WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS Truman Signs North Atlantic Pact; Brannan Farm Plan Beaten in House; British Clamor for A-Bomb Secrets

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

ENVOY TO COSTA RICA SWORN IN . . . Joseph Flack (left) of Doylestown, Pa., places his left hand upon the Bible as he takes eath of office and is sworn in as new ambassador to Costa Rica from the United States. He succeeds Nathaniel P. Davis. The wife of the new envoy is looking as Stanley Woodward, chief of protocol officer at the state department in Washington, D. C., administers the oath.

BRANNAN PLAN:

Loses Trial

新市场

The house approved a measure continuing the farm price-support program in its present form. The bill was slated to go to the senate. The house vote was 383-25.

The retention of the 90 per cent of parity supports killed the Aiken law, passed by the Republicancontrolled 80th congress and which was scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1.

The administration gained a parvictory in eliminating the Aiken law but saw defeat in being denied a test run of the controversial Brannan agricultural plan.

Under the Brannan plan, perishable crops would be allowed to sell at what the market would pay; then the government would pay the farmers the difference between the support level and the average price the farmers got.

The Pace bill, which embodied provisions for a trial run on three farm products of the Brannan plan, lost out, 222-152.

A substitute for the Pace bill, the Gore measure, suspending the Aiken law and continuing the present farm program, won by a final vote 383-25.

One of the surprises of the session was the very few votes cast to keep the Aiken law alive.

ATOM DATA: England's Needs

Reports say the administration as investigated the possibilities of sharing atom-bomb secrets with Britain by executive agreement without action by congress. Some law-makers have sought to tie the President's hands.

The idea has been discussed but no decision has been reached to carry it through. It is considered a matter of the senate-house atomc committee, the state department, the armed services and the atomic energy commission. - A secret meeting at Blair House was thought to have been called by Truman to discuss the matter. The United Kingdom and Canada co-operated in atomic development during the war and are believed to know all about the wartime bomb. The atomic energy law of 1946 has forbidden further exchange of information. Some sources say Great Britain can produce an atom bomb of its own if it decides to concentrate on the problem. Britain may have threatened the United States with loss of uranium ore from British-owned Belgian Congo mines if the U.S. refuses to yield atomic secrets. Britishers have been resentful that their observers were not allowed at the Eniwetok bomb test. Roosevelt established the precedent of presidential co-operation with Britain in things atomic without congressional authorization.

WOMAN'S WORLD Furniture Arrangement Is Important

Popular Shantung

By Ertta Haley

"A NEW BRIDE moved next door, and you should see the beautiful furniture she has! But it just doesn't look right, the way she's fitted it in the rooms," said an acquaintance of mine recently. Many people have such good common sense about arranging furniture, they need little or no help. However, certain basic rules applied to room arrangement can help those who are a little weak on knowledge of just what is right. Balance is the key to arranging furniture properly, but the balance may be formal or informal, depending upon the rooms, the type decoration and architecture which each has in his home.

There are some rooms which are so constructed that several ways of arranging the furniture are poswhile other rooms are sible. limited in what they permit.

Those people who want to rearrange furniture constantly show they are basically dissatisfied with how the house looks. Once a pleasing arrangement has been achieved. you'll be so happy with it, that nothing could induce you to destroy the convenience, service and beauty of it.

All Sides of Room Should Have Balance

A feeling of equilibrium is essential for giving a pleasing feeling, and this is achieved by distributing weight according to the walls. Each should balance the opposite wall. Each should also be balanced with equal weight on each half. The highest part should be centered on the wall. When you have formal rooms, the formal type of balance should predominate. The centers of interest like sofas, secretaries and fireplaces are usually flanked with chairs.

With formal balance, take care that you do not have too many articles of furniture, as they will make the room look stilted. Informal balance may be combined with formal to a certain degree because it offers relief from strict balance as well as a certain charm. Early English, modern and ranch type homes employ informal bal symetrical. The masses of furniture need distribution so they will give a steady, balanced effect.

