

'Sunshine Boys' opens June 6 for two weekends at Garza Theatre

One of Neil Simon's funniest comedies, "The Sunshine Boys," will be presented at the Garza Theatre in Post Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday June 6-9 and June 13-16.

West Texas' own Will McCrary, who is designing and directing the show, is co-starring with area favorite Milton Cox.

The show concerns two popular stage comedians who worked together in the final days of Vaudeville, who years ago abandoned their act because of their complete dislike for each other. In the play, after not having spoken to one another for 12 years, they are brought together again for a laugh-filled confrontation.

McCrary has done the part of 'Al Lewis' several times in theatres around the country in the early 1980s. Movie goers will remember George Burns won an Oscar for the role.

Cox will portray 'Willie Clark', the role Walter Matthau played in the film version. Garza Theatre audiences will remember Cox for his outstanding performance last January as 'Mr Dussel', the dentist, in "The Diary of Anne Frank."

Also in the cast are Lubbock actors David Weaver Jr., Bill Woodard, Mandy Swafford; Lamesa's Ira White and Garza Theatre veteran Troy Timms.

Performances begin promptly at 7:45 p.m. evenings and at 2 p.m. Sundays. Call the Garza Theatre box office at 806-495-4005 for information and reservations. The box office is conveniently open Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Tickets are $7 for adults and $3 for students six to 12 years old.

Texas Family Land Heritage looking for participants

The Texas Department of Agriculture Texas Family Land Heritage Program is seeking participants who are interested in helping preserve their families' agricultural heritage.

The search is on for Texas farms and ranches which have been continuously owned and operated by members of the same family for 100 years or more.

The program is designed to recognize much more than mere ownership. It seeks to chronicle the uniquely personal histories of agricultural productivity in this state, a proud record which might otherwise be lost forever.

Since its institution in 1974, more than 2,500 properties have been enrolled in the program throughout the state.

Participants who qualify in the program receive a certificate of honor in the name of the land.

Under provisions of the program, Texas residents who own agricultural land may apply if they can trace the line of ownership from the first family member to the present either through direct relatives or by marriage.

The land, which must be currently productive, must also fit the old U.S. Census definition of a farm: 10 acres or more with agricultural sales of $50 or more a year; or if less than 10 acres, sales of at least $250 per year.

If all of the land has ever been rented outside the family, it will not qualify.

Also, owners must live on the land and work the property or, if living elsewhere, must actively manage the day-to-day operations.

Texas residents who might qualify may obtain application forms and information by contacting the Garza County Judge's office in the courthouse or by writing the TDA, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, TX 78711.

Two 17 year old youth charged with vandalizing cemetery

Two Garza County 17 year old boys have been charged in district court with desecration of venerated objects following the May 21 vandalizing incident at the Terrace Cemetery.

Garza County Sheriff's deputies arrested the two in the early morning hours, along with a 16 year old male who was driving a pickup truck reported stolen from H&M Dirt Contractors.

The two 17 year old youth are also charged with the burglary of a building following the break-in of La Paloma, located on South Avenue F. They are accused of stealing a wall unit air conditioner and beer.

According to Sheriff Freddy Cockrell, charges have not been filed on the 16 year old youth for lack of evidence concerning the cemetery incident and the owner of the pickup truck has decided to drop the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle charge.

Destruction at the cemetery included the overturning of approximately 40 headstones, vases, broken flower containers and ornaments.

In other action over the Memorial Day weekend, law enforcement officers May 24 arrested a 22 year old man for assault under the family code. He was released following the posting of a $400 bond.

A 31 year old man was arrested May 25 for violation of probation and remains in custody pending a $25,000 bond. His probation was for conviction on a theft charge.

May 26 was a busy day for law officers, beginning with arrests of four men involved in a fight on South Avenue H. They were all charged with disorderly conduct and paid fines of $218 each in the municipal court.

A 37 year old man was arrested by Texas DPS officers for a second D.W.I. offense on the same day. The accused posted a $2,500 bond in county court and was released.

May 27 a 30 year old man was arrested for public intoxication and paid a $217.50 fine in the municipal court and was released.

