

LEGION ENTERTAINS LADIES WITH HARD TACK PARTY

One of the most hilarious social events of the season was held last Thursday evening in the I. O. O. F. hall when members of the Fern Allen Post of the American Legion entertained the Ladies' Auxiliary with a 'hardtack' party.

When the invitations to the occasion were issued several days ago, the ladies were somewhat mystified as to the nature of such a party, but they were bade to 'just wait and see'. No other course being open to them, that's what they did, and they one and all heartily agree that it was worth waiting for.

After spending some time in playing bridge and forty-two, guests were told to fall in line, and were served with real army rations of slumgullion, rice cooker, wild game, hardtack, and coffee. W. C. Sauls presided over the cooking department, and the result of his efforts were entirely successful, according to those who partook.

The ladies are of the opinion that the soldiers have lost none of their ability to entertain.

REPORT SHOWS COUNTY READY WITH ASSISTANCE

The following report received recently from Mrs. W. D. Neveis, county chairman of Red Cross relief, shows that Lynn county did not fall in offering assistance to its own during the recent period of distress.

A letter accompanying the report says in part: "Taboka, Texas, Chairman Red Cross Relief, Lynn County Chapter, Auxiliary. The attached is a report of the Lynn County Chapter only."

This goes to show what people can do when they don't see how they can get by themselves. I want to thank you, and everyone that helped in this relief program. Don't forget the Red Cross Jubilee, for Lynn County Chapter May 21st. We are expecting a great time.

Tell everyone that you see, don't want anyone to miss this. Will have out statement of National Red Cross Relief program as soon as all work is finished.

Yours respectfully, MRS. W. D. NEVEIS, Chairman.

American National Red Cross Lynn County Chapter, Taboka, Texas

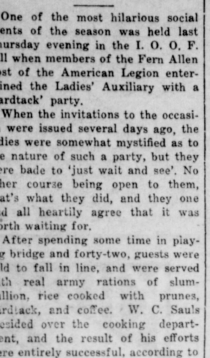

Following is a separate report of the three auxiliaries making up the Lynn County Chapter of the American National Red Cross. The report shows the receipts and expenditures of each organization. It includes only what the county and each community has done, does not include the aid given by the national organization.

Tahoka had as donations, $845.40. Expenditures were as follows: Clothing $371.60; food $168.80; household goods, $40.00; miscellaneous expense, $200.00—total expense, $780.40; cash balance $65.00.

O'Donnell received donations for a sum of $11,100.00. Expenditures by the auxiliary were: Clothing $635.00; household goods, $50.00; food, $256.11; $40.00; or a total expenditure of $981.11 and a cash balance of $118.89.

The Wilson auxiliary received donations; $281.51 and had as expenses the following amounts: clothing, $122.50; food, $123.47; medical aid, $2.80; miscellaneous expense, $32.79 or expenditures totaling $281.56 or the expenditures in an amount equal to the full amount of their donations.

The Eagles' Screams

With this issue of the Index, the Eagles' Screams will be silent until next September. Examinations are the sole and entire source of conversation and interest in the halls this week, and teachers and students alike are scurrying up and down stairs with harassed expressions, the teachers wondering how they'll ever grade all those stacks of papers by the end of the week, and the pupils busily engaged in parsing, spelling, bounding the various states, putting those squares on that same old hypotenuse—oh, why go on? Every reader of the Index either is having reminiscent twinges or is going through the throes of final exams along with their offspring. Suffice it to say that THIS IS EXAM WEEK, and everybody is busy.

Seniors Complete Plans

Having already gone through the trial by pen and paper, members of the Senior Class are putting in the week perfecting themselves in the most dignified angle to wear their caps, and just how slowly to pass down the aisle. The final act in their high school drama will take place Friday evening when they receive their diplomas.

Dr. A. B. Cunningham, head of the English department of Texas Technological College, will deliver the address of the evening. Miss Oleta Moore is the honor graduate of the class, and will deliver the valedictory address. Miss Wilma McMurtry will deliver the salutatory.

