

WELL KNOWN LOCAL FARMER IS BADLY HURT

Falls on Wheel of Farnall and is Rescued by Negro Who Risks Own Life

Burley Brewer, prominent and highly esteemed member of the Joe Bailey community east of O'Donnell, was seriously injured Tuesday just after noon when he fell on the wheel of his tractor and was crushed beneath it. He was rushed to the office of Dr. Campbell, where first aid was administered and was later rushed to the Lubbock Sanitarium.

Has Fighting Chance

Late word yesterday was to the effect that Brewer had a fighting chance of pulling through, although his injuries were so bad that it was at first doubtful if he could live more than a few hours.

Injury at once apparent were three deep wounds made either by the lugs of the knives with which he was plowing, and several broken ribs. One lung was pierced, and several other internal injuries combine to make his case a serious one, according to his attendants.

Colored Boy Eye Witness

According to the story told the Index reporter by Andrew Hall, colored boy reared by the Brewer family and the sole eye-witness of the accident, Mr. Brewer did not want to work that afternoon, but the needs of the farm were so great that he carried on. When the boy, who was on another tractor some hundred yards behind Mr. Brewer, last saw him before the accident, he was standing on the ever clearing wheels of the tractor, and caught the sleeve of Mr. Brewer's shirt. Mr. Brewer has since said that something went wrong with the tractor as he attempted to regain the seat he slipped and fell on the wheel. A portion of his body was swept away just in time for the boy to see Mr. Brewer falling and being carried over by the wheel, which passed completely over his body. As Mr. Brewer lifted his head to call to Hall for help, the boy felt his own tractor and ran to his help. He was kneeling beside the injured man when the tractor, traveling at high speed in a circle, headed again for the prostrate man. Brewer was so close that he dodged in and turned the tractor just in time to prevent its hitting Mr. Brewer. Brewer was soon thrown to the ground and was torn from him by a lug. Hall said that Mr. Brewer was conscious enough to try to dodge the tractor and then to say, "Do something for me quickly." Realizing his own helplessness, the boy stopped only to cut the tractor and ran to the man and a half of the house. Bringing water, he and Mrs. Brewer, younger wife of the injured man, returned in car. They supposed he had attempted to life himself, as they found him lying on his face in a furrow. His mouth was so filled with blood and dirt as to render drinking impossible. Realizing that medical aid was imperative, the driver drove nearly to town. Local doctors administered what aid was possible while the ambulance rushed from Lamesa.

PHILLIPS GETS JUDGMENT IN CITY COURT TUESDAY

A judgment for $125 and court costs was rendered by a jury Tuesday afternoon to W. B. Phillips, plaintiff in a suit against J. H. Phillips for breach of contract which came up over a rental deal some two years ago.

T. S. Christopher of Lamesa represented the plaintiff, and J. E. Humphries of Lubbock represented Mr. Phillips.

The jury, composed of Boss Johnson, Jeff Musick, A. Y. Pemberton, Ben Moore, M. Edwards and Mr. Whitehead, was out some ten minutes before returning the verdict. The defendant immediately gave notice of appeal.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Index has been asked to announce that services will be held at the Mesquite Baptist Church at both evening and morning sessions Sunday. Rev. W. L. Hammons will preach.

CHILD INJURED IN FALL FROM PONY SUNDAY

Little Betty Guye Simpson, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Simpson of this place, is in a Lubbock hospital suffering from a fractured elbow which she received late Sunday afternoon when she fell from a shieland pony.

Witnesses report that she lost her balance when a playmate jumped from the pony's back, and in trying to regain it she pulled a rein and caused the pony to lean to one side. This completely overbalanced the child, and she fell with her full weight striking on the elbow which shattered. Three attempts have been made to set the pieces, but as the paper goes to press friends and relatives are anxiously awaiting results of the operation this morning, which will probably show whether or not she will have the use of her arm again.

DAWSON ROAD BONDS FAIL TO CARRY TUESDAY

Proponents of the Dawson County road bond election failed by only a handful votes to vote the bonds to pave Highway No. 83 east and west, and Highway No. 84 north and south across the county Tuesday, according to Wm. A. Wilson, secretary of the Lamesa Chamber of Commerce.

