Keep Your Checking Account Above the "Safety Level"!

Yes, it's embarrassing—and it doesn't make a good impression—to be "caught short" and not have enough funds in your checking account to write the check you want to write.

Maintaining an ample balance at all times is good business practice. Then you are always prepared for any emergency which may arise or any opportunity to make a profit by having ready cash in your checking account.

It pays in many ways to keep your checking balance above what you consider the "safety level."

Senator Johnson Receives Many Gifts During His Illness

After a Senatorial show-Senator Lyndon B. Johnson has the guest of honor at a that started the day after to the hospital early in and has not yet subsided.
The Senator's friends have wared him with gifts ranging from books on many subjects to a bowl of goldfish from Senator George Smathers of Florida and a baseball autographed by the members of the Washington baseball club. The baseball was sent by Pete Runnels, who calls Lufkin home and who is among the most valuable players the Washington club has.

Senator Johnson, once a chain smoker, hasn't smoked a cigarette since he entered the hospital the night of July 2. Once a big steak and potatoes man, he has cut out heavy meals and his daily caloric intake is now 1500 per day. He has brought his weight down to 185 pounds from a high of 220, and the tailor had to come to the hospital to take five inches out of the waist of his trousers.

The Senator's doctors say he has responded favorably to every treatment given him. They say that, if he continues to improve at the same rate, he can go to his Texas ranch in a few weeks—provided Lady Bird, his wife, keeps big delegations of visitors away.

In a gun battle in Ranger, Texas, involving three men, each man took one shot and all three were killed.

Home Demonstration Notes

MRS. MARY D. BROWN

I'm sure most of you know now that I'm very excited about the tailoring school we will have in October.

I will teach a class of 8 leaders. We will meet one week for 5 weeks. Each class will go home each week and 3 to 6 women the things I teaching here. Each woman rolled will make a suit or coat but I believe you will feel do that it is well worth it. It will do custom tailoring and can make a suit or coat for considerably less than what you pay for one of equal workmanship.

On August 23, we will have our pre-tailoring meeting at 7 p. m. in the Down Town Class building on the north of the square. At that time will discuss patterns, fabrics, other details about the course. It is very important all of you who are interested in the tailoring to attend this meeting.

Our recipe this week:

Tangerine Velvet

One 6-oz. can frozen tangerine concentrate, 1 cup whipping cream or chilled evaporated milk, cup sugar.

Defrost fruit juice to a consistency. Whip cream or evaporated milk in chilled bowl. Gradually add sugar and juice. Stir until thick. Freeze in ice cube tray and freeze firm. Serve 6.

Note: Frozen grape concentrate or lemonade concentrate substituted for tangerine sugar.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT

More than 2,000 United States companies, with investments abroad exceeding $16,000,000 are spreading American know-how and ideas in what amounts to a free enterprise program.

Senator Johnson receives Many Gifts During His Illness

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson has been the guest of honor at a party that started the day after he was admitted to the hospital and has not yet subsided. The Senator's friends have gathered him with gifts ranging from books on many subjects to a bowl of goldfish from Senator George Smathers of Florida and a baseball autographed by the members of the Washington baseball club. The baseball was sent by Pete Runnels, who calls Luffkin home and who is among the most valuable players the Washington club has.

Senator Johnson, once a chain smoker, hasn't smoked a cigarette since he entered the hospital the night of July 2. Once a big steak and potatoes man, he has cut out heavy meals and his daily calorie intake is now 1500 per day. He has brought his weight down to 185 pounds from a high of 220, and the tailor had to come to the hospital to take five inches out of the waist of his trousers. The Senator's doctors say he has responded favorably to every treatment given him. They say that, if he continues to improve at the same rate, he can go to his Texas ranch in a few weeks—provided Lady Bird, his wife, keeps big delegations of visitors away.

In a gun battle in Ranger, Texas, involving three men, each man took one shot and all three were killed.

