U. S. Heartened by Naval Offensive Against Jap Bases in South Pacific; Air Attacks on Port Darwin Continue As Allies Strike Back in New Guinea

(EDITOR'S NOTE-When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt, left, Australian minister for external affairs, being greeted by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Richard G. Casey, British minister of state in the Middle East, at the Washington airport. The selection of Casey, former Australian minister to Washington, to serve in the British cabinet, raised a controversy between Australian Prime Minister John Curtin and Winston Churchill. The Australian government disavowed Casey as Australian representative.

ATTACK: Navy Strikes Twice

A double-barreled attack by navy task force, the same which had struck with devastating force on the Marshall and Gilbert islands, had been delivered on Wake island and Marcus island, the latter only 950 miles from Tokyo.

The latter attack scared Tokyo so badly that the city ordered blackouts for several days afterward, it was announced.

The delay in announcing these attacks apparently occurred because, in the first instance, the navy force was on the way from Wake to Mar-cus, and didn't want to "telegraph its punch" on the latter island.

As to the second attack, the need for delay was probably one of two factors, either that the navy force was moving on elsewhere, or else it was on its way back to Pearl Harbor for refueling and resupplying, probably the latter, as the dispatches came from there.

Considerable credit for the four attacks, as the latter two must be considered part of the general onslaught which included the Marshall and Gilbert islands, was given to the commander of the force, Vice Admiral W. F. Halsey.

In the first two the navy had lost a number of planes, but in the latter two battles, the only losses were two planes, both shot down by anti-

Surprise had been an important factor in both attacks, because at Wake Island three four-motored seaplanes had been found and destroyed before they got into the air, and at Marcus island no air strength of any kind was found.

It began to explain the need for censorship-for the Japs had a nearly completed airfield on the island, and certainly would have had planes there if they'd known our forces were on the way.

Ringside View

One reporter, riding on an aircraft carrier, reported that its planes dumped 12 tons of high explosives on Marcus island alone.

His ringside view of the significance of the battle was that it had shattered an important link in Japan's chain of island bases connecting the country with its southwest Pacific theater of war.

Marcus also had been referred to in dispatches as "Japanese Hawaii," being a base not only potentially great for planes, but for ships as

The Wake island attack was not completely a surprise, as the navy surface ships encountered a Jap gunboat seven miles off the island, and before she was sunk with one broadside, she was able to flash word to the shore that the "Yanks were coming!"

The Marcus island attack was in the darkness, but the Wake island battle was in full daylight, the shelling starting at 7:05 a. m.

Just how little good a blackout does was shown at Marcus island, where a flight of bombing planes was sent over the island with flares, lighting their objectives, and the first few hits started such huge fires that the other bombing flights needed no flares.

Shortly after the attack on Marcus started the radio station went off the air abruptly. It had been struck by a demolition bomb and shot into the

Everybody Lends Hand to Defense of Australia

CHRIST AND LIFE AFTER DEATH (EASTER)

LESSON TEXT--Mark 12:24-27; I Core thians 15:50-58.
GOLDEN TEXT-But thanks be to which giveth us the victory through Lord Jesus Christ.—I Corinthians 15:3

V for Victory! By that sign hav many peoples indicated their con fidence in a victory to come. It well to have a victorious outloo but it is even better to be able to look back to victory already at tained. That is just what we are able to do as we consider man' great and final enemy—death. The victory has been won on behalf of all who believe, by the risen Chris of whom we think in a special wa on this Easter day.

He is the Lord of the living, no of the dead; those who, even thou they may have left this world, hav only laid aside the corruptible bod for the incorruptible. They are vio I. Living, Not Dead (Mark 12-24

The Sadducees, a rationalistic sec of Christ's day, denied the resurrection, and so they were mud distressed by His plain teaching of that truth. They therefore devise an intricate hypothetical case (se Mark 12:18-23) and sought to set trap for Him. But they only caugh themselves, for He pointed out i them and to the people that wh was wrong with them was that the nor the power of God.

That is precisely what is wron with the modernists of our day-they misinterpret God's Word, an they deny His power.

Then Jesus turned to them an in place of their fantastic "supposing" story He spoke of three reacharacters from the books of Mose which they taught. He said the Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, becaus though they had long been in the graves, they were still alive. God' tellowship with His people is no merely for the brief life span of thi earth, but for eternity. That fac of course, carries with it the trut of the resurrection.

