MAYOR'S RACE IN SPOTLIGHT

Only two contests in 3 elections Saturday

Post's three spring elections, in which there are contested races in only two, are to be held Saturday, April 7, with the polls opening at 8 a.m. and closing at 7 p.m. at each voting place.

While there doesn't appear to be much interest in any of the elections, most of what is being generated is in the city election, where the only contest is between Mayor

Giles C. McCrary, who is seeking a third term in the office, and Ewell E. (Gene) Gandy.

City councilmen Ed Sawyers and E. R. (Buster) Moreland are unopposed in their bids for re-election.

At the same time they elect a mayor and two councilmen, city voters will ballot on a proposition to change to the city manager form

$75,000 to $100,000 estimated fire damage

An insurance settlement is yet to be made on the fire and smoke damage to the Post Elementary School last week, but Bryan J. Williams says present thinking, before final repair estimates are in, is that it will run between $75,000 and $100,000.

Insurance adjusters are still obtaining repair work estimates before sitting down with Post school trustees for a final settlement.

It is obvious to all that the Brother of Post resident buried

Funeral services for Gene C. Jones, 55, of Lubbock, who died Sunday at his home, were held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Post Church of Christ. He was a brother of Paul H. Jones, Garza County commissioner for Precinct 1.

After serving 15 years in the Air Force, Jones became a civilian service employee at Reese Air Force Base, retiring in 1963. He moved to Lubbock 15 years ago from Socorro, N.M.

Survivors besides the brother of Post, include his wife, Beverly; a daughter, Mrs. John R. Brown of Lubbock; his mother, Mrs. Jesse Camp of Abilene; another brother, Jack Camp of Abilene; and a sister, Mrs. Otis Moore of Odessa.

Pharr firm has low bid on courthouse

The Garza County Commissioners Court recently opened three bids for the exterior renovation of the courthouse with Pharr Construction Co. of Lubbock, now the contractor on the law enforcement building, the low bidder $6,914.

Southland voters nix consolidation; bond election set

Southland school district voters, who soundly defeated a proposal to consolidate with the Slaton schools Saturday, will now vote April 28 on a $500,000 bond issue to build a new Southland school.

Action on the bond issue came Monday night at a special meeting of Southland school trustees by an unanimous vote.

The legal notice calling the bond election appears on page 4 of today's Dispatch.

Southland School Supt. Ray Simmons told The Dispatch Tuesday that architectural plans for the new building already have been presented and considered by the board. The new school will be built on the present school site.

Even if a new school bond issue is voted the new building won't be ready for the opening of the 1973-74 fall term. It would be Aug. 1 at the earliest before the bonds could be sold and money become available for construction.

The half million dollar school bond issue would have a 40 year payout.

Actually, Southland school voters will vote on two propositions. The first is that the school district be

Commissioners court at odds on probation officer issue

County Judge Giles W. Dalby told Post Rotarians at their Tuesday luncheon in City Hall in a program on the county's new probation department that the commissioners court is divided on whether the county needs two probation officers, or only one.

"Two commissioners don't believe we can justify the juvenile probation officer," Judge Dalby said.

The county judge said earnestly he is going to do everything he can to have the juvenile probation officer named as provided in a two-year Criminal Justice Council grant announced last week by Governor Dolph Briscoe.

"We seem to have a complete difference of opinion on the need for a juvenile probation officer and have had a good healthy argument about it for the last two days," Dalby said.

Judge Dalby in reviewing the county's probation efforts explained that a juvenile probation officer is "vital to me" in trying to keep local juvenile offenders at home in a rehabilitation effort rather than send them to a correctional institution.

He said before any juvenile case comes before him as juvenile judge he needs an exhaustive study report on the child and that these can be made by a juvenile probation officer instead of hiring private investigators to do the work as was done in a recent drug case.

Judge Dalby said that "only 20 children are now under juvenile orders" here and the court is consulting with 20 to 25 more in an effort to keep them out of serious trouble.

County Commissioners Ted Aten and Herbert Walls told The Dispatch Tuesday afternoon that three of the commissioners have opposed two probation officers from the beginning, seeing the county's need as only one.

They pointed out when the two-year federally-financed probation department here is phased out "somebody is going to have to pick up the program and finance it."

Both the commissioners and Judge Dalby indicated that they would prefer to settle their difference around the commissioners court table and not in a public controversy.