When Enterprise Is Handcuffed

Until about a year ago, natural gas at the wellhead was sold in a competitive free market. Then, as a result of a Supreme Court decision, wellhead sales were brought under federal regulation. Many believe that this was never the intent of Congress in past legislation relating to the gas industry, and there is strong support within and without the government for clarifying the law and freeing producers from this burden.

It is argued by some that federal regulation is needed to protect natural gas users. That idea arises from a deep misunderstanding of the economics of finding and producing natural gas, and from confusing the highly competitive, exceedingly risky gas-producing business with the public utility businesses of gas transportation and distribution, which are regulated.

Natural gas producers are not protected natural monopolies as are public utilities. There are thousands of them and they must compete every day of the year both in seeking new gas-producing properties and in selling gas after it is found. Moreover, the field price of natural gas is by far the smallest part of the ultimate retail price—in 1953, for example, it amounted to only about 10 percent of the price paid by the residential consumer. Thus, if the producer had received nothing at all for his gas, the savings to consumers would have been very small.

From 1945 to June, 1954, when gas at the wellhead was not regulated, the price paid by residential consumers rose but 12 percent—much less than the rise for most other commodities and services.

It must not be forgotten that the distributing companies which deliver the gas to the consumer have long been and will continue to be regulated public utilities.

Finally, it seems inevitable that if the field price of gas at the well continues to be regulated, much higher prices will result in the long run. Producers will be discouraged and new development will slow. The supply of gas going into interstate commerce will dwindle, causing lower transmission loads and higher unit transportation costs. It's an example of the truism that no one can win or profit when enterprise is handcuffed by unnecessary bureaucratic control.

None Too Big

An editorial in the Beacon, of Ashtabula, Ohio, says: "The long-term solution to the TVA and any other government-owned business is this: (1) Any government-operated business should pay its equal share in tax money if it is competing in any way with privately owned business. (2) The federal government should get completely out of the power business since it must either nationalize all of the nation's power, or favor the nationalized regions at the expense of other regions whose taxpayers are paying for the competition."

A principal argument in favor of socialized power systems is that the government has to build them because private enterprise can not or will not meet the need. That argument is 100 percent short of validity. There isn't a practical power development in the country, no matter how many hundreds of millions of dollars it may cost, that taxpayers, publicly-regulated private enterprise isn't willing to undertake and to bring into operation in the shortest possible time. That goes for power from any source—water, coal, oil, or the atom.

Government should get out of any undertaking, large or small, which private enterprise can handle. And the power business, where government has made the greatest and most expensive inroads, is a fine place to start.

Value of Partnership

"The people of New York should not be forced to subsidize through federal taxes the power cost of the people of Idaho."

That statement appears in a letter written by the executive vice president of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce to a number of newspapers. The reference was to the drive to have the federal government spend $465,000,000 of the taxpayers' money on a socialized hydroelectric project at Hells Canyon on the Snake River.

In an editorial, the Yakima, Wash., Republic said: "The New York reaction points up the value of President Eisenhower's partnership power policy, which would use large private investments. Easterners aren't going to help us with tax money when they know power projects can be financed privately or with joint private-federal funds. Westerners must realize this... or we'll come out short on power development."

In the case of Hells Canyon, there is no question of federal development being the only solution. A taxpaying private power company wants to build a series of smaller dams costing $133,000,000 which will produce nearly as much power as the far more costly federal high dam. A Federal Power Commission examiner, after holding exhaustive hearings, has recommended that the private company be given permission to start the development.

Finally, what is true of Hells Canyon is true of every other needed and desirable power project in this country. Every one of them can be built—at the lowest cost and in the shortest period of time—either by private enterprise alone, or under a partnership arrangement. All that is holding them back is the stubborn delaying tactics of those who want a socialized federal power monopoly. If those tactics continue to be successful and power shortages develop, those people will be responsible.

