Cong. Geo. Mahon Demands Action In Winning War

In reply to hundreds of letters, telegrams and telephone calls commending his position on the question of the much talked about 40-hour week and kindred defense questions Congressman George Mahon has written the Press his views upon the questions and they are reproduced.

More recently the people have become aroused, and rightly so, over the continuation of the forty-hour week in war industries while their sons are fighting and dying for the country on a twenty-four-hour-a-day basis at small pay and at a time when production is the key to victory.

I have a deep conviction that the people are right, and I have been outspoken in expressing my views in Washington, and I have voted accordingly. This has been true of most Southern Members of Congress in the House and Senate, but we have been blocked by the efforts of Members from the industrial areas who outnumber Southern Members.

On December 3rd the House passed the Smith bill, feeling that it would prevent further strikes, speed up production, and give the great mass of labor a better opportunity to produce. Unfortunately, this bill has been blocked in the Senate for many weeks.

It must be borne in mind that under our form of Government Congress cannot buy equipment for the armed forces or enter into contracts for production. The President and Donald Nelson are in charge of spending the money which we appropriate and equipping our Army and Navy.

Among the Sick . . .

Don Edwards was brought home Sunday from a Lubbock hospital where he had been ill for a week. Mrs. Edwards has also been ill but both were improving.

Mrs. J. N. Line, who has been ill in a Lubbock hospital this week was to undergo an operation Thursday according to members of the family.

Mrs. Hamp Thompson has been critically ill this week in a Lamesa hospital, suffering from heart trouble and other complications.

G. P. Brey was reported to be very ill this week. He has been sick for the past few weeks.

Claude Tomlinson has been ill the past week. He was reported to be suffering from inflammatory rheumatism.

The youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Etter is in a Lubbock hospital suffering from pneumonia caused from after-effects of measles.

FARRINGTON BABY IN HOSPITAL World was received here Wednesday from Mrs. Ferrell Farrington that their few months' old daughter would undergo another operation.

Miss Marjory Tapp visited in Lamesa Tuesday.

Mrs. C. H. Cabool returned Friday from a visit with her parents in Borger.

hour week. These questions involving war production are vital to the Nation. It should not be concluded that because mistakes have been made the program is a complete failure.

National unity is essential to victory, and we cannot let our disappointment and disapproval of certain policies tear us apart. We must not be satisfied with inefficiency, but we must keep our balance. In unity there is strength. In disunity there is disaster.

No New Names Are Filed For Posts In City, School

No names were filed to oppose present officials before the deadline in either the trustee or city races, according to T. J. Yandell, secretary.

The names of Shack Blocker and T. R. Tume automatically go on the ticket for trustee positions, while Stansell L. Jones is on the city ballot for mayor and A. C. Lambert and R. O. Stark for councilmen.

Jones was appointed a few months ago to fill the unexpired term of Mayor C. H. Mansell, who resigned. Ballots will be printed soon for both elections, and any one wishing to do so, may write in names for any of the positions, Yandell pointed out, but no other names may now be printed except those already filed.

Sugar Rationing Begins In May

Announcement has been made that wholesalers and retailers of sugar, bakers and confectioners and other industrial users of sugar will be required to register in pursuance of the sugar rationing program at the high schools of the nation on April 28.

Individual or family consumers will register on May 4, 5, 6, and 7, at the public elementary schools.

When registration begins, each registrant will be required to make affidavit as to the amount of sugar on hand. Any family having in its possession more than two pounds for each member of the family will be required to turn in the excess.

It has not yet been determined, according to Frank Bane, field chief of the OPA, whether the weekly individual ration of sugar will be a half-pound or three-quarters of a pound. We erroneously stated two pounds last week.

Jap Dreams of Easy Conquest Fade As U. S. Aid to Australia Grows; President's 'Victory Plan' Depends On Successful Offensive in Pacific

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

VICTORY: For Navy Forces

Almost coincident with the arrival of General MacArthur in Australia the first great word of an offensive against the Japanese had been received, and the U. S. had hailed a great naval victory in New Guinea.

First reports had been of the sinking of 23 Japanese vessels, a dozen of them vessels of war, and though few details were announced, it was obvious that it had been a battle of the air rather than of the sea.