Editor's Note

We could not permit this school year come to a close precipitately to the high school and grammar school reporters for co-operation in the weekly Eagles' Screams. Especially do we wish to thank Misses Alice Busby, high school editor, and Jim Ellen Wells, grammar school reporter-in-chief for their efforts. We know our large family of readers has enjoyed the news collected by these young ladies, and we assure them that it has been a pleasure to work with them.

Miss Merle Miles will be grammar school reporter next year, and we are looking forward to working with her. High school editor has not yet been named.

MOTHERS ENTERTAINED WITH PROGRAM TUESDAY

Members of the World Friendship Club were hosts Tuesday afternoon to their mothers when they entertained with a program and social hour at the Methodist church.

As the guests entered, they were greeted with the pleasant sight of a punch bowl over which Misses Evalene Kirkland and Gwendolyn Hodges presided with all due dignity and grace. After being served with punch, the guests were escorted to their places by ushers R. O. Burdett and Charles Kirkland.

After the welcome address and devotional, the following program was rendered: Reading, "The One I Love Best—My Mother"; Frances Barrow; songs by club members; story, Frances Foster; presentation of Mothers' Day greetings; piano solo, How Shook; "What Our World Friendship Club Has Meant to Me", Anna Belle Estes.

POOR LITTLE WILD FLOWERS

GUY BRADLEY AFFLICTED WITH PECULIAR AILMENT

Mrs. Bradley and friends of Guy Bradley are seriously alarmed this week at manifestations of a most peculiar nature which apparently indicate a serious ailment, either mentally or physically, on the part of the popular gin man and Legion post commander.

These symptoms have taken the form of a desire to climb around on ladders and wild paint brushes, with a preference for light orange paint and an urgent need for gallons of oil in which to soak brushes when not in use.

All joking aside, and approaching the matter with all the gravity which it deserves, Mr. Bradley has undertaken the monumental task of painting (or, at someone's expense, smearing) the McDonald-Ely gin. And he has undertaken it alone and single-handed. Just how much experience he has had, or just what the results of his courage will be will remain to be seen, but we take off our hats, individually and collectively, for his enterprise and "up-and-at-'em" spirit.

But we sincerely hope that nobody else is planning to use any orange paint this summer, for Guy has a corner on the local market.

O'DONNELL PEOPLE IN HOSPITAL IMPROVING

With the return of Miss Grace Harville to her home Monday of this week, O'Donnell's hospital list seems to be improving. C. J. Beach, who recently underwent an appendicitis operation was brought home Tuesday, and both he and Miss Harville are reported to be convalescing quite according to expectations.

Mrs. John Berry of Draw, sister of Mr. Beach, was operated Monday for a series of complications, but is reported to be doing well. Mrs. W. W. Williams, who was taken to the hospital early in the week, is still seriously ill. It was first supposed that she was suffering from meningitis, but according to our latest word, the doctors there have not yet agreed on a diagnosis.

MRS. GIBSON'S FATHER SERIOUSLY ILL

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gibson were summoned to Santa Anna Friday evening by news that her father, F. N. May, was not expected to live more than a few hours. Mr. May has been afflicted with heart trouble for many years.

However, as we go to press, he is still holding his own, with a chance to be up again. The many friends of Mrs. Gibson are anxiously waiting for news, and hoping that it may be favorable.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT NEAR FIVE HUNDRED MARK

According to statistics read this week by Supt. D. A. Edwards, the total enrollment of the O'Donnell Public Schools for the 1930-31 term has been 482. 159 of these have enrolled in high school, 323 in the grammar school.

Quite a number of these students, especially in the high school, have transferred from outlying rural schools, and they have, for the most part, done splendid work. In spite of financial difficulties encountered through the year, it is felt that this has been a successful term.

YANDELL TAKES CHARGE OF CORNER STATION

T. A. Wimberly, Monday, sold the Corner Filing station to Buddo Yandell, who took charge immediately. Mr. Wimberly has not yet announced his plans, but it is hoped that he will remain in O'Donnell.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT WELLS THURSDAY

Next Thursday evening, May 21, commencement exercises for the Wells graduating class will be conducted in the auditorium at that place, the program beginning at 8 o'clock. This year's is the smallest class in the history of the school, there being only six graduates. However, the class wishes to remind the public that the best things come in the smallest packages.

