Nerves

Do they torture you by day? Keep you awake at night?

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES. What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES. Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves

Do they make you Cranky, Blue—give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache?

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still. Nerve Strain brings on Headache. Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion. There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves

Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal. You can't have a good time when you are nervous. You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.

Quiet your nerves with Always wash your stockings before wearing them, said Mrs. E. Davis at the meeting of the Community H. D. Club, which met with Mrs. Herman Gentry May 16. Soaking new silk stockings in aluminum sulphate will prevent them and make them wear long with fewer runs. Dissolve two teaspoons of aluminum sulphate in half a pint of hot water then soak them. After they are dry gently and dry again, stated leader, Mrs. Earl Davis. One visitor, Miss Hazel Clark was present. The next meeting, June 5, will be a covered dish dinner at the home of Mrs. Parland McBeth.

To prevent motor damage when you

...you must have oil of high film strength!

DID YOU know that idling along at 10 miles an hour or picking up suddenly can cause as much motor wear as high-speed driving?

All three put extreme pressure on your connecting rod and crankshaft bearings. If your oil does not have enough oiliness and film strength to withstand these high pressures, your motor parts suffer damaging wear.

Straight mineral oils have no more oiliness and film strength than they had 10 years ago. Some, because of over-refining, have less!

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil has more oiliness and 2 to 4 times more film strength than straight mineral oils! The Germ Process—adding concentrated oily essence to highly-refined, paraffin-base oil—puts into this oil more film strength

THE IDEAL EDITOR

An exchange enumerates the qualities which should be possessed by the ideal editor, as follows:

He would be as rapid in action as an electric fan, yet as patient as Job; he would have all the vigor of 20 and the wisdom of 70; he would have the memory of an encyclopedia and the infallibility of an adding machine; he would have an eye like an eagle and the nose of a bloodhound; he would be as tactful as an expectant heir before a rich uncle, and as firm as granite; he would be as discerning as a shaft of light and have the analysis of a supreme court jurist; he would be able to, at one and the same time, answer two telephones, place a call of his own, check a proof sheet and add the middle name of the third assistant secretary of the navy, and remember whatever it was he was told to bring home from the drug store.

Obviously, as our exchange regrettably admits, "there ain't no such animal." Hence there never was, and never will be, an ideal editor.

Capt. Aldon Horn Asks Gridsters to Keep in Training

Aldon Horn, captain of the Crowell High School football team for next fall, urges all boys who intend to report for grid practice early in September, whether they have reported before or not, to keep in the best possible training at all times.

The Gridsters will have a number of outstanding stars missing from the 1935 line-up due to graduation, however, there is other good material on hand and another winning team is expected. In connection with the 1935 season, Capt. Horn uses the News to send the following message to prospective candidates:

"Not only now, but always is the time to keep in training. There will be many temptations to break the training rules, but always remember that the boy who is in the best physical condition will succeed. I urge that we all strive to keep fit and in doing this we will have a winning team."

Grid practice will be held at the school building, beginning September 1st, 1935.

Foard Farmer--

and hearing, with heads of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, we were invited to the White House lawn, where the President addressed us. His address indicated that he was happy to have a group of farmers visit the national capital. He further indicated that he thought that the processing tax on the farm products was just and did not give any reason to believe that they would be removed.

"The President further stated that serious thought had been given to the various methods of production control, but that up to date the AAA seemed to be the most practical. He compared the processing taxes on the farmers products to the protective tariff that the manufacturing industries enjoy. The President stated that no action had taken place in Washington since he became president that he welcomed and appreciated more than the visit of the farmers.

"After the President's address, we were given the privilege of visiting the AAA departments where all the contracts are assembled. We were impressed with the magnitude of the operations. The Texas delegation had a meeting and banquet in the Hotel Mayflower. Senators Connally and Sheppard and the many representatives from all districts of Texas were present. They expressed themselves as being gratified that a group of farmers would visit Washington in their own interests."