Stenholm pushes for free trade act with Mexico to help Texas

by Charles W. Stenholm
The potential benefit of an international trade agreement, whether with Canada and Mexico or with the entire free world, is spectacular -- particularly for U.S. agriculture. Unfortunately, negotiations broke down prior to the deadline back in December -- eliminating hopes of working out an agreement that might reduce trade distortions and unfair practices, improve health and safety standards, and increase our ability to compete in the international marketplace.

Recently, however, signs of improved willingness among some countries to move forward has prompted President Bush to authorize an extension of this deadline -- giving our neighbors the same bargaining power already possessed by our foreign counterparts: the ability to assure that the deal they strike at the bargaining table will be the deal that is voted on by Congress. Otherwise, foreign governments will not make tough concessions and give their "bottom line" knowing that the bargain could be reopened.

This so-called "fast track" authority reflects an understanding that the participants in a trade negotiation often have different priorities. Results in one area are generally linked to results in others. Consequently, trade agreements are particularly vulnerable to even small changes that can unravel an entire negotiation. Fast track does not take power away from Congress nor obligate Congress to approve a final agreement; but rather, prevents the possible unraveling of a negotiated package by not allowing all 535

Home Economics

Economic indicators show the United States economy has entered a recession. Some sound financial management steps can help you handle the tight money situations usually brought on by recession.

Don't wait for a job layoff, a health emergency, or an impossible mortgage payment to jog you into action. By adopting a few smart money measures, your finances will be easier to manage if your economic situation worsens and will be good financial policies if your situation stays the same or improves.

 Begin now to organize your financial papers. Select a central location and accumulate family financial information. Record all bank accounts, retirement plans, investments, and other assets. Include the institution where they are held, phone numbers, and contact person if you know a name, account numbers, and amounts. List mortgage information, including financial institution address and phone number, account number, balance, monthly payments, and contact person. Also, record all charge cards. Include the financial institution through which they are held, phone numbers for customer service and account numbers. Write down insurance companies, agents and phone numbers for health, home, life, and auto insurance. Keep a record of social security numbers for all family members. This will all be useful information in time of crisis.

 Analyze your financial situation. Calculate the total amount of cash available to you in case of emergency. Every household needs an emergency fund, preferably equaling three to six months' worth of income. Most households have nowhere near this amount on hand. List any amounts you owe and total them so that you can get a picture of your overall debt situation. Track how much you spend for one month and compare to your income. Note what items could be trimmed down in necessary.

 Lower your debts. Pay off a little at a time, and do not continue to charge. As a general rule, monthly payments other than mortgage should total less than 20 percent of take-home pay. If you are feeling over your head in regard to debts, consider going to a on-charge credit counseling office for assistance.

 Increase your cash on hand. If your family's emergency fund needs beefing up, try to come up with ways you can add to the total. Make a practice of adding any raises, bonuses, overtime pay, or "extra" money directly to the emergency fund.

 Don't worry, be happy. Find ways to entertain yourself and your family that don't cost much.

Farm use of computer spreadsheets to be taught at center in Halfway

A computer spreadsheet software program allows farmers to do basic record keeping, financial planning and budgeting and is something no producer using computers should be without, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

To help farmers use this versatile tool, the Extension Service will conduct a two-day short-course here June 6-7 on the most popular of the spreadsheet programs, Lotus 1-2-3. It will be taught at the new Texas A&M University Computer Training and Education Center at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station facility, 14 miles west of Plainview on U.S. Hwy. 70.

Registration will be limited to 14 to allow hands-on participation. Training is from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day. The fee of $100 includes workshop materials and catered lunches. Motel accommodations are available in Plainview.

"Spreadsheets allow the user to do 'computer programming' without learning a computer language," said Dr. Jackie Smith, Extension Service economist and management specialist, who will conduct the shortcourse. "It lets the user address problems specific to his needs and situation."

Leading computer software spreadsheet programs include Visi Calc, Super Calc, Quattro and Excel, but the all time best seller of such programs in Lotus 1-2-3, Smith said.

"This two-day course will provide an opportunity to learn the basics of building and using spreadsheets with Lotus 1-2-3," Smith said.

Participants will build some crop and cash flow budgets as well as use spreadsheets already built by others. No prior computer experience is necessary.