Commissioner Paul Jones told The Dispatch yesterday that the majority of voters he had talked to about probation officers didn't think the county was big enough to need two and that the $7,500 salaries in the grant for the officers and $400 a month for the

Saturday's branding for benefit of Post library

Library trustees are hopeful of drawing a large area crowd of visitors to the second annual U Lazy S Ranch Benefit Branding Saturday morning, six miles south of Post on FM-669.

All proceeds from both ticket sales and the sale of soft drinks, coffee, and brownies will go to the library's memorial building fund.

This will be the library's only spring fund-raising event this spring as the annual flower shower and rummage sale is being discontinued because of lack of public interest.

Local adults and youngsters will have to provide their own transportation to the branding site this year—U Lazy S Ranch pens located just off FM-669.

Some 200 calves will be roped, branded, dehorned and vaccinated for a variety of diseases between 8:30 a.m. and noon. Trustees Patty Kirkpatrick and Rosemary Chapman appeared on the community close-up TV show in Lubbock Tuesday noon to promote the event and other Lubbock television stations have been using "spot announcements" on the branding.

More than 20 foreign airmen now in flight training at Reese AFB near Lubbock will be special guests at the branding. The airmen are from eight European and African countries, according to Mayor Giles McCrary who made arrangements for their attending the branding.

Those interested in seeing a real western calf branding can come and go as they please Saturday morning.

Adult admission is $2 and student admissions are $1 each.

Rites for brother of Post pioneer

Funeral services for James Samsom, 84, of Lubbock, a brother of George "Scotty" Samsom of Post, were held at 4 p.m. Monday in W. W. Rix Chapel in Lubbock, with burial in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park.

Samsom, a native of Forfar, Scotland, died about 6:30 a.m. Saturday in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital. He moved to Post in 1910, but since 1936 had lived in Lubbock until his retirement in 1955. He was a member of First Church of Christ Scientists, and married Elizabeth Ormond in 1910 at Forfar, Scotland.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, James G. and Ormond Samsom, and a daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Morse, all of Lubbock; two brothers, George of Post and John Samsom of Forfar, Scotland; seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

It's a record worth remembering

The current city administration has rolled up an impressive record of accomplishment which merits consideration by local voters on the eve of the municipal election.

The Dispatch has made it a habit under current ownership not to endorse local candidates for office, believing that our readers—who are also astride the local scene—can judge their politics and their politicians without help from us.

But a record of accomplishment by an administration is something else again. It is a day to day, or week to week totaling up of the improvements made.

A record is not so easily left to an individual's memory. A lot of the good can easily be forgotten.

With this in mind, we'd like to call to the readers' attention some of the accomplishments of this administration. You can judge them for yourselves.

1. Two city tax reductions—one of 10 cents and one of approximately nine cents.
2. A cooperative effort with Burlington Industries for water pollution (sewage) control with no cost to the taxpayers.
3. The removal of 450 "junk cars" from the city scene.
4. The demolition of over 200 "abandoned houses" to make our community a cleaner and safer place in which to live.
5. Collection of $35,000 of the city's $63,000 in delinquent taxes.
6. A debt-free city.
7. The upgrading of all equipment and plant plus the addition of a warehouse by purchase.
8. The establishment of excellent relations with all units of local, state and federal agencies for reciprocal cooperative efforts.

9. Not only recognition but some "clot-by" having our mayor serving as president this year of SPAG, an association of 50 member towns and cities and 15 counties.

10. The receipt of over $87,000 in federal funding for city and county projects here through the community's SPAG affiliations.

11. A joint cooperative effort with Garza County to build the Lorenzo Alexander Community Center and to develop a park and playground in that area.

12. A summer youth program, entering its second year in 1973, another joint venture with the county.

13. Completion of 50 blocks of paving, including paving in the cemetery, at a cost of $105,000 with no remaining debt to the city.

14. A joint cooperative effort with the county to finance the continuance of a cost of $3,500 to the city of the Garza County Community Action Program when threatened this spring by the withdrawal of federal funding.

15. The completion of street lighting of every street intersection in Post, plus the lighting of additional "dark spots" to make our town safer for all at night.

16. Has tried to provide all equipment necessary to help Post volunteer fire department be the best for its size in the state of Texas.

