House Democrats Defy President—Lobbying for and Against Utilities Bill to Be Investigated— Senator Glass Bests Eccles.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union

REVOLT in congress against alleged dictatorial attempts of the administration reached a climax when the house, by the decisive vote of 258 to 148, rejected the "death sentence" in the utility holding companies bill as passed by the senate and demanded by the President. The record vote came on a motion to substitute the house bill placing utility holding companies under regulation of the securities and exchange commission for the senate bill which prescribed the dissolution of the holding companies of more than first degree beginning in 1940.

The adoption of this motion killed the "death sentence." After substituting the house bill for the senate bill, the perfected measure was passed by a vote of 322 to 81.

Immediately after this action, the house voted unanimously for an investigation of alleged lobbying by both the supporters and the foes of the utility measure. During the debate on the bill it was frequently charged that the capitol was swarming with utility company lobbyists, and then came two serious accusations against the other side.

Representative John H. Hoepfel of California, Democrat, asserted an unnamed administration lobbyist had offered to get California's relief allotment increased if Hoepfel would vote for the bill as the President wanted it. This didn't greatly impress the house, but later Representative Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, Republican, charged that Thomas G. Corcoran, a young brain trustee who is co-author of the administration bill, had threatened cessation of construction of the $37,000,000 Passamaquoddy dam project in the congressman's district if Brewster should vote against the "death sentence."

Mr. Brewster said he did not believe the President was aware that such tactics were being used by his aids or would countenance them, and Rankin of Mississippi and Moran of Maine defended Mr. Roosevelt. But the President's contact man, Charles West, and Postmaster General Farley's lobbyist, Emil Hurja, had been so active among the house members that the resentment of the lawmakers was aroused and they gladly directed that the lobbying charges be investigated.

WHAT would be the final fate of the utility measure was doubtful. Senator Wheeler of Montana, after a call at the White House, said he was confident a satisfactory bill would come out of the conference, and if one did not, the measure would be allowed to die. In either case the war on the holding companies is likely to be made a major issue of the next Presidential campaign, and administration leaders are predicting that the Democratic congressmen who dared to vote against the "death sentence" will be defeated at the polls. These "doomed" men number 103, as against 131 Democrats who stood by the President.

Republican leaders were jubilant, professing to see in the episode the beginning of a real uprising against the President and his New Dealers; many neutral observers looked upon it as only a battle between the two lobbies in which the victory went to the utilities lobby.

IN THE battle between Senator Carter Glass and Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board, the former has, at this writing, scored the most points. The astute Virginian extracted from the Eccles-Curry banking bill most of the radical provisions that would have led to government or public ownership of the federal reserve system, and, indeed, practically rewrote the measure. Then his subcommittee handed it on to the senate banking and currency committee, which promptly gave the bill its approval, without a record vote, and after making only two minor changes.

Governor Eccles and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau expected to be called before the committee and were prepared to tell why the bill would not suit the administration, but the committee didn't give them a chance.

As passed by the house, the banking bill would give autocratic powers over the banking system to a politically dominated federal reserve board; and the party in power would have the authority to force the twelve reserve banks to lend unlimited amounts to the national treasury. Under the bill as rewritten by Glass, reserve board members are to be appointed for 14-year terms and are to be discharged only for cause; chief officers of the reserve banks are to be chosen by their directors, subject to reserve board approval, for five-year periods, and the reserve banks need not buy additional government bonds unless they choose to do so.

INVESTIGATION of the administration of the Virgin Islands by a senate committee was certain to be lively. The very first witness heard, Charles H. Gibson, was threatened with jail by Secretary of the Interior Ickes for removing official documents from the files. Mr. Gibson, who was government attorney for the islands until Ickes ousted him, had testified rather vaguely against the regime of Gov. Paul M. Pearson.

Gibson testified that Governor Pearson had exceeded his authority under the law, was unpopular with a large section of the population of the islands, and was not frank in his administration. To support his testimony Gibson introduced several letters which were the documents to which Ickes alluded.

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON assumed his new office of federal works relief administrator for New York City, "Robbie," his ever present secretary, fended off the reporters for a day, but let them in then, and to them the general wailed:

"I hate this thing! It isn't helping anybody, anywhere. When the source of money is cut off we'll be right back where we started. It's disheartening to sit here, knowing that when the funds are gone, the jobs will be gone."

ATTORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS announced that on July 29 a school would be opened by his department in Washington for the purpose of training state, county and city police in law enforcement theory and practice. A twelve weeks' course will be given to selected officers, the instruction being free.

REPUBLICAN senators were advised that former President Herbert Hoover will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Presidential race of 1936.

They were advised that Mr. Hoover would make the formal announcement some time this summer, he is staying out, it was said, because he intends to remain in private life and has planned his future career along that line. For his active criticisms of administration policies the reason was given that, although he does not "choose to run," he thought the party needed some sort of direction; now that his candidacy is shelved, it is expected that his political utterances will be clothed in less authority.

The informers, however, assured the senators that Mr. Hoover would get behind the party's candidate and enter the campaign for him, and that he thinks, with unification growing, the Republican prospects are looking brighter day by day.

WORLD war veterans from both the Allied and the Central powers met officially in Paris and debated ways in which future wars may be averted. They denounced as enemies of their own countries those who would seek to foment a new war, and passed a resolution declaring: "The respect for treaties being the basis of international relations, this confidence can be durable only when international accords and the resulting obligations are mutually and sincerely respected."

The meeting was held under the auspices of Fidac. The American delegates included S. P. Bailey, Winona, Minn.; Julian W. Thomas, Salt Lake City; Bernhard Ragner, McKeesport, Pa.; and Harold L. Smith, Coatesville, Pa.

BURR T. ANSELL, a young attorney whose father, Gen. S. T. Ansell, is suing Senator Huey Long for libel, was enraged when Long intruded on his party at a Washington hotel and took a swing at the Kingfish. One of the senator's companions seized Ansell's arm and the young man says Long then ran away.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, whose New Deal program was not well received by the British government, has resumed active participation in politics, "reluctantly," but with expressed determination to "go on with it." The little Welsh veteran statesman addressed the national convention of the peace and reconstruction movement, and asserted the menace to peace and the economic confusion throughout the world are growing worse.

JAPAN'S beautiful inland sea was the scene of a terrible disaster that cost 104 lives. The steamer Midori Maru, crowded with holiday passengers, collided with a freighter in the foggy night and sank almost immediately. Rescue boats picked up 91 of the 166 passengers and 56 of the crew. All the victims were Japanese.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE proclaimed the establishment of an AAA adjustment program for the 1935 rye crop which will include benefit payments of amounts not yet disclosed. Representatives from 16 rye growing states met in Washington to discuss the program and outline plans for its operation.

Farmers from the principal wheat producing states met with AAA officials and gave their approval to a tentative flexible plan for the payment of benefits to wheat growers.

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, England's journeyman trouble shooter, electrified the British Isles by announcing that Great Britain had offered to give Haile Selassie, emperor of Abyssinia, a generous strip of British Somaliland to replace territory acquired by Italy. If the Italian government would promise not to wage war against the domain of Africa's "Conquering Lion of Judah."

Nothing doing, said Premier Mussolini, who has turned a deaf ear to all Britain's proposals of an Italo-Ethiopian compromise. He was reported as intending to go right ahead with his plan of a four-years' war to effect the complete pacification of the African empire. He insists that there must be more room in Africa for overpopulated Italy to expand.

Mussolini has threatened to "remember" the nations which have offered to furnish Abyssinia with arms, and they have withdrawn or modified their offers. The African emperor pleaded:

"If we are in the right and if civilized nations are unable to prevent this war, at least do not deny us the means of defending ourselves."

The British parliament was no better pleased with Eden's "offer" of land than was Italy, and the colonial secretary, son of former Prime Minister MacDonald, had a hard time explaining it.

Then Italy heard that the British government was considering a proposal to invite other nations to join in an economic blockade of Italy to check her aggression on Ethiopia. Rome was astonished by this report but didn't seem in the least alarmed. Neither were the Italians frightened when they learned officially that Ethiopia had asked the United States to study means of persuading Italy to respect the Kellogg pact outlawing war. The emperor himself made the appeal to W. Perry George, charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa.

ANDRE CITROEN, famous for years as "the Henry Ford of France" because he built most of that country's low cost motor cars, is dead. And probably he was happy to pass on, for his vast enterprises had collapsed and his once huge fortune was gone.

THE federal government began a new fiscal year with intentions of spending more money than in any previous year of peace. Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would spend $8,520,000,000, of which $4,582,000,000 will go for "recovery and relief." He expects the treasury to collect $3,938,000,000. No, it doesn't add up. The deficit for the new fiscal year will be $4,528,000,000, it is estimated.

The fiscal year just passed came to an end with the public debt at a new peace-time peak of $28,665,000,000, still some shy of the $31,000,000,000 the President estimated a year ago. To finance the new budget, he had counted in part upon the $500,000,000 extension of "nuisance" taxes just passed by congress, but not upon the tax-the-rich program which the New Dealers hope to jockey through some time in August. Estimates have it that this will net another $340,000,000.