Mr. Wisdom was highly enthusiastic about the results of the trip and plans to meet with the various committees and in as many communities as possible to give a report of the trip. He came home impressed with the sincerity of the AAA officials in trying to better the condition of the farmers and he urged that every farmer make a close study of the agricultural situation and be prepared to make decisions that will be of interest to all the farmers of the entire country.

While in Washington, Mr. Wisdom had a pleasant visit with his boyhood chum and lifetime friend, Marvin Jones of Amarillo, Congressional representative from the district that formerly included Foard County. Mr. Jones is now chairman of the House agricultural committee, one of the government's most important committees.

Mr. Jones told Mr. Wisdom that the trip of the farmers to Washington had been of inestimable value in causing representatives and senators who were opposed or "on the fence" regarding the AAA to come to its support and offset serious opposition that had developed.

TRUSCOTT NINE LOSER IN GAME WITH CROWELL

In a practice game Crowell defeated Truscott 4 to 1 at Truscott Sunday afternoon. This was the third game between these two teams and the first victory for Crowell. Due to bridge washouts on Pease River, the double-header scheduled with Elderado, Okla., for Sunday was postponed until a later date.

A hustling team backed Rasberry's fine pitching to let the Truscott team down with one unearned run and four well scattered hits. Mason, Graves, Sloan and Ashford blasted out a two-base hit a piece to score three runs in the third inning. Rasberry scored the fourth run in the sixth frame. Truscott's only score came in the first inning when A. Myers, who had walked and advanced to third by a long single by B. Myers, scored on a fly to deep center field.

Green, a former Crowell player, pitched for Truscott, but could not stand the pace the sticks of his former teammates set for him and after the third inning Crowell had the situation well in hand. After the fifth inning only twelve Truscott players faced Rasberry at the plate.

The entire Crowell club played heads-up baseball and robbed Truscott of several hits and never let up enough to let a Truscott player get started. Bell was the outstanding performer in the outfield and the work of the Crowell infield was a feature of the game. B. Myers of Truscott led both teams in hitting with two hits out of four trips to the plate. Mason

One of the greatest motion pictures with one of the greatest casts of all time will be shown at the Rialto at the Saturday night preview, Sunday matinee and Monday when "David Copperfield" is flashed on the screen of this theatre.

This picture has more than bigness and more than intimacy; it has a soul. As it develops its absorbing story it runs the full gamut of entertainment qualities. There is a wealth of romance, a wealth of pathos, a wealth of comedy. There are spectacle and thrills, and tragedy and comedy. greatest asset that God had given man was the power to reason and that it was this condition that lifted man above beast. "Through the exercise of the mind, you can adjust your thinking to meet the problems arising in life," he said. In stressing the importance of proper use of mind and thought, the speaker stated that their true value could be lost through disuse.

In closing, Mr. Dixon paid tribute to Crowell High's famous fighting spirit and urged the graduates to carry on with it. He also advised them not to be contented for contentment marked the end of achievement and to remember that it was not what one started, but what one finished that really counted. "There is not an adult in this audience who would not exchange places with you. You have a splendid start, now it is up to you to carry on," the speaker said.

Awards Announced

Prior to the announcement of scholarships and presentation of diplomas, Supt. L. W. Bridges briefly. He stated that in the highly competitive life of today and the future, much more was demanded of those who succeeded in it than was the case in the past. He asked the graduates to take with their diplomas the responsibilities that went with them and to accept the challenge that the diplomas brought.

Mr. Graves announced that Ala Ketchersid, valedictorian, could have a scholarship from any college in the state. A scholarship at Mary Hardin-Baylor awaits Bernice Poland, salutatorian, and best all-around student for the year in home economics, Stanley Womack, honor student for boys.

After introduction by Supt. L. T. Graves, Mr. Dixon delivered the commencement address. Using as his subject, "New Frontiers," the speaker told the graduates that frontiers were not exhausted and could still be found and conquered by those who did not lack courage and vision. He mentioned Lindbergh as one who saw and conquered a frontier that others said was not there. "Due to inventions that have revolutionized transportation and living conditions, the risk in reaching a frontier in Africa is not so great now as the risks faced by those crossing even a part of our nation in its early days," Mr. Dixon said.

