

Post Dispatch Joins Associated Press, One of Only 80 in State

Editor's Note: With this issue the Post Dispatch becomes a member of the Associated Press, a world-wide news gathering organization. The AP does not solicit members, on the contrary it does not even encourage weekly newspapers to join. The Post Dispatch is one of the smallest newspapers in the chain. The growth and development of Post and our policy of trying to put out the best newspaper possible were behind our getting the AP. We are proud to be among the 80-odd AP newspapers in Texas. In this connection the following story of the AP is presented to our readers.

By The Associated Press
The riches of the Texas plains country were still unknown when the first serious effort at organized news-gathering was attempted. The present day site of Post was a naked plain... on the fringe of America's frontier. The United States and Mexico... destined to become good neighbors and allies in arms against world dictators... were at war. The population of the United States, concentrated in the East, was hungry for war news, hungry for news from the Texas country north of the Rio Grande. That news came in dribbles, uncertain reports that traveled via pony express, rickety railroad or by the sparse new telegraph lines. Real systematic news-gathering was to come, but the momentous Mexican war and the aggressiveness of James Gordon Bennett, publisher of the New York Herald, in reporting it played a vital part in its background. A few years before, Samuel F. B. Morse had successfully operated the first telegraph line, between Washington and Baltimore. Another three years saw wires expanded to New York and run westward to St. Louis. Bennett with characteristic vigor lost no time in taking advantage of the new means of communication. He hired "telegraph reporters" along the ever lengthening line of the telegraph. As soon as the situation with Mexico became serious, he established a courier system between New York and New Orleans, center for news coverage for activities along the Rio Grande. This began in 1845 and Bennett's express beat the United States mails by from one to four days. Soon after the war broke out in the spring of 1846 Bennett lengthened the express service with the aid of the Philadelphia Ledger and the Baltimore Sun. The telegraph line between Philadelphia and New York served to speed the news over its last few miles and saved many hours needed to bring the news by train-messenger. Bennett was the first with news of the fall of the City of Mexico in 1847 and not only gave the news to the other papers but to the government at Washington as a matter of public service. Not long after that David Hale, publisher of the New York Journal and Commerce, proposed to Bennett that the Herald and the Journal and Commerce join forces in the collection of their news. Bennett agreed. The following year Hale made the proposal that four other New York City papers join the Journal and Commerce and the Herald in the formation of The Associated Press. Bennett's aggressive tactics in pursuit of telegraphed news forced other New York papers to follow suit or be left in the lurch. It was not long before the scant telegraph lines were jammed with an overload of copy. Costs for each paper soared. Newspaper editors found each paper was paying six or seven times the amount necessary to get the telegraphed story to New York because each paper was paying full rates for each item. Since many of the items were virtually the same, there was considerable waste of money. A practical solution was necessary if these papers were to continue in business. Hale proposed the formation of The Associated Press in 1848 to carry out this aim. His plan was accepted and he was named first president. The young association represented the first noteworthy attempt at systematic gathering of news for newspapers, and newspaper owners throughout the United States turned to this privately owned enterprise as a means of getting their news. As the list of subscribers increased they gathered together in loosely formed geographical groups to make dealings with the New York Associated Press and to collect and transmit news to papers in each group. Among these were the Southern Associated Press, the Western Associated Press and the New York Associated Press. The Civil War came and before it ended disturbing developments were taking place in the news-gathering front that were to change the whole basis of systematic news-gathering in the nation. While the Civil War was being fought, members of the Western Associated Press began a struggle for equality with the New York organization, a struggle for an equal voice in the management of the news-gathering work and an equal share in the expense. This struggle went on (Continued On Page 8, Col. 4)