What Competition Does for Consumer

The Hillsboro, Oregon, Argus, a semi-weekly newspaper which has received many national awards for excellence, recently printed an editorial with the novel title, "Grocery Progress and the American Way." It observed that we read the ads in order to find out what is offered and what the prices are—but that we take it all as a matter of course. Then it said: "Where else in the world is such a variety of food, the prime essential of life, available to everyone? And what one single thing is responsible for this more than anything else? Competition—the desire... to offer a better product at a lower price..."

Food is certainly an excellent example of that. But it doesn't stop in one field. We find it in every kind of retail store and establishment. The retailer is engaged in an endless and exacting quest for consumer favor. He uses every practical technique in his efforts—lower prices, better service, more attractive stocks, compelling advertising, and so on. And the same thing is true at the other end of the line, in production.

Competition is the reason why, to quote the Argus again, "the cracker barrel store has been transformed into today's miracle market." And it's the reason our living standards are unrivaled.

Government by Minority

As everyone should know by now, excessively big government is excessively expensive government. Equally bad, it degenerates into government by minority.

Economic Intelligence points out that there are now 230 Congressional committees and subcommittees and adds: "It is becoming progressively more and more impossible for a newspaperman or anyone else to keep track of what is going on in Washington. Almost no one can see the process as a whole. This makes for government by minority—vocal, articulate, self-seeking minorities... This is the stuff of which dictatorship is made."

Cutting government down to proper size would save billions of dollars. It also can save the institution of representative government itself.

The Challenge of Change

A short time ago the Farm Equipment Institute held its 61st national convention in Chicago. One speaker was an executive of a leading rubber company, and his topic was "The Challenge of Change." Agriculture, he pointed out, went through century after century with very little change. But, he continued, "when the revolutionary era of power machinery did hit, the impact it made was without precedent."

Just how thorough that revolution has been is indicated by a little set of statistics. In 1910, which was only yesterday as history is measured, the horse and mule population stood at 24,211,000. Now it is about 2,750,000, and most of those are in the pleasure-animal classification. To quote the speaker again, "We saw the internal combustion engine supplant the horse and mule forever as the main source of farm power."

Has that revolution been completed? The answer is no—it is continuing with full force and vigor. The farmer wants better, more efficient and economical machines, and the equipment manufacturers are seeing that he gets them. And, as time wears on, he will need many more machines in order to provide, from a virtually fixed acreage, the food and fiber needed by a greatly expanded population.

None has had greater experience with the challenge of change than the farmer.

Unbalanced Diets

Perhaps you haven't especially noticed, but those who have, tell us that during the last few years substantial changes have taken place in the type of chicken raised commercially for meat purposes. Not only have certain characteristics been bred into meat chickens, but new importance has been placed on what those chickens eat.

"Modern chickens," says one spokesman for researchers of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, "are fed a far more scientifically balanced diet than the average human being ever eats."

Such a statement leads us to wonder not only at a society that feeds its chickens more carefully than it feeds its children, but also about the casual attitude all too commonly shown with regard to the mental and spiritual diet of our families.

What, for example, have your children taken into their hearts and minds during the past week? A Sunday school lesson? A sermon, perhaps? A Christian youth paper? Even if you can include all these in last week's spiritual rations, there is still much time to be accounted for. What did your children take in at school, in their play, as they read the "funnies" or spent time now and then before the radio or TV set?

The Bible has a great deal to say about the instruction of children in regard to spiritual matters. Here are just two quotations from the Old Testament: "Gather the . . . children . . . that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the Lord your God, and observe to do all the words of this law" (Deut. 31:12).

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6).

Are you doing all that is in your power to "train up" your child "in the way that he should go"? Are you providing him with the most carefully balanced spiritual diet possible?

Excessive Moisture Can Cause Trouble in Stored Grains

Prospects now indicate Texas will contribute its share of what forecasters say will be one of the nation's greatest harvest of feed grains. The grain sorghum harvest has already reached central parts of the state, and as it moves north and west, storage is likely to become a problem.

