa Acuna, across the river from Del Rio, I obtained necessary clearance from the State Department and arranged with the Army to fly across the river with food and medical supplies provided by the Red Cross.

U. S. Foreign Policy: American foreign policy is today at the crossroads. In a recent speech in the Senate, I stressed these two points, which I believe are sound:

1. We must have a reappraisal of our foreign policy. We must decide where we are going—how we are going to get there—and who is going with us.
2. We must consider and solve our foreign policy problems as Americans—not as partisans. That is fundamental.

Diseases in Domestic Animals Watched Closely by Officials

Austin, Texas — Diseases in domestic animals and fowl are coming under closer expert scrutiny since July 5 when state health and veterinary authorities launched a new system of reporting presence, prevalence, and distribution of animal diseases.

Depending on how much cooperation is forthcoming from private veterinarians, on whom the success of the program hinges, State Health Officer, Henry A. Holle, said the new system ideally will reveal bi-weekly incidence of domestic animal disease occurring in any of the state's 254 counties.

Included among diseases reported are anthrax, brucellosis, equine encephalomyelitis, leptospirosis, ornithosis (psittacosis), rabies, and others.

Thus, health officials will have an up-to-date check on infections affecting household pets and farm animals, providing ailing animals were seen by veterinarians.

Infections in animals are exerting increasingly greater influence on human health, state health leaders point out.

Agencies cooperating in the new venture are the State Department of Health, Livestock Sanitary Commission, A&M College School of Veterinary Medicine, Texas Veterinary Medical Association, the Disease Control Branch of the Agriculture Research Service, and the United States Public Health Service.

The State Health Department for years has maintained a reporting system for human communicable diseases. And for the past three years the department has conducted a monthly survey pin-pointing the county of origin and species of all rabies-positive animal heads autopsied by the Bureau of Laboratories.

This new animal morbidity system is separate from the human disease record, and absorbs the monthly rabies report.

The report system works like this: Two identical self-addressed, postage-free report cards are mailed to each of the state's 700-plus private veterinarians. One card covers the first half of the month; the other the second half.

A column of most important animal diseases is printed on each card. The veterinarian has only to check the number of cases of each disease he has observed during the appropriate two-week per-

Many Farmers Growing Chinese Green Mung Beans

Chinese green mung beans are one of the principal summer legumes planted in the Lower Pease River Soil Conservation District this summer. Mung beans are a short period growing legume that can be planted through the last of July, and make a good crop of seed. It only takes 65 days to make a crop. They are usually planted in rows at the rate of 8 to 10 pounds of seed per acre and can be harvested with a combine. Generally, mung beans will make about the same return as wheat and will add nitrogen to the soil for the next crop. Mung beans are easier to work than many crops because weeds and grass do not get started too well before the beans are harvested.

Hundreds of acres of these beans have been planted in the Chillicothe area. Both sandy land and tight land farmers grow them. If it rains before the last of July, many farmers will plant more beans this summer. Henry Huie, buyer of mung beans at Vernon, says farmers will receive approximately six cents per pound for cleaned seed.

Accumulative results for each monthly period are by the Bureau of Laboratories, and a copy sent to each veterinarian when new report cards are mailed.

The tabulation shows any unusual incidence of specific disease in a given area, so that appropriate control measures can be started to prevent its spreading.

Accumulative results for each monthly period are by the Bureau of Laboratories, and a copy sent to each veterinarian when new report cards are mailed.

Harnessing the Atom

The President's message to Congress on atomic energy development and related problems was an extremely encouraging one. He clearly believes that so far as peacetime development is concerned, the law must be changed so as to not only permit but encourage the participation of private enterprise "with careful regulation to protect the national security and the public health and safety."

The President said further that harnessing the atom for useful purposes requires the "enterprise, initiative, and co-operative spirit of individuals and groups within our free economy" in order to assure the greatest efficiency and progress at the least cost to the public. The President thus supports the positions previously taken by scientists, military leaders and men high in the Atomic Energy Commission who have stated that the time has come for relaxation of the law which makes atomic development a total government monopoly.

No one knows how much time, money and effort must be spent before electric power production or any other peacetime atomic application will be possible. It is known that atomically difficult problems remain unsolved. And certainly, our chance of satisfactorily solving them, in the briefest period of time, will be immeasurably improved if all our applicable resources, human and material, are invited to participate.