23,572 Bales of Cotton Ranks '49 Second High in 23-Year History

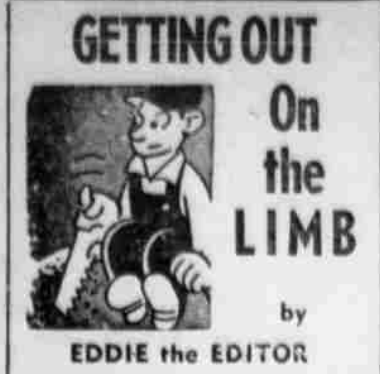

Garza county's 1949 cotton crop of 23,572 bales is the second highest since records were begun in 1926, according to K. N. Klapp of Lubbock. Klapp's figures show the 1937 crop of 32,737 bales as the highest in 23 years of record keeping. Nine hundred eighty-four bales in 1945 was the low. Five of the county gins are closed. Soutland reported 4,200 bales this year; Graham, 6,091; Storie, 3,209; Close City, 3,292; Planters, 4,430; and Pleasant Valley, 2,350. Storie's Gin remains open for ginning. Twenty caprock counties covered by Klapp's records showed 959,000 bales ginned this year. This is considerably below the peak of more than 1,600,000. The low for the area was also in 1945, when only 84,000 bales were ginned in the whole county. Mild weather has extended the ginning season.

Bringing Break-Even Point Down Is Problem of Coming Months

Mr. Babson, the learned financier who makes his winter home in Florida while he coins money and writes a column for our editorial page, out-predicted Drew Pearson in last week's paper.

He says men are going to start flying like birds and eating foods made from trees, water, air and sunshine. He says that they are going to grind up peaches, skin, fruit and seed. He also intimates that people will start growing seeds and plans with their minds. All of these steps forward will be made at a very low cost to the individual.

Me, I can hardly wait to get my wings. I'm wondering if the wings will be the large enveloping-type angel wings or something on the order of that cloak effect worn by Batman and Superman.

Too, I want to know just how light is a light motor and where am I going to carry it. Perhaps the motor and the wings will be on the same superstructure, slipped over the arms. I wonder if the little woman is going to have to twirl the propeller while I warm up doing calisthenics or will the motor be a half-horse power job that can double on a motor boat.

Mr. Babson said that these weren't original ideas with him—he got them from some scientists he knew. Believe me, for my money, they're original, all right.

He said it might be necessary to wear a suit filled with... a light gas. Plenty of men around Post won't need any suit of that kind. I think I want one in red and light blue, similar to Superman's with a big red E on the front for Editor or Excelsior.

Mr. Babson didn't make it clear whether this would be a regular gasoline engine or some kind of jet job. I wonder if I would be like a B-29, more economical on round-the-world flights and have to conduct all my business in London or Calcutta or Moscow. Or would I be more of the cub type and be able just to fly over to Lubbock or out to Al Bird's?

Babson thought that we would all fly like eagles, gulls or carrier pigeons. I don't know whether the population would be divided in three distinct classes or whether each individual could be convertible.

Probably dowagers would qualify as carrier pigeons... those that have the chest for it. Gulls are beautiful birds to watch in flight and they also have the ability to swoop down into the water, snap up a tasty fish and fly on out to sea. I wonder if those buying the gull-type wings and motor will be able to slip down the skylight and grab a quick soda at the drug store en route from Snyder to Lubbock?

I never have been able to understand why scientists were always wanting to make food out of trees. If the old method goes out, we may be pretty hard up in West Texas. From trees, they are going to get sugars, proteins and yeast. According to Babson, these are small trees. I imagine a redwood would stock a distillery.

Other food will come direct from grasses. I can't wait to invite some of my friends over for dinner. We'll have side cuts grama salad and filet of vetch. I'll get the little woman to fix up some hollandaise sauce to serve with stewed rye. For dessert, I think we'll have whipped cream over broomweed blossoms. It should be so colorful.

I'm not going along with Babson all the way in this Rabson Park, Fla.—One of the greatest problems which will confront us in the next twelve months is how to bring the break-even point down. When the present artificial boom has subsided, producers must find ways to make more goods at cheaper prices and at the same time keep wages up, continue worker's short hours and give more benefits.

The Problem
This problem, reduced to its simplest form, revolves itself into a question of what makes men work. It is no secret that

TEXANS IN WASHINGTON

By TEX EASLEY
Associated Press Washington Service.

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—A quiet-spoken little Texan has been one of the key figures in the coal crisis, although his name seldom gets in the papers.

A native of Gonzales and a former Texas state senator, Welby Hopkins is chief counsel for the United Mine Worker and sits at John L. Lewis' side in talks with mine owners and government mediators.

Now in his forties, Hopkins came to Washington in 1936 as an attorney with the Justice Department. His performance in 'brave new world of tomorrow.' I never was fighting to eliminate the cow and steer as inefficient producers of milk and beef, like he says.

