Checking Fertility of Pond

Henry Greening (above) is shown checking the clearness of the water in one of his ponds to determine the fertility of the pond. High fertility of pond water accomplishes three objectives, according to Ray Duckworth of the Soil Conservation Service. These objectives are (1) increases fish production, (2) makes possible one standard rate of stocking fish, (3) prevents the growth of submerged waterweeds.

The growing season of the microscopic algae is the best time to fertilize. This is from early spring into the fall. Pond fertility should be built up quickly and early in the spring. New ponds should be fertilized before stocking with fish. Fertilizer encourages the growth of microscopic plants or algae, which feeds the insects larvae and other water animals and these feed the fish. A mineral fertilizer is best for a pond. Nitrogen and phosphorous should be the same, such as 8-8-2, 10-10-5, etc.

No one can predict exactly how much fertilizer a pond will require. Ponds need less in dry years and more when rains dilute the fertile waters. But you can fertilize correctly in any case by testing the water in your pond with a simple gadget you can make yourself. Nail a white disk on the end of a stick and mark the stick at 12 and 18 inches above the disk. Your pond is fertile enough when the disk goes out of sight at 12 inches below surface. If you can see the disk at 18 inches or more you need to fertilize.

With each application, use at least one hundred pounds of fertilizer per surface acre, but not more than two hundred pounds. You will notice a change in the color of the water, dark green or brownish green, in three to seven days. The fertilizer can either be poured from a boat or broadcast by hand from the bank of small ponds. You need not scatter the fertilizer over all the pond, and it is better not to place it in water deeper than five feet. A single line up one side and down the other is sufficient. Wind action and undercurrents will do the mixing.

EDITORIAL

(Editor's note: This editorial is taken from the program which Carolyn Hickman, Crowell High School Student Council President, presented at the TASC state meeting in Houston last month.)

What True Citizens Promote

Citizenship is basically concerned with our government and our political rights and privileges. Before good citizenship can prevail, we must possess responsibility, authority, and cooperation. We are the young citizens of the United States; we must be devoted citizens if our country is to continue moving forward.

To have a true democracy, we as citizens must participate in many civic improvement projects. It is our responsibility to aid in community drives and projects. We should encourage our adult citizens to vote. Within our school, we must cooperate with our teachers, school board members, and other students.

We can promote better citizenship if we are true citizens. Our privileges and rights which are stated in the U. S. Constitution can be maintained only so long as we faithfully perform our duties and responsibilities as citizens; therefore, we must promote good citizenship to preserve our democracy.

Father-Son Speak

R. C. McCord, minister of the First Christian Church, introduced a devotional service held in the high school auditorium Tuesday, March 24, for the high school and junior high students. A quartet, comprised of Miss Sandra Ellis, Marion Crowell, Cecil Driver and Joe Ward, sang "At Calvary" in keeping with the Easter season. Then Minister McCord introduced his son, Val, who led a revival at the Christian Church last week. The son spoke to the group on the topic, "The High Cost of Low Living," using Bible characters from both the Old and the New Testaments to show that "low living" is too expensive for anyone to indulge in. Then, the father, R. C. McCord, led the group in the closing prayer.

A few of the best known are featured in the display: "Behold Your King," "Ben Hur," "The Robe," "The Big Fisherman," "The First Easter," "Keys of the Kingdom," "The Silver Chalice," and "Magnificent Obsession." These books are good reading not only at Easter but also at other times throughout the year.

April Brings Shower of Plentiful Foods

April brings a shower of foods, along with traditional rain showers, as seven foods are especially plentiful, reports the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Such items as beef, cottage cheese, eggs, rice, canned ripe olives, dried beans and canned corn are expected to be abundant, according to the Agricultural Marketing Service, the U. S. Department of Agriculture agency that compiles the monthly list of plentiful.

Egg prices paid to farmers dropped more than 10 per cent between mid-January and late February. April supplies are expected to be above those of a year ago, with prices below last year's attractive retail level. As of January 1, canned corn stocks were at a record high, and heavy supplies also should be much in evidence during April.

Substantial January-to-March increases in the number of fed beef cattle have resulted in a much larger meat supply.

Creamed cottage cheese production is expected to exceed last year's 787 million pound record. Dry bean production netted a record 12 per cent above average. A record rice crop and the possibility of a record canned ripe olive supply make these big items for April.

Most of these foods are produced extensively in Texas, says the Service. Foods listed as "plentiful" by AMS are expected to be more than adequate to meet normal trade needs.

Hardy Ward Wins Archery Tournament at Louisiana Tech

Hardy Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Ward of Mount Pleasant and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ward of Crowell, attended the 1964 Deep South Collegiate Archery Tournament at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, La.

They shot a Chicago Round, which is shooting 96 arrows at twenty yards. Hardy has never shot this round before even in practice. The 14-year-old Mount Pleasant Junior High student out-shot all competition in the tournament with a total of 798 of a possible 964.