W. S. Allen, extension agricultural engineer, offers suggestions which can help solve grain storage problems. He says most problems encountered in storing grain can be traced back to moisture. Excessive moisture in the grain when it goes into storage leads to insect, heat and mold damage.

In tests made at the Beeville Experiment Station, research workers have found, says Allen, that a moisture content above 12 percent is too high for safe storage. Grain sorghum put in storage with a moisture content below 12 percent has been stored for as long as 23 months without serious losses.

Some system of drying is advised for removing excess moisture from the grain to be stored. Allen says three methods were used at Beeville. They included sack drying which is best for drying grain in layers 6 to 18 inches thick and bin drying which means drying the grain in the bin or bins where it is to be stored. The latter method is particularly suited for on-farm installations.

Navy Expedition to Antarctic Continent to Arrive in December

The Antarctic Continent, according to scientists has barren of color for millions of years, will blossom out during coming Antarctic Summer in brilliant orange, blue, scarlet, and even black.

The occasion for the new coming will be the appearance of the U. S. Navy's Task Force scheduled to arrive at Little America in the Antarctic, (midmer in the Antarctic), Pers of the Task Force, officially bed "Operation Deepfreeze," don outer garments of brilliant contrasting colors for protection and psychological reasons.

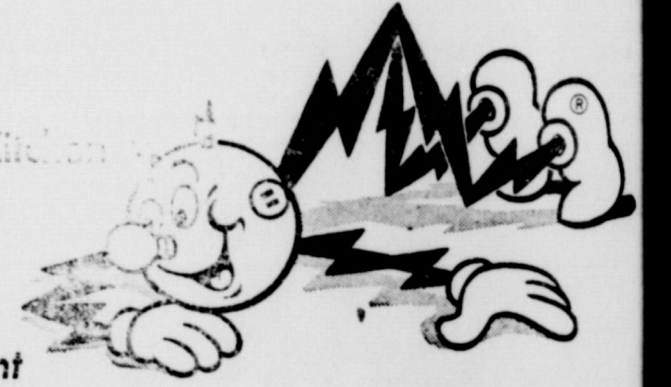

Against the frigid white of Antarctic snow and ice, these men will stand out vividly, seen from great distances. Teams and their drivers traveling inland will face less risk of coming lost, since they can be located from the air.

The bright-colored parkas, trousers are being manufactured especially for the expedition at a cost of less than $14.00 per suit. They will be worn over cold-weather equipment.

The Task Force of six ships, special SeaBee battalion, a cold-weather aircraft squadron will sail for the Antarctic in November. The planes will take and land on skis as well as on specially compacted snow ways at the U. S. scientific stations. While the ships and planes return to the U. S. in the SeaBee battalion will "over" the Antarctic.

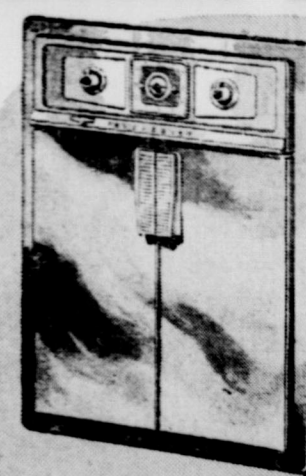

The first residents of the House were President and John Adams in November, 1789.

Where the Merchant Ship Is Unique

A merchant ship is an element of war. Ships are the lifeline between the fighting fronts and the production lines.

In this regard merchant ships have a unique characteristic. The other elements of war—fighter planes, tanks, guns, A-bombs—are useful for nothing but war.

The ship, on the other hand, is an all-important instrument of peace. It is almost universally agreed that we must maintain a major merchant marine against the possibility of war. But it doesn't stand idle, waiting in readiness for that grim time when fighting may begin again. Day in and day out, on all the essential trade routes of the world, American merchant ships perform a necessary service.

