The equipment will arrive here Friday morning at gan, Rev. and Mrs. Kirk Beard, and 8:30 instead of Thursday as before announced. Volunteers are urged to be on hand for the job. The machine will be here for a day and a half, which means that the volunteers will be needed again on Sat-

The first of the sprayings will be Friday, the second about August 15 and the last one just before school begins in September. The entire city will feel the effect of the spraying machines as well as the thickly populated area along Kamay Road. The Barbour Trucking company has donated a truck to pull the machinery. Funds will take care of purchasing the DDT spray and for paying the skilled help necessary to travel with the equipment.

The delay in the arrival of the machinery is due to the fact that there was more work at Kamay and Kadane Corner than had been anticipated.

Pattersons Report Pleasant Vacation

George Patterson dropped into the Herald office Tuesday morning and very enthusiastically told us all about the trtp he and his folks took. Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Patterson, Opal Faye and George were gone two weeks and just returned last Friday.

George was much impressed with the bears in Yellowstone Park and said they were the highlight of the whole trip for him. Another awesome sight was the petrefied Indian at one of the Indian posts in

Colorado's Garden of the Gods. The Pattersons visited the Cave of the Winds, Pike's Peak, cliff dwellings, Seven Falls, the Royal Gorge, and as George put it, a whole bunch of national parks and forests. While in Casper, Wyo., the Pattersons visited with George's greataunt Mrs. Sally Jackman. He was disappointed that the big famous rodeo at Cheyenne was not yet in performance while they were there. The trip also included points in Montana and New Mexico.

'It Had to Be You" which is coming to the Parkway Theater's Midnight show Saturday and held over for Sunday and Monday showings, will be one of the memorable pictures of the year. generally our not try to launder them like cottons.

Many women still do not realize that the two fabrics react differently to moisture and heat. Rayons become weaker when wet while cottons are slightly stronger, Therefore, rayons need gentler treatment both in washing and froning. Rayons are more easily damaged by heat than cottons so should be pressed with a cooler iron, she says.

Rayons are not difficult to iron; they are just different. Usually they do not need to be as moist as cottons for ironing. They should be ironed on the wrong side of the fabric so that any shine left by the iron will not show up on the right side. The iron should follow the weave of the fabric, and the fabric should not be pulled or stretched or given much pressure with the Above all, the iron should not be too hot. It is a good idea to start ironing with the temperature set low and let the iron become hotter until the ideal heat for the goods is found.

Collars, pockets and trimmings usually need touching up with the iron on the right side. Use a pressing cloth-over the rayon to avoid shining these places. Rayon crepes and jerseys are the most difficult to iron evenly because they have so much "give". A point to remember also is that crepes shrink more than plain-woven fabrics.

Agronomist to Collect New Grasses In Brazil

New grasses to improve California ranges will be collected in southern Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay by Dr. R. M. Love, University of California college of agriculture agronomist, during his leave of absence for a year.

Many stipa species of grasses are found in this region, Love said. The California stipas are among the hardiest in this state, and the best of their South American relatives will be brought to Davis.

Prairie brome, one of the eight new forage grasses released to growers last fall, came from Argentina, Love added. He hopes to find others there which might prove suitable to California conditions.

Love is making the trip at the invitation of the Brazlian government which asked him to organize a laboratory in the state of Rio Grande do Sul to improve wheat and grasses. The Brazilian agriculture department has arranged trips to at least five experiment stations to study farm problems of that region.

During these travels, Love will have opportunities to gather grass specimens. He also plans to collect grasses in Argentina and Uruguay. Love joined the agronomy staff, eight years ago to work on California range problems.

Strange Dog Malady

An acute, contagious disease, apparently identical to a virus infection of dogs in Sweden, has made its appearance in the United States and may be responsible for many recent dog deaths across the nation, states the American Veterinary Medical association. Thus far, the disease has been diagnosed in one dog in the Chicago area and in five dogs in Boston, and "there is well-founded suspicion that it has appeared in several other Ameri-can cities." Acute tonsilitis was a feature of the disease as observed in Boston, the report stated, but this was probably a symptom rather than a cause. Research findings indicated that the disease was of virus origin, but that the virus was different from that which causes canine distemper. The liver was badly affected in all cases. Other symptoms included fever, coughing, loss of appetite, weakness, and finally collapse and death. Convulsions and other nervous symptoms were observed in some of the cases.