Balance your furniture

ways should be cleared sufficiently to allow for easy traffic. The passageways between furniture groups should also be free for easy going and coming, and an uncrowded out your having to move chairs or tables to get to them.

Large pieces are always placed parallel to the walls so they do not violate the basic lines of the room. Upholstered chairs may be placed at angles to add interest while straight-backed chairs look well placed against walls.

Try giving plenty of open space between various groups within the room for a pleasing, uncluttered effect. If a picture belongs to a certain grouping, hang it low enough so that it becomes a part of its own group, rather than a wall decoration in its own right.

Tall pieces are usually placed centered against a wall to add balance to the room and still give it plenty of space.

Arrange Furniture Group For Certain Activities

Furniture group, the phrase we meet so often in interior decoration, refers to arrangements that are part of a room. A conversational group is planned to take in several people who just like to relax and talk readily. A musical group may be placed around the piano or radio to make these activities pleasing.

Groups such as this are logical and useful arrangements, and thus contribute to the utility and comfort of a home

Grandparents Are Devoted Sitters "MY MARRIED life has had but one real trial in it." writes a St. Louis woman who signs "Molly-O." "That is, the presence of my husband's mother in the house, half the year. She died last year. Before that, she went to keep house for a widower son in Florida every winter, came to us in May and did not leave until October.

"Gann was a sweet woman, lovely with my children, and on two occasions took a small boy south with Her for the entire winter. We never quarrelled, but at the same time I never forgot what I considered the injustice of my husband's expecting me to have another woman in my household continually. She was an excellent housekeeper and cook, and never intruded in any way on our parties or trips, but I am of the school that believes firmly that old people don't belong in young homes.

"That brings me to today's problem. My oldest daughter is a sweet, easy-going, great big girl, who is marrying a man in every way suited to her; he owns a fine old suburban house, inherited from his father, and he and Carolyn are already talking of the family they mean to raise. WARNING: Pact Okayed

Russia received a warning that any further aggression in Europe will be considered an attack upon the United States. The warning came in the form of an 82-13 ratification of the Atlantic pact by the senate.

It was the first time in American history that a peacetime pledge had been made that the United States will take action (military action, if necessary) if certain other nations are attacked.

UNDER the north Atlantic treaty this nation and 11 other nations pledge that an attack upon one will be considered an attack upon all The pact also pledges that the 12 members of the treaty shall prepare for mutual defense before the need for military action actually arises.

A small minority waged bitter opposition to the pact during the 13 days of senate debate upon it. Three Republicans, Wherry of Nebraska, Taft of Ohio and Watkins of Utah, tried to write a reservation into the treaty, specifying that ratification did not impose upon the United States the moral or legal obligation to supply arms to the other 11 signers.

The heavy vote for ratification and the impressive vote against arms reservations were victories for the senate bipartisan foreign policy. Only two Democrats voted against ratification-Johnson of signing the pact.

The writer of this column does not claim to be the seventh son of a seventh son, but the following chapter from a book by him. "Private Purkey's Private Peace" (the original and much more apt title was "Peace, Wearing Purple Tights"), published a few weeks after World War II ended, revealed distinct powers of prophecy. In the story, Private Purkey and several companions crashed a peace conference in Paris, a feat duplicated in a way by Garry Davis a few weeks ago. And in a chapter headed "Discord in the Dovecotes" ye ed pictured the collapse of peace hopes, the friction between the great powers, etc. thusly:

Months have now elapsed since the peace. And except for the lack of actual gunfire and bloodshed there seemed to be as much fighting going on between the nations as ever. A Hollywood movie czar had in fact put in a bid for pictures of the peace conference thinking he was bidding for fight pictures. Representatives of Russia, France, England and the other nations on our side-brothers all-were standing toe to toe in many arenas, no punches barred, and not even bothering to go to a neutral corner after knockdowns. . . .

There were rumors that Anthony Eden had come out of a council meeting with the "Shiner of the Year," that an American peace conferee had been seen rolling on the floor with a Russian brother, and that Big Three meetings were being opened with demonstrations in jiu-jitsu. The spirit of mutual distrust was rampant.

