WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Aid for Small Business Urged by WPB; Allied Land-Air Offensive Relieves Jap Pressure on Critical New Guinea Front; FDR Envisions Higher War Production

Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper. (EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

British raids on the German lines in Libya have yielded considerable success in damage to enemy communications and supplies as well as in prisoners captured for questioning. Above photo shows some of the 97 German prisoners taken on a recent foray.

SMALL BUSINESS: To Get Lifeline

With the nation's inevitable progress toward total war economy, many a small business man faced the prospect of becoming a postwar casualty unless a lifeline were thrown to him.

Help appeared likely, however, when War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson urged on congress the immediate creation of a war liabilities administration charged with the job of seeing to it that the little business man survived.

Four essentials for saving little business were recommended by Nelson in testimony before the special senate committee studying wartime problems of little business.

No. 1 is to help little business enterprises take care of overhanging liabilities they would have been able to discharge under normal circumstances. No. 2 is to provide a means for financing small business after the war. Third is to furnish technical and other assistance for small business after the war; and fourth, is to provide a mechanism giving small business enterprises a priority in the acquisition of machinery and equipment when the war is over.

ROOSEVELT: High Goals Ahead

Expressing the opinion that war production was proceeding at an extremely satisfactory rate and that the rest of the nation was far ahead of Washington in war spirit, President Roosevelt returned to the White House after an unprecedented secret inspection of war activities from coast to coast.

Although every detail of the historic journey remained a military secret during its progress, the publicity which followed it reverberated across the nation once the censorship curtain was lifted. In a dramatic press conference that paralleled in drama his famous "horse and buggy" attack on the Supreme court seven years ago, the President hit out at certain elements in congress, in the press and radio and in parts of his own administration that were either deliberately or misguidedly hampering America's war effort.

The President had warm praise for the nation as a whole. The people in general, he said, have the finest kind of morale.

PACIFIC AREA: Yanks Infiltrate

In the New Guinea area of the Southwest Pacific, Allied mountain troops gave the Japs a taste of their own medicine by taking the offensive, sifting through jungles and over mountains to recapture Nauro in the Owen Stanley range, well beyond Ioribaiwa, the high water mark of the Nipponese advance on Port Moresby.

A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia revealed that American and Australian pilots attacked Japanese supply lines for 78 miles back to Buna, the main Japanese coastal base in New Guinea. Using native porters as pack trains the Allied troops covered difficult ground as rapidly as had the Jap invaders.

In the Solomon islands the marines continued to consolidate their positions and to strengthen the defense of the vital Guadalcanal air base against expected enemy assaults. MacArthur's airmen made repeated raids on the Jap-held northern Solomons.

Meanwhile in Washington the navy department reported the loss of two American transports in the original battle of the Solomon islands. These were the 8,378-ton naval transport George F. Elliott and the transport Gregory, a small auxiliary.

HITLER: Boasts Anew

Making his annual winter relief address at the Sportsplatz in Berlin, Adolf Hitler outlined a three-point program for winning the bulk of Russia's natural resources and converting them to the uses of Germany. He assured his audience that Stalingrad's fate was sealed, and said he and his high command were constantly preparing for an Allied second front wherever it might strike.

Listed as 1942 objectives on the Russian front by the fuhrer were: domination of the Don river area; capture of Russia's oil fields and coal deposits; and securing the German position in the Black sea area through settlement of the Crimea.

Observers who remembered Hitler's boasts of a year ago that "Russia is beaten and will never raise its head again" expressed the belief that winter once again would find the fuhrer's claims unfulfilled.

Indications that increasing RAF raids were affecting German home morale were seen in the applause that greeted Hitler's promise that "the hour will come when we shall strike back."

Ridiculing the prospects of a second Allied front, Hitler declared that if the British tried again to invade Europe, they could count themselves lucky if they stayed for nine hours as at Dieppe, for "we have made thorough preparations to welcome them."

USED TIRES: Frozen by OPA

Price Administrator Leon Henderson's action in "freezing" all used tires and tubes in the hands of present owners until a normal rationing program can be worked out was regarded as a further effective step toward accomplishing the rubber conservation program recommended by the President's rubber investigation committee.

Mr. Henderson said the new order would add considerably to inventories of rubber available to assure American motorists of "tires for essential uses."

In the order, the OPA prohibited the transfer of any used tires and tubes by dealers and consumers. The order, however, does not prevent the sale to a consumer of an automobile equipped with used tires. Automobile dealers also are permitted to shift their used tires that are mounted on cars in stock to other cars in stock.

Car owners are permitted by the order to have their used tires and tubes repaired and to have tires recapped if they qualify for the latter service.

MISCELLANY:

LONDON: Plans for a London recreational center for the United States armed forces on the lines of the New York Stage Door Canteen were announced here by Harvey D. Gibson, American Red Cross commissioner in Britain. The center, to be known as the "Rainbow Corner" will be located just off Piccadilly Circus and will accommodate 400 persons at one time.

WASHINGTON: Unofficial compilations of war appropriations since Pearl Harbor indicated that the total would reach approximately 140 billion dollars before January 1, 1943. The staggering allotments—with others even greater deemed a certainty by congressional observers—already represent an amount four times the size of America's bill for World War I. Appropriations voted by congress do not represent actual expenditures, but constitute authority for administrative officials to commit the government for definite purposes.