II. Incorruptible, Not Corruptible (I Cor. 15:50-54)

Man knows that his earthly bod is marked for decay and death. The fact is written in its very member He also knows that such a box would be entirely inappropriate to heaven-for eternity. Is he the barred from God's eternal kingdom No, indeed, for there is to be glorious change - the corruptible shall put on incorruptibility.

Whether we shall tarry until Je sus comes and be transformed with out dying, or whether we shall awa His coming for a time among thos who sleep, there will come tha trumpet sound, and in the twinklin of an eye we shall be clothed upo with incorruptible bodies like unt His glorious resurrection body (Phil 3:21). There we have an assurand of victory already won on our be half, which can and does strengthe our souls against the trials and so rows of life.

III. Victorious, Not Defeated Cor. 15:55-58).

When Satan after a long struggl finally had Christ's body laid awa in the tomb, he thought he had th victory, but just then came his great hour of defeat.

"Up from the grave He arose, With a mighty triumph o'er H foes."

"Death could not hold its prey, for it sought to hold one stronge than itself—the Lord of Life Him self. He had broken the bonds sin by His sacrifice on Calvary and since it was sin (the violation of the law) which brought death i the first place (Gen. 2:17; 3:17-19) there was now a complete victor over both sin and death.

The one who knows Christ nee no longer fear death. For him is not a leap into the dark, or g ing as a trembling wayfarer in an unknown land. President Joh Quincy Adams was right when, age and frail, he replied to a question as to his welfare: "Quite well, than you. The house in which I live tottering and trembling, and I ma soon have to move out, but I a quite well." He was ready for the departure into a better land and better health.

better body. Such a hope has a splendid pract cal application, which Paul stress in verse 58. With victorious assu ance the believer stands steadfa and unmovable at the center of lift while always abounding in the journal of the company of the can be useful only as its center established and steady, so man caserve the Lord and enjoy a satisfing life only as he has the steafastness of which Paul here speak

TAYLOR WNURE LEASE

THE STORY SO FAR-Joan Leland, secretary, falls in love with Karl Miller, her employer, owner of a night club. She spurns secret invitations from Eric Strom, Karl's business partner, and Paul Sherman, his manager. Her sister, Syb-il, does not approve of Karl, but Joan blindly defeads him, even when Paul, in a friendly manner warns her about Karl. Karl shoots Eric in Joan's presence, tricks her into placing her finger-prints on the gun, then admits he is a Nazi spy with a wife in Germany. He tells Joan unless she continues to work, and remain silent about the murder, he will blame it on her. The terrified girl agrees and later Paul reveals himself as Paul O'Malley of the FBI, working to trap the higher-ups of the spy ring. Sybil fails to come home, and a suicide note later is thought by them to mean Karl intended to hold her as a hostage. Joan agrees secretly to help Paul, and reports that Karl has hired a beautiful young girl to sing, and is already making love to her. It's Paul's runaway sister. Joan gets her to share her apartment. Paul and Joan search the beauty shop of Mrs. Murdock, who had employed Sybil at Karl's suggestion.

CHAPTER XIII

Now continue with the story.

The light revealed a desk, a shortwave radio set and three large filing cabinets. He drew on a pair of gloves. "Don't touch anything," he cautioned Joan.

Joan's heart was in her throat. "Oh Paul, what if Karl should find out we were here?' "By that time," Paul replied grimly, "it will be too late." Joan looked curiously at the radio set. "Do you suppose Karl has a receiver too?'

"Probably, though where it would be I don't know.'

He opened a drawer of the desk. "Doesn't seem to be anything

"Wait!" Joan cried. "What's this?" She seized a gray glove lying among pencils and bits of papers. "This is Sybil's glove!" she said excitedly. "She always wore these with her suit, and she was wearing that suit the day she dis-

Paul gazed speculatively at the slender gray glove. "It could mean that Sybil discovered this room, that she knew what was going on in here, and that's why Karl put her out of the way."

Joan pressed the glove against her cheek. "Oh Syb!" she wept.

