Mechanized Troops Fight On in Libya As Nazis Show New Power in Russia; Arming of American Merchant Ships Indicates Change in Convoy Plans

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Above photo shows the first United States merchant ship as it was being armed under permission granted by terms of the recent congressional revision of the neutrality. Armed merchants are now permitted to pass through war zone to belligerent ports. This picture was taken at a yard near New York city as the gun was being lifted to the ship shown in the background.

JAPAN: Formula

As a Tokyo war cabinet framed its reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's "peace" formula reports began coming in from Shanghai telling of a southward movement of Japanese troops and war materials in a thrust at Thailand. Following a White House visit by Saburo Kurusu, special Nippon envoy, the state department announced that there were no further conversations scheduled with Japanese diplomats seeking an answer to the Far Eastern situation.

BRITISH: Libyan Push

Those who had expected a swift and continuous British victory in Libya, similar to the great push by General Wavell's army which swept the Italians back into Tripoli, were doomed to disappointment.

It was evident that there was plenty of fight in the German mechanized forces, even when apparently hopelessly trapped.

Yet Berlin had not been cheering over the situation. The British sweep at least temporarily had knocked the German-Italian formations back on their heels, and there was little evidence but that the Rommel army would be extremely fortunate to extricate itself from the trap even with heavy losses.

But there also was evidence that the British tanks, many of them of American manufacture, were unable to cope on better than even terms with the German machines.

The battle, once the two armies had made actual contact, was confusing in the extreme, and it showed in sharply etched lines just how possible it is for very small groups of mechanized forces to throw much larger bodies of men into complete confusion.

A rather large South African contingent was so knocked out by a German mechanized attack, even within the so-called iron ring of the British that it was practically dispersed, though some parts of it were able later to attach themselves to the New Zealand forces.

Yet this very Nazi group which had accomplished the maneuver later was shot into hurried retreat and practical dismemberment by a smaller group of British tanks. It seemed that the element of surprise and speed counted for far more in modern warfare than did numbers of men or machines.

A chief favorable report from Libya the British part was that all reinforcements sought to be brought by the Germans had failed except those furnished by air.

There was considerable hope among the British that this factor might decide the battle, perhaps swiftly. Some Nazi tanks were immobilized because of lack of fuel, and there were reports that the Germans were forced to fly supplies to their men by transport planes towing gliders.

But the British losses admittedly had been heavy, and only a complete victory would be regarded as a reward for the expenditures of men and material in the sudden and automatic drive.

STRIKES:

The sudden end of the coal strike had been followed swiftly by the announcement that the threatened strike of the long-distance telephone operators also had been removed from the picture by a reported $100,000 pay increase.

That there was to be a new trend in the picture was seen when President Roosevelt called together majority and minority leaders in Congress, and gave them the "green light" as far as anti-strike legislation was concerned.

CONVOY: Changes

As reports began to come in of the arming of American merchantmen, and the belief grew that they would be sent direct into British ports, it was said that the whole relationship of the United States and the British on the convoy question in the Atlantic was to undergo a change.

There were no definite details as to what this change would involve other than it would be a more considerable taking over by this country of the whole problem of supply of lease-lend materials.

Considerable interest was evoked by the Harriman speech in London in which the American envoy said that the U. S. navy was "shooting German planes," though there had been no detailed reports of such engagements.

The general feeling was that before Christmas American ships would be going all the way to Britain, armed merchantmen, protected by the American navy to a point close to the British isles, and from there in convoyed by British naval vessels and British planes.

SEVEN: Join Nazis

Seven smaller European nations, most of them those regarded generally as more or less favorable to Axis domination of Europe, formally joined the new Axis anti-Comintern pact at a conference in Berlin which was spotlighted by Von Ribbentrop's claim that the Russian war "already had been won."

The remainder of the struggle, Von Ribbentrop said, was solely between the Axis powers and Britain, together with her transatlantic helpers.

He said: "If it should some day come to war on the one side between the United States of America and Europe and Asia on the other side, I state once and for all that the responsibility lies with President Roosevelt."

"Whether the United States comes into the war or not, it cannot alter the Axis victory."

RUSSIA: In a Bad Way

The Russians were being forced back on their heels in the Moscow territory by the German system of shifting their chief attack forces from one front to another, vastly complicating the Reds' defense problems.

After a long attack which had been concentrated on the southern front, and during which the Soviet defense of Moscow had been carried on with such success that the Germans were reported on the retreat in many sectors, the Germans then suddenly smashed back at Moscow, and broke through the lines in several important districts.

The Russians were frankly worried again by the situation, and said that the weather, which had been a strong ally during the past weeks, had again turned more favorable to the attackers, who were taking the advantage to shove home bitter assaults all around Moscow.

At one point they had been reported within 30 miles of the city, and from at least four different sectors came dispatches telling of breakthroughs by the Nazis.

The Reds' southern armies, taking advantage of the forces thus shifted to the north, were on the counteroffensive, and were driving westward at a good clip, having made in one line a distance of about 120 miles.

But experience had shown that such advances by either side could be quickly lost again should the pressure change once more.

Entering Protest

Mathew Woll (left) and William Green, a vice president and president, respectively, of A.F.L., pictured as they called on President Roosevelt to protest against anti-strike legislation. Bristling with defiance, Green stated that A.F.L. has been co-operating with the defense program but that now it is in a position of being penalized for "acts of some irresponsible leaders" outside his organization—presumably a dig at the C.I.O.

COMMANDOS: Make Sortie

The British Commandos tipped in, these columns as about to become active again, worked a sortie on the Normandy coast, and returned with only one man wounded.

British sources felt that the official recognition by the Germans of the attack made by the group was the best proof that at least some of its objectives had been accomplished.

