Soft Water Ration Ups Milk Production Fifty Percent Increase Shown From Experiments. The effects of soft water on milk production of cows was reported at a recent meeting of the Sheboygan County Holstein Breeders association meeting at Plymouth, Wis. Milk production of two test cows increased up to 50 percent when cows were switched from hard water to a soft water ration. One animal, a high production Holstein-Friesian, had never exceeded an 80-pound daily production un-

No. 2,356-827) increased milk flow to 121 pounds, 50 percent greater than her previous high. Previous records show that this same cow produced an average of 55.8 pounds of milk per day for three months following the birth of her first calf in 1946. After the second calf the following year her average was 68.6 pounds, and then the average was 55.7 and 72.1 pounds after the birth of succeeding calves. Thirty days before this cow was to have her fifth calf she was given aerated soft water to drink in place of the 19 grain hard water previously supplied. Her average production jumped to 102.7 pounds for the 90-day period following the calving. The experiment was conducted by E. J. Culligan of Northbrook, Ill.

Marketing Quotas Will Not Be Imposed on Wheat. The announcement of Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan that no marketing quotas will be proclaimed for the 1951 wheat crop is the result of compliance among most wheat growers throughout the wheat area with their 1950 acreage allotments, many wheat growers believe. In making the announcement of no 1951 marketing quotas, Brannan said, "If wheat growers in general plant within their 1951 crop acreage allotments, as they did for the 1950 crop, it may be possible to continue to avoid marketing quotas in the future." The estimated total supply of wheat for the 1950-51 marketing year is 1,395 million bushels, or about 18 percent more than the normal supply of 1,179 million bushels.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Clever Mending Tricks Save Odd Pieces of Material

By Erta Haley

Fabric furnishings don't always wear out together, as most home makers know, and there's always the problem of knowing what to do with those parts which are not completely worn out. Drawers, attics and closets are full of pieces cut from dress-often drapes, bedspreads and other furnishings, but the problem is: just to what use should these be put? Now is a good time to start a project using old materials, not only to give you space for things to be bought this fall and winter, but to renovate some of the furnishings which need mending. It's never wise to make something simply for the sake of putting it together and using it, if the item does not fit into your furnishing scheme. With a little thought and perhaps a little more work, you can make something that actually goes with your home. Take, for example, two old sheets which are torn in the center, but which have good widths of material at their sides that can be used. Instead of using these in their white color, dye them to match or harmonize the color scheme in the bedroom. Put them together with a border or band cut from some old drapes, which might also be dyed if it doesn't work out in its original color; or, buy some band trimming that can be used with the sheeting.

Investigate new uses

The band trimming can be used on each side of the bed with one large width of fabric to cover the bed, and two narrower pieces to fall down the sides. All of these can be attached to the two bands. Extra sheeting material and contrasting band might be used to make a matching pair of drapes or a dressing table skirt, runners for the dresser or a chair cover. The result: new use for old material, new furnishings for the bedroom.

Many Solutions Offered For Worn Tablecloths

Every now and then we acquire a tablecloth which for one reason or another is a particular favorite with us. These are used over and over again, but no matter how much tender care is lavished on them, the best will finally show a worn spot. There's still use in the cloth, however, if the worn spot is near the side or edge, because an applique can be used to cover it. You may buy appliques or cut them from materials with patterns. Some women cut them from flowered print draperies which have no further use, thus taking two worn articles and making one of them useful. Holes in the center of an otherwise good tablecloth can be treated thus: use a white or colored cloth to go with the old tablecloth to give a square center and a border to match the center. Sew or hemstitch this in neatly. Tablecloths which have worn at the edges can have this cut off and be replaced by some contrasting material used as a border. If the napkins to such a cloth have been lost, make napkins to match the border, and you'll have a practically brand new tablecloth and napkin set.