Important in the first dispatches had been the word that they were "island based" forces of the United States and Australia, and this had been comforting in the extreme, for until this point America had not known that there were any island bases left to us in the Pacific theater with the exception of Hawaii.

It had been learned, of course, that the Japanese, after taking Wake island, had later abandoned it, but few believed that our own navy had moved back in there.

Aside from speculation about where the base was, a fact the Japs would like dearly to know, the victory itself was important. In the battle of Java sea we had lost one heavy cruiser ourselves, and our allies had lost four.

In this battle the Japs had lost two heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and other ships of war of lesser import. The rest of the ships sent to the bottom or put out of action were freighters, some of them being used as troop transports.

OFFENSIVE: Aussies' Viewpoint

Almost coincident with the arrival of General MacArthur, his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Sutherland, and the rest of his party, official Australia began to talk and think in terms of an offensive against the Japs on a scale hitherto not dreamed of.

As to the Japanese themselves, after having previously reported, weeks ago, MacArthur's flight from the battlefield to Corregidor and other untrue stories about the commander, they were considerably taken aback by the news that the commander was in Australia.

They did just what President Roosevelt had predicted, and de-

MAC ARTHUR: And His Job

The sending of MacArthur from Bataan, where the man in the street had regarded him as a sort of "dead hero"—certainly a hero, but condemned, apparently to either death or a Japanese prison—to Australia, where he could start with a clean page in the defense of that continent had been greeted with wild enthusiasm from one side of the nation to the other.

Paeans of praise had resounded not only in the press but upon the streets, and the general view was that the whole move had been made cleverly, because while General MacArthur had given his Bataan job to the hands of General Wainwright, he was still technically in command, as the Philippines were placed under his jurisdiction.

No less was the delight felt by the Australians, who had demanded MacArthur to lead them. The American public regarded it as significant that the move had been ordered in late February, but had not been carried out until mid-March, thus showing that MacArthur was not rushing after personal honors or safety, and that he would not leave his command until he had been given time to arrange things to suit him. MacArthur was accompanied by his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, and by Brig. Gen. Harold H. George of the air corps.

Considerable editorial praise had been heaped on Mrs. MacArthur when it was learned that she and her son had not chosen the comparative safety of Manila and internment, but had chosen to go to the battlefield with the general, and then to take the long and perilous plane journey to Australia with him.

As to the general's job in Australia, it was the toughest of the whole war. That was conceded on all sides. For he was taking on his shoulders the command in an area where all had been defeat thus far.

The Japs were figured to attempt the Australia blitz, despite the fact that they had learned that American troops "in force" were on the continent and that more were on the way.

The Australian occupation was so vital to the Japanese, however, that they were apparently ready to risk the showdown battle that would surely ensue.

There was little question but that Australia was poorly prepared, for Prime Minister John Curtin had been stressing that since the beginning. But with considerable American aid it was hoped that the defense could be carried out successfully.

Strategically, however, MacArthur's job was even bigger than defending Australia, for if President Roosevelt's victory plan were to be carried out, it was up to him not only to defend Australia successfully, but to be "in at the death" of the Japanese hopes in the Pacific, and to carry on, from Australia as a hop-off spot, the successful offensive that would, at least so America hoped, knock the Nipponese out of the war.

MacArthur, on his arrival, had found more than just American troops on the ground, he had found an air force which was carrying out his own ideas on Bataan—striking often and fiercely at the enemy before he arrived on the scene.

There were few who believed MacArthur, even by a miracle of strategy, could prevent Japanese landings on Australia, even as he was unable to prevent them on the Philippines. But many hoped that he could and would find some method of striking such forces such terrific blows as to drive them into the sea and prevent their organization into any sort of a successful land army.

PRODUCTION:

A demand by congress that WPB Director Nelson report formally on production had followed some apparent dissatisfaction with the national output which, in turn, had come to light after a vital resignation within Nelson's group.

Nelson himself had come out with a fighting statement, threatening coolly to "knock down" any individuals or groups that showed any tendency to interfere with the smoothness of national war production.

PRIME MINISTER JOHN CURTIN

"American aid is doubly welcome."

clared that General MacArthur had "run away" from the Philippines, and then went on to say that "American resistance in Australia would be shortlived."

The resistance in Bataan had stood as a monument to Japanese falsehoods and false hopes of easy conquest, and some believed that MacArthur's assignment to Australia might give the Japanese pause in going through with the invasion.