The expenditure for the past year is only $7,258,000,000 instead of $8,571,000,000 forecast at the start of the year. The deficit was $3,472,347,000 instead of the proposed $4,969,000,000. If the expenditures outlined in the 1935 budget reach the estimated total, the public debt on July 1 next year would stand at $34,239,000,000.

During the next year the President expects to spend $4,880,000,000 for relief and for the employment of 3,500,000 idle workers. A general upswing in business would improve the revenue expected by the treasury. The President counted on $3,711,000,000 coming in during the 1935 fiscal year. Receipts proved to be $3,785,000,000.

THE week's peak in crime was reached when Detroit police found Howard Carter Dickinson, prominent New York attorney and nephew of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, lying dead in a ditch beside a lonely Rouge park road with a bullet through his head and another through his chest. Dickinson, a law associate of Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., had been in Detroit on business of the $400,000 estate of the late William H. Yawkey. Apparently, he had driven to Rouge park while on a drinking party after business hours. His companions on the ride, who were William Schweitzer, Detroit underworld character, and three burlesque-show girls, all of whom he had picked up at his hotel in the motor city, fled the scene and were traced to Fort Wayne, Ind., where they were arrested.

After several days of grilling by police, the four confessed they had plotted the murder to rob Dickinson. Schweitzer admitted firing the shots. Their loot was $134.

DETERMINED that what goes up must stay up, Fred and Al Key, endurance fliers, broke the world's time record for keeping a plane aloft, landing after 65 3/4 hours in the air at Meridian, Miss. They passed the unofficial endurance record of 647 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds set in 1930 by Iale Jackson and Forest O'Brien at St. Louis.

War Possible, Four Kinds 10,000 Million Questions Our Large Gold Pile Knows Too Much at Four

Russian newspapers, speaking officially, accuse Japan of stirring up trouble along the Russian border, to "bring on grave complications."

A protest carries Stalin's warning to Japan that a continuation of these incidents "may have serious consequences in the relations of Russia and Japan, and peace in the Far East."

If Russia and Japan should have a serious disagreement, Russia's equipment in the way of submarines and airplanes, all within 400 miles of Tokyo, would probably enable other countries to stop worrying about Japan's military plans.

England does not approve of Mussolini's plans in Abyssinia, and the question arises, Would England close the Suez canal, the short cut for Italian troops and supplies to Abyssinia? Will Italian airplanes be forbidden to fly over the Suez canal area?

The answer as to closing the Suez canal by Britain would probably be no. England would not voluntarily provoke hostilities with Italy. She really wants peace. But, how easily war could come—French against German or English against Italian or Japanese against Russian!

Germany undertakes to establish a "family tree" for each of its 66,000,000 inhabitants, which means asking, answering, writing down ten thousand million questions.

The sensible answer would be, "I descend from Adam, with heaven knows how many mixtures in my blood on the way up," but Hitler would not accept that. Young couples getting marriage licenses are questioned: "What were your eight great-grandparents like? Did they have any Negro or Jewish blood?"

"Were they fond of telling the truth? Did they have imagination, driving power?" Ten thousand million foolish questions would seem to set a new record.

The "greatest" country in the world, supposed to be the most intelligent, owns some tons of gold, called "worth" nine thousand million dollars. We do not use the gold, or even invest part of it in adequate national defense, that would protect it. We are afraid some one may come, with better airplanes and submarines than ours, and steal it; so the government will dig a deep hole, far from the coast, put in it a huge safe, and hide away the gold lump, that is used only to impress the financial imagination of the world and keep foreigners from knocking down our currency.

Dolores Anne Diamond, only four, surprised teachers in a Schenectady kindergarten. She said the games for little children bored her, and she could recite the alphabet backward. Dolores was moved to the first grade, and could have gone higher. She has the intelligence of a child of fourteen.

Usually it is better for a child to develop slowly and normally. The infant prodigy is usually dull later. Perhaps little Dolores will be an exception, like Mozart, and, at eighteen, as wise as Hypatia, with a happier ending.

Lloyd George, in spite of his seventy-two years, returns to active politics. He hates the "arid atmosphere of political controversy" and returns to active politics only because he believes that world conditions are growing worse, and "from the point of view of peace are worse than before 1914."

Miss Koutanova, Russian, twenty-one years old, jumped 25,426 feet from an airplane without oxygen apparatus and landed in a cabbage field after parachuting over four times before her parachute opened. She claims the female record.

Russia is teaching millions of young people to use parachutes, the first step in curing nervousness in flying. Here we have only a small handful of excellent pilots, but the masses of our population know as little about aviation as they do about "geometry in space."

Mr. Werner Kahn, district leader of "Hitler Youth," says Nazi doctrines have become Germany's real religion, and "the time must come when entry into the Hitler Youth organization will take the place now occupied by Catholic or Protestant confirmation." Furthermore, the young gentleman says, "I declare to all enemies of Hitler Youth that the fuhrer is our faith and national socialism is our religion."

Millions of us go through life getting little sunshine, rarely if ever looking at the stars, our interests not unlike that of the entomologically interesting tumblebug, that spends its life in the field, rolling little balls of manure into a burrow. He doesn't even realize that there is a sun, or stars, and many men are like him, although they may "own fine country places."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It is slightly more than three months since President Roosevelt signed the congressional resolution Slow on Works Relief appropriating five billion dollars for use by the administration in public works and public relief. To date, according to the records, less than half a billion dollars has been allocated for expenditure on agreed projects and of this sum approximately three hundred million dollars was turned over to the Civilian Conservation corps, a going institution.

The slow motion of the administration in getting its public works relief program underway is giving birth to an immense amount of criticism. If one is to believe the undercurrent of discussion in Washington, it is giving more concern to the officials responsible for spending this vast sum of money in the recovery-reform effort of the New Deal. So many projects have been advanced and rejected in turn, so many new ideas have been brought forward and ballyhooed and so many false motions have been indulged in that Washington observers are rapidly reaching the conclusion that congress was correct when in debate, it was said the administration had no concrete plan for utilization of this vast fund.

To review the developments since April 8, when the President signed the appropriating resolution, is to say that conditions have been one continual round of confusion. First, it will be recalled the President sought to meet the wishes of congress as expressed in debate by relieving Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, of much of the responsibility and authority he held. This was accomplished by the new setup that was reported to you heretofore. Now, it seems, the new setup has failed to function and the bulk of the management of expenditures has settled down into the lap of Harry Hopkins, the relief administrator.

Mr. Ickes still has some authority. It apparently is enough to irk Mr. Hopkins. These two men differ widely in their views. Mr. Hopkins long has been looked upon as a reliever by profession; Mr. Ickes has attempted, insofar as he has been able, to employ practical methods in administration of his share of the funds.

Laying aside the personal equation which is best exemplified by the Ickes-Hopkins differences it must be said frankly that next to nothing has been accomplished. President Roosevelt has stated and reiterated that the expenditure program is getting underway satisfactorily, but the discussion among observers seems to show an alarming lack of co-ordination and of indecision.

One of the newest projects advanced, and it has just passed the stage of an executive order setting up a new agency, is the so-called National Youth administration. This new alphabetical unit—the NYA—has received fifty million dollars to spend in helping boys and girls between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five. It is supposed to be a means of preventing idleness among the young people who are of the age during which, unless they are occupied, irresponsible tendencies develop.

In announcing the new program, the President departed from his previously announced intention of assisting only persons now on relief. Whether this departure means that he has tossed aside definitely the rule laid down last winter that the dole must go or whether this is to be an isolated exception to that rule, is not immediately determinable. It remains as a fact that the government's assistance under the NYA will be available to needy young men who are not on the dole as well as to those who are on relief.

Secretary Perkins, of the Labor department, said the plan had been worked out by her and her associates in the children's bureau. She figured that 2,500,000 would be eligible for assistance under the plan. Those to be helped will be selected by local volunteer committees, thus establishing in each community another agency subject to federal domination and federal guidance.

Succinctly, the scope of the NYA as outlined by Mr. Roosevelt includes: Finding employment in private industry for unemployed youths.

Training youths for industrial, technical and professional employment.

Providing for continued attendance of needy youths in high schools and colleges.

Providing work relief on projects to meet the needs of youth.

Miss Josephine Roche, an assistant secretary of the treasury, and Aubrey W. Williams, assistant to Administrator Hopkins, have been given sole responsibility for management of the latest alphabetical agency. The selection of Miss Roche was said by the President to have been in recognition of her long service in the social field and her thorough understanding of problems of the growing generations.

Notwithstanding the sincerity and the desires of the President to initiate a program that will be helpful, one hears much doubt expressed that success will be attained. In the minds of many students of governmental affairs there are thoughts flitting back and forth inquiring whether it is possible for a central group like the federal government to arrange satisfactory methods or occupations for a population so far flung as our own. It is further doubted that sufficient flexibility can be worked into any program to permit of any genuine good coming from the expenditure of even so vast a sum as fifty million dollars.