He implored the graduates to hold high ambition, stating that there was no substitute for it. "Russia is substituting terror for ambition and it is not proving satisfactory," he stated. In telling that life was a struggle, Mr. Dixon said that to remove 'struggle' from life would be like removing scoring from an athletic contest.

New frontiers are wrought by man's mental achievements, said the speaker. In mentioning this fact, Mr. Dixon added that the

Congratulations to the parents and scholars of the Vacation school upon the splendid opening. At the same time we train our childhood and youth it is incumbent upon us that the elders take away from them the temptations that are multiplying in our present society. As a church we are unalterably opposed to any form of gambling and drink. The marble machines break down our morals and remove the incentive to honest toil. Drink, including beer, needs to be kept from our youth. Beer is only a blind for the sale of every kind of strong drink and an entering wedge in binging back the barroom. We don't need our soft drink counters turned into saloons where every child and woman is forced to see the corruption once hidden behind screen doors. Our county has expressed its wish again and again and the church must press the battle on this clear cut issue. Every parent is invited to stand with us for the purity of our community. GEO. E. ### SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

The Lord's Supper.

Lesson for May 26, Matt. 26:17-30.

Golden Text: 1 Corin. 11:24.

The first fact to bear in mind about the Lord's Supper is that it is a feast of commemoration. Inspired by the precious words of the Saviour, "This do in remembrance of me," the Holy Communion is a celebration of remembrance. As such it performs a most useful service, for it is very easy in the midst of the hustle and bustle of our crowded days, to lose sight of Jesus.

Dr. James Moffatt once said that American ministers preach as though nothing happened before last Saturday. Because of the tyranny of the present, because of our absorption in the amazing developments of today, we fail to recall that there was a long yesterday in which Jesus and His influence played a very conspicuous part. The Lord's Supper compels us to make amends for this lapse of memory. For it reminds us forcibly of Christ, prompting us to think of Him as a real Person, at once our Example and our Hope.

Secondly, the Supper is a feast of thanksgiving. Early in the Christian era the common name for the sacrament was the "Eucharist," meaning "act of giving thanks." You will remember that Jesus and His disciples gathered in the Upper Room to observe the passover, that ancient rite celebrating the deliverance from the angel of death in Egypt. Obviously the passover was a joyous feast, and the Holy Communion, its successor, is also a festival of gratitude.

Finally, the Lord's Supper is a communion, or fellowship, a testimony to the unity of God's people, for almost all Christians observe this gracious rite. It is their supreme act of worship. The 231 millions of Roman Catholics, the 144 millions of Greek Orthodox adherents, and the 207 millions associated with the Protestant bodies hold this sacrament in the highest esteem.

Now we can Both See

THIS wise father has put his reading lamp to double use. He found that when both he and his son shared the same light neither one could really see properly. So here's what he did: He bought a floor lamp equipped with an indirect lighting reflector. In the sockets under the shade he put 60-watt lamps for reading. In the reflector at the top he inserted a 300-watt Mazda lamp.

Now they can both see. Dad can place the lamp wherever he wants it without robbing the boy of the light he needs.

In order to be sure that you have the right kind of light, ask for the free services of our lighting expert. He will measure your light with the Sight Meter. Then you will know.