Marines Study Jap Equipment—and Japs

From time to time enemy land attacks to recover the now U. S.-held Guadalcanal island in the Solomons are made, but the marines have smashed them all. Photo at left shows two Jap officers who will no longer shout commands. They are taking it easy behind barbed wire fence on Guadalcanal. At the right U. S. marines look over Jap equipment taken when the strategic island in the Southwest Pacific fell to the Leathernecks.

U. S. Troops Attack 'Invader' Indian Style

Bombing Raids on Malta

By Robert St. John

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with American Magazine)

Over and over we have heard about the thousands of bombing raids on the island of Malta. Recently I spent a couple of days with a British seaman who lived for months under the daily blast of Nazi fury on this brave little Mediterranean island. I give you his story as he gave it to me:

Sure, I can tell you about Malta. Tell you things you'll hardly believe. Things which even seem fantastic to me now that I am away from that little island which has suffered so much for so long.

I lived in Malta for months during the worst of the raids. I lived through hundreds of bombing attacks. I lived through enough to realize that these islanders are about the bravest people in the whole world.

You know already of the thousands of flights the Nazi bombers have made over Malta. You know of the tons of explosives they have dropped on that island, which is little longer than Manhattan. What I want to tell you is about how the little people of Malta live on, despite this epitome of Nazi fury—proving one thing to the world, proving that tough people can get used to bombs as a man in New York or Chicago can get used to street noises and traffic hazards.

Each Raid Shelter Has an Altar. Malta is honeycombed with air raid shelters, and each shelter has an altar, with a great crucifix hanging on the wall. Each morning the deeply religious Maltese deck the crucifixes with freshly picked flowers.

I have often seen women and children during the early morning raids stopping to gather such flowers before taking shelter. One of the things each family does before leaving home is to make sure that a picture of Christ is securely fastened to the front door. If, when they turn after the raid, the home is a heap of rubble, the owners generally are convinced it is because the picture came loose.

My favorite air raid shelter was one which is about five stories deep in the earth. It used to be an underground railroad, and extended miles into the suburbs. Thousands of people are down there. It could be a permanent home for enough families to populate a whole village.

Down there, while hell breaks loose overhead, young couples hold hands and talk of love, babies are born, school teachers hold classes, old men and women get ill and die.

When the Maltese lose the homes in bombings, they take to this labyrinthine shelter and set up housekeeping for the duration. It isn't the most pleasant place in the world to live. But life goes on.

It is not uncommon to see 10 or 12 children asleep in one huge bed down there. The Maltese have credibly large families.

As a raid goes under way, a low murmur of voices fills the cave. The Maltese don't just move their lips when they pray—they let their words out softly, like cooing pigeons. It's a warming, comforting noise by comparison with the terrifying noises of war from above.

Now the planes are coming close. Deep in the earth we can hear the guns all over the island, blasting away at what the natives call "the insects up in the sky."

Now the roar of Nazi planes is being at their targets. Now the groaning roar of our own planes goes after them. Then the noise of bombs make when they hit.

It all gradually builds up into a crescendo which shakes the underground cave of our tremble. The whole island seems to be rocking on its heels.

We hold onto the ground. I remember wondering if Malta would not break up into little pieces and vanish below the water. But she isn't anyone killed in the island's shelters. That is the main difference between London and Malta. Even one has a feeling of security in Malta, because you can be certain wherever you go on the island it is only a short run to the nearest shelter.

Now someone runs into the shelter shouting the Maltese words "dogfight." The men and women stop praying. They turn the children over to the old people, who run behind. They rush above ground. They stand, heedless of danger, the debris-filled streets, their eyes flashing as they watch the Spitfires and Hitler's planes fighting it out just over their heads.

They cheer and clap their hands like children when an enemy plane crashes in flames to earth. As the dogfight ends, the Maltese hurry out to see the damage.

Lieut. J. D. Stewart Writes Of Flying

Dear Folks: I've been trying to find time to write ever since I left L. C. but I've been so busy the last two or three weeks that I just didn't make it. We are flying B-17-E's here and boy are they big, just like riding on a train when you walk from the pilot's cockpit back to the tail. We fly every day, seven days per week, and every third night, and every flight lasts 5 hours. On top of that we still have 1 1/2 hrs. of calisthenics and 3 hrs. of ground school every day. Gas is rationed here and we get only 4 gal. per week, so you can see that I am far behind on my social activities.

I always thought I wanted to fly pursuit ships but after flying this "giant" I think it is about the best and the safest airplane that we have. There is lots about it that would be interesting for you to know, but I can't tell—fact is, there was one fellow here who was talking when he should have been listening and he is in a Federal hoosegow some- where now.

I will be here two more weeks as co-pilot, then graduate as a first pi- lot, then after another month's training I will be given a new ship and crew and head for the big show, seems like I have a date with the Axis in parts unknown, but I'll tell you one thing for sure, if a German or a Jap pursuit comes after me and my "17" they will think they grabbed a "wildcat" in the (tail any- way). We really have plenty of protection and plenty of guns.

