The Late Judge West.

Hon. Charles S. West, late Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas, whose death is announced elsewhere, was a gentleman of rare legal distinction and many positive merits. After receiving a liberal legal education he took service with his section during the late war, earning distinction for gallantry When the smoke of battle cleared away he resumed the practice of law at Austin with marked success, soon uniting himself with Hon. John S. Hancock, as the firm of Hancock & West, of which remained a member until his election to the Supreme Bench in 1882, as Associate Justice. He continued until a few weeks ago in this position when, declining health compelled his resignation. Judge West married the daughter of the late Judge Duval, of the United States Court, by whom he had several children.

Prof. Black's Meeting.

The meeting at Commerce Street Church still grows in interest. The house was filled last night to its utmost capacity and the large audience listened with rapt attention. The sermon was one of the Professor's best and is full of historical and Bible facts, woven together in a masterly manner. Tonight he will preach on the subject, "Can a Moral Man be Saved?" Those who believe that morality can save them without Christ are especially requested to listen to the argument of the preacher.

Under Two Flags.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Oct. 23.—Several years ago, Miss Sophia Newby, the daughter of a prominent citizen of this city, married G. W. Kendall, a talented draughtsman and artist, who spent most of his time in Boston. He would be absent from here on trips for three or four months at a time. While on one of these trips, at the last term of court. she procured a divorce, and a few days after was married to her cousin, Thos. H. Newby, a journalist of Los Angeles, Colorado. Today Mr. Kendall returned, caught his exwife in his arms and still thinks himself her lawful husband. Both gentlemen are with her and what the night will bring forth is a mystery.

graphic report of the meeting: "Gen. Butler, I am desirous to ask if you have any objection to say why, if true that Andrew Johnson desired to revolutionize the government as charged, it was not brought out in the impeachment trial. Have you any objection to answering that ques-

"There would be many reasons why that matter could not have been brought into the impeachment trial, because there was no article of impeachment which charged Johnson with that offense, and such evidence would have been incompetent. I, for one, am not in the habit of offering incompetent evidence in a trial. But I suppose what you want to know is why it did not appear in the impeachment proceedings, either in the House, when impeachment was discussed, or when the articles were prepared? Simply because there was no legal and proper evidence by which it could have been proved, known to the public or members of the House at that time. Gen. Grant, if he had been approached by his Commander in Chief with any propositions in the confidence that must exist between officers in regard to military movement, could not disclose. At any rate, he did not until long after Johnson's death. There was another project of President Johnson's as to revolutionizing the government, some of the details of which were partly known at the time, but which could not be proven, which had not taken the form of action, and which were not in the impeachment proceedings. I myself had some very strong moral evidence on less questions, which I did not care to make known to the public in the impeachment proceedings, but one of which I investigated secretly as chairman for the committee for that purpose, and while there was disclosed some very damaging facts, under the circumstances they were not so conclusive that I deemed it proper to exhibit an article of impeachment against the President of the United States in that behalf. I still retain some of the instruments of evidence that strongly tend to support my belief. The other proposition of Mr. Johnson to control the government differed from that of Gen. Grant in the measure to be taken, but not in the end to be reached. It now comes for the first time and must have been made after Gen. Grant had refused to accede to Johnson's proposition; and knowing now what had been said to Grant, it would seem that the proposition was entertained because of Grant's refusal, and while that was known to me in regard to it, it gave me strong belief it was not in shape to be brought before the public for one dealing with the Chief Magistrate of his one, am not in the habit of offering incompetent evidence in a trial. "Yes, I have. Those facts and that evidence are my property, and I propose to keep them to myself until I advise myself when they shall see light—perhaps after I have ceased to see the light."

THE OPIUM CHARGE.

