WHEAT CROP IN FOARD TO PASS 300,000 BU. MARK

Present indications are that Foard County's wheat production in 1935 will pass the 300,000 bushel mark. Up to last night approximately 220,000 bushels had been received at the county's six elevators in Crowell, Foard County.

It is estimated that about 60,000 bushels have been stored by farmers in their own granaries. Harvesting of the crop is well advanced and it is likely that there is enough wheat left in the shock to bring the 1935 total past 300,000 bushels when threshed.

Trench Silo Value Stressed at Spur Exp. Station Meet

The State Experiment Station at Spur was visited last Saturday by J. M. Marr, H. E. Davis, W. S. Carter, Charles Stewart Clark, Clark Kennels and County Agent Fred Rennels of Crowell and Foard County. Bill Haggard and Charlie Ragland of Truscott, who operate Dr. Hines Clark's farms in Knox County, also made the trip with the Foard County group.

The purpose of the trip was to gain information regarding the practicability of trench silos and also study terracing and water conservation work that has been conducted at the station during the past few years.

"It is just as practical to 'can' feeds for livestock by the silo method as it is to can food for the family," said R. E. Dixon, superintendent of the station, in speaking of trench silos.

The directors will meet with the officers and field representatives of the Production Credit Corporation of Houston, the parent organization, which provides the capital and supervises the operations of Production Credit Associations in Texas.

According to Mr. Haney, it is believed desirable to bring boards of directors and secretary-treasurers together in groups during the summer in order to make them more familiar with the Farm Credit Administration, the operation and capital structure of the Production Credit Corporation and to review the operation of the associations during the first part of 1935.

General discussion of production credit problems, comparison of operating methods and exchange of mutually helpful ideas will be the order of business at the meeting, and plans will be made to take care of the production credit needs from farmers and ranchers during the next producing season.

Associations to be represented at the Amarillo meeting will include the following: Lubbock, Memphis, Plainview, Canadian Valley and Amarillo. Similar meetings of other groups will be held at San Angelo, San Antonio and Corpus Christi during the month of July for the directors in the territory surrounding these key cities, Mr. Haney said.

WHEAT PRICE RAISED FOUR CENTS BY AAA

The minimum 1935 wheat adjustment payment was established at least 33 cents a bushel, compared to the 1934 minimum of 29 cents, in a proclamation Monday by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Payments for both years are subject to slight deduction for county administration costs. Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, said the increase of four cents a bushel for the 1935 allotments represents additional income to co-operating wheat producers of approximately $14,000,000.

No change was made in the processing tax rate of 30 cents a bushel. The AAA said the additional adjustment payments were made possible by reserves accumulated from the tax on wheat producers by farmers not under allotment contracts. The increased payment, it was said, will not result in any deficit in the wheat budget since available funds are sufficient to cover the increase.

The 1935 payments are to be

Margaret School to Retain High School Grades Next Year

Citizens of the Margaret community voted 125 to 5 to retain high school grades in their school at a mass meeting Monday night to determine sentiment on this matter.

A few weeks ago the county board classified Margaret as a school of nine grades for the 1935-36 term, a reduction of one grade from past years.

Since then the Margaret trustees had considered the matter of bringing their eighth and ninth grade pupils to Crowell High School.

In order to definitely settle the community's sentiment on the matter, the trustees called a mass meeting with the result mentioned above.

GATHER LARGE ONION CROP IN FOARD COUNTY

Two carloads of onions have been shipped out of Margaret during the past week and another car is nearly completed. The first car was moved last Saturday and marked the first time that a freight car of onions had ever originated on this division of the Panhandle & Santa Fe Railway. The second car was completed Tuesday.

All were destined for Kansas City and were loaded by McLarty Farm Products Co. of the Rayland community.

Onions have been raised on a major scale this year on the McLarty farm and farms belonging to R. A. Rutledge and H. T. Faguhn, all in the Rayland section. Total acreage in onions this year was: McLarty 35, Faguhn 5, and Rutledge 15, making a total of about 55 acres.

The average production was around 10 bushels per acre, since over five thousand bushels have been gathered. The farmers built grading racks to handle the crop.

Although the 1935 onion crop has been a real success from the standpoint of production, present market prices are not satisfactory.

A portion of the onion acreage was irrigated. Rutledge's onions were grown on sub-irrigated land. The varieties grown on the three farms were white and yellow Bermudas.

PROPOSED DAM SITE VISITED BY ENGINEERS

Two U. S. Army engineers, accompanied by Dr. Hines Clark of Crowell and L. A. Wilson of Vernon, visited the site for the proposed dam across Pease River, about ten miles northwest of Crowell, yesterday afternoon following a meeting on this project in Vernon.

Dr. Clark is one of the two Foard County directors in the Pease River Valley Development Association. County Judge Vance Swaim is the other. Mr. Wilson, who accompanied the engineers here, is secretary of the association and also secretary of the Vernon Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting at Vernon was attended by representatives from that city, Electra, Quanah, Chillicothe and Crowell. The local representatives were Mayor C. T. Schlagel, J. C. Self and Dr. Clark.

The principal part of the meeting at Vernon was taken up with talks by the engineers. They told of the government requirements in connection with the project, stating that local participation would be necessary in securing the right-of-way, titles and providing maintenance, should the dam be built.

Work would have to be done mostly by hand and the dam would have to be completed in eighteen months, should the project receive final approval from the Emergency Relief Administration, the engineers stated.

Favorably Impressed

Recommendation of the project by Army engineers is necessary before the building of the dam would be considered by the ERA. While it is not known what recommendation will be made, the engineers spoke favorably regarding the project and stated that the dam site was the best looking one that they had seen since they started investigating similar projects at other points in the nation.

FOARD CATTLE T. B. FREE SAYS L.S. COMMISSION

Foard County has been declared free of tuberculosis among cattle, according to information coming to the county agent's office from the Livestock Sanitary Commission.

Stocker cattle being shipped to other counties in Texas and into most other states will not have to be retested for tuberculosis.

Blanks are available at the county agent's office and also at the Santa Fe Railway office in Crowell which may be filled out showing the cattle originated in territory free from tuberculosis, and attached to the bill of lading.

These forms attached to the bill of lading will relieve the shipper of the necessity of retesting anywhere in Texas and also in crossing many state lines.

Prior to the completion of the tests, many times it was necessary for an owner to hold his cattle for seventy-two hours on stock yards until the tuberculin test could be made, which was expensive from the standpoint of time, shrinkage and feed bills.

INTRODUCING the Smallest Member OF THE BUDGET FAMILY

I'M ELECTRICITY UTILITY

THE BUDGET FAMILY

My big brothers, TAXES, Food, Clothing and Rent, Grow great on the money they've caused to be spent. The biggest of all, brother TAXES, looks down --- "Electricity, it gets smaller," says he with a frown "It is always so handy: it works day and night, Politicians attack it with main and with might, But they don't notice ME-- the biggest of all. Electricity is tiny and willing, and yet I'm jealous of all the attention it gets. But, perhaps that is better for ME after all. For if I get attention, 'twill end in a squall Which will stop ME from growing, and THAT isn't all-- The voters will clamor to cut down MY size. So let Utility 'take it'--till people get wise."

Knee Action Popular With Auto Buyers

Conclusive proof of the motorist's demand for knee-action, demonstrating that buyers not only want it but are willing to pay the small extra charge for it, is presented in the Chevrolet Motor Company's announcement that only three per cent of the purchasers of its Master de Luxe models, which may be had either with knees or with a conventional front axle, order the conventional type suspension.

William E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager, who announced the comparative figures, declares that the proof of the knee action acceptance is all the more positive because knee action requires an outlay of $20 additional.

"When we announced, last January," said Mr. Holler, "that knee-action would be optional equipment at a small extra charge, I underestimated the hold that the improved suspension had already taken on the motoring public. I gave out a statement estimating that 90 per cent of the purchasers of the Master de Luxe models would order knee action. Instead, it is 97 per cent.

"This percentage is based on figures for sales beginning with March. Before that, we were not in heavy production on conventional axle Master models. In March, 97.2 per cent of our orders were for knee action cars; in April, 96.3 per cent; in May, 98.7 per cent; and in June, 97.5 per cent.

"Knee action got off to a great start in 1934, its first year. More than half of all the cars registered in the United States last year had some form of knee action. Until this year, however, we could not tell whether people were buying cars with knee action because they preferred them to conventional axles, since no make of car gave buyers their choice of either form of suspension. This year, Chevrolet, by making knee action optional, has given the public its chance to register its preference, and knee action has won overwhelmingly."

ATTENTION

All Former Members of Womack Brothers Burial Association:

July FIRST a letter containing a letter from us and a rate slip addressed to each member of your family, with a "RIDER SLIP" to be attached to the BLUE Certificates we gave you when you joined and which you should attach to these blue sheets, was mailed to the head of the family of all those who were in good standing June first, 1935.

In this LETTER we informed you that the legislature passed a law forcing all burial associations in Texas to operate under the regular life insurance law or disband. We told you everything, but we find that a great many did not even read this letter, some read it but did not read it carefully enough to understand it. We will try to help you now to understand what you are to do to keep your protection.

June 26th we transferred all members in good standing into the VERNON MUTUAL LIFE & ACCIDENT ASSOCIATION into the BURIAL GROUP. We were able to get each member into this Association just as they were without having to answer troublesome health questions. The rates were fixed by LAW and we had to submit to those rates. They are the very lowest that will be offered. You are now a MEMBER in GOOD STANDING and will be up to midnight, July 15th. BUT, unless you pay this assessment which was included in the letter mentioned above, by July 15th you will lose this valuable protection, and may not be able to get your entire family back in at all. However, we have secured another 15 days FREE TIME, July 16th to July 31st, in which you can pay without having to answer these questions—but after that time anyone, whether a former member or a new member, will have to answer a long list of health questions, you may not be able to get your entire family in. BETTER pay this assessment on time and keep them all protected.

TO ALL DOUBTING THOMASES: Mr. C. C. Lawhorn of Thalia, Texas, had a little baby 5 months old insured for $40.00 with us. The Vernon Association raised the benefit to $100.00. This baby died Tuesday at 11:30 A. M. By three o'clock Mr. Lawhorn was paid off by check $100.00. This paid all funeral expenses and he was paid in CASH $43.67.

Genevieve Pepera, Manistee blond, was chosen from western Michigan's fairest to reign as queen over the national cherry festival at Traverse City, July 17, 18 and 19.

IMPEACHMENT

Impeachment has been as sparingly used in England as in this country. The last great impeachment trial in England was that of Warren Hastings in 1787. It is still theoretically possible for the house of lords to impose any penalty on a convicted person, official or otherwise. But under the American Constitution impeachment is reserved for civil officers of the government and the punishment is confined to removal and permanent disqualification.

"SQUARING THE CIRCLE"

Squaring the circle is a famous mathematical problem which scientists of today believe to be impossible. The problem is to find a square equal in area to a given circle; the area of the circle equal to that of the rectilinear triangle whose base has the same length and whose altitude equals the radius. The squaring of the circle thus becomes the problem of finding the ratio of the circumference to the diameter. In 1882 Lindemann proved that this ratio, known as pi, is a transcendental number and hence, since it is not the root of any algebraic equation, cannot be constructed to an assumed unit by the extraction of the square root, that is by using straight edge and compasses.—Washington Star.

AN ODD SIGHT IN INDIA

One of the world's oddest sights is at the annual festival in Puri, India, when the god Vishnu takes his annual one-mile ride along Paradise road. In order to solicit pity and alms, hundreds of holy men—each equipped with a secret breathing tube—bury themselves along both sides of this highway, not in part showing above the ground except their upraised arms.—Collier's Weekly.

THALIA MAN'S PROSPECTS FOR COTTON CROP GOOD

E. A. Howard, who lives five miles south of Thalia on tight land, was in town Saturday and brought two stalks of fine cotton that is now growing on his farm. The stalks were over knee high and were well filled with blooms, squares and a few small bolls. This cotton was planted some time in April.

Mr. Howard has 80 acres in cotton of different ages, however, all of it is in bloom. All of his land has been terraced. He made 40 bushels of oats to the acre on a 10-acre tract and has twelve acres of maize and five acres of cane already in the head.

BEE SWAX

It is a common mistake to suppose that honeybees collect wax. Beeswax, says a writer in the Indianapolis News, is a product of digestion and is secreted by the worker bees in the form of tiny scales which appear between the segments on the under side of the abdomen. The notion that bees collect wax no doubt arose from the fact that many people confuse wax with the pollen that bees collect and carry to the hive in small masses attached to the hairs of the hind legs. This pollen is mixed with honey and converted into bread for the young bees.

LUFFA IS A GOURD

A luffa is a gourd commonly called rag-gourd, dishrag gourd, and vegetable sponge. The young fruit is cooked like squash and eaten in soups or stews. Sometimes it is sliced and dried. In this country, luffas are grown mostly for curios and ornaments. The fibrous interior of the dried fruit, when bleached and prepared, is used as a sponge for the bath and for scrubbing.

JOYFUL STREET NAMES

Three streets in New Orleans are named Polymnia, Euterpe and Terpsichore. They are names of mythical Greek gods or muses. The first, according to Greek antiquity, was the muse of the sublime hymn, and of the faculty of hearing and remembering. According to some authorities she was the inventor of the lyre. Euterpe was the muse of joy and pleasure, patroness of flute players, associated often with Bacchus, the god of conviviality. Terpsichore was the muse of the choral and interpretative dance.

FURRY-DAY, ANNUAL FETE: ITS ORIGIN IS UNKNOWN
Furry-day is a fete-day observed annually, and only in the town of Helstone near the extreme tip of Cornwall, England. The origin of the festival and the origin of the name are both lost in antiquity, says Literary Digest. Local legend connects the festival with the name of the town. It is said that a huge granite block, lying within the town up to 150 years ago, formerly lay at the door of hell; that Satan carrying it away for some diabolical purpose encountered St. Michael and, that fleeing from the victorious saint, he dropped the stone in his haste. Thereafter the day of the struggle has been commemorated annually, with Michael as the patron saint of the town.

The celebration is observed by a morris-dance called variously the faddy-dance, fade-dance, or furry-dance.
Formerly, the entire village took part in the dance, and anyone failing to observe the fete, if detected, was ridden on a rail and dumped into the river. The dancers walked two and two during the first part of each verse of the tune; at the second half the first man turned the second lady and the second man turned the first lady. All doors in the village were left open and at their will, the dancers might traverse any house and garden. The day was always closed by a ball.