Total it up and the reader can see that a whole lot of effort has gone into bringing all this to pass. Put your own values to them, but there they are. It's a record worth remembering.—JC

"Celebrate Library week with Us"

No doubt about it, this year's National Library Week observance in Post will be the biggest, as well as the most attractive, ever held since the Post Public Library first opened its doors some seven years ago.

Practically all of the credit for arranging this year's all-out National Library Week observance must go to Mrs. C. K. Pierce, also known as "Peewee." After having Mayor Giles McCrary sign a Library Week proclamation for the city, the librarian started making plans for the special week's observance.

Actually, the Library Week observance is to get under way here this Saturday with the second annual U Lazy 5 Ranch benefit branding event, with all proceeds going to the library's memorial building fund. This event wasn't planned by the librarian, but she will undoubtedly play a big part in helping see it carried out successfully.

National Library Week is set for Sunday, April 8, through Saturday, April 14, and the librarian has something planned for every day, Monday through Friday. These daily events will include such things as Girl Scout Indian dances and songs, a Boy Scout demonstration of preparing back packs for hiking, singing, a rhythm band, crochet, stichery and needlecraft demonstrations, jewelry making and a Western Day, which will include a sing-along.

"Widen Your World—Read" is the theme of the 1973 National Library Week observance.

All Texans are being invited to widen their world during National Library Week and to visit their local libraries during the many observances being held.

In fact, this 16th annual observance of National Library Week has dual themes: "Widen Your World—Read" and "Get Ahead—Read." It focuses attention on the year-round efforts of libraries to provide informational, recreational and educational services to their patrons.

Public, school, and college and university libraries all participate in the annual program.

Libraries are changing. Public libraries are stressing new programs to provide adequate reference services to all patrons, to serve economically disadvantaged persons, and to take their services to the elderly and the home-bound.

Audiovisual materials have taken their place alongside books in so many school libraries that they are often called media centers. At the same time college and university libraries have expanded to meet the needs of new courses and new ways of teaching traditional academic courses.

National Library Week provides an opportunity for all Texans to take a good look at the libraries that serve them. With open doors and with no questions asked about education or economic condition, libraries provide an opportunity for self-fulfillment and continuing education for all who avail themselves of the opportunity to use them.

"Celebrate National Library Week with us," says our local librarian.

What our contemporaries are saying

A fixed income wouldn't be so bad if there was some way to fix it high enough to fit our budget. — Southwest Dallas County Suburban, Duncanville.

One of our readers says he would like to work in X-rated movies. Then he wouldn't have to dress to go to work. — Brownfield News.

THE BIG NEWS in Post last week was the fire at the elementary school, but "big" and "strange" news was also happening at other places over the area.

Up at Morton, for instance, four youths, one a juvenile, were apprehended after two heavy explosions rocked the town and "shook up" most of its residents.

ONE OF THE explosions at Morton was on Saturday night, and the townspeople hadn't much more than settled down from it than another blast rocked the town Sunday night.

Soon after the second explosion, police picked up the four youths for questioning and all four admitted making and setting off the "bombs" that caused the blasts, according to a story in the Morton Tribune.

THE COCHRAN County sheriff reported that one of the bombs was made of a three-foot length of pipe, plugged at each end and a hole drilled into the middle. Home-made powder, thought to consist in large part of sodium chloride, was poured into the hole. The other bomb was constructed much the same way, with a length of exhaust pipe used.

Luckily, the bombs did no damage, but persons in every part of the city heard the blasts, and at least one person in Whiteface, several miles away, said he heard one of the explosions.

AND AT HAMILTON, in central Texas, a female Irish setter gave birth to a litter of 17 pups to tie the world's record for the most puppies in an Irish setter litter. The pups began coming about noon Monday with five being born in the first hour. They continued to arrive until number 17 put in its appearance about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning.

And I also ran across a couple of odd names to add to my collection while reading the exchanges. One of the names, gleaned from the Texas Spur, is Willow Street, mayor of Dickens, who is not a candidate for re-election. And in the Morton paper, there is a story about the good showing made by the Burning Cookies 4-H Club in the county food show.

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO Ben Barnes?

The man up the street says the fellow who drops the ball is usually the one who gripes about the way it bounces.

SOMEONE WANTED to know the other day if those relatives, the Hemphills, I sometimes write about in this column actually exist or if I just make them up. No sir, I don't make them up, the Hemphills are as real as life itself. They're as thick as bees around Monroe and Heavener, Okla., and just over the line in Arkansas.