MR. W. W. WARD'S DENIAL. WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—When the atten-ion of Mr. W. W. Ward, who was assistant private secretary to President Johnson, was called to the charge which has been made that President Johnson was addicted to the use of opium, that gentleman said: "That is absurd. I saw a great deal of Mr. Johnson, particularly at night, and I was entirely familiar with his habits, both by day and night. I am positive that he never used opium in any form. Had he used it stealthly he could not have concealed the fact from me, for I had enough experience with the drug, having been a druggist at one time, to detective effects without any difficulty. Mr. John son was not a drinking man, although he took his drink as most men did in those days. His favorite beverage was good rum. He never used opium, though. Of that I am positive."

Shot by a Policeman.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 .- Early this morning while Robert Bruce, a private detective, was passing 183 Washington street, a woman attired only in her nightdress, ran out of the hallway, crying "murder." He inquired what was the trouble, and was informed that a man was killing women upstairs. He went to the head of the stairs, where he met Henry Devine and Eddy Hall, wellknown North Side characters. Devine struck him in the face, and when Bruce tried to defend himself drew a pair of brass knuckles and made a threatening demonstration. Bruce then drew his revolver and fired, the ball entering Devine's breast. Devine was taken to a neighboring house Devine was taken to a neighboring house and thence to the hospital, where he is in a very dangerous condition. Bruce gave himself up to the police.

More Anti-Chinese Riots.

OMAHA, Oct. 23.—News was received at the army headquarters in this city to-day that a fresh outbreak had occurred at Rock Springs, Wyoming, the scene of the recent anti-Chinese riots and massacre. The house which was attacked was about three miles from Rock Springs proper and was occur pied by about thirty Chinamen. Pistol shots were fired and clubs and stones were prought into action, the whole scene being intensified by the howls of a desperate mob. The coolies fied to the hills, where they remained over night, half clad, arriving at the military camp this morning nearly frozen. The assaulters were seven men employed on the Union Pacific.

AFTER MANY DAYS.

Maxwell, the Alleged Murderer of Preller,

Identified by His Father. St. Louis, Oct. 23.—The mystery of the identity of Maxwell, the murderer of C. A. Preller, is clear at last. To-night his father, Samuel N. Brooks, of Hyde, England, called at the jail and was admitted to the cell of the prisoner. When the old man's eyes fell upon the face of the young man he was terribly affected, and cried out "Hugh. Hugh, it is indeed you!" The prisoner rose, for the first time since incarceration, seemed to lose his incarceration, seemed to lose control of himself. "It is father, it is me," he cried, starting forward toward his aged parent. Then, immediately controlling himself, he stopped and sat down on a chair. The father staggered and would have fallen but for the support of attendants. He again gazed upon his son and said: "Oh Hugh, you had better be dead than here. Your mother's health is gone and the family ruined," and, sobbing, he fell into the arms of the guard. Maxwell sat in his chair looking annoyed, and but for the first recognition of his father exhibited no emotion whatever. Mr. Brooks, in conversation afterward, said that he had no doubt whatever that his son was insane. He said Hugh left home last January ostensibly to go to Dublin, since which time the family had heard nothing of him.

A JUDGMENT FOR JILTING.

Thomas T.Eckerts' Old and Unpaid Breach of Promise Debt.

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 23.—In 1865 Mary E. Fleming sued Thos. T. Eckert in the courts of this county for $5000 for breach of promise. The trial resulted in a verdict for $2250 for the plaintiff. The defendant petitioned for a new trial, but the motion was overruled and the costs were also assessed on him. The were also assessed on him. The matter has been in that position ever since, as the judgment, or any part of it, has never been paid. At the time jndgment was granted defendant was insolvent. He was known to Wooster people as Tom Eckert, who worked at the harness trade, and was at one time postmaster. He is now a resident of New York Ctty, and is the general manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co. The plaintiff in the suit has regularly renewed the judgment, which now with interest amounts to $8000, and to-day it was placed in the hands of her lawyer for collection.

FORAKER IN NEW YORK.

He Speaks in Madison Square to a Large Audience.

