Five wells have already been completed by the city which is believed to be of sufficient capacity to furnish ample supply for the city's needs for some time to come.

The contract calls for the installation of the system which covers

High School Orchestra Treats Friends

The High School Orchestra, upon closing the business part of their year's work, found they had more money than they knew what to do with so they decided to give themselves a treat to a trip out of town. After some deliberation and considerable argument, Lamesa was selected for the place and a trip to the show for entertainment.

Those of the orchestra to entertain were Misses Maggie George, Kitty Aylor, Messrs Will Edd Tredway, Ralph Beach and Travis Everett.

The guests were: Misses Wynona Sorrells, Edna House, Erma R. Palmer, and Fannie Dell Busby, Messrs Gordon King, Eugene Cook, J. V. Shook, and David Chandler.

The crowd gathered in Miss George's rooms and yet out from there for Lamesa all in a gay, jolly mood. They motored to Lamesa and after enjoying a good picture at the Palace Theatre, every one was treated to delicious ice cream and drinks at a local drug store, after which the return trip home was made. Every one felt that the High School Orchestra had closed its school year in a pretty fine way.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Baptist Missionary Society of the Baptist church met Monday afternoon in a Bible study lesson. Studying the last ten chapters of Exodus.

Mrs. Ed Goddard led the Devotional. Bro. Horn led the prayer.

LARGE TABERNACLE BUILT FOR EVANGELISTIC MEET

A large tabernacle was erected Monday afternoon between the First Christian and Baptist church, where Rev. Sam P. Jones, Christian Evangelist, will hold services every evening at 8:30 o'clock, assisted by his wife, who leads the singing. The meeting will continue throughout the week, and possibly longer. According to the interest manifested. So far the crowds have been large and the attention and interest splendid. Don't fail to hear these inspired, talented servants of God.

Row upon row of business and residence lots are shining with cleanliness in the City of O'Donnell, the result of the combined effort of the better Homes Chairman, Mrs. J. F. Campbell and the Business Men's Luncheon Club of O'Donnell.

Mrs. Campbell, with a competent committee, devised the clever plan of dividing the city in to sections and the boys who registered to assist in cleaning the lots, each a contestant for the prizes, ranging from $5.00 down.

Now, we don't mean by this story that O'Donnell is spotless for there is still a lot to be done before the committees are satisfied. But the work will not stop until they are satisfied, so if you haven't already cleaned, or had your premises cleaned, you had best be about it, or you will no doubt find yourself becoming terribly embarrassed by some one coming around to do the work for you.

Cleaning Going Forward

Loads and loads of trash and unsightly debris have been moved, leaving our little old town so pretty and clean everyone is beginning to wake up. The clean up fever seems contagious and no one ever saw the like the way people are cleaning, raking and burning trash.

Judges Are Selected

The judges selected to judge the work of the contestants were E. L. Sorrells, Ben Coin, and W. K. Horn. Judges awarded prizes as follows Wednesday afternoon:

Parks Singleton	132	$5.00
Newman Caddell and Ollie Seymour	128.3	$5.00
W. Barber and Ollie Caddell	4.00
Clyde Ash, jr.	98.3	$4.00
Cecil Watson	90N83.00
Edward Clayton	90	$3.00
J. Monroe Hamilton	90	$3.00
Odell Wilson and Burnett Griffin	86.4	$2.00

It was indeed a great day for O'Donnell when such women as Mrs. Campbell became interested in the civic development and we have our eyes upon a pretty city park, and perhaps a community club house in the near future for when a ball is started to rolling it just gathers speed and momentum as it travels. Keep your eyes upon O'Donnell!

Mrs. Jim Burleson of Tahoka was a business visitor in O'Donnell Wednesday.

W. P. Knox, Scout Executive of Lubbock was in O'Donnell Monday morning and met with the directors of the Luncheon Club. He announced a district Scout School would be held in O'Donnell beginning Tuesday night and continuing for four consecutive Tuesday nights. The school he stated would be for the benefit of men who are interested in boys. The sessions will be held at the Grammar school auditorium. Luncheon will be served each Tuesday night beginning at 7 o'clock by the women of the different churches of the town. The scout programs will begin immediately after the luncheons are served. Mr. Knox stated each of the programs would be highly entertaining as well as educational for all men who attend.