Science can feel free to make milk any way they please, in stills, test tubes or as a by-product of the petroleum industry.

But I don't want anybody fooling with my steaks. I don't believe Einstein or Oppenheimer or even George Washington Carver could synthesize a better T-bone than is grown on the hoof, right around here. Furthermore, I don't want them to.

Babson is a good man and a financial genius, I'm sure, but the steers that produce the steaks I like are efficient enough for my palate.

He describes as tasty a ground-up peach including the skin and seed. Now I don't have objections to the skin or even the fuzz, but at the seed, I draw the line. By the time all these improvements are patented, I will probably have my new upper plate and I don't want any splinters getting in my gums.

And if they grind up the meat and fish, bones, skin and all, how are you going to be able to tell when it is fillet mignon or when it is flounder. Sometimes you can't now, except for the skeletal structure.

Now as for grinding up lobster, claws, meat and tail—and I never knew lobster was a Mexican dish—I don't think that could look any more frightening than lobster thermidor does in 1950. At least you'd be sure a claw wasn't going to reach out and snap you.

This idea of the mind growing plants and seeds is really tops with me. It will be especially good for West Texas in the summer time. Nobody will have to bother with watering the lawn.

I'll just sit in the bathtub and soak or lie down on the divan and will the grass to grow and grow green. Then when it gets as thick and high as I want it, I'll just will it to stop.

This matter of the mind has limitless possibilities and I'm just overcome thinking of them all. I believe I'll retire from business and just think. I guess I could make a million dollars in two weeks or so.

I'm just going to grow things for relaxation. Part of the time, I'm not going to think at all. In fact, I'm just going to work between in many plants workers productivity per man has fallen off considerably. Why? For too long a time management has tried to force workers to do their best by threats of liquidation or layoffs. This policy of fear nourished strife and bred labor unions.

Then the government stepped in with the Wagner and the Taft-Hartley Acts and said in effect, "We shall legislate cooperation and peace and an attitude of enthusiasm for work." How in heaven's name can you "legislate" industrial peace by setting up a political football game between labor and management? The backers of one team demand more and more touch-downs, or else the coach will be fired. The rooters for the other team will be satisfied with nothing less than the goal posts and painting the town red. A scheme of this sort is unfounded and can result in nothing but friction.

Management's Opportunities
The officials of too many corporations have inherited this scheme of things from their forebearers. But we too have succumbed to their time-worn dogmas about management's prerogatives and labor's place in the scheme of things. Yet, if we are to preserve Democracy, avoid state socialism and develop a state of abundance, then we will send teams out to explore, conquer and develop this relatively unknown frontier of Human Relations in Industry.

One small manufacturer, some months ago, became desperate. His break-even point was too high and he faced a shutdown. But a simple formula was evolved which resulted in a production increase of 100% in a short space of time. Here's how. Management found that about 38% of its sales dollar was charged against the cost of labor. Labor was offered the difference between the 38% and whatever saving it could effect. Labor accepted the challenge. Cost dropped - - production went up - - new business was available on the basis of decreased costs of production, and deliveries were made on time at a profit to all parties.

One of my employees worked from new workers. He watched spoilage pile up. He saw workers let excellent suggestions for improving efficiency and cutting costs go down the drain, and then sneer at management because it was so inefficient. Company problems were none of their business, for these men "only worked there." Labor productivity has been frozen by management.

Conclusion
I believe that we can save our private enterprise system only by allowing the wageworker to become an entrepreneur along with management. When the workers can have a personally gratifying part in solving their company's production problems; when they can reap a proportionate reward; then they won't need to worry much about "collective bargaining" in a plant.

Minute Editorial

Post has her growing britches on for sure now and the way and speed in which she grows and the type of citizens attracted here by the growth depends on those of us already here. A "town meeting" was held last week to discuss certain phases of this growth and the reasons behind it. The so-called town meeting was a sounding board for out-of-towners to tell the people of Post who attended how to run their town. Post can be developed by and for the citizens of Post or it can be promoted and bilked by out-of-town lease brokers, oil operators and Lubbock dudes. The recent meeting and the goings-on there are an indication of what is to come. Town meetings are a time-honored American custom, a healthy reaction. A town meeting in Post should be a meeting for local citizens to discuss local problems. Let the Lubbockites take care of Lubbock and the Dallasites take care of Dallas; we in Post can take care of Post.