The Returns from Ohio-Private Secretary Lamont in New York-One of the President's Appointees-Beecher's Views.

New York, Oct. 23.—The Republican ratification at the Madison Square Garden this evening was attended by fully 8000 persons, many ladies being present. The garden had been tastefully decorated for the occasion with flags and banners. For fully an hour previous to the meeting being called to order there was a display of fireworks. The meeting throughout was an unusually enthusiastic one, the names of wellknown Republicans being repeatedly cheered. Among the distinguished persons present were: Ex-President Arthur, Senator Evarts, Senator Miller, ex-Gov. Cornell, Jesse Seligman, Hamilton Fish, K. Morton, Colyer Bliss, David Dows, David F. Appleton, Horace White and many others. Joseph H. Choate, president, in opening the proceedings, said that all grades of Republicans had joined to swell the triumph of the meeting, and they might call it a reunion of the divided and scattered friends of the party, for they had found no comfort in the cold into which they had thrown themselves. After a long list of vice presidents and secretaries had been read, and resolutions favoring reform in the civil resolutions favoring reform in the civil service and other measures of good govern-ment had been adopted, the chairman intro-duced the Hon. J. B. Foraker, who was rement had been adopted, the chairman introduced the Hon. J. B. Foraker, who was received with great cheering.

Mr. Foraker said that on account of the magnitude of the meeting he did not know what way to turn, but he could feel at home with the audience, because he was a Republican, and a Republican had a perfect right to feel at home on any part of America's soil. The duty of every Republican was to come to the support, on Nov. 3, of the Republican candidates. After speaking of the defeat of the Republican party last year he said the Democratic party had been hanging behind for the last twenty-four years, and now that they had reached a straight stretch of water they wanted to take the wheel and guide the government and restore prosperity, and when the Democrats got into power they wanted to count the money in the Treasury and examines the books. They had done both and found all the money there and the books in perfect condition. As for restoring prosperity, what had the Democratic party done so far? They had broken an old Irishman's heart, destroyed ship building in the country and thrown 2500 workmen out of employment. Mr. Foraker said he had not kept count of all Mr. Cleveland's appointments, but for the last six weeks he had noticed a good many appointments and he would say that they were nearly all bad. The speaker next referred to the recent election frauds in Cincinnati and Columbus, and said that every man should be allowed to vote as he pleased. Mr. Foraker conand said that every man should be allowed to vote as he pleased. Mr. Foraker concluded by saying that the Republican party had got its back up this year and wanted the whole earth; they were not going to carry Ohio and New York alone, but Virginia elso.

Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, was the next speaker. He was heartily cheered. After a few remarks from Senator Evarts, the meeting adjourned.

THE PRESIDENT'S EMPHATIC VIEWS. Boston, Oct. 23.—A Worcester (Mass.) special to the Record says: A prominen New York banker, discussing the political situation with a Record reporter to-day, said: "I was discussing politics recently with a prominent Boston lawyer, and I asked if he knew what Cleveland's views in regard to the State ele-"Well," said my lawyer friend, "you need not worry about them, for Cleveland does not care about them himself. I called on the President subsequent to the Ohio election, and in the course of a private conversation said: 'The outlook in some of the States is not quite as favorable as I would like.' The President replied: 'I take small interest in State elections. I shall not be swerved from the line of conduct I have marked out if all the States go Republican. I am here as the President of no party, but of the whole people, to carry out the laws as I interpret them, and to conduct the business of this government economically, prudently, and as a man would conduct his own private affairs. That is my idea of the duties of the executive head of this government.'" The lawyer added that Mr. Cleveland's manner was such as to guarantee his sincerity. on the President subsequent to the Ohio