The following numbers will comprise the program: Processional, Miss Eunice Little; song, "Onward Christian Soldiers"; audience; invocation, W. M. Smith; Address, R. E. Key; Salutatory, Kenneth Askew; class pedigree, Ruth Rozelle; prophesy, Clifton Wood; will, Ruby Trippe; class song; by graduates; valedictory, Allene Goddings; presentation of diplomas, Lamar McLaughlin; "America, The Beautiful"; audience; benediction, D. J. Bolch.

GIBSON FAMILY REUNION HELD HERE SUNDAY

A reunion of the family of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Gibson was held at the family home here Sunday, all the children being home for Mothers' Day. Mr. Roy Gibson, who was unavoidably absent, was the only one of the children not present.

Out-of-town guests for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lawhan of Miles, Mrs. Ome Brewer of Ft. Worth, and Mrs. Marvin Shook of Los Angeles, Cal.

CITY DADS MAKE RAISE—STREETS TO BE WORKED

When it comes to downright good management, O'Donnell's city dads have the world beat. Somewhere, somehow, they found a surplus of that comparatively unknown quantity—coin of the realm—and within the next few days or week or maybe months, (when the equipment can be put into shape) the streets, avenues, and boulevards of our fair city will receive a 'working over'.

Of course, they don't need it, but the dads thought that, since they might come to that point within the next year or two, the money might as well be spent now, and the city fathers are feeling a few touches of sadness at the prospect of losing some of our local scenery, and some of the garage men are lamenting the prospective decrease in spring repair business, but for the most part the citizens are bearing up under the shock as well as could be expected.

ROY WILKES PUTTING IN BUSY WEEK

Roy Wilkes is just about the most important man on the South Plains this week, being chief cook and bottle washer and manager of the West Texas Gas Company here, at Lamesa, Tahoka, and Wilson.

A. G. Barnes, Lamesa manager, was operated on Saturday, so the main office sent in a hurry call to Mr. Wilkes to take over that end of the line. The Tahoka manager, who also has charge of the company's business in Wilson, is enjoying a well-earned vacation, and Mr. Wilkes is pinching-hit for him also.

The Index hereby moves that he be elected to take the place of the proverbial Irish bird that flew to two places at once. That bird didn't begin to rate in Roy's class—his in four places at once.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES WELL ATTENDED SUNDAY

Formally opening commencement week, baccalaureate services for the class of 1931 were conducted Sunday in the high school auditorium in the presence of hundreds of friends and relatives. Not a vacant seat remained when the services began, and many were forced to stand in the rear of the building.

Anthems had been arranged by a special choir directed by Mrs. T. M. Garner. Mrs. W. H. Ritzenthaler accompanied at the piano for the occasion, and also played the processional and recessional.

Rev. Deans, pastor of the Methodist church at Meadow, preached an impressive and inspiring sermon to the graduates, paying eloquent tribute to the mothers during the course of the address.

Announcement

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Fern Allen post of the American Legion will meet in the I. O. O. F. hall Wednesday, May 20, at four o'clock, to begin the Fidac study on Czechoslovakia. All members are requested to be present.

CLASS DINNER HELD SUNDAY AT JENKINS' HOME

The class dinner, which has come to be an annual event of commencement week, was held last Sunday at the home of Rev. and Mrs. L. S. Jenkins. Members of the 1931 graduating class, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Scott, Supt. and Mrs. D. A. Edwards, Rev. and Mrs. Dennison of Meadow, and Rev. L. S. Jenkins were guests. Two long tables were arranged in the reception room, and were tastefully decorated with phlox and bridal wreath, presenting a festive and spring-like appearance. No formal program had been arranged, but several impromptu toasts and speeches added spice to the occasion, and the seniors left the dining room declaring that no class has ever had a more enjoyable class dinner. The appreciation of each individual member and of the class as a whole is extended to Rev. and Mrs. Jenkins for their hospitality.