1947 Crops That Exceeded Average American civilian ate about 46 pounds of canned vegetables in 1947 and 2.25 pounds of frozen vegetables, according to the 1947 Britannica Book of the Year. New high production records were set by sweet corn, kale, lettuce and watermelons in 1947, although the total United States vegetable crop was 12 per cent below the record crop of 1946. Vegetable crops that exceeded in 1947 the previous year's production were kale, lettuce, sweet corn, artichokes, asparagus and watermelons. The smallest crops were onions, melons, cabbage, eggplant and escarole. The most valuable vegetable crops in 1947 were lettuce, worth $108,367,000; tomatoes, $87,112,000; celery, $56,864,000, and onions, $53,-142,000. Cabbage, cantaloupes and carrots all exceeded $40,000,000 in

Six Points to Remember In Overcoming Avian TB

Tuberculosis in chickens is a dis-Dr. D. F. Eveleth, veterinarian of the North Dakota agricultural experiment station.

For the most part it is unlikely that there will be many deaths from tuberculosis in the pullet flock. One of the most satisfactory methods of eradicating avian tu-berculosis is a combination of strict sanitation and the elimination of hens over one year old.

Dr. Eveleth stresses the point "tuberculosis organisms are spread in the droppings of infected birds and that under North Dakot conditions these germs will live in the ground for at least three

The important points in tuberculosis control in poultry, as outlined by Dr. Evelth, are: "(1) Market all old birds before pullets are brought off the range. (2) Thoroughly clean and disinfect the laying house before bringing in the pullets. (3) Thoroughly cull the pullet flock. (4) Feed a well balanced ration. (5) Keep the laying house dry. (6) Keep the layers confined to house and sunporch to prevent spread of disease on the premises.'

The spread of tuberculosis for the most part takes place on summer range and in the laying house. The range used for the young flock should be a field seeded to a vigorously growing grass or legume and on land not used the previous year for poultry or swine. This is important because of the resistance of the tuberculosis germs. It is very important that the range used be far enough away from the farmstead so that the birds do not come in contact with swine, because the disease appears to be transmitted readily from poultry to swine.

Illinois Offers Prizes For Catching Tagged Fish

An "All Illinois Fishing Rodeo" sponsored by the Illinois department of conservation started June 15. The statewide fishing contest offers anglers an opportunity to win valuable prizes from outboard motors to artificial baits which have been donated by manufacturers and retail firms interested in promoting fishing as a recreation.

Tagged fish have been released by the conservation department in more than 36 Illinois lakes. Each tag carries a number corresponding to one of the hundreds of prizes offered. There is no charge for participating in the fishing rodeo; any fisherman who catches a tagged fish in accordance with the rules, is eligible for an award.

All persons-men, women, boys and girls-are eligible for participation in this rodeo, with the exception of members of the Illnois conservation department and their families. Fish must be caught between June 15, 1948, and September 15, 1948, by use of rod and reel or pole and line. Either artificial lures or live bait may be used.

Wire Production at Peak

Electrical wire man the United States now are producing wire for homes and commercial buildings at the record rate of six billion feet per year, nearly three times the pre-war rate, according to figures released today by U. S. Rubber company. Reason for the high production is the postwar rate, according to figures released today by U. S. Rubber company. Reason for the high production is the postwar building boom. Almost 100 per cent of the homes being erected today are wired for lighting and appliances and, in some instances, electric heating. The average size home uses 1,500 feet of wire. Large commercial and industrial buildings use much more wire. Most of the wire is made of copper insulated with rubber. The shortage of copper has stimulated interest in aluminum wire, which is plentiful, cheaper and lighter in Fly and Mosquito Control Many towns and cities in North Dakota are carrying out fly and mosquito control programs this year, says F. Gray Butcher, NDAC extension service entomologist and plant pathologist. Oiling of sloughs and other mosquito breeding areas are principal activities. Minot has launched the most ambitious city program in the state, Butcher believes. Everyone, he states, can help control mosquitoes by spraying their own shrubbery, the outside walls of their buildings and adjoining grass or weed areas. Use either DDT emulsions or DDT wettable powder diluted to about one per cent strength. The same DDT treatment will help control flies. Home owners can paint their screens with 5 per cent DDT oil solution. This kills flies and similar insects contacting the screens.

Wind Machines vs. Frost Frost protection for fruit or chards at perhaps one-tenth the cost of operating oil heaters seems practical in some regions through the use of wind machines, which, by creating turbulence and mixing of air, promote the natural flow of heat from the soil to the exposed foliage and fruit. Wind generators afford less frost protection than do heaters, however Rows of heaters in remote corners and along orchard borders where cool air drifts in add to effective protection. Wind machines are placed about 32 feet above the ground where the air is usually much warmer than at ground level, and are built so that the air jets revolve slowly like a lighthouse

Chicago Doctor Describes Facial Paralysis Repair

Several technics for the surgical repair of facial paralysis are described by Paul W. Greeley, M. D., Chicago, in the "Archives of Surgery", published by the American Medical association.

Facial paralysis may result from injury to the seventh, or facial nerve. This nerve may be damaged in several ways, including skull fracture, bullet wounds, injury from a mastoid operation, or tumors on the nerve.

According to Dr. Greeley, the best method of repair involves surgery of the injured nerve, with the intention of permitting the face to gain motion again. This may include the sewng together of the ends of the lacerated nerve trunk or the grafting of part of one nerve to another to fill in a gap if the injury has made one.

The uniting of one nerve to another, which has been used several times in the treatment of facial paralysis, is undesirable, the report says, because "the associated movements involved in trying to move the facial muscles are awkward and frequently more conspicuous than the original facial paralysis."

When nerve surgery cannot be undertaken, the article says that "the simplest and most satisfactory plastic surgical correction is obtained by supporting the paralyzed face with strips of autogenous fascia lata (a fibrous tissue surrounding the muscles of the

Too Few Circuits in Home May Cause Loss of Power

Most families economize on electricity by being careful to turn off lights, but many do not realize that overloading circuits, using appliances unsuited to wiring, or investing in second-rate cords also eause waste, says Louisiana State university extensionist.

Too few circuits and too small wires cause dim or flickering lights and slow down appliances. This means less light, heat or power for the money spent on electricity, and also greater depreciation of covinment.

The way to avoid such waste is to provide adequate circuits and large enough wires when electricity is installed in building or remodeling the home. The average six-room house generally needs one to two circuits for the basement, four to six for the first floor, and two to four for the second floor. Adequate circuits should be installed to take care of present and also future equipment. It costs far less to put these in when the house is built than to install them later.

Wherever possible long circuits should be avoided to prevent loss of electric energy. With No. 14 wire, the outlets should be not more than 25 feet from a fuse box or panel board; with No. 12 wire, not more than 35 feet. If circuits must be longer in a large house, fuse boxes or circuit breaker panels should be installed on each floor, supplied by feeder wires, preferably of No service entrance box.

Flickering Lights Farm electric wiring may meet underwriters' requirements and pass all code inspections yet still be inadequate. A sure sign of loss in a circuit, according to A. V. Krewatch, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland, is a flickering of lights when the milking machine starts, when the pump operates, or when the dairy refrigerator is on. The answer may be more circuits with separate lines to pump, compressor or milking machine, or installation of heavier wire in present circuits. Installing separate circuits and possibly the rearrangement of the yard wiring is the better choice. According to Krewatch, there is a real fire hazard in metallic-sheathed cable which has rusted and has become encrusted with whitewash. This is especially so if connections are loose. Binding post connections in switch or fuse boxes may get loose from building vibrations or may corrode because of too much moisture, causing high resistance

In Search of Strange Creatures Bermuda Expedition is a joint enterprise of Chicago Natural History museum and the Bermuda Biological Station for Research at St. George's West, Bermuda. How to Cut Down Losses Of Cattle During Summer

Livestock raisers are here given 10 tips on how to prevent losses and speed up gains of cattle during the pasture season this summer. The American Foundation for Animal Health has issued the following check-list of summer safeguards for cattle:

(1) Don't let animals gorge themselves on lush, young pastures. Guard against bloat and grass tetany by making a gradual change to green feed.

(2) Inspect the herd once week for evidence of pink-eye. (3) In blackleg areas, have all calves vaccinated against this dis-

(4) Protect the herd against flies by spraying with DDT at least four times during the sum-

(5) Examine pastures periodically for the presence of poisonous

(6) Check the herd regularly for accidental wounds through which screw worms may enter. (7) If suspected cases of lumpy jaw develop, get those animals off pasture and away from the rest of the herd and have them treated immediately.

(8) When calves are unthrifty, suspect the presence of parasites. The parasite danger is especially great on old pastures and community pastures.

(9) If cattle share pastures with stock from other farms, have them immunized against tetanus, blackleg and malignant edema.

(10) Bovine tuberculosis is still a problem, and cattle should be tested periodically for tuberculosis as well as brucellosis.

Electric Motor Industry Celebrates Its 40th Year

On an evening 40 years ago, 33 men, representing 25 companies, assembled to organize the American Association of Electric Motor

It was the first trade association in the electrical apparatus manufacturing industry and the earliest forerunner of National Electrical Manufacturers' Association,, which was formed in 1926.

Today the industry embraces 180 manu facturers across the land. Last year alone they produced more than 25 million motors, ranging from midgets to giants of 89,000 horsepower.

George C. Tenney, editor and publisher of "Electrical West," says the electric motor made possible the production line and modern industrial techniques.

"More than any other factor", he declares. "the seven or eight horsepower at the command of every American worker, largely in the form of electric motors, is responsible for this country's vast productive capacity and a standard of living which is the envy of the rest of the world."

During the war, he pointed, out, the industry produced millions of motors, in 40 thousand different models. A B-29, he explained, required at least 300 motors, 125 on an LST, and more than 900 on a battle wagon.

Economical Operation of Tractor Tractor engines should operate within definite temperature limits for best economy and performance, according to Guy W. Gienger, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland. To keep the cooling system working at its best he recommends: (1) Be sure the fan belt does not slip. There should be three-fourths inch deflection when you push against the belt, (2) Drain and flush the cooling system at least twice each year, (3) Keep the radiator clean to allow air to pass by all the cooling fins and tubes, and (4) Use clean soft water (rain water preferred) to prevent the accumulation of dirt and lime inside the engine. Rust inhibitors used with soft water will prevent the formation of rust inside the engine.

Insecticide Machines Need Care Spraying and dusting machinery used in combatting crop pests should be cleaned every day dur-ing periods of use. Insecticides may be injurious to rubber and metal parts of the equipment. Keeping the spray outfit in good mechanical condition is important also, as parts may be difficult to obtain. Engineers of the USDA say that a spraying rig can be cleaned after each day's work by running water through it continuously until the water comes out clear. Dusting equipment may be cleaned by emptying the hopper and distributing system and then gently rapping tubes and nozzles while the engine is running. The outside as well as the inside of such machines should be kept free of ac-

Floral Hybrids on Way Breeding of a many kinds of flowering plants to be grown from seed in the home garden can follow the lines that proved so successful in development of hybrid corn. A technique that is coming into use in flower breeding is the utilization of hybrid vigor. When two plants of different lines are cross with one another, the resulting hybrid is often more vigorous than either parent. The chance of obtaining greatly increased vigor usually increases the more the parent plants differ from each other. Thus, more vigor and larger flowers is likely to result from crossing a tall, red-flowered snapdragon with one that is short and bears white flowers, than from crossing two tall reds.

★ It is recorded May 9, 1945, in 188 S.W. Reporter 2d series, page 276, that James P. Hart, opponent of Judge Rawlins, was one of the attorneys for the labor unions in their unsuccessful and ill-advised attempt to enjoin the State Officials from enforcing the Texas law regulating labor unions, which was passed with the view of protecting public interest.

* The Appellate Court, in upholding the law forbidding the unions from collecting work permit fees from non-union employees, reorganized the policy expressed by the Legislature in the preamble to the Act: "The right to work is the right to live."

Vitamin B-12 Is Hailed As Great Anemia Weapon

New weapon of medical science, recently isolated in the research laboratory and known as vitamin B12, is showing great promise in the fight against anemia diseases.

So reports Dr. Tom Spies, professor of nutrition and metabolism and chairman of the department in After playing games, the guests the Northwestern University medical school, in the Southern Medical Journal.

Clinical research with this vitamin, conducted under Dr. Spies' direction, indicates that it is highly effective in extremely small amounts against penicious anemia, nutritional macrocytic anemia, and tropical sprue.

Although another investigator recently revealed the vitamin's effectiveness against pernicious anemia, it is believed that Dr. Spies is the first to disclose its blood regenerative properties in cases of nutritional macrocytic anemia and tropical sprue. He is much impressed with the potency of the new vitamin and states he knows of no therapeutic agent used in treating human diseases that is so effective per unit of weight as the new compound seems to be.