What Our Contemporaries Are Saying:

Newspapers these days are the targets of hundreds of people looking for a place to live. Women with tears in their eyes and crying kids hanging to their skirts, come trooping into the Slatonite office almost daily. They hold out a wilted nickel for a copy of the paper and inquire in hopeless tones if we know of any houses for rent. Seldom do we have such information but we have a few rumors occasionally and when we do the entire staff endeavors to give directions as to how to reach such houses, apartments or rooms, as the case may be.

As there is not a street in the town that runs either right or left, east or west, north or south, none of us agree as to where the victim should turn or what direction she should take. Outside of the streets leading from the square, Slaton has only three or four street signs in town, the catch-as-catch can system of numbering the houses seems to have been used and the results have brought insanity, loss of appetite and general debility to hundreds of folks who have wandered over the community trying to find such addresses as 915 Knox Street or 725 Eva

When the tall, quiet-mannered Texan appeared at U. S. Commissioner Cyril L. Lawrence's headquarters in the District of Columbia's municipal building, the newsmen gathered around. They wondered why he didn't have on cowboy boots, but he assured that practically all other rangers did wear such foot gear.

With his wife and Deputy Sheriff W. W. Riner of Amarillo, Frost came here to return 18-year-old Diana Heaney Johnson to Amarillo to face charges in the slaying of W. A. (Tex) Thornton.

A GOOD TAX IDEA—At a time when legislators are scraping the bucket for new ways to provide revenue, we think the fellow who hit upon the idea of a tax of $25 on divorcees deserves a big hand. At a time when a 20% amusement tax is imposed on athletic contests, theatre tickets and sundry forms of fun, we see no reason why a dissatisfied husband or wife should enjoy the luxury of the single life without some monetary consideration. We would carry the idea even further, and put a $25 tax on each and every person entering the state of matrimony. "The practice would definitely curb fly-by-night marriages, because most couples can rake up two or three bucks for a license where they can't raise $25. And, believe us, anybody who can't get $25 together these days has no business getting married. When a man marries he's too starry-eyed to mind a $25 tax, and when he's getting divorced he can consider himself fortunate in getting out so lightly. Either way the coin falls, marriage or divorce, it's luxury and deserves to be taxed. Gov. Allan Shivers, looking about for funds to improve mental hospitals, might consider this method of letting the mentally lame contribute to institutions for their own care and convenience!—The Ralls Banner.

gaged in a great mass of calculations testing whether that taxpayer or any taxpayer so confused and so impoverished can long endure. We are met on form 1040. We have come to dedicate a large portion of our income to a final resting place with those men who here spend their lives that they may spend our money. It is altogether anguish and torture that we should do this. But in the legal sense we cannot evade, we cannot cheat, we cannot underestimate this tax. The collectors clever and sly who computed here, have gone far beyond our power to add and subtract. Our creditors will little note nor long remember what we pay here, but the Bureau of Internal Revenue can never forget what we report here. It is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us... that from these vanished dollars we take increased devotion to the few remaining, that we here highly resolve that next year will not find us in a higher income tax bracket.—The Weekly Bulletin.

OU-Texas, And Oklahoma A&M-SMU Games Slated Same Day, Same Stadium

DALLAS, Mar. 1. (AP)—For the first time in history two Southwestern Conference football teams will play inter-sectional games on the same day in the same stadium next fall.

October 14, in the Cotton Bowl, Texas will meet Oklahoma in the afternoon and six hours later Southern Methodist will clash with Oklahoma A&M.

The "double header" will furnish a comparison of the popularity of the two top drawing teams of the conference.

SMU in the past three years has become the top challenger to Texas in football attendance. Last year SMU bested Texas by a long shot by crowding 484,000 fans into the Cotton Bowl for eight games. Texas, however, only played six home games.

Now comes a direct test.

The Texas-Oklahoma game always is a sellout. But what will it do to the SMU-Oklahoma A&M game? If that is a sellout, too, it will mean more fans will have seen football in one stadium on a single date than in southwestern and possibly national history. The Cotton Bowl seats 75,000.

One thing sure is that Oklahoma fans will get a big break. They can see both of their state schools play without moving out of their seats.