Another petition was filed to vote were cast, 1,100 of which were in favor of the $800,000 issue. Wilson told the Index last night over telephone. A two-thirds majority was required for passage. Wilson said, however, that another petition was filed and circulated calling for another election just as soon as possible.

RAYBURN CHEVROLET DECORATES VACANT LOT WITH USED CAR PAVILION

The Rayburn Chevrolet Company this week completed the erection of improvements on the vacant lot just north of the garage where used cars will be displayed. A screen extending some fifty feet along the front of the lot has attractively painted signs, telling the world about the "O. K. That Counts" and other features of the Chevrolet used car service.

Contractor J. W. Campbell did the work.

RESULTS NOW MAY DECIDE BIG WINNER

Credits Decrease After Midnight Saturday; Pick Your Favorite and Help Her Now

Only a few days left—Only a few hours more—And then—Down, Down, DOWN go the credits!

At that time you stand to lose your favorite Club Sedan, your house full of fine furniture, your round the U. S. or the A. C. L. CASH. It is of the utmost importance that you get every available subscription into the Travel office before Saturday, April 12 midnight.

Today, tomorrow and Saturday without speedy action on your part you lose the prize which goes most. Credits on all subscriptions decrease after that day. A few such orders now—when you count the most—might be the deciding factor in the race. If you back subscriptions now until you get such orders now—when you count the most—might be the deciding factor in the race.

Heading this fine herd is R. C. Buttercup's Raleigh, the thoroughbred male purchased last fall by Mr. Hester in Georgia at a cost of $500. This male is the son of Buttercup's Butter Lad, who sold for $3,200 at seven months of age. Buttercup's Raleigh is the son of Florida's Queen's Raleigh, the greatest sire of first prize winners and gold medal sires in the world of registered Jerseys.

Mr. Hester's bull's granddam holds the highest milk records of any cow in the world for the following periods: 85 lbs. in 24 hours; 581 lbs. in 308 days; 3084 lbs. in one month; 4316 lbs. in two months; register of merit of 901 lbs. of 85 per cent butter in one year from 18,182 lbs. of milk at six years of age. Leda's Raleigh, sire of R. C. Buttercup's Raleigh's dam, sold for $25,000, and was the grand champion of the National Dairy Show in 1919.

Another fine animal Mr. Hester is exhibiting at Plainview is Chief's Golden Raleigh Girl, the heifer which won second place at the Panhandle-Plains Dairy Show last year, the heifer winning over her being the Noble Girl's Fern, another fine heifer, won first at the Dawson County Fair in 1928. Her sire was the double grand champion of the famous imported Oxford You'll Do, a gold medal sire with 92 register of merit of 773 pounds of butterfat in one year. Her dam was Leda's Raleigh Noble Girl, a champion of auction for $1,200 at 10 months. Her granddams were Leda's Raleigh, a $25,000 bull.

Two young heifers and one young bull are also in the troupe. The little heifer calf which came near getting away from the editor several times was the one which Mr. Hester is proud, and he states that he would not accept a penny less than $250 for her.

Mr. Hester is probably the most enthusiastic and best-informed dairy cattle raiser in all West Texas. He has approximately thirty head of fine Jerseys on his place three miles south of O'Donnell. He has sold over a hundred head of stock to the member and also sells a great quantity of butter here. He raises practically all of his feed for this herd and he is telling this week after his highly organized dairy business, that the future of the Index depends upon the success of Mr. Hester's actual records to show to the world that highly bred dairy stock pays big dividends.

It may be confidently expected that Mr. Hester's Jerseys will win several places at the Plainview show this week.

The total vote stands 653,337 for enforcement, 591,212 for modification, and 848,751 for repeal.

3, Mistakes Aspirin For Candy

The Ray Showalter, Jr., aged 3, said that the little fellow had taken a large number of aspirin tablets yesterday about one o'clock, evidently mistaking them for candy. He rushed to the office of Dr. Campbell where medical aid was given and was able to go back home in an hour little the worse for his experience.