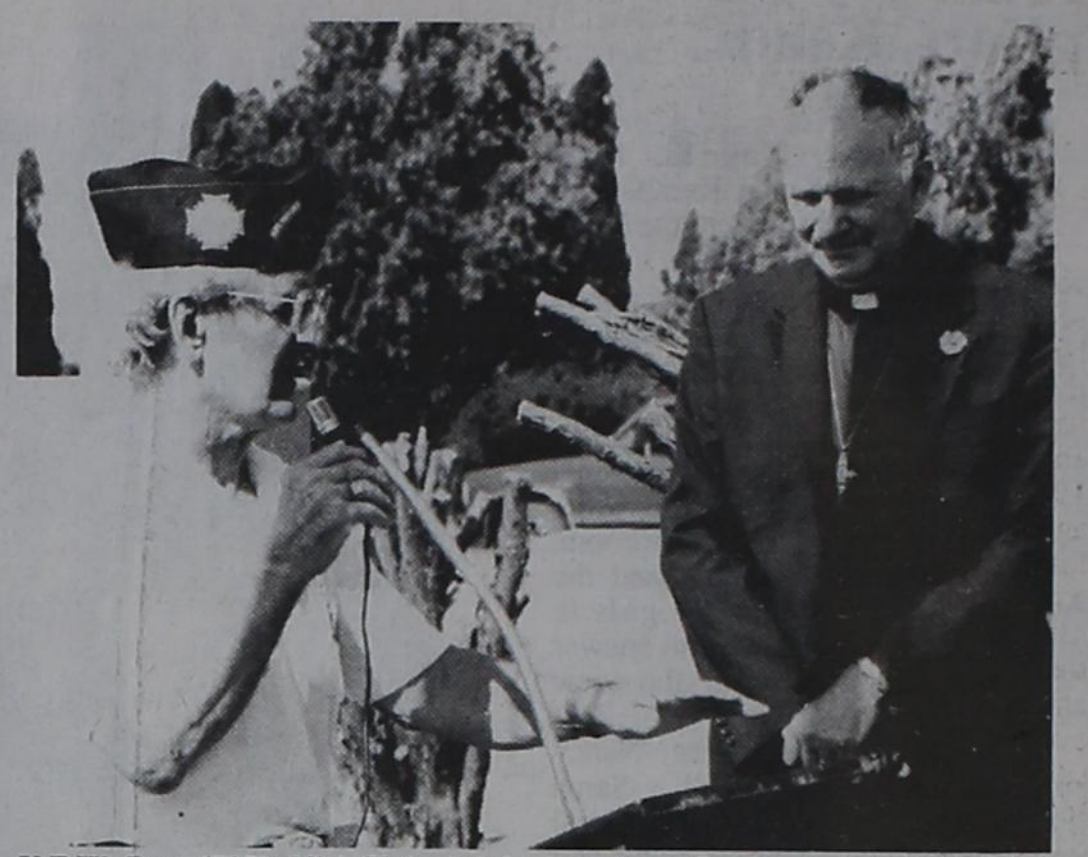

Computer spreadsheets are basically blank computer screens which can be used like a pad, pencil, eraser and calculator, the Extension Service economist explained.

"However, unlike numbers set down on a piece of paper, values set down on the electronic screen can be altered and all dependent values recalculated instantly."

Spreadsheet programs are widely used by farmers to help make decisions, Smith said. Some of the best applications include cash flow budgeting, crop and livestock enterprise budgeting, and farm program analysis.

"The spreadsheet allows the user to quickly evaluate numerous possible outcomes for several different combinations of prices, yields and other factors in a cash flow or crop budget," Smith said.

Additional information about the shortcourse is available from local county extension agents.

There are two names you can trust in evaporative cooling. Arvin's. And ours.

Your new evaporative cooler could save up to 85% of your cooling costs and pay for itself in a year or two.

Unless it only lasts a year or two.

Unless the dealer only lasts a year or two.