Beyond that, I have heard it asked how the administration expects to find employment for unemployed youths in industry when late figures show a larger list of unemployed adults than obtained at this time a year ago.

High schools and colleges, of course, are available to provide the educational requirements forming one idea in the general program. Those youths who desire to continue their education certainly are deserving of help and the NYA offers a means to that end. It is too early to forecast what the requirements will be or what sort of rules will be laid down respecting applicants for educational assistance. But even the administration's most vigorous critics have omitted throwing any barbs at this feature of the NYA.

Almost simultaneously with the President's announcement of the NYA he made known that Non-Federal Projects for construction on what he said was the first group of non-federal projects under the public works section of the five billion dollar fund. He gave his approval to 63 projects, the total cost of which was figured at approximately twenty-one million dollars.

Each of the loans made in this allocation of funds was based on a grant of 45 per cent of the cost of the particular project by the community where the work is to be done. The federal government loans the other 55 per cent. In this way the cost to the government in most instances is expected to be held within the limitation of $1.143 per man per year.

Some weeks ago the President figured out that the cost of no project in which the federal government put money should exceed an amount greater than $1.143 for every man employed. This was designed to spread employment. But the rule thus far has been inoperative because not a single man has been put to work under any of these projects.

In the meantime, numerous and sundry other proposals for expending parts of the federal money have either been thrown overboard or have been held in abeyance pending further consideration. This is true of a gigantic housing program worked out by Secretary Ickes. It was planned there to spend $250,000,000 and when it was announced a press statement was forthcoming from the Public Works administration that hundreds of men would be offered jobs within a month, so far had the plans advanced.

Also, since April 8, nothing whatsoever has been done toward elimination of dangerous railroad grade crossings. I was told at the Interstate Commerce commission and again at the bureau of public roads that their plans were all ready to proceed with reduction of these highway traffic hazards and eliminate potential death traps where highways cross railroads. Something has blocked the effort in this direction, however, and as far as present information goes actual work on grade crossing elimination will not be started for the next several months.

While the administration is seeking to develop new projects to aid unemployment and relieve Pet Scheme Runs Amuck pet schemes appears to be running amuck.

I refer to the effort to transplant 200 Middle Western farm families to the Matanuska valley of Alaska. This colonization project was carried on with federal relief money and those families which were uprooted were taken to Alaska to find the end of the rainbow. According to activity around the Federal Relief administration here it is made to appear that the end of the rainbow was, as usual, some distance further on. Certainly it was not in the Matanuska valley because a number of the families already have determined to quit and return to their home communities in the states.

Members of congress who are acquainted with Alaskan conditions tell me that the Matanuska valley is probably the most fertile spot in continental United States. They hold to the conviction that almost any kind of food can be grown in the soil of that valley. But these men are under no illusions. They know the hardships that confront those settlers who were being planted there by the federal government in the hope of colonizing that area. Few of them, the house members assure me, can live there very long unless Uncle Sam is willing to spend millions in providing at least some of the modern conveniences of this day and age and supplying in addition means of transportation and communication. The word that comes direct from Matanuska colony to the Relief administration shows, in my opinion, that the project was conceived and executed without any thought having been given to the practical problems to be met.

After Worlds Collide

Vanderbilt scowled. "Funny! Quarter of an hour ago I saw him a few streets from the square here. He was on his way to tell you something about the power. He turned a corner. I thought I heard the first faint part of a yell—choked off. I hustled around the same corner, but he was out of sight. It seemed odd—he'd have had to run pretty fast to make the next corner. So I jammed along looking for him. No sign of him. Thought he was reporting to you. But I went back. Nothing to see at the spot where he'd left me. I—"

Tony was calling. "Taylor—Williamson—Smith—Alexander—look for Von Beltz. Arm yourselves."

But two hours later Von Beltz had not been found.

Day broke with its long, deliberate dawn, while the strange, eerie glow of the night light that illumined the city faded. There was no sound in the streets but the scuffling feet of the sentinels whom Tony had posted.

Now the night watch was relieved, and searching parties set out again under strict order not to separate into squads of less than six, and to make communication, at regular intervals, with the Central Authority.

This was set up in the offices near the great hall in which Hendron lay dead—the hall of sciences of the Other People.

Maltby, the electrical engineer, together with four others, was exploring behind the walls of the building. Power was "on." Impulses, electrical in character, were perceptible; and Maltby was studying the problem of them.

"I believe," Maltby said, "that the Bronson Betans undoubtedly solved the problem of obtaining power from the inner heat of the planet, and probably learned to utilize the radium-bearing strata under 'he outer crust. They must have perfected some apparatus to make practical use of that power. It is possible, but highly improbable, that the apparatus came through the passage of cold and darkness in space in such state that when the air thawed out and the crust conditions approached normal, it set itself in operation automatically."

"What is far more probable is that the Midianites have discovered one installation of the apparatus. We know from Lady Cynthia that they are months ahead of us in experimenting with Bronson Betan machinery. I believe that they have put in order and set going the power-impulse machinery connected with the city which they have occupied."

"The impulses from that installation may be carried by cables under the ground; more probably, however, they are disseminated as some sort of radio-waves. Consequently, they reach this city, as they reached the city that Tony and James entered, and we benefit from them."

CHAPTER IX

Down the sunlit streets of the city the children of the Earth, Dan and Dorothy, walked hand in hand, staring at the wonders about them, crying out, pointing, and flattening their noses against the show panes.

Though they plainly remembered the thrills and terrors of the flight, they could not completely understand that the world was gone, that they had left it forever. This was to them merely another, more magic domain—an enthralling land of Oz, with especially splendid sights, with all the buildings strange in shape and resplendent in colors, with tiers of streets and breathtaking bridges. Behind the children Shirley Cotton and Lady Cynthia strolled and stared; and along with them went Elliot James, who could not—and who did not attempt—to conceal his continued astonishments.

"Where," demanded Dan, turning to his older companions, "where are all the people?"

"Where?" echoed Elliot to himself, below his breath, while Shirley answered the child: "They went away, Danny."

"Where did they go? . . . Are they coming back? . . . Why did they go away? . . . What for?"

The questions of the child were the perplexities also of the scientists, which no one yet could resolve.

"Don't run too far ahead of us," Shirley bade the children in a tone to avoid frightening them. For danger dangled over these splendid silent thoroughfares apparently untenanted, yet capable of snatching away and keeping Von Beltz. Was it conceivable that survivors of the builders—the Other People—haunted these unruined remains of their own creation? Or was it that the ruthless men from Earth—the "Midianites"—as Hendron had called them—had sent their spies ahead to hide in this metropolis before its occupation by Hendron's people?

Tony called a council of the Central Authority to consider, especially, this problem.

Ten men chosen more or less arbitrarily by Tony himself composed the Committee of the Central Authority—four from the survivors of the hundred who had come from Hendron's camp, six from Ransdell's greater group; and these, of course, included Ransdell himself.

Such was the Central Authority improvised by Tony and accepted by his followers to deal with the strange and immediate emergencies arising from the occupation of this great empty city by less than four hundred people, ignorant of it.

The searching parties, as they returned or sent back couriers with reports, appeared before this committee. Jack Taylor, haggard and hungry, made the first report. "I'm back only to suggest a better search organization," Taylor said excitedly. "I took a truck and toured the widest streets at the lower levels; and some of them at the upper levels. At every corner my driver and I stopped, and yelled for Von Beltz. We didn't see a sign of life or get any reply."

"Did you see any evidence of recent occupation?" Higgins, of the Authority, asked.

"Nothing,"

Kyto brought food to Taylor, and he talked as he ate. "I've been over miles of streets and covered only a little of the central section. The city's too d—d big. If three or four hundred people had moved into New York when it was emptied—and nobody else was there except maybe three or four people, or a dozen who wanted to keep in hiding—what chance would the three or four hundred have of finding the dozen?"

"Of course there may be no dozen, or even four or five hiding people to find," Tony responded. "We can't be sure that Von Beltz fails to return because he was captured. He might have fallen when exploring somewhere; or something might have toppled on him; or he might have got himself locked in a building."

Taylor shrugged. "In that case, he'd be harder to find than the dozen who, we think, are hiding from us."

"You feel surer, I see," Tony observed, "that some people, unknown to us, are here hiding from us."

"Yes, I do."

"But without any further proof of it?"

Jack Taylor nodded. "I tell you, there are people here. I can feel it." Duquesne came in. He had returned from a search in another section of the city.

"Rien!" he made his report explosively. "Nozing. Except—perhaps, I saw a face peering from a window—very high! It was gone—pouf! I entered the building. I climbed to the room where the window was. Again—rien! Only—as I stood there—I said: 'Duquesne, people have been in this room not long ago.' With the sixth sensation, I smell it." He was excited; but he could add nothing more positive to the account.