Essentially, this is a matter of competition — of letting individuals and industries and institutions try to outdo each other. That has led to our unparalleled progress in every field of enterprise. It can do the same for atomic development.

Issue on The Snake

Editor Charles V. Stanton of the Roseburg, Oregon, News-Review, recently had this to say about socialized electric power: "The postal department deficit, it would seem, should be wiped out by the tons of mail . . . propagandizing the Hells Canyon controversy."

"The Hells Canyon issue no longer is an honest appraisal of two power projects for their physical and economic values, but is, rather, a political debate over whether this government shall continue to build and operate public utilities when private capital is prepared to do the job."

"One of the arguments of the federal high dam philosophy is that private enterprise can't build projects on the scale financed by the federal government."

"We will agree that private enterprise wouldn't spend that kind of dough. But 'can't' is another matter."

"We don't believe private capital would build a dam with marble-lined corridors, neon-lighted exhibit rooms and all the other fancy trimmings to be found at Bonneville and, more especially Grand Coulee, to accommodate sightseers and make the taxpayers think they got something for their money."

"When private corporations undertake a huge project they . . . get their money from the people who have it and who can afford to invest it. They spend it as efficiently and as economically as possible, leaving latitude for profit, after payment of taxes."

"The federal government also goes to the people . . . for money. It doesn't give the people a chance to say whether they do or do not want to invest. It pays . . . no taxes."

"The outcome of the Hells Canyon case will determine whether we shall have the right to make our own investments, or whether we shall continue to have our money invested for us at the whim of a bloated bureaucracy."

by VERN SANFORD
Texas Press Association

Austin, Tex. — Texas politicians turned to the grass roots trails, trying to swing undecided votes, as the campaign wound into its final days.

Most attention was centered on the governor's race, in which Allan Shivers and Ralph W. Yarborough flung charges and countercharges at each other in dazzling exchange. Some of Shivers' contentions were:

That Yarborough was using "vile methods in an attempt to cover up his tie-in with the CIO-PAC which was trying to take over the government of Texas."

That Yarborough campaigners had spread false rumors to the effect that Shivers wanted to abolish the orphan state home at Corsicana.

That Yarborough has promised George Parr to call off the clean-up campaign in Duval County.

Yarborough Retorts

Yarborough came back with these accusations:

That Shivers had tried to suppress an FBI investigation of the Gatesville school last year.

That Shivers is a "hyphenated Democrat-Republican."

That Shivers had not reported all of his campaign expenditures.

Positive Side

Both candidates, stump speaking in the villages and towns, also had their positive statements to make, in addition to charges against each other, although the latter phase made the most headlines.

Shivers, saying that he was drawing surprisingly good crowds, emphasized his record in office, pointing to more money spent for roads, schools, and welfare programs.

Yarborough pledged improvements in the state government and more money for state services.

He also expressed interest in a state youth program to combat juvenile delinquency, and was critical of the slash in appropriations which wiped out the Community Services Division of the Youth Development commission.

"The field representatives of the Commission who worked with local government and groups, and also as parole supervisors for youngsters released from state schools on parole, were eliminated," Yarborough commented.

Red Law

Texas' new anti-Communist ruling that outlaws membership in the Communist Party or any organization attempting to overthrow the government by force may not hold up in court, says Attorney General John Ben Shepperd.

Shepperd, who called the legislation the "most inclusive and far-sighted anti-Communist law in the nation," warned state lawyers that a former court ruling holding that control of sedition belongs exclusively to the federal government might render the law invalid.

Shepperd added that the ruling, handed down by a Pennsylvania court, might "knock out all state sedition and treason laws."

Duval County

Suspended by the Supreme Court was an order halting the prosecution of Duval County political boss George Parr and several of his associates.

Attorney General Shepperd, hailing the ruling which clears

NEW EXHAUST SYSTEM

New "Silent Power" exhaust has been developed and installed on all models by GMC to lead the industry in answering growing public demands to reduce truck noise. While making exhaust noises inoffensive to the human ear, the newly-designed muffler and exhaust pipes do not decrease engine power of GMC trucks.