Foreign trade has a far greater influence than most of us realize on this country's productive ability and living standards. Thousands of men and women who have never seen an ocean, work directly or indirectly at producing foods and manufactures for export. And foreign trade is a two-way street—we must import a long list of commodities which are not available at home. To depend on foreign-flag lines to indefinitely take care of these shipments would be blind folly—if war should come, their services might be denied to us overnight.

Vital in war, vital in peace. That slogan pretty well describes the American Merchant Marine.

Oil Looks Ahead

An article in a recent issue of Business Week describes a major oil company's proposed plan for spending $1,000,000,000 on expansion over the next five years. In its broad outline is a typical plan for an integrated oil company.

A change of emphasis is taking place in the oil industry. In late years, that emphasis has largely been placed on building new refining capacity. Now, for the time being at least, refining capacity has caught up with the demand.

So the lion's share of the expansion money will go into production, which means finding and developing new sources of crude oil.

This particular company has 2,000,000,000 barrels of crude reserves at present, which is a whole lot of oil in anybody's book. But, like the industry as a whole, it is looking far into the future. So it plans to put hundreds of millions of dollars into the ground to make certain that those reserves will remain high in the years ahead. And that phrase, "into the ground," involves "into the ocean" as well—for this company, like others, is drilling for oil in the off-shore lands.

The search for oil is a highly expensive, highly speculative enterprise. Despite the great progress made in the science of geology, most wildcat wells turn out dry and useless. The odds are long against making a really big strike. But that doesn't deter the oil men. Working under our free competitive system of doing things, they're making certain there'll be no oil shortage here.

New Chevrolet Task-Force Trucks

Seven new "high-voltage" high-compression valve-in-head engines!

Here's hour-saving, dollar-saving power for your job... the biggest choice of engines in Chevrolet truck history! And they're the most modern engines in the industry!

You've got it good under the hood with a new Chevrolet Task-Force truck! With two new V8's and five new sixes to choose from, you can pick the power that's tailor-made to do your kind of hauling.

Shortest stroke V8's in any leading truck! Both of Chevrolet's new truck V8's have an ultra-short stroke—shortest of any V8 in any leading truck. They're of modern oversquare design, which means that the piston stroke is smaller than the bore. The result is less piston travel per mile... longer engine life. Also, Chevrolet's compact truck V8's deliver exceptionally high horsepower per pound of engine weight. More power is actually available for hauling your loads!

Modern 12-volt electrical system! You get this great development in all new Chevrolet truck engines—both V8's and sixes. The 12-volt electrical system delivers twice the punch for quicker cold-weather starting (up to 30% faster cranking speed). It also provides a hotter, fatter spark for better ignition.

Come in and command the most modern truck power for your job!

Year after year... America's best-selling truck!

Gov. Allan Shivers outlined his plan for segregation problems at the committee's initial meeting last week. Although he stressed the U.S. Supreme Court decision, he said the answer was not in defiance. He recommended adjustment to the best interest of Texas school children.

Shivers said an El Paso district court decision ordering desegregation at Texas Western College was unnecessary regarding the Gilmer-Aiken case. School money now is allocated on the basis of separate, but equal, facilities for white and colored.

Reynolds, the group includes 54 community leaders, appointed by the governor and eight legislators named by the house speaker and lieutenant governor.

Will Myers, Texas, San Antonio lawyer and construction, was named to head a 12-member executive committee. A legal subcommittee will study legislative needs.

3. Ways and means of giving maximum authority to local school districts.

Each jurisdiction was recommended by the State Board of Education. To Henry B. B. state health commissioner, asked the group to study how the state health department could be used to assist in this.

Recommendations were split 10-10 with unanimity of the vote in public agencies.

Agencies were asked to submit through retail outlets, not from manufacturers. Doctors were urged to keep accurate records.

Nationally, it had been suggested preference be given children 1 to 5. Basis for the change in Texas was records showing 4 per cent of paralytic polio, last year, hit children under 5.

Multi-million dollar public school and housing operations agencies are not involved in Texas and counties.