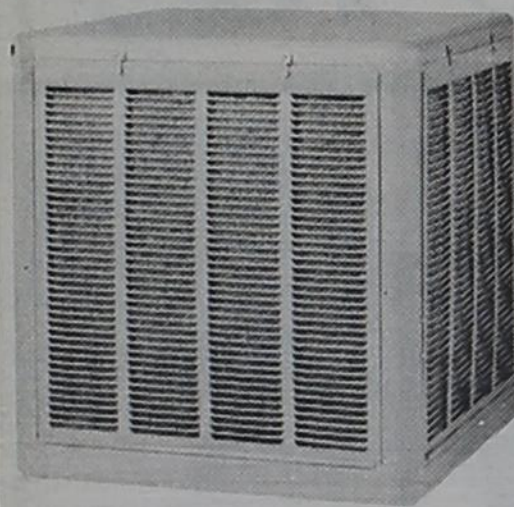

Unless the manufacturer only lasts a year or two.

Consider. Only Arvin offers 50 models to choose from, with stock availability and parts availability for all 50. Only Arvin offers POLY-BOND, an appliance-quality finish that is electrostatically applied to each unit to seal out rust for years of trouble-free service. And only Arvin evaporative coolers have been known for quality, innovation and leadership in the industry for more than 35 years.

As a dealer, we've been offered round coolers, square coolers, fiberglass coolers, even plastic coolers. But through the years, we've stuck with Arvin because their product consistently outlasts and outperforms the competition.

Other coolers may be less expensive than Arvin, but not in the long run. Just ask one of our customers. Or become one.

From the D.A.'s Desk

by Ricky B. Smith, District Attorney
Sale of Cigarettes or Tobacco Products to Minors

Prior to September 1, 1989, it was against the law in Texas to sell, give or trade cigarettes or tobacco products to a minor younger than 16 years of age without the written consent of the child's parents or guardian. On September 1, 1989, this law was both repealed and amended by the 71st Legislature. By law, the repeal and amendment of a statute by the same legislature did not invalidate the amendment. Therefore, the amendment should be valid. However, to further complicate the issue, that same legislature enacted section 161.081 of the Health and Safety Code which reads almost identical to the repealed law as it related to selling cigarettes or tobacco products to minors, retaining the age limit at 16 years and a fine of not less than $10.00 or more than $100.00 for violating the law. The amendment to the old law is substantially different.

The pre-1989 law, as amended provides that a person commits a Class C misdemeanor (this carries a fine of up to $200.00) if the person, as a commercial enterprise, sells or gives or causes to be sold or given a cigarette or other tobacco product to a person he knows is younger than 18 years of age; or sells or gives or causes to be sold or given a cigarette or other tobacco product to any person knowing that the person receiving the cigarette or other tobacco product intends to deliver it to a person younger than 18 years of age. This same law requires you post a sign in a conspicuous location close to your cigarette vending machine which states, "Sale or provision of tobacco products to a minor under 18 years of age is prohibited by law. Upon conviction, a maximum fine of up to $200 may be imposed." If you don't display the sign, you can be fined up to $200.00.

The significant differences in the two laws (which are presumably both in effect) are as follows:

a. The minimum age in one is 16 and the other is 18.

b. One applies to everyone who might sell or give cigarettes or tobacco products to a minor. The other only pertains to commercial enterprises.

c. One makes an exception in the case of parental written consent and the other does not.

d. One makes no mention of signs on vending machines and the other does.

e. The fine is $10 to $100 in one and up to $200.00 in the other.

What should you, as the business owner, do until the legislature cleans up this mess. I believe that you would be safe in following the amendment which establishes the age at 18 and requires the vending machine sign requirement. If you want to be absolutely safe, you could recognize the 16 year age limit.

testing limits of state government

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales Thursday asked hundreds of West Texas county officials to help him test the limits of state government by offering new ideas and new ways of thinking, governing and doing business.

He said the state is faced with major opportunities for progress - equalizing public education funding, relieving pressure on overcrowded jails and prisons and reforming the insurance industry. Morales said these goals must be accomplished without adding to the load carried by local property taxpayers.

"We are going to be working day and night to make state government a catalyst for progress and change," Morales said. "We are going to be asking you to help build a future of productivity, opportunity and hope."

Morales addressed the 62nd annual convention of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association at the Midland Center.

The Attorney General said there is no reason that the insurance industry should not be expected to do business in our state under the same rules that apply to all other industries.

The insurance industry is allowed to meet and fix prices, which would be a violation of anti-trust laws if done by any other industry. The insurers are protected from prosecution by the federal McCarran-Ferguson Act. Repeal of the act is essential to insurance reform, Morales said.

He also said insurance rating organizations have exclusive control over key information required for effective competition and regulation. They structure rates around the least efficient company, which guarantees profits for the worst companies and rewards inefficiency, at the expense of the insurance consumer.

Morales also said he is attempting to remove rules that interfere with the Attorney General's ability to file lawsuits against insurance companies that defraud their customers. Those rules prohibit action by the Attorney General unless written notice is given to the Insurance Commissioner. The State Board of Insurance or the commissioner may then block any action by the Attorney General.

"The Attorney General's Office is not restrained from proceeding against fraud and deception in any other regulated industry," Morales said. "We should be free to vigorously enforce the laws against illegal and unconscionable conduct by insurers, as well."

The insurance industry employed a system of intimidation, boycott and coercion to drive up rates, cut back coverage and create a false insurance crisis in the mid-1980s.

That illegal activity led to a lawsuit by the Attorney General's Office against major components of the industry. Morales said he will aggressively pursue that lawsuit to its conclusion.

On education, Morales said there is cause for alarm.

Texas ranks 38th among the fifty states in median years of education. And, with a graduation rate of just 65 percent, Texas ranks 43rd in the nation. Morales said that each one of those dropout classes costs taxpayers another $17 billion in lost productivity and additional social and criminal justice costs.

"The jobs in highest demand by the turn of the century will require increasingly sophisticated skills," Morales said. "Those who fail to meet those demands will fall through the cracks of our education system and many of them will land in our criminal justice systems."

Morales called for a spirit of cooperation between state and county government. He said a mutual respect and trust is critical if state and county leaders are to turn the challenges into opportunities for change.

Free trade with Mexico...

Members of Congress to offer amendments and make changes in the final deal.

Our Constitution vests the President with the power to negotiate with foreign governments and the Congress with the power to regulate international commerce. Fast track assures that these two powers work in harmony by ensuring heavy congressional input before, during, and after the negotiations.

My vote in favor of extending fast track authority was not a vote on the merits of an international trade agreement; but rather, a vote on the "means" for possibly achieving one in the future. The "means" are neutral; they can producer and "end" which is good or bad -- and we will have an opportunity to vote accordingly. But let us not confuse the "means" with the "end."

The House Agriculture Committee had held hearings surrounding this issue and I have met with U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Secretary of Agriculture Ed Madigan, and have been assured that we in Congress and in the industry will have considerable input throughout this process -- just as we have had since 1974 when Congress created fast track. This authority has governed every major trade negotiation since that time.

Prior to these meetings, however, I joined many of my colleagues in expressing extreme concern surrounding the attitudes and previous comments made by some Administrative officials; which have led many in the agriculture industry to question the value of any agreement. These officials have incorrectly indicated that an agreement would somehow eliminate our right to determine domestic agriculture policy. This understandably puts fear in the hearts of those who conjure up images of massive import surges that will drive our domestic producers out of business. If these types of surges occur, Section 406 of the Trade Act of 1974 provides authority to restrict imports solely on products from a Communist country or countries from which such imports have caused or threatened to cause market disruption.

Our commodity loan program for peanuts, for example, exists to assist the orderly marketing of peanuts during the entire year. Peanut producers are protected from short-term price fluctuations, particularly at harvest time. I have written assurance from our negotiators who "...expect this program to continue even under substantial reform in a GATT agreement. In addition, newly created tariffs and transitional arrangements for import surges would provide protection for the peanut industry."

That's not to say that some of our more protectionist programs may not have to make some adjustments (e.g. some "negotiated" imports) in exchange for some export opportunities and fairer trade -- assuming an agreement is reached. But without fast track authority, the United States is not even a player at the negotiating table and we will lose the opportunity to judge the merits of any final agreement that could emerge. This would put our agricultural sector, and our nation, at a serious disadvantage. By not opposing this "procedure," we have the clear understanding that every effort will be made to ensure that the concerns of U.S. agriculture are fully addressed.