News from the Congress

by Congressman Frank Ikard

Some time ago I mentioned the fact that Congress was considering expanding the present upstream flood control program. Most people in our part of the country are familiar with this program and know how important it is to proper soil and water conservation as well as flood control. A bill dealing with this passed the House several weeks ago, and just recently has passed the Senate with what appears to be compelling amendments. The Department of Agriculture has been almost put out of the picture entirely. Another blow to the bill requires that any dam of over 2,000 acre feet of water must be approved by Congress. In addition, any small watershed project will have to be approved by the appropriate State agency. A few States have such agencies, but the great majority of them would have to create a new department to give this approval. This, of course, would have to be done by the State Legislature. In other words, it looks like the bill in its present form would seriously handicap the good start that has already been made on this program. But all of those who have worked on this legislation for a long time and who are intensely interested in it still hope that something yet might be done to maintain the progress that has already been made and to make it possible for the program to be expanded in the future.

During this session of Congress, the establishment of an Army to train officers for the Force was authorized. The Army has been selected near California and will provide a four college course along with training. The Academy will be similar to West Point and will be at the Academy will be nominated by Members of Congress. Generally speaking physical and mental requirements are high to gain admission ever, if anyone in the U. S. is interested in making a short time ago, Red China actually was at war with the States and the United Nations. It seems ridiculous to think that before the war that war has even been so that they could gain admission into the group that they were actually fighting.

Farm Safety Is a Must for Today and Every Day

The number of fatal accidents to farm workers is greater than in any other occupation in the nation. Last year 3,800 rural residents of the nation died from accidents and another 320,000 suffered injuries many of which were disabling, according to Joe Burkett, County Agent.

The National Safety Council in a report to the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety committee says accidents affecting farm people and including fire and motor vehicle property damage cost approximately $1 billion annually. Reducing this terrific toll, points out the state group, is primarily the responsibility of rural residents and will require individual as well as cooperative effort.

The Safety Council and the State Committee offer suggestions for making life in the country safer and more pleasant. Since 700 of the fatal farm accidents involved tractors, they say operate them carefully. Keep all machines in top shape and all guards and safety devices in place. Don't smoke around the barn or refuel the tractor when it is hot. Treat gasoline and kerosene with respect. Be a safe driver and check the car and truck at regular intervals. Take no chances with farm animals for they, with warning, may become vicious. Have a place for everything and keep it in place.

Prevent falls. Read labels and follow safety instructions on many other items used on the farm. When swimming or boating obey water safety rules and remember when accidents happen seconds count. Apply first aid once.

Developing a common sense attitude toward farm safety, the safety leaders, is of prime importance in cutting the accident toll. "It is not enough," they add, "to practice safety for a week every year. It must become a daily habit."

MRS. MARY D. BROWN

Don't forget the picnic this Friday night, July 16, at the County Club picnic grounds at 7:00 p. m. If it rains, this picnic will be postponed one week.

Quite a few of you have been asking about ordering pecans again, so we will start another order at the picnic. If you do not go to the picnic, turn your order in to your marketing chairman before July 23. They are as follows: Foard City, Mrs. W. L. Johnson; Vivian, Mrs. Clyde Bowley; Riverside, Mrs. S. C. Kuehn; Thalia, Mrs. H. W. Gray; Marsden, Mrs. C. F. Bradford; West Side, Mrs. C. H. Kincheloe; Gambel, Mrs. Glendon Russell. If you are not a club member, but would like to order some, see one of these women or call Mrs. Albert Dunagan here in town. Remember, these orders must be in by July 23. We do not have a new price list yet, but I imagine they will be about 75c a pound and you may pay for them when you receive your pecans.

WEST SIDE H. D. CLUB

"When the temperature climbs cool off with an unusual summer beverage," suggested Mrs. Oscar Gentry as she prepared the pineapple pickup July 13 at the West Side Home Demonstration Club in the home of Mrs. Homer Zebig.

R. Bryson, S. H. Ross, E. A. Dunagan, J. L. Kincheloe, Parker Churchill, Bert Mathews, Walter Thomson, Jack Lyons and G. H. Kincheloe.

Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey Campaigns in West Texas and Panhandle

Lieutenant Governor Ben Ramsey has stepped up his campaign for reelection with trips to West Texas and the Panhandle where he proposed stock piling oil for defense.

The East Texas lawyer, a steady but quiet campaigner, said the increasing importation of foreign oil is hurting the petroleum industry which foots about half the state's tax bill.

"A few Texas oil men could financially stand serious price cutbacks, but the majority of the people connected with our oil industry could not. Some of these include farmers and ranchers with leases and royalties. Others are having a hard time now keeping their exploration going," Ramsey said.