SLUMBERING GOLD
by Aubrey Boyd
AUTOCASTER SERV.
teenth Installment
SPEIS: Speed Malone, gambler, and Ed Maitland, a seafaring New Englander, were partners in the gold rush of '97. They met up north in a crowd that Frenchy, the fisherman, and the beautiful girl who they met in Maitland; Fallon, the miner, who resented Maitland's interest in Maitland; the gold-time prospector; Garrett gave Maitland and Speed when he quit the trail, and his drunken partner, who was drowned after a Pete turned out to be a disguise. Speed killed a Skagway—a cheat man—of a shell game—and months later was arrested and put in jail as a murderer. He got out, but he was carrying for the Skagway—where Drew Burt were stationed—he captured by his enemy. But Maitland and Pete of him as Fallon was about him. They made for their horses, by one route, by another with the dogs. Rusty, who had come to a blizzard.
GO ON WITH THE STORY
did you hear, Bud?" spoke low to prevent his from carrying to Pete. It was before dawn of the morning.
told him.
reckon we're both things!" Speed muttered, "I need more like a loud way off. An echo of gunfire froze trees snapping." "I saw," they listened again. "The shadowed chasm of them."
stirred abruptly. "You see, Bud, and watch with me. It may be gone a while, but that cliff covered with the call you when I come and it."
reconnaissance took him range than he had expected. He paused, halfway down the cliff, it was to surprise and unobstructed view of the center of one of the about two miles away, a dark moving speck came. They were men; one of them carried what might be a rifle.
slowly, so as not to betray a quick movement, he was in his favor, since he was on them from above. They were too far to be recognized anything but men, but Fallon had somehow into his mind's eye at the glimpse of them.
along the base of a boulder, he held just high to bring the gures into view. He fired the gun once, at their direction, and immediately covered it to prevent a step of smoke from showing.
kept moving for an interest the sound reached their ears. They stopped, as he had expected. Instead of looking in general direction, they turned the other way.
in spite of the advantage of his observation, he saw and nameless instinct to sink back out of sight of the boulder and snow. This was a sense did not come; but after lying hidden for seconds, he looked over again. Strange to say, the figures had vanished.
he rose into clear view of the boulder, to tempt them to themselves with a bullet. But that did come was not and confounding surprise. It burst in his ears directly behind him! He back instantly into his right next to his arm, in a flash of time as the gun's muzzle was not a hundred yards away! He showed behind him, he waited for a gun muzzle; for some tremor, however, in the snow above. He the fellow shoot? His to the snow, detected a set of running feet, receding from him.
ramped up and ran to the point from which the shot came. There he hollow in the snow where he had lain concealed, and he of his feet leading up to his depression, and away from it. The fugitive led for the cabin and had a track!
was a spreading dark in the snow where he had, and a blood trail all course!
scramble along canyon ledges brought him to of the jackpine gulch, and one of a blood trail "it him that he had arrived in and stood waiting with the and with Pete close by. He them to back in close to in silence. They had the alarm of the shots, but action of what was about.
still wait, a voice spoke from around the cliff and hand—a husky, broken voice. "Don't shoot," it said weakly. "It's your game. I'm out of shells."

Along the cliff wall and into view, covered by Speed's guns, a group of men, moccasined figure Maitland recognized at a glance the man who had held them up at their winter camp.
He held a revolver in his right hand. The other hand clutched at his side, and dripped blood. When he raised his head and looked at them, his eyes changed strangely from the look of a fighting animal brought to bay, to an expression of wild astonishment.
"Pete!" he murmured, almost under his breath. "How did they find this?"
"They found your lead dog on the lakes," said Pete. "It brought us here."
The deepening wonder in his face was a thing to see. "The dog!" choking in his throat like a chuck-chilling, mortally exhausted laugh. "We've won now, kid!" he chortled in a hard elation. "Beat the game with—a damn—Siwash!"