Visitors Are Expected

Men from Lamesa, Tahoka and other neighboring towns are expected to be in attendance. Six patrols are expected to be in attendance from O'Donnell representing as many organizations of the city. Patrol leaders were appointed as follows: C. H. Mansell, leader for the Baptist church; Clyde Ash, leader for Adult Scouts; Ben S. Coin, leader for merchants of O'Donnell. J. P. Aylor, leader for the Luncheon Club; J. D. Fairley, leader for the Fire Boys; E. M. Wilder, leader for the Presbyterian church; and Bro. Weems, leader for the Methodist church. Each of these men will head a patrol of six men who will compete for honors throughout the four sessions of the school.

Who Can Attend

Any man over 18 years of age who is interested in boys is eligible to attend these courses. While the courses are designed primarily for the training of Scoutmasters, Assistant Scoutmasters, Troop Committeemen and Council Members they are also of special interest to Sunday School teachers, boy workers, fathers and any others who love boys. Attendance at a training course does not obligate a man to take an active leadership in Boy Scout Work.

Fee

A fee of five dollars will be charged each member taking the course. This fee will be used to supplement the training budget of the South Plains Council, as the fee will only about half cover the training cost. Meals, Text books, pamphlets, notebooks, pencils and training material will be furnished.

Leadership

The Leadership and Training Committee will act as the Troop Committee of the training troop. The troop officers will be selected from qualified men. The Scout Executive will act as Senior Patrol Leader. In this capacity he will be able to use his training experience to the best advantage. Scout exhibits covering all phases of Scout work will be on display each night.

BONDS ARE THURSDAY AT INTEREST RATE

The $40,000.00 water bond sold last December was sold Monday night for a nice premium accrued interest. A premium of $28.00 with accrued interest paid by Brown Crummer and buyers of Dallas. The accrued interest amounted to a little more than $2100 for the city more than $42,000 spent on a water system.

Will Be Piped At Once

It is long now, until abundant pure water will be run through the city mains. City officials stated after the sale of the provided unforeseen difficulties do not arise, water would be run into the mains within ten days. This will no doubt prove to the majority of the O'Donnell.

Wells To Be Dug

Well has already been completed and proven a good production more will be sunk in the city which it is believed will amply supply for the city's immediate future.

COUNTY WINNER LIVING ROOM CONTEST

Anderson of Slash-L, was County winner in Class One in a wide living room contest. He was so wisely promoted over Home Demonstration Mrs. Halsey.

Mrs. Anderson began improving her room, she started with a bare room, bare walls, bare floor, furnished with a bed, trunk.

Knowing that they had the money to improve the room, Mr. Anderson told his wife that he had a plan, and that he would kill the snake and sell the balance. Anderson canned 108 beef and realized $15.00. Part of the money was used to pay for the ceiling of the room. Paste papers were used to cover the walls which an inexpensive shade of light gray wall paper was used.

At the Andersons used half inch of yellow and black from painting the house two years ago. They mixed remnants of paint and produced a color which was wood work, baseboards and the edge of the conglomum.

On a chest of drawers containing an old dresser, mirror, made window box, and were painted a bright buff of their left over paint.

Anderson exchanged her old window draperies to a neighborhood snappier blue and white striped cloth which she had some lengths of unbleached muslin, she had on hand the neatest, cleanest kind of fabric for her windows.

For her chairs and scarfs, the Andersons made a set of drawers were made in the living room, the curtains finished with fringe. Mrs. Anderson made from cotton warp.

Anderson took good pictures and made them into a book and made cords and made the cotton warp to hang on the wall.

The A. & M. Agent who Anderson said she never in anything to equal the Andersons had had at the same cost.

Anderson said when she told her husband that she had entered the living room contest that he said, "Well, you are a real club woman and a real experienced with home work and was not to be outdone by the girl and determined to win in the county."

DOMESTIC SUGAR INDUSTRY FACES SERIOUS CRISIS

Philippine Product Made
With Cheap Labor and Duty Free Called Menace.