"Many of our state services, including schools, colleges and regular operating expenses, are paid for out of oil tax money," Ramsey said. "If our state revenues from petroleum steadily decline, we are in for a pinch which I think is unnecessary."

"I think," Ramsey said, "the national government might well consider stockpiling oil with funds in the foreign aid bill now being considered by Congress."

Foard County Gets $110,724.61 in State Aid for Schools in '53

Foard County school children are among those over the state sharing the most impressive period of Texas Public Education in state history, a compilation of figures from 1949-1953 released in Austin this week shows.

The county received $110,724.61 for public education during the last fiscal year as its share of the giant $211 million total spent over the state, the Texas Education Agency report said. It also showed that money for the state's school children had increased from 145 million in 1949 to the present figure.

Interviewed this week, Governor Allan Shivers noted that education funds were distributed through the Gilmer-Aiken formula to a wide variety of uses.

Largest amounts went for salary and operations. Fifteen thousand more teachers with average salary increases of $1,000 in the last few years took a large percentage.

Shivers also explained that last year school administrations received more money to spend for needed improvements that ever before.

Figures also showed lesser known—but important—uses for funds. These included school buses that pick up children in rural areas and transport them safely to school.

Cafeterias with hot noon lunches, only recently becoming less than a luxury to public schools, received financial help also, figures showed.

Shivers, who called the present school system "the best yet in Texas' bid for better education," said that the picture looked even better for future students.

"With the continuance of this aggressive improvement program, Texas can expect to meet efficiently increasing demands of public education," he said.

Rotary Club

Visitors at the Wednesday noon luncheon of the Rotary Club of Crowell were Rotarians Hollis Martin, Vance Favor, Hubert Smith, Ed Featherston, Laurence Powell and Dan Waggoner of Quannah.

Two new members, Joe Burkett and Grady Adcock, were received into the club by Claude Callaway who presented them with "Adventures in Service," each book being autographed by the president and secretary.

The club has had a 100 per cent attendance record for all last year and the first two meetings in the new year.

Health Officer Cites Danger of Organic Phosphate Insecticide

Walk into practically any home gardening supply store in the state and ask for an organic phosphate insecticide. Chances are the clerk will sell you a bottle or package without fuss or bother.

What's wrong with that? Just that organic phosphates happen to be among the most deadly of chemical compounds, for humans as well as insects.

Last year a Texas rancher accidentally killed 48 cows by spraying them with the potent insecticide. He wanted to kill their insect parasites, and didn't realize the chemical was highly toxic for all warm-blooded animals.

A six-year old Oregon boy found a bottle of TEPP, one of the organic phosphate insecticides in a field near his home. Workmen presumably had left it after spraying an orchard. The curious lad spilled a cupful on his pants and was dead in less than 24 hours.

Conscious of the same thing happening in Texas, State Health Officer Henry A. Hollie would like to make it hard for part-time home gardeners to buy the compounds.

"Used as chemists intended, organic phosphates are a great help in fighting agricultural pests," says the health official. "Used indiscriminately without protective clothing, they're lethal."

Organic phosphates were developed in Germany after the last war. They are the chemists' answer to demands from agricultural men for a real bug killer to combat hordes of insects which do billions of dollars of damage to crops annually.

In the hands of professionals, trained in precautions to be taken in using them, chances of accidents are slight. But in recent years, bottles and packages have appeared on retail shelves for home gardening use. Since then, incidents of human poisoning have increased.

The three most important types are tetraethylpyrophosphate (TEPP), hexaethyltetrathio-phosphate (HETP), and parathion. All are sold under various trade names.

Most manufacturers spell out in bold black or red letters the fact that the contents are highly hazardous for humans, and recommend wearing respirators, rubber gloves, coveralls, and a rubber cap or hat when using the sprays. But warning labels don't always help.

Dr. Hollie thinks legislation regulating sale of organic phosphates for home use would help. But without legislation, he says, it's up to users to read warning labels and believe what they read.

Nickel in Atomic Energy

Since the beginning of the development of atomic energy, the element nickel has played an important part, particularly in the concentration and processing of atomic fuels. A large amount of nickel is used in a variety of forms, including nickel-plated coatings, high nickel alloys such as Monel and Inconel, and nickel-containing stainless steels.

Stainless Steels in Aircraft

Jet engine and air frame parts of modern aircraft depend upon chromium-nickel stainless steels for satisfactory performance at greater speeds and higher temperatures.