He also began to eat, and soon reported himself ready to go out for more investigation.

Ransdell quietly arose. "I'd like to go out again, too. You won't need us, Tony," he continued, speaking for the rest of the Committee of the Central Authority as well as for himself. "It's nice of you to pretend we're necessary; but we know we're not—though we'll be glad to try to be useful when you really want us. We'll all obey you as we would have obeyed Hendron."

"You're going to join the search?" Tony asked.

Ransdell shook his head. "There's enough of us searching now. I want to join Maltby and Williamson and their men, who are working on the Bronson Beta machines and techniques."

Tony found himself alone in the great council chamber. Now and then some one else arrived to report; but all reports, which had to do with the search for Von Beltz and for the unknown people who might have captured him, were negative. The couriers returned to their exploring squads; and the others scattered in their wondering examination of the marvels of the city.

There proved to be eight gates to this city, and four great central highways which met and crossed in the Place before the Hall of the Sciences, in which Hendron lay dead, and before also the splendid structure housing the council chamber.

Tony strode out into the sunlight of the wide square, and he halted and lifted his head in awe.

He was in command in this city! He had had nothing to do with creating it. A million years, perhaps, before he was born, this city had been built; and then the light which fell upon it was gone from some sun to which the sun of the world—the sun which now shone upon it—was a distant twinkling star. Quadrillions and quintillions of miles of space—distances indescribable in terms that the mind could comprehend—separated this city from Tony Drake, who would not be born for a million years. But it had traveled the tremendous reaches of space after it lost its sun—until it found the star—the sun—that lighted the earth! So Tony Drake today stood here in its central square—in command.

"Tony!"

He heard his name, and turned. Eve Hendron had come out to the square, and she approached him, quietly and calmly.

"We must—proceed now, Tony," she said.

"Proceed? Of course," he assured her gently. He had ceased to be a commander of a city built a million years before his birth. He became again Tony Drake, recently—not three earthly years ago—a young broker in Wall Street, and friend of Eve Hendron, whose father was a scientist. On earth Tony Drake had wanted her for his wife; here he wanted her also; and especially in her grief he longed to be her close comforter.

"Your mind doesn't help you much, does it, Tony?" she said.

"At a time like this, you mean, No." "I went once with Father and with a friend of his, Professor Rior, through the Pyramids, Tony—when we were back on earth."

"Of course," said Tony.

"It was before ever the Bronson Bodies were seen, Tony; when the earth seemed practically eternal. How out of fashion it had become to look to the end of the earth, Tony! Though once it was not. . . I was saying that Professor Rior was showing us through the Pyramids, and he read us some of the Pyramid texts. Did you know, Tony that in all the Pyramid texts the word Death never occurs except in the negative, or applied to a foe? How the old Egyptians tried to defeat death by denying! Of course, the Pyramids themselves were their most tremendous attempt to deny death."

"Yes," said Tony.

"Over and over again, I remember, Tony, they declared that he, whom they put away, lived. I remember the words:

"King Teti has not died the death; he has become a glorious one in the horizon! And, Ho! King Unis! Thou didst not depart dead; thou didst depart living! Thou diest not! And 'This King Pepi dies not; this King Pepi lives forever! This King Pepi has escaped his day of death!'"

"Tony, how pitiful those protests seemed to me to be! Yet now I myself am making them."

"Men fall; their name is not." The Egyptian psalmist of the Pyramid Texts sang, Tony:

"Men fall; Their name is not. Seize thou King Teti by his arm, Take thou King Teti to the sky, That he die not on earth. Among men."

Tony reminded her, very gently: "Your father did not die on earth."

"No; he escaped to the sky, bringing us all with him. . . There's the sun. How small the sun has become, Tony."

"We are farther from the sun, Eve, than men of earth have ever been."

"But we're going farther away, yet."

"Yes."

"Shall we swing back? Or shall we keep on out and out into the utter cold? If Bronson Beta drifts out into the cold without return, there is no escape."

"No," said Tony, and combated the chill within him.

"And could they know? Eve persisted. "They could calculate—and undoubtedly they did—that the path of this planet has become an ellipse, that it will turn back again toward the sun; but it never has turned back toward the sun, Tony. Not once! This planet appeared out of space, approached the sun and swung about it, and now is going away from the sun. That we know; and that is all we do know; the rest we can merely calculate."

"You mean," questioned Tony, "that your father said something privately, during those days he was dying, to make you believe he was deceiving us?"

"No," said Eve. "Yet I wonder, I cannot help wondering. But if we keep on away from the sun! Don't think, Tony, I'm—"

"What?" he demanded as she faltered and stopped.

"Unprepared," she said; and she recited: "Thy seats among the Gods abide; He leans upon thee with his shoulder."

"Thy odor is as their odor, thy sweat is as the sweat of the Eighteen Gods."

"What's that?" asked Tony.

"Something else I remembered from Earth, from the Pyramid Texts, Tony. 'Sail thou with the Imperishable Stars, sail thou with the Unwearied Stars!'"

She returned to the great Hall of Science of the men a million years dead, the hall wherein lay her father.

Tony had taken completely on faith the assurance which Hendron and Duquesne had given him, together with the rest of the people, that the path of this planet had ceased to follow the pattern of a parabola, but had become close to an ellipse and that

SYNOPSIS

Under the leadership of Cole Hendron, American scientist, over 20 persons escape in two Space Ships just before a cosmic collision wipes out the earth, and land on Bronson Beta. Vegetation is found, and great forests of dead trees, preserved by the absolute cold of space. An airplane flies over the camp, making no attempt to communicate with its people, who realize that they are not alone on the new planet, and that their visitors may be enemies. Exploring, Tony Drake and Elliot James come upon a city, enclosed under what seems like half an iridescent glass bubble. Among their finds, in the city, is an edible grain—millions of bushels. On their flight back they stumble on the camp of more than 200 persons who left the earth when they did, in a second Space Ship piloted by Dave Ransdell. Tony learns that Russian, Japanese and German scientist Communists have reached Bronson Beta, and probably sent the mysterious plane to spy on Hendron's camp. The Asiatics gas the Hendron camp, but when they return in an armada of the Bronson Betans' planes Tony and his men annihilate them with atomic blasts from the Space Ship's propulsion tubes. Hendron's health failing, he orders Tony to remove everybody to one of the Sealed Cities. This Tony succeeds in doing, Von Beltz, a leader, disappears.

therefore Bronson Beta, bearing these few emigrants from Earth, would circle the sun. Tony still believed that; he had to believe it; but the death of Eve's father seemed to have shaken her from such a necessity.

"Hello! How's every little thing?" said a cheerful voice at his side.

Tony faced about, and confronted the red-haired girl whom he had met in Ransdell's camp, and who had not been selected for the voyage from Earth; her name had not been on the lists in Michigan.

Tony remembered her name, however—Marian Jackson. She had been an acrobatic dancer in St. Louis.

She carried on her shoulder the animal stowaway of the second Ark, the little monkey, Clara.

"Can you beat this place? Can you tie it?" Marian challenged Tony cheerfully. "Gay but not gaudy, I'd call it. D'you agree?"

"I agree," acquiesced Tony, grateful for the let-down. The girl might be mentally a moron; but morons, he was discovering, had their points. This girl simply could not take anything seriously.

"But the taxi service here is terrible," objected Marian.

"We hope to improve it," offered Tony.

The girl walked away. "Don't go into any of the buildings alone!" Tony reminded. "And even on the streets, keep close to other people!"

Marian halted, looking up. "Hello! Hello!" she cried out softly. "Look at the taxis!" And she pointed to one of the wide spiral ramps to the right.

Down the ramp Tony saw descending two Bronson Beta vehicles of the type discovered wrecked beside the first-found roadway, and duplicates of which were stored by the hundred in the first Sealed City he had visited on his exploring flight. Here there were hundreds or thousands more of the machines.

The two that appeared were followed by two more, and these by two larger and heavier vehicles not of the passenger type, but of truck design.

"Look!" cried Marian! "They got 'em going. Hey! Hey!" she hailed them.

Tony thrilled, too, but tempered his triumph by realization that, since the cars came in sight they had been descending, so that they might not be under power at all, but having been pushed to the incline of the ramp, were coasting.

But when the drivers gained the ground in rapid procession, instantly they steered up the ascending spiral on the other side, and putting on power, climbed even faster than they had dropped.

That ended any doubt of their means of propulsion. Tony felt his sculp tingling. One more secret of the mechanics of these people a million years dead was in possession of his own people!

Now the vehicles, having vanished briefly, swept into sight again, still climbing; then they whirled down, sped into the square and thence braked somewhat raggedly, halted in line before Tony.

Elliot James stepped from the first with a flourish. "Your car, sir!" He doffed his battered felt hat.

From the second car stepped the English girl, Lady Cynthia Cruikshank. Williamson followed the third; Jack Taylor and Peter Vanderbilt were the other drivers.

Williamson, the electrical engineer, made his report to Tony as a hundred others gathered around.