"I still think Sybil is alive," Paul said, "Karl is saving her as an ace up his sleeve. In that way she is of more use to him living than dead. Anyway, that's my hunch. It will be better if you can believe it too."
"I'll try," Joan gulped, controlling herself with an effort. Half an hour passed while Paul's nimble fingers explored the contents of drawer after drawer. He tapped the walls but they revealed nothing. It was Joan who cried, "Paul! Look at this desk. e's something odd about

There seemed to be a panel on the side of the desk. "You're right," Paul said, and gently forcing the wood, he pulled it to one side. "Here we are!" he said as they both gazed into a small hidden compartment. Eagerly Paul thrust in his hand and drew forth a large enve-lope. He opened it. "Look Joan! These are the plans for that bombing plane. We were right!" Joan peered over his shoulder at the unintelligible writing. "What do they say?" Paul smiled excitedly as he ran his eyes over the pages. "Plenty! There's enough here to convict Karl and Mrs. Murdock as well as some others!" "Let's get out of here, quick," Joan begged, glancing back at the half-open panel which had admitted them. "While we're here I'm going to take a last look around to see if I can find a copy of that code." Joan watched his brown head bend over the drawer. Her heart went out to him in gratitude for his kindness. "This is really the end of our search then?" she asked. "It looks like it." "I wish we were out of here," Joan repeated. "I have a feeling something else is about to happen. Paul laughed. "You women and your intuition!" But Joan shivered nervously as she waited for Paul to finish.

In a downtown hotel, Karl Miller was dancing with Pat.

"You're a darling!" he murmured against her hair.

"Oh Karl, I love you so much."
"He smiled. "You are happy, liebchen?" "I still can't believe it," Pat said, turning her radiant face to his. "Just think . . . Mrs. Karl Miller." "We can't be married for two or three months yet," Karl told her. "I don't care. I'm so happy." Pat gazed down at the emerald, a magnificent jewel which flashed green fire from her hand. "It's such a beautiful ring! Joan will be so surprised." "No doubt," Karl smiled.

"And Paul too?" "Paul? Why should Paul be surprised?"

The music had stopped now and they returned to their table.
"What has Paul got to do with us?" Karl demanded. Pat looked embarrassed. She had promised not to reveal Paul's identity under any circumstances. "Oh, nothing," she faltered.

Joan peered over his shoulder at the unintelligible writing. "What

But Karl was not to be side- with it. As you no doubt know, I tracked. "What is there between you and Paul?"

Pat laughed. "Are you jealous?" 'Jealous? Of course I am. I insist upon knowing." "I promised I wouldn't tell any-Pat hesitated.

Karl's voice was smoothly persuasive. "But, liebchen, we are going to be married. You must not have any secrets from your husband.'

Pat's brown eyes were troubled. "Well, I don't know." Karl took her hand, "You must tell me," he insisted. "I suppose now that we are en-gaged, it's different," Pat admitted, "Anyway it's really nothing for you to be jealous about. You see, Paul is my brother. He's using an assumed name because some time ago he used to work for the govern-

"Indeed?" Karl Miller said, rising quickly. "I find that information extremely interesting."

It seemed to Joan that Paul was taking an unnecessarily long time looking for the code. She watched impatiently as he rechecked each drawer, wondering at his calm deliberation.

"Please hurry, Paul! Let's get out of here."

"Queer I can't find it. They must have it here somewhere." 'What does it matter now? We have the other evidence. You said these papers incriminate Karl. Isn't that enough?" "I always like to do a thorough job while I'm at it." "Wait! Oh Paul, I hear something! Someone is coming down the hall!'

She ran to the open panel and way leading to the street, but she could see nothing."

"You're just nervous," Paul said. "I'll be through in a minute. Sit down and relax."

"I'm sure I heard someone. What if Karl has found out?" Joan said, sitting down at the desk where Sybil's glove remained among the pile of papers. "He's too clever to let us get away with this."

"Karl's not as clever as you may imagine," Paul told her, "or he wouldn't leave these papers for me to find. "It all seems too easy," Joan insisted. "There must be a catch to

"We've waited long enough to get Karl," he reminded her. "I knew that eventually we'd catch up with him. Haven't you ever heard that crime does not pay?" He actually seemed amused. "I don't see anything funny about

"You're a sweet kid!" Paul said. "And you've been a big help to me.'

"Please let's get out of here!" She was on the verge of tears. Paul glanced around the small room. Papers were strewn on the floor, even carelessly over the radio equipment. "This untidy mess will be quite a surprise to our friends," he commented. "Are we going to the authorities now?"

Paul picked up the envelope. "Right. And in here we have enough to keep Karl Miller out of circulation for good." Joan took Sybil's glove and put it in her purse, but before she could fasten the clasp, Karl Miller's voice came to them from the open panel.