The little boy is the son of Ray Showalter, superintendent of the school at Walls and also director of athletics for the Lynn County Interstate League. As soon as it was known that the little fellow had taken up so many headache pills, he was put in the car of Dr. Scott and rushed to O'Donnell.

PRO MINTRELL PROMISES TREAT TO LOCAL PEOPLE

The football boys, under the direction of Coach Gilbreath, will give people a treat of the right sort to present their negro minstrel in the high school auditorium this evening. End men will be Vaughn, Louis Edwards, New-Caddell, Cecil Foster, Sumner and Glen Everett.

The coach and athletic department met the hearty co-operation of public and promise an evening fun.

WHERE'S THE PROOF?

The above picture was given to the Index by Friend W. L. Palmer in an effort to prove its unusually large fish stories. He is telling this week after his visit back east. Pictures are fine, but we warned W. L. that he had to bring some real sure enough proof before we would believe his stories.

The fact of the business is that his daughter, Miss Thelma, who is his chief clerk and who is also quite an artist, drew a picture of the fish W. L. said he caught, and then when he began drawing his picture, he had become so 'awfully-headed' that the result hardly does him or her justice.

Good propaganda, we call it, but where's the proof?

SUREST FARM RELIEF

Any farm relief worthy of the name must come from the farmer himself, in the opinion of agricultural authorities, with governmental agencies ranking a poor second best in any real improvement of the farm situation. Increased efficiency on the part of the farmer himself will go further towards improving rural conditions.

There are certain basic principles which must be followed if a farmer is to succeed as he should.

The first of these is that a great share of the products used by the farm family should be produced at home; second that the farm land should not be robbed year after year, but should be kept up and improved, and third, that the farmer should keep livestock and grow more than one cash crop.

Failure to realize to the fullest upon certain inherent advantages of farm life is depriving many farmers of a large share of the ready cash which their fellow farmers are securing each year. Profits from the farm poultry flock is one of these things, to cite an outstanding example.

Farmers in some sections of the country are making each hen on the farm pay a net profit of between $1.50 and $2.50 a year. Many farmers, however, overlook this valuable source of income, leaving it to their wives as a "pin money" proposition. Improvement of farm poultry stock, principally by taking advantage of a greatly improved hatchery product, has made possible large profits from poultry activities in recent years.

BUSINESS

Business has been better; it has been a great deal worse. Apparently there is plenty of money for all legitimate needs. Considerable unemployment was reported in February, but the situation was improved in March, and assurance comes from Secretary Lamont that there will be further improvement, as the construction programs resulting from President Hoover's plan for an industrial revival gets under way. Farmers are buying as heavily as they did at this time last year. Farm machinery has been moving into the Southwest in train loads—particularly into the wheat belt. There seems to be no cause for alarm in business, according to the most reliable business leaders.

While this immediate section needs rain just now, it does not absolutely have to have it before next month. Business is a little slow right now because of the apprehension being entertained over the rain prospects.

But rain will come! A good crop will be made. Cotton acreage will be reduced and will thus bring a better price, and the diversified farming program of this section will add to the great wealth of this country. Let us be optimistic. Let us have faith. Our very being and existence depends on our faith in the country, so let us not give up before we have to.

HINDENBURG SIGNS

President von Hindenburg of Germany has signed the Young plan agreement for the final determination of war reparations, although it was strongly opposed by certain elements of the German people.

This act is of the most important significance, because it marks the end of the long and often bitter controversy over reparations which has existed ever since the end of the World War.

In reaching a peaceful settlement of this vast and complicated problem the conciliatory attitude of President Hindenburg has been a great help. Although during the war he was looked upon as a ruthless militarist, since his accession to the presidency in 1925 his powerful influence has been consistently exerted in behalf of peace and harmony.

He is still vigorous and active at the age of 83, and enjoys the confidence has been consistently exerted. His approval of the Young plan is another evidence of his sincere desire to promote peace and good will among the nations.

SMALL TOWN MERCHANTS WOULD PROFIT

An adequate system of farm-to-market roads in every state would not only be of inestimable value to agriculture but to town and city merchants as well.

Ease of transportation causes more people to travel. Better roads stretching into the rural areas and making them readily accessible all year round, would attract tourists. They would bring visitors to the smaller towns and cities.

Furthermore, if farmers had constant, all-year contact with surrounding communities through the medium of improved roads, they would bring greater patronage to local merchants. Accessibility to markets would increase farm profits, thus giving the farmer more money to spend for the necessities and luxuries of life.

The Linn County Commissioners Court realizes the necessity of good lateral roads and has plans laid that will result in a system of rural roads second to none in West Texas. The commissioners are now planning to buy additional machinery with which to build new roads and maintain the ones. The court is to be congratulated on the progressive road program it is carrying out.

HERE'S A RECORD

There is a remarkable firm of general merchandise in the little town of Clear Lake, S. D., which probably holds the world's record for consistent and adequate advertising in a community of that size.

English & Towers have carried a full-page advertisement in the Clear Lake Courier every week, without a miss, for twenty years. They have contracted for a similar space for each week of 1920.

Yet Clear Lake is a town of only 835 population, in a county of but 8,759 people, with two newspapers. The extent of the firm's advertising with the other newspapers was not stated in the source of our information, but it is reasonable to suppose that it was considerable.

From their extensive and persistent advertising, English & Towers appear to be pretty thoroughly sold on the proposition. As the Courier says: "They have proven to their satisfaction that large space in the newspaper regularly brings correspondingly big results."

Chicago is to advertise the city's good points. Well, the had one's had plenty of advertising.

Contempt of the senate is punishable. Fortunately, contempt for the senate is not.

Many a man who tells you he just cleaned up in oil is janitor in a gas station.

This is the day of red-heads in the movies, if the result of a popularity straw vote by a motion picture magazine means anything. The five actresses standing at the top of the list are in this order: Clara Bow, Colleen Moore, Nancy Carroll, Joan Crawford and Greta Garbo. Bow, Carroll and Crawford have red hair.

Perhaps there isn't much in a name, but it must be disconcerting to nervous people to contemplate the sign on a hearse seen at New Carlisle, Ohio. It reads, "Doom Bros., Undertakers."

New York is to have more artistic garbage cans. O'Donnell doesn't have many artistic ones, but they would do a lot of good if people would use them instead of throwing trash and rubbish on the streets.

Miss Freeman, a teacher in the grammar school, wished to impress on her pupils the importance of being original.

She said, "Elmo, repeat these sentences in your own words: 'I see a cow. The cow is pretty. The cow can run.'"

Elmo replied, "Lamp de cow. Ain't she a beauty? An' say, baby, she sure can step!"

The people of New Moore enjoyed prayer meeting and preaching Wednesday night. Brother McClain preached Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Most of the farmers around New Moore have their land listed and are waiting for a good rain before they start planting.

Miss Freeman spent the week-end at her home in Tahoka. We missed her very much at Sunday school and church, but were rewarded by a good chalk talk at our young people's meeting.

Bill and Raymond Hull of Stamford spent the week-end with E. D. Snyder of this community.

Brother Pennegriss is conducting a meeting at New Moore this week. Everyone is invited.

The New Moore school girls and boys went to Wells Friday afternoon and played ball. Both teams were beaten, but they invite Wells over to New Moore to play with them again.

On April 1 part of the New Moore school boys and girls ran off, but those who stayed were treated by the teachers, and in the afternoon the Pride String Band came and gave a program. We enjoyed this very much and hope they will come again soon.

Miss Ima Maye Bowles and Vayle Green were guests of Misses Velma and A. B. Gillham Sunday.

WOODY

We are surely having some fine weather. Spring is here!

Several cases of sickness are in our community. Mr. Maddock has two cases of typhoid fever in his family.

Mrs. Garrett has been real sick again.

Our trustee election Saturday resulted in the election of A. B. Trice and Dulie Womack, both good men. Our school is progressing nicely now.

Travis Van Zandt is home now after his operation and is getting along fine.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Richardson were in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Q. Smith Sunday.