Well, "Little" Smith and I were finally separated—he went to Enid, Okla., as a basic instructor; he was really disappointed and I can un- derstand why, it sure isn't a very exciting job. A lot of the fellows that I knew in Primary and Basic, but went to other schools for Ad- vanced, are here but I still kinda miss Smith.

Well I am about to run down and I should be listening to this lecture (I'm in ground school). So if you want to know anything else just write and ask me—write anyway. Love, J. D.

SEWING CLUB MET

Mrs. Frank Liddell was hostess last week at her home.

Diversion for the afternoon was sewing.

Those present were Mesdames Jones, Fritz, Frazier, Line, and the hostess.

Mrs. Stansell Jones is hostess this week.

Mrs. Gladys Lumpkin of Albany, sister of "Shack" Blocker, has moved into the former home of S. F. Johnson, on East 7th St. She will make her home here since her husband has been called into service.

Why your own car's Zero Hour comes at 00 miles an hour

ON THE OFFENSIVE you've got to be on the instant. Eager fighters, frisky jeeps, and all that's going along, must get going together—exactly at Zero Hour. But on the home front these brisk mornings, will your own precious car and its engine lubrication get going together—without deadly oiling delay? You can be sure as shootin', with your engine OIL-PLATED for Winter by Conoco Nth motor oil . . . oil that OIL-PLATES!

Even while the speedometer snoozes at 00 miles an hour—and you're still snug in your "kivers"—the chilly insides of your OIL-PLATED engine will already be coated by lubricant. Protective OIL-PLATING is really sort of "magnetized" to piston rings, bearings, and straight up the cylinders, by Conoco Nth oil's strong "power of attraction"—created by an added modern synthetic. This keeps the OIL-PLATING from all draining down to the crankcase overnight—over week-ends—and longer.

No complete lack of lubrication then, at 00 miles an hour—starting up cold. No long needless risk till cold oil comes inching along through passages as slim as spaghetti.

You're off safely, because OIL-PLATING safely stays on—ready to lubricate before any oil can circulate.

This season don't merely change oil. It's fully as simple and inexpensive to change to an OIL-PLATED engine. Just change to patented Conoco Nth oil at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Co.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Charlotte (Mrs.) Rawlings, an orphan since she was seven years old, has been at Saint Mary's school for girls. She knows nothing about her early history, but has gradually come to realize that the other girls at the school she has been attending are not her family, and she questions whether she has the right to her father's name. She develops into a very attractive girl and has a flair for writing the school plays and arranging their costumes. She is in the costume of an actress, and she has appeared in her own plays, when Judge Marshbanks, her co-guardian, Emma Haskell, a trained nurse, and her mother before her death, and her father, who she has never seen, have given her a secretarial position with the very wealthy Mrs. Porteous Porter in San Francisco, where Emma is now housekeeper.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

"Because," the girl offered slowly and doubtfully, "it wasn't that way. It was only seven, but I knew that something was wrong. Nothing was wrong for me, no pictures of anyone, letters or names. This school, I know, isn't like an ordinary school. We know we aren't like other girls. Everyone here has some strange history—no letters, no going home for holidays, no presents and prizes."

"This isn't a regular school," she conceded. "But according to what you seem to be the best thing to do, you seem to have flourished." "I added with a smile, "You've been here more as if it were a school with a capital letter!" she put in.

"I looked at her in his kindly and smiled.

"A place where girls are protected and safe, and well fed. . . . He questioned eyes. "Well?" she asked.

"Not so—oh, yes, all right," she conceded, not interested. An impatient jerk of her head took him back to the point where he had interested himself.

"And are taught good professional," he finished.

"Dressmaking, bookkeeping, stenography, beauty-parlor work," she added. "But," she added, "those are what they teach girls in other schools. But that won't keep me from trying terribly hard to make you said something about a school? What am I to do?"

"You are not to do anything until you find just what you want to do," he said, his graying hair and his years making it possible for her to use a father's kindly tone. "For the time being it is a secret position with the same old—very rich old woman named Porter—Mrs. Porteous Porter, whom Emma works. Answering telephone, and correspondence, reading—that sort of thing."

"Oh, that?" the girl said with a shining face. "That I think I can do!"

"I'm sure you could. And you'll be paid seventy-five dollars a month. . . . Seventy-five dollars a month! Oh, is that kind?"

"When—when would I go?" she asked.

"This is—let's see, the third," he said. "Suppose you come down on Monday? Monday's a good day to start. You take a train at half past ten in the afternoon, and at seven next night someone will meet at the Oakland Mole."

"Sunday wouldn't do?" she asked.

"Why not?"

"I was thinking, when you said that, that two Sisters are going to the Oakland house on Sunday, we're having a jubilee for the Sunday afternoon; they would be there."

"That would be an excellent arrangement. You come first to my house, you understand, and we can see and see Emma when you've got your clothes and have had time to get about a little. I must see Mother before I go and make arrangements for you."

"And then they were walking back and the convent's main building, through wide, orderly, dimly lighted corridors.

She jumped when old Dr. O'Conner touched her arm realizing that she was hungry and went with him through the swaying train to the dining car.

and cars, its noise and progress.

"Old girls" were twenty, found employment under "responsible custody" in the unknown world, and disappeared; new girls came in, small and frightened and homesick even from the most unfit and wretched of homes, or rebellious and angry and full of muttered threats of escape.