Grade School Teams Enter Wilson Event

Grade school boys and girls are entered in a basketball tournament tomorrow afternoon at Wilson.

Boys will play first at 4 o'clock and the girls' first game will be at 5 o'clock. Each team will play at least two games. The tournament will close the basketball season.

Miss Betty Travis and Glenn Foley are coaches.

Mrs. Ira Lee Duckworth was to undergo surgery this morning in the Lubbock Memorial hospital in Lubbock.

FROM THE GRANDSTAND

by WILBUR MARTIN
Associated Press Staff

Texas sportswriters selected Frank Kimbrough, football coach at West Texas State College, as the Border Conference "Coach of the Year," thus proving you don't always have to produce a winner to gain public recognition.

Kimbrough was kidded about the poor start his Buffs made last year at the Sports Achievement banquet in Dallas recently. He said that reminded him of a dream.

"I dreamed I went to bed one night and woke up the next morning one of Satan's new assistants. After I'd been around a while I found out it was just like coaching football.

"I guess I worked the boys too hard, because Satan came around one day.

"'Looker here, boy,' he said, 'who do you think you are? You act like you own this place.' 'Gosh, Satan,' I told him, 'I thought I did. The alumni gave it to me after those first four games.'"

Charley Grimm, new manager of the Dallas Eagles of the Texas League and former manager of Chicago of the National League, was talking about Casey Stengel, the New York Yankee manager.

"Old Casey was watching this rookie down in Florida," recalled Grimm. "The kid was knocking every pitch into the stands—but foul.

"Casey couldn't stand it, so he went out there and told him to 'pull that ball.' 'I'll show you what I mean,' says Casey.

"He gets up to the plate in that funny crouch of his and says to the pitcher, 'Let'er fly.' The guy did and knocked Casey down with the ball.

"He got up kinda wobbly and told this rookie he'd continue the batting lesson tomorrow. 'That guy just gave me a base on balls and I ain't got time now.'"

Pro Basketball Cops Eight Fouls

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., March 1. (AP)—Big Don Otten of the Tri-City Blackhawks of the National Basketball association recently established a unique record here when he committed eight personal fouls in a game.

Under pro rules a player is permitted six fouls before he is put out, but when Otten committed his sixth, all but four other Blackhawks had fouled out, so he was allowed to remain in the contest, under league rules. However, a technical foul was awarded with each of Don's remaining infractions.

Michigan Freshmen Trounce Varsity Unit

EAST LANSING, Mich., March 1. (AP)—Michigan State ice hockey coach, Harold Paulsen, is getting a bit wary of pitting his freshman against the varsity in practice.

"Varsity tempers get awfully frayed when the freshmen beat them," he explains, "and they've done it five times in a row."

Tahoka Farmers Report Finding Flying Saucer Near New Moore

TAHOKA, March 1. (AP)—A "flying saucer" was reported found here today on a farm 25 miles southwest of Tahoka in the New Moore community.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Weatherby came into town about noon today carrying a tinsel-covered contraption attached by strings to a five-foot long balloon. They said they found it about 5 p. m. Tuesday on their farm.

The "saucer" is about four feet across and consists of one horizontal plane and four somewhat smaller triangular shaped planes, measuring about 24 inches to the side. It is made of wood covered with substance. The balloon is bluish grey and would probably not show up at a very great distance.

No explanation has been given of the object, although it has been speculated that it is a Weather bureau or airport testing apparatus. No controls or instruments were found on it.

Letters WDX and MH appear on the contraption, which can be folded up by means of two hinges.

(The U. S. Weather bureau station at Lubbock said the object was probably a testing apparatus for judging the wind velocity at high altitudes. The tinfoil covering, they said, can be traced by radar through clouds.

"Such methods are widely used for heights of 60,000 to 70,000 feet," according to Observer Jack Pales at the Lubbock Weather station. "The finders should send it to the nearest Weather bureau station."

The tinsel covering on the object reflects brightly when struck by the sun and townspeople speculated that such an apparatus might account for some of the "flying saucer" reports which have been heard over the country.

"It definitely isn't a play-thing," Frank Hill of the Lynn County News asserted. "We just can't figure out what it is."