Preliminary Work On Tex. Industrial Survey Is Started

Austin, Texas, July 6.—Preliminary work of the Texas Industrial Survey got underway this week after conferences between Governor James V. Allred, Dudley P. South, Director of the Survey, and members of the executive committee. Endorsement of the survey by the Texas State Planning Board, by unanimous vote, was given Monday after Hulf Youngblood, Vice-Chairman of the Planning Board and member of the executive committee of the survey, gave an analysis of the purposes and methods to be employed.

W. M. Massie, President of the Fort Worth National Bank and Chairman of the State Planning Board, concurred with Mr. Youngblood in recommending the endorsement which was given unanimous approval on motion by William C. Hawk, publisher of the Amarillo Globe-News. Mr. South explained to the Planning Board that the purpose of the survey is to promote permanent re-employment of idle Texans.

With the endorsement of the Planning Board and Governor Allred, request is being made for the use of about one thousand Texans who are now on relief rolls in gathering data for the survey. In the event Federal funds are obtained, it is planning to use the services of these persons and at the same time to provide training for them in clerical and statistical work. In discussing the survey before the Planning Board, Governor Allred stressed that the survey will devote its first efforts toward expanding private employment.

"This will be a forward step in keeping with the Democratic state platform," the Governor said, which advocated an accurate survey of the state's industrial possibilities and markets for industrial products. It follows, of course, that should industrial development result from the information to be gathered and disseminated by the survey that more employment would be provided.

"The survey is not to be considered as a cure-all for the ills of Texas industry. Rather it is to be an efficient means by which we may brush aside the cobwebs hiding the idle machinery, uncover markets and the tremendous possibilities latent in our natural resources, and thus focus the attention of ourselves and the nation upon the industrial opportunities of Texas.

"Let us become industrially-minded and if, through this survey, we may make the country industrially conscious of Texas while gainfully employing many Texans now on direct relief, then the survey will have achieved its purpose."
Dudley P. South of Houston, who is in charge of the survey, comes from a distinguished line of engineers and has crowded into his 37 years an amazing amount of practical experience in operating large and varied enterprises. He holds a number of important positions—such as managing the Gulf Gypsum Company, Trans-Gulf Lines, Inc., and many others. The precept, "if you've got a job to do, give it to a busy man," finds him a living example.

He thinks and talks rapidly, advancing enough facts within an hour's interview to set the int-

Rehabilitation Is Now Function of Federal Department

Austin, July 9.—Complete severance of rural rehabilitation work as a function of the Texas Relief Commission was effective as of June 30, it has been announced by Adam R. Johnson, state relief director.
On July 1, work of the rural rehabilitation department was taken over by the Resettlement Administration, and all employees from the rural department of the Texas Relief Commission became federal employees, Johnson said.

Instructions from Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, directed Johnson to transfer all funds and inventories of goods and chattels to Texas Rural Communities, holding corporation for the rural department, together with all books of account, files and records pertaining to the rural program.

Responsibility for all rural relief cases not accepted for rural rehabilitation prior to May 31, however, will remain with the Texas Relief Commission until they are dropped from the rolls or accepted on new works projects.

viewer's head spinning. He radiates activity and energy; yet his feet are on the ground and he has developed his own enterprises so successfully as to warrant a practical approach to business problems.

Mr. South told the Planning Board that the survey would seek to aid enterprises which are dormant because of limited contracts or lack of industrial research.
He was born in Austin, His grandfather, W. S. South, came to Texas from Kentucky in 1840 and taught school for several years in Bandera County. His father, H. W. South, was a member of the Texas A. & M. College faculty and organized and coached the first A. & M. football team in 1896. H. W. South now is head of the Spanish department at Sam Houston High School and bursar of the University of Houston.

Dudley South left Rice Institute during the war and enlisted voluntarily in the Signal Corps. He went overseas as a private and came back with the rank of first lieutenant, Signal Corps. Returning to Rice, he obtained his B. A. degree, then joined the Texas Company doing work in geophysics research. A year later, he was employed by important financial interests in New York to make industrial surveys and thus began a successful career as an industrial engineer.

He is a member of the Houston Engineers Club, the Houston Club, St. Paul's Methodist Church, and Theta Tau engineering fraternity. He is married and has two children.

Fly Danger Stressed by Dept. of Health

Austin, Texas, July 10.—Fly spread disease. They are in filth and through life making frequent trips from filth to man. Germs causing dysentery and other intestinal disorders are transported on the hairy feet of flies. These insect pests are regarded as having played a leading part in causing food-borne epidemics of typhoid fever, stated Dr. John Brown, State Health officer.

Flies multiply rapidly as warm weather comes to a stage where they deposit more than a dred egg at a time in organic material such as manure or in sanitary outdoor toilet. The cycle from egg to larva (maggot) to pupa, to adult male or female requires but ten days. At later, fifty females, under favorable conditions, are ready to deposit a total of 50,000 eggs during the summer season. The incubation of a single egg requires one female that laid the first egg in the spring. It is estimated that if the offspring survive through nine generations, descendants in the fall number over five and a half million.