So Cherry, formally discharged from the books as "Charlotte Rawlings," with due details of her admission and her thirteen years' residence at the convent entered upon a formidable-looking graph, was not as entirely unprepared for entrance into the world as her custodians might have fancied her to be.

At leaving, Cherry wore the convent uniform of black serge and white collar, and a round hat like a small black basket turned upside down. The hat dated back some ten years, but it was a hat, and that was all that girls from Saint Dorothea's expected of headgear.

Mother Superior had given her the ten dollars with a parting word of instruction. This money was for any emergency; her tickets and meals on the train would be paid for by the Sisters in whose care she was traveling.

"This wouldn't have been my choice of a school for you, Cherry," the nun had said. "I've been considering in my own mind whether I ought to say this much to you," she added, "and I've asked for guidance in the matter. But there seems to be no harm in telling you that I felt—and dear Mother Bertrand felt, thirteen years ago—that you should have been one of the Victor street girls. Our school here is for cases that are underprivileged—for girls who are definitely unfortunate, perhaps through no fault of their own. However, the servant—your mother's servant, who brought you here—was very definite that it had been her wish to put you with us. Mrs. Haskell—Emma—you remember her? you will see her now—had known a fine woman who became one of Saint Dorothea's Sisters, and through her she knew exactly the character of our work."

"I remember Emma," Cherry had stammered, almost faint with this final excitement. There had not been any special stigma attached to her name then; she might have been one of the Victor street girls! Sister Fabian and Sister Gervase were both indisposed on the train. They did not want any supper; they had the three berths made up immediately, and Cherry left them to the little room, found a window seat in the empty length of the car and sat, fascinated, watching the landscape flying by.

She jumped when old Dr. O'Conner touched her arm, realizing that she was hungry, went with him through the swaying train to the dining car.

—and was so rapt over its light and warmth and the bewildering obligation of ordering something from a menu for the first time in her life that tea and biscuits and honey were all she could murmur when her companion poised his pencil over the order blank.

Both little nuns were tucked up in bed when she cautiously entered the drawing room. Cherry had the lounge, and slept the sleep of youth and fatigue within its narrow boundaries. Breakfast was another adventure—such smoking coffee, such buttered toast!—and the long day that dragged for almost everyone else on board was too short for her.

But at a quarter past seven o'clock—for the train was late—when they descended somewhat grimy and jaded at the Oakland Mole, sheer nervous excitement and expectation had exhausted her. She was pale, too much absorbed in her own emotions to notice the effect of her chauffeur. He was quickly identified by the wearied Sisters, and Cherry in her turn identified the nice middle-aged maid who had accompanied him.

May, the housemaid, who had been sent to meet her, was really, Cherry discovered, a Mrs. Mott who had two almost grown boys. But she was "May" to the whole household, she said goodhumoredly, and held, she said, good call her so. Miss Cherry had better call her so. "I'm not going to live at the Marshbanks," Cherry told her. "I'm going to take a position."

"I'm going to take a position," she said, and she was quite calm when a young man came in, unannounced, and drew a chair to Judge Marshbanks's side.

"The judge said you'd be with us only a few days. He is going to play bridge somewhere tonight, and he's having his dinner at seven. Mrs. Marshbanks and Miss Amy are going out to dinner before a party, and he's to bring them home dear knows when. It's a coming-out party for Miss Patsy Randall."

"I didn't mind that, my dear," she said. "Here we are," May added, as the car stopped at the foot of an imposing flight of stone steps. "I'm going to slip upstairs, and I'll not see you again unless you need me. Molly'll show you your room. I'm usually with the old lady after dinner, but she's away and I'm going to a movie tonight. You ask Molly for anything you want."

Cherry and her patent-leather bag were abandoned for just a few moments in the big entrance hall. She had time only for a breath-taking impression of such spaciousness and beauty and color as she had never seen before, of soft rugs beneath her feet and dimly lighted arches leading to great dimly lighted rooms on all sides, of potted palms and bursts of winter flowers, before Judge Marshbanks came forward to take possession of her, and confide her to the care of Molly, a pretty maid with very black eyes and a very white skin.

By this time the girl was too much dazed to believe her senses. She followed Molly upstairs to an incredibly luxurious big room with an unbelievably complete bathroom next to it, brushed her hair and washed her face in a condition of complete bewilderment, and descended again, still under Molly's escort, to the dining room where it appeared that she and her host were to be the only persons at dinner.

He was halfway through his meal; hers was served to her fresh and hot. But she was unable to eat. The quality of the Italian lace that was spread on the polished wood, the beauty of china and crystal, the soft light of candles were such as Cherry had never seen in her life before, nor ever dreamed could exist, and the numbing sense of being only in a dream made it impossible for her to taste or swallow anything. Even the food was beyond what had been her most fantastic imaginings.

"Don't you like that?" the judge asked, looking over his paper.

"It's wonderful. She made a valiant attack upon it."

"Know what it is?"

"No, sir. Chicken, I guess."

"That's partridge. If you don't like it Martin will get you an omelette."

"Oh, no, please! It's delicious." To her own disgust and surprise, her voice thickened. But he did not seem to notice it, and when he returned to his paper she made herself finish her dinner, and felt her nerves more steady.