"I thought I'd find you here."
His powerful figure filled the small doorway. He held a gun. Paul reached for his coat, but Karl was too quick for him. "No use trying that, Mr. O'Malley."

Joan backed against the wall, her eyes fastened, as though hypnotized, upon Karl's face.

"You need not be frightened," Karl told her. "I am principally interested in Paul. Too bad he has such a talkative sister."

"So Pat told you?"

Joan marveled at Paul's indiffer-

"Yes. It might interest you to know that she thinks I am about to become your brother-in-law." At last Paul's anger was aroused.

"You dirty rat!" Karl smiled. "I assure you I have no intention of going through already have one wife." What have you done with her?" Paul demanded.

'Shut up! Give me that envelope. We're getting out of here. Come on, Joan, I'll keep you with me.' Paul walked ahead and Karl followed with Joan. His grasp on her arm was painful but she did not She was too proud to let wince. Karl Miller see that he had hurt her. There was a long ride down the Embaradero. Neither Karl nor Paul spoke. As they went through the warehouse and up the swaying steps of the gangplank, Joan was surprised at her own calmness. She was no longer afraid of Karl Miller. She followed Paul's example of superb indifference. On deck Paul and Joan were led to a small shabby cabin, and the door locked behind them.

"Cozy?" Paul grinned. "Paul! You act as though you actually enjoy this." His face grew serious. "I don't like it for your sake, Joan. But so far as I'm concerned, it couldn's have worked out better.'

"What do you mean?" "I counted on Karl's finding us at the beauty shop. I wanted him to. I think he'll lead us to the rest of the gang this way."

Joan sat down gingerly on a dirty, faded chintz chair. "But you said those papers were enough.

Paul lit a cigarette. "They were, but I still have a few ends to tie. We're not in any actual danger yet. Trust me for that."

Paul watched Joan as she explored their tiny prison. "You have more nerve than any other girl I gazed through the office to the hall-way leading to the street, but she peating what he had said the night Karl killed Strom and Joan had promised to help trap Karl after

Paul revealed he was an FBI man. "My knees are shaking," Joan admitted, smiling, "but I wouldn't let Karl know how I felt. It would give him too much satisfaction."

"Good girl!" Paul approved. "And," Joan continued, "this may be your idea of 'no actual danger' but it doesn't seem that way to me. The gentle throb of the ship's engines warned them the freighter was moving. "Here we go," Paul said. "Try to trust me, Joan, that this is the best way. I took you with me tonight deliberately because I was afraid that it would be worse for you if you were left behind."

"What about Pat?" "Pat doesn't know anything. They won't be apt to harm her.' In the dim light of a small electric bulb they waited. As the ship rolled more, Paul said, "We're going through the Gate now. We'll soon be on the open sea."

"Where is Kari taking us? Can't you tell me that?" "I'd rather not. The first thing to find out is how he intends to get rid of those plans," he added, "Might ship them to a submarine." "A submarine!" Joan cried in dis-

"It's not a pretty picture, is it?"
Paul said grimly. "That's why I don't want you to know too much. Karl did not reappear but a sailor unlocked the door and mumbled something to Paul in German. "He says he'll show you to your cabin,'

Paul explained. "I'd rather stay here!" But Paul advised her to go without objection, so Joan followed the sailor out on deck. He opened a door and motioned for her to go inside. Hesitatingly she obeyed. There was a bunk with a quilt folded neatly upon it, a washstand and one porthole through which Joan could see the deck. Fog enveloped the sea and it was impossible to tell how far away from shore they were. In a few minutes she heard the sound of footsteps, and sitting up she saw that Paul was being shown into the cabin next to hers. Even though the door was locked behind him and a sailor remained on guard outside, Joan was comforted to know that he was near.

Joan had not expected to have any rest that night but she found herself overcome with fatigue. She wakened to feel the warmth of the sun upon her face. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Canning Expert Coming Thursday

TAHOKA, April 1 (Special) Homemakers of Lynn County will learn the latest and best methods of canning fruits and vegetables next week when Miss Margaret Murphy, canning expert, gives a demonstration, Allie M. Tipps, Home Management Supervisor announced today.

The demonstration will be given at the American Legion Hall at 2:30 p. m. on Thursday, April 9, and it is open to all who are interested in attending.