"We have discovered the technique of charging the batteries, which are beyond anything we had on earth," he said with envious admiration, "both in simplicity and in economy of power application. There is a station underground which they used. We are using it. All the batteries we have discovered were discharged or had discharged themselves, naturally, in the tremendous time that the planet was drifting through space; but two out of three batteries proved capable of receiving a charge when placed in sockets of the charging station."

"You mean you found the charging station with its power on?" Tony asked.

Williamson looked at Maltby as if to enlist his support when replying. "We found the power on."

"What sort of power?"

"Something between the electrical impulses with which we were familiar on earth, and radio-activity. We believe the Bronson Beta scientists, before they died—or disappeared—learned to blend the two."

"Blend?" asked Tony.

Maltby took up the task of explanation. "You remember that on earth we didn't even know what electricity was; but we knew how to use it for some of our purposes. Still less did we understand the exact nature of radio-activity; but we used that, too. Here we have come upon impulses which exhibit some of the phenomena of electricity, and others of radio-activity. We do not understand it; but we do find ourselves able to use it."

"But the power station below ground, in order and in operation!" objected Tony.

"I think," said Maltby, "it should not have been described as a power station, but rather as a mere distributing station. The power, I believe, does not originate in the station which we discovered, and in which we charged the batteries of these machines. Our station is, I think, merely a terminus for the generating station."

"The generating station—where?"

NAOMI

LESSON TEXT—Ruth 1:14-22; 4:14-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.—Proverbs 31:30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Happy Family. JUNIOR TOPIC—Making a Happy Home.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living Our Religion. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Religion Attractive.

In teaching this lesson it will be necessary to cover the entire book of Ruth.

I. Naomi's Sojourn in Moab (Ruth 1:1-2).

On account of famine in the land of Judah, Naomi and her husband and two sons emigrated to the land of Moab. It is strangely inconsistent for a man whose name means "my God is King," who has a wife whose name is "the pleasant one," and who lives in a town which means "house of bread," to sojourn in the enemy's country on account of famine at home.

II. Naomi's Bereavement (Ruth 1:3-5).

After the death of her husband, her two sons married Moabish women. In a short time, her sons also died. This is a dreary picture—three widows in the same home in a short time.

III. Her Return to Bethlehem (Ruth 1:6-22).

Having heard that the Lord had visited his people in Judah in giving them bread, Naomi decided to return to her home land. After she had experienced chastisement she returned.

I. Ruth accompanies her. When the time came for Naomi to go from Moab, Ruth and Orpah accompanied her for a distance. She frankly placed before them the difficulties which would confront them, and repeatedly urged them to turn back.

a. No chance to marry again. She reminded Ruth and Orpah that she had no more sons for whom they could wait.

b. Their heathen gods must be renounced (v. 15). She made it quite clear to them that idolatry could not be practiced in the land where God's people dwell.

c. Though Orpah went back, Ruth stood the test. Her mind was fully made up. She was willing to accept as her God the One who was able to produce in his subjects the nobility of character she observed in Naomi.

2. Naomi's reception. Her arrival made a stir in Bethlehem. The people recognized her and perceived a marked change wrought in her. Ten years of such trials would make a noticeable change even outwardly, but the change was mainly inward. She asked that her name be changed to Mara.

IV. Naomi's Gracious and Tactful Behavior (Ruth 2, 3).

1. She remembered her wealthy kinsman (ch. 2). In the case of a forfeited possession, it was incumbent upon the nearest kinsman to redeem it. Boaz was a kinsman. It was necessary for both Naomi and Ruth to have food. Barley harvest afforded that opportunity. The divine provision was made for the poor when the harvest was gathered (Lev. 19:9, 10; 23:22; Deut. 21:19). The matter was talked over between Naomi and Ruth, and arrangement was made for Ruth to glean in the field of Boaz.

2. Naomi seeking rest for Ruth (ch. 3). This rest was to be in the house of a husband. Other things being equal, such is the only real place of rest for a woman. Naomi instructed Ruth as to her toilet preparations so as to be attractive and then also as to presenting her claim upon Boaz to perform the duty of a kinsman in redeeming the forfeited estate because of the sojourn in Moab. The redemption of the estate involved not only the ability to pay the price of the forfeited possession, but also the marrying of the woman.

V. Naomi's Reward (4:14-17).

1. Blessed by the women of Bethlehem (vv. 14, 15). The birth of a son to Ruth was the occasion of this blessing. It meant the perpetuation of the line of kinship, and looked forward to the true Redeemer, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

2. She became the nurse for her grandson (v. 16). This not only provided her with a home and living, but with the opportunity of helping on the purpose of God in the coming redemption.

3. The baby given a name (v. 17). "Obed" means "servant of God." Ruth thus became a link in the ancestral chain of our Kinsman and Redeemer, Jesus Christ. The introduction of a Gentle into this line indicated the outreach of the redemptive purpose of God, which extends to the peoples of the whole world.

Progress

A marked characteristic of the progressive man is that he is always improving something somewhere. He has a horror of possible deterioration, and he knows the demoralizing, disintegrating power of familiarity with inferiority.—O. S. M.

Children

A child is trained much more by example than precept. Parents should therefore be most careful to act up to what they profess; and to let their actions be a reflex of their words.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

4-H Club Boys

College Station, Texas
July 8, 1935.
Mr. Ross B. Jenkins
County Agent
Baird, Texas.
Dear Mr. Jenkins:
I am sure by this time you have made arrangements to bring a large number of your 4-H Club Boys to the Short Course. I would like to call your attention to the following points:

1. Have your boys bring their own sheets, pillows, towels and soap. The College will be unable to furnish these articles this year.

2. Those in camp, as well as those in dormitories, will be charged 25c to cover night entertainment, newspapers, and other incidentals. I suggest that you collect the 25c from all who are to stay in camp before leaving your county.

3. We will have access to the pool again, so have each boy bring a rubber cap for swimming, as no one will be allowed in the pool without a cap. Suits will not be required.

4. Major Dunn is giving his time to develop a 4-H Club band during the Short Course. We want every 4-H boy or girl who plays a band instrument to bring the instrument along and play in this state-wide band. No instruments will be available at the College this year, so we are anxious

LOOKING INTO 1936 FARM PROGRAMS

The future of the American farmer especially that of those in the United States, has probably never been so hopeful and secure as it is today. The eyes of the Nation have been focused upon the benefits of national legislation that have helped to lift him from the bottom of the pit of hopelessness and despair and lift him to a place in the business world that has witnessed a gain of more than a billion dollars income over the previous year and which started the wheels of industry rolling. With this new wealth at his disposal, he has bought new cars, new farm machinery, new refrigeration, and other commodities that could not be enumerated that has helped re-employ thousands of men so that now business leaders everywhere proclaim the depression has been whipped and we are on the upward to prosperity. This has been done in spite of one of the most severe droughts in the history of the nation.

To show how the farmers are reacting to this kind of protection they voted in round numbers 7 to 1 to sign a 4-year wheat production control contract with the government in exchange for benefits and parity payments and the confidence of higher prices for their raw products. Soon the wheat farmers of the nation will begin signing these new contracts that will last until 1939. Secretary Wallace announced this week that the parity price for 1935 payments will be 33 cents a bushel or a gain of 4 cents over that of 1933 and 1934. That means approximately an increase of $1500 more for the wheat cooperators for this coming payment in Callahan. The new wheat plan is a little more flexible than the present plan which will end this year.

The new peanut program is to be drawn on a 4-years plan and has some very good improvements embraced in its body. Each producer will be responsible for the land during his tenure and the following producer will remain the same as this year. The landlords will have a protecting clause relative to their share in the benefit payments. Probably the time for group farms will be the average for the two years 1933 and

WITH BAIRD BAPTIST

Sunday was a good day with us. At the morning service the church accepted the "Laymen's Challenge" and agreed to set August, September and October as their months in which we will tithe. Now as the church has decided to do this, we will make an ever member canvass and get each individual to sign a tithe pledge card and we are hoping that every one will willingly join in this movement. It is God's financial plan as set in His word, it will save the day for us in the need for money and it will give the day for the ones who do it for it is God's will and we can be assured that it always pays to obey God.

We had one addition Sunday night, a fine woman who has just become a resident of Baird and she did her duty, just came right on into the church, I wish everyone moving into Baird would do that way.

Mrs. Pearl Lylee took her car and carried her daughter Delores Mildred Thompson, Cora Mae and Jo Mayes and myself to Eula to the Association B. A. U. We had a good time a good program was rendered and the next meeting will be held with the Potosi church next First Sunday afternoon.

On Tuesday night Brethren M. J. Holmes, L. J. Brian, T. J. Inman, Bon Thompson and myself went with Bro Holmes in his car to Cottonwood to the Brotherhood meeting. Bro. Joe Arvin was having gone down to visit his father and came on over to the meeting. Bro. J. D. Brannon, our District Missionary was there and spoke. It was a profitable meeting. The Brotherhood meets next time, Oct 15 at Clyde.

We are going to have on Old Time Singing School. I will do the teaching and we will begin at 9:30 each morning, beginning next Monday, will hold for an hour or two each morning. The place is the Baptist church and there is no charges, it is free to every body and I will appreciate having the children or any one else from the other churches, or no church to come. I can teach folks to sing and I am only too glad to render this service to the community. So let everybody who can come and join the class Monday morning, July 15 at 9:30 at the Baird Baptist church.

I will preach at Midway Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. Let every one out that way be present. We had thought a bit about holding a meeting out there next week, but I think we will likely postpone it a month, and have it the Second Sunday in August.

DRY RALLY AT ABILENE
There will be held on the T and P Lawn at Abilene Monday, July 15 at 8:00 p. m. a meeting of the Dry Forces. Dr. A. Frank Smith, who is a Methodist Bishop and Dr. L. D. Young of Dallas, are the speakers. Every one interest is invited to attend. Let a lot of us Callahanites go.

CARD OF THANKS

God took our loved one away, but during our time of grief and distress He sent comforters who gave food and administered unto us. We bow our heads in words of prayer for Dr. Griggs, Mrs. Barton, Mrs. Green and Miss Barton for their untiring efforts and faithfulness in trying to control and heal the disease that had its deadly grip on the one who was so cheerful during her long illness, looking forward to the day when she would be well.

We want to thank the blood donors and those that came for blood tests, also Dr. Ramsey and Dr. Storey for their services and interest. We wish to express our appreciation and thanks to the neighbors and friends for their loving kindness, who stood near and spoke words of comfort to our broken hearts, and brought symbols of love, the beautiful flowers, the most precious way to express love, May God bless them. We wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Wylie Jr., for their thoughtfulness and untiring efforts to the ones that made the trip to Oklahoma City. We want to thank the Doctors of Divinity who told us of the home where our loved one is now living, and the comforts she is enjoying, making us look forward to the day when we will join her.

Mrs. Alice B. Crow of Memphis, Tenn. arrived on the evening plane Tuesday for a visit with her brother Dr. J. B. Bailey and other relatives.

W. E. Melton, Secretary-Treasurer of the Coleman Production Credit Association of Coleman, Texas, was in Clyde July 8th meeting old friends and transacting business. Gene is a real business man and is representing an Association that is lending money to farmers and stockmen at a low interest rate, which is attractive to anyone in these times. His business is growing rapidly and the writer predicts that in time Associations like this will reduce the interest rate to farmers and stockmen until 5 per cent money will seem high. This kind of business will help bring recovery to the people who have been needing it more than anyone.

The rust hurt the grain a lot more than it was expected around Clyde, evidenced by the low turnout they are getting when the thrashers gets through. It seems that something worse than the rust hit the market, as it takes about three bushels of oats, when the farmer sells it to bring as much as he paid for one when he had to buy it. The wheat crop is not as good as was expected and the price on it is also low. It seems that anything this country has to sell depresses the market, but when they have to buy, the market comes immediately bullish.

The Cannery is working in full capacity, working about 15 people per day, putting out around 1,000 cans per day. They operate on a per cent basis with the grower. Where the grower brings in vegetables unprepared the cannery takes the raw product, prepares it and places it in the proper cans, processes it in the proper manner furnishing everything necessary and takes 60 per cent of the finished product. Where the grower prepares the vegetable ready to be canned the cannery furnishes the cans and does the processing for 40 per cent. Where fruits are canned the cannery furnishes everything and takes 50 per cent. It is estimated that the cannery can only take care of about 1-3 of the business offered it. If it only had the equipment and the labor it could do about three-times as much work, and this certainly would be a saving to this county and at the same time furnished labor for many more people who have no way of showing the return on their labor. A number 2 can of corn can be prepared in this manner from the raw corn at about 1-2 of what it would cost the grower to buy it out of the store; not only in corn but in all other vegetables. This is another case where the grower becomes the buyer instead of a seller—there is quite a change in the price.

E. H. Williams of near Putnam was in Clyde with a trailer full of corn, patronizing the cannery on July 9, if everybody had as good corn as Everett it would make Callahan Co.

One patron of the Clyde Cannery brought in about 1500 ears of corn of an excellent quality, which turned out about 500 cans of finished product.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Lidia of Stephen ville accompanied by their little grandchildren Elouise and Zona Beth Pemberton and Elizabeth Kay Lidia, visited Mrs. Otho Lidia and little daughter, Betty Gay this week.

Tugwell Handed Big Rural Job

To Administer Part of Works Program; Taxation Plan Hits Immense Fortunes

By EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON. — Rexford G. Tugwell, easy-going under-secretary of agriculture, and number one brain trustee, has been put in charge of a wide section of the work-relief program known as "Rural Resettlement." He is the President's right-hand man on changing the rural relief payments to employment; and is instructed to carry on with one thing in mind; namely, to get employables off the dole and on the job.

One day last winter one of the high lights of the power trust lobby here took me aside and whispered confidentially:

"Roosevelt is going to get rid of the entire brain trust. Tugwell first."

Placing him in charge of this big rural resettlement work doesn't bear out the whisper, which was a part of the drive to discredit not only Tugwell but the entire group of intelligent and unselfish trained men who are here to help plan recovery and reform—and who are doing so.

We should have more unselfish, non-partisan intelligent men in government; but there is a constant warfare on such men by the politicians, who look on them as intruders. Knowing how to reach the public, the politicians have spread ridicule against the non-political scientists in high government position. One of the most effective tricks against the brain trust is the school boy cartoon, making fun of the professor.

Instead of discarding his strong men of intelligence and training, Roosevelt is going to depend on them more than ever, now that the program is getting under way for the second phase of the New Deal. Administration of reform functions, like the federal power commission, the investigation into the Bell system, the control of the stock exchanges, with its daily hunt for crooked securities; and all similar activities require brainy men who have no political partisanship and to whom mental integrity is everything. This country should be proud to have men of that sort in office; and I think most people feel that way.

The extensive program of rural resettlement, which will put men and women employables to work in the rural areas, is based on work these people can do. Most of them live on the land; have been brought up in farming areas, and should work at the sort of jobs naturally arising in their own lives and experience. Tugwell will soon announce the broad outlines of his program; they will be based largely on actual farm work, on the patching up of areas eroded by wind storms, eaten away by floods, spoiled by forest fires. There will be road work, flood control work, and work connected with rural electrification.

Franklin's claim that the country is in danger from these centralized pools of wealth in personal hands means he sees that the old American spirit is being diluted by too much luxury. What we need is less pie and more pioneering.

So also with corporations. The President's suggestion that large corporations pay a higher tax rate than small ones is a move toward breaking business into smaller units; Roosevelt frankly realizes that size is a danger after it reaches a certain point. That is one of Justice Brandeis' ideas, too. This is not personal flair or jealousy, or anything of that sort. Rather it is an intelligent understanding of the truth that nature wants to express itself through the individual as far as possible; it is a return from so-called "rugged individualism" to individual ruggedness; to the place where the storekeeper will not be run out by the "chains" or the oversized merchant prince.

It seems to me to indicate a return to workmanship as contrasted to mass production, which might be something to develop, after all. I don't think we could ever return to the old village cobbler rather than the shoe factory; but we will, I believe, have less of the slave driving mass organization and more personal and individualized effort when the Roosevelt ideals prevail.

SYSTEM NOT CHANGE
The administration plans for a job for every employable and a cushion against hard luck and old age begins to have practical aspects.

The work-relief program is starting; the social security bill is now through both houses. We are on the threshold of the era when we will be operating a nation wide, all time plan to take care of hard luck by system and not by chance.

The social security popular name is "old age pension;" but there's more to it than that. There are five broad activities; namely, federal aid to dependent children; to public health programs; to the indigent blind; built up pensions to aged dependents; and a system of compensation to provide a fund against periods of unemployment.

Nearly every other country attends to these matters on a national scale; we have been leaving them all to the states, with the result that some states do and some states do not come in on the program. The new program puts a federal backing to all of it; provides federal standards, and contributes federal money to be matched by the states which will come up to rather easy federal standards.

There is nothing startling about the federal government's aid in public health, child welfare and similar beneficial activities. Nor should there be any disposition to look on social insurance against old age and unemployment as a cure-all for poverty; it will not usher in a new world nor will it destroy the old. It is by no means a dreamy eyed perfectionist program.

Details of the plan are intricate and endless; but in a word social insurance against old age, poverty and unemployment is more a systematic savings fund. Workers contribute a mite out of each pay envelope; employers contribute a mite week after week; the states supervise, the federal government takes the funds and puts them in the United States treasury. The federal government contributes up to $15 a month for old age pensions to states that will contribute as much for their dependent aged. Eventually the plans pay for itself.

These benefits will not be felt in the agricultural districts as soon as in the industrial centers; and the best reason I can find for this is that farm leaders here have not yet been able to agree among themselves on methods for collecting the weekly or monthly small amounts from the workers; nor for a way to levy the tax on the employing farmers.