CELEBRATES FOURTH BIRTHDAY FRIDAY PARTY

Entertaining with a May Day party at the home of her grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Yeazey, little Miss Jo Anna Carroll, celebrated her last Friday afternoon to a number of friends, the occasion being the celebration of her fourth birthday. Cat flowers in pastel shades were used in decorating the living room where, due to inclement weather, all games were played. Misses J. Verma Street, Frances Foster, and Norma Ruth Vermillion directed the games after all dainty gifts had been admired, and the juvenile guests thoroughly enjoyed the program the young ladies had arranged. Closing the afternoon, the birthday cake, decorated with a Maypole around which danced a tiny kewpie for each guest, and with four green candles as well, was served with ice cream waffles to the following guests: Shirley Maie Coin, Billy Jane and Margaret Lucille Johnson, Joe and Wayne Carroll, Aubra Lee Shook, Terry Edwards, Lena Mae Singleton, Norma Joy and Perry Hubbard, Claude Tomlinson, Jr., Norma Faye Fairley, Wilda Gene Campbell, Norma Ruth Vermillion, Frances Foster, and J. Verma Street.

ONCE BRIDE HAD TO BE BOUGHT, DIVORCE UNKNOWN

There is nothing at all original about getting married. Most of the customs that are observed started so long ago that they are as permanently established as the Constitution of the United States or the Rock of Gibraltar.

In fact, in order to have a modern wedding a bride must have an old-fashioned one.

The wedding ring didn't develop because an ambitious jeweler decided that it would swell his trade. It started long ago, when there wasn't a jewelry shop on the face of the earth. Men decided that when they chose the maidens whom they wanted there should be some way to impress upon the feminine minds that henceforth and forever they were theirs. The men started to weave cords which they bound around the girls' waists, according to tradition. Both the girl and the man believed that the girl's spirit entered the man's body when the knot was tied. The word "divorce" was known as artichokes or when so when the cord was cut belonged to her husband.

Miss Effie Vaughn spent her end in O'Donnell.

CHAPTER XV

A Job Finished

Bennie proudly led the homeward party. Unaware of a rod in his hand for him, he wanted to be the first to reach the ranch with the story of his adventure. That two lovers agreed he had to be his own undertaker.

The strain of peril relaxed, Barbara had to fight against a wave of faintness. She caught at the saddle horn with both hands to steady herself.

"I think you saved my life," O'Hara said in a voice unsteady with emotion. "I couldn't lift a finger to help myself, but with Bennie sitting in front of him, and if Bennie hadn't been there it wouldn't have done any good for me to try."

"I thought—I was afraid—" she murmured.

"He couldn't stand out against what you said. There's a human streak in him. And he likes children. When you spoke about the baby—"

"I didn't know what I was saying. I was sick with fear." A shiver of unrelieved dread ran down her spine. "I'll never forget what you said," she told her; then flung at her the question in his mind: "Are we going to be married, Barbara?"

"Are we?" she echoed, her voice hoarse.

With a sudden jubilant singing of his blood he knew they were. "We are," he cried.

Bennie was fifty yards ahead of him when they reached the creek. He put his pony to a canter as he passed the slope.

O'Hara slipped from the saddle at the edge of the willows and caught the side rein of Barbara's horse.

"I'll have to hurry if we're going to save Benny from a spanking," she protested, rather faintly.

"Bennie will have to take his chance," he said with decision. "He looks that paddling, anyhow. Get on."

"You're very masterful, aren't you?" she said, her eyes both tender and looking. But, obediently, she dismounted and found herself in his arms.

A happy little laugh welled from her throat as her eyes turned to his.

It was fifteen minutes later that she reminded him of their errand.

"We came to find Bennie."

"He can't be lost again already, can he?" her lover laughed.

But he submitted to walk with her to the ranch house, leading their horses to the stables.

Bennie, his face tear-stained, made public announcement, one influenced by recent events which had cast more than a shadow behind him.

"I'm gonna live at your house, Barbara, after you 'n' the sheriff get married, 'n' when I grow up I'm gonna be a cowboy like Bob Quantrell."