At any rate, Prime Minister Curtin had said:

"It is most gratifying that the American troops are now here in force. Their numbers are most substantial."

"We are the base from which to strike at the enemy."

"American aid is doubly welcome because Britain could not carry the burden of the Pacific while engaged in a life and death struggle with Germany and Italy."

"Our nation must demonstrate to history that it has the moral and physical stature to stand up and trade punches with the enemy not for six weeks or months but year after year if necessary, giving odds, but fighting the enemy to a standstill."

"If we fail ourselves, nothing will save us. We have to show ourselves worthy of aid."

His sentiments were echoed all over Australia, and in the halls of congress at Washington, senate and house leaders joined in. Chairman Snyder of military affairs said, after the applause had died down:

"I hope from now on many of our 'swivel chair generals' will remember that on this day many things are under way which will be just as pleasing to them; when they find out about them, as is the change in General MacArthur's status."

Their Job to Hide Armament Plants

In the piping times of peace, these stylists and expert technicians devised luxury lines for new passenger cars. Now they are working in a large Detroit automobile company's camouflage section, developing means of disguising important buildings so enemy airmen cannot spot them. It's a tough job to hide a 10 or 20-acre munitions plant, but these boys can do it. Above, they are working on a diorama, changing the appearance of the entire countryside.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago (Released by Western Newspaper Union)

Lesson for March 28

Lesson subjects and Scripture text selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, Inc. (Released by Western Newspaper Union)

THE TRANSFIGURED CHRIST MEETS HUMAN NEED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 9:28-35. GOLDEN TEXT—And they were amazed at the mighty power of God. Luke 9:43.

Glory and grace go together. Spirituality finds meaning in holiness. Holiness is faith in action. Every fine emotion should be translated into conduct.

This is the message of our lesson as it presents the transfigured Christ and the disciples, moved beyond intelligent words by His transcendent glory, going forth into the valley to meet the need of demon-ridden humanity.

I. Amazing Glory (vv. 28-35)

To three of the disciples came the privilege of seeing in the mountain the deity of Christ through the humanity of His flesh in such amazing glory that they could think of nothing more wonderful than to prolong the experience by tarrying in the mount.

One could wish that it were possible in presenting this lesson to over into the thinking of those who read or hear, a proper concept of the glory of our Christ, but we seem to be such weak and insufficient instruments. One we cry out—"Look at Him—the Son of God with the transfigured face—the light of heavenly glory shining forth in a dazzling whiteness" (v. 32), "erally, like lightning."

If men would only look upon Him they would see how untrue are those who take from Him His deity, who speak of Him as only a good teacher or a great teacher. He, our Saviour who took upon Himself the limitation of our flesh, was and is eternal God.

Significant it is to note that when Him on the mount were Moses and Elijah. The former had died (Deut. 34:5, 6) and the latter had been translated without death (II Kings 2:11), but both were alive, recognizable, intelligent, interested in redemptive work which Christ came to work out on the cross (v. 33). This definitely denies such false theories as soul-sleep or annihilation at death.

II. Amazing Grace (vv. 37-43)

Like Peter, there are many who think that the thing to do is remain on the mountaintop, just enjoying the vision of glory and the delightful fellowship of Christ the redeemed. They do not leave such things from Christ or from the Word of God. The next day (v. 37) He and the disciples met the father of an anguished father whose boy was possessed of a demon and who had found no help (v. 40). Then upon the one whose unspeakable glory has just been revealed in the mount, who has just had the approval of God the Father (v. 35) who now in amazing grace meets the need of this humble child! This is the grace of God, manifest in the One whom we as Christians profess to follow. Let us like Him bring the glory of God and (in His name) the power of God to bear upon the need of men.

It seems to the writer of these notes that God is waiting to do a new thing in the midst of human suffering and sorrow—working through His disciples. We need first of all to know Him ourselves, as our own Saviour and Lord. Then we need a vision of His glory, flooding our souls and transforming our lives (Rom. 12:1, 2). Then, we must put that glory and that power to work through our lives. The one who follows Christ cannot be satisfied to rejoice in his own salvation and not reach out to win others. He cannot rest in the peace of soul which Christ gives and not put forth his hand to those who struggle in "life's wild restless sea." He must (as Matt. 5:16 puts it) let his light shine in the darkness that men may find their way to the Father's house and thus glorify the name of God.