A sudden sense that she did not belong in this scene, that it had nothing to do with her, that she never should have entered it, had almost wrecked her self-control for a moment. With the blinding force of a revelation she knew that her rumpled childish dress was absurd, that the dowdy hat she had left upstairs, the bulging shabby patent-leather bag, the ugly school shoes and cotton gloves and stockings had no place in this house, and were like nothing that had ever been here before. She knew, inexperienced as she was—she had read it in her host's first look—that her shabbiness and homeliness had shocked him. He had seen her only once before, flushed with triumph after the school play, made up into her handsome self as a brown-skinned Indian girl gay in feathers and fringes.

The knowledge that came to her in this flash of shame and pain made the big dining-room chair in which she sat a seat of torture to her.

But she did her best to conquer the feeling, and was quite calm when a young man came in, unannounced, and drew a chair to Judge Marshbanks's side.

The judge, after a casual friendly greeting, glanced over at her and said, "Mr. Coates, Cherry," and then, "This is Miss Rawlings, Kelly."

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Story Tellers: Following in the typewriter ribbon of Shirer and Flannery, the last CBS boy in Berlin, Howard K. Smith, dishes out a slice of exciting reportage in "Last Train From Berlin" (Knopf). Goebbels' barrage of lies, Smith states, has discredited him in Naziland and helped inflict a spiritual nervous breakdown on the Germans. Seems that the only people who take Goebbels seriously are a few American editorialists. . . . The most eyebrow-lifting part of "Sabotage!" is that many of those in the Benedict Arnold camp have escaped the clutches of the law. . . . It should be compulsory for all defense workers to read W. L. White's "They Were Expensible" (Harcourt, Brace). If that report can't make you put an extra ounce of steam in your work, nothing can. . . . Wallace Carroll, the UP foreign correspondent, hangs the crepe around the crystal ball by predicting, in "We're in It With Russia" (Houghton-Mifflin) that after Hitler is crushed there will be a revolution in Europe. But it's hard to understand how Europeans will have any stomach for blood baths after this war is over. . . . Corporal Hargrove's cap and bell version of army life, "See Here, Private Hargrove" (Henry Holt) is funnier than a top Sgt. with a soprano voice.

If Clare Boothe gets to congress she'll make many of the windbags there let go of the flying trapeze and come down to earth. . . . She's one to break up the demagogues and force them to drop the ifs, buts and howevers. . . . She revealed that in her initial oration with: "What's all this cooing with Franco and Laval, anyhow? All they wish us is bad luck!" . . . John Mason Brown's account of his operation will be called "Insides Out" . . . Jolson, back from Britain, reports the high morale there. . . . "I went to see a movie," he says, "and it contained some newsreel scenes of the first Nazi air blitz—showing a movie audience shivering from fright. The Londoners in the real audience rocked with derisive laughter."

The explanation of certain military leaders (to the public relations execs, who take the brunt of squawks over lack of war news) is this: "We're not interested in good write-ups—only victory. The thing to remember is this: The public always cheers the winner!" . . . The peacetime use of inventions (which are now military secrets) will make the peacetime world a fairland. . . . If you wondered about those familiar voices (of the narrators) in "The Battle of Midway" film—they belong to Henry Fonda and Donald Crisp.

In case you were wondering about the difference between the Garand repeating rifle (used in combat) General MacArthur is the authority for rating it the tops. Said the General: "A child asked his dad the difference between a Garand and an ordinary rifle. 'There's a big difference,' said the father. 'It's just as if I spoke, and then your mother spoke.'" . . . The one they still talk about at Fort Dix concerns the Sgt. who bawled out a rookie for standing around with his hands in his pockets. . . . "You'd think," barked the Sarge, "you had a $1,000 and were afraid of losing it!" . . . The rookie happened to be Pvt. H. Morgenthau, 3rd, whose pop is the Treasury biggie. . . . An acting corporal (one waiting for a corporalcy) is called "A Hollywood Private."

This story, which is sweeping the town—they insist—actually happened. . . . A high-ranking Washington official came to see the President and delivered his views on a matter of importance. . . . When he was finished, the President smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you." . . . The man departed, glowing with satisfaction and goodwill toward F.D.R. . . . A few minutes later another caller discussed the same subject—taking the opposite stand. . . . When he was through the President smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you."

Mrs. Roosevelt, who supposedly heard both conversations, criticized the President. . . . "How could you do that to those men?" she observed. "It is not only unethical—but it is unwise politically!"

F.D.R. smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you."

The Magic Lanterns: Far and away the film of the week is the gov't-sponsored Battle of Midway. Kodak in color, the scenes of Jap havoc make you full of fight. The ragged effect you can blame on the bombs, which jolted the camera right off its perch. It's a real pulse whipper. . . . Ginger Rogers rigs herself out in pigtails and pinafores to cut a swath among the puppy lovers in "The Major and the Minor." Ray Milland and R. Benchley chip in, and it all keeps you laughing out loud.

My Week by Eleanor Roosevelt

SUCCESSFUL YOUTH CENTER
On the train from New York City to Philadelphia, I had the pleasant experience of meeting Mr. Eddie Dowling, who was opening one of his shows there last night. He rescued me by carrying my bag off the train, for I was surrounded by some highly enthusiastic boys on their way back to their various camps. They can never see why one hasn't the time to give an autograph to everyone in the group, but unfortunately trains do not wait while you sign your name.