SENATOR GORMAN TO MARYLAND DEMOCTATS

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23.—United States Senator Gorman is out in a lengthy card this morning, addressed to the people of Mary land, bearing upon the election to be held in this city and State shortly. Mr. Gorman appeals to the people of Baltimore to keep the Democrats in power by their votes on Tues day next, Oct. 27, at the municipal election. He says that should the fusion move ment in this city succeed on that day, the Democrats outside of the city would become so demoralized that the Republicans might carry the State on Nov. 4. This would give the Republicans control of the General As sembly and would elect a United States Senator to succeed Senator Gorman. In de-Senator to succeed Senator Gorman. In defending his action in the appointment of Eugene Higgins and Morris A. Thomas, Gorman cites that the Democratic party of the State had approved of Higgins by sanctioning his selection as Secretary of the State Senate in 1880, and approved the action of Gov. Carroll, in 1880, when he appointed Thomas a police justice of Baltimore City. Gorman believes that the head of every State or municipal department should have the power of selecting the men upon whom he must depend for the faithful performance of the work for which he is responsible. It is believed here that Mr. Coon's trip to New York is in connection with private business into which he intends to enter, and that he expects soon to be relieved from his official position. His resignation has been at the command of the Secretary of the Treasury since March, and he has always been ready and willing to step down and out. The civil service reformers have been pleased at his retartion and are disconnicted at his his retention, and are disappointed at his rumored retirement.

Woodward was a Demothe machines. Gen. Woodward was a Democrat, but the office of Mayor having been in the hands of a Republican for two years it was perfectly fair that it should now go to a Democrat. All that the Independents asked was that he should be in favor of the system of municipal administration which has prevailed for the past four years. His objection to the other candidates were not personal, but on account of the auspices under which they were nominated. Mr. Whitney has been a member of Mr. Beecher's church.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 23 .- Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whitely, the newly married couple who were found unconscious from the effects of morphine poisoning in a room at the Commercial House last night, died this morning. hotel on North Main street, W. L. Dunn was discovered to be in a dying condition. He was first discovered by some small boys. He died at 10:45 a. m., immediately after his condition was discovered. Drs. McCoy and McKenzie were summoned. They worked with him about half an hour before he died. Dunn had been on a protracted spree for a week, and yesterday, though sobered up a little, he sent to a drugstore and purchased sixty grains of morphine, and it is supposed he took nearly all of it, as only a very small portion remained in the bottle this morning. The only thing that can be learned in regard to the unfortunate affair is that last night he was very much intoxicated, and before going to bed he told the proprietor that he "wanted to sleep late this proprietor that he "wanted to sleep late this morning." This morning a little boy who occupied the same room with Dunn, says that about 5 o'clock Dunn got up and wanted his knife, saying that he had to take some medicine and had overslept himself; that he wanted to take the medicine there. He procured the knife and opened the bottle, which THE NEWS reporter learns was a beer bottle. He took as many as three drinks and lay down again. It is supposed he took the morphine at the same time. When he bought the medicine at the drug store he also bought several other medicines from the druggist, stating that it was for some alleged disease. The druggist says he cautioned him about the use of the morphine, and Dunn replied that he had used it before. Dunn was about 25 years of age, and no cause is suspected that lead to the rash act, except the spree in which he had been indulging and the coses that he had in the Connty Court set for next Tuesday, charging him with disturbing the peace and another for making a serious threat to take life, in which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses, for which there was some proof of his attempting to bribe some of the witnesses. Approving the Administration. Special to the World. WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Senator Van Wyck has come back to Washington for the winter and has been busy with his house during the last week. He made his appearance in the Interior Department to-day for the pur-campaign he was making against the West-ern land thieves. "It suits me," said he.

'Your policy is proving what I have been charging all along in the Senate. My Reouplican brethren have said that I was all wrong, and that I was very unjust. "I hear that some of the Democratic Senators are complaining that the President does not treat them with confidence."

"Well, I think that the President has good reasons for being suspicious," said Van Wyck. "They have forced some very queer people on him."