The assorted peace committees and sub-committees were giving evidences of heading for the rocks and discord, and some of them were less inclined to try dynamite than to upholster the rocks for comfort. Tossing in the heavy seas of conflicting interests in small boats, they seemed at times bent on attempting to cure seasickness by resolution and plug up leaks by amendment.

They were good men, kindly and well meaning, in these postwar world huddles, but they were in one of the hot spots of history and it made them jumpy.

Lunching with three members of the press, she could hardly get in a word until they finished telling her, at length, how wonderful she had been in "State of the Union," and how much they hope that Hollywood will soon do right by her.

That same day Betty Field lunched at an adjoining table. She and Miss Hussey hadn't seen each other since they worked together in "Gatsby," in which Miss Field and Alan Ladd star. MacDonald Carey and Barry Sullivan are featured.

Off-stage atmosphere: Two deputies of the Hollywood sheriff's office stood guard for two days over the machine gun used in RKO's "Follow Me Quietly." The law demands that such guns be constantly under the eye of a law enforcement officer while in use in a picture, and that it be in the hands of an officer of the law between takes. No unscheduled shooting allowed!

Jay Livingston and Ray Evans, "Buttons and Bows' who wrote for Bob Hope's "The Paleface," have done such a good job on "Fancy Pants," written for his "When Men Are Men," that he thought that would be a good title for the picture. However, the other title sticks. Meanwhile Evans and Livingston, authors of "To Each His Own" and other hits, are writing a second song for him.

"That's what city life does to

I can't" he grinned. "Phew! What a climb! Skis are no good up here. If we're going to the top we'll have to hobnail it up."

"We can quit and go down," she said. Her voice held the barest hint of a taunt. She hated herself for it. 'Quit nothing! Just because I've been away for two years you needn't thing you can stump me." Tracy's eyes flicked over the girl's slim, wiry figure. "Boy, you always could take it," he admired. "Ever since we were kids I've had to hump to keep up with you."

The reference to their childhood escapades brought on a flood of regrets

Two years ago he had left her with a brotherly clap on the back and a firm handclasp. She had almost hated him. He had gone down to the city to become an architect. Then he'd written about Jessica. She was a sing-er in a night club. He had fallen madly in love with her. His letters had been full of their romance.

Generva had wanted to tell him to stop writing his everlasting prattle about a silly night club singer. Didn't he know that every word was a knife thrust in her heart? "You know," he said suddenly,

'you're growing more lovely every year, Gen. Some day soon a man's coming along and-" laughed out loud and She scrambled to her feet. "Come on. City Man, we've got to get going if we want to make the top and get back before dark."

Tracy grinned and yanked himself up the first steep ascent. Before he had gone 10 feet he realized that it was a foolhardy business. Without ice picks and ropes climbing was hazardous.

He started ahead again and then stopped. Above him, maybe 30 feet away, he could make out the blurred form of Generva.

The blurred outline stopped. He listened for her reply, but if she called the wind drowned it. For an instant her hobnailed boots were clawing against the ice. Then she came coasting down the incline, reaching frantically for bushes that slid through her hands. Tracy made a lunge. His hand caught at her ski jacket as she whipped past. held, filt it slip through his fingers. A strangled cry escaped his lips.

I^T SEEMED like hours before he found footing against a rock 10 feet from where Generva clung to the hardwood shrub. Directly beneath her was a 200-foot chasm.

Tracy slipped the handle of one pole through the wheel of the other, tightened the strap on his wrist and cast out across the ice. At his second attempt Generva grasped the slim bamboo.

was below him he began pulling upward, hand over hand. In a moment their hands touched and she was safe on the rock.

Tracy's hand reached for hers. There was a queer light in his eyes. "It just came to me," he said, what this old world would be like without you, Gen. I mean-" he gulped-"I never realized it before. Her eyes were misty. "Darling, you don't have to. I've been waiting for you to look like that for 10 vears.'

Serve Frosty Cool Food During Sweltering Heat To Tempt All Appetites

WHEN the sweltering days hit us, there's nothing more pleasing than to have plenty of frosty cool foods to tempt heat-ridden appetites.