We had a large crowd at singing Sunday. We elected delegates to the Dawson County Singing Convention, which meets the third Sunday in this month at Wilson. There won't be singing at Woody on the third Sunday, as several are going to that convention. Our singing days are the first and third Sundays in each month.

Rev. Taylor filled his regular appointment here Sunday morning and evening. He preached two fine sermons.

Everybody is invited and urged to come to Sunday school. We need your help, and you need the Sunday school.

V. L. Smith went to O'Donnell last week on business.

Mrs. Grover Cliff and Mrs. A. B. Trice visited Mrs. Van Zandt Saturday.

Mrs. J. A. Richardson went to Lubbock Saturday.

RANDALL NEWS

We are very well pleased with the results obtained by reporting the number of people present and the chapters present in our Sunday school. Last Sunday there were fifty-three present who read a total of 651 chapters. This is an increase of eighteen in attendance and 519 chapters over the previous Sunday. This shows that it pays to advertise. In addition to our Sunday school services, we were very glad to have D. C. Lindley of Lamesa to preach for us. His sermon was enjoyed by all.

Last Wednesday morning when the people of our community arose from a very peaceful night's rest, they were very much shocked to find that they had been visited by a group of midnight serenaders celebrating All-Fools Day. Many wagers and other things were overturned and these unprincipled scoundrels rendered entirely useless until the owners could solicit the aid of good friends or kind neighbors to assist them in restoring things to their former or proper positions. To date, the miscreants have not been apprehended; but it does not take a very vivid imagination to ascertain their identity. The victims of these depredations have no intention of prosecuting.

The tacky party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McKee Saturday night was a great success, according to statements made by those present. Many clever costumes were displayed, and after due deliberation on the part of the judges, Mrs. Van McKee was chosen as the prize winner. All reported a nice time.

Messrs. John Elmore, Chester London and W. C. Lankford were elected as trustees for the Randall school for the ensuing two years. These men are all directly interested in the school, and the voters made no mistake in selecting them to oversee it. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd De Graffenreid have just returned from Whitney where they visited Floyd's mother. They also stopped at Paacoek where Mrs. De Graffenreid formerly lived. A nice trip was reported with the usual fish caught.

A. C. Le Go and family made a trip to Plainview last week where they visited relatives. We are very sorry to report that H. Y. (Rusty) Burkett is sick with pneumonia in a Lubbock sanitarium. At this present writing he is doing about as well as could be expected. Several of the Randall people passed a very enjoyable afternoon Sunday at O. K. where they attended the First Sunday Singing Convention.

GOREE PAPER PAYS TRIBUTE TO NEW O'DONNELL PASTOR

Editor E. L. Covey of the Goree Advocate in an article last week had the following to say about Rev. L. S. Jenkins, who has recently come to be pastor of the O'Donnell Baptist Church: "Rev. L. S. Jenkins, who left this week to take up his work with the First Baptist Church at O'Donnell, will be greatly missed by the church here where he has been pastor for nearly four years, and his leaving is regretted by his many friends of Goree and the neighboring communities, of other churches and those who are not members of the churches. His friendly nature has made for him many friends throughout this section, and his devotion to his church has endeared him to those who have been working with him in the church. "Rev. Jenkins, who was born in Montague County, came here when but a boy and for a number of years made his home on the farm south of town. He spent four years in Simmons University at Abilene and did special work in Baylor University. Since that time he has been serving the churches of this section of the state.

"We heartily commend him to the people of O'Donnell and wish for him the greatest success in his work there."

GILBERTS BALL HAWKS LOSE GAME TO SCRUBS

The first nine-inning ball game of the season was reeled off in good time Thursday afternoon. Of last week between the O'Donnell High School boys and a bunch picked up here in town.

Rough ground, stiff joints and lack of practice caused several errors on both sides, however the game was interesting, and several baseball enthusiasts were out to see the melee.

Coach Gilbert's boys were not equal to their more experienced opponents, it was proved, and lost the game 16 to 7. No outstanding plays were made, but all round good performance by each player was noticed, considering the fact that none had any time to limber up and get the "kinks" out of their muscles, accumulated during the past winter.

Coach Gilbert is going to try and match other games in the near future with some of the other schools of this territory. The city team may all be seen again soon in action, as some excellent talent here will make up a good ball team.

KONJOLA ONLY MEDICINE THAT DID ANY GOOD

New Medicine Banished Kidney and Stomach Ailments After Others Failed

MRS. M. D. ABBOTT

"I suffered for two years with kidney trouble," said Mrs. M. D. Abbott, 600 East Hattie Street, Fort Worth. "I have scarcely been able to do any work. Lifting, or turning my body was the signal for severe back pains. Night risings were frequent. My stomach, too, added to my misery. Anything I ate caused gas and a severe pain in the pit of my stomach. "Konjola is the only medicine that did me any good. I now feel better than I have for many a day. I can eat what I wish without suffering and the pains in my back are gone. My kidneys now are functioning normally. Konjola has gone right to the spot in my case and I praise this wonderful medicine for all that it has done for me. A medicine that did all Konjola did for me can help others and I am recommending it to a lot of my friends who are suffering as I did." Konjola is not a "cure-all". There is no such thing. But when taken for from six to eight weeks, Konjola will produce amazing results. The countless thousands of endorsements of Konjola have proven that it makes good, even in the most stubborn cases.

Konjola is sold in Snyder, Texas, at Whitsett Drug Co., and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

CHAPTER III

The Kidnaping of Howard Bettington

Bettington, as he made his way northward from Gloucester, felt a sense of happiness in that he had engaged himself to lift the "Davin" from its monetary troubles. The sketches he made—which would afterward be transferred to his big canvases—were the best he had ever done. He was pleased, who was ordinarily a hard critic. "This," he cried, as he sat at study of art and rock, "will pay Mary's tuition and board for a year."

The Sketches He Made Were the Best He Had Ever Done.

He was perched upon a little island of rock, some three miles from Blackport. His enthusiasm led him to look the signs of a coming storm. He took the storm which late August ever brought to the Maine coast.

With the first puff of that fearful storm a great wave, like a tidal bore, rolled in and overwhelmed the rock. Only owing to his great strength and ability as a swimmer was Bettington able to reach shore.

With the storm came an awful darkness which presently merged into night and left Bettington bruised and weary, trying to make his way to the village. It was midnight when a dim light showed him he was near a small house. Fishing nets and lobster pots were evidence of the calling of the owner.

Bettington had come to the shack of one Jonathan Gibbs, a surly man, who had before the fire. Bettington recognized himself indifferently with his fishing and chickens. He was known for a bad-tempered man who preferred his own company to any other.

There was no answer to his knock upon the door, so Bettington, now chilled to the bone, opened it. He found the shack had but two rooms. A living room with a bed in a corner of it, and a kitchen. A soapstone stove gave what heat the larger room required. Driftwood furnished the victuals with his fuel and he was soon thawing before the fire. Bettington knew the fisherfolk; they were hospitable men wherever one met them. He had no fear he would get a reception there.

But he did not know Jonathan Gibbs. The process of getting warm was so comforting that Bettington did not bear footsteps outside. Gibbs had come out to traffic his boats from their customary moorings at the dock to the shelter of the shore. The first premonition that a stranger had invaded his home was the pungent smoke which beat down on him as he came toward the front door.

He stopped suddenly. His eyes were staped. Weariness had left place to sudden, bewildering fear. He retreated stealthily, noiselessly.

At the side of a rowboat, he paused. His blanched face took on something of its normal color. The instinct to flee was conquered. There came yet more strongly to him the desire to know by what he was menaced. But his reticence showed no abatement of his caution. From the top of a closet he took down a shotgun, into whose twin barrels he put No. 4 cartridges.

He opened the door of his living room so softly that Bettington did not hear him. It was the cold gust that made the painter look round. He saw a tall, keen-faced man at whose shoulder was the butt of a twelve-bore.

"Don't move," said the fisherman. Gibbs advanced slowly into the room. He had never, to his knowledge, set eyes on this stranger. But he was searching and with such obvious menace that Bettington took the silence.

"I ought to apologize for this, I suppose," he said, "but surely, on a night like this a man may seek shelter without being threatened with a scattering-gun."