The Hemphills are all good folks, too, and the reason I write about them so much in this column is that they just naturally make good column material. They are an unpredictable clan—one can never tell what's coming next from one of them.

TAKE, FOR instance, the depression of the early 1930's, which we older folks are always trying to tell our children and grandchildren about, and which they won't buy. My pick of the depression stories involves one of the Hemphills who had been very badly mauled by the hard times and was recounting the succession of calamities that had befallen him.

"You know," he said, "when I lost my job I just couldn't keep up the payments on our house and we lost it. I couldn't keep the family together so we sent the children to orphanages and my wife went home to live with her parents. "And would you believe it," he continued, "I darn near lost my car!"

A couple of summers ago while my daughter and her family were living in Tulsa, the wife and I made a trip up there to spend a week with them. Some of the folks came over from Stillwater and Sapulpa on Sunday for a backyard picnic. While waiting for everyone to arrive, I got to thumbing through the Tulsa telephone directory and found that from 15 to 20 families of Hemphills were listed. I just knew some of them were kinfolks, but when I suggested calling and inviting them all over to the picnic, I almost got thrown out of the house. Incidentally, my wife was the first to protest.

As for blood, I'm against the profuse and joyful shedding of it that saturates so many of our modern movies. There's enough of that in "real life". It might be rewarding if we spent more time trying to prevent it than wallowing in it on the great Silver Screen.

We Americans often seem to swing from one extreme to the other. Hopefully, movies will one day grope their way to a happy medium between puritanism and pornography, purification and blood-letting. Until such time, I, for one, will be going to the movies less and less. Finding a half-way decent one is getting to be more trouble than it's worth.

That seems like a sad statement to be made from a fan who was weaned on William Holden, Paul Newman, and Audrey Hepburn, et al, but where's the entertainment in films these days? Where's the adventure? The fun? For that mat-

HOME ECONOMICS AT A GLANCE

Because my mind seems to have turned to jelly, all I've got this week are one line "zingers."

Use bold-patterned carpeting to make a large room look smaller and cozier—warm colors tend to make it more inviting.

Wrap fresh fish loosely and place in the coldest part of the refrigerator—plan to use within 3-5 days.

Little things—such as helping repot house plants, buying birthday cards, and quiet conversations—provide children with intangible feelings of love, security and self-worth.

Adults need two glasses of milk daily, while children, teenagers and pregnant and lactation mothers need even more.

Use hot water wisely—it takes a lot of fuel to heat water.

Marital ships sail best on the Seven C's—communication, cooperation, commitment, courage, compromise, compassion and challenge.

In the living room, tack down carpet edges to prevent curling, tripping hazards—and use only scatter rugs with nonskid backing.

Two teaspoons of baking powder will substitute for 1/2 teaspoon of baking soda.

When a knit fabric is a blend of two or more fibers, treat it as the most delicate fiber.

Check spices periodically for quality—rub a little between your palms and smell for characteristic fragrance. If it's gone, buy new spice.

Division of responsibilities within a family helps children understand adult roles they will assume in the future.

Out of chocolate? Substitute three tablespoons cocoa and one tablespoon fat for each ounce needed.

Don't run electrical cords under rugs or furniture where they will become worn and dangerous.

Small appliances, like hand mixers, are designed to do light-weight jobs best. Use them for heavy jobs and the motor will burn out.

Never leave a baby alone on a raised surface—no matter what the urgency. Serious injuries can result from falls.

When planning meals, consider appearances—foods are often accepted or rejected on the basis of how they look.

Keep garages well lit, and provide light switches near the doors.

Bodyshirts and other bodywear are popular for all ages—and they're now in men's departments. Be sure to try them on before buying. It's no fun having to hunch over to avoid being crowded in the crotch.

Dripping faucets can be expensive as well as annoying—wasting up to 90 gallons of water in a single day.

Arrange furniture according to a room's natural traffic areas—don't block the room's entrances.

Refrigerate leftover egg yolks in a jar with water covering them—they'll keep 2-3 days like this.

LISTENING POST

By GEORGE L. MILLER

When the Post Public Library board of trustees met last Friday, they were informed that the city and the county have voted to share the expense of the librarian's salary as soon as the special funds from the EEO terminate.

We've heard word of this support before, but it's good to mention it again, particularly the way in which they approved it. There was no need to bargain or plead for the library. The mayor and the county judge championed the library cause, and both council and court concurred—evidently without a quibble.