He held a revolver in his right hand, the other clutched his side.
When they would have caught him, he waved them off again. "Get this—Pete," he mumbled thickly. "Something else—I've got to tell you, kid. And I will. But—give me time—first—get this. The gold is—"
He lost his voice and found it by sheer force of will—"I saw it—just now. The men—in the gulch. In bright snow—"
His voice ebbed from him. His discolored and racked face turned gray with a deathly pallor of weakness and stupefaction at the failure of his tongue and his brain to answer his will. "The gold—"
With an agonized, astonished curse at his defeat, he slumped, held rigid an instant against the wall, and then with a slow, lurching slide, sank down.
Speed, who had taken a step to break his fall, caught him, and leaned over the still body.
"He told the truth about his last shell," Speed mused aloud. "He was tryin' to reach the cabin and his shells for a last stand. But he saw our marks in the gulch. Who did he think I was at first? And where did he get that wound?"
"The two men in the gulch he spoke of," said Maitland.
"It's what I was wonderin'. I saw them, too. About four miles off from here. He must have dodged 'em. But they'll pick up his blood trail. In half an hour from now, they'll—"
Here Speed unaccountably broke off short, spun about with a gun drawn, and in a flash had leaped round the narrow cliff ledge out of Maitland's sight.
"Hands up!" he shouted, "or I blast you into the canyon. Throw that gun down!"
A man with his arms raised came around the cliff ledge by which Dalton had approached so short a time before. Maitland was too confounded to utter a sound. He wore the uniform of the Mounted Police.
There are no braver men than the Canadian Northwest Mounted, but they are neither immortal nor impervious to the menace of two .45 six-shooters at blank range.
Speed emptied the mounty's holster and kicked the gun behind him into the snow.
"This only makes it worse for you," said the officer. "I demand that you and your partner surrender to arrest."
Here was just the vicious turn of fate that Speed had feared, with an extra twist to make it worse. After evading the suspicion of Cathcart, who had mistaken Dalton for a Siwash, were they now, by a climax of irony, to be charged with the murder of Dalton himself?
"This looks compromisin'. I'll concede," he said. "But you boys is on the wrong track. While you are stalkin' us, the real game is likely beatin' to cover. There's two more men in these mountains, and they're worth trailin'."
"Where did you see them?" the officer asked, without belief.
Speed pointed his gun. "Four miles that way."
"You saw me and an officer who trailed with me, perhaps, though we didn't come from that direction. You've got your distance and bearings twisted. If you have a hope of setting us on a false trail, you can drop it. The game's up for both of you. Should you refuse to return our guns and have heard the warrant, you'll be hunted down to a finish."

Speed picked up the police revolver, emptied them and threw them into the chasm. "It's a difference of opinion that makes a gambler," he said. "Get me two lengths of rawhide, Bud."
The request brought Maitland out of a trance. "Don't do it, Speed," he said quickly. "Let the Law straighten this out. Investigations will clear us of what they suspect."
"You've got delusions about the Law, Bud. I can't argue with you. I ain't got no words but a low-down gambler's lingo, and it don't just fit with what I'm tryin' to show. But I've got a hunch, and I'm askin' you now, if ever you trusted a partner's word, to take mine when I say you ain't fixed to deal with the Law. Later maybe—not now."
Maitland was moved by the appeal, but not by its logic. His eyes were wet when he spoke. "We've reached that junction, Speed, you once talked of. God knows I'd never have a truer partner. You know that if this charge were made against you alone, and there was no other way out than the one you say, I'd travel any road to help you. But to escape by using force against the police isn't just a crime that would outlast you for life; it's a needless crime. We'd be giving 'em the real case against us that they haven't got. That isn't all. We couldn't take Pete over that route, and I can't leave her to face this alone."
Pete would have spoken, but Speed's brooding look at her checked the words. "How do you figure it?"
"I don't know," said Pete, unhappily. "I feel that Bud's right though when he says you'd give 'em the Law a case."
"You're an ornery young pair of cubs," Speed muttered. "Reckon you can't help it, comin' from where you do. Now it's the same junction, turned backwards, and I can be just as damned ornery."
He pressed back the gun hammers, tensely watched by the police officer who had followed his argument with a fateful interest. Speed's eyes, however, strayed to a long pendant spruce cone on a tree near the ledge. Without aiming, he fired. The cone fell, clipped from the branch, and before it reached the snow, four quick bullets had broken it to fragments. The remaining shells blazed at these places as they spun down the slope.
The outlaw waited, listening, till the last echo died out of the canyon. Slowly then, he looked at the guns, and rubbed a spot from one of the clean blue barrels. They were still smoking when he handed them to the police officer.
"Well, go ahead and read your warrant about our supposed shooting of Dalton's body."
"We have a warrant for your arrest," said the mounty, "but not for killing that man. Since you've surrendered, I want you to understand that we don't railroad men, or even arrest them, on merely presumptive charges. We had a brush with this fugitive—" nodding toward Dalton, "down the creek. It's more than possible he was wounded by one of our guns. The inquest will show. My warrant is to arrest you and your partner for the murder of a Siwash on Lake Lebarge, on or about the twentieth of last November. The native's body was disposed of through a hole in the ice, and has been recovered since the thaw."
Speed's eyes sought those of his partner and Pete, who looked dumbfounded.
"Your own warrant?" he demanded.
"Mine would be sufficient. This one happens to be signed by Cathcart of the Mounted Police."
"Well, I'm a son of a—!" Speed mumbled to the hollow chasm with a note of doom.
At the same moment, a clatter in the jackpine gulch swung their attention to that quarter. In these echoing surprises they had completely forgotten Rusty. Now a slinking wolfish head nosed round the cliff and covered back at sight of the fallen body. From behind the cliff, the strident, excited, harshly familiar voice of Corporal Cathcart twanged like an untuned banjo: "Get this malamute, Burke. It's the 'wolf' that gave us the blood trail. The Siwash's lead dog!"
It did not take the Mounties long to get things in shape for the trip down to headquarters. Pete was delegated to serve breakfast while the officers disposed of Dalton's body in a crude grave near the mountain hideout. At last they started, Speed, closely guarded, gave them no cause for concern. He was meeting the law unafraid.