Boxing Tourney Set By NCAA at Penn

Scripture

God be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us; Selah. That thy way may be known upon the earth, thy saving health among all nations. Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. O let the nations be glad and sing for joy; for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. Selah. Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us. God shall bless us; and all the ends of the earth shall fear him. Psalm 67.

Mr. and Mrs. Clint Herring Build New House for Way They Live

The Clint Herring house on West Main street is a dream house, built from the inside out with each room furnished and decorated just as Mr. and Mrs. Herring wanted it. "We didn't especially plan it for convenience or practicality," said Mrs. Herring. "We just knew what we liked and wanted in each room and if the kitchen floor gets greasy after each meal, I just mop it off."

Herring designed the house and Mrs. Herring is responsible for the decoration and color scheme. Exterior is California modern in a light-cream rough-faced brick. It faces north.

Gray, mulberry and white vertical stripes paper the L-shaped entrance hall which extends across the front and through the bedroom wing. The musical chimes in the doorbell are an indication of a major interest of the Herrings that is reflected throughout the house.

On the left of the front door is a gray-painted cedar-lined storage closet for out-of-season clothes and guest wraps. Modern style door knobs were designed by the Herrings. Dimensions are 4 x 15 feet each way.

Living Room

At the right of the entrance is the 24x16 living room. The entire back wall is glass, including the door. It opens onto a terrace.

Wrought iron posts are on the terrace which will be partly glassed in later for a green room. Another hobby of the Herrings is growing plants and flowers.

A false fireplace lined in mulberry ceramic tile in the living room is opposite the window-wall. The low mantel is painted dove gray. Above it is a wide mirror extending to the ceiling. Mr. and Mrs. Herring purposely made the mantel low in order for the mirror to reflect the roses in the garden at the back of the house.

Dove Gray Carpet

Carpet and wall-paper are dove gray. Draw draperies at the window wall are wood rose. Color emphasis is carried from room to room with one of the predominant colors accented in each one.

Furniture is mostly mahogany American traditional. Some French pieces are added, largely 18th century. Opposite each other in front of the fireplace are pieces of a turquoise sectional sofa. A long, rectangular coffee table is in the center.

Three pieces of glass are on the mantel. One is a rose satin cracker jar, another is an old English chocolate pot and a third is a glass overlay bottle.

The east wall has a ceiling-high built-in bookshelf which fronts a projection closet. Books are removed and movies are shown from the closet, projected into the living room.

Record Space

This shelf contains space for records and is adjacent to a console combination radio and record player. On the west wall by the spinet piano is a glass china cabinet, visible in both the dining room and living room. It was Mr. Herring's idea and displays some of Mrs. Herring's collection of china cups, many more than 250 years old.

A unique feature of the living room is its privacy and lighting. The glass wall is the only window in the room and provides light during the daytime. Of double thickness with air space between, it insulates against heat and cold. There is no ceiling fixture, all the artificial light comes from a series of lamps.

A French cup cabinet, glass-walled, is in the living room holding part of Mrs. Herring's china collection. Another is in the dining room. An 18th century leather-covered step table is by the window wall.

A double door leads into the dining room. The same dove gray carpet is on the floor and walls are papered in the same paper as the living room except for one. The west wall is papered in a conventional rose and dove gray pattern.

Half-bay Window

A half-bay picture window in the front of the house holds several plants on glass shelves and a soil-filled planting box is at the bottom. A collection of china plates is hung across the top.

In the china cabinet is some more of Mrs. Herring's rare china. The dining room suite is 18th century mahogany. It consists of the buffet, table chairs and china cabinet. The mirror over the buffet has an antiqued frame. Dining room dimensions are 12x13 as are those of the kitchen.

The kitchen, behind the dining room, is entered by a slab door. Colors are emerald green, yellow and coral. Inlaid linoleum on the floor is coral and the horizontal tile board on the walls is butter yellow. Leather upholstery on the dinette bench is green.

Shelves above the breakfast area hold several pieces of chintz Spode. Lights are fluorescent. Steel cabinets go around two sides of the room. A ventilating fan is over the stove. Food pantry and broom closet is on the opposite side of the room.

Electric Kitchen

Mrs. Herring's kitchen is all electric. It contains a convertible washing machine and dishwasher, a garbage disposal unit, a stove and refrigerator.