I talked about this to Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor and a social insurance expert. This is what she told me:

"The treasury officials can't find a way to handle the enormous number of small amounts necessary in a social insurance plan for farm workers; but after we have had a little more experience with this thing, I think the treasury will know how to proceed."

Aubrey Williams, second in command at the Federal Emergency Relief administration, and one of the world's experts on social insurance matters, also discussed this matter with me. Mr. Williams points out that pending a method for collecting and accounting for farm workers' insurance payments, the government is making agriculture more and more secure through the AAA, through the various credit aids to agriculture, farm loans, etc. That is true enough, but here is a hint: those who want old age pensions and job insurance may help it along by agitating the subject.

States which go in for a high-grade policy of old age pensions will get $15 apiece per month for indigent aged, and the states must pay at least $15; they may pay more, but $15 is the minimum, which means at least $30 monthly for the old people who can't support themselves.

Eventually, wherever old age pension plans of a high order have been put into effect, the old time county poor house has closed its doors.

Passage of the social security bill sounded the death knell for this session at least of the Townsend plan to pay $200 a month to all over sixty years; and to Huey Long's share the wealth plans. Those nightmares, which terrified the lawmakers six months ago, were trotted out, inspected and not merely voted down—but laughed down. Looks like our lawmakers were getting some sense.

"QUOTES"

COMMENTS ON CURRENT TOPICS BY NATIONAL CHARACTERS

BRITISH NOT "ANTI"
By ANTHONY EDEN
Lord Privy Seal.

THE British are not "anti" any nation in Europe. They are not hostile to any people, nor do they regard any as antipathetic to them. The British people have never been good haters. Their inclinations have always been to forgive and forget at once. Sometimes, indeed, this readiness has even seemed a little incomprehensible to those who have been our comrades in arms, but it is an essential element of the British character.

As in the past, so today. We are not "anti" any nation, but we should be and must be "anti" any who might seek by force to break the peace. We shall always be found arrayed on the side of the collective system against any government or people who seek by a return to power politics to break up the peace which by that system we are seeking to create. And let us not forget that the covenant itself provides the machinery whereby a peaceful settlement of international disputes can be secured.

ADJUSTING TARIFFS
By CORDELL HULL
Secretary of State.

I WISH to call your attention particularly to the decline in this current year of our exports to many of our best consuming markets in Europe. Thus, our exports to Europe in January and February of this year declined 16 per cent in relation to that of January and February of a year ago. If we place embargoes upon our imports we shall, in the last analysis, witness inevitably the destruction of our export trade.

Seized with an unreasoning fear whenever a small dribble of imports of a competitive nature comes over our tariff wall, even when under purely temporary or accidental conditions, such as, for example, the drought, action is urged which, if followed too frequently, may lead to retaliation by other countries, so that step by step such action may lead straight toward a complete embargo of imports all around, and since one country's imports are another country's exports, a like embargo of exports all around.

RURAL RELIEF
By REXFORD TUGWELL
Under-Secretary of Agriculture.

TO SAVE the land and the people who depend on it is an inspiration in which all of us, it seems to me, can join. It particularly transcends party, creed and class.

I should like to see the administration of the present program carried out in such ways that this common consent can be won and kept so that our names will be blessed rather than blither in our children's mouths. And I am willing to take this kind of pledge. But I am not willing to say that if vested interests or partisan politicians begin a fight which involves this movement we shall not fight back.

We believe in this thing and we are determined to see it through.

BALANCING THE BUDGET
By ROBERT LA FOLLETTE
U. S. Senator From Wisconsin.

IF WE had had the courage to tax as heavily in this country as they have done in Great Britain, we would have had a balanced budget both in 1933 and 1934.

Those who are most anxious to balance our budget are most often those who protest vociferously against any attempt to increase taxes upon wealth and income, in accordance with ability to pay. The conservatives, therefore, who are arguing that this government should follow the example of Great Britain and attempt to balance its budget are in a completely inconsistent position until they are ready to accept the tax burden necessary to accomplish that end.

CURRENCY WAR
By SIR PERCY BATES
Chairman Cunard Line.

THERE is war today, universal war. The weapons are not navies, armies or airplanes, but tariffs, quotas and shifting currencies. There is no authorized standard of national money exchange, and each change in a tariff, quota or currency is nothing other than a hostile move in this war.

Worst of all, the situation is not officially recognized as a war, otherwise we might have had a peace conference with far better possibilities for the good of mankind than the disarmament talks in Geneva.

AAA PROGRAM
By HENRY A. WALLACE
Secretary of Agriculture.

THOSE who charge the AAA with inducing scarcity simply do not know the facts. The American farmer always has produced enough food for every man, woman and child in the United States, and I am sure he will continue to, given a chance to stay on his farm and in business. The adjustment programs have cut down production for an export market which no longer exists; they have not deprived the people of one ounce of necessary food.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Editha L. Watson

THE WHITE CEMENT

AN OLD man, exhausted and ill, started a stampede that was once the talk of the Southwest.

It was in July of 1868 that the prospector, who was named White, staggered into Horse Head gulch camp, near Amarillo, Texas. He had some peculiar-looking stuff with him that resembled nothing so much as white clay or cement, and this strange "ore" was specked with flecks of gold. In fact, assay showed that the stuff would run a thousand ounces of gold to the ton.

White's gold find could not be kept secret. The news flashed from man to man, and everyone who heard it was eager to know where the location was, so that he could get some of this wealth for himself. White tried to keep quiet; he had no desire to tell, when he knew that every man who heard it would dash out and stake claims. But his wish for secrecy was not respected. When he refused to answer questions, the men of the camp gathered about him and threatened to kill him if he would not show them where he found his gold.

After such threats, White could do nothing but promise to lead them to the place right away. As many as could possibly get away followed him, and the strange, fierce cavalcade set out for northern New Mexico.

The journey was not a pleasant one. Many of White's party were suspicious of him, and when time went on and no gold appeared they threatened again to kill him if they found that he had been misleading them.

At last, one night the party reached a blind canyon and made camp. One more day, White announced, would see them at his find, which was thirty-five miles to the northwest. Tired out, their suspicions lulled by White's words, the men slept soundly—all but White himself. He said that he was nervous, since he was so close to the mine. He could not sleep for thinking of it. And since he was awake, he would stand guard while the others slept.

This was agreeable to the rest. They were soon fast asleep, resting for the long ride ahead of them.

Morning came, and with its first light the men awoke, eager to press on. But what was this? White was nowhere to be seen, and his horse also had disappeared! He had slipped away in the night, leaving them as ignorant of the location of the gold as they had been at first.

Three years after this clever ruse, White was seen in Salt Lake City, where he spent money liberally. He loaned a man in Provo $50,000 in gold dust, so apparently his "cement" mine was still producing. Then he disappeared. He never returned to claim his money. No one heard of him or saw him again.

THE ADAMS' DIGGIN'S

THE Gila river, which seems so much a part of Arizona, has its headwaters in New Mexico. There are three forks which meet before the state line is reached, and the country thereabouts is known only to forest rangers and cowboys, who ride the reaches of the Heart Bars, the Slashes, the Gos, and other lonely ranches.

It was in 1860 that a party of fifteen men set out from California to prospect in the mountains to the east. A prisoner of the Yuma Indians managed to catch their attention and this man told them that he knew where there were wonderful gold fields, and could guide them to the place. As a consequence the party bought him from his captors, and set out after him across the state of Arizona and up into the headwaters of the Gila.

Three peaks rose from a valley, and between two of them a stream flowed eastward. At the base of the central mountain the placer gold sparkled, and here the party camped and went to work.

Presently their supplies ran low. Half of the party started out for Yuma, not realizing that there were towns across the mountains to the south, to get food and other supplies. A month went by, and no one returned. The provisions were alarmingly low by this time, so three more men started after the first party.

When they reached a mesa top which gave a view of the camp, the three looked back. To their horror, they saw their little settlement in flames, and even as they watched Indians killed the remaining men.

It would mean death to return; besides, their friends were beyond help. Frightened, the three men hurried on, missing their way, and in their wanderings one of them died. At last they reached a town, and here another man, exhausted by that long travel among the mountains, gave up the ghost.

The sole survivor of the party was a man named Adams. He told the story, and added that $1,000 a day could be washed out with a gold pan at the place where his comrades had died. In spite of the horror of his experiences he longed to return to where the golden phantom beckoned.

But it was not to be. Adams tried many times to make his way back to the three mountains, but somehow he could never find them again. Others, too, have hunted for the lost diggings in that fiercely beautiful country, but the secret remains unknown.

White Sheers Keynote Summer Chic

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE forthstanding note in summer fashions is the increased interest in femininity. Wherefore the glory of diaphanous materials of rapturous loveliness once more, as in the picturesque days of old, hold sway in the realm of pretty summery apparel. Everywhere dotted swisses, embroidered or plain organdies and nets, chiffons and dainty sheers of multi-type flatter the summer landscape. The call for white is insistent in these weaves of elusive ethereal beauty with new and delectable colors putting forth rival claims.