State Land Commissioner J. Paul Rouse last week has been found on evidence of sexual and irregularities.

Reynolds' testimony was in the wind-up of a report of inquiry. Sentenit in April, it was conducted by the Attorney General's Department.

Reynolds has been on and off activities other than the Reynolds program. Multiple investigations in the latter area resulted in 115 indictments and conviction of former land commissioner Rouse.

Rouse and he still is pending trial of questionable evidence and transactions in district attorneys.

Other witnesses told of land a Rouse witness under the Reynolds program and of questionable transactions in Reynolds County.

Investigation of these areas was begun immediately by the Attorney General's Department.

Expert Says Auto Safety Belts Would Cut Auto Fatalities

"How to Avoid Sudden Death" is the title of an article by Steven M. Spencer in the July 14th issue of The Saturday Evening Post.

That, obviously, is a matter in which everyone has a direct and burning interest. Mr. Spencer's article deals with a simple and relatively inexpensive device which, according to some safety experts, could reduce the toll of death and injury on the highways by as much as 50 per cent.

Mr. Spencer writes: "No medical miracle short of a cure for heart disease or cancer could, in one swift stroke, save so many years of life."

Last year motor vehicle accidents accounted for 34,300 deaths and 1,240,000 injuries, and the toll was somewhat higher in 1952.

The safety belt itself is not a new development by any means. Belts have been used in planes for more than 40 years.

They have also been generally used in motor racing for a long period of time. More than 50 makes of belts are for sale.

"But," Mr. Spencer says, "as something for the family car, they are a new and relatively unimportant gadget."

To gain acceptance the new belts must overcome widespread lack of information and some misinformation.

Finally they must compete for the attention of car owners who are usually more interested in horsepower and body styles than in safety devices.

In gathering data for his article, Mr. Spencer spent two months reading accident reports and talking to accident analysts. He cites a number of actual fact typical up at strong prices. Much of the big thing in the West Texas is a badly restocked and prospects for a much larger lamb crop next year look good—if the range conditions improve.

More and more interest in farm flocks is developing in other parts of the Southwest.

cases where people using safety belts walked away from major accidents—the kind of accidents that, without the belts, would have inevitably resulted in death or, at best, serious injury. He cites the opinions of police, doctors, and other authorities who have taken up the cause of safety belts.

The American College of Surgeons—made up of men who professional life is to a considerable extent spent in repairing ghastly results of highway accidents—is a leader in this. It called on automobile manufacturers to provide "passenger" restraining devices such as safety belts along with certain other built-in safety features. That term, "passenger" stabilizing" explains better value. In thousands of accidents, to quote Mr. Spencer, "little injury would be done if the riders were held in place so that they could escape with the car instead of being flung out or through it into the pavement."

Two leading automobile manufacturers are now offering belts as dealer-installed optional equipment. As mentioned before, individual buyers can choose from many makes. It is extremely important that the belts be attached to something absolutely solid, as the frame of the car, not just in a bad crash the seat itself may tear loose. Also, Mr. Spencer indicates, care should be taken that the belt chosen is sufficient strength, proper fit and other such features.

The seat belt is but one example of modern safety thinking development as applied to automobiles. At the end of his article, Mr. Spencer writes: "One of the most important things we can do to save lives is to make sure that the belts are properly installed and used."

Expensive Business

The exploration and development of offshore oil reserves in the Gulf of Mexico is a mighty expensive business. One of the newest, self-contained, movable "islands" from which drilling is done, costs around $2,000,000. It is a new business too—anyone who has been connected with it for as long as eight years is considered a veteran. The companies which pioneered seagoing oil exploration had to develop, by trial and error, techniques, procedures and equipment to solve new problems after problem. As much as $1,000 an acre is paid for mud banks and old oyster beds lying deep under salt water. Right now, all the oil coming from offshore wells amounts to about one per cent of our daily national use, and it is hardly possible that any of the prospectors have yet received back the cost of their underwater search for oil.