Moffett

especially important to safeguard the interests of agriculture in Texas. Out of the 150 representatives in the Legislature, only 12 have any connection with agriculture and only 2 of the 31 senators claim any agricultural connections, according to Mr. Moffett. "This condition exists in spite of the fact that agriculture is Texas' leading business, and this condition will grow worse as control of our law-making body continues to go to the big cities," he said.

The speaker mentioned that Texas was the most difficult of all states to legislate for, due to the variety and multitude of problems arising in such a gigantic state with so many contrasts in climate and occupations. "For instance," said Mr. Moffett, "Nebraska legislators are working for a state which is an agricultural state alone, while Texas has such industries as sulphur, forestry, oil, fishing, livestock, agriculture and others and Texas Legislators must deal with problems concerning all of these. There is such a difference in climate in Texas that in our last session we had to deal with problems arising from drought in one part of the state and from floods in another part."

In illustrating Texas' size, Mr. Moffett mentioned that a Texarkana citizen was 50 miles closer to Chicago than El Paso; a Dalhart resident was closer to North Dakota than to Brownsville, and that at El Paso you were closer to Los Angeles than to Beaumont and Port Arthur.

"With such conditions existing relative to size and diversity of industry, isn't it important that we keep representation in our Legislature properly scattered throughout the state, rather than permitting it to come mainly from our big centers of population?" Mr. Moffett asked. "Unless this amendment is adopted, Dallas and Houston will immediately have nine representatives and in twenty years, they will have 14 to 15 each. Fort Worth and San Antonio will likely have 10 or 12 each, thus taking many members now coming from farming counties away from us."

He added that Oklahoma's constitution, prepared in 1907, prevents any one county from having more than 7 representatives. "When our state was originally settled, about 90 per cent of its residents were engaged in agricultural pursuits," said Mr. Moffett, "but the condition has vastly changed in the years that have passed and if we are to protect the rights of all our people, we must change our constitution to prevent the larger cities from gaining control of our lawmaking body."

Many other states limit the number of representatives from any one county and some of these were mentioned. Georgia with 100 counties, has a limit of 3 to a county; Florida 5 and Maryland 6.