Fortunately, modern sanitation and knowledge regarding the history and habits of the fly render possible complete control over the fly nuisance. Disposal of human and animal wastes in urban areas and other measures will prevent the breeding and multiplication of flies. Practical suggestions relative to mosquito fly control may be obtained from the State Department of Health and U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The Family DOCTOR by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"CANKER SORES"

Seldom a week goes by that I am not appealed to by people with the well-known "Canker-sores"—small ulcers of stomatitis. They cur anywhere within the buccal cavity—usually may be seen in the mouth, on the walls that touch the outer surfaces of the teeth. A description necessary—but they occur from size of a pin-head up to large as a penny; never exactly circular, unless when very small. They are whitish, covered with mucous—nature doing all she can to keep them from spreading. We are asked to "touch 'em with caustic," which is the usual procedure. This doesn't cure the condition causing them—it just gives us relief for time, until the digestive tract rights itself, I think.

The other day a young druggist came into my office; he had a very hot case; couldn't eat anything very salty, very tart, very spicy.

I "touched 'em up" with 20 per cent nitrate of silver solution. I told him as I have just told you—it was treating the symptoms of the simple ailment. "You've got plenty of 'nitro-carbonate' in your store, haven't you?" I asked. "Sure," he answered. "Then take four doses a day, between meals and at bedtime," was my prescription. The patches disappeared within three days. The effervescent mixture was easy to take, and, with brief directions as to the proper food; the cure was neither difficult nor unpleasant.

Now had my patient been a farm boy—several miles away from the drug store—it would have been different. I might have filled a glass of water, two or three times a day.

HOSTILE VALLEY

By Ben Ames Williams

ROLOGUE.—At a gathering in the village of Libermaine, Jim Saladine listens to history of the neighboring valley—its past tragedies, superb fishing streams, and all the mysterious, enticing life of the valley.

CHAPTER I—"Old Marm" Jenny and her nineteen-year-old daughter, Jenny, live in the valley. Since little more than a year ago, Jenny has at first admired her father's loved young Will, and who regards her as merely a child.

CHAPTER II Jenny came back to Hostile before May; but not to that winter after his departure, a hard and rugged season, winds howled and the deep snow drifted and even in the spring gorge Carey's brook heeded under a rubby armor.

Jenny smiled wistfully. "Bart's all right, the most of the time," she said. "Only thing is, I keep out of his way when he's drunk a lot of cider. He gets to be noisy."

Why shouldn't she? Marm Pierce demanded. "She's right on to twenty. Time she was growing up, if she's ever going to."

But the change in Jenny was, in fact, much more than a matter of years; for this is a part of the alchemy which first love may work in a woman child. She had come to wear a rich bloom apparent to the dull eye. Marm Pierce, watching the girl sometimes when Jenny did not know, thought that if Will were here, even he must see the beauty in her now.

He did not, without his father's strength behind him. "Might be it had happened, with me, if I don't you, Will," she said, comfortably. "Granny told folks are like as not to the spring; and he was old, red."

He looked at her in faint surprise. "Why, I'm going back," he said. "I've got a good job, a blast; and good pay. I low the farm lay idle this summer back next year when I'm done, with the money I have."

in her wanderings a-field alone, more than once encountered Bart. These encounters seemed to her accident; but Marm Pierce thought otherwise. Bart, the old woman guessed, preferred to see Jenny without subjecting himself to her grandmother's watchful vigilance.

There was in the lower reaches of the brook just above the bog a long pool with a sandy bottom and deep water at the head; and Jenny, on a hot summer day, used sometimes to go there to bathe. She could not swim; but she liked to gather her skirts about her things and wade in the cool, clear water, or even sometimes remove all her clothes except a white shift and immerse herself completely in the refreshing flood.

But one day when she was wading into the foot of the pool, the sand soft between her toes, her skirts high, she saw or felt a movement on the bank above her and looked up and discovered Bart standing smiling there.

She dropped her skirts into the water, heedless of the fact that thus they were wetted along the hem, and faced him steadily; and he called, raising his voice to be heard above the song of the small ripple at the head of the pool: "Water's cold, ain't it?"

She shook her head. "Feels good, a hot day," she said. She was not confused or embarrassed, not even resentful. He had a right to be there if he chose.

He slapped a mosquito on his cheek. "Give you the rheumatism," he predicted. "Me, I wear rubber boots when I go to wade. You better come out of there."

Jenny asked: "Fishing?" Then realized that he had no rod. "Just looking over the brook," he explained. "Couple of men coming to fish tomorrow, and I wanted to see where the trout was lying. Water's kind of low."

"Guess I've scared them if there was any in here," she said. He grinned. "No trout wouldn't ever be afraid of you. Wonder to me they ain't nibbling at yore toes."

She looked down at her bare feet, and realized that she was standing here with her wet skirt drabbled about her knees. So she came ashore, and wrung out the hem of her skirt, and sat down with her back to him to pull on her stockings and shoes.

He asked then: "In a hurry, are you?" "Granny'll be wondering where I've went to."