This tournament included junior high and high school students from four states and college students from across the United States. Professional archers participated by shooting in the open division and they came from a four-state area.

Over two hundred archers participated in this tournament and Hardy's score held the lead after the last arrow was shot. Hardy received a trophy for his division and was congratulated by Ben Pearson, a national manufacturer of archery tackle and G. B. Hogg, president of the National Collegiate Archery Coaches Association.

The high point of the tournament came when Hardy shot his last six arrows. The loud speaker announced that if Hardy had shot a score of 52 with these last six arrows his score would be 800.

A group of archers gathered at his target and they and the spectators were pulling for him as his arrows were scored. He shot a 50, lacking 2 points breaking the 800, but this put him 181 points ahead of the nearest junior competitor, 54 points ahead of the nearest college student and 20 points ahead of the nearest professional archer.

NOTHING happens until someone buys something! The merchant must sell an appliance, furniture, clothes, food — or whatever he sells — to complete the cycle. Unless he sells his merchandise the worker who made it won't be hired to make another item.

Poor folks can't buy much merchandise. After rural electricity came to the farms, production increased and not long after that farm people had money to buy things merchants sold.

Today farm families can live as comfortably as their city friends. Electric ranges, dishwashers, laundries and other appliances are part of the farm home as in the city.

In the rural areas it's up to this electric cooperative to see to it there is always plenty of electrical power to serve each member-user's demands. We strive to attain that ever-increasing goal.

"There's many reasons why our grounds should be a matter of pride to our community. Go out and drive through and then compare it to some of our neighboring towns. Our caretaker is always on the job and for one man's efforts, where can you find more to do and more done. He's kind and sympathetic and always willing to help with your problems.

Langdon said the fact that the Texas petroleum industry was in such a healthy state after more than half a century of intensive development could be laid to two factors: (1) There was a lot of oil to begin with; and (2) it had not been wasted promiscuously.

Critics of the way the Railroad Commission has regulated the oil and gas industries disregarded the Commissioner's duty to guard the public interest. When they talked about allowables and production, they ignored the fact that natural gas has in recent years become an important energy source replacing to some extent oil; and that Texas was more dominant in gas production than in crude oil production.

Langdon is the newest member of the Railroad Commission, having been appointed last spring. Now he is seeking the remaining four years of a six-year term. He resigned as chief justice of the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals to accept the Railroad Commission post.

Before moving to El Paso, Langdon was district judge for five West Texas counties. While on the bench and as a practicing attorney in a large oil producing area, he gained vast knowledge of the oil and gas industries, as well as transportation matters, which the Commission regulates.

the highway to the gate and most of all a good caretaker. Our current expenses run around $200 per month. This is for upkeep only and this month's $54.00 won't go very far.

"Our newspaper appeal is our only way of reminding our friends that this work never ends. The days of drives, shows and dinners are over. Give according as the Lord has prospered you, be it much or little and our work will go on."

JIM C. LANGDON is now serving on the Railroad Commission and doing a fine job. Texas oil production has gone up 3 per cent, meaning more income for Texans and more tax revenue. JIM LANGDON is a former high court judge who understands the problems of oilmen, truckers, butane dealers, the railroads and other industries he helps to regulate in the public interest. Texas must keep this man of integrity and ability on the job. Vote in the Democratic Primary May 2 for Railroad Commissioner.

ONLY ONE WITHERSPOON RANCH COWBOY LIVING

(Since the birthday of Foard County occurs in April, a series of articles about the county and its pioneer residents will be published each week this month. The articles are written by Mrs. V. A. Johnson, a member of the Foard County Historical Survey Committee.—Editor.)
The last surviving member of the Witherspoon cowhands is H. E. Ferguson, 93, who lives at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Karlten Brink, and family of Wichita Falls.
His widowed mother, Mrs. Sarah C. Ferguson, widowed in 1876, was a good example of the rugged individual who endured the physical and cultural hardships of the raw frontier. In 1881, they moved from Marshall County, Tennessee, to Collin County, Texas, where they maintained residence until 1886 at which time they moved to Hardeman County, now Foard County. Their first night was spent at the J. G. Witherspoon home. Very few families were in the county at that time. Mrs. Ferguson believed that there was a future for West Texas, so she filed on 672 acres of school land some eight miles south of Crowell and 2 1/2 miles west of the old Eula ranch, which is now the Hall-sell ranch. The land remains in the Ferguson family. Many families lived in dugouts, but they hauled lumber from Harrod for their house and part of the house remains today. It was home for Mrs. Ferguson and her twelve children and her parrot.
At the ripe age of fourteen, Mr. Ferguson began working as a cowboy on the Witherspoon ranch. The ranch employed four or five men in the winter but more were employed through the summer.