God does His work in the world through redeemed men and women. He is always seeking those who have seen the glory of Christ and with His grace upon them, are ready to be used of the Holy Spirit for His glory. "What the church needs today is not more machinery or better, not new organizations or more novel methods, but men whom the Holy Ghost can use—men of prayer, men mighty in prayer. The Holy Ghost does not flow through methods but through men. He does not come on machinery, but on men. He does not anoint plans, but men" (E. M. Bounds).

Need Compassion

I do not know how any Christian service is to be fruitful if the servant is not primarily baptized in the spirit of a suffering compassion. We can never heal the needs we do not feel. Tearless hearts can never be the heralds of the Passion. We must pity if we would redeem. We must bleed if we would be the ministers of the saving blood—J. H. Jowett.

HANES ADVERTISING SUPPORT OF MERCHANTS

Spring opens the 30th anniversary of newspaper advertising. The P. H. Hanes Knitting Co. of Winston-Salem, North Carolina—manufacturer of underwear for men and boys. More than 100 leading newspapers are being included in the Press. For years, Hanes has used the newspaper advertising campaign in the underwear field. Hanes always felt that newspaper advertising is the retailer's best method to reach customers and prospective buyers. It brings them to the store on the same day the advertisement appears.

The Hants Crotch-Guard Sports and Shorts, which have proved so popular with men and boys everywhere are being particularly featured. These have the comfortable Hanes-knit Crotch-Guard which gives gentle athletic support with a conveniently placed buttonless front. Smart new patterns in Hanes broadcloth shorts as well as Hanes Samsonbak Union-Suits and Hanes Shoulder-button Union-Suits are also among the garments offered in the new line.

The advertisements, themselves, are breezy in tone. Such headlines as "Never a care with this underwear" and "Get 'em and forget 'em" supported by humorous illustrations, capture the attention and invite reading of the entire advertisement. The enthusiasm on the part of Hanes Merchants for this advertising is shown by the number who make use of small, inexpensive tie-in advertisements of their own. Last year, thousands of these dealer advertisements were used. Placed on the same page as the larger Hanes advertisement, these little advertisements direct readers to their nearest store. Dealers report that they have brought sales not only of Hanes Underwear but also of shirts, socks, ties and other items.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. Your kidneys sometimes lag in their work and not act as Nature intended - all move impurities that, if retained, poison the system and upset the body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging back-pain, persistent headache, swelling, puffing up the eyes - a feeling of restlessness and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder trouble are sometimes burning, scanty, too frequent urination.

SHE LOVED A SPY by SYLVIA TAYLOR

THE STORY SO FAR: In love with Karl Miller, her handsome night club employer, Joan Leland, secretary, refuses to listen to her older sister, Sybil...

CHAPTER XII "I know you'll excuse me," Mrs. Murdock explained, "but I'm frightfully busy. It was nice of you to come. I hope you'll be a regular customer."

Joan replied courteously and left feeling that her visit had been a failure. She stopped at a drugstore for a sandwich and a cup of coffee.

The girl did not reply. "Pat!" Joan said. The girl smiled then and came towards her. "Oh, Miss Leland, I'm glad to see you. I thought I'd have a cup of coffee before I went to the club. I'm too nervous to eat. This is my first night, you know."

As Joan watched Pat sipping her coffee, she had an idea. Perhaps she should have asked Paul first, but there was no time for that, so on the strength of her impulse she said, "Where are you staying?"

Pat smiled. "At the Y.W.C.A. I didn't have much money." "How would you like to share my apartment?" "Oh, I'd love to! And," she added childishly, "I'll have plenty of money now. Mr. Miller is paying me fifty dollars a week."

"Yes, I know," Joan said, thinking how furious Karl would be when he found out that his new discovery was living with his secretary. But this arrangement might permit Joan to keep an eye on Patricia. Perhaps she could warn her against becoming too involved with Karl.

Paul did not make an appearance for two days during which time Pat was installed in Joan's apartment. Joan's heart ached to see her in Sybil's place, yet the girl would be a comfort to her. It would take her mind off her own troubles.

It was almost one o'clock in the morning when Pat and Joan arrived at the apartment. Karl had driven them from the club. He made no comment upon the arrangement, though Joan could see that he was not pleased.