Mothers, too, can keep a lot cooler and comfortable while they prepare chilled rather than hot foods, and the former can be just as nourish. ing. However, if a hot food is desired, it might easily be a cup of hot soup or a toasted sandwich to serve with the salad, for neither of these takes long enough cooking to heat the kitchen or the cook!

Salads as main dishes should be nourshing, so plan to build them with meat, fish, fowl or cheese, one of the good protein foods which are needed daily. Filll them brimming with vitamins and minerals to keep their energy-giving qualities high.

PREPARE salad ingredients in the cool hours of morning so they will chill thoroughly and need just mixing at lunch or dinner time. This cuts down preparation time when energies are low and the heat is at its highest.

thanksgivings. Reading the Psalms of praise which are this week before us. we get the impression that these poets were grateful above all not for anything G o d h a d given but for God himself. Thank God for God! sings Dr. Foreman through every line

Suppose there were no God? He is the Creator of all; without him nothing else can be. The nature of time and space, of molecule and atom and electron, the mighty power that holds all together; the emergence of life, of mind, the possibility of thought, of values, whatever is and whatever can be, is because he wills it so. That there is energy in the atom, light in the sun, refreshment in the rain and power in the lightning-that these things can be and that any thing can be, we thank God.

No Unrighteousness in Him

SUPPOSE God were not good? A vast and vicious devil, his immense mind brimming with intelligence and malice, could perhaps have contrived a universe more enormous than this corner of one which is known to us. A creative devil-what pangs he could have invented to torture his creatures!

It may be, indeed, that only on this earth is there rebellion against the Creator, and that elsewhere in God's dominions all is peace. But suppose it were true that all the evil in the world was ordained by some Creative Hatred?-all the goodness in the world only an illusion, a deception?

Suppose it were the intent of some devilish maker of man finally to destroy all his creatures, or worse still, to make every creature long bitterly for death but find none? Let us thank God for God, the God of mercy whose loving kindness endureth forever.

MONROE DOCTRINE:

Pact Fuss

John Foster Dulles, in his first speech as U.S. senator appealed for ratification of the North Atlantic pact and rebuked Senator Robert A. Taft and others opposing it. Taft's opposition was on the grounds that the treaty commits the United States to re-arm its European signers.

Dulles countered with the defense that the pact does not obligate this nation to enter any arms program which "isn't defensible on its own merits." Dulles said that the treaty doesn't give any individual member the right to get any particular thing from any other member. No particular member has any claim on any particular aid he averred. It does not require the United States to build each signer up so that it could defend itself alone, Dulles said.

ANOTHER FOE of the pact, Senator Flanders of Vermont, wanted to extend the Monroe Doctrine in place of entering the pact. He said his nation would not be o bligated President Truman has been asked to suspend his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan.

Vaughan Accused

The request came from Rep. Shafer, Michigan Republican, who cited the army's suspension of two other major generals, Herman Fieldman, the quartermaster general, and Alden H. Waitt, chief of the chemical corps.

They were suspended pending a senate investigation of army contract handling. Shafer said Vaughan was implicated in the same case, but gave no details.

All three generals were mentioned in a recent news story which inspired the inquiry into dealings of "five per centers," those who hire out to obtain government contracts.

WOMAN'S WORLD New Fashion Ideas Freshen Wardrobe

By Ertta Haley

NEED some sparkle for the wardrobe? A slight amount of remodeling, a bit of new trimming, or a flash of color will rescue many clothes from their route to the back end of the closet.

Some women feel that it is simply not in their power to create practically new garment from an old one, even though they sew well. It's a matter of imagination, they say, and leave it to those who obviously have some creative talent.

True, imagination is a good thing to have when renewing the ward robe, but it's dispensable with all You the aids we have on hand. may need just a quick look at what the stores are showing, a glance at some of the new styles and a session with a pattern book.

A sense of what is fitting, however, is essential. If you do any sewing, you understand about fitting. Even if you always buy clothes, you will understand fitting, so you see the matter is quite simple.