Mr. Van Wyck is not the first Republican to speak in warm terms of the President. The Republican statesmen who are in Washington are very happy over the fact that Democratic Senators have cause for complaint. They say that if the President wants to do well, he should follow the advice of the Republican Senators. Mr. Van Wyck is fond of exciting times. He has been called something of a sensationalist, and his eyes fairly glint with joyous excitement when he thinks of next winter. He thinks that it will be the liveliest session since the war. He has great faith in Mr. Lamar, and believes that the latter will thoroughly reform the Interior Department before he gets through. AFFAIRS AT FORT WORTH.

A Story That Looks Very Much Like a Hoax.

Nothing New in the Boyland Killing-Fire at Birdville-A Sable Squad for the Penitentiary.

Special to The News.

FORT WORTH, Oct. 23 .- Sheriff Davis, of Wichita County, arrived in the city this evening with a warrant for J. T. Jones, charged with the murder of Wm. Chriss man, Sept. 28. Dr. Wooten, who claims to have captured Jones, refuses to give him up until the murdered man's brother arrives from Gatesville. If Wooten brought Jones to the Fort he did not turn him over to the authorities, and all efforts to locate him have so far failed. Wooten still claims to have the man, and promises to produce him at the proper time. The opinion of the officers is that the whole tale is a hoax, and that Wooten manufactured the story for some purpose of his own.

NO FURTHER DEVELOPMENT.

There are no new developments in the Boyland murder case. Both Turner and Collins stick to their respective stories and accuse each other of having dealt the blows which killed the boy. The prevailing impression is that Turner did the assault while Collins stood by and saw it done. A special session of the grand jury has been called for next Wednesday for this case and no examining trial will be had.

EL Paso, Oct. 23.—A grand ball took place at the Juarez Theater, Paso Del Norte, tonight. The proceeds will be devoted to the erection of an altar to be dedicated to the purity of the Virgin Mary, and the affair partook of an international character. Horace Tucker, general freight agent of the Illinois Central Railway, arrived here today in a special car, accompanied by several railroad notables and stockmen. MRS. HOWE'S ODE.

Special to The News. Boston, Oct. 23 .- The ode written for the occasion by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and sung at the Grant memorial services by the choir was as follows:

Great Freedom, maid divinely born, Thine was the champion that we mourn; The guest of triumph and delight, Attend to day our funeral rite.

When in thy cause our fathers bled, Rebellion raised her angry head, And civil war with mailed hand, Smote at the beauty of our land.

And many a chieftan came and went, With thought perplexed and ill content, To lead his troops with faltering breath, Into the glittering toils of death;

And many a household oped its door, To one whose lips should move no more; The arrow, rankling in its breast, That sped that silent, solemn guest.

But when the greatest need was near, We heard a sudden cry of cheer That rolled and deepened. Could it be? It was the shout victory. Unblest the hands that loosed afar, The dreadful enginery of war; Thrice blessed he who marched amain To bring us holy peace again,

A conqueror, crowned for deeds of might, But happiest in the victor's right, When the strong arm that dealt the blow Might lift and help the prostrate foe.

Rest with thy laurels, generous chief, Lamented with a nation's grief, Remembered with such grateful praise As heralds thee to distant days.

Released from struggle to sweet sleep,
May loving hearts thy vigils keep,
While faith's sure promise seals for thee
The last surpassing victory.

GRANT AND THOMAS.

Mr. Headley on the Two Generals and the Battle of Nashville.

To the Editor of the New York Sun-Sir: In the Sun of Oct. 2 you published an extract from the Boston Herald on the despotic character of generals, in order to show the errors of the statements it contained. In that extract occurs the following assertion respecting Gen. Grant's conduct toward Gen. Thomas for his unaccountable delay in attacking Hood before Nashville. In view of that delay he (Grant) said: "I could stand it no longer, and gave the order without reserve, and I think the battle will take place to-morrow."