A white glass-top door leads to the terrace. Fluorocubes on the windows over the sink and over the breakfast table are pale yellow and white. Venetian blinds cover the windows. Added light is given by glass brick beside the sink window and under the upper cabinets. Two antique steins flank the sink-window.

The garage is behind the kitchen and is reached by way of the terrace. Storage closets are located in the garage, as well as the hot water heater and water softener.

The Herrings wanted their house just to be comfortable and attractive. Robert Cox was the contractor and builder and drew up the plans.

Built Around Hobbies

"We built the house like we want to live," said Mrs. Herring. "It is built around what we like to do." Although practicality was not a prime consideration in building the house, there are certain unusual and convenient features. One is a shelf inside a cabinet door which keeps the wastebasket out of sight. The heating system is a floor furnace.

Going down the entrance hall to the bedroom wing, the first thing seen is the sliding door to the camera closet, just behind the living room bookshelf. It is papered to match the hall walls.

At the corner of the hall is another built-in bookshelf. Among the articles it holds are part of the Herrings collection of music boxes. They have collected music boxes wherever they have traveled.

Guest Bedroom

The guest bedroom overlooks the street. Woodwork and draperies here are champagne color. Touches of burgundy tie the color scheme in with other rooms in the house. The bedroom suite is modern maple. Two windows are at the front and on the side. Dimensions are 10 x 13 feet.

Wall paper is floral pattern on a pale green background. Leaves are darker green and blossoms are champagne and burgundy. Mrs. Herring made the quilted champagne bedspread and quilted the cornices. He made the cornices and Mrs. Victor Hudman made the draperies.

A bath for this room is at the east end of the house, behind the hall. Burgundy floozies are at the window. Green rubber tile blocks are on the floor and horizontal tile board goes around the room. Fixtures are gray. The shower is enclosed with a glass door.

Jan Paula's Room

The Herrings have a 4½-year-old daughter, Jan Paula. Her room is between the hall and the living room. Furnishings include a large limed oak chest in a modern style, a hollywood bed and various small desks, chairs and tables.

Jan Paula's closet is her special pride. Papered with pickaninny paper, it has double rods for her clothing—one that she can reach. Besides the closet are 10 built-in drawers for toys. This wall has a green lined staff with ceramic quarter notes in lime, coral and turquoise holding ivy.

Twelve pictures of Jan at various ages decorate the wall over her limed oak bed. Dust ruffle for her bed and draperies for her window are from a circus print. A tweedy beige paper is on the walls. Dimensions are 11 x 11½ feet.

Main Bath Room

The main bathroom, across from Jan's room, is rose and French gray. Rose inlaid linoleum is on the floor and the room is walled in horizontal rose tile board. Light is given by a large glass brick window. A built-in table top clothes hamper is a feature of this room.

The large mirror over the lavatory is lighted on each side by fluorescent tubes. Dimensions of the room are 9 x 7½ feet.

A rose imported Belgian carpet is on the floor of the master bedroom. Dimensions here are 13 x 17 feet.

Furnishings are 18th century mahogany. A framed mirror is over the double Mr. and Mrs. chest. A large, old-fashioned music box atop a cabinet is in this room.

Mother Makes Spreads

Bedspreads were made by his mother. Mrs. Herring made the chintz dust ruffles and draperies and Mr. and Mrs. Herring made the cornices. Venetian blinds on the windows are covered by eggshell nylon marquisette panels.

Wallpaper here combines tones of French gray, eggshell and silver. Headboards to the bed are covered with chintz.

The back yard is a part of the dream as much as the house. It is surrounded by a louvered fence which greatly adds to its privacy. Besides a lawn and rose garden, the Herrings grow other flowers here. Last year they raised 40 gardenias on one bush.

Mrs. Herring is a violinist and both like good music, as does Jan. Jan has already started piano lessons. He also collects stamps.

Associated Press--

The New York organization, privately owned, threatened to have complete control of all news-gathering and to be in a position to force all papers to pay heavy tribute for their news service.

The Western Associated Press led a revolt. It sought and obtained the support of the Southern Associated Press, the New York State Associated Press and kindred groups. Together they formed the modern Associated Press under the laws of the State of Illinois. The plan was for each paper to pay a fair share of the total cost of collecting and distributing the news and for each paper to have a voice in the management of the organization's affairs.