That may not strike you as remarkable. You've watched for almost seven years now the birth and growth of our library. You know it's proved its value to the community over and over again.

It has all the hallmarks of a winner.

It stands to reason that our local officials would preserve and support a community service as successful as the library.

Unhappily this obvious logic doesn't always apply.

The cold facts are, libraries are in serious trouble. Federal funds are just about turned off, and state funds haven't made much of an appearance yet. The politicians would tell us that revenue sharing is going to take up the slack. (And in fact, this is true here in Post!)

Now drive up the road to Lubbock, or to Amarillo. Take a look at the library needs of these larger cities, and then try to find the money to pay for it. It isn't there. Lubbock is presently bogged down in a hassle over the new library building that won't be usable for months because of fouled up planning on heating and air conditioning.

That, in itself, seems incredible, but it's a small matter placed alongside the cutting off of federal and state funds.

The heart of the library is the service it provides—not the books on the shelves. Of course the books need to be there, but it's patrons using the books that make a library a library.

In our state, the Inter-Library System is what puts quality behind our service. It's the heart and core of our work. It won't be much longer though. The decision's been made, let the local people support their libraries through revenue sharing and get state and federal participation out of the system.

Where does that leave libraries in communities that can't afford a full library program? What will the Posts of Texas do for reference materials it can neither buy nor house in its limited facility? We've certainly gained a victory getting our librarian salaried locally, but a lot of good she'll be to us if we can't continue to get the materials from other libraries that make up the lifeblood of library services. We're in for dark days, my friends, sitting at the foot of the table "below the salt" as they used to say, with virtually no friends in high places to speak up for us. Our only recourse seems to be pencil and paper and postage stamps.

We are urging people to write their congressmen, state and U. S. to plead with them to consider again the absolute necessity for a strong library service in our nation and our state. Texas, in particular, is desperately needy, ranking 47th in the 50 states in its per capita support of libraries. Only three public libraries in Texas have the minimum $7.66 per capita expenditure recommended by the ALA.

Surely we can do better than this! Surely the people of Texas have more on the ball than to allow such a situation to continue. Only it may not even continue at that level. There's the unpleasant feeling abroad in the land that libraries just aren't high enough on the list of priorities to preserve and protect. In future years you may have a nice little library down on Main Street, with a pleasant enough collection of books for leisure-time reading, but no service beyond that, no resources, no references worth the name.

And when that day comes, you may be satisfied that we saved state and federal money—but your community.

 On Wednesday, March 21, my son and a friend of his were returning from Texas Tech in Lubbock when the water pump on their car failed. Not having enough money or a checkbook with them to have the car repaired, they found themselves in a dilemma as to what to do when a fine citizen of our community—Mr. Wayne Thomas, a postman—in passing showed his concern for the boys and invited them to leave the car at his home until it could be repaired.
 Later, a young man from Post, a student from Texas Tech, whose name I'm unable to recall, volunteered to bring the boys on to Abilene. The next day I drove to Post to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Thomas, repaired the car and drove it home. Mrs. Thomas was most hospitable and neighborly.
 I found the spirit of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10:25-37) in Post, Texas.
 I thank you.

LEARNS WELDING SKILLS
 Arthur Ayala of Post is learning the skills of welding in the Area Vocational Schools program at Western Texas College in Snyder.

High school students take college courses

By CAROLYN WOOLSEY
SNYDER — High school students from nine nearby towns are experiencing a new concept in education by attending daily classes at Western Texas College while receiving credits toward graduation from their high schools.
 These students, 69 in number, are enrolled in the Area Vocational Schools program, according to Duane Hood, WTC registrar. Dr. Hood says the program contracts with high schools to supply books, class space, and instructors to students through WTC.
 The students enroll through their high schools, and the high school supply the transportation. The students are then able to take courses their high schools can't offer. For many of them it means the difference between graduating or not graduating from high school.

 Bill Teel, director of occupational technical education, is the director of the A. V. S. program. He goes to high schools to recruit students and work with school administrators concerning the program. Teel, who is a counselor, says that many of the students learn of the program from their high school counselors. Teel also works with the students in much the same way as their school counselors do.
 Towns participating in this new arrangement between high school and college are: Snyder, Colorado City, Fluvanna, Hermleigh, Hobbs, Loraine, Post, Roby and Roscoe. In general, the aim of the area vocational schools is to provide vocational training of a quality which will enable students to gain employment after graduation from high school. In some cases, students can work even while attending classes in their chosen fields.

 If students enrolled in diesel mechanics or welding wish to enroll in college classes after high school graduation, they may take an exam to gain advanced standing after ten days of class. If they pass, they would then enroll in the same classes as the college sophomores.
 There are other new concepts of education to be found in the classes of the area vocational schools. Most students of diesel mechanics use new engines to learn how to rework the various parts. In the classes at WTC, old, worn-out engines are rehabilitated to factory specifications.
 Clark says, "There is no art to taking a new engine apart and putting it together again," so his students learn to check old, worn parts and put them back in usable condition. This includes completely reworking the injectors cylinder heads, pumps, and all systems of a diesel engine.

In welding classes, as well as in diesel classes, the high school students do much the same work as the college freshmen. When the high school student finishes his welding course, he should be able to pass the same job application tests as the college freshmen.
 The welders start with arc welding, then go on to the more difficult vertical, horizontal, and overhead welding. They learn to work with the two most popular welding rods used in heavy industrial welding, the E6010 and the E7018.

Vocational office occupation classes offer instruction to fit the needs of many different kinds of office employment. When students enroll in these classes, they fill out occupational intent cards. The course of study students follow is then planned to fit their chosen fields. The result is highly individualized instruction.
 All of the students do get a very general office course, in which they learn general office procedures and how to use the most commonly used office machines. Some of these students fill in for secretaries on campus when they have to be gone for a short time.
 Additionally there is something new every semester in auto mechanics. This semester it is chassis and power trains, including front ends, alignment and overhaul, brakes, differentials, wheels, and tires. Students in the auto mechanics classes learn the fundamental techniques on all new equipment which was bought last year.

secretary would provide a real courthouse salary problem.

"Those salaries are above what other county officers and secretaries receive and if we raised other salaries to that level a tax increase would be required," he said. Courthouse morale already is low over the court's refusal this year to grant salary increases.

Judge Dalby told Rotarians that the commissioners court had authorized him by resolution to seek the federal grant for the probation department, and, according to his interpretation, to put the department into operation once the funds were secured.

"They think, however, that once the funds were obtained I should return to the court for approval to implement the program," Dalby said.

The county judge, looking into the future, said that within the two-year life of the grant, a regional probational network may be organized, and "four years down the line it is possible we will have a state-wide probation setup."

"At least," he said, "that is the talk now."

He added that in two years, anyway, elections will bring a possible new judge and new court, and that that court can determine whether to reapply for another grant or to "go in some other direction."

The Rev. George L. Miller, who has served Judge Dalby in two juvenile probation cases and is a Rotarian, spoke up in the question and answer period to give his endorsement to the need for the juvenile probation officer, as did Rotary President Jack Alexander, who is the elementary and primary grade schools' principal.

The difference of opinion on whether or not to have a juvenile probation officer came late in the program after Dalby had gone over all phases of the probation procedure.

He said every juvenile now must have an attorney and that the juvenile can request a jury trial if he or his attorney so desires.

At present he said he has 63 county court cases on probation and 30 felony cases out of district court, although the case load for a full-time adult probation officer by law "should not substantially exceed 75."

He said the $24,970 fund grant announced by the governor was only for the first year's operation with another $22,000 coming for the second year.

The entire two-year probation program is not going to cost county taxpayers "a cent," Dalby said, pointing out what cash funding is necessary to meet federal funding can more than be paid from probation fees accumulated last year and being taken in this year which by law can only be spent on probationary procedures.

'Lopes score 18 points Saturday

The Post Antelope track and field team was able to come up with only 18 points in a crowded field in the Denver City invitational track meet Saturday.

Mark Bevers won third place in the mile run, Roger Pacc, fourth in the shot put, and Chris Wyatt, fourth in the 880-yard run. The 440-yard relay team finished fifth with a time of 45.5 seconds.

Pace tossed the 12-pound shot 49 feet and 3 inches for his best effort, but finished behind Tahoka's Clifford Laws and two other shot putters. Coach Lane Tannehill said he is confident Pace will crack the 50-foot mark before the season ends.

Wyatt's fourth place winning time in the half-mile run was 2:36.3.

Great Grandson Dies

Funeral services for 17-month-old Shane Ray Johnson, great-grandson of Mrs. Mabel Martin of Post, were held at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the First Baptist Church at Littlefield. Burial was in Littlefield Cemetery.

Adult education classes planned

Adult education classes in typing and furniture renovation will be organized at meetings Monday and Tuesday nights, according to Lane Tannehill of the Post Public Schools faculty.

Adults interested in taking the courses are asked to contact Tannehill at the school if they have not already done so.

Mrs. Cora Fleming will be instructor for the typing course and Ben Owen for the furniture renovation course, the teacher said.

Tannehill said GED tests are also planned for Monday night and asks those interested in taking the tests to telephone the high school office, 2770. The tests are for those qualified to receive the equivalent of a high school diploma.

The Post High School one-act play, "A Sunny Morning," failed to place in District SAA competition at Frenship High School in Wolforth Tuesday, but one of its cast, Rodney Compton, was named to the all-star cast, and another, Phyllis Eckols, received honorable mention.

Little League set to make decision

Whether Post's Little League team will be able to start its season at the end of the school year, some have requested, was decided at a league meeting tonight (Thursday) at house, according to Dave Capps, league president.

"Everyone interested attend tonight's meeting to decide then which way to go—whether before or after the school year," Capps said.

I ASK YOUR SUPPORT

Even though I am unopposed in Place 2 School Board Trustee, I would like to ask for the support of all school district voters in the election on April 15.

Both my husband and myself are graduates of Post High School. I am a member of the First United Methodist Church. I'm 30 years old, I have one school age child and one younger.

As a responsible citizen of Post and one who is sincerely interested in our school system, I seek your support in the School Trustee Election, Saturday, April 7.

Lasso[®] for cotton . . . Convenient weed control.

Cotton farmers are taking a good long look at Lasso, the preemergence herbicide by Monsanto.

Because Lasso is convenient to use.

First of all, you don't have to incorporate Lasso. You apply Lasso at planting. It's far less likely to blow away, then, and you've saved yourself an incorporation trip through the fields.

Lasso comes in easy to use liquid. You apply Lasso preemergence on the surface. Broadcast it, or for real economy, band it on. However you apply Lasso, you'll get effective control over Carelessweed, and almost a dozen other annual grasses and broadleaf weeds that compete with cotton.

And Lasso doesn't persist in the soil. So if you get hailed out, for example, you can come right back in with soybeans or corn with no carryover worries. Take a good, long look at Lasso. It's the herbicide that's convenient for you at planting.

Post is two-division victor in Jr. Relays

Post, Frenship and Floydada won team championships in the second annual Postex Junior Relays here last Friday with Post winning both the junior varsity and freshman divisions, Frenship the 8th grade division and Floydada the 7th grade division.

The 9th grade division went right down to the final event, the mile relay, before Post edged out Floydada for the team trophy, 142 points to 137½. Floydada won the mile relay, but Post's second place finish gave them the team title by four and a half points.

Post easily outdistanced the field in the junior varsity division, amassing a total of 170 points to second place Tahoka's 135.

Frenship also had an easy time of it in the 8th grade division, winding up with 144½ points to second place Slaton's 89 and twoninths. Post finished third with 75 and eleven-eighths points.

Floydada was closely pressed by Slaton in winning the 7th grade division, but finished ahead 94 points to 86. Frenship was third with 77 points and Post fourth with 70, just two points ahead of fifth place Roosevelt.

The day was cool and blustery with gusting winds holding down the times in the track events and also interfering with some of the performances in the field events. You will find this popular cotton seed breeder on the Lamesa Highway in Snyder, phone 573-3341. If no answer, call 573-2956. No one is better acquainted with the cotton seed breeding than this firm. Their many years of experience in this business have enabled them to offer you seeds that will produce, seeds that will give you the highest yield for the variety. They are continually studying the results of planting various brands of cotton seeds, the soils, etc., and are so close that planters in this section may seek their advice and in return keep them posted on the results of their own progress on cotton seed experiments. The progressive cotton planter recognizes the great value of this contact, and the fact that it is economy to deal with the local merchant where adjustments are more easily made and personal interest is maintained.

This popular cotton seed breeder is at all times experimenting with different new strains of cotton seeds, in order to constantly improve the quality and productivity of their seeds to further aid the cotton planters of this area. We, the compilers, recommend the Von Roeder Seed Farms to all our readers for anything in field seeds in this Town and Country Review.