Miss Murphy, who will conduct the canning program, is a home economics graduate of the Iowa State College at Ames, who for the past several years has specialized in home canning and is now a staff member of the Educational Department of the Kerr Mason Jar Company. She has traveled widely and her lectures are as interesting as they are instructive.

It is expected a large crowd will attend the demonstration.

What Would You DO For Your Country? THE WEE, SMALL VOICE ASKS QUESTIONS

What would you do for your country in its hour of trial and

Why, I would jump at the chance to give those Japs a beating. will give my life in this struggle, any time I am called upon to

You realize that would be the easiest way to help, do you not? Emotional stimulus, lots of company, exciting action. Besides, you are a bit old for that. But how about your children? Could you see them go down in the battle?

Oh, the children! Babies who taught me how to pray-youngsters for whom I have lived every waking hour and about whom I have dreamed at night. They are too young yet, but the question is still there. I planned and hoped for their success in peaceful, constructive ways that are no more. To make it possible to fulfil those plans and dreams, fighting must first be done. They will help put the house in order so that they can live in it again. Yes, so that they (and their children?) can be free, I would see them go.

Would you still carry on for your country after your children perished in battle? Could you carry conviction in your eyes and voice in trying to comfort their mother who, far more than you, is suffering inexplicably?

That would be the greatest punishment; but a clear call to fight for the right, as God gives us to see the right, must be answered, and He will give us that strength, And when grief takes her away and you are trudging the path have left and keep going? Material things would then be worthless to me. The more energy could expend in helping my country, the sooner I could join my family-then indeed would I want to fight to the death.

alone, would your determination hold out? Would you give all you

So, you now realize that, living and working so your country will live, can be much harder than dying for it. If there is something that you NOW can do that might avoid these sorrowful sacrifices, would you do it?

Why, of course I would! That goes without saying. Of course! Anyone would

The hour has come—the time is short—there are many things to be done. You can help avoid thousands of such family catastrophies, as well as your own. Find your place and DO what you can. Little talk is needed now.

AT ANNAPOLIS

Mrs. Helm, Miss Thompson and 1 went down to Annapolis, Md., one day. Every year I have been asked to speak to the women's club there. I begin to feel a little bit apprehensive that they will grow weary of having me speak to them so often, even though for me it is always a very pleasant occasion.

Lunch with the wife of the superintendent of the Naval academy is a delightful prelude to the afternoon meeting. Just now, the superintendent is Admiral Beardall, who was the President's naval aide for some time. Mrs. Beardall told me that even though they had been there only a few weeks, they have had a number of guests, among them the Norwegian crown prince and princess and their two daughters. I think the two little girls must have had a wonderful time seeing all the activities of the Naval academy.

The boys are being hurried through their intensified training and there are usually short term officers' schools going on as well.

It seems to me that the buildings have been multiplied considerably in the last few years and there is not as much tree-shaded lawn space as there used to be. The city of Annapolis, itself, has great charm, some very lovely old houses and, of course, St. John's college, which is quite unique.

In the evening I dined with a few people from the British embassy, who have organized a group which meets every two weeks, the better to acquaint themselves with what the American scene is really like. I had not realized how many British people were working in Washington until last night. I found the hall packed for the meeting.

Next morning I spent a couple of hours at Miss Katharine Lenroot's conference on the war needs of children. There were a great many organizations represented there, and I am sure they will make very valuable recommendations and be of assistance to all the agencies working with them throughout the country.

NEW YORK WORK

In New York city, I spent a day partly in seeing people with whom I had appointments, and partly in trying to allocate the things which have to be packed in our two houses.

I went to my broadcast and was met there by a young woman who had sent me a questionnaire for her magazine article, and was not very well satisfied with my answers. She felt that if she could see me, I would give her more satisfactory information, so we journeyed back to the house in a taxi while she tried to gather the answers she needed.

took the night train back to Washington and found that the crowd was so great that they were running it in three sections. There is certainly no lack of people traveling these days by train and plane.

I noticed a New York Times editorial, which mentions the anniversary of the death of Benjamin Russell Hanby of Ohio. I think it is a good sign that, even in the midst of war and rumors of war, we can stop to think about a composer who has given us pleasure and to celebrate the writing of an old song such as "Darling Nelly Gray."