Mary Joe looked quickly at Barbara and observed her confusion. "He says we met Bob Quantrell."

"Yes," confirmed O'Hara. "He said Bennie over to us."

"Do you play?" Phillips asked quickly.

"No."

"Barbara told him she was gonna marry the sheriff," Bennie contributed. "He's too, an' I'm gonna live with 'em."

The eyes of the lovers met. Barbara smiled permission for O'Hara to tell the news. He did so, and created no sensation.

"I know it all the time," Mary Joe said calmly. "Ask Jack if I didn't tell you no three weeks ago."

"I expect you've been telling Jack how interesting things have been," Barbara replied, smiling at her former lover.

Whereupon more news came out.

"Well, that's a good wedding of it," Mary Joe suggested gaily.

"Can you ride with me, Jack?" O'Hara presently asked him. "I've got to follow Quantrell's trail while he's out."

"I reckon so," Phillips answered. "I'm as fit as I can be."

"I want to see you, Garrett. Just a minute in the house," Barbara said. "She turned smiling at him, holding the lapels of his coat with her fingers almost savage. "Do you want to go—right away, when I've had you ready a little time? Can't you wait here with me?"

"With I could, sweetheart." The look of momentary feebly, as did the across accompanying him. "But I can't. I've got to follow him to-day. The night have killed you once, and—and he didn't," she reminded him.

"I'm an officer, not a private citizen, Barbara. It's my business to capture because he's a criminal. I've got to get with the job."

"I'm gonna go," she conceded reluctantly.

luctantly. "But you'll be careful, won't you? You'll come back to me."

"I'll be very careful, and I'll come back to you," he promised. "When I finish this one job I'll resign."

She clung to him, as though she would never let him go, kissing with feminine fervency the ardent lips that met hers.

Her whispered confession just reached his ears.

"I've loved you, Garrett—always, always, and didn't know it."

She pushed him from her and ran down the passage into her bedroom.

As he strode out of the house to his horse there was a light in Garrett O'Hara's eyes that never had been there before.

Bob Quantrell approached with the greatest care the old dilapidated cabin where the outlaws had been accustomed to hole up. The price of life for him was wariness, and he had no intention of running into a trap for lack of adequate precaution.

When at last he opened the door noiselessly and looked inside it was to see the crouched figure of a man confronting him, a man with a six-shooter in each hand.

"Throw 'em up," a hoarse voice ordered excitedly.

In that fraction of a second during which Quantrell's 44 flashed out the two men recognized each other. The two-gun man was Deever.

"Thought O'Hara had you in the calaboose," the squat ruster said in surprise. "That's the story I heard."

"Do I look like the kinda bird that would stay in a calaboose?" asked Quantrell boastfully. "I jumped off Buck Grogan an' said 'Adios!'"

"That must be why there's a posse on Horse creek."

"I reckon that's why," Quantrell admitted casually. "But I served notice this afternoon on O'Hara not to crowd me."

"On O'Hara? Where?"

"Above the Diamond Tail, at the mouth of the Fox canyon. I had the drop on Mr. Sheriff, an' for two cents I would have bumped him off."

"Was he mounted?"

"Sure." Quantrell looked at his companion in surprise. "At everybody mounted in these hills?"

"I'm not." The younger outlaw noticed an odd glitter in Deever's eyes. "I got no horse an' I'm starved an' sure out climbing these 12-14 hills an' wading through snow. You fool, why didn't you kill O'Hara an' get his horse for me?"

"Don't talk thataway to me, fellow," Quantrell sneered. "How 'd I know you wasn't fixed with a horse by this time? Took me about the flick of a cow's tail to get one."

"Where is your horse?"

"Back in the pines where we always tie."

"We'd better get outa here," Deever said. "O'Hara's posse bumped into me half an hour ago an' took two big rocks an' crawled up here. But they're after me hotfoot."

"Where's Summers?"

"He left me at Squaw crossing. He's aimin' to lie low with a cousin of his near Agua Caliente. Wish I'd gone with him. There was a hunted confidence had deserted him. "They'll get us sure. They're armed with rifles an' we ain't, an' I ain't tasted food for 'most three days."