Now, first, here is the error of fact. Grant never gave any such order "without any reserve," nor did Thomas ever move under never gave any such order "without any reserve," nor did Thomas ever move under any such supposed order. But this is a small matter compared with the serious charge implied against both commanders in this statement. Grant, after having placed Thomas in command of the Western army, urges him to assault Hood at once, and the latter, delaying to do so, he, totally ignorant of the motive that governed him and the circumstances in which he is placed—six or seven hundred miles away—orders him peremptorily to attack, just as he would a Colonel of a regiment to storm a battery in his immediate presence. This would make him not only destitute of military knowledge, but of that strong common sense which was his distinguished characteristic. On the other hand, it would make Thomas, under whose personal supervision everything had other hand, it would make Thomas, under whose personal supervision everything had been done, more ignorant of his duty than Grant hundreds of miles away, or too timorous to perform it. Neither is true, as the following facts which I obtained from Gen. Thomas himself will show. He said: "Gen. Grant telegraphed me very urgently to attack Hood at once. I telegraphed back that I was not ready to move. I did not give my reasons, for fear they would leak out on the way. The chief one was I had been unable to collect enough horses to form a cavalry force to pursue and demolish Hood after I nad defeated him. Simply to drive him from before Nashville demonsh frood after I had defeated him. Simply to drive him from before Nashville would be a barren victory. I, however, tele graphed Gen. Grant that if he was dissatisfied with my course to appoint another one in my place, and I would serve under him as a subordinate."

But Gen. Grant had no idea of doing controlled.

But Gen. Grant had no idea of doing any such foolish thing, and telegraphed him so, saying: "I have more confidence in you than in any other man." But, chafing under the prolonged inaction, instead of ordering him without reserve to move, he determined to go on himself and ascertain what the obstacles were that so strongly held the 'rock of Chickamauga" back; but when he got as far as Washington he was met with the news of the total overthrow of Hood's army and in his report to the government army, and in his report to the government said: "I was delighted; all fears were dis-pelled."

Now, in what a different light do these facts place these two distinguished com-manders, and how characteristic of both? Gen. Grant, in reviewing the campaign, said Gen. Grant, in reviewing the campaign, said he thought it would have been wiser to have attacked Hood before he had time to fortify, but adds with that frankness, justice and magnanimity so characteristic of him, "but his final defeat of Hood was so complete that it will be accepted as a vindication of that distinguished officer's judgment." How little this sounds like "I could stand it no longer, and gave orders without reserve." Respectfully,

ENGLAND. RIEL'S SENTENCE.

London, Oct. 23 .- The Daily Telegraph says upon the subject of the Privy Coun eil's decision in the case of Louis Riel: 'Upon the whole, yesterday's judgment is so upheld by reason, and comes from lawvers of such undoubted authority, that it may be assumed to cover the justice of the case to the end of the chapter. Riel cannot complain if Canada is not the master of the situation and exacts the last penalties." HE KNEW NO SECTS.

TRIAL OF EDITOR STEAD.

The trial of Editor Stead, of the Pall Mall Gazette, and other defendants in the Eliza Armstrong case, was commenced this morning at the Central Criminal Court, Old Bailey, before Justice Lopes, and will probably last a week. All of the prisoners pleaded "not guilty," and the Attorney General at once opened the case for the crown. After a brief review of the case, the taking of testimony of witnesses for the prosecution was proceeded with. The testimony thus far adduced does not differ materially from that given at the preliminary hearings. The girl, Eliza Armstrong, when called to the stand was cool and self possessed, and gave her evidence in a cool and statistic toward. sessed, and gave her evidence in a cool and straightforward manner. The Judge, in ruling on a question, said that no motives were sufficient to justify the taking of a child without its parents' consent, "and if the consent was obtained by fraudulent means," he continued, "it was tantamount to no consent in the eyes of the law." The courtroom was crowded, and a large number gathered around the entrances, but these were soon scattered by a drenching rainstorm that prevailed.

The application of the Porte for the manrainstorm that prevailed.