YOUTH AND RECONSTRUCTION I left Washington one night by train and arrived in Cleveland, Ohio, next morning. After breakfasting with Mrs. Mildred Jaster, Democratic national committee woman, and Dr. Howell, I took the bus to Oberlin, Ohio. There I was the guest of President and Mrs. Ernest H. Wilkins, and spoke in the afternoon at Oberlin college.

The inter-collegiate conference being held there was sponsored by the Interna-tional Student service and the Oberlin Committee for Democratic Action. I was asked to talk on youth's stake in the reconstruction.

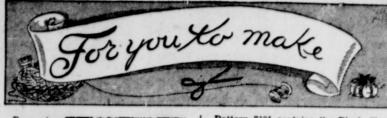

STORY OF A SHIP

The President has a friend who is deeply interested in the sea and every type of vessel that sails upon it. For years he has been making models until his collection has become one that will some day, I imagine, be the best historical record of ships built to scale that we have in this country. The other day he sent me the story of a Swedish ship, which many Americans have known as the Kungsholm.

She was famous as a transatlantic liner and cruise ship of the Swedish-American line. She has now been purchased by the United States maritime commission and renamed the John Ericsson, and will be operated in our service.

Russel Crouse is the author of a short article which pays the ship a tribute, and which is printed in the American-Swedish Monthly. Like so many men of the sea, he feels that the Kungsholm has a personality and she knows and rejoices in having a share in the fight for freedom.

He closes with an interesting paragraph: "She couldn't have gone on being light-hearted in a world where hearts are heavy. But I am sure, too, that she sees bright days and smooth seas—free seas again be-yond the storms. We who know her are proud of her.

Spoke Direct From Heart

When Bill O'Dwyer was running for district attorney in Brooklyn he usually appeared on the platform with a piece of paper in his hand ostensibly covered with notes of the address he was about to make. He would look around the audience, say "Hello, Joe," to one listener, "Howya, Harry," to another. Then he'd smile and tell the audience: "I didn't know I would have so many friends here tonight. I don't need notes to talk to you people," and he'd throw away the paper. "To you I can speak from here," indicating his heart.

A curious reporter one night And what could be better than this picked up the discarded paper. It was an old laundry bill.

Victory Special Will Visit City

The Victory Special from Dallas will roll into O'Donnell Wednesday, April 22, bringing over 60 Dallas business executives and a host of radio entertainers who will stage a patriotic program in appreciation for the co-operation Tahoka is lending in the national war effort.

Final details for the group's visit to O'Donnell were worked out today when Bob Bourdene, manager of the Dallas Manufacturers and Wholealers association, a division of the "Tech" McLaurin Jr. who attends chamber of commerce, conferred with local city and chamber officials.

The special train will leave Dallas on the night of April 19 and will return on April 24 after 29 towns, two of which are in Oklahoma, have been visited.

Entertainers who will accompany the tour here include Wilbur Ard and the famous WFAA "Early Bird" orchestra; the Cass County Kids nationally-known hill billy trio; Peg Moreland, one of the nation's oldest and 50 cents. Harmless to anything radio performers, from a point of but rats and mice. Guaranteed at service, and the Plainsmen quartet.

The special train will cover over 2,000 miles on the five-day trip. Towns to be visited include: Brady, Brownwood, Coleman, Ballinger, San Angelo, Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Colorado City, Sweetwater, Abilene. Lamesa, O'Donnell Tahoka, Slaton, Lubbock, Plainview, Memphis, Childress. Quanah, Vernon, Electra, Wichita Falls, Gainesville, Whitesboro, Denison, Durant, Oklahoma, Hugo, Oklahoma, Paris.

Mr. Bourdene declared that this will be the most important tour of its kind ever staged out of Dallas. "The chamber of commerce and the manufacturers and wholesalers of Dallas have been sponsoring these annual tours for 41 years," he said, and we believe our mission on this trip to be of paramount importance.

"Too often the great effort and sacrifices that other communities make in times like these are overlooked because of the hustle and bustle to complete a job. Many of the things they do are taken for granted and I, for one, hope that our trip this year will help alleviate this.

"We want to come to O'Donnell and say: 'Thank you for the untiring effort and support you are giving the national government in the greatest mass effort for victory this nation has ever known.'

"We hope that when the "Victory Special" visits your city it will bring about a better understanding of our common problems so we can cooperate more fully toward our allimportant goal in the future."

There's no place like home - for fires, says Marvin Hall, State Fire Insurance Commissioner, but they can be prevented if you drive out