"Sit and talk," he urged. She smiled faintly. "Mosquitoes would eat us up," she said. "I'll go along."

"I want to talk to you, Jenny," he insisted. "Walk along with me, then," she proposed, and moved resolutely on her way.

But as she passed him, he caught her arm. Deep silent wood lay all about them, and the shadows were cool. "You don't ever give me a chance to talk to you, Jenny," he protested.

"What about, Bart?" she asked gravely. He laughed. "She, there's a plenty of things for a fellow and a girl to talk about, Jenny. High time you got on to that."

She stood, her head a little bowed, thinking of Will. "I do know that, Bart," she said. "But not you and me."

"What's the matter with me?" he asked half angrily. "Why, you're all right," she said honestly. "You've been mighty good to Granny and me, fetching things from the village, and helping with the hay, and the farming, and all. But—not the sort of thing you mean, Bart."

"How do you know?" he challenged, curiously abashed by her calm serenity. "You can't tell. You might get to . . ."

She shook her head. "Not you, Bart," she said simply. His clasp on her arm relaxed, and she moved quietly away from him. There was in the moment nothing in the least dramatic; and yet Bart perceived that there was in it nevertheless finality. He stared after her, baffled, rebuffed; he did not follow, stood where she had left him. And when she was gone he said only: "Well, I'll be . . ."

He did not say what he would be; but later, on his way up the brook to his home, he grinned at his own discomfiture. Win Haven was at the farm when he got there; and Bart confessed the incident. The older man demanded impatiently: "Shucks, why'n't you just grab on to her?"

Bart chuckled. "How you going to get anywhere with a gal that don't act scared, or surprised, or anything?" he demanded.

The other said wisely: "If that's all you want, I sh'd think you'd figure out a way to scare her plenty. Any woman, she has to be roused. Bart. Took off her feet before she knows what's going on."

Bart shook his head. "Jenny knowed well enough what I wanted," he said in amused discomfiture. "Known before I did. Yes, sir, she was way out in front of me. I couldn't see nothing but her heels." And he urged: "You step in and have a glass of cider. How come you're around here again, anyway? I thought you'd gone."

"Got me a job in Liberty," Win explained. "But I can handle a glass of cider. Sure." He added boastfully: "Just the same, if I was a young one, and a ripe gal like that running wild in the woods around, I'd . . ." And he told, with a senile and fatuous unction, what he would do.

Jenny went home, but she said nothing about Bart. It was weeks later before Marm Pierce remarked one evening: "Wonder why Bart don't ever stop in, the way he used to? What's got into him, Jenny?"

Jenny told her, then, about that encounter by the brook; and the old woman chuckled with appreciation and contentment, sure that Bart need worry her no more.

That was an open winter in the valley, with little snow, and deep frost; and the mud in the spring was worse than usual. It was mid-May before a plow could be put in the ground. June before the clouds could be broken. But in the last week of May, Jenny heard that Will Ferrin was coming home.

Jenny, though she had said nothing to the older woman, had been expecting word of him; he had told her, on that day of his father's funeral, that he would return this year. It did not occur to her that Will might change his mind, that he might do less than he had planned. Through the long month of May she slipped away at brief intervals, and threaded the wood toward the brook—her feet had begun to mark there a permanent trail—and climbed to the Ferrin farm to see whether he had come. Day by day the house stood shuttered and empty, and she returned to the long weariness of waiting. Yet the ripeness of spring made longing fill her heart, and one day she came home to Marm Pierce with shining eyes.

The old woman had long since guessed where Jenny went on these excursions; she saw the girl's face now, and chuckled, and asked snidely: "Will home, is he?" Jenny looked startled; then the deep color flooded her cheeks. "No, Granny," she said. "But Nat Prentice was plowing the lower field, and he told me to do it. Said Will would get here Monday."

Marm Pierce sniffed scornfully. "Fine farmer he'll make hiring another man to break up his ground." "It had to be done," Jenny said loyally. "The plowing, and Will couldn't get here in time, so he had to have it done."

Jenny looked startled; then the deep color flooded her cheeks. "No, Granny," she said. "But Nat Prentice was plowing the lower field, and he told me to do it. Said Will would get here Monday."

"Guess Will's work for day wages so long he thinks money's easy come by," the old woman insisted. "Hiring work done that he might as well do his own self. Guess he could've come this week if he had a mind."

Jenny laughed at her. There was a bubbling happiness in the girl that would not be dowered. "You're just talking to make me argue about it, but I won't," she said; and she cried: "I don't care if he never does a lick of work, long as he does come home, Granny." And suddenly there were deep tears in her eyes and her voice was husky.

She clung to the old woman. "I want to see him," she whispered. "I want to awful," she cried. "Seems like he's been gone so long."

Marm Pierce felt quick misgiving in her. "Dunno why you should be so worked up about it," she protested. "Like as not he won't only stay long enough to do his farming and get out again."

"He will. He will stay," Jenny insisted happily. "You wait and see."