Cloths which are worn in too many places can be cut down for doilies or table runners. Old lace is put to good use as an edging, as are other materials for contrasting borders on the doilies and napkins. Many inexpensive edgings are available, too, for use as a trimming on these doilies if you have nothing to press into use. Old Curtains, Towels Can Give More Service Old sheer curtains which are torn in many places may offer several possibilities. If they have ruffling which is torn in a few places only, rip this off the curtain and put together the good pieces of ruffling. These may be used for trimming a dressing table skirt or to give a frame to several pictures used in the bedroom. Women who do not like curtained windows during warm weather find an ideal solution in the narrow ruffle placed around the window for framing. This permits light and air to come into the room and still gives a curtained appearance in place of the bare look. Old ruffles saved from curtains, neatly starched and ironed, are excellent for this use. Sheer curtains which are torn beyond repair can be folded several times, then stitched and used as a filler for pot holders. Large beach towels which are torn or frayed but which have enough serviceable material in them might be used to make youngsters' robes for beach or indoor wear as they are cool but lightweight. If you have no robes to make, cut down the large bath towels into hand size, sew simple hems in them, and use in both kitchen and bath. Smaller sized towels can be cut down to wash cloth size and simply hemmed or crocheted at the edge for many month's usage. Colorful edging on kitchen towels, which will only infrequently wear, can be trimmed off to be used as a decorative edging for table linens, casual skirts, blouses or curtains. When cutting these off, trim enough of the material on either side of the border to fold under to give a finished edge. Miscellaneous Materials Offer Various Uses There's many an attic or clothes closet which houses several old formal or bridesmaids' dresses. They'll never be used as clothing but they can be put to useful work. If you need some decorative pillows for living room, porch or bedroom, you might check into the possibilities of making them out of some of these colorful fabrics. If the color does not go into the room in which you want to use it, then you might investigate colors into which it can be dyed or tinted. Some of the satin dresses with their elaborate ruffles might well be used for lampshades. This requires careful work, but the results can be beautiful. Colorful chintz materials which have been drapes can also be used as pillow coverings. If you'd like to use some of these as drapes or a spread, then add enough solid color as a decorative border to make them the proper size. Old oilcloth table covers can be converted to seat covers for porch, kitchen or playroom. They are occasionally put to good use as liners for shelves or drawers in youngsters' rooms when you want something easy to clean and durable. Old oilcloth is fine, too, for making a clothes pin apron or bag which can slide along the line as you hang the clothing. Clean and Dye Fabrics Before Cutting, Sewing If you want to enjoy your job of making new things out of old as greatly as possible, then do your cleaning, dyeing and tinting before starting the new project. Working with new colors, or, at least, freshly cleaned or laundered materials is more satisfactory than trying to cut and sew accurately from slightly dusty or wrinkled materials.

Many Perfect Marriages Exist

AT LEAST 300 WOMEN have written me in answer to an article of mine on the "perfect wife," that they were the lucky companions of perfect husbands. Most of them admitted that—well, he wasn't exactly perfect to start with, but after the first year or two, when two young experienced persons had settled down to a certain amount of consideration and compromise, and appreciation of the fun of being together, then suddenly he began to take the first steps toward being perfect, and perhaps discovered in his turn that the wife he had was pretty near perfect, too. That's the way of it. Silence, patience, confidence, compromise work their inevitable miracle. Letter after letter on this subject of the perfect mate begins with the story of early failure. "We stuck together because we couldn't do anything else," writes one woman. Harry wasn't making any money regularly. When Shirley was two and another baby coming, he deserted me. The police found him, when I was in the city and county hospital with Beverly Ann; Harry came to see me, and he cried and I cried and we started all over, only with more didies and cribs and bottles added to the dishes and dust and beds I thought I couldn't handle before.