Dresses and blouses should have material in good enough condition to remodel for satisfying results. You may have to invest in some new material, trimming, buttons or patterns, and it's not budgetwise to spend either money time on material that isn't worth remodeling, no matter how much you've liked the garment in the past.

Refitting Saves Many Garments

Dresses and blouses which fit well will rarely be delegated to the deep, dark corners of a closet. Doesn't it stand to reason that clothes should fit you well so that you'll get the most out of them? Good fit simply means that you look pleasing in your garment. This should not be too loose so that you have a sack-like effect, although if some proportions of the body are large, it's best to have them fit loosely enough so there is no pulling or gaping, or tightness to show each individual fold of flesh.

If you are on the slender side, be part of a dress or blouse pattern which intrigues you. Use only the yoke for the old dress. These yokes may also be made in sheers or contrasting solid colors, if you prefer them to lace.

Whatever fabric is chosen, it should be in keeping or good contrast to the dress material. Plain dresses can be given the scoop necklines with little alteration, and then be worn with some of the luxurious new costume jewelry. For a softly feminine change to a plain dress, you might like to bare the neckline more, which would be in keeping with new fashion trends. Then add a ruffle for trimming, and use some of it on the flap pockets at hips, or on the sleeves.

Another idea for adding dash to a plain dress in the classic style would be to use plaid ruffling for a plunging type neckline, with similar ruffling for the sleeve trim as well as the skirt ruffle, especially where extra length is needed.

Many dresses can be made entirely new looking with the addition of a bolero in a gay and contrasting shade when the original dress is dark.

Flanders also objected to possible arms commitments to Europe if we signed the pact. He said that if vast arms shipments are made to Europe we don't know what will happen to them in case of communist domination of nations benefitted.

Senator Scott W. Lucas, the Democratic senate floor leader, said that the treaty imposes no legal obligation for an arms program, but added such a program is needed just the same.

The Truman administration seeks a $1,130,000,000 program to rearm western Europe.

ENGLAND: More Austerity

Sir Stafford Cripps, chancellor of the exchequer, has placed a new austerity program before the British people. He announced that Britain will reduce her spending in the United States and Canada by $400,000,000, or one-fourth, in the current fiscal year.

THE BRITISH financial situation is more serious than Secretary of State Acheson has made it appear. However, it is not insoluble. British difficulties cannot be attributed to the American slump. The British will benefit from declining prices here of raw materials and food. Inflated war prices are blamed for the rapid consumption of America's 1946 loan to England.

There is taking place in England, according to a recent poll of the British Institute of Public Opinion, a shift of political sentiment toward the right. A general election now might turn the Labor party out of office.

Union leaders promised to try to end London's wildcat dock strike as more soldiers, sailors and airmen went into the miles of wharves to unload ships and move cargoes of food.

protest, thus averting a nation-wide steel strike. The fact-finding board, appointed by the president will study the dispute over a fourth round of postwar wage increases and pensions and group insurance -and will make recommendations. The United States Steel Corporation had asked President Truman to alter his terms for a peace proposal with the United Steelworkers. as a steel strike deadline rushed closer.

The corporation demanded that the president's proposed fact-finding board be given no power to suggest a settlement. The union threatened to strike against four companies - U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic and Inland. These firms are against any fact-finding boards outside the Taft-Hartley act.

Phillip Murray's big steel union agreed to a 60-day postponement of the walkout at companies which agreed with the president's proposal. The Taft - Hartley act provides for an inquiry board with no power to make recommendations.

Earlier, Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. (D., N. Y.) flayed Benjamin Fairless of United States Steel in a speech before the United Automobile Workers in Milwaukee for not acceding to the president's proposal.

"YARDSTICK" Cancer Gauger

A "yardstick" for measuring the growth of cancer has been reported discovered.

A simple, quick and inexpensive method of gauging the growth or decline of a cancer was reported by Doctors Phillip West and Jessamine Hilliard of the medical school at the University of California.

The technique is based on an analysis of blood compounds and will measure the effectiveness of curative treatments. It is not a cure itself, nor is it a test for the presence of cancer.

