DEMOCRATS NOMINATE FERGUSON IN LUBBOCK SESSION TUESDAY

After three days of adjulation and acclamation, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, former governor of Texas and wife of another ex-governor, was officially awarded the democratic nomination for governor of the state by the party's biennial convention at Lubbock Tuesday.

The nominee and her party, with her husband, Jas. E. Ferguson, as its most conspicuous member, arrived in the Plains city Saturday afternoon, and was met by a throng of the Ferguson faithful...

Delegates representing every county in Texas were present, and to the credit of Lubbock and the entire South Plains, every man and woman received a royal welcome.

The convention heard and granted suggestions at appreciation to the citizens of the capitol city of the South Plains for the hospitality and thoughtfulness displayed in every way.

The convention opened at ten o'clock Tuesday morning, and was greeted by a Ferguson experience meeting until adjournment shortly after six o'clock in the afternoon.

At approximately the time Mrs. Ferguson was receiving the official notification of her election as nominee, Governor Ross S. Sterling, also candidate for the nomination, was filling notice of court contest, charging seven kinds of illegal practices in the petition, and asking for an early date for the trial.

In a few words, Mrs. Ferguson said she would be the governor of all the people, asked for the support and cooperation of the opposition, and declared her victory at the polls in November was a foregone conclusion.

As she returned to her seat on the speakers' platform, there were repeated calls for "Jim Jim," and the former governor declared the theme of the convention more prolonged and emphatic than that accorded the nominee.

Ferguson also expressed his confidence in the outcome of the gubernatorial race at general election, and reiterated the theme of Governor Ferguson campaign, two governors for the price of one.

Further securing the strength of the Ferguson "steam roller," three prominent Sterling leaders, Charles I. Francis of Ft. Beaufort, and Beemer Stroger of Big Spring were barred from the state executive committee.

Taking up the various contests for membership in the executive committee, senatorial district by senatorial district, the credential committee sustained all contests brought by factions supporting Mrs. Ferguson and threw out all those attacking choices of Mrs. Ferguson...

It was sold at public auction on the street, the 415 lb. bale bringing $33.20. W. C. Sanls, manager of the Farmers' gin paid eight cents per pound for the bale...

BALDRIDGE CUTS HAND WITH SAW MONDAY

The old joke about no woman being able to use a sharp knife without trying it out on her hand was proven true by Walter Baldrige, manager of Higginbotham-Bartlett company, in the case of saws.

Mr. Baldrige had his saw so set as to cut sharp Monday, but he evidently wanted correct evidence...

that it was really sharp, for he tried it out on his left hand.

Apparently the saw was sharp, right enough, for it ripped down through the thumb and first finger, leaving a pretty little trail which will need several days for healing.

MAY BE FEW CITIZENS TO BOLT PARTY TICKET

Now that the dust and confusion of the democratic primary and especially of the recent state biennial convention has died down enough to reveal that Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson is the party nominee for governor, the question arises as to how Sterling supporters in the city will vote in the forthcoming general election.

There have been some to say that they would not, under any circumstances vote for Fergusonism. This was heard before the primary election. Now that Mrs. Ferguson has come out the winner, they will face Orville Bullington of Wichita Falls, nominee for the Republican party. Some of the disgruntled Sterling followers state that they are going to bolt the party ticket and vote for Bullington. They are much in the minority, however. Most of those who have committed themselves declare with emphasis that they are going to vote straight, and that means they will support Jim's wife in November.

While we have never been quite so patriotic as one delegate in Lubbock this week who declared that if his party nominated a jackrabbit he'd vote for it, it does seem that the voice of the majority of the voters of the state should have some weight in forming opinions. Even though we have never been and likely will never be Ferguson fans, and though we feel that there were others more suited for the place, we can take our medicine now just like we used to take castor oil when we were several years younger.

And it seems that ours is the general consensus of opinion. Before November rolls around it is felt that even the majority of the would-be bolters will have cooled down to the extent that they will look upon Mrs. Ferguson more favorably, rather than scratch her name in favor of the Republican nominee.