"Buck up, Deever. They've not got us yet, an' they're not gonna get us—not without a real dog fight first."

"Thought old Slim Buck Hanson

plunged from rock to rock. Not far from the creek, the pines did one of the worse catch sight of Deever and fire. Other shots sounded, but the outlaws had reached the timber.

Deever caught his foot in a projecting rock and as Quantrell ran past him to the horse Bob called "Keep a-comin', Deever."

The bandy-legged man had fallen into a panic of fear. Either he thought that Quantrell was about to desert him or else he feared both of them could not escape on his horse.

As the younger man pulled the rein from the slip knot he heard the pounding feet of his companion.

Quantrell turned. "All set, old-timer, for—"

Deever's six-shooter roared twice.

Bob Quantrell staggered, first once blindly into the ground, tumbled against the trunk of a tree, and slid along it to the snow.

A moment, and Deever was in the saddle galloping for safety.

Twenty minutes later, still riding hard, he swung around a curve in the trail. He dragged the horse to his haunches. For he was face to face with the sheriff and Jack Phillips.

He followed his first instinctive reaction and fired at O'Hara. Before the echo of the shot came back from the canyon wall the guns of O'Hara and Phillips were in action.

Deever dropped his weapon and clutched at the saddle horn. He slid to the ground.

"Don't shoot again," he gasped. "I've got me."

Almost before they reached him he was dead.

The officers looked at each other.

"Something drivin' him in a hurry," Phillips said. "Do you reckon he met yore boys?"

"He's riding the same horse Bob Quantrell was two hours ago. That is, he was a minute ago."

"Then we better go slow. Bob is liable to be around somewhere."

In a little while they met O'Hara's posse and learned the news of Deever's treachery to Quantrell.

"Scared they couldn't both make it. So he pluzged Bob twice through the heart," Owen explained.

They carried the bodies of the outlaws to the Circle O ranch where they were to spend the night.

O'Hara did not wait for supper. He ate a couple of sandwiches and drank a cup of coffee. On a fresh horse he struck across to the Diamond Tail.

It was dark long before he reached the ranch.

When he knocked on the door Barbara opened it for him. At sight of her lover she caught her breath sharply.

"Is it—is everything—all right?" He caught a glimpse of the outline of her bosom beneath the woe, she had caught up and thrown on.

"My job is finished," he told her.

From her throat came a little sobbing sound of joy.

would fling food on a horse, but his place is deserted. What if we do, Bob?" whined the tormented man. "Tell you I haven't eat or slept either one. I'm bucked out, an' this posse liable to be here any minute."

"Keep your shirt on, old-timer," advised Quantrell. "We'll try to slip over to Bear creek an' down it. We can ride an' till we pick up another horse. We both been in a lot tighter holes than this one. Sure have."

A voice from outside hailed the house.

Deever started. His snoken eyes went wildly to those of the other outlaw. "It's the posse."

"I reckon you're right. Old Amen Owen's voice, I'd say. We better sneak out the window an' try a run for the horse. We'll make it fine through the big rocks more 'n likely."

"With one horse for the two of us we can't make a getaway. I got a good mind to surrender."

"At you will go in each hand. Fellow, you're yellow. Slide out that window an' do like I say. If you've got any sand in yore car I'll pull you through."

"Tell you I'm sick," Deever protested. "I been through hell these last two-three days an' nights."

Yet he did as Quantrell told him. The two crept from rock to rock. Not far from the creek, the pines did one of the worse catch sight of Deever and fire. Other shots sounded, but the outlaws had reached the timber.

Deever caught his foot in a projecting rock and as Quantrell ran past him to the horse Bob called "Keep a-comin', Deever."

Some high points of the game were sensational fielding and heavy hitting by Dee Burras, fast and flashy work at short by C. C. Nunnally and a home run by Lawrence Gray with a runner on first in the fourth inning.
Lamb, Mesquite hurler, turned in a four hit game and was due a shut out. However, Burras robbed the Gail boys of several hits by pulling long drives out of the air just at the right time.