Mr. Moffett first started work on his proposed amendment two months after going to the Legislature in 1930. He advanced it in the 42nd Legislature, except that then six instead of seven were the maximum proposed. His resolution received 106 votes, six more than enough, in the House, and 20 in the Senate, one short of the requisite two-thirds.

In the 43rd Legislature identically the same resolution got 111 votes in the House and on third reading had 22 votes mustered in the Senate, but was balked by a little filibuster. He mentioned that the maximum was put up to seven this time. "We can't always get what we want, so sometimes it is better to take what we can get," he said in mentioning the increase.

Limiting the number of representatives from any one county is necessary to protect the farming districts, Mr. Moffett said. "Whether we like it or not, it is now the tendency for the government to step into various activities and don't ever think that the government will greatly concern itself with the farmers' interest if it is controlled almost entirely by representatives from the big centers of population."

Mr. Moffett gave as an example the high protective tariffs for the benefit of the big eastern manufacturers that resulted following the Civil War. "The manufacturers got in the saddle of the national government then and have practiced their racket for 70 years," he stated.

The speaker commended the recent farmers' trek to Washington, stating that practically all groups, except farmers, had permanent or part-time representatives stationed at the state and national capitals to look after their interests and that it was certainly gratifying to see the farmers really speak their minds for a change, for too little was heard from agriculture as a rule.

The local representative mentioned some of the work done at

MANY ENTRIES WED. IN DRESS CONTEST HERE

The annual dress contest of the Women's Home Demonstration Clubs of Foard County was held in the District Court room Wednesday afternoon, with a large crowd present. Thirty eight ladies entered dresses.

There were two divisions, one for stout ladies and one for slim. There were 15 entrants in the stout ladies' division and 23 in the slim ladies' division. Mrs. W. E. Jones of Foard City placed first in the stouts, with Mrs. A. L. Davis of Good Creek second and Mrs. S. E. Tate of West Side third. Mrs. W. M. Cox of Good Creek won honorable mention in this division.

In the division for slim ladies Miss Lela Patton of West Side won first place. Mrs. F. W. Butler of West Rayland second and Mrs. Earl Davis of Community Club, third. Mrs. Lee Ribble of West Side was given honorable mention.

Judges for the contest were Miss Mildred Horton of College Station, State Home Demonstration agent and Miss Margie Lyon, Home Demonstration agent of Childress County. In commenting upon the dresses, Miss Lyon stated that she considered them unusually good from the standpoints of material, style, workmanship and suitability.

The following entered dresses in the last session, giving special mention to the old age pension bill which is to be voted upon Aug. 24. This will require $15,000,000 per year in extra revenue, but is worthwhile and should be adopted, according to Mr. Moffett.

A few questions from those present were answered by the legislator at the conclusion of his address. Information coming from an answer to one of these questions revealed the fact that only one-fifth of the revenue coming to the state government was derived from taxes on property, while in some states as high as ninety per cent of the state expenditures come from property taxes.

In answering a question regarding a sales tax, Mr. Moffett stated that with the people requiring more from the government than ever before, new sources of revenue must be found, but he had little sympathy for a sales tax that was put upon the necessities of life. "It is too often the case with a sales tax," said Mr. Moffett, "that honest business men are penalized and dishonest business men actually profit from it."

At the conclusion of the address, J. E. Harwell, vice president of the association, named the following committees for the next three months: banquet programs—Fred Rennels, Virgil Smith and W. H. Moyer; trades day—C. V. Allen, John Rasor and H. K. Edwards.

No opposition was expressed to the proposal to continue the regular Saturday "Thrift Day" programs in Crowell.

Those living outside of Crowell present for the banquet were: J. M. Marr, C. E. Gafford, E. V. Halbert, C. C. Joy, W. A. Dunn, R. L. Taylor, A. W. Barker, Frank Weatherall, Boyd Gillespie, Garnet Jones, Grady Halbert, Jack Welch, J. A. Stovall, T. F. Welch, Jim Gates, J. R. Ford, J. Y. Welch, Dave Sollis and Julian Wright.