I have strongly expressed many problem areas of our negotiators, among which include their talk of completely eliminating Section 22 protection for peanuts, cotton, dairy and sugar -- leaving these industries vulnerable to unnecessary imports. The U.S. Trade Representative's office has come a long way in addressing these concerns.

As farmers, we are facing considerable adjustments in internal farm subsidies as a result of the 1985 and 1990 Farm Acts and budget legislation. As a producer, I have to look forward the international marketplace as an opportunity to enhance farm income in the future. Without a "successful" GATT agreement this opportunity doesn't exist. A "successful" agreement means that our competitors could no longer stimulate their production with sky-high price supports (sometimes double our levels), close their borders to imports, use unjustified health regulations to keep out the competition, pile up surpluses and then dump it on world markets with big export subsidies, etc. Much of the cost of our farm programs is simply to offset the heavy farm support and unfair practices of other countries.

The purpose of these talks, which have been taking place in one form or another since the 1930's, is to expand market opportunities and work toward fairer trade. Destroying, or even adversely affecting, those programs that have consistently provided this country with the best quantity, the best quality and the safest food supply at the lowest relative cost of any other country in the world would certainly not be a part of this endeavor.

Post ISD trustees approved a $576,419 project to renovate the high school gym and the entire primary building.

It rained a total of 2.80 inches in May 1981. The PTA honored the teachers in all three schools for baking cakes.

Seniors earning scholarships were Kevin Craig, Donna George, Dee Dee Redman, Michael Anthony, Karron Hays, Benny Kennedy, William Morrow, Michael Smith, Luann Kennedy, Josie Samora, Lillian Cendalski and Drew Kirkpatrick. High winds blew over the podium, and the ceremony was moved inside the gym.

Little leaguers making news were Steve Price, Lex Dunn, Jay Claborn, David Clark, Rodney Guthrie, Michael Perez, Lupe Perez, Glenn Hardin, Steve Pena and Marvin Lee.

The official rain measurement had farmers worried as only 1.48 inches had fallen since October 1970. Most of that came May 8 with .79 inches. More than 40,000 acres of cotton were expected to be planted in Garza County. It was a 62 year low for rain.

The graduating class of 1971 had its ceremony moved inside because of threatening weather. Principal James Pollard awarded 57 diplomas with scholarship awards going to Larry Bilberry, Martha Rosas, Robert Pace, Peggy Bevers, Carol Davies and Larry Moreman.

Three Post businessmen were named to the Texas Flight for Understanding to help secure the release of P.O.W.s held in North Vietnam. They were Giles McCrary, J.B. Potts and Bob Collier.

Bad kids from Lubbock in the news concerned three youngsters who were booked here for theft of a large stock of bananas and a case of peaches. It seems they helped themselves on their way through Post early in the morning then ran out of gas just out of town. Deputy Elton Corley stopped to see if they needed help and it only took one phone call to discover if anyone was missing part of a fruit delivery.

Star kid mentioned was Sulinda Little, daughter of Mr and Mrs Nathan Little, who was honored as the 25,000th visitor to the West Texas Museum Planetarium.

Local folks were petitioning the Texas Highway Department to upgrade U.S. Hwy 84. The divided highway stopped a few miles north of town on top of the caprock.

LUBBOCK, Friday, May 24, 1991

Planting is progressing at a fairly steady, albeit slower than usual, pace on the High Plains. Overall dry conditions continue to restrict the number of dryland cotton acres that are able to be planted.

According to PCG, figures indicate that approximately only 15-20 percent of the dryland acreage has been planted while irrigated plantings are 80-85 percent complete. Many area producers are beginning to "dry" plant their non-irrigated acres hoping that enough rain will fall to get the cotton started.

"The lack of adequate rainfall is playing a major part in holding back the 1991 High Plains crop," notes Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG). "We're beginning to receive calls from producers wondering what alternatives they have in the event that the current dry conditions prevent them from planting their dryland acres."

In most counties dryland planting is only averaging in the neighborhood of 20 percent complete. If a substantial rainfall occurs after the end of the recommended planting period late planting could begin. It is not uncommon for planting to continue up to the last week of June in some portions of the southern High Plains.

Optionwise, producers are going to have several choices should the dry conditions persist throughout the planting season. One is to declare the acreage as prevented planted and utilize the newly implemented 0/92 option included in the new farm bill.