The first president was Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and the first general manager, Melville E. Stone, Lawson's partner. They laid down the rule that the association's news should be written upon verified facts without bias or partisan color. This has become the accepted principle for news writing by all American papers.

In 1900 The Associated Press re-incorporated under New York law. One of the incorporators was the late Col. A. H. Belo of Dallas. In that year the organization had 612 newspapers on its membership list and approximately 30,000 miles of telegraph.

By 1930, after the close of World War I, the association pointed to a membership roll of 1,181 and to a total of 65,000 miles of leased wires for news dissemination. In that decade the automatic high speed teletype printer began to supplant the older Morse telegraph circuits in most cities, increasing the ever quickening pace of news distribution.

The Associated Press continued its growth until now, operating on a budget of more than $1 million monthly. It serves more than 3,900 newspapers and radio stations the world over.

The first AP dispatch to a Texas newspaper trickled in over a tottering telegraph wire shortly before the turn of the century. This abbreviated service continued for more than a decade. In 1910 the first Texas bureau was established in Dallas, and the association's Texas system rapidly expanded to the state's four boundaries.

The Post Dispatch joins more than 80 other Texas newspapers in maintaining the most extensive state service in the association. Bureaus are located in Dallas, Austin and Houston. The personnel is made up of experienced reporters and editors, some drawn from member newspapers.

In addition to the news supplied by the Texas membership and gathered by staff reporters, about 300 correspondents file by telegraph and telephone news of the small communities.

Main trunk wires radiate the United States, touching the larger cities. From bureau points in each state, other news wires connect the smaller cities.

In recent years the development of photography and the perfection of methods by which pictures could be printed made newspaper readers and editors alike picture-conscious.

When Kent Cooper became general manager of the AP in 1925 he saw that pictures had become as much a matter of routine as written words in the field of news.

The Associated Press quickly set up a photo service to collect and distribute news pictures just as the organization had been collecting and distributing news stories. As pictures became more popular newspaper readers wanted to see pictures of news events at the same time they read the written accounts.

The problem was solved in 1932 when The Associated Press began operation of its Wirephoto network and became the first news organization to send news pictures by wire parallel with the news.

As a further function The Associated Press supplies its members with a complete feature service, comprising newsphotos, news feature stories with illustrations, comic strips and news cartoons.

Robert McLean, publisher of The Philadelphia Bulletin, is president of The Associated Press. He succeeded the late Frank B. Noyes, publisher of the Washington Star, who was president for 30 years.

General headquarters of the AP are in The Associated Press Building, Rockefeller Plaza, New York City—the most modern press association plant in the world.

Eugene Worley Asks Truman To Panhandle

WASHINGTON, March 1. (AP)—Rep. Worley (D-Tex.) called on President Truman today and said later he got four things off his chest.

Two of the items of business were extending invitations for the chief executive to visit the Texas Panhandle.

The people there would like to have the President at Shamrock for the annual St. Patrick's Day celebration March 17; folks at Dalhart want him to attend this summer's annual XIT ranch roundup.

Worley then brought Mr. Truman up to date on progress of legislation to authorize an $85,000,000 water shortage and distribution system on the Canadian river in West Texas. The House-passed bill is pending in the Senate.

"And last but not least," smiling added the Texan, "I thanked him for nominating me for a judgeship."

Worley's nomination, which is expected to be confirmed soon by the Senate, is for a place on the U.S. court of customs and patent appeals here in the District of Columbia.

BUSINESS
Thank You....
We'd like to say "thanks to our customers for the nice prescription business we've had this year. We are not inhuman enough to want to see people get sick, so that we might have something to do, but we do appreciate your thoughtfulness in considering us to fill your prescriptions as your Doctor orders. I have had a few night calls lately and people have said to me, "I hated to call you, but we need some medicine." I would just like to say that I will be glad to come down to the store, anytime I am needed, whether it be five o'clock in the morning or one o'clock at night. So don't fail to call me if you have prescriptions to be filled, or any other emergency which arises. I appreciate you bringing prescriptions from other towns back home. I tell you truthfully that I sometimes don't have the preparations called for by the doctor, but I much more often do have it, or can get it within twelve hours. I would also like to say that my wife and I are very glad we came back to our hometown. We're very happy here and the people don't come any better, anywhere."