The research with vitamin B12 was carried on co-operatively by the department of nutrition and metabolism of Northwestern medical school, the nutrition clinic of the Hillman hospital, Birmingham, Ala., and the General Calixto Garcia hospital of Havana, Cuba. Associated with Dr. Spies in the research were Dr. Robert E. Stone and Dr. Tomas Aramburu at the Hillman hospital, and Drs. Guillermo G. Lopez, Fernando Milanes, and Ruben L. Toca of the Havana

Safety Rules to Remember Regarding Medicine Chest

As a sip from the wrong bottle can prove fatal, two main rules to remember regarding the family medicine chest are (1) keep poisons away and (2) discard leftover medicines as soon as use of them has been stopped.

Most adults are careful enough to keep medicine chests high enough to be out of reach of small children, but there remains the danger of adults grabbing the wrong bottles when they sleepily reach for something in the middle of the night. Always turn the light on when getting something out of the medicine chest, as all bottles feel alike.

One good method is to tightly tie on the tops of poison bottles with double-knotted cord. This makes opening the bottle difficult enough to cause even the sleepiest! person to glance at the label.

Boric acid, vaseline, a good ointment for burns and aromatic spirits of ammonia are considered good standbys to have on hand for emergencies. Adhesive tape and sterile gauze might also be placed in the medicine chest. But remember that after the wrapper is broken, the gauze is no longer sterile. Animals Linked to Strange Disease

Physicians, veterinarians, and public health workers are joining insidious malady called Q fever. It gets its name from Queensland, in Australia, where it was first reported as a disease of the human family. In the United States, the first outbreak was reported a little over two years ago, in Texas. Later, there was anepidemic among packinghouse workers in Chicago, and more recently it broke out in two areas of California, Q fever does not kill many of its victims. but it causes high fever and prolonged disability. Animals are thought to be the major source of this infection, but they never seem to exhibit active symptoms. The germs of Q fever have been found in apparently healthy cattle, as well as in sheep, goats, and many species of wild animals. Dr. James H. Steele, chief veterinarian of the U. S. public health service, says that in the future "we may find this disease in practically every animal on the western plains and in the East as well."

Daily Use for Silver Best care for table silver is daily use. Keep the silver used regularly free of tarnish from day to day instead of waiting until many pieces need attention. If the times of forks and the bowls of spoons begin to show tarnish, clean them when doing the dishes. Always use a clean soft cloth, preferably flannel, when applying silver polish. Rub silver lengthwise rather than crosswise, never with a circular motion. A small brush to get at parts the polishing cloth cannot reach is helpful for ornamented designs. Rinse silver in hot, scapy water, and polish dry. Don't be alarmed if tiny scratches appear the first time you polish your silver. In time, polishing will give the silver that soft luster which is typical of old and cherished silverware. Present Day Timber Thrift

"Prelogging" and "relogging" are words coming into use in Northwest forestry in connection with closer use of all the wood from forest areas. In "prelogging" of a stand of big timber, an attempt is made to remove the small trees and low-grade suppressed trees of the principal species in advance of the main cutting of the large-diameter trees. In the old style logging, many of these trees would be shattered by the fall of the heavy trunks in the main logging operation. Pre-logging salvages some small saw timber, but more of poles, posts and pulp

Burk Boosters Draw Interested Audience

It was a gay, colorful bunch of rodeo boostres from Burkburnett that livened up the streets Monday morning about 9:30. Two bands, the high school musicians of Burkburnett and a string group, provided plenty of cowboy music.

Highschool and junior high girls and boys were all dressed in western regalia of matching plain shirts and jeans, and really made the pavement sizzle with some fancy square-dancing. There was a caller and suitable music to accompany the hoofers.

More solos and band music added up to a good street show and good advertising for the Burkburnett rodoe which will run through Saturday of this week.

It won't work...by itself

It takes a lot more than a telephone instrument to give you telephone service.

Before a telephone will work it must be connected by a pair of wires from your home all the way to the switching equipment in the central office.

Telephone wire and cable are still scarce compared with the large amounts we need. But we are placing and splicing new cable as fast as we can get it.

In some places, there isn't room for more telephone connections on the switchboards. To get more room, we are adding new equipment - faster than ever before.

Despite shortages, we would be caught up by now if it was not for the extremely large number of new applications for service. They pour in at a rate of 50,000 a month in the Southwest, and that tremendous demand has kept us from eliminating the wait for telephone service in most places.

It is still an uphill pull, but we are gaining on it, and we are grateful for your patience and understanding.