"Karl," Pat confided later, "is the most wonderful man I've ever met. He's different from other men. There's something about him..."

When she saw Paul, she gave a little cry, "Paul!" and the color drained from her face.

looked from Paul to Joan. "By the way, what are you doing here? I thought you were in Washington." Paul's face was serious. "I am not working for the government any longer," he said, with a warning glance at Joan. "I am Karl Miller's manager."

"Why, Paul O'Malley!" As Joan and Paul exchanged glances, she realized that Pat must be told something about this strange situation. Paul was speaking nervously. "Listen carefully, Pat! You know when I worked for the government, there were a lot of people who had reason to dislike me."

Pat's brown eyes, so like her brother's, widened, as she asked, "Well?" "So I'm using another name. I am known here as Paul Sherman." Pat shrugged. "You're a fine one to scold me," she said crossly. "Go to bed," Paul ordered. "I want to talk to Joan."

Reluctantly Patricia obeyed, closing the bedroom door behind her. Obviously she had no idea of the havoc her appearance had caused. Paul spoke in a low, distressed voice. "This is a fine mess."

"Can't you make her go home?" "She wouldn't do it. We O'Malleys are like that. Besides, she'd tell Karl and the whole game would be up. My job has to come first. This business is more important—even than my own sister."

Joan put a gentle hand upon his arm. "I know how you feel," she comforted. "But since Pat is living with me, I may be able to protect her." "We must get this business finished up quickly—before Karl has a chance to pull anything."

"Then we won't tell Pat anything?" "No! And tomorrow I want you to make it plain that she is not to reveal my identity. She must understand that it is very necessary for me to use another name."

Joan was more convinced than ever of Karl's power by the many complications which seemed to be closing in about them. "I'm afraid, Paul! This can't end except with more trouble."

"You're right, Joan. We've got to be very careful, but I think the whole thing's going to blow up soon. So be on your guard."

"I was on my way back to work when I saw him standing in front of a shop with this woman. He was smiling and holding her hand." "Young or old?" Paul asked carelessly. "She was about Karl's age. Rather hard-looking, with black hair. She wore beautiful furs. Karl was smiling at her..."

Joan drew in her breath. Mrs. Murdock! When Joan and Paul were driving back to the club, she asked, "Do you think it means anything? Karl and Mrs. Murdock?" "There's some connection. I've suspected it for some time. Look at this! He indicated a copy of the morning paper that lay on the seat beside him."

"Mysterious explosion in aviation plant," Joan read. "And there's more to it than that." Paul went on. "I have just learned that the plans for a new bombing plane for the government have been stolen. Last night Karl sent a telegram to a hotel in that same city. He used another name. The telegram in itself was innocent enough. Probably in code. I feel sure he's connected with the stolen plans; also this Murdock woman. The fact that Pat saw them together and that they were so obviously pleased about something might be an indication of it."

In the office, Joan watched Karl carefully, but she could learn nothing from his attitude except that he seemed extraordinarily cheerful. She had noticed that Karl seemed to delight in trying to make her jealous of Pat. It was surprising how little she cared. Sybil's disappearance had wiped out all romantic illusions. Life was a serious struggle, not a romantic dream. Every minute Sybil's life was in danger. Every move Karl made might prove to be a clue to her sister's whereabouts.

Joan worked feverishly throughout the evening. When Paul Sherman came in suddenly a few minutes later, she was so startled that she half rose from her chair. He shut the door noiselessly behind him. "What time will you be ready to leave?" "In about an hour." Her tone matched his own. She knew that something had happened. "I'll be back for you then." He came quite close and said with a grim smile, "Tonight's the night! We're going to raid the beauty shop."

It was five minutes after twelve when Paul returned to Karl's office for Joan. She was ready, standing by the door in her hat and coat. "Karl has taken Pat dancing," he said. "I followed Mrs. Murdock home, so she's out of the way. We should be able to find out something."

When he finally parked in an alley near the beauty shop, the street was deserted and no one saw them as they walked swiftly. "How will we get in?" Joan inquired as they reached the door. "That is simple enough," Paul said, taking a key from his pocket and opening the door. His flashlight made a path for them through the front of the shop down the hall to Mrs. Murdock's private office. Paul opened the door softly.