The same geological formations that produced the great oil fields of Texas and Louisiana extend out under the Gulf of Mexico. Every fact indicates that with suitable development this offshore area will someday become an oil producer of tremendous importance.

The work being done today by the oil industry is an investment in the country's future prosperity and strength. It will likely result in oil reserves which will help significantly to provide an adequate supply of petroleum products for the next generation of Americans, and which by increasing our domestic oil supplies will enhance our national economic strength and security. Such costly long-range developments as this provide a vivid illustration of the effectiveness and vitality of our competitive free enterprise system.

SOVIET POLAR EXPEDITION

The Soviet Union recently announced plans for a major expedition to the Antarctic. The Russian scientists will cross 1,600 miles of frozen wilderness and set up three bases, one of them near the South Pole. The other countries planned expeditions reached an accord on the allocation of station sites. The United States plans to set up a polar camp near that of the Soviets.

HENRY CIRCLE

The Henry Circle of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church met in regular session on August 1 in the home of Mrs. Grady Adcock, with 12 members present.

Mrs. Bill Bell gave a timely and spiritual devotional. Mrs. Henry Berchardt in her talk stressed settlement houses, especially Bethlehem House, and told of their importance in helping women look after their children in a wholesome manner while they worked.

Mrs. M. S. Henry told of her visit to one in Chicago, which is one of the most noted in the U. S.

Mrs. Foster Davis used as a social feature the story of the wife of Tito, how loyal she was as a soldier in under ground work before her marriage, and the great effort she was putting forth now to secure an education that she might fill her place with dignity.

The meeting was closed with prayer in unison. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

MARGARET M. Y. F.

The Margaret M. Y. F. presented a special program at Wildcat Methodist Church last Sunday evening. The program included two special after which the pastor, Rev. Clarence Bounds, delivered the message. A social hour was held in the basement and refreshments were served.

The following members attended: Rev. and Mrs. Bounds, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Choate, Mrs. Geneva Owens, Mrs. Verda Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Abbe Dunn, Sandra Choate, Patsy Mechell, Louise Gordon, LaVoy Rummel, Patty McGinnis, James Choate, Kenneth Bell, Roan Bradford, Bobby

Check Labels for Washability . . .

Much of the success or failure in laundering synthetic fibers lies in following directions given by manufacturers. Mrs. Mary D. County Home Demonstration Agent, says. Read your label carefully before buying if you want to be sure you can launder the fabric at home. Follow directions given. Your label may say something like this:

"Hand wash." Specific directions may be given. In this case, the fabric cannot be handled carelessly or washed in a tub with strong soap and very hot water. "Wash at home or in commercial laundry with careful methods."

"Can be washed in commercial laundry with ordinary methods." "Color fast." Homemaker should be able to wash this with regular laundry if she is sure of the reputation of her dealer and manufacturer.

Labels should tell you what the fabric is, how to handle it, and what you can expect from it in the way of service. Look for a good descriptive label when you buy.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

The Texas Feed Control Service, state agency which watches over the commercial feeds which livestock men buy, marked its 50th anniversary in July.

Although feeds and feeding have changed greatly in the half-century period, the agency's operations have changed but little.

Young Grandfalls Man Receives $2,000 Tech Scholarship

A 20-year-old Grandfalls youngster who cheerfully sacrificed his college savings to meet family medical bills this week was assured of the opportunity for a college education at Texas Tech.

The Grandfalls student, Abel G. Acosta, has been named the 1955 recipient of the $2,000 Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Parks Scholarship. Acosta will receive $500 annually for the next four years provided he shows "normal academic progress," according to Prof. Alfred B. Strehl of the Tech foreign languages department who administers the award.

Acosta, who will be the 10th Parks Scholarship holder, worked afternoons after school and week ends in a Grandfalls grocery during his high school years to earn money to attend college. His savings were wiped away earlier this year when his widowed mother suffered a stroke of paralysis.