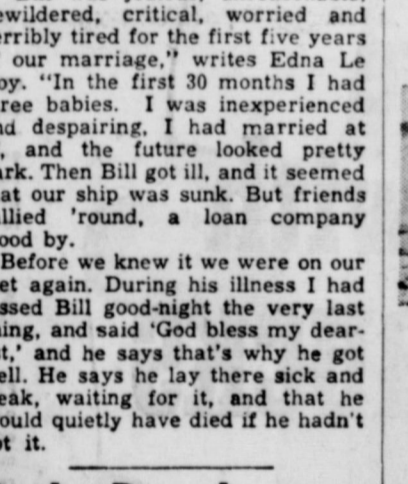

"Manny came back, and dined as an old friend with one of the most harmonious and devoted families in all America. We tore up the compact and now when we speak of it we laugh. And I have the perfect husband." Altogether, this report on perfect marriages has been very heartening to me. There are lots of them. A great many women tell me that playing fair with finances is one great secret; Dad being generous with mother, Mother not cheating Dad. Being able to maintain silence in domestic crisis is another clue. Letting Dad share the responsibility of the children is an important thing; if Mother stands between them and their father, fights their battles, sacrifices her own pocket money for them, tells lies to protect them, a man begins to feel that he does not count at all, and he wonders why on earth he's supporting this crowd of self-absorbed persons. God gave children two parents: not one all-wise parent and one completely unconcerned supporter. The father counts as much as the mother. But the supreme secret of all these letters about perfect marriage is contained in a sentence from a wife in Springfield, Ohio. "Bill was jealous, unreasonable, bewildered, critical, worried and terribly tired for the first five years of our marriage," writes Edna LeRoy. "In the first 30 months I had three babies. I was inexperienced and despairing. I had married at 17, and the future looked pretty dark. Then Bill got ill, and it seemed that our ship was sunk. But friends rallied 'round, a loan company stood by. Before we knew it we were on our feet again. During his illness I had kissed Bill good-night the very last thing, and said 'God bless my dearest,' and he says that's why he got well. He says he lay there sick and weak, waiting for it, and that he would quietly have died if he hadn't got it.

Had Long Talk "Aren't we funny! We had a long talk, and moved into an establishment that was composed of a large room, a glassed porch with two gas-burners and a hopper with a faucet, and a porch closet. And were we happy! Now it's six rooms, front garden, back garden, washing machine, twin boys, radio, refrigerator and car—and now we're keeping our twelfth anniversary! And we'll write you again on our silver wedding."

That's the story, right straight through. Not marrying happiness, but making happiness out of marriage. The writer of this last letter certainly had pretty poor materials with which to work, but she made it. "When we had been married 15 months," writes another woman, "we were so completely uncongenial and miserable that we made a compact. I was to be as good a wife as I possibly could to Greg, until Manny, the man I really loved came back from war service. I had loved this second man all through high school and business college, but we had quarrelled, and I had married Greg in anger and resentment at Manny. This was in 1942, and Manny didn't come back until 1946. So for four years Greg and I worked at making a temporary arrangement satisfactory. We had two children; I wanted children, and our compact included the disposition of any we might have; school terms with me, Christmas and long vacation with Greg's mother. The Perfect Husband "Of course, you know how it turned out," this letter concludes.

Landing In a surprise move the First Cavalry Division of the U. S. Army made a beachhead landing near Pohang on the east coast of Korea. The landing was made without casualties or opposition.

SENATOR TAFT: Pay as We Go Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, who has preached economy and a balanced budget to the Democratic administration for years, caused a mild wave of shock among many legislators when he proposed slapping taxes on everybody immediately to pay for the Korean war. The senator said the Russian threat is clamping a "semi-military" condition on the U. S. at a "permanent" extra cost of $10 to $20 billion a year. "Since this is not a temporary condition but one that may continue indefinitely, we should tax the people for the whole cost," said Taft. He observed the condition may last "perhaps 10 or 15 years." Many observers believe that pressure is building up on congress for quick and drastic tax boosts to carry the defense load.

Baths Popular With Ancients Grecians, Romans Had Luxurious Facilities

THOSE STORIED "footprints in the sands of time" probably led to the local waterhole or mineral spring. We are merely following in those same footprints when we immerse ourselves in water—whether for sport, for relief from the heat, for medical treatment, or for cleanliness. While in many things we can count ourselves much more advanced than the ancients of Greece and Rome, we are not far ahead of them in bath equipment and facilities. Bubbling baths, and "swimmin' hole" baths all figured in their scheme of living — and on a lavish scale. The medicinal qualities of water have been stressed down through the ages, and in the 1600's it was not unusual to stay chin-high in water for as long as 124 hours at a stretch. Today the Spa, or health bathing resort, is extremely popular on the continent, and is favored to a lesser degree in America. We have just as many kinds of natural waters for the treatment of disease, but our forte has been the advancement of the swimming pool and of indoor bath facilities.

FOOD SUPPLY: More Than Enough

As prices continued to climb, the government began a campaign of telling the American people there is more than enough food in this country and that hoarding is selfish and unnecessary. President Truman stressed that point in a recent speech and the department of agriculture repeated it with a statement that the nation's food supply is so plentiful that price increases are unwarranted. The department's report stated flatly that with high production prospects and large storage stocks, supplies of food for civilians in this country are expected to continue at the same high level as in past years. "There has apparently been some speculative buying and price increases in food in recent weeks substantially similar to those occurring in 1939, which receded as soon as consumers realized that food supplies are adequate," the report said. But the increases in prices, despite the report, caused a number of repercussions on the home front. An immediate investigation into supply, demand and cost was indicated by some government sources. American housewives added their voice to the turmoil. More than one retailer found his displays ignored and demands for price controls and even rationing were being heard in some quarters. The government reported commodities on which stocks were high included dairy products, eggs, poultry and potatoes. Fruits and vegetables were termed ample. Total meat output in 1950 probably will be slightly larger than last year, the report said. Many believe any campaign the government might launch for voluntary rationing is doomed to failure.

Hook and Eye When you fit a hook and eye on a screen door, do you put the eye in the frame and the hook on the door? That's not the best way. The hook rattles every time the door is closed. It wears a half-moon mark on the door. When the door is slammed, it may flip over and lock you out. The solution: simply reverse hook and eye.

Jealous? Don't Lose Your Temper

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

Does Jealousy Justify a Husband in Mistreating His Wife?

A young housewife sued for divorce, listing many examples of "cruel and inhuman treatment" by her husband. In his defense, the husband said: "Perhaps I have done wrong, but it's only because of jealousy. I'm jealous of my wife's friendship with her night-school teacher." However, further evidence showed that (1) the teacher's interest in the young woman was "just fatherly"; and (2) he was 74 years old! Under the circumstances the court ruled out the husband's excuse and granted the wife her freedom. His Honor felt that jealousy especially based on flimsy grounds, was no justification for the husband's misbehavior.

May You Glance At a Movie Poster While Driving a Car?

A young man, out for a ride, decided to look around for a good movie. As he neared a theater, the youth slowed down a bit and looked at the posters. Unfortunately, another car stopped just ahead of him—to get into a parking place—and there was a collision. The occupant of the front car was injured, and sued the young man for damages. At the trial, the latter pleaded: "I wasn't going fast, and besides I looked aside for just a moment. How could I foresee that the car ahead was going to stop?" But the court held the youth liable for the mishap. The judge said that, even while moving slowly, looking at a movie poster instead of the road ahead was "gross negligence."

Is a Store Liable If a Customer's Finger is Pinched in a Swinging Door?

A man walked up to a cigar store, just as the swinging door was coming back fast from inside. Instinctively he put out his hand to protect himself, but he only succeeded in getting his fingers pinched between the edge of the door and the frame. Painfully injured, the man filed a damage suit against the owner of the store. He based his claim on the ground that this kind of a door was a constant source of danger to all who entered the premises. But the court granted him nothing. The judge figured that swinging doors are such a common phenomenon nowadays that shoppers ought to be able to get through them safely.

War to Have Strong Influence on Markets

L. H. Simerl of the University of Illinois predicts unsettled markets during the months ahead. He gives four reasons:
 First, the all-important corn crop is made largely during July and August. Yield depends mainly on rainfall and borer damage.
 Second, military operations always have a strong influence on market activities.
 Third, needs for price control and rationing will be discussed by the public and probably debated in congress.
 Fourth, even before recent international developments, many people had little confidence in prevailing price levels. Now most people are even more uncertain about probable price behavior.

Margarine Tax

Repeal of taxes on colored margarine July 1 is expected to increase consumption of that product. Whether this will decrease butter consumption still is unknown. Most of the increase in margarine consumption between 1942 and 1948 was the result of more families using it rather than an increased consumption per family.

Bruising Causes Great Meat Waste
Packing Industry Loss $25,000,000 Last Year

America's livestock industry lost $31,914,677 in dead, bruised and crippled animals in 1949. Meat waste due solely to bruising, much of which could be prevented by greater care in handling of livestock on the farm and in transit, was more than $25,000,000.

These figures were disclosed by the National Live Stock Loss Prevention Board, an organization founded to promote better care and handling of livestock.

In 1949 the animals dead on arrival at the nation's stock yards would have filled a train 10 1/2 miles

HERE'S THE ALL-PURPOSE CULTIVATOR
 FOR PRACTICALLY EVERY TILLAGE JOB

The all-around usefulness of the John Deere Tool-Bar Cultivator makes it a cultivator that soon proves its worth on every farm.

Equipped with broad, flat, sub-surface sweeps, it's all set to do a good job of sub-surface tilling, under-cutting surface growth and killing weeds, yet scarcely disturbing erosion-controlling surface trash.

With the double-coil spring teeth and shovels, the John Deere becomes a heavy-duty field cultivator for many jobs. Add beams and lister bottoms and it becomes a lister for blank listing. With the planting attachment, it lists up to four rows. With the disk gang attachment, the John Deere is ideal for throwing up beds for melons, tomatoes and other such crops.

When you consider its broad usefulness, its quality construction, and other outstanding features, you'll agree—the John Deere is a cultivator you can't afford to be without. See us for complete details the next time you're in town.

American livestock producers lost more than $25,000 in 1949 because of waste meat resulting from bruised animals. Pictured above is the carcass of a hog which was condemned because of bruises.

Meat waste from dead animals amounted to 14,310,468 pounds, with a value of $4,472,871. Losses resulting from bruises and crippled animals accounted for the remainder.

In order to combat this loss, educational programs have been inaugurated by the government, agricultural colleges and meat packers, pointing to the bruise and injury losses which are revealed when animals are dressed in the packing plants.

Many terminal markets have developed comprehensive livestock safety programs. These programs urge greater care in the handling of livestock from the time they leave the farm until they are marketed.

Practical Farmers Anticipate Science
 Many Fed Milk Product Long Before Vitamin B12

Practical dirt farmers, with little knowledge of nutritional theories, may prove to have again anticipated the latest findings of research scientists who have been turning their attention to hog and poultry rations.

About a year ago, when discovery of the growth promoting vitamin B12 created a stir in feed and farm circles, many farm editors were quick to point out that practical farmers who fed milk and milk products to hogs and poultry had actually anticipated the scientists' discovery.

Many practical dirt farmers in the United States fed skim milk and milk products long before they ever heard of vitamin B12. Above a farmer feeds skim milk.

Because, after the new vitamin was first isolated from liver extracts, it was found that milk and milk-by-products, like skim milk and buttermilk, are particularly good natural sources of this growth vitamin. Generations of farmers, who had never heard of vitamin B12, had taken advantage of its growth promoting values when they fed milk and milk products.

Now research scientists have been testing the effect of "wonder drugs" in animal feeding. They have reported startling growth gains when streptomycin and aureomycin are added to hog and poultry rations. There are indications that farm editors have another opportunity to point out that practical farmers anticipated the scientists in this case too.

Not that there is any indication that milk or milk-by-products actually contain these wonder drugs, but it appears that to some extent, they have a similar effect.

Learn, Obey Farm Safety Rules, NFSW Theme

The background for National Farm Safety Week, to be observed July 23 to 29, is a picture blacker than it needs be. It includes an annual 17,500 fatalities from accidents, and 1,500,000 disabling injuries. Also about 35,000 buildings are destroyed by fire. The annual loss, much of it preventable, is estimated at about one billion dollars. "Learn and Obey Farm Safety Rules" is the theme.

Princess' Husband Climbing Ladder

Princess Elizabeth's husband has started out to work himself to the top of the ladder. Prince Philip won his first command in the British navy recently. The admiralty announced the tall, handsome Philip would take charge of the anti-aircraft frigate Magpie in August. Court circles predicted also that at about the same time he would be upped from lieutenant to lieutenant commander. Philip, 29 next month, now is first lieutenant of the destroyer Chequers, based at Malta. He returned to active Naval duty last fall. The 1,430-ton Magpie is manned by six officers and 186 men. She mounts four six-inch guns, eight two-pounders and several pom-pom anti-aircraft pieces.

WELLS CLUB NEWS

The Wells H. D. Club met in the home of Mrs. Nola Bolch Aug. 1st but later went to Mrs. L. J. Barnett's for the program. The program was biscuits from a cut mix prepared and cooked by a leader and then scored by other members. Other baked goods were exhibited and scored in the home of Mrs. Ellis Barnes at an earlier meeting. The next regular meeting will be in the home of Mrs. T. E. Barton Sept. 5th with Miss Graham Hard giving the demonstration on identification control of diseases of shrubs. — Reporter

Farm animals get most of their vitamin A requirements from carotene which is found in green range or pasture grasses and hay or other forage. The carotene is changed to vitamin A within the body of the animal. Both carotene and vitamin are stored in the liver of the animal.