When I reached "Youth City" I was at once taken for a tour of the Negro slums. As in almost every other big city, the low income group, in which a great many Negroes find themselves in Philadelphia, suffer from poor housing. It was a joy to see the new housing built on eight city blocks which once were slums. Today they are occupied by many of the same people and are clean and well kept. When they have time to do some landscaping, the whole project will be very attractive. Afterwards we returned to "Youth City," an old nightclub now turned into a community center. Most of the work there is done by the boys themselves.

This group elects a mayor and all the city officials, including judge and police, in much the same way that Father Flanagan organizes his Boys' Town. The real police cooperate with them. When juvenile delinquents are found in the area, they are brought in to be judged by their own judges. Much of the work in "Youth City" has been done by youngsters working out their sentences. The situation as regards juvenile crimes among boys and girls in the neighborhood, both colored and white, has vastly improved.

The community house staff organizes basketball teams, table tennis games, etc.; in fact, they keep the young people busy out of school hours and after work hours. In addition, these boys and girls are learning to be good citizens. Many of the boys are now in the services, but they write back to their director, Mr. Samuel Evans.

MANAGING THE WHITE HOUSE
I have been asked to write a column on how the White House would be run on $25,000 a year. Of course, the question is rather foolish, because the White House is not the property of any private individual. It belongs to the people of the United States and those who live in it are there only temporarily.

Such hospitality as is dispensed there, is the hospitality of a great nation. Therefore, it is impossible to discuss adjusting life in the White House as one would adjust life in one's own home. If the question had been asked me in this manner—how are you going to adjust your life to an income of $25,000 a year in your own home—I could have answered it with great ease. My home can easily be run on that sum of money.

My life can easily be so arranged that I can live on whatever I have. If I can not live as I have lived in the past, I shall live differently, and living differently does not mean living with less attention to the things that make life gracious and pleasant, or with less enjoyment of things of the mind.

So this question of how the White House is to be run on $25,000 a year, shows that the individual who asked it has no idea of how the White House is run. Congress pays and prescribes the number of employees. It provides for repairs, for the general up-keep and official entertainment. The President must pay for all the food eaten by everybody in the White House, except on official occasions, and that is sometimes a pretty expensive bill.

Since he is required to pay for the people who are not there for his personal comfort, and since his whole life in the White House is not a personal life, but a public one; I do not think a ceiling which could quite rightly be applied to all of us in our personal lives, could be applied at all to the actual life lived in the White House, or to the President's public life anywhere. The conditions would have to be clearly understood by the people, because there are two entirely different situations to be faced.

No one I know, the President or anybody else, would hesitate for a moment if they were faced with the simple problem of readjusting their lives to keep below this personal ceiling of income, or any other ceiling required for the good of the country. If such a tax brings the war to a close any sooner or saves any young lives, I feel sure all of us would accept it with joy.

Washington continues to treat us to a warm, muggy weather, which makes us long for a real brisk autumn day. In the meantime, we realize that before long we shall look back to the nice lazy feeling we have at present and wonder how we could find time to sit in a chair to read a book, just because the air seemed heavy and we did not feel like moving around. Those of us who have lived in government houses know that no government house is ever our own, nor is it ever a home.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, with Ease for Stomach, too

When constipation brings on discomfort after meals, stomach upset, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin for perfect ease to your stomach in taking. For years, many Doctors have given pepsin preparations in their prescriptions to make medicine more agreeable to a touchy stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative-Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative-Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy on your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative-Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin, as directed on label or as your doctor advises, and feel world's better. Get genuine Dr. Caldwell's.

Tips on How to— Improve Your Lighting

Place Lamps Closer

The illustration above shows the right and wrong way to place a reading light by an easy chair. If you shorten the distance between you and the lamp one-half, you increase by four times the amount of light on your book or paper. In other places that light is needed, put the lamp as close as practical for better illumination.

Success for Dinner—Savory Stuffed Peppers
(See Recipes Below.)

Flavor's the Thing

Ever notice how ever-so-good foods run in combinations of three flavors? There's the steak, french fried potatoes and pie combination. Or, you can have fried chicken, gravy and biscuits as a three-some.

At one time or another you've all tried lamb chops, peas and mint jelly combination, or a melted cheese, toasted bread and grilled tomatoes plate luncheon.

Now other foods are joining the victory parade and new dishes are joining hands at the table to blitz their way to food fame. The nutrition rule which is rapidly gaining popularity is the one which says that if you miss one food combination at one meal, you must pick it up at another meal so you'll get all the energy units you need these busy days.

That's why today I'm offering you combinations of food which contain nutrients easy to miss if you're not careful. Take iron, for instance. Iron is a mineral that has a big job to do for your system. It sees to it that your energies don't lag and guards against anemia and general digestive disturbances.

Biggest job of all that iron does is to see that your body gets all the oxygen it needs by making enough red blood cells to go through that 7,000-mile long circulatory system that will replenish with oxygen and carry off the poisonous carbon dioxide which is another word for the oxygen after you finished using it.