A wooden chest, evidently lost from a passing ship, was washed up onto the seashore property of a retired captain. A beachcomber noticed the chest, liked it, and A carpenter and his neighbor had an argument about the ownership hauled it to his cottage. When the captain found out what had occurred, he sued the beachcomber for the value of the chest. The latter argued that neither of them really owned it-so the first finder could keep it. However, the court upheld the captain's claim. The judge said that the owner of the seashore property has prior rights.

HOLLYWOOD .- School is out in Hollywood and the movie stars' sprigs are getting summer jobs.

As movie stars, of course. Gloria Swanson's daughter is talking about a screen test; Charlie Chaplin's son is starring in a play; John Barrymore's boy is sweating over his movie debut. Even Judy Garland's baby is a movie veteran.

To old-timers in Hollywood, this looks like where they came in. Joan Bennett's daughter is testing for one of the biggest parts in her mother's new picture, pr duced by her stepfather. Harold Lloyd says Harold, Jr., will be in his next comedy.

"His sisters think he's very funny," Lloyd said. "They nevel laugh at me. Oh, the trials of being a father."

John Barrymore, Jr., a 17-yearold copy of the great profile, is earning $150 a week for the first acting he's ever done.

"The ham came out in me when I was 15," young Barrymore says. "I took a walk and looked at the stars a long time. All of a sudden I knew I had to be an actor."

He's trying to see all his famous father's pictures now, he added. He'd previously seen only "The Invisible Woman."

Sydney Chaplin, Charlie's 22year-old son, is a big hit in the 'Circle Players' "Anna Lucasta." He's been acting with them a cou ple of years and says he'll do his first movie when they make one. "My dad's very proud of me," he allowed. "He never misses a show." Fifteen-year-old Melinda Marhas talked her stepfather, kev Walter Wanger, into testing het for the part of Rebecca in "The Ballad and The Source," whit will star her mother, Miss Ben nett.

Lesson from Britain

Hard times and doing withoutthat's still the order of life in Britain. "Austerity" is the official name for it. True, a little sacrificing is not harmful to anyone. But as a political system or way of life, British "austerity" is going to continue looking a bit drab (as a cloak for socialism), when you compare it with the private management and freedom of enterprise we know in America. Britain, in effect, is telling America what not to do.

Fact of Life But at the moment, the British experience is helping underscore an economic fact that needs more underscoring here in America. That fact is this: increases in wages mean higher prices. Economists in our country have known for a long time that this is true, yet the popular view of it insists that the boss can go on but compared with prewar indefinitely granting increases, year after year, without ever raising prices at all. The British know better.

It seems that Sir Stafford Cripps, who is in charge of money matters much spinach as the markets in England, is right now urging British workers (even they who own inmample, 114,000 tons of spinach dustry and run the government) to work harder without higher wages. to coast. The rest - about If the Britishers do this, the reasontons - matured for the most | ing goes, there will be more to export to America. Then, Britain will It went to processors at have more dollars with which to buy lower than the fresh-market the things her people need. Shrewd

Another Round?

You see, the British are driving to get into as much of the American market as possible. Sir Stafford recognizes that if British workers should demand increases in wages, prices of British goods would make it impossible to compete successfully on the American market. In other words, the British (even the labor government) know that increases in wages do mean higher prices.

Is Sir Stafford counting on prices going up in America? Well, at least he is laying plans to compete with American manufacturers-and another round of wage increases over would send up prices so high that Sir Stafford would have little trouble in getting rid of everything Britain sells, from pottery to Austin motor cars.

Forced Prices

Foreign trade is good for our nation, just like it is good for the British. It's a two way street. If we fail to get into the competition ourselves. then our goods will stop moving as fast as we know our production lines can move them.