Despite his job and family obligations, Acosta found time to play in football and tennis, to letter in the high school band and to participate in most of his school's activities. Academically, he ranked in the top one-fourth of his class and maintained an "A" average his senior year.

His college objective is to prepare himself to teach in the Texas public schools. The scholarships, established in 1945 by Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Parks of Lubbock, are for the purpose of encouraging young people of Latin American descent to continue their education through college, Professor Strehl said. The Parks own a chain of movie theaters in Texas.

One $2,000 scholarship is awarded annually to a Latin American student in West Texas on a basis of need, character, promise of leadership and scholastic ability.

11th Airborne Issues Call for Volunteers

A call for volunteers for the 11th Airborne Division has been made by the U. S. Army, which announced that a limited number of applicants for the crack airborne outfit will be accepted during August.

The 11th Airborne has been designated as an "Operation Gyro" unit slated for future duty in Europe.

New Army enlistees may specify duty with the 11th Airborne, and upon completion of training be assigned to "The Angels," now stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Paratroopers receive special jump pay and take a special pride in their state of combat readiness. Most branches of the Army, from engineers to quartermasters, are represented in the Airborne Division, giving enlistees a wide variety of assignment possibilities.

Additional information on the 11th Airborne may be obtained from the U. S. Army recruiter, Sfc. Aubrey O. Bailey, at the court house in Vernon.

Specialist Urges Farmers to Plant Winter Legumes

Generally, moisture conditions are on the upgrade in most sections of the state and prospects for fall and winter pasture crops are good. This, says E. M. Trew, extension pasture specialist, should be all of the encouragement farmers and livestock producers need to get in a record acreage of winter crops.

Winter pastures, he says, will help relieve the price-cost squeeze which continues to get tighter. Too, they provide minerals, vitamins and needed protein; make possible a rest period for permanent pastures; supply the green grazing needed when summer pastures are dormant and probably most important, cut the cost of wintering livestock.

Too, from the standpoint of soil protection and improvement, winter pastures are a paying proposition. The cover protects the soil from wind and water erosion and the roots and residue add organic matter to the soil.

When planting time rolls around, Trew says, plant. Earlier planting means earlier grazing even in the case of dry planting. The specialist recommends that soil samples be submitted to the soils testing lab from the fields to be planted and that the fertilizer use recommendations from the laboratory be followed.

Trew likes to use a combination of grasses and a legume. The total production is often increased, the forage is higher in protein and minerals and the grazing season is frequently extended when a combination is used.

The small grains, oats, rye, barley and in some areas wheat, are the best bets for winter grazing. Italian ryegrass does well in East Texas, the Gulf Coast region and in the Blackland and Grand Prairie areas. Vetch, crimson clover, Hubbard and Madrid sweetclover are

Extra Weight After 40 Means Shorter Life, Says Health Officer

Friend, if you're 40 and fat, this is for you: pass up the candied yams and boiled potatoes and cream-filled toothsome tidbits that spell extra pounds and an early grave.

State health authorities can quote chapter and verse as to why too much weight can kill you as you grow older. It increases the likelihood of diabetes, contributes to high blood pressure, is associated with hardening of the arteries and with various heart diseases.

Besides influencing these conditions, extra weight means impaired vigor, increased fatigability, liver breakdown, greater surgical risk, and greater danger of complications from otherwise minor illnesses.

"There's just no doubt about obesity being one of the biggest problems to be faced after 40," these authorities say. "The more overweight you are, the poorer are your chances of living to a ripe old age."

Are you as much as 25 per cent overweight? People in your group die at a rate 75 per cent higher than the rate for people of normal weight.

among the legumes which can be grown successfully in combination with the grasses. Trew suggests contacting the local county agent for information on a particular area. The legume seed should be inoculated before planting. The cost is small compared with the returns and benefits from good inoculation.

Finally, asks the specialist, why not use winter grazing crops to lower the production costs of meat and milk, cut labor requirements for handling livestock and for building and protecting the soil on your farm?