Because, in the opinion of some Democrats, republicans are nothing but the scum of the earth. That idea has been bred into them by their fathers and forefathers before them, and with this in mind, it is felt that there will be but few to forsake the democratic party in favor of another of those so-called changes a la Hoover.

Understanding the index is not proclaiming this theory as the truth; we merely said that some Democrats felt that way about it. Mr. Bullington, who is said to be well-qualified and able, will poll a fairly large majority for a Republican, but regardless of his ability, he's just on the wrong side of the fence in Texas. We make this statement with all respect to our Republican friends, of whom we know several who are the salt of the earth.

Texas has strayed from the Democratic fold but one time, and believe us, Bud, most Texans feel that they have paid dearly for that one fall from grace. So it seems that the lot of us who would have preferred some nominee other than Mrs. Ferguson, will be likely to grin and bear it, and vote for another session of "wood and water" government.

SPECIAL SERVICES SUNDAY WELL ATTENDED

Special services conducted Sunday at the Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. R. Burnett, were well attended at both morning and evening hours.

Mr. Don Edwards, teacher of the Men's Bible class, member of the board of stewards, and a leading layman of the church, made an interesting and inspiring address at eleven o'clock, which was enjoyed and appreciated by all who heard him.

Rev. W. C. Hart, former pastor of the local church, now retired from active ministry, had charge of the evening service, and preached a splendid sermon on the love the Heavenly Father feels for His children.

The pastor expects to be back at his place at both hours next Sunday, and everyone is urged to attend.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for September 18
 THE REPORTS OF THE SPIES

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the Strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?
LESSON TEXT—Numbers 13:17-14:45.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Strength of the Promised Land.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Brave and the Cowardly Spies.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Faith Gives Courage.

1. The Spies Sent Out (13:17-20). Less than two years have passed since the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage. They are now at Kadesh-barnea within sight of the Promised Land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21). But they failed to do so because of unbelief (Heb. 3:19). The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies, but that the people, because of lack of faith, made the request. There was a threefold purpose in sending out the spies:

- To see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 18).
- To see whether the people who dwell there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18).
- To see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or of tents (v. 19).
- The Commission Executed (13:21-23).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limits. On their return they gathered some specimens of fruit.

III. The Spies Rendered Reports (13:26-33). On their return this committee of explorers rendered both a majority and minority report to the entire congregation (v. 26).

- The majority report (v. 26-29).
 - Abundant and fruitful with milk and honey (v. 27).
 - The people who live there are strong (v. 28).
 - The people live in walled cities (v. 28).
 - The land is inhabited by giants (v. 28 of v. 33). In comparison with the inhabitants they saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed that it seemed impossible to conquer them.
 - The minority report (v. 30-33). This report in part agreed with the majority, but it ignored the results of the dispute, but it did deny the conclusion of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to get possession of the land, and therefore urged immediate action.

IV. The Rebellion of the People (13:34-44).

- The rebellion began by crying (v. 1-3). They even wished that they had died in the wilderness or in Egypt. God took them at their word. He sent them back to wander in the wilderness for forty years, during which time all of that generation died except Caleb and Joshua.
- Proposition to return to Egypt (v. 4-10). They proposed to select a captain as their leader. Joshua and Caleb protested against this, which so exasperated the people that they wanted to stone them when God manifested His glory before all Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb.
- God's wrath upon the people (v. 11, 12). Because of their unbelief God purposed to smite them with pestilence, disinherit them, and transplant them with a nation mightier than they.
- Moses' intercession in behalf of the people (v. 13-19). Moses pleaded with God against this judgment because the Egyptians would bear of it and blaspheme and this they would pass on to the other nations, saying that God was not able to bring them into the land.
- The Lord's response to Moses' plea (v. 20-26). He assured Moses that he had granted pardon according to his intercession, but told him that although he would bring them into the land according to his promise, yet with the exception of Joshua and Caleb the men of that generation should be barred.

6. The presumption of the people (v. 40-44). Having in unbelief refused to go up at the command of Moses, they now in presumption go V. The People Smitten by the Amalekites and Canaanites (v. 45).