Chicago.—Rising flood of Philippine sugar entering the United States duty free has confronted the domestic sugar industry with the gravest economic crisis in years, according to W. L. Petrikin, president of the Great Western Sugar company of Denver.

"In view of the resolution introduced by Congressman Timberlake of Colorado to protect the domestic industry against the increasing invasion of Philippine sugar by permitting not more than 500,000 tons annually to enter free," said Mr. Petrikin, "Philippine Commissioners Gabaldon and Guevara have attempted to convince congress that the domestic industry is not menaced by unlimited imports of duty-free sugar from the islands.

"The statement of the commissioners that from 1923 to 1926 the annual average export of sugar was 399,969 tons is entirely misleading. They neglected to state that between 1923 and 1926 Philippine exports to the United States increased 60 per cent and that between 1918 and 1927 exports have leaped from 60,537 tons to 473,674 tons, a gain of more than 680 per cent.

"A 300,000-ton limit on Philippine sugar imposed by congress in 1909 was discontinued in 1913. Between 1909 and 1927 sugar imports from the islands had increased more than 1,168 per cent as compared with an average increase of 113 per cent from our other chief sources of supply, including Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Louisiana, and the domestic sugar beet industry.

"Over-expansion in tropical countries has confronted the domestic industry with the gravest crisis in years. Domestic sugar companies have recently found it difficult to make ends meet. Continuation of unlimited duty-free imports from the Philippines, which are not legally defined as an integral part of the United States, may ultimately wipe out an income to our continental farmers of $100,000,000 annually and a large investment in factories."

Quitague—Membership in the newly organized Quitague Business Mens Luncheon Club is now over 30.

GRADE SCHOOL EXERCISES HELD THURSDAY EVENING

The exercises of the seventh grade Thursday evening in the High School Auditorium was quite a lovely affair. When thirty six boys and girls finished the seventh grade and graduated into high school.

Mrs. Paul Gooch, teacher of the Class, and master of ceremonies, had planned every thing to perfection to the most minute detail. The stage was prettily decorated with the class colors of blue and gold and pot plants and ferns.

The professional was very impressive with Mrs. A. W. Gibbs at the piano, as the class proceeded down either aisle the girls, all dressed in dainty white organdie frocks, and the boys in appropriate attire.

Rev. Weems opened the exercises with a prayer.

Miss Sarah Fulton gave the salutatory address in a very splendid way. Alvis Tredway gave a musical reading, "Just a Wearyin' For You."

Hollis Hunt was valedictorian and surely did prove himself worthy of the honor.

Dr. Fisher, pastor of the First Methodist church of Lamesa, was introduced by Mrs. Gooch to deliver the sermon of the evening.

Dr. Fisher talked upon "The Five Conceptions of Man." His talk was wonderful, his flow of language eloquent, while his talk was not beyond the understanding of the children to whom it was addressed.

The class sang their song in a most beautiful and talented way.

Mr. Rickard, superintendent of the O'Donnell Schools, introduced Mrs. Gooch, to whom the credit for the splendid class was due.

Mr. Rickard also presented the diplomas to the happy boys and girls.

Dr. Fisher closed the program with a prayer.

FOOD PRODUCT ADDS TO FARMER REVENUE

New York.—Margarine is a food product of peculiar interest not only to the country's housewives but to 5,000,000 producers of live stock in the nation.

To the home manager it represents an economical way of whitening down the food bill. From the live-stock raiser's viewpoint, increased consumption of margarine means additional revenue, since certain fats of beef cattle and hogs are worth more when used in the manufacture of margarine than for any other purpose.

The production in the United States of 242,854,608 pounds of uncolored and 14,501,929 pounds of colored margarine for the year ending July 30, 1927, meant millions of dollars more revenue to farmers than if no margarine had been produced. Margarine is primarily an animal product in the making of which oils made from the choice fats of beef and pork are used. These are combined with small quantities of the highest grade of refined peanut, cottonseed and coconut oils and blended with milk, salt and sometimes butter to produce the finished product.

In the countries of Europe, margarine is much more of a recognized food than in America. The average Dane eats 45½ pounds of margarine annually, the Norwegian 35½, the Hollander 15 2-3, the German 12¼, and the English 11¼ pounds. Per capita consumption in the United States is only 2 pounds yearly.

MRS. H. L. HOHN WINS FIRST IN DAWSON COUNTY LIV- ING ROOM CONTEST

In the contest for the best improved living room during 1927-28, Mrs. H. L. Hohn won first prize in the second class in Dawson County with every indication for a chance to win first in the district.

At a cost of forty dollars, Mrs. Hohn has converted a drab, unattractive room into one of such soft, lovely tones and colors that a person entering the room can but marvel at the wonderful change.

The Hohn's live in Dawson County but they are barely out of Lynn county and O'Donnell claims them for their very own.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. (Buddy) Baldridge of Clovis, New Mexico, visited their sister, Mrs. Ben Moore Sunday. Buddy says that the fine rains sure hit the wheat just in time and that his father, H. E. Baldridge, has fifteen acres that is simply beautiful.

Joshua Bingham's Neighbor

By CLARICE GRAY

(Copyright)

MR. JOSHUA BINGHAM walked around his small domain, regarding the neatly kept walks. It would have been an impudent grass-hopper that dared disport himself among the Bingham grasses—and as for hop toads! The sight of one almost drove Mr. Bingham frantic.

Yet he did not look like that kind of man. He was a quiet, peaceable banker, a bachelor who belonged to several clubs, a great reader, and he lived alone with his housekeeper, Mrs. Henrietta Flood.

After Mr. Bingham had regarded his own premises he went to the southern fence and looked over the white railings—he retired in confusion blushing all over his rather nice face. "Henrietta," he said to Mrs. Flood, "did you know that the cottage next door had been rented?"

"Sold, rather," said Mrs. Flood handing him a cupful of tea. "Have you seen the woman with bobbed hair and knickers on?"

"I believe I did catch a glimpse of somebody," he said hastily, and after that Mrs. Flood went out into the kitchen and he was left to worry about the new neighbor. "Now, I wonder what kind of a woman is living next door," he thought disconsolately. "I caught a glimpse of her and Henrietta confirms it—a bobbed-haired, middle-aged woman! The terrible chicken houses—the rank grass—the gone-to-seed garden—the unpainted house—I was crazy not to buy the place myself, fix it all up and rent it to somebody I knew!"

The next morning Mr. Bingham stepped slowly down the street toward the bank. He had to pass his new neighbor. She was out in the front yard now, fresh and pretty looking in a pink frock, directing Mr. Bingham's special helper, Benjamin Brown. Benjamin was tearing down the vines that grew away to the roof of the little hobse. Also the honeysuckles that covered the front veranda were on the ground.

Mr. Bingham lifted his hat in a stately fashion and the woman said "Good morning," in a pleasant, cultivated voice. At the bank he called the cashier, "Mr. Morse," he said gravely, "who is the woman who has bought the cottage next door to me?"

"Why, that is Miss Lucy Sweet—she writes stories for girls. The minister and his wife used to know her in Amityville—they say she is a splendid woman."

It rather spoiled Mr. Bingham's luncheon to go home and witness Miss Lucy Sweet, dressed in khaki overalls, standing on a scaffold painting the front of her little house, but a woman of her age and profession to be painting a house was too much to be borne!

Within two days the little house was finished and the vines renailed to the trellis. Then Miss Lucy Sweet and Benjamin began to clear up the place, and at last the whole place was clean and sweet inside and out, with chickens, white leghorns, just like Mr. Bingham's, in the neat white pens. Then flowers sprang up as if by magic, until all the hardy shrubs were blooming and the seeds were pushing sturdy shoots through the rich soil. About this time Henrietta had established a back-fence acquaintance with Miss Sweet.

Mr. Bingham approved of the little white house, which made a very dainty neighbor to his own small home, but still he could not reconcile himself to Miss Lucy Sweet's working clothes.

Because it was his duty as a neighbor and gentleman, Mr. Bingham came home from the bank one day at three o'clock, put on his best clothes, took his walking-stick and went to call upon Miss Sweet. Her little maid came to the door.

"Yes, sir, Miss Sweet is sitting in the front room," said the maid, and she opened the door, and sure enough there sat Miss Lucy Sweet, reading proof sheets and busy with a pencil. Her pale pink silky lap was filled with six small kittens whose mother blinked in a basket nearby.

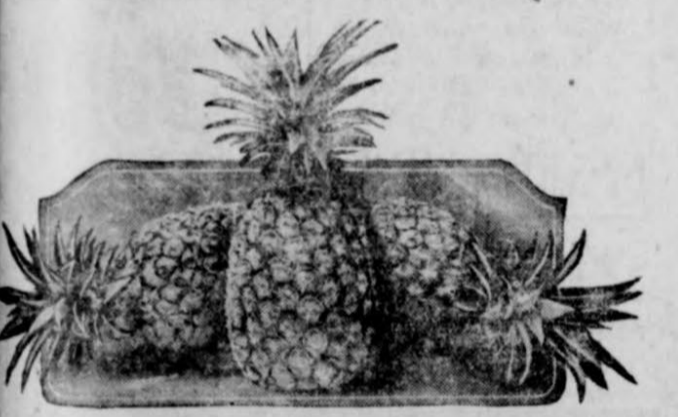

"Do forgive me for not getting up," she said to the man who appeared to be so much older, and they shook hands warmly, and fell to talking about the kittens, and then about flowers, and about the two houses and about books. The maid brought tea and fresh cookies, and Joshua Bingham went home thinking that in spite of her short, softly-curling white hair, Lucy Sweet was a charming little woman.

He could never have told you how the weeks flew by as the days passed and there came to be scarcely a day that he failed to stop at Miss Lucy's for a cupful of tea and the latest news about what she was writing about.

Mrs. Henrietta Flood secretly looked for a new job. "My eyes don't deceive me," she averred to her friends, and gossip was rife long before Mr. Bingham awakened to the fact that he was, for the first time in his life, deeply in love. Then, one November day, in her small room he told her how it was with him, and pretty Miss Lucy shed very bright tears and allowed him to kiss her cheek.

"And so," said Mr. Bingham happily, "we will have our own cottages joined together and made one, just as we shall be, eh Lucy?"

"Of course, Joshua," she said.

An Ancient Symbol of Hospitality

PICTURESQUE old rectory in Rhode Island was recently being restored. Covered with vines, its colors mellowed by age, the rectory had stood for one hundred years. The door on this old home was formerly the doorway of the Admiral deTernay, and is one of the famous carved doorways of New England. When the dust of years was brushed from the ancient carvings and the central ornament disclosed, it proved to be a pineapple.

Only one other similar doorway will in existence—that on the State House on Washington square. Commenting upon his architectural design a writer of "Parish News" says:

"The pineapple in the midst is an ancient symbol of hospitality, and no symbol of hospitality must be allowed to decay over the doorway of a priest, whose doors must always be open to the sheep of the flock. May the old pineapple be a symbol of a real welcome for many years to come!"

Today, the pineapple on the door symbolizes hospitality. Much of the beauty of old doorways has been lost, but the spirit of hospitality is still fostered, and the hostess who serves pineapple extends to the guest within the door, the ancient warmth of greeting.

The newest aid to the hostess who serves pineapple is the Hawaiian pineapple "tid-bits". They are made from the same sun-kissed Hawaiian pineapple as the sliced product, and they lend themselves to dishes in which smaller pieces of pineapple are preferable to larger pieces.

There are some delightful ways of serving pineapples. George's Waldorf Salad.

quarter and core three apples and cut into tiny cubes. Add medium size can of Hawaiian pineapple tidbits, one-fourth cup walnuts broken in pieces and one-half cup celery cut in thin inch-long slices. Mix with thick mayonnaise dressing and serve on lettuce.

Baked Pineapple Tomatoes—Scoop out centers of six uniform-sized tomatoes. Chop six slices crisp bacon, tomato center, and one onion. Add medium size can of Hawaiian pineapple tid-bits, and enough bread crumbs to make the right consistency to stuff into the shells. Cover with more crumbs and grated cheese. Bake in a hot oven (500 degrees) for twenty minutes.

ANOTHER FALLACY

A manufacturer of hotel supplies was taking shop. "We've been right here for thirty years and we know every hotel man in our territory and they all know us. They know what we sell and they're going to buy from us as they need. There's only so much business to be had, anyway, and if we advertised we couldn't increase our business."

But this man overlooked just two things.

One of them is that during recent years another generation of young hotel men has come upon the scene and among these youngsters this manufacturer's name is not such a household word as it was among the other fellows.

The other thing he overlooked is that he has competition that did not exist years ago. These competing supply houses are aggressive and they're getting a lot of the business that formerly came to this manufacturer.

There's no such thing as being so well known that folks will patronize you whether you go after the business or not.

A good way to test this out is to let us publish some advertising about your merchandise, and watch the results.

Whether you manufacture peanut butter or cooking stoves, the logic is the same. Advertising will not only keep the business you have, it will build additional business among the scores of new customers that spring up year after year.

About Bachelor Buttons
By DEAN DOUGLAS

KITTY was making very good progress toward success in business and felt that all was well, except for one fact that stared her continuously in the face.

Kitty had fallen desperately in love with a man whom she had not even met and yet whose smiling eyes haunted even her sleeping dreams.

His was the face that appeared in all the advertisements for Bachelor Buttons, the patent button that Kitty had put on the market and was selling in huge quantities.

The young man pictured on her buttons was so happy, so completely in harmony with the whole world merely because of his shirts, his pajamas, his trousers and his coats there were the wonderful little buttons that put all people in a good humor—simply because they were there to stay.

Kitty had gazed for hours at the handsome man with the golden mustache and heavy waving hair and the daintily trimmed Van Dyke beard and thought she had never seen anyone so disconcertingly good looking.

The firm who had got up the advertising pages for Bachelor Buttons had certainly been in luck when they found the model for their pictures.

Kitty had written straight back to the town in the Middle West and secured the sole agency for the button for the Eastern territory.

And all during the months following, when her sales, begun in a small way, had arrived at most flattering heights, Kitty had kept right on admiring the young man in the photos.

The owners of the patent were nice people to deal with and had more than once complimented Kitty on the enormous sales her office was effecting.

All over her office were framed the various advertisements in which Mr. Buttons, as Kitty called him for want of knowing his real name, was pictured. She felt sometimes that all was vain in the way of success and the making of money if she was to go to heaven all the days of her life.

She even went so far as to prow around some of the advertising offices with a view of picking up information as to where and how models were obtained and whether or not they were usually of the professional type.

Then one bright and shining morning Kitty had a long letter from the firm in the West who manufactured the buttons.

"Would Miss Woodrow be likely to come out and pay a visit to the firm? We feel that we should like to make the acquaintance, in a more personal way, of our Eastern representative and will gladly pay all expenses."

Kitty sat down and pondered over the letter. Certainly she would like a trip out through the West, and, since she was feeling a bit fagged, she wrote back saying she would accept and would take great pleasure in meeting the firm.

When Kitty hopped off the train at Kankatoe in her well-cut costume of beige that so exquisitely matched her soft hair and threw into strong relief the bright blue of her eyes, she smiled at the big chap who seemed waiting for her and her alone.

"You are Miss Woodrow," he queried and Kitty realized that the young man meeting her had not expected—well—perhaps he had been looking for a more business-like person. "I'm John Vickers."

Kitty then smiled and held out her hand. So many letters had passed between these two that somehow the getting acquainted in person was not going to be difficult.

And much to her own disgust she realized that for the first time in two years her heart had leapt at the sight of a man. That organ had reserved all its leaps and bounds for the young man on the button advertisements. She felt truly tickle.

"You know," said Mr. Vickers, confidentially, "you were really the means of putting our firm on the map at all. We were just a little one-horse concern, trying to float the button my dad patented, when your letter came along. It's been wonderful the way you've made a go of it. I'm taking you straight to our home, if you don't mind—my mother is wanting much to entertain you."

"I am more than charmed," laughed Kitty, and when Mr. Vickers laughed and she cast a keen glance at him, she knew the whole story.

Young Vickers and her Mr. Buttons were one and the same person.

Her face must have reflected much of her inward elation for young Vickers almost gasped as he looked deep into her eyes.

"I say, I do believe you're as glad to meet us as we are you," he remarked frankly.

"As a matter of fact—perhaps I am more so. Even with that quaint little Van Dyke beard and mustache—I should like to have met you."

Vickers laughed loud and long and very boyishly and happily.

"We didn't even have the price for a regular model—at that time—so they used me and I certainly felt silly about it all."

Kitty smiled softly up at him. "You needn't have," she said, and knew now that all was really well.

The Daughter of His Enemy
By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

JOHN SHERMAN had great plans for his son Philip, but they did not include marriage in the near future.

"It's all very well, my boy, to play around with the girls in a friendly sort of way, but avoid any entangling alliances for the present."

Therefore the bit of news he had just read was a thunderbolt for which he was unprepared.

"Mrs. Lesbia Blodgett of 54 Mansfield street announces the engagement of her daughter Gloria to Philip Sherman of West Park road. Miss Blodgett is a scintillating member of Whose Sweetie Are You?"

Perhaps it is best to allow Philip's father a few minutes to get control of himself and to shift the scene, meanwhile, from his private office to the outer room where Philip, all unconscious of the irate summons about to be his, lingers beside the desk of the firm's most capable stenographer, Eloise Smith.

Fate had been partial to Eloise, making her as pretty as she was capable. Her slender fingers continued to fly nimbly over the keys of her typewriter as she firmly refused what Philip was asking of her.

"No, Philip, I will not lunch with you. Run along now and sell your bonds or whatever it is you do to make yourself invaluable to your father."

"Have a heart, Eloise—"

"Philip, you know as well as I do that my job here would be worth exactly nothing at all if your father ever learned that I was the daughter of his old enemy. I will not philander with his son. And that's—"

At this moment the door of the inner office was flung open by an unseen hand within. "Philip!"

Both heads turned at the note in John Sherman's voice.

"Yes, sir?" Then the door closed upon both of them.

Eloise frowned. Was it possible her employer had found out that the daughter of the man he had once hated, now dead, was drawing a salary as one of his stenographers?

But, within, the older man was thrusting the newspaper under his son's eyes and pointing out the offending item with a finger that shook.

"Who is she?" demanded his father.

"She's the third girl from the end in the front row with the pink hat," said Philip.

John Sherman's rage became apoplectic. "Now, don't get off any gag about her being poor but honest."

"Oh, she's poor, all right!" said Philip.

"What d'ye mean?"

"Oh, forget it, dad!" said Philip wearily. "After all, it's your fault. You told me to play around with the girls but not to marry them. Well, some girls don't want to be played around with. There was a girl—only she happened to be the daughter of your old rival, W. B. Smith. I knew you wouldn't stand for her—"

"Who said I wouldn't stand for her? Don't you suppose I'd prefer you to marry W. B. Smith's daughter a hundred times rather than this—this—"

"Gloria's all right," said Philip, "and her father's a respectable merchant. Sells fish—and clams."

"Get out of here!" shouted his father.

Ten minutes later Philip had left the building and had found the nearest telephone booth.

"I say, Gloria," he was demanding presently, "have you seen the newspaper? What's the big idea?"

A hearty laugh came over the wire. "My wicked publicity man," she said. "I told him, like I told you yesterday, that I was engaged. Only you know it was to Jimmy Marvin. But this fellow, my not mentioning any names, thought it was you, or more likely he thought there'd be good advertising for me by using your name. He's a bird. But don't worry, old dear. It's being corrected in tomorrow morning's paper."

Another mad dash and Philip was back in the outer office. "Eloise," he said, rather out of breath, "you must go to lunch with me. I want to ask you to marry me and you'll admit a stuffy office is no place for a proposal."

"What would your father say?"

"That's all right," said Philip easily. "He as good as gave his consent twenty minutes ago!"

Philip strode to the door of his father's office and flung it open. "I say, dad, here I am back again, and didn't you tell me you'd a hundred times rather I married Eloise here than some other people I won't mention?"

But Eloise had risen and was standing with her hand at her throat. "Please!" she begged.

John Sherman had risen also, and his glance had been none too kind. Now, falling on the girl, it softened.

"You're a great deal too good for my crazy son," he said. "W. B. Smith may have been my enemy years ago, but he was a man of character and his daughter would be like him. Oh, yes, ever since you came here, looking at one with your father's eyes, I have known who you were. For Heaven's sake, if you can make a man out of Philip, you're welcome to try!"

Eloise and Philip looked at one another. Then, "I've got a thing or two to explain to dad as well as you," he said. "Afterwards, may I take you to lunch?"

"Freedom of Individual Effort Our Greatest Need"

Says Merle Thorpe

When you flip the switch that gives you light, or cooks your food, or runs your radio, you draw upon an instantaneous supply of electric energy. The immense power plants, sub-stations and transmission lines through which this energy comes to you often make the electric light and power business seem like little more than a vast machine.

Yet the planning that keeps electric service ready to meet the growing volume of industrial and domestic needs, the engineering genius which daily increases its usefulness and lowers its cost, and the great funds of capital required to turn plans and engineering genius into service-producing equipment—all these depend upon the service of individual men.

Men built these systems and men must run them. And since time began, men have only done their best where individual initiative has had free play.

That America today enjoys an electric service which in efficiency and extent cannot be equalled in the world, is due to the individual efforts of men working under the American principles of free business enterprise.

Safe Farming

Safe Farming

Safe Farming - Farming in the long run is a business. The farmer who does not know how to manage his business will not succeed. To make farming safe, crops must be grown and marketed. Live stock and live- stock must be marketed. Live stock and live- stock must be marketed. Live stock and live- stock must be marketed.

which mean lower crop production costs. Live stock farming feeds the soil, while one-crop farming robs the soil. If the one-crop farmers of the South, collectively, would grow their own food and feed, reducing to that extent the acreage and supply of cotton, the higher price which the staple would bring would go far toward compensating them for the smaller amount they would have for sale. They would receive nearly as much cash for cotton as they do under their present method and they would have much more cash left after taking care of necessary farm and family expenses. Thus, they could largely free themselves from fear of those twin disasters, an excessive total crop and ruinously low prices, or a crop failure with high prices and nothing to sell.

The great biennial session of the General Federation of Womens Clubs is to meet in San Antonio, Texas, May 28 to June 7. A fine spirit of cooperation and enthusiasm is being shown by every Texas Club Woman. This will be the first time that Texas has ever had the honor of entertaining the General Federation. And every Texan is going to be justly proud of the lovely Blue Bonnet State.

Fruit Tonics For Spring

A GENERATION ago spring was the time to dig sassafras root for tea and gather herbs with medicinal properties. Today we add fruits with medicinal properties to our diet. Pineapple recipes for spring tonics have come into prominence with the somewhat recent discovery that canned pineapple—which is the only ripe pineapple in our markets—is a potent aid to digestion, so much so, that it is employed as a component part of certain pre-digested foods, and that the juice is a curative in cases of throat troubles. Its valuable vitamin content and energizing natural sugar make it a particularly important food for the spring season when body tissues need renewing.

spoon grated nutmeg and let stand two hours. At the time of serving, add one quart ginger ale, one cup Hawaiian pineapple juice and enough water to make strength desired. Pour over cracked ice. An apple a day, discourages doctor visits, and Baked Apples with Pineapple minimize druggist bills as well. Pare and core apples. Fill centers with crushed Hawaiian pineapple to which has been added a little butter melted and some sultana raisins. Put apples in a pan with a little water flavored with a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Bake until tender. Baste frequently, remove from oven, sprinkle with granulated sugar mixed with a little cinnamon.

Hawaiian Pineapple Salad furnishes the needed fruits and leafy vegetable in the most delightful form. Use one medium can sliced Hawaiian pineapple, one-half grapefruit sliced, one tart apple cut in small cubes. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with a sweet dressing made from one cup juice from maraschino cherries. Garnish with some of the cherries.