Now the thing about iron is that it's difficult to find it in a great many foods. You can see how important it is because you need it every day. You'll find iron in eggs, whole wheat cereals and oatmeal, for instance. Suppose you skip these things at breakfast. That means you've got to pick up iron in one of the other two meals, for instance, by having some iron-rich food like liver, heart, oysters, greens, dried fruits. Do you follow?

That's why today I'm including several iron-rich foods so you will be sure not to miss a day without having something with iron.

Browned Oysters.

(Serves 6)
1 quart oysters
4 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt, pepper
Worcestershire sauce

Remove oysters from juice and drain. Dredge in flour and brown in 2 tablespoons butter. Remove from pan and set aside. Make a brown sauce by blending remaining butter with flour. Add juice from cooked oysters, lemon juice and sauce. Pour over oysters and serve.

Lynn Says:

Survey Notes: A nutritional survey by a large firm reveals the following interesting bits of information: that we are the best fed country in the world, but as a whole do not know enough about eating as wisely as we should.

Of the 11,582 interviews made, it is found that about 27.7 per cent of the families are eating more protective foods than two years ago. Marked increases were made in the consumption of citrus fruits.

Most women like to cook, it goes on to tell, three out of four in the first thousand like to cook, 11.6 per cent like to cook occasionally, and about 10.8 per cent "not at all."

Families are fed—at least 66 per cent of those interviewed—what women think are good for them. Then 58.5 per cent are fed what the family likes. Cost of food affects 42.19 per cent, and variety influences 28.2 per cent.

This Week's Menu

- *Baked Stuffed Peppers with Tomato Sauce
- Molded Fruit Salad
- Bread and Butter Sandwiches
- Pears Baked in Honey Beverage
- *Recipe Given

Here's a recipe suitable for lunch or dinner, made delicious and healthful by iron-rich molasses:

Baked Stuffed Peppers.

- (Serves 6)
2 large green peppers
1 pound chopped beef
2 cups bread crumbs
3 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup canned tomatoes
2 tablespoons pure, dark molasses
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Remove seeds and membranes of peppers and parboil in salted water 10 minutes. Combine all remaining ingredients in order given. Stuff peppers with mixture and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 40 to 45 minutes. Try serving this with:

Tomato Sauce.

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 No. 2 can tomatoes
- 2 large onions, sliced
- 3 cooked carrots, diced
- ¼ cup pure, dark molasses
- 1 can green peas, drained
- 1 green pepper, diced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper

Saute onions and pepper in butter. Push to one side of pan and mix flour with butter. Add tomatoes, molasses, and seasonings and cook, stirring until thickened. Add carrots and peas. Cook about 5 minutes.

When you talk about the mineral, iodine, you might as well ask about the I.Q., for this is the mineral that directly affects mental alertness. In addition to that, iodine prevents simple goiter and also affects how you tip the scales.

Rich in iodine are seafoods, so make a point of including them in your menu often. For example:

Shrimp Casserole.

- (Serves 6)
3 cups ½-inch bread cubes
2 cans shrimp
1½ cups grated cheese
3 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper
Paprika

Place layer of bread cubes, shrimp and cheese in casserole. Repeat until all are used. Combine beaten eggs with milk, and add seasonings. Pour over mixture in casserole. Bake in a moderate (325-degree) oven about 45 minutes.

In addition to containing iodine, shrimps also have about 17 other valuable minerals. Then, combining the curly pink shrimp with milk and butter, you have a real health-giving dish that's good to eat both sides, as this:

Shrimp Soup.

- (Serves 6)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper
¼ teaspoon celery salt
1 quart milk
1 can shrimp
Few drops tabasco sauce

Combine melted butter and flour. Add seasonings, then stir in milk gradually. Drain shrimp, add liquid to white sauce mixture and cook stirring constantly until thickened slightly. Break shrimp into small pieces and add with tabasco sauce. Heat. Serve at once.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:14-17; John 6:66-69; Philippians 3:7-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ—Philippians 3:7.

Loyalty is undoubtedly one of the finest traits of mankind. Because of its strength, its fidelity to duty, etc., shrewd men have learned to play upon man's loyalty, making it serve evil and ignoble ends. Unworthy causes, having thus gained the interest of man by fair means or foul, have demanded blind loyalty. Even in the carrying out of crime there has been the suggestion that there is some kind of a code of honor, a loyalty among thieves.

All this does not change the fact that there is a high and holy impulse in man to stand true to the right; and in the Christian, to be found ever loyal to the Christ, whose we are and whom we serve. Faith in Christ (our lesson of last week) is rightly followed by loyalty to Him. It manifests itself in three ways.

I. Following Christ (Mark 2:14-17).

Without obedience there is no use talking about loyalty. When Jesus said: "Follow me," Matthew (Levi) arose and followed. He was a sinner (v. 17), a man of the despised calling of tax-gatherer (v. 14), but he was ready for the call of Jesus.

Notice also that following Christ carries with it the privilege and obligation (it is both) of making Him known to our friends. Matthew did not wait until he had made a new circle of friends and then invite them to a feast. He celebrated his entrance upon the new life of faith by a friendly and effective testimony before his friends who were publicans and sinners.

Notice the words of Jesus in verse 17. It is not good people, satisfied in their own self-righteousness, who get to heaven. It is sinners, saved by grace, who will there magnify the Saviour's name.