First and foremost among the new sheers is mousseline de soie. The important message about these voguish mousselines is that modern science has succeeded in producing a washable type—comes from a tubbing as fresh and lovely as ever was. Every woman who heretofore lamented the fact of the un-washability of the exquisite mousselines which are so dear to her heart will rejoice at the good tidings that there is a new mousseline de soie which actually can be laundered.

And here's some more good news—a mousseline de soie which is shadow-patterned in self-color. You'll love it! Makes up adorably over a taffeta foundation. Comes in white or pastels, with first honors going, however, to white, since white keynotes to summer chic. For that "one more" party frock to add to your summer collection, why not choose plain or shadow-patterned mousseline de soie?

The lovely, white frothy, filmy, vaporous frocks in the picture are typical of smartest midsummer trends. At the top to the left a cape and a ruche of crisp white net, which is really more of a tulle than a net, with two wax-white camellias, lend enchantment to a gown of the same tulle posed over white moire. A cluster of camellias snuggles in among the tulle flounces of the skirt.

The young girl seated below is wearing a darling ingenue gown. For this dainty frock Chanel uses yards and yards of ruffles edged with fine val lace on the cape and skirt of white mousseline de soie.

The pretty creature sitting opposite is gowned in finest of cotton net. The bodice top is modishly shirred. The bolero of matching net ties with a big casual bow at the throat. The voluminous skirt is the very picture of grace, walking, dancing or sitting down. There is a belt trimmed with gold kid leaves with garland to match in her hair.

Speaking of embroidered net, for a party frock which goes formal, who could think of anything more entrancing than the ensemble worn by the charming girl standing to the right in the group! Dots embroidered in delicate bonbon colors, pink blue and yellow, look confetti-like on their sheer white background. Pink satin ribbons tie the throat and the waist. In the graceful matching wrap with full cape sleeves, Mainbocher revives the "fascinator fashion" which is making a big hit with debutantes this season. The dainty tulle hood frames the face with an aureole of crisp little ruffles. It can be thrown back off the head with perfect ease.

FOR GARDEN PARTY

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Quaint, old timey frocks are now fashion for garden party wear. This one is of white mousseline de soie (a favorite fabric this summer). It is piped with mulberry. The broad-brimmed violet colored bally bunnet hat is flowered in violet shades matching the corsage bouquet. It is a very pretty custom which has been revived—that of wearing flowers to match the posies on one's hat. Imagine a soft white straw encircled with a wreath of real African daisies with a necklace of the same daisies about your neck mounted on a velvet ribbon or a stiff old-fashioned bouquet posed at the front of a navy straw sailor, with a matching boutonniere in your button-hole. And here is the real thrill to this story—the very fashionable set is wearing real flowers in this way, fresh plucked from the garden or the florist shop.

FROG FASTENINGS USED EXTENSIVELY

Frogs have hopped into the middle of the fashion swim this season.

Frog fastenings are used on everything from evening gowns to summer suits, and lend an opportunity for original color contrasts and a new casual air for more or less formal costumes.

Time was when the field of the frog fastening was limited to pajamas, but that time is no more.

You'll be seeing them on the newest shirtwaist frocks this season, on suits of wool and linen, on blouses and summer coats, on beach frocks and evening gowns.

Schnaparelli uses gold frog fastenings down the front of a green dinner gown, in a manner both decorative and military.

Evening gowns often employ one huge frog fastening at the neckline, and lightweight woolen coats for summer are shown with frogs all the way down the front.

London Fashions of 1910

Influencing U. S. Styles

Fashions of 1910, arriving via London and the silver jubilee, are influencing the styles of 1935 in the United States.

Flowers, feathers, silk ribbons, laces, lingerie touches, are being worn in the 1910 manner. The vogue for outdoor dining has transformed the afternoon dress and garden party frock of 1910 into the daylight dining ensemble of 1935.

Cartwheel hats, reminiscent of "Merry Widow" days, accompany dainty printed silk suits, with the most feminine of blouses. Black silk taffeta slips rustle under cream-colored lace daytime coats and dinner gowns. Accordian pleated silks in the manner of Fortuny make hostess gowns to be worn against tufted sofas and modern Victorian interiors.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

The future, not the past, is going to be your concern from now on.

Instead of worrying about mistakes Future Care you have made, big or little, try to arrange that those mistakes will not be made again.

What is done, is done. Profit by it if it has been beneficial. Forget it if it has been harmful.

You are one of a great procession of human beings, all hoping to be useful or successful, all looking forward to possible happiness.

Try, after this, to do nothing that you will be forced to undo by and by.

If you have the hurry habit, and have suffered by it, proceed with a little more care next time.

If you have neglected your education, don't sit down and whine about it. There is still time to fit yourself for what you want to do.

Self-confidence is an excellent thing. But don't be too confident. Test your own capacity before you try it out.

I know a great many young men who, because their early training has been neglected, and because they cared more about passing enjoyment than what they might do with their futures have convinced themselves that they are failures, and that it will be futile to try to succeed.

But if they have the will to succeed, they will succeed, even if they have wasted years that should have been devoted to effort.

The important thing is to gain ground, to equip yourself more and more thoroughly for the game.

Every time you make a serious mistake, resolve that that particular mistake shall not be committed again.

Every time you feel ashamed about the time you have wasted, work double-time till the waste has been made up.

I could cite dozens of cases of men who, late in life have begun all over again, and got away with it.

Mark Twain tried piloting till the railroad displaced the Mississippi river, then he turned to gold mining.

He was unsuccessful at gold mining, so he turned to writing.

And at writing he made a great success, and soon was earning more money in a year than he had made in many years spent "finding himself."

If you try to analyze your own mental makeup, you will learn that there is some one thing you can do, and will enjoy doing more than anything else. Go ahead and do it. Don't worry about early mistakes. Think only of what you are going to do tomorrow and many hundreds of tomorrows.

"No man can succeed in producing great things who is not thoroughly sincere in dealing with himself." — James Russell Lowell.

Look to Yourself

One human being you can control— if you try hard enough.

One single career you can guide—that is your own.

If you have children, you can influence them—for a time.

But soon they will get out of leading strings.

Don't fool yourself. Don't, considering somebody else's career, say: "I could do as well as he does, or better, if I tried."

Maybe you could. But you've got to find out. You have a troublesome person on your hands. That's you.

Look yourself squarely in the face every morning. If you've done mean things, admit it. Don't make excuses.

Being human, you will be prone to criticize other people, but you have no right to. You really know little about them. Restrain your judgment of them until you are sure what their motives are.

As for you, if you are misunderstood—and about half the people in the world imagine that they are—it is your own fault.

You can be frank and honest if you want to. That may not always be easy but it is a thing that can be acquired by practice.

Set a high mark for yourself. Before you condemn others for actions which you think are mean and petty, make sure that you are not doing actions of very much the same kind.

Keep envy out of your system. Keep your sympathy working. You doubtless expect it from others.

Your happiness as you travel through life will depend upon your peace of mind.

You may get hardened after a while, and begin to nurse the notion that if other people cheat and lie, you can get away with it, too.

Maybe you can, but you'll be ashamed of yourself, and feel like a sneak.

I know that there are many respected and venerated people in the world who gain wealth, make friends, and are known as leading citizens.

But among these are many who are aware, down inside of themselves, that they haven't played a straight game, and who, if they had a chance, would start all over again.

But second starts, while they are possible, are about a hundred times as difficult as first starts, so it is very much better to chart the right course in the beginning and stick to it through the voyage.

Madness of Anarchism Seems to Be Passing

In the '60s, '70s and '80s, in Italy, Spain and, above all, Russia, the mad wisdom of the anarchist gospel had a strong hold on many people, and the history of the Nineteenth century is full of their bloody deeds. Now only small factions of the party still remain in Italy and Spain.

The real anarchist sees the only way to happiness through the destruction of all kinds of governments. To an anarchist a Bolshevik government is just as bad as a monarchy. If he could, he would gladly kill any high official who represented the principles of ordered government.

A real anarchist should not be confused with those sporadic madmen whose deeds we have witnessed in recent years. The murderer of Mayor Cermak of Chicago, Zangara, who confessed that he had an inner urge to kill the President, was not an anarchist but just criminally insane. So was the slayer of President McKinley or the wretch who killed Empress Elizabeth in Switzerland two generations ago.

The real anarchist is mostly a wide-eyed idealist who has acquired a queer little twist in some corner of his brain. Behind the explosions of bombs and the scattered remains of his victims he sees a new and better world rising. Fortunately for us, this strange specimen of humanity seems to be disappearing.—Harry Soderman in the Forum and Century.

Look at Bright Side

Get into the habit of looking for the silver lining of the cloud, and, when you have found it, continue to look at it rather than at the leaden gray in the middle. It will help you over many hard places.—Willitta.