And during the intervening days, Jenny rode on a flood of anticipation. Will was to arrive on Monday. Saturday it rained, but Sunday was clear, and Jenny took broom and mop and dust cloth and departed to make Will's house ready for him. Marm Pierce made some mild remonstrance.

"No need of that," she protested. "Like as not he's already hired it done." Her tone was mild with scorn.

"A man wouldn't think of that," Jenny urged. "He'll come home expecting to roll up in blankets the first night; and the blankets, they'll be damp, give him a cold. I'm going over and clean up, and air everything, and get fires going in the stoves and have everything ready for him . . ."

"House is locked up," Marm Pierce insisted. "You can't get in."

Jenny cried joyously: "Yes I can! The lock's broken on the window in the side room. I've climbed in through that before now."

"Like as not he'll put you in jail for housebreaking," the old woman predicted, yet she let Jenny go.

It was dusk before the girl came home, tired and happy. "It's done, Granny," she said. "Every room swept, and everything dusted, and the kitchen floor scrubbed, and the bed made. I found the window curtains put away in the bureau. They're kind of creased, but I'm going to press them out tomorrow."

"You've got smut on your face," Marm Pierce resorted.

Jenny laughed softly. "I cleaned out the stove," she said. "It was terrible full of soot, so's you couldn't make it draw. And I aired the sheets and blankets in the sun, and had fires going all day—and tomorrow I'm going to take over some milk and eggs—and biscuits and doughnuts and butter and everything, and have supper ready for him."

The older woman was tenderly amused. "How do you know he won't get here for noonday dinner?"

"I'll have dinner ready too, in case," Jenny decided. "I'll take fowl, and make a stew and some dumplings. He'll like coming home to a house that's all ready for him, Granny . . ."

"You can't ever tell about a man," Marm Pierce warned her. "He's like as not to think you're meddling."

"Not Will!" Jenny insisted. "He will like it. You wait and see."

"Want I should come over and help you?" the old woman offered; and Jenny hesitated, uncomfortable, ill at ease.

"It's a long walk for you, Granny," Marm Pierce chuckled. "Go along with you, then. Like as not you'll stay and clean up after supper, too!"

And Jenny nodded wisely, happily; there was an audacious triumph in her. Suddenly she hugged the old woman close.

"I might not ever come home at all. You wait and see . . ."

She was, all next day, very busy and completely happy in the home of this man whom she loved. The question whether Will would arrive in the morning or afternoon perplexed her; but she prepared for either contingency, by putting on the fowl and boil till it was done, leaving it then in the rich stew of its own fat so that it might be warmed readily and served quickly. Carrots, onions, potatoes, dumplings fleecy as bright clouds. She had brought a pie made of blueberries which she herself had preserved the year before, and she cooked doughnuts all morning, and had biscuits ready to pop in the oven; and she kept the stove hot all day so that the oven should be ready to receive them, the minute Will appeared.

She ironed the lace curtains and hung them again at the windows. They needed washing, she decided; but that must wait another day. And in the afternoon, when everything was ready and still Will had not appeared, she wandered happily through the empty rooms. He saw her, and she stared; and the woman smiled. Then Will, perceiving by Jenny's countenance what had happened, turned, and took this woman gently by the arm and drew her into the kitchen to stand there beside him.

"Jenny," he said proudly, "this here's my wife. This is Huldy."

Dreadful aching agony of emptiness; strength draining sickeningly away.

"Huldy," said Will, "Jennie's come and made allready for us. I told you that folks was friendly here."

Huldy smiled; something in her faint mirth at once insolent and provocative, at once arrogant and acquiescent.

"She looks mighty friendly to you, Will," she said, a barb in the words.

"Why, she is," Will declared, blindly content. "Always was. She wa'n't but a young one when I see her the last time, the time Pa died." He turned to Jenny. "You're real grown up now, Jenny," he said.

The word somehow lent Jenny strength. Her spine stiffened and her pulse slowed and her tone was calm. "You come in and set, Mis' Ferrin," she said equably. "I guess you're tired. You make yourself to home, and I'll get supper on."

But when this task was done, she would not stay to eat with them. Valor would not sustain her so far. "It's late, Will," she explained. "If you'd come earlier, I might stay and wash dishes; but Granny will be wondering about me now."

And when supper was on the table, Jenny bade them both good night, in strong steady tones, and took herself away. Out through the barn, down the orchard slope, down the steep trail to the stream.

She went blundering through the dark woods, her eyes hot and dry with tears that would not flow.

"Jenny?" he cried. "Why, Jen. I take this neighborly of you folks. Where's Granny?"

"Home," she told him. "You do all this?" he asked, delightedly.

"I didn't want you coming to a cold empty house," she said. "Supper's all ready; or it can be in ten minutes. Chicken stew, and doughnuts, and blueberry pie; and there are biscuits ready to bake, and the oven's hot." She moved toward him, finding her limbs at last answering her will. "Come in, Will. Take off your hat," she bade him. "Sit down and I'll . . ."

The word died in her throat. For behind Will, in the open door, a woman had appeared. Jenny

This-That, Etc.

By Typo Wrighter

During the past two weeks The News office has served as a depository for numerous widow spiders. Most of them have displayed little interest in life and have soon died in their glass cages. However, the best specimen brought in so far was left by Travis Davis Tuesday and is still very much alive.

When put in a jar with another "hour-glass" insect, Bonnie, as we have chosen to name the Davis contribution, promptly proceeded to end the life of the one that we expected to serve as its playmate and has since partially devoured it. Maybe that's the way widow spiders play.

Anyway, Bonnie is still going strong and seems to be anxious for action. Since reading of the numerous public battles among centipedes, tarantulas and spiders, we hereby challenge anyone to produce a centipede, wasp or tarantula capable of conquering our spider.

Maybe we could have a free-for-all battle-royal. Various cities are having beauty contests with business firms sponsoring entries. Crowell could be different. For instance Lilly Motor Co. could have a centipede as its entry, since there is plenty of "knee-action" in that case. Dee Roberts could sponsor a horse-fly; the West Texas Utilities, lightning bug, and some other firms could enter different species of spiders and tarantulas. Of course The News would be represented by our Bonnie. We have also heard of people being conquered by the golf bug and maybe we could locate one of those somewhere for the "battle of the century."

Just this morning Travis Davis made another contribution to The News menagerie, this time in the form of a giant black tarantula. We are now ready to receive applications from those wishing to sponsor its entry in the "battle-royal."

Chillicothe Comment

The "News Hound" of the Chillicothe Valley News congratulated The Foard County News last week in connection with its recent honor and then added a P. S. to his column addressed to the local staff in which he asked: "Say, I wonder if Dick Todd didn't help you fellows win that cup with another one of those Todd touchdowns?"

All we can say with reference to the above is that since Todd had been acclaimed the best high school football player of the year in Texas, it was necessary for The News to gain the same honor in its field to keep step with the local gridster and others from Crowell who have reached the "top" in various forms of competition. And it might have been that the judges were of the opinion that Dick was the local editor, and therefore were unduly influenced by what the Chillicothe writer refers to as one of those "Todd touchdowns." And speaking of Todd touchdowns, Chillicothe should really be an authority on that subject for they have seen a wide assortment of them.

The News Hound further stated that Chillicothe can boast six A-1 football players for the coming season, but is worried as to where the other five are coming from.

The Olney Cubs

It wasn't our intention to mention football during this hot weather, but it's being done elsewhere, so we'll join the chorus this week. Al Parker, Wichita Times sports editor, recently had the following comment in his column: "The Class B football district really needs a stimulant in the form of new leaders, whether it is Seymour or some of the others who have been taking the dust kicked up by high-powered Crowell and Olney teams for all these years. Olney, incidentally, looms as the summer-time favorite in the B race."

It's o. k. for Olney to win the championship this summer. In fact, they were "summer" football champions for about the last two seasons, but that didn't keep Crowell's Wildcats from capturing the championship after the dust had settled on the district battlefields in the fall. What a battle that will be on Nov. 22 when the Cubs invade Wildcat stadium. Incidentally, we predict another Crowell victory.

Another Egg

Besides about 500 widow spiders, it seems that The News has received about 1,000 unusual eggs in recent months. One had the letters "NRA" and a few weeks later that organization collapsed. In the midst of the drought, floods were predicted by two eggs from different parts of the county, and the floods really came. War was predicted by another, and it now appears that hostilities will break loose any day in Africa.

The latest unusual egg was brought in by A. J. Power from the farm of Mrs. Cora Priest near Margaret. At one end, raised surfaces formed a perfect strong arm, just like those you see on soda boxes. A strong arm can be extremely helpful or extremely harmful. We are unable to determine whether this particular arm is associated with the "strong arm of the law" or "strong arm methods" used by forces detrimental to mankind.

Thanks for the Peaches

Typo deeply appreciates the sack of peaches brought to him this week by Rouse "Smokey" Todd, the handsome member of the Todd quartet of brothers. Smokey will be 4 in December and no doubt will make his athletic achievements of his brothers look amateurish when he steps into action with the Wildcats in about 1948.

TURTLES UTTER SOUNDS

When startled some turtles, such as wood turtles, give a loud snake-like hiss. The males of the large Galapagos tortoises, according to Darwin, bellow a roar in the breeding season. The common painted turtles utter a piping note, particularly in the spring.

AUTO ACCIDENT SUNDAY

Misses Harriett Evelyn Swain, Mildred Cogdell, Margaret and Frances Woods escaped with only minor bruises and scratches when the two cars in which they were riding collided at the intersection next to the home of G. A. Mitchell and Dr. Hines shortly after 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The Oldsmobile sedan in which Miss Swain was riding was badly damaged after overturning twice. It was headed east on Ford coupe belonging to Miss Cogdell was going north. It was slightly damaged after turning over on its side.

This year's world wheat crop is expected to be the smallest in years.