II. Faithfulness to Christ (John 6:66-69).

It is one thing to begin, but quite another to persevere in well doing. Jesus had been doing many miracles and a host of followers had flocked to Him. He had not only done great deeds, but had spoken beautiful words about the Fatherhood of God, the power of the Holy Spirit, etc. He had fed the five thousand, and they liked that too.

But now He had talked about a broken body, about partaking of His flesh and His blood, and they did not like it. This reached too deeply into the necessity for a personal spiritual experience, and one that spoke of sacrifice, and many of the disciples "walked no more with him" (v. 66).

How perfect a picture of the "religious experience" of multitudes of men and women in our day. The true disciple, however, stands truest in just such an hour. "We believe," said Peter, and he spoke better than ever before in his life. "We don't understand everything (that's the thought back of "To whom shall we go?") and we believe, and we will stand fast." Blessed word of loyalty!

Observe that Peter and his brethren recognized Christ as the "Holy One of God," that is, God's Son in a unique and intimate sense, One close to and participating in the holiness of God. Loyalty will not hold on any lesser concept of Christ. There is no incentive to real service and sacrifice in the watered-out religious faith of the modernistic liberal!

III. Forsaking All for Christ (Phil. 3:7-11).

There were a number of things in the life of Paul as a natural man of which he was justifiably proud, but which in the light of his relationship to Christ paled into insignificance. The best this world can offer looks like rubbish (v. 8)—which it really is—when one catches a glimpse of Jesus Christ.

Turn your eyes upon Jesus. Look full in His wonderful face. And the things of earth will grow strangely dim.

In the light of His glory and grace. However, that experience of Paul's was only the beginning of a life of devotion to the Lord, which is expressed in words the depth of which we cannot fully plumb. What does it mean to know "the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made comfortable unto his death"? We do not fully know, but certain we are that it speaks of a fellowship with Christ that is very deep and intimate; a life of power, because He lives in and works through the believer; a sharing with Him of the hatred and bitterness of the world, yes, of death, if need be, for Him, in the assurance of resurrection.

This is an "all out" Christian experience, nothing held back, nothing thought to be too difficult or trying—everything gladly given in unstinted love and devotion to Christ. Now the Christian church is languishing for the want of those who will forsake all to follow Him in complete faithfulness.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

Pattern No. 1599-B

IN TOWN and in country, at home and in the office this is a dress which is "tops" for style and comfort. Larger figures will particularly like the full-cut bodice and the six-gore skirt which fits with such admirable smoothness. We suggest it for gabardines, flannels, new rayon weaves.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1599-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 with short sleeves takes 4½ yards 39-inch material. Send your order to:

ALL-BRAN FUDGE SQUARES—BEST YOU EVER TASTED!

Every mother in the land will want to bake these scrumptious cookies. Children will demolish a plate of them in a wink. Grown-ups rave about their "different" taste and new crunchy texture. They're made, of course, with the famous cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran.

CELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN FUDGE SQUARES
3 squares tin— 1 cup sugar sweetened ½ cup flour
chocolate ½ cup All-Bran
½ cup butter ½ cup nutmeats
2 eggs 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt chocolate over hot water and add butter. Beat eggs well, add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Add melted chocolate and butter. Stir in flour, All-Bran, chopped nutmeats and flavoring. Pour into greased pan, making a layer about one-third inch thick. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) about 20 minutes. Yield: Sixteen 2-inch squares (8 x 8 inch pan).

Now It Is A Turkey Tom Getting Publicity On F. M. Page Farm

There's never a dull moment on the F. M. Page farm. Things do happen. A few months ago, surprised members of the Page family discovered their first freak—a "something" that was half duck and half chicken. Then a midget calf, which was small but perfectly proportioned. To cap matters, Mrs. Page discovered a Turkey Tom calmly taking over the usual function of hens by setting on hen eggs. The gobble isn't averse to a battle if anyone tries to remove him from his chosen work.

Naval Recruits Smash Records

After smashing for the third consecutive month all-time naval enlistment records, the North Texas district is in the midst of the busiest October in its history. Lieut. L. H. Ridout Jr., officer in charge, said recently. "Everything in a recruiting way is being done with the expectation of making the first World War II Navy Day, which falls on October 27, a day of real celebration," he pointed out. "By that date, we hope to have enough enlistees to make the Axis partners squirm."

Building up to the Navy Day climax will be four visits to the Dallas station by Seabee interviewers and the first physical instruction conferences in many months. Seabee applicants will be assigned ratings October 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13, 18, 19, 20, 26, 27, and 28. Coaches and physical instructors who wish to apply as chief specialists in the Navy will be interviewed in Dallas October 12 and 13 by representatives of Commander Gene Tunney. Lending momentum to October plans are the glowing enlistment results achieved during September.

Lieutenant Ridout said. In thirty days, 3,397 men were sworn in, 154 more than joined the Navy in August. The banner month boosted to an impressive 13,400 recruits the number of men who have become bluejackets since Lieutenant Ridout assumed command of the district six months ago. During the 32 months prior to his appointment, 13,500 recruits left the North Texas district.

Winner of the Navy "E" award for the third consecutive month was the San Angelo district, which far exceeded its September quota. Lynn County was assigned a quota of 13 recruits and contributed 9.

Mechanics Needed From Tahoka Area
