Cemetery Dinner Is Thursday

The annual O'Donnell Cemetery Association Dinner will be held Thursday, November 26 in the Elementary School cafeteria. Serving will begin at 11 a. m. and will continue until 1:30 p. m.

Whatever amount you can give to the upkeep of the Cemetery for 1959 will be greatly appreciated. Plan now to entertain your holidays by taking them out to dinner at the cemetery dinner.

Please do not request plates to be sent out unless you are physically unable to attend. We regret this but shortage of help makes this request necessary.

Mr and Mrs. Otis Harris and children and Mr and Mrs. Slaton D Harris and family of Seminole attended a family reunion Sunday at Lubbock in the home of Mrs. Ruby Krebs and family.

Mr and Mrs. C. A. Massey of Tulsa and Orville Frye of Hugo, Okla. visited Mrs. Etta Abernathy last week.

Mrs. Naymon Everett visited Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Johnson at Plain view Sunday.

There's a big three-dimensional outline map of Texas hanging prominently in an office at the State Department of Health in Austin. Bright orange blotches, neatly conforming to county lines, peck the face of the map from Texarkana to El Paso.

The legend underneath reads: "Rabies cases by counties, 1959." The map is the Division of Veterinary Public Health's way of visualizing the extent of the State's rabies problem, both in wild and domestic animals. It is consistently one of the most acute in the nation the record shows.

Says Dr. A. B. Rich, the department's veterinary specialist: "It indicates a dangerous undercurrent of rabies exists throughout the whole range of Texas wildlife. In an unguarded moment it could erupt into a full-blown epidemic." Preventing that grim eventuality falls to Dr. Rich and his staff of two other veterinarians. Working an area the size of Texas, advising and assisting local health departments and county officials in rabies control means spreading themselves very, very thin.

County judges play key roles in combating ever-present rabies. State law gives them authority to declare rabies emergencies and impose compulsory dog vaccination and stray dog control whenever circumstances warrant. A major part of the veterinarian's task is convincing pet owners they are literally betting their lives when they forget or refuse to have the animals vaccinated.

The reason for Texas' consistently high incidence of rabies, say health department authorities, is the wide diversity of terrain and climate and the great abundance and variety of wildlife species. Wildlife, notably foxes and skunks, perpetuate the disease among dogs. Dogs thus represent the most important source of human exposure to rabies.

S. S. News

Persons who have reached retirement age and who plan to file claim for social security benefits shortly after the first of the year, are now being encouraged to contact their social security representative or district office in advance.

John G. Hutton, manager of the Lubbock District Office, announced this week, "In some instances it will be to the advantage of an individual to actually file claim before he retires, depending upon the amount of his earnings over the past several years. Social security personnel are always ready to discuss a person's status with him and assist him in planning for retirement and the filing of a claim. There will be a number of instances in which an application filed before December 31st will actually result in higher monthly benefits than if it is filed in 1960.

"An inquiry two or three months in advance of retirement also makes it possible for the district office to assure a more speedy delivery of that first benefit check. There is usually a backlog of claims that pile up shortly after the first of the year, and this creates something of a delay in getting new claims paid.

"Farm operators, particularly, often have problems concerning their retirement, the payment of social security taxes, whether or not to use the optional method of reporting farm income, obtaining the necessary proofs, and other matters, in which the social security office may be able to offer assistance."

Hutton gave the example of the farmer who thought he had to sell off his farm and all of his livestock before he could become eligible for social security benefits. He stated "This is not usually the case. Continued on back page

Radioactivity Has Many New Uses

A San Antonio firm exposed automobile piston rings to a radioactive isotope. Later, ring ware was calculated by measuring radioactivity in the engine oil.

In Houston a commercial art firm does original sketches with radioactive inks. Then, by pressing the drawing against photographic paper, they get a finely detailed copy truer than a photographic print, cheaper and more precise than lithography.

Texas industries are using isotopes to measure life expectancy of cutting tools. Botanists are checking amounts of phosphate absorbed by growing plants. Physicians use isotopes to destroy tumors and to locate other body abnormalities.

All of which indicates that radioactivity has grown right out of the pages of science fiction into everyday life, putting the State Department of Health up to its figurative ears in the business of keeping tabs on radioactivity's phenomenal growth as an industrial and medical tool.

The Department, as part of the tedious task of registering all radiation-producing devices used in Texas, has files on more than 4,000 users, from mammoth industrial concerns to private individuals. Files have accumulated since 1956 when regulations were adopted to cope with the snowballing use of radiation equipment.

Most names in the file are physicians and dentists who use x-ray and fluoroscope devices. Any Texas doctor can request an equipment survey for radiation hazards. Departmental engineers will check it out from anecdote to x-ray.

Sam Houston Devoted to Huntsville Home

Sam Houston's law office, where no woman was ever allowed to enter. Few men ever grew to love a house more than General Sam Houston, Texas' first and favorite son. His self-designed "bang-up place," as he referred to it at Huntsville offered him more comfort than the stately mansions he occupied while representing the "Lone Star State" in the nation's capital during his three terms in the Senate.

The October McCall's article, "Sam Houston Loved This House," recreates life during the mid-1800's in the then tiny frontier settlement at Huntsville. Sam bought the 174-acre homestead seventy-five miles north of Houston in 1847 for $1,000, and proceeded to build a white, two-story, six room, colonial style house, where eventually seven of his eight children were born. The Houston's regularly entertained visitors to Huntsville, placing heavy emphasis on Texas-style food. Recipes for some of Sam's favorite dishes—Texas baked ham, pecan cobbler, southern rice pudding, Alamo lemon jelly cake, and Sam Houston's favorite, white cake with chocolate frosting, which appears on the magazine's cover—are given in the article.