Because the people refused to heed Moses and presumptuously attempted to go up, God permitted the Amalekites and Canaanites to come down upon them to their destruction.

RANDOM THOUGHTS

Vinegar is the result of ferment; the less you carry round with you the better off you will be.

Some of us are weak and some strong; the helping hand of the strong should be held out to the weak.

WE GO VOYAGING

It isn't very often that a member of the Index staff breaks into print, all of the force being of the same opinion about this toothing your own horn, but occasionally an occurrence of such importance arises that the staff has to be mentioned.

Such an event took place last Thursday when the news staff, all of it, took a train trip. We were escorted to the local Santa Fe depot, not only once but twice. In fact, we had special notification over the telephone that the train was coming, not around the mountain, but around the bend.

And Ross Stark, our polite and efficient agent, had our ticket all ready to hand out when we dashed down the station door. (The front door of the station had locked itself. The smiling conductor seemed to take a personal pleasure in our projected journey, and we felt very important indeed as he unlocked the door of the coach and placed the step for the whole news staff to enter the train.)

Maybe we imagined it, but it seemed that Ed James looked real envious because he had to stay here on the mail wagon and couldn't have a train trip, and others who had come down to see the train come in looked on in silent awe as the Blue Weed Special rolled majestically out of the yard. (And it did roll majestically; we defy anyone to prove that it didn't.)

We took great delight in fact we got quite a kick out of looking superciliously down our nose at the common herd bounding and bounding along the highway between here and Lamesa while we rode smoothly along in the big old train.

And then we had the added delight of switching around and backing into the station at Lamesa. (Or rather, we rode in the train while it did the backing and switching and other maneuvering.)

In fact, it was only one flaw in the "it will be" and that was that we "didn't" dusted off when we reached our destination. And there was such a nice whiskeroom with a green handle in the rack over our compartment, and it all went to waste.

In spite of that, however, it was a nice trip, and we bet you wish you could make one like it sometime.

DRY CLEAR WEATHER IS WELCOME ON SOUTHERN PLAINS

cessation of heavy and unseasonable rains of the past few weeks seems to be assured at this time, and O'Donnell is rejoicing over that fact along with the rest of the South Plains and the entire state.

Clouds began breaking slightly Thursday, and sunshine has continued uniformly since that time. Highways and streets are more passable than during the first part of last week, but our own boulevards and avenues are in their usual chaotic condition following a rain.

Still, we can't equal the record of one of our neighboring West Texas towns. The Rotan Advance last week carried headlines stating that J. C. Bridges, a local business man, caught a fish in the street in front of his place of business Tuesday morning. On second thought, however, only of the decided opinion that the only reason none of us had had in the high water here town. We must remember our fish are of the dry varieties found up on the while the Rotan fish are accustomed to slight dam up in the high water here town. Vocational Agriculture Notes

by R. H. MATHIS

The Duties of a Vocational Agriculture Teacher

Vocational Agriculture was made possible back in 1917 when our National Congress passed the Smith-Hughes Act making it possible for the Federal Government to assist the states in financing all phases of Vocational Education. Our legislators realized that the vast majority of our boys and girls were being turned out of high school without any training in any vocation. It was found that only a very small percentage of the farm boys and girls were able to enter college and that many farm boys were being forced to enter upon the farming profession without any vocational training in agriculture. It was because of these facts that the Smith-Hughes Act was enacted by our National Congress.

The Smith-Hughes Act provides for four distinct types of Vocational Education, namely: Vocational Agriculture, Vocational Industrial Education, Vocational Industrial Rehabilitation, and Vocational Training for non-farm boys. Each of these forms of Vocational Training are now being offered in high schools throughout the country but due to the fact that Texas is an agricultural state Vocational Agriculture and Home Economics are the ones that have made the greatest progress in this state. Today there are over three hundred high school departments of Vocational Agriculture in Texas alone. There are equally as many, if not more, high school departments of Home Economics.