The application of the Porte for the mandate of Europe to re-establish order in the principalities by sword is disapproved by England. The right of Turkey to use her forces to maintain order without the mandate of Europe is expressly conceded.

CHURCHILL'S DISAPPOINTING SPEECH. Lord Randolph Churchill, Secretary for India, speaking at Birmingham to-night, admitted that the Conservatives were re-

He devoted a large part of his speech to upholding the necessity of a good foreign policy as opposed to the radical theory that a foreign policy is use-less. Aside from this he vouchsafed no opinion of the conservative programme, and the speech was in the main disappoint-ing

TORONTO, Oct. 23.-An Ottawa special says: At a Cabinet meeting held here yesterday afternoon it was decided to postpone Riel's execution until Nov. 11. The French Canadians still express confidence that he will not be hanged. They base their hope on the recommendation to mercy of the Regina jury. The Mail this morning says: 'The only plea now left to Riel's friends is one of insanity; but as the jury, which is the sole judge of such questions, could not be convinced that Riel did not know he was doing wrong, it follows that the verdict can-not now be challenged on that ground, un-less new evidence has come to light."

Louisiana Supreme Court.

Special to The News. SHREVEPORT, Oct. 23.—In the Supreme Court to-night the following additional opinions were read: Justice Poche-No. 164. State vs. James Redwire, larceny, from Caddo Parish; Sylabus: Evidence taken in support of a motion for a new trial in criminal cases will not be considered an appeal, unless it be incorporated in or attached to a bill of exceptions taken from the refusal of a new trial by the judge. Judgment affirmed.

Justice Poche-No. 153. State vs. Dennis Boyd, murder, from Bossier Parish. Sylabus: In a capital case the action of the District Judge who orders the trial of an accused on the same day he is arraigned in the unforeseen absence of his chosen and retained counsel, and refuses to attorneys appointed to him by the court more than three hours' time to prepare their defense, is erroneous in law and unjust to the accused. Under such circumstances his refusal to postpone the trial for two judicial days will be reversed on appeal and the cause remanded for another trial. Judgment reversed.

Justice Manning-No. 157. State vs. John Kerwin, manslaughter, from Bossier Parish; syllabus: The ruling of the trial judge. that no overt act, threat, or hostile demonstration had been proved, and therefore that no foundation had been laid for the admission of proof of character of deceased, is final unless manifestly arbitrary and not of sound legal decision. It is not within the sound legal decision. It is not within the province of the jury to decide whether a foundation has been laid for the proof of the character of deceased. That question cannot be submitted to them. From the very nature and mode of procedure in a criminal trial, the Judge who presides at a criminal trial must necessarily have heard the evidence submitted to him of overt acts, threats, etc., and he is not compellable on a motion for a new trial to reverse his own ruling that such evidence was insufficient to admit proof of character. Nor can he be complained of if he refuses to hear evidence to show that he was wrong in his ruling on the proof of character. Nor can he be complained of if he refuses to hear evidence to show that he was wrong in his ruling on the trial on that regard. Judgment affirmed.

Justice Manning—No. 155. Green Brothers vs. Boyken Witherspoon, from De Soto Parish; sylabus: A conveyance of land without description of boundary or location, but merely as all other lands owned by the renderer in the State of Louisiana, is operative, as notice to the public of any particular tract conveyed. is not void for want of description. Thirty years' possession may be successfully invoked by a possessor in good faith of tracts of woodland forming parts of a plantation upon which he has lived continuously for that time, although he may not have felled a tree from those tracts or done any other act of corporeal possession of that part of his plantation. Judgment affirmed.

Justice Todd—No. 148. A Slightly Crushed Tragedian.

New York World One of the prisoners at Jefferson Market vesterday was the colored tragedian, Benjamin J. Ford. His wife had caused his arrest on a charge of assault. Ford is the leading member of the "Astor Place Tragedy Co.," a colored troupe, under the management of Editor Arneux, of the New York Enