egro Goes On Rampage; Gets Employer on Run

Magnon (Tusson) Everett, genial easy-going proprietor of a local barber shop, got in a hurry for one day in his life, according to friends who saw him leave his shop last Wednesday afternoon, when Fred Smith, porter and shine boy for the shop, went on a rampage and took up of affairs.

According to our information, the negro had been drinking some rotten whisky, and had just enough to be sure enough mean." At any rate, he decided to put everybody out of his barber shop, locking himself in the shop and everybody else on the outside looking in.

Fortunately, there were no patrons at the shop at the time, and no papers in the beauty shop which is in the rear of the shop. Miss Merle Work, proprietor of that department, did come across the street and was asked just in time to see the excitement.

Deputy sheriff John Johnson was called, and finally succeeded in opening the door and placing the battery porter under arrest. He was taken to Tahoka and placed in the county jail where a charge of drunkenness was filed against him.

Proprietor Tesson state emphatically that he fails to see the humor in the situation, and that he is in the market for another porter and shine boy.

No one was injured in the fracas.

Blackwelder Infant Buried Last Monday

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Blackwelder have grieved with them this week in the death of their infant daughter, who died Sunday morning, June 9. Funeral services were conducted at the residence on Monday, June 10, with Rev. A. Loper in charge of the rites. Interment was made in the city cemetery.

The baby lived only five days, but a frail little thing from the beginning. The attending physician had given no hope for her survival, so the end was not unexpected by the family and friends. The mother, proud with grief, is doing as well as could be expected.

The Index joins with the community in extending sympathy to the bereaved family.

Attend Funeral Of Relative Wednesday

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Wells were among other relatives who were present at the funeral services for Mrs. J. W. Burleson. The services were held at the First Baptist church at Lamesa Wednesday afternoon. Deceased was Mrs. Wells' aunt.

Mrs. Burleson passed away at her home in Lubbock Tuesday afternoon after a long illness. She is survived by her husband, four sons and three daughters.

Miss Sylvia Robb, county home demonstration agent, and Mrs. E. I. Hill, better half of the editorial staff of the Lynn County News and herself formerly home demonstration agent for our county, were here Friday inspecting club bedrooms.

Hubbers Win Game From New Moore

Breaking the jinx which has lost two games this month, the Hubbers rallied from their slump Sunday afternoon and defeated our visitors from New Moore in a fast game on the local diamond. Scores were 4-2.

The Hubbers lost a game to Wilson last Sunday and one to Post the previous Sunday, so their return to their old form was most welcome to their fans. Sunday's game was a good one from the opening pitch to the last one, and for several innings it was anybody's game.

The Hubbers sincerely appreciate the support which is being accorded them this season, both financially and by attendance. Indeed, some fans are almost too loyal and interested, because they seat themselves right on the base line, which sometimes makes it a bit hard on the players. We saw Lefty Melton miss a good catch Sunday afternoon because when he ran back to get it he stumbled over spectators seated too close to the base.

So, on behalf of the boys, we are requested to ask that fans remember to park themselves and their cars far enough from the field that they will not interfere with play.

Miss Hester Gates Elected to High Office

A news dispatch from West Texas State Teachers College at Canyon states that Miss Hester Gates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gates, has been elected president of the Young Women's Christian Association at the college. Miss Hester has attended this school for several terms and will be there again this summer. She recently attended the annual conference of the Southwest Council of Student Christian Associations, which was held in Hollister, Mo.

Miss Gates has been active in work of this kind most of her life, and the Index, having had the pleasure of working with her at intervals during the past ten years, feels that the Association could have elected no more competent and sincere person to this high office.

Rev Theatre To Give Guest Tickets Weekly

Rev Theatre announces a new feature this week, in the form of guest tickets to the persons or person whose names appear in the theatre program which is published weekly in the Index.

Beginning with this week's issue in the regular ad there will appear the name of some individual who has registered in the bank book at the theatre. These names will be selected by chance, numbers being taken from the bank night ticket box and then looked up on the register.

Read the ad carefully, and if your name appears, please clip the entire ad, and present it at the ticket office. This pass will be good for ANY ONE Night in the week, but for ONLY ONE NIGHT.

The management expresses the hope that everyone will watch for names, and that the lucky person will enjoy the hospitality of the theatre.

Guy Thompson Is Improved After A Blood Transfusion

Condition of Guy Thompson, local boy who has been in West Texas hospital for almost two weeks for treatment of an injury received from an accidental knife stab, was reported by hospital attendants to be much more satisfactory following a blood transfusion Sunday. The blood was borrowed from his brother Doc.

The patient has been in a very serious condition for more than ten days, suffering from a collapsed lung. The hospital staff gave as the cause of this collapse, the pressure of blood lost in internal hemorrhage when a small blood vessel was severed. Young Thompson fell on a knife during play at his home here, inflicting the wound which is blamed for the complications.

Lynn County Has Had Six Post Offices

To the majority of our readers, anything connected with the early development and growth of Lynn or Dawson county is of much personal interest. C. H. Doak, founder and present resident of O'Donnell, has always of old of history or lore about pioneer days on the South Plains.

A few days ago the question of post offices in this raw, new country was being discussed, and Mr. Doak was called upon to outline this part of our development.

The first post office in what is now Lynn county was giving active and fairly regular service to the ranchers and cowboys of the section long before Lynn county was organized. Mr. Doak stated. It was located at Grassland and was operated by a Mr. Seeds. It was first recognized in 1891.

The second postoffice was also in being before the organization of Lynn county, and was kept by Mr. Horace Randall in a half-dug-out at a site about one and one-quarter miles from the present site of New Lynn. It was called Lynn also.

The postoffice at Tahoka came into being about the time the county was organized, in 1903. Mrs. W. E. (Ed) Henderson was the first postmistress.

Down in our part of the country, Mrs. D. W. Harris kept the postoffice in their ranch headquarters at Central. This place is just north of the W. L. Gardenhire farm. This one was established in 1906.

The O'Donnell postoffice was established in 1910 with Mr. Doak keeping it in the old hotel building. At that time the hotel was located in about the center of the Warren block of buildings, and was about the only building here for some time.

The Wilson postoffice was established in 1911, but Mr. Doak had forgotten the name of the first postmaster.

Editor Invited To Attend Barbecue

The Index editorial staff has been invited by the Big Bend-Davis Mountains Chamber of Commerce to be its guest in the Chisos and Davis Mountains on July 4th and 5th. The letter says in part:

"We want you to see the natural beauties of our mountains and the development of your State parks by the Texas State Parks Board with the help of the Civilian Conservation Corps."

"We plan to show you as much of both the Chisos and Davis Mountains Parks as possible in the short time, and have planned an old fashioned barbecue for each day. We hope you can reach the Chisos Mountain park by the afternoon of July 3rd.

"Come out and get acquainted with us. It will be cool and we will celebrate our National Independence in this mountain setting at an elevation of six thousand feet."

The letterhead states that Presido Martin Fort Davis, Marathon, and Alpine are members of this organization, with Mr. Alan R. Fraser of Alpine president and Frank McCollier, also of Alpine, secretary. Both these gentlemen are well-known to a number of our citizens who make the trip to that section to hunt and fish each year.

Of special interest to us, and we believe the list will be interesting to our readers, was a column of points of interest in that part of the country. Among them we find twelve separate and distinct mountains, including the Davis, Chisos, Chinati, Bofellos, Christmas, Santiago, Del Norte, Glass, Tierra Vieja, Rosillas, Puertocitas and Coronas.

Three old forts, Fort Davis, Fort Pena Colorado, and Fort Leaton are listed, as are the Shafter Silver Mines, the famous Rimrock Drives, McDonald Observatory, Fort Clinch, Quicksilver mines, Boquillas Canyon, Mariscal canyon, Santa Helena, and Bofellos canyons.

Notice To Holders of Cotton Certificates

If you have any 1934 Tax-Exemption Certificates left over from your 1934 ginning, you should bring them to the county agent's office at once. These certificates cannot be used for tagging cotton unless they are replaced with 1935 certificates. If you do not need these old certificates, you can pool them in the special pool which is now opening up. This special pool will operate for 120 days and at the close of that time will send out checks for what is sold and transfer the unsold poundage to the regular full pool. These certificates will not be sold for less than five cents per pound. We have plenty of blanks to pool these certificates and to send them in for replacement.

If you have not signed an application for 1935 certificates on your farm please do so by the 25th of this month. This means not only the cotton contract signers but the nonsigners as well. Any applicant signed up after this date will run the risk of not receiving certificates for this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Are In Tennessee

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Davis write home that they are having a most enjoyable trip through the old states and that this vacation is one of the best they have ever had.

Wild Horse Races To Feature Reunion

Stamford June 18.—Horses known for their aerial gymnastics rather than fleetness will be selected for the wild-horse race, which will be a new feature of the rodeo at the Sixth Annual Texas Cowboy Reunion to be held here July 2, 3 and 4.

The race will be included in the program of each afternoon and night rodeo performance but not at the morning matinee. Four wild horses will be placed in the bucking chutes with halter and rope barebacked, but with halter and rope. At the starting signal, the horses will be released from the chutes and each contestant and his helper must saddle his wild bronc and ride the length of the arena and return. The on crossing the finishing line first wins the race. As the horses are calculated to do more bucking than running, the outcome of the race will be difficult to predict. Only four contestants will be allowed to enter at each performance.

Another unique feature of the Reunion rodeo each year is the contest for the best cutting horse. The contest is judged on the performance of the horse as well as the skill of the rider. Eight horses judged best in an elimination contest to be held at the morning show July 3, will compete in the finals on the afternoon of July 4. First prize is a hand-made saddle, Claude Lifford, wagon boss of the Matador ranch, Matador, and his cowpony, "Highpower" won the contest last year.

One of the favorite events of the Reunion program of entertainment is built, is a contest for cowboys over 35 years of age. Ed Powers, 37, Beckenridge, won the coveted saddle in this contest last year.

The rodeo, which is the main attraction around which the Reunion program of entertainment is built, is not staged by professional performers, but is limited to cowboys actually employed on the ranches of Texas and adjoining states. In this sense it is an authentic survival of a typically western institution. Just as the cowboys of half a century ago gathered after the work was done for a frolic and such many sports as steer-riding and bronc busting, the cowboy of today, scattered over hundreds of miles around, bringing their favorite cowponies for the Stamford Reunion.

Besides the special features, the rodeo arena, where all cowboy sports of calf roping, steer riding and bronc busting. These events will be staged each day. Day money totaling $1,600 will be awarded in these events, besides the handsome hand-made saddles which go to the champions in each contest.

The rodeo arena, with improvements made this year, has a seating capacity of 10,000, which is expected to care for the crowds even at the peak shows. However, visitors will likely find the night performances more pleasant due to the cooler night air. Performances will begin each day at 8:30 A. M., 2:00 P. M. and 8:00 P. M. The usual low admission prices will prevail, general admission to the afternoon and night shows being 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children and grandstand seats 25 cents additional. The charge for the morning matinee will be 25 cents for everyone. All tickets are tax free due to the fact that the Reunion is a non-dividend organization.

Local People Attend Singing Convention

Mr. and Mrs. Carey Shook, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mansell, and Miss Margaret Vermillion attended the annual convention of the Panhandle Song Writers' Union which was held at Lockney over the week end.

Because of the absence of one member, Miss Norma Vermillion, the O'Donnell Girls' Quartet did not enter the contest held Saturday afternoon. It is believed that they were unanimous in the belief that if they had entered, there would have been little question as to their winning honors and the first prize.

Place for the convention next year has not been named as yet, but will be announced later.

Ice Cream Supper Saturday, June 29

Members of the Home Demonstration club at Three Lakes will sponsor an ice cream supper at the Three Lakes school building on Saturday night, June 29th.

Ice cream will be sold for five cents per bowl, and proceeds will be used to defray expenses of a delegate to the short session of the A. F. S. convention which is cordially invited to come and enjoy the evening.

Small Boy Loses Finger Nail In Planter Cogs

The loss of the right thumb nail is being taken quite philosophically by Master L. E. McMillan, Jr., 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. McMillan, as this is the third time he has lost the nail from the same thumb.

His latest accident occurred Friday afternoon when he went to the field to assist his daddy plant the seed crop. The young man was assisting in the work by tamping the seed down in the planter box, and in some manner the thumb became caught in the cogs, the nail being mashed off before his father could disentangle him.

He seemed not at all concerned over it Saturday afternoon, apparently taking the little thing like the loss of a thumb nail as entirely too unimportant to take up the time and attention of a busy person like him self.

Child Sustains Injury From Rusty Nail

Margaret Sue Goddard, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Goddard, was treated at the office of a local physician Thursday afternoon for a wound inflicted when she stepped on a rusty nail.

The injury was in the ball of the right foot, and was very deep and painful. Following the nature of such wounds, this one appeared to be closed when the little girl reached the physician's office, but he carefully re-opened and probed it, sterilizing it completely. Then, to be sure no serious complications might arise, he administered the anti-tetanus serum.

So far as we have been able to learn, Miss Margaret Sue has suffered no ill effects from the injury.

H. D. Club Offers Bedspread at Auction

Ladies of the local Home Demonstration club are offering a rare opportunity to the public in our territory to secure a beautiful candlewick bedspread.

As we understand the plan, the ladies are selling popcorn for ten cents a sack. When you make your purchase, you also write your name on a slip of paper, which is then placed in a sealed box. One June 25, which is the last Saturday in this month, the box will be opened at the regular Trades Day drawing, and one of these slips will be drawn out. The bedspread will then become the property of the person whose name is drawn.

The spread is on exhibition in the window at the Economy Dry Goods store here, and the ladies are serving their wares just in front of the store. They report a very good sale for last Saturday the sum of $5.60 having been realized. Proceeds of the sale will be turned in to the treasury of the club, and will be used as we understand, to pay expenses of a delegate from this club to the annual Farmers Short Course at A & M sometime next month.

Gulf Station Installs Wash and Grease Rack

Following their policy of always improving the efficiency of their service, the Gulf Station and Frank Shumake of the Gulf Filling Station have this week built a washing and greasing rack.

They have set a very reasonable price on these two jobs and invite the public to give them a trial.

YOU CAN'T WIN

The reckless driver, like the habitual criminal, can't win.

Every newspaper carries the evidence of that, in accounts of those whose lives have been sacrificed to speed, to incompetence, and to carelessness at the wheel.

The tragic end to the great career of T. E. Shaw, the famed "Lawrence of Arabia," was headlined in the papers of the world a few weeks ago. Not yet 40, Shaw had done war service whose value to the English cause was so great as to make it almost unappreciable. He had distinguished himself as a translator of Greek classics. He was one of the most brilliant of living archaeologists. He was a military and mechanical genius of the first rank. It was certain that his period of greatest achievement still lay in the years ahead.

Shaw's "hobby" was to drive automobiles and motorcycles at incredible high speeds on country roads. According to news accounts, his cycle was going at around eighty miles per hour when he was struck to death by a bicycle. A few days later he died, without regaining consciousness. His doctor said that it was best that he did not live, because of the terrible injuries his brain had sustained in the accident. Congenital recklessness had robbed the world of one of its gifted minds.

Each year in this country alone, some 35,000 people die as victims of improperly driven motor vehicles. Among them are the famous and the obscure, the brilliant and the mediocre. Each life lost means that the nation's resources have been sapped—each death means misery and unhappiness to others. Reckless driving is an unbreakable game, at which the player always loses—and which likewise penalizes and robs the innocent.

MORE TYPHUS FEVER IN TEXAS THAN OTHER STATES

Austin, June 18. —Wars have been lost by generals and won by epidemics of rat-borne diseases, according to Dr. Hans Zimler in his recent book "Rats, Lice, and History." Texas has more of the disease than any other state, but typhus fever, than any other state, according to Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

There are two types of typhus fever—the epidemic or Old World type and the endemic or New World type known as Brill's disease. In the former the death rate is very high and in the latter, commonly found in Texas, it is very low. The most cases appear during the hot months. The rat and mouse are the reservoirs of this disease and it is spread to man by fleas, lice or ticks that have fed on an infected rat. The cycle being rat-flea-man.

The symptoms of typhus fever are very similar to those of typhoid fever, except the course of typhus is generally two weeks. The onset of the disease is usually sudden, with chills, fever, headache, and general body pains. Nausea may be present. The fever rises rapidly to a maximum of 105 degrees. There is also a reddish mottling of the skin and a hacking cough is generally present.

Typhus fever could be prevented by the eradication of rats and mice. This would not only result in the prevention of much suffering but would be of great economic value as it is estimated that the damage by rodents amounts to about twelve million dollars annually in Texas.

TEXAS SECURITIES ACT DEFINES "SECURITIES"

What is a security? Under the new Texas law regulating the sale of securities, the term includes any form of stocks, bonds, mortgage certificates, any form of commercial paper, any certificate in or under a profit sharing or participation agreement, lease or royalty interest in an oil, gas or mining property. In addition there are many lesser known forms of securities.

The Texas Securities law, which replaces the old Blue Sky Law, on May 23, 1935, is broad in its definitions of what constitutes a security, according to Secretary of State Gerald C. Mann.

Before purchasing any form of security, such as those named above, the buyer should determine if the person doing the selling has registered with the Secretary of State. Emphasis is placed on the fact that in no case does the State guarantee or endorse any security. But registration is not the extent of responsibility on the part of the seller. Under the law he may be held accountable for representations as to fact made in the sale of a security.

NEW SECURITIES ACT EXEMPTS FEW TRANSACTIONS

"I own a piece of royalty near an oil field. I want to sell this interest," one man recently inquired of the Secretary of State. "I understand that oil and gas leases and royalty interests are classified as Securities under Texas' new Securities Law. Will I have to register and get a license before I can sell this interest?"

In answering the question the Secretary of State pointed out that isolated transactions are exempt under the terms of the law. But if a person is engaged in the business of buying and selling oil leases, royalty or other such interests, he must qualify as an issuer of securities. The lease peddler must qualify.

In a single deal it is not necessary to qualify under the Texas law. The same applies to vendor's lien notes and other forms of commercial paper. However, if a person makes a practice of selling commercial paper, the transaction is not an isolated case and that person must qualify under the law. The simple sale of a single and individual transactions are exempt. Multiple transactions are not.

ON TEXAS FARMS

"My mother and I sold eggs to pay for my bedroom improvements which cost $7.30," reports a young bedroom demonstrator from Rusk county. Examination of the improvement indicated with that expenditure indicates that his young person has learned early that ability, initiative and industry are effective supplements to cash.

The list includes a new mattress, homemade from home grown cotton; mattress and spring covers made from washed and beached sugar and fertilizer sacks; book shelves made from scrap lumber; the floor refinished with "crank case oil" and waxed; new shades; new curtains; and old furniture refinished.

Six hundred and eighty-two 4-H club girls in 80 counties are entered in an improved bedroom contest, and 11,365 4-H Club girls are cooperating with them and improving their bedrooms in definite agreed upon ways. In this work they have the opportunity not only to learn to make the most of what they have, but the principles involved in making a comfortable and healthful bedroom. From a young bedroom demonstrator in Kaufman county we get this—"It is important to have circulation of air in the bedroom", and to accomplish this she has put steps on the top shingles of the windows so that they may be lowered from the top as well as from the bottom.

Cothes closets also have the approval of these 4-H Club girls. From Colville county this comes—"Daddy says I am as proud of my closet as he was his first pair of long trousers"—and that story describes how "Daddy" made the closet for his young daughter out of shipboard material with cream colored building paper. The top part was searated off as storer space for quilts. Shelves for linens and hats, a soiled clothes bin and a rod for clothes hangers completed the job.

When the Wilson Administration considered banking reform it carefully kept away from vesting central banking powers in a single institution and instead introduced the regional idea by creating twelve reserve banks located in different economic and geographical sections of the country. Mr. Hecht says a plan that has worked exceedingly well because the separate banks are under the guidance of men chosen on account of their intimate acquaintance with the problems and needs of their respective territories. He continues: "The great size and diversity of America tends to make a central bank undesirable. The central banks of Europe such as the Banks of England, France and Germany, cover areas not as large as some of our states. A central bank in the United States on the other hand would be called upon to administer the financial policies of an area larger than all of Europe, in which there are quite a number of central banks.

Moreover, history has proven that any banking system entirely owned and dominated by the government usually demonstrates much greater ability in aiding expansion of credit than in putting on the brakes at the right time to prevent undue inflation. The government and contracting credit. This is easy to understand because in times of depression everyone is urging the government to make money and credit easy and encourage expansion. "On the other hand, it always has been and always will be a difficult task for any government to call a halt in time of apparent prosperity because in the very nature of things the government would be very sensitive to public criticism and would hesitate to take any action which would tend to curtail business activity. It is such undue susceptibility to popular demands which makes government banking inherently weak.

"Our studies show that of all the central banks at present existing there are only four whose stock is owned by the government. The newest central bank is that of Canada, which opened its doors only a few months ago after a most exhaustive study and been made of the experience of all nations with the result that the stock of the Bank of Canada is privately owned."

The American Bankers Association, Mr. Hecht says, is convinced that central bank would not be in the interest of the public or the banks. His position, he added, is "well understood by the President and the leaders in his Administration for we have been absolutely frank with them in all of our discussions and have missed no opportunity for emphasizing that in our opinion no banking system will, in the long run, be sound if it is dominated entirely by the ever-changing political administrations. We should do all we can to keep our banking mechanism as far removed from partisan politics as possible."

GOVERNMENT BANK UNSUITED TO U. S.

Would Serve Politics Rather Than Business Needs, Says R. S. Hecht, Citing Previous Experiences.

QUOTES PRESIDENT JACKSON

Extent and Diversity of This Country Presents Different Situation From Europe and Makes Regional Banking Necessary.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A refutation of arguments in favor of a government-owned central bank system for the United States is presented in a statement by R. S. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, based on exhaustive studies of European central banks. He also points out the disastrous consequences of previous central bank experiments in the United States.

"Our present regional Federal Reserve System under private ownership is infinitely better for this country than would be a government-owned or controlled central bank," Mr. Hecht says. "If history teaches us anything, it is that it is almost certain that a central bank so owned would be run to meet the varying exigencies of the government in now, rather than to serve the commercial needs of the country."

Central banking has been tried twice in the United States, but was finally abandoned in each case. In the first which the central banks exercised became objectionable and unpopular, he goes on to say.

What Andrew Jackson Said

"The continued existence of the Second Bank finally became a bitter political issue and President Jackson succeeded in abolishing it." Mr. Hecht says. "Pursue me to quote from his farewell address: 'The immense capital and peculiar privileges bestowed upon it enabled it to exercise despotic sway over the other banks in every part of the country. From its superior strength it could seriously injure, if not destroy the business of any of them which might incur its resentment... If you had not conquered, the government would have passed from the hands of the many to the hands of the few; and this organized money power, from its secret conclaves, would have dictated the choice of your nearest officers. The forms of your government might, for a time, have remained, but its living spirit would have departed from it.'"

When the Wilson Administration considered banking reform it carefully kept away from vesting central banking powers in a single institution and instead introduced the regional idea by creating twelve reserve banks located in different economic and geographical sections of the country. Mr. Hecht says a plan that has worked exceedingly well because the separate banks are under the guidance of men chosen on account of their intimate acquaintance with the problems and needs of their respective territories. The impediments which the hard working bank robber now meets in plying his trade among small as well as large banks are described by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager American Bankers Association in charge of its Protective Department. In an article in "Banking" published by his organization.

"Protective equipment will minimize if not prevent loss," Mr. Baum says, "such as the silent automatic type of alarm, approved tear gas systems, several styles of handit resisting enclosures and timelocks, or axes equipped with timelocks, which can be set for intervals of a few minutes.

"The silent automatic alarms operate in the beginning of a holdup and through actions carried out by the bank employes in obedience to the bandits' own commands. They are adaptable to the smaller banks which continue to be easiest targets for bank robbery.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Nelson of the New Moore community was brought to the office of a local physician Thursday of last week for treatment of a case of flu. He is reported to be much improved today.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ray have spent several interesting days in the nation's capital, visiting points of interest there and on their route to Washington, and are now considering routes for their return, according to a brief note received by Mrs. E. C. Carroll. They have had a most interesting and educational summer vacation, one which will provide subjects for conversation for months to come.

THE MAN FROM HOOPER HAROLD TITUS

man's face as though fearful of what he might say next. "I don't get to get him somewhere right away," Martin muttered. "Got to... It's 'h'!" "My horse is just around the corner," she cried. "Bring him there... Oh, hurry!" Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He could feel blood smearing over his side and back. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him. "Tough, Dawn... to get you mixed up... In a mess... " "He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gust of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to fall about, warm breath fanned his face... and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply: "In here... Your room, Dawn... I'll phone the doctor." Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair." The wound was only a slender slit in the skin but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Ben's face, the strength from the splashing snow that lay relaxed now around Elliott's clear skin. "Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes closed. "I need an X-ray right in a few days... But what an escape!" He shrugged. Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit; he opened his mouth as if to speak, but slowly, incredulously, then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation. "Yes, a close shave," Martin muttered under his breath. "But now... He's in the best possible place in the world." The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in the deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture of his did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He did not look at her until the woman gasped. It was a light, light gasp; so light that Emory Sweet did not hear. But that her breathing was quick, and stood as though frozen in the posture. Aunt Em's head held rigidly back, one hand pressed against a cheek. Quickly, Martin's finger went against Emma's forehead, and he looked at her so instant and then slowly shook his head, a movement of unmistakable warning. Dawn entered the hallway from the living room and these two relaxed from the rigidity of their strange epnominine. Em bustled out into the kitchen and Martin smoothed the covers of Elliott's bed with a hand that trembled slightly. "Now, the boy's going to be all right," the doctor said. "I'll look in tomorrow. Quiet is going to be essential for a few days. You two women all right?" A close observer might have noticed that Aunt Em's eyes were oddly averted from John Martin's searching gaze, but that her breathing was quick, and "Why, it might be handy to have a man in the house tonight," she said, evenly enough. "I'm... I'm wondering if Mr. Martin would stay. He could sleep on the couch in the living room." "I'd be glad to," the man said and cleared his throat sharply. "There might be something I could do... for you." He had looked at Dawn on this last and it seemed that his voice caught ever so slightly. So it was arranged that he should stay through the night and the doctor left. Aunt Em carried the light out of the sick room and placed it on a table in the hall. She bowed here and there, occupied with a variety of minor errands and finally drove Dawn to bed despite the girl's protests of sleeplessness. Alone, she fixed blankets on the living room couch while Martin sat in the darkened bedroom. That done, she beckoned to him from the hallway. "They've confronted one another there a long moment. The woman's face worked queerly and she seemed at a loss for words. "What shall I say?" she asked, in a whisper. "Nothing," the man replied. "There is nothing at all to be said... Is there?" "Oh, you give me such a start!" "You're the first one... I'm... I'm too full of things to talk, now, Emma." He made an odd gesture toward the wall and the other followed him. "We're in the upstairs front room if we're needed," she said. "Is... Is there anything you need yourself?" He did not reply for a moment. Then, heavily: "Your help, kindly... A little later..." The woman did a strange thing, then. She snatched the apron and pressed it tightly against her eyes. "She didn't remember!" she sobbed. "Oh, what'll happen in this house next?" "I wonder," Martin muttered. "Yes, I wonder!" She left him, and he moved almost hesitatingly into the living room. He stood a long time just within the threshold and then went slowly about from picture to table, from book shelf to the hands in his coat pockets. Before this old photograph he stood for a long interval; beside that worn rocker he remained with bowed head, as one might who is suffering... or worn and agonized. When he came to the couch where he was to sleep that night his legs seemed to fail and he half fell, half slumped to his knees. He let his face down to the blankets and his fingers clutched them, gripping until the knuckles showed white... And a great, shuddering moan slipped from his deep chest. Grimly, Bird-Eye Blaine prowl. Tincep that night. He had let John Martin out as he drove through the main street; then proceeded to a lively barn where he stabled his team. On the way he had sighted Ben Elliott but later, although he took up a position before the post office and watched passers on either side of the street, he did not see him. He began making inquiries and found that Elliott had been about town but evidently Blaine was always some little time behind him. At the rear of Joe Pietto's hotel he watched movement through a lighted window which gave into a back entry. A man was there, closing an inside door behind him. He turned and buttoned his mackinaw with nasty movements and Blaine drew back into the shadows. The man went into the Red Bart saloon... The door opened; the man stepped out to see Ben's team still standing patiently in the deepening snow, past Dawn McManus' house to find only a faint light in the hallway, and from there to Able Armitage's at a run. Had the Judge seen Ben Elliott? He had not; and excitedly Blaine explained his empty search, the hasty departure of Red Bart, the neglected team. Able dressed and they went out together, searching the town, inquiring of late passers. "Something's happened!" Bird-Eye declared. "Something's went wrong with 't' by, Able! We can't find out what it is until mornin'. Thin, believe me, we'll have help aplenty!" "How so?" "Through the night, ten minutes later, a team went swiftly westward. They left town at a gallop; they breached high drifts across the way in frantic plumes, came to a blowing stop at the Hoot Owl barn. A moment later Tim Jeffers sat up and in sleepy bewilderment fought off the man who shook him and demanded that he wake up and listen. The storm subsided before sunrise. It was a vast, rolling country, and across it, from Hoot Owl toward Tincep, went teams. Five of them formed a sort of procession, drawing logging sleighs. Across the banks planks had been placed and the planks stood, and sat men; they were silent men, who drew on cold pipes, whose faces were set and grim whose eyes betrayed excitement. The Hoot Owl, then, following Tim Jeffers and Bird-Eye Blaine to Tincep to solve a mystery. In an orderly manner they left the sleighs and stood in groups while teamsters unshined and led their horses into a lively barn. Able Armitage came hurrying and he, alone, was welcome in that palanquin of intent men. Others of the town saw him gesticulate as he talked with Jeffers and Blaine, saw him shake his head and spread his hands as one will who has no answer for a pressing question. Old Tim turned to the crews and motioned them to him. The men gathered close and listened while he spoke briefly. Then the compact bundle of sleighs, Jeffers emerged and started down the main street, that body of shabby boys falling in to move shoulder to shoulder behind him. It was a strange spectacle, for that peaceful Sunday morning! Doors were opened; men and women peered out. They emerged and stood to watch. Now and then one hailed an acquaintance by the marching company by name replied to such greeting. Hatting caps and coats were donned and along the sidewalks followed a growing crowd of the curious. The breath vapor of the men rose in a cloud. No other spoke, far down the street a small boy yelled excitedly, across the way two women were muttering to one another, flinging quick, excited questions, disclaiming knowledge for fitting responses. They swung into the main street, old Tim wallowing in the long drift at the corner, his men tramping it down behind him. On down past Able's office, past the pool room and then, without a word of signal they halted... The halt was before the bank, over which Nicholas Brandon had his offices and his living rooms. The silence as they stood, every one of the hundred faces upraised to those proclaimed the tenant, was portentous. And then Tim lifted his clear, strong voice. "Brandon!" he shouted. "Nick Brandon!" "Brandon!" Tim shouted again and his men stirred behind him, swayed, giving up a low, short mutter. "Come out, Nick!" a teamster shouted, voice thick with repressed excitement. "Ay, come out!" another cried. Movement, then, where they had expected movement. Up above a face appeared in a window, Nicholas Brandon looked down upon them. They could see his lips compress as he discerned that crowd. "Come down, Brandon." This was Tim again, his voice edged with sharpness, as he might speak to a rebellious man of his crew. Brandon moved and threw up the sash. "What do you men want?" he demanded sharply, in the tone of one who has been long accustomed to make demands. "We want Ben Elliott," Jeffers answered. "Elliott? He isn't here. What would he be doing here? What could I know of him?" A mumbling, a stirring behind Tim. "We stick with it. We want you to help us find him!" "You're d-n right!"... "Tell us you skunk!"... "Show him to us or we'll wreck your whole blame town!" Tim held up a sneering hand against this outbreak. Then he addressed Brandon. "Elliott came to town last night. He hasn't been seen since. His team was found where he left it. There's only one man in town who'd have an object in getting him out of the way. We've come to that man; and you, Brandon. We want Elliott!" Brandon's lips wavered. "I tell you, I know nothing—" He slammed down the sash and cut the rest of his sentence from their hearing so those men did not know that his voice broke sharply as panic laid its hold on him. He turned his back deliberately to the window. Then, in frantic lunge he reached the telephone and rang the bell. "Give me the jail!" he said excitedly. "Quick! The jail!" Outside a growling mounting roar sounded, like the voice of an approaching wind. Then came a sharp shout; a loud curse. Then quick silence again as Tim Jeffers reasserted his leadership and demanded that they move only as a unit. But this order proved for a brief moment. "Smash in the door; it's locked!" someone cried. "Take him until he gives Ben up!" "Good boy!" The ball of ice, cast in the street from some horse's foot, now picked up and flung stoutly, crashed through an office window. Brandon covered as a yell of approval went up, and pressed his face close to the telephone. "Hiens?"... "Art! This Brandon! There's a mob out here and—" "I've seen it!" The sheriff's voice trembled. "I saw 'em come in. I don't know what—" "Get down here, then, and be quick about it! Get down here and scatter them!" Brandon waited for the ready acquiescence which always had come from the men he had made from officers of the law and judges and public officials both high and low. "Are you there?" he demanded sharply to a shrill yip came from the street. "Yes, Mr. Brandon. I hear you but... But what do you expect me to do against a mob alone? I—" "Alone! You're sheriff, you fool! You've the law behind you! Bring a gun and hurry!" "But that crowd, Nick! Why, they're the best men in the north. They'd tear me to ribbons! They're good men and they're mad. You better get out the back way if you can!" With an oath Brandon flung the receiver from him as another window pane exploded in fragments. Abandoned to that muttering mob and by a man whose political career he had shaped with his own hands! From a safe vantage point he looked out. A half dozen men were pulling at a sign post. The street was filled with people; his people, his employees. They were wide-eyed, excited, and he saw a dozen of them, men who had whined and jeered as another missile splattered on the bricks outside.

He ran down the hallway and looked out a window in the rear. A grim guard of three men stood there, ready and waiting for him to attempt flight that way. He went into his sleeping chamber and took down a rifle from its rack on a pair of antlers. He threw open the chamber but it was empty. He jerked open a dresser drawer and pawed through it in a fruitless search for cartridges, cursing because he found none. His breath was ragged as he threw the rifle on the bed and rumbled his hair wildly. "Bring Elliott out!" "show us Ben!" "Get a rifle!" These and other terms (Continued next week)

OLD FRONTIER REGIMENT NEEDS RECRUITS

Recruits are needed by the Eighth Cavalry, stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas. The regiment possesses the unusual distinction of never having been stationed east of the Mississippi River. Its beginning was on November 23, 1866, sixty-eight years ago, when the War Department ordered the commanding General of the Military Division of the Pacific to recruit and organize the Eighth United States Cavalry.

During the early part of 1867, the regiment consisted of 12 line troops, each having from 50 to 85 men. It was scattered over Nevada, California, Washington, Idaho, and Oregon with headquarters at Camp Whipple, Arizona.

From December 1867, and during the years 1868 to 1870, the Regimental Headquarters were moved from Arizona to Nevada and then to New Mexico, and Colorado, where its troops were almost continuously on field service, either scouting Indians, or furnishing guards and escorts.

The 8th Cavalry remained in New Mexico, then far beyond railroad connections, until 1875, when it was ordered to duty in Texas. Regimental Headquarters were stationed at Fort Clark, while the different troops were distributed along the Rio Grande from Fort Brown on the Gulf of Mexico, to Fort Hancock, near El Paso.

From 1875 to 1888 the regiment remained in Texas doing border patrol duty.

In May 1888 it was ordered to concentrate at Fort Concho, Texas, and then to march to Fort Meade, South Dakota. Regimental Headquarters made a continuous march of 1800 miles and some of the troops marched over 2000 miles before reaching their destination, approximately 3 months later.

In November 1898 Regimental Headquarters, with six troops, sailed for Cuba where they remained four years, returning to the United States in 1902.

The regiment served in the Philippine Islands from 1905 to 1907 and again from 1910 to 1915 and upon its return was ordered to duty on the Mexican border, arriving at Ft. Bliss, Texas on station on September 24, 1915. It remained there until 1917 when orders were received to move to Marfa, Texas, where, during the years 1917 and 1918 it was intensely busy patrolling the Big Bend district against Mexican bandits.

In 1919 the regiment was ordered back to Fort Bliss, where it has been stationed to the present date.

In its sixty-eight years of existence the regiment has spent four in Cuba, seven in the Philippines, twenty-one in the West, and thirty odd along the Rio Grande.

In addition to soldiering the men of the regiment are good at sports. At baseball, the Eighth Cavalry team won the Post League Championship in 1927, 1928, 1930, and 1932. At basketball, the regimental team won the Post League Championship four years straight, 1932-33-34-35.

At football the regiment won the Post Championship in 1931.

The Eighth Cavalry needs recruits.

NEW TEXAS SECURITIES LAW PROTECTS INVESTORS

Who is he? Can I depend upon his word? Is he registered and licensed? These are the questions that you should have answered to your complete satisfaction before buying stocks, bonds, oil leases, royalty or any other form of investment securities from a salesman—particularly when the salesman is a stranger. That's the advice of Secretary of State Gerald C. Mann, administrator and chief enforcement officer of Texas' new Securities Law.

Designed to curb the fraudulent and crooked seller of securities, the new law required every security dealer, agent and salesman to be registered by writing to the Secretary of State. The records are open to the public.

The State does not propose to guarantee or endorse any stock, bond or other security. However, salesmen may be held strictly accountable for representations made in the sale of securities.

The important thing, according to Secretary Mann, is to be sure the salesman is registered.

Delinquent Tax Information

All taxes due and delinquent for the year 1934 and former years that are not paid by June 30th will bear 6 per cent interest per annum from the date they were returned delinquent together with 8 per cent penalty and cost of redemption. This is in accordance with H. B. No. 7, Acts of the 43rd Legislature. Any one who has delinquent taxes will make a great saving if possible to pay same by June 30th, 1935.