The successful teacher of Vocational Agriculture is always considered a very valuable asset to the community in which he works. There are four distinct types of services that the Vocational Agriculture teacher is required to render to the people of his community.

First of all, the agriculture teacher is a member of the high school faculty and is under the direct supervision of the school superintendent just as are all of the other teachers of the school. He is required to give systematic instruction to the regularly enrolled students of Vocational Agriculture and must provide the boys with ample opportunity for doing supervised practice on such work as is being taught in the classroom. This is usually done by requiring each student to set up a program of supervised practice work at or near the beginning of school. Such supervised practice programs usually consist of three home projects and about fifteen supervised practice jobs other than those connected with the home projects. This supervised practice work is carried on throughout the entire school year and many boys carry on projects throughout the entire twelve months of the year.

The agriculture teacher is required to visit each boy at his home occasionally to see what progress he is making with his home projects, and to offer personal instructions if such work is not being done properly. Besides this, the agriculture teacher must take the Agriculture classes on field trips to the neighboring farms whenever there is an opportunity to give the boys first hand instruction in some job such as milking poultry flocks, pruning fruit trees, etc.

The second duty of the Vocational Agriculture teacher lies with the adult farmers of the community. He is required to teach at least one agricultural Evening School composed of adult farmers. These Farmers' Evening Schools are usually taught on the farm problem basis. The farmers set up a list of problems with which they are confronted, and each problem is discussed by the entire group with the Vocational Agriculture teacher acting as chairman and leading the discussion. If there is any technical information needed in arriving at a solution of the problem being discussed, the Agriculture teacher supplies the group with the necessary information. As soon as the proper solution to the problem is decided upon, that problem is dropped and a new one is taken up. The average length of an Adult Farmers' Evening School is twelve weeks with one meeting each week. Much progress is being made with this type of instruction and many worthwhile, improved, farm practices are now being used by the adult farmers of Texas as a result of Agricultural Evening Schools.

The third duty of the Vocational Agriculture teacher is to give part-time instruction to those boys in the community that had to drop out of high school and start farming in order to make a living for the family. These part-time classes are conducted very much like the Adult Farmers Evening Schools are conducted. Due to the youthfulness of the part-time students of Vocational Agriculture, they are easily led to see the value of improved farm practices and usually lose no time in adopting them. For this reason, part-time instruction in agriculture is often of considerably more value to a community than is Agriculture Evening School instruction. It is not always possible to find enough young boys that are not in school to justify the organization of a part-time class in agriculture, but wherever one has been organized it has proven to be very much worth while.

The fourth duty of the Vocational Agriculture teacher is for the entire community and is often spoken of as community service. He is supposed to take part in any and all movements that are for the good of the community in which he works. Many Vocational teachers are serving their communities as choir leaders, Sunday school teachers, secretaries of Chamber of Commerce and in many other worth while activities. The agriculture teacher often renders individual service to the farmers. It is a common thing for him to be called out to a farm to cull a flock of hens, or to terrace a field, or to give advice on how to treat a sick animal, or to assist in controlling some insect that may be doing damage to crops.

All of these services are absolutely free to the farmers and to the people of the community because the teacher is paid a year around salary out of the money made available for carrying on Vocational Agriculture work in this state. If a Vocational Agriculture instructor really works at heart, he is only glad to have an opportunity to serve the people of his community in any and every way possible. Is there any reason why the Vocational Agriculture teacher should not be considered a valuable asset to a community, if he successfully carries out the work that he is supposed to do?

POST OFFICE BUILDING RECEIVING REPAIRS

Recent heavy rains revealed the presence of numerous leaks in the Singleton building which houses the post office, and carpenters and plasterers began work early Monday morning making repairs.

The most bothersome leak happened to be around the gutter or drain to the right of the entrance door. The brick and plaster were all torn out and complete repairs made, in addition to other lesser work about the roof and interior of the lobby.

The Singleton building is one of the best in town, being constructed of tile and brick some four years ago, and these few repairs will keep it in prime condition for years to come.

"AMBULANCE SERVICE"

Both in the Same Boat

Swift & Company has more than one hundred produce plants, where poultry, eggs and dairy products are bought, prepared and shipped to far-off markets. In each plant is an ambitious, hard-working local resident—the manager. In his community that man is "Swift & Company".

He has the producer viewpoint. He rejoices when prices are satisfactory to his patrons. In his interest is selfish. He is in the same boat with the farm producer. His advancement in business, in his own organization, depends on how much produce he purchases and how well he handles it.

Your Swift produce plant manager strives for steady operation at full capacity; only under such conditions is his plant most efficient. He wants volume and full payrolls. Nothing pleases him better than to pay the cash price for more and more produce.

That price is governed by demand, by what consumers can and will pay. But when the local manager is ready to ship his prepared products, demand is not awaited; is not left to chance. Swift & Company enhances demand for produce by advertising brands of high quality: Swift's Premium Milk-Fed Chickens, Golden West Fowl, Swift's Brookfield Butter, Eggs, Cheese and many other products.

An army of Swift & Company salesmen, working from 400 branch houses and along hundreds of car routes, searches daily for bigger and hungrier markets. The local manager buys to supply those markets. Thus continually expanding outlets are opened up for the producer. The same army of salesmen sells both meat and produce. The same railroad cars transport both. Thus, costs of marketing are reduced for both livestock men and produce men.

Swift & Company has developed a national sales force and a national buying organization—striving to lower costs between the farm and the retail store. The personal welfare of each man depends on how well he does that job. That's why the charges for the service are low. Profits have averaged, over a period of years, less than a half cent a pound for all products sold.

The proportion of the fund to be allotted to each institution will be set out at the meeting and so large a convention to be held here, on November 16th.

Mrs. Martin Scott and daughter, Miss Marie, of Dallas, left Tuesday after a visit here with Mrs. Scott's sister, Mrs. D. M. Estes.

Miss Scott teaches Biology at Southern Methodist University at Dallas, and will resume her work after a short visit with her sister, Mrs. James Miller of Ozona.

Mrs. Estes accompanied her sister and niece on an extended trip to Ft. Worth, Dallas, and Hartshorn, Okla. They visited their brothers, Dr. J. C. Hudson at Cedar Hill and Dr. W. K. Hudson at Hartshorn during the trip. They returned the latter part of last week.

ONE DOLLAR OF STATE PER CAPITA PAID

Payment of an additional dollar of the public school per capita was made throughout the state Thursday. The First National Bank here received checks for the local school. Will Independent district, and for Borden county. It will be remembered that the local bank is the depository for the Borden county school.

This payment leaves an unpaid balance of $2.50 on last year's $17.50 per capita.

Charles N. Shaver, Texas state superintendent of public instruction, announced that the balance will probably be liquidated in October and November.

TWO YOUNG BENEDICTS INITIATED INTO FRATERNITY

Messrs. Sam Singleton and Cecil Tredway, two of our youngest married men, were officially initiated into the Rolling-Pen and Frying-Pan Order Friday afternoon about six o'clock.

And the manner of their initiation was being chained to fire-places and telephone-poles, compelled to sell a certain necessary bathroom supply.

The initial tussle necessary to convince them that they needed to go through the rites attracted quite a crowd, and their earnest efforts at salesmanship also furnished excitement for the town for several minutes. Long enough, at any rate, for young Sam to get pretty thoroughly chilled because of various and sundry peculiar discrepancies in his rather informal attire.

Just how long they would have been compelled to remain in the limelight is still a matter of conjecture, for a Samaritan took pity on them and pried the locks, releasing them in time to go home to be fed and consoled.

"We needn't rush home—
my electric range
has started dinner"

Fall shopping days are here and for the first time you needn't fret about dashing home in the middle of the afternoon to fuss and worry about dinner—all you need to do is to put the dinner in the oven early in the day, set the automatic controls and go on your way.

At the proper time, the heat comes on, the proper temperature is attained, the meal cooks itself perfectly and the heat turns off. When you return from downtown, the only thing left to do is to set the table and enjoy the food. Call for a demonstration of electric cookery—don't stay tied to your kitchen any longer.