This lesson Britain is teaching us works at home, too. The one thing we want to do is to keep production going, for we know that our people want jobs and have the capacity to consume. But if we are going to keep public utilities and petrol forcing prices upward, we may one day realize that depression is here

Melt-in-Your-Mouth Pies Need Know-How (See Recipes Below)

Pastry Perfection

ARE YOUR PIES wonderful to look at? Do they have a meltingly tender crust? Is the filling a delightful suprise in-stead of a disappointment? Unless you can answer a resounding "yes" to each of those three questions, better take a good look at tips given in this column. They'll help you reach pastry making perfection if you put the hints into practice.

Pie is a dessert to have at any luncheon or dinner, whether light or heavy. It might be a rich apple pie, topped with scoops of ice cream if the meal itself has been shy on calories.

Pies may be baked or chilled. Their crust may be pastry or crumb. Their fillings may be fruit, berries, juice or eggs or combina tions of these, so you see how much variety pie can give your meals. If you have some especially bright and lovely berries or fruit, don't hide them under a top crust. Place a lattice crust or crumb topping or a lacy fluting of whipped cream on the pie, and let everyone enoy the handsome looks of the

Singing Holidays

Lesson for August 14, 1949

IF A CITIZEN of the U.S.A observed all the holidays that are officially counted as legal, somewhere in his wide country, he would have 43 days off every year. Holidays are a national habit in all coun-tries. Not content with what the law gives us, we take our personal vacations besides. But how many holidays do we sing about? (One might even Dr. Foreman dare to ask, how many are worth singing about?) In the United States, there are known to this writer no New Year songs, none for Decoration day or Labor day, none for Armistice day, none for the various birthdays celebrated hither and yon. (Who ever heard of a song to commemorate Thomas Jefferson?) We may not even sing on our personal vacations, we are too busy working up a suntan. On the other hand, we could hardly think of Independence day. Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter without being reminded of the songs that go with them-The Star Spangled Banner or America the Beautiful for the Fourth of July, Now Thank We All Our God in November, and all the Christmas and Easter carols.

God and Country

IT looks as if some kinds of holi-days produce songs and others don't. It appears to be a general rule: If the holiday is specially patriotic or religious, then people sing; otherwise they don't. God and country, in short, arouse emotion and enthusiasm which (for example) the memory even of a great man like Jefferson, or the planting of a tree, does not. This is generally true throughout the world. It was true in ancient Israel, for many of the Psalms are holiday hymns, festival songs. Some years ago a religious denomination issued a new hymn book. One minister roundly denounced the book because it had introduced a few patriotic hymns. 'My Country, 'tis of Thee'' has no place in public worship, he said.

If that man had been a closer student of the Psalms, he would not have made such a criticism. Most patriotic hymns are really prayers for one's native land; Psalms 105 and 106 are only two of a number of Psalms which are in the best sense of the word patriotic.

If the reader will look through the Psalms for himself, noting all the references to God and to Israel. remembering that Israel was the name of the poet's country, he will be convinced that in those times as in these, love for God and love for country are singable.

Hallelujah

OUR word "Hallelujah" is Hebrew, and comes from the Psalms. It means "Praise ye the Incidentally, it is a relig-Lord!" ious word, and should not be used, as it so often is, irreverently or lightly. Psalms 111-118 in our Bible were sung as a group, and called the Hallel, or the Praise. The Hallel was sung regularly at the three great holiday festivals: Passover (near our Easter time). Pentecost (in early summer, ancestor of our Whitsunday), and Tabernacles (in the fall).

When our Lord had his "Last Supper" he and his friends would sing these very Psalms. The "hymn" they sang before they went out was very probably the latter part of this group, 116-118, always sung at the end of the Passover meal.

The note of praise in these Psalms is very strong. They are not in a minor key. . . .

Parodies

SAD FACT today is that the A un-Christian world, which does not understand religion at all, has taken over our religious holidays but leaves the religion out. The result is a parody, something without rhyme or reason. Take a look, next winter, at Christmas greeting cards for sale. You will find scotty pups, all sorts of things, more easily than you will find true Christmas messages.

For people who are not Christians, Christmas is only Xmas, a time for exchanging useless presents, a time for shopkeepers to make money.

And as for Easter, there are cities where the big items are only the bunnies and the parade, neither of which has the slightest thing to do with the real Easter.