"Who were the two men you were with in the post office yesterday?" Gibbs demanded.

"I was in my post office yesterday," said Bettington stiffly. "I have not been in company with any two men for a fortnight."

Gibbs lowered his gun. He tried to assume a look of amiability, but there was still anxiety written plainly. Bettington, watching, noted that the gun was still in such a position as to constitute a threat.

Bettington related his misadventures.

"A painter, eh?" said Gibbs. He crossed the room, took down from a shelf a pencil and a piece of paper. These he handed to the other.

"Prove it," he commanded. "Draw something."

Bettington hesitated for a moment. He was not a man who went the better for being driven. But it occurred to him that in his case solitarity was mentally unbalanced. He sketched in a few skillful strokes a portrait of the man standing there, his gun balanced in the crook of his arm.

Jonathan Gibbs looked at it in silence.

"It is good," he said deliberately. "Whatever else you may be you are a draftsman."

"Why should I be anything than I pretend?"

"You've never seen me before?" Gibbs demanded.

"Never," Bettington said a little irritably, "and I shall pass a contented existence if I never see you again. What sort of a Maine fisherman are you to behave like this?"

Gibbs put down his gun and assumed a more friendly air.

"I've been threatened," he said rather vaguely. "I've made enemies hereabout. I have to be careful. I was startled."

"You certainly startled me," said the other. "I hope to be able to pass the night here and dry my clothes."

"You surely can," said Jonathan Gibbs. "I'll boil the water and make you some coffee. I guess you're hungry."

It was after the meal that Bettington asked him, "Why should anyone threaten you here?"

"Jealousy," said Gibbs, after a pause. "I'm not a state of Maine man and I don't mix with anyone around. They don't understand that."

Plainly the man had something to conceal. After all, Bettington told himself, it was none of his business. He had no other men of any account. He could not go out into the black night, now made doubly impassable by the deluge of rain. Gibbs made up the fire by parking a huge armful of wood into it.

Bettington was awakened by the aroma of coffee. Gibbs was holding Bettington's shoes up.

Dried stiff as boards, he announced, "The water is good, you can row across the bay in half an hour."

The summer sun had tanned Bettington to a rich brown. In his sea-boots—the only ones Gibbs had to lend—his faded blue sweater and khaki shirt, he looked the sort of fishing type he had often painted.

At the dock he took a ten-foot rowboat and set out to the village. He had gone, perhaps, half the distance when a fast motor boat overhauled him, swung round and waited in the path he was taking.

There were two men in it. One was a vastly broad-chested man with a trim sweater and white canvas trousers. He had the look of a yacht sailor. The other, who was steering the boat, had no other peculiarities other than that general air of following the sea.

"We've had an accident," said the broad-chested man and pointed to something at the bottom of the launch. Bettington clung to the side of the drifting motor boat and stood up. There, on the bottom of the other craft, was a man lying motionless. And as the artist stooped over him, the recumbent sailor gave a tremendous half-arm jab which caught Bettington on the point of the jaw. The other few grabbed him as his head fell forward and hauled him on board where, unconscious, he took the place of his assailant, who rose grinning.

The broad-chested man, who was called Sam, clasped him on the back in approval.

"Dandy," he cried. "And that rock prevents anyone seeing us from the village." Sam bent over the unconscious form and neatly trussed it up with rope. "The Boss will be tickled to death over this. Stove in that rowboat, one of you."

A man with a boat hook smashed in some bottom boards and Jonathan Gibbs' dinghy slowly filled with water. Then the bunch put out of the bay, past the buoy, and headed north for Bar Harbor.

Bettington had recovered from the knock-out within five minutes. He could see from the brightly polished brasswork and mahogany that he was in a yacht's launch. He knew that the hum of the motor would make any call for help useless. He had been neatly knocked out and was now to be expeditiously shuttled.

It was incredible. Then the real meaning of the thing flashed on him. He was mistaken for Jonathan Gibbs. He was wearing Gibbs' boat and wearing Gibbs' clothes. With a two days' growth of beard and a face burned with the sun, he might easily pass for the fisherman.

