Atomic Energy Bill: Along with other Senate Democrats, I felt two vital principles were involved in our refusal to accept the conference committee report on the Atomic Energy Commission bill.

First, this conference report would have seriously impaired the preference rights of REA cooperatives. municipalities and other public bodies to buy public power. Second, it would have nullified the provision for compulsory sharing of patents, which we wanted in order to prevent a few large firms from getting a stranglehold on this important source of en-

So I voted with 47 other Senators to reject the conference report and return it to the Committee. The Senate amendments finally were accepted by the conference committee and included in the bill as enacted.

Social Security: One of the most important measures acted on in the Senate as this session of Congress neared its end was a bill revising the Social Security system. Social security coverage was extended to some six million additional persons. The President proposed to bring in ten and a half million more, but the Senate excluded some 3,600,000 farm workers and about 400,000 self-employed professional persons.

The bill increases benefits at least $5 a month for single retired persons and as much as $31.25 for some families. Benefits at present range from $25 to $168.75.

So, even as it faces its problems, the American coal industry maintains its world leadership in the output of a primary natural resource as vital to modern civilization as air and water.

THIEVES STRIP HOME

Van Nuys, Calif. - When the George Russell Pierson family went around to look at their new home just prior to moving in, they had the surprise of their life. Thieves had broken in and taken the family range, refrigerator, deep freeze, automatic washer and dryer, radio-phonograph, living room suite, bedroom suite, rugs and their trunks. The only piece of furniture left was Mrs Pierson's sewing machine.