What made the landing on the French coast particularly notable, however, was the issuance of a statement of sharpest criticism against the British high command by a retired naval officer and hero of the last war, Admiral Keyes, founder and trainer of the Commandos.

He accused the staff of preventing the use of this body of men for several months when their use properly "might have changed the character of the entire war."

Also included was a brief description of the Commando which made the Normandy attack, men wearing black uniforms, their faces blacked with burnt cork, choosing a moonless night, armed with Tommy guns, Bren guns, knives and clubs, and sworn to achieve their objective no matter what the outcome.

They returned with only one man wounded slightly through the arm by a machine gun bullet. The Germans said they "had been repulsed with heavy losses."

EXPLOIT: By Nazis

Two Nazi airmen will go down in history as two of the most daring and imaginative of prisoners of war.

Escaping from a British prison camp, they got British flying coats, copied the buttons by carving them from wood, and covering them with tinfoil, and had them sewed onto their under uniforms.

They then walked brazenly into a British airdrome, announced they had been assigned to bomb Dutch airports, got into a bomber and took off. Knowing they needed more fuel to get to their destination, they landed again 100 miles away and asked for gasoline.

Suspicious, airport attendants suggested they have a bath and a luncheon before taking off. The Nazis were reluctant to take off their clothing.

While they were in the bath their garments were examined and the false buttons discovered. They were arrested and sent back to the prison camp.

BULLITT: A New Job

William C. Bullitt, former ambassador to France, had been given a new and important assignment by the President, that of special envoy to the Libyan area, especially to study lease-lend needs.

The former ambassador's mission was to cover the entire Near East, including the Nile river area, the Red sea and possibly the Persian gulf.

The campaign in north Africa, President Roosevelt felt, is an important and severe testing ground for American-made arms, and the ultimate success of the effort there may depend on the rate at which replacements of damaged machines can be made.

The President was asked by the newsmen where Mr. Bullitt's headquarters would be, and where he could be reached. The President chuckled and said "In a plane."

Bullitt was to fly there and fly back and make his personal report on his observations to the President as soon as possible.

BRIEFS:

Paramaribo: American troops occupying Dutch Guiana in behalf of the government in exile, received a hearty and simple welcome. French press reports pointed to the incident as a forerunner of American attempts to occupy Dakar. The troops in Dutch Guiana were sent there to protect bauxite mines.

Chicago: Twenty-five hundred A. F. of L. freight handlers ended their strike here under terms of an agreement which gave them a 12 1/2 cent an hour pay increase.

U. S. Merchantman 'Packs a Rod'

One of the first American merchant ships to be given a gun in accordance with the revised neutrality law which permits U. S. ships to enter belligerent ports and combat zones is shown here with the gun being bolted to the stern mount. Photo was made at an East coast port. The ship's name is withheld at the navy's request.

'U. S. Help Avails Nothing'—Ribbentrop

Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, is shown (center background) as he addressed the foreign ministers of Axis satellites after the signing of the anti-Comintern pact in Berlin. Von Ribbentrop said that Hitler already has won the war in Russia, and warned that U. S. help to Russia or Britain would avail nothing.

Secretary Hull Takes Japanese to White House

Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese envoy bearing his government's final terms for peaceful settlement of Japanese-American differences in the Pacific, is shown (right) with Secretary of State Cordell Hull (center) and Japanese ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura, as they entered the White House grounds after leaving the state department.

Before Miners Accepted President's Terms

Flanked by district leaders William Hynes (left) and Patrick J. Fagan (right), United Mine workers' chief John L. Lewis is shown after leaving the deadlocked "peace conference" with steel officials. Their failure to agree on closed shop issue was the signal for a general strike in "captive coal mines." Later, the miners agreed to submit the dispute to mediation and the strike ended.

Back From Russia

Laurence A. Steinhardt, U. S. ambassador to Russia, is shown surrounded by reporters after he arrived in New York, en route to Washington to report on Russia's stand before the Nazi machine, and the effect of U. S. lease-lend aid.

'Player-Manager'

Louis Boudreau, 24, has signed a two-year contract as player-manager of the Cleveland Indians. Boudreau, who is shown above, was the Indians' shortstop for the past two seasons.

Axis Masquerader

First photo of the capture of the German ship "Odenwald" by U. S. navy cruiser in south Atlantic. Boarding crew of U. S. sailors is shown alongside of the "Odenwald" which flew the American flag as U. S. S. "Wilmote."

Farmers Vote On Market Quotas.

TAHOKA, Dec. 4 (Special) — Farmers of Lynn County will vote on Marketing Quotas, Saturday, December 13 in a National Referendum, according to Vernon C. Willhoit, Chairman of the Lynn County A. C. A. Committee.

Marketing Quotas must be approved by at least two thirds of the voters before they will become effective, Willhoit states. The referendum has carried by a large majority in the past, but the voting has been comparatively light and every cotton producer is urged to vote.

The Community and County Committee met Thursday to formulate plans for holding this Referendum and announce that an effort will be made to contact every producer before the 13th.

Every producer should take advantage of their voting privilege whether for or against, Willhoit urges.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR CARPENTERS, SO SHOTTEN-SIMPSON SAY

Considerable carpenter work, calling for both large and small jobs, is underway now, according to Beyrl Shotten and Lee Simpson, local carpenters.

While Shotten and Simpson had been busy building, or repairing houses, other work has claimed their time, so they say. Most of this latter work, work of such "specialists," can be done at the lumber yard, they explain, and later carted to its logical place. Two of such jobs were built this last week by these followers of Chick Sale, and they were duly proud of the triangle hole effect achieved.