Under 0/92 a producer will be eligible for deficiency payments based on the yield history of the farm in question. Unfortunately many of these farms have relatively low yields. The deficiency payment is guaranteed at 10-cents per pound on up to 92 percent of the maximum payment acres on the farm. The 10-cent per pound payment rate will be reduced by the four cent advance payment if the producer has already received it.

Conditions surrounding the 0/92 option could, however, prove unacceptable to many producers. Under 0/92 a farm, or part of a farm, designated as prevented planted must be placed in a conserving use or left fallow for the remainder of the year. No cash crops can be grown if a prevented planting designation is allowed by ASCS. A producer deciding to take the 0/92 option who then receives a good rain and wishes to try and plant will be able to go to ASCS and cancel the prevented planting request.

Another option is open to producers who have federal crop insurance. Under this scenario a producer must plant the crop before the planting deadline set for their county. The producer could then choose to declare the acreage failed if the crop did not come up. A producer would likely be eligible to receive the benefits on the failed acreage and still have the opportunity to plant another crop.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN - A House vote on proposed ethics legislation last week, ramrodded by House Speaker Gib Lewis, has rebel House members and members of the press upset.

Lewis' forces stripped the bill of restrictions on lobbyists, approved a surprise restriction on newspaper and television editorials, and then sidestepped an amendment aimed at the heart of the speaker's power structure.

Floor allies of Lewis, who stands charged with two ethics offenses and is the central figure of an ongoing grand jury ethics probe, termed the new bill strong.

However, government watchdog groups said pro-Lewis House members "pulled the bill's teeth" by removing restrictions which would have shut off the cash flow from lobbyists to lawmakers.

But they installed strong restrictions on press editorials about legislative issues; so strong, in fact that many media officials and lawyers interpret it as a violation of the U.S. Constitution.

List Ad Expenditures

The amendment, by Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, would require newspaper publishers who comment on legislative matters to reveal "conflicts of interest" with advertising clients alongside their editorials.

Lewis' advocates say this amendment will result in disclosure of any conflict of interest behind an editorial stand.

Opponents argue it merely provides the speaker and his allies with a hit list of local businesses whose own interests would come under fire in the House for opposing the speaker.

Throughout this session, Lewis has complained that the press has painted a distorted view of lawmaker-lobbyist ties as well as his own two pending indictments. Critics say he is trying to muzzle the press.

Kubiak Challenges Lewis

Controversy ignited when House members were prevented from voting on the key anti-speaker amendment because the speaker's parliamentarian said he lost the amendment.

State Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, has submitted an amendment to abolish the pledge card system in speaker elections.

Thus, Kubiak became the first House member to challenge the Lewis power structure since freshman Ted Kamel, R-Tyler, voted against Lewis on the first day of the session.

Kubiak said the pledge card system has evolved into a tool which forces lawmakers into two camps, friends and enemies of the speaker, exposing pressures from the speaker's floor lieutenants and lobbyist allies.

No-Pass, No-Play Rule

Observers predict education reformers in the House appear likely to block the Senate's attempt to weaken Texas' no-pass, no-play rule.

After a phone call from Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot last week, Speaker Lewis announced he opposes diluting the rule, which bars students who fail a course from participating in extracurricular activities for six weeks.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, who chairs the House Public Education Committee, said she will try to remove a Senate amendment that reduces the suspension period to three weeks.

Other Legislative Action

A senate panel amended the House tax cut for pari-mutuel horse racing, sending pro- and anti-gambling forces scrambling to rally votes for the floor debate.

The Senate approved without debate a bill that expands the list of crimes for which authorities can get court orders to wiretap a criminal suspect's telephone.

The Senate approved an omnibus sunset bill submitting all state agencies to a review process.

The Senate also approved a measure giving citizens age 21 or older the right to carry concealed handguns if they can prove a need for a permit from the DPS.

The House voted to remove barriers which prevent filing of rape charges involving sexual assault of a spouse.

The House also voted to establish a full state holiday honoring Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and eliminated Columbus Day.

The House advanced legislation to let non-violent felons do manual labor, such as cleaning streets, instead of prison time.