He tapped the walls softly. "There is probably another room opening off this one." His fingers beat a tattoo against the wall as he moved slowly around the wall. "There it is!" he said, quietly, and even Joan could detect a hollow sound as his knuckles rapped on the panel. She stood close behind him, apprehensive as his hands silently explored it. "There should be a button here," he said, frowning, "Wait—here it is." A piece of casing slid from its place, revealing a small iron switch. At the pressure of Paul's finger the panel began to swing aside.

Joan gasped as she watched it move, with its strange grating noise. It swung around to reveal a small room enveloped in darkness. Paul's flashlight played into the dark. "There doesn't seem to be any light switch in here... Wait a minute! Here's a lamp." (TO BE CONTINUED)

HIGH PRICES Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay. Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

The Front Pages: Bruce Bliven, Freda Kirchwey and other editors of the opinion weeklies argued that the U. S. war propaganda copies the methods of the last war and also the Axis pattern. My Week by Eleanor Roosevelt

WAR TIME ATTITUDES

We had some very interesting discussions one afternoon at the White House on the subject of what the general attitude of the people should be during this war period. I've come to one very clear decision, namely, that all of us—men in the services, and men and women at home, should be drafted and told what is the job we are to do. It seems to me there should be immediately a freezing of prices, of profits and of wages. No one can be frozen without freezing all.

The only way I can see to get the maximum service out of our citizens, is to draft us all and to tell us all where we can be most useful and where our work is needed. So long as we are left to volunteer, we are bound to waste our capacities and to do things which are not necessary.

We are bound, quite thoughtlessly, to waste materials which we have wasted in the past, but which we no longer have a right to waste. I would be relieved beyond measure, and so would many people throughout the nation, if an authority greater than our own personal decision told us where we could be most useful. I realize that in the White House this is a more difficult question with which to cope, than it is outside. In the last war I ran a private home and complied with whatever the government asked of us. We were never sufficiently involved in the last war, either in a military or an economic way, to require much regulation beyond what could be obtained from people of good will on a volunteer basis.

We are in quite a different situation this time. I personally, am in a different situation in the White House because the President, as head of the nation, requires in his household certain things which would not be necessary in any private house. In private life, however, I should like to feel that I was complying with the wishes and doing the things which those in authority thought should be done.

BOOKS ON PRESENT CRISIS There is a bulletin from the College of the City of New York, which contains two interesting lists of books on the present crisis. They are entitled "What We Are Fighting For" and "What We Are Fighting Against." These lists are prepared by Dr. William Bradley Otis, professor of English, in an effort to provide an understanding of the present situation.

They are certainly interesting lists. We can all keep busy for a long while if we undertake to read all the books mentioned, though there are a few with which we may already be familiar. Surprisingly enough, I find that those I know best are in the column of "What We Are Fighting For," so I shall have to do some reading on "What We Are Fighting Against."

GIFTS FOR SERVICE MEN The department stores in New York city, and I imagine others all over the country, are going to save us a great deal of trouble. I have a letter telling me they will put up packages, after consulting the authorities in the army, navy, marine corps and air forces, which will contain things needed by the men that they will really enjoy receiving.

The idea behind the drive is very practical, because we civilians sometimes forget that it is not just our most intimate family that we might now and then remember in camp. There are other boys whom we know only slightly, who might be glad to get a package and have the fun of a surprise. So, when you see these packages, remember they are put there for your use and, if you can do so, send one to some service man.

NATIONAL PLANS I have had an interesting talk with a young Korean woman, married to an American citizen, who has been promoting an organization among the women of her community which she thinks would be of value in many other communities.

Her hope was that I would head up this organization on a nation-wide basis, but I feel very strongly that everything that is done should originate in a community need and, therefore, should enlist the interest and activity of the people in a particular community. National plans smack too much of something handed down from the top. Though I think it is well when something valuable is done in any community to have it given wide publicity so that other communities with the same needs may adopt it, I think it is a mistake to try to start any new national organizations at this time.

COMMUNITY BENEFITS I was interested in an appeal which I received the other day. It was from one of the community organizations in my home state. They explained that they felt benefits and large mass meetings should be the methods used to raise money for the extraordinary war activities. That the usual community organizations, both charitable and civic, should obtain their support simply by reminding their subscribers of the need in the community. I think this theory is excellent.