Mr. Ferguson was interviewed by a member of the County Historical Survey Committee shortly before he moved to Wichita Falls with his daughter and her family. Mr. Ferguson recalls as vividly as yesterday his days on the Witherspoon ranch. He well remembers the amount of his monthly paycheck. "They paid us $25 per month, but they furnished our ropes," he wryly remarked.
He worked five and one-half years without losing a day; he decided it was time for a vacation, so he took off for two months after which he returned and completed ten years of work there.
Mr. Ferguson remembers Cal Best and Harriett Martin who were the first Negroes in this section and they lived at the Witherspoon ranch. Their marriage is on record in the office of the county and district clerk and they were the thirteenth couple to be married after the organization of Foard County in 1891.
Life during this time was a struggle with a raw, unimproved country, but these pioneers would all stress the fact that many joys and pleasures were their's all along the way. Mr. Ferguson remembers that the mail was brought by stage from Vernon to Margaret, some eighteen miles away. A horseback route from Margaret to Benjamin came by the ranch house and as settlers began to come, the Witherspoons secured their own post office in 1887; it was known as Ula and Mrs. Harriett Witherspoon was the only postmistress and served until it was discontinued in 1891.
Mr. Ferguson recalls going to church at Banister Chapel, east of Crowell on the Whitfield farm, The Crowell College, which burned in 1897, was the social center where ice cream suppers were held and cakes were auctioned for the prettiest girl.

Mr. Ferguson beamed as he related his trip to the Seymour rodeo. The first rodeo held in Seymour was in 1896. That one he missed, but the next year, he and his friend, Bill Taylor, borrowed Rube Edwards' surrey and took Lizzie and Emma Roark to the rodeo. Despite the lack of conveniences, the pioneer home was noted for its hospitality, so it was no trouble to find a home that would take the girls for the night and they went to look for another for themselves. He says that he can still remember that the residence where he and Mr. Taylor stayed had a back yard full of chickens. Likewise, he remembers that they had a good dinner at the rodeo for a quarter.
Mr. Ferguson recalls taking his sister behind him on horseback to a dance at Margaret. A meal was served at midnight, then breakfast was served before the guests left. Mr. Ferguson admitted that he could not remember who played for the "extravaganza," but he said, "I think a Negro played the fiddle."
The story of the outlaw steer is one Mr. Ferguson delights to relate. The chain half circle steer was born in the Pease River breaks to the Wright Brothers. Early in the 1890's, Wrights sold their cattle to Witherspoon, but this steer refused to move and ran at large until he was about sixteen years old. In 1905, Mr. Ferguson and two R2 cowboys found him, but the only means to stop a 1600-pound rebellious steer was gun powder. So, then there, the outlaw steer came to the end of his trail.
In 1901, four Ferguson brothers, S. J., T. J., C. R. and H. E., purchased an interest in the Ben Allison Drug Store. It was a small wooden structure on the north side of the square where the Crowell State Bank now stands. Years passed and Mr. Allison sold his remaining interest in the store. The location of Ferguson Brothers Drug Store was purchased early in 1908 and plans were made to erect a brick building. The first freight train into Crowell brought brick that was used for the construction of the building.
In 1936, Foard County observed its forty-fifth anniversary. Mr. Ferguson participated in a memorial service which honored the memory of Foard County pioneers. In 1941 at the fiftieth anniversary of Foard County, he was in charge of a chuck wagon dinner for cowboys who were here in 1891. The "grub" was cooked like it was on the open range.
Mr. Ferguson maintained an active interest in the affairs of the county so long as his health permitted. He was a member of the board of directors of the Crowell State Bank, an active member of the Methodist Church, past member of the school board, and helped organize the Rotary Club. He proudly states that he has attended two Rotary International meetings, one in Dallas and the other in San Francisco.

Screwworms Are on the Move Again in Texas, Says Agent

Screwworms are on the move again in Texas, and livestock producers must take precaution in handling their livestock, if they do not want the insects to spread across the state, Joe Burkett, County Agricultural Agent, warned this week.
Burkett reported that several infestations have already been detected in various parts of the state and, with the coming of spring weather and an increase in livestock management practices, few areas can be counted completely safe from screwworm attack.
Spring is an ideal period for screwworms because of the mild, moist weather, the county agent indicated. In addition, such activities as calving, farrowing, and shearing, along with routine surgical operations, provide thousands of wounds that are open invitation to screwworm infestation.
He expressed alarm that many farmers and ranchers are reported not using smears, sprays, or other screwworm preventatives, and are allowing their animals to go unchecked and untreated. This practice could quickly result in an explosion of screwworm cases in this county and throughout the state, he said.
Burkett pointed out that although the statement recently released by the Southwest Animal Health Research Foundation, the United States Department of Agriculture, and the Texas Animal Health Commission that screw-worms have been eliminated from the over-wintering areas of Southwest, he warned that worm cases could occur because of insects migrating into the United States from Mexico, caused by migratory flies, detected and treated promptly could permit the screwworms to become reestablished in Texas.

To prevent this from happening, Burkett urged producers inspect their livestock frequently treat wounds and infestations select larvae samples, and cases immediately so that agency measures can be taken. Sterile screwworm flies will be dropped near all cases of infestation, the county agent said.