"This is all a mistake," he said, addressing himself to Sam. "You think I'm Jonathan Gibbs."

"I know d—d well you're not," said Sam, without animus.

Gibbs was unrecognizable. They knew him for himself, and knowing it, they were carrying him off, bound with ropes, to the open sea.

There was seemingly no sort of personal grudge in this high-handed matter. The three men were carrying out orders.

"Listen, bo," said Sam, "we've got orders not to say a thing to you till the Boss sees you. It won't do you no good asking why we did it, or why we are. We had to get you alive and unharmed and we did the best we knew how."

It was dark when the lights of Bar Harbor came in sight. Bettington was carried up the gangway, across a deck and then placed in a small cabin lighted with a single porthole.

Sam untied the knots and watched the victim stretch his stiff and cramped limbs.

"Just a word of warning," Sam remarked. "You can't get out of that porthole and you can't get out of this cabin. If you did, it wouldn't help you. If you do, we'll wait till the Boss sends for you."

Sam turned the keys in the door and left him prisoner. As he examined his dunce he heard the throbbing of machinery. He turned the porthole he could see the boat was moving. He pulled off the heavy sea boots of Jonathan Gibbs and flung himself on the berth. In many adventures Bettington had learned that retching and fuming were handicaps that men in danger should not take upon themselves.

Presently he fell asleep and was awakened by Sam.

"You ain't worrying," said Sam, grinning. "They tell me you always had your nerve with you. You won't be able to see the Boss tonight. He's hitting the pipe and it's as much as a man's life is worth to go in now. I haven't no authority to let you out till he gives the word, so I'll bring you a bite to eat here."

It was wedded out. Bettington was still puzzled by his apparent friendliness. As a physical specimen of humanity Sam did not awaken confidence. On his broad, flat face were written lines of brute courage. He would be a bad man to cross. But who should be regard Howard Bettington, painter of seascapes and man of integrity, with such an air of comradeship?

"Where are we bound for?" he asked of Sam, when a tray of food was brought in.

"No York," said Sam.

"Won't I go on deck?" Bettington asked. "I can't escape."

Sam shook his head.

"Not till the Boss gives the word."

"Who is the Boss? The captain?"

"The captain?" There was scorn in Sam's tone. "Him! H—h—no."

"You mean the owner?"

Sam's scorn of the owner was just as emphatic.

"He may think he's the boss and

Capt. Hallett may think he is, but they don't know yet. Sam rose to go. "Just one bit of advice, bo, don't make a noise. If you do, you'll go to Noo York gaged."

Bettington had not been gone on his errand to Blackport a half hour, when Jonathan Gibbs in his motor dory went out to his lobster pots. He was returning when he saw a smaller boat, its gunwales awash, almost across his bow. He knew it instantly for his own. Investigation showed that some of the planking had been staved in. He supposed that one of the needle rocks must have done it. He blamed himself for allowing the stranger to cross the bay. Almost certain death would await any man dressed as Bettington had been, in such currents as these.

Gibbs went to his shack with an uneasy mind. The whole episode spilled publicity to him, but he cheered himself with the hope that his case might have been rescued. In that case he would soon be back at the shack.

But by midnight Bettington did not return and Gibbs waited carefully through the things which were in the torn coat. There was a gold watch with the initials H. B. on it. A wallet contained almost four hundred dollars. There were no letters. But there was a reference on a memorandum of repairs to the skylight of a studio at a given address and a receipt for the rental of it to the end of the current year. And there was a bunch of keys.

For almost an hour Gibbs sat motionless. Then he rose to his feet, put a kettle on the oil stove and presently shaved himself carefully and trimmed his hair. He rubbed the grease which Bettington had applied to his shoes so carefully into the leather, that it became at length flexible and he was able to put them on. Hasty repairs to the torn trousers and coat enabled him to wear them. With an iron which had been little used of late, he pressed them into something of their former shape.

It was breaking when Jonathan Gibbs, now a new man, had farewell to the shack he had inhabited for six years. None saw him as he made his way inland to Westfield. A sleepy ticket agent gave him a ticket to Portland and forgot the occurrence instantly.
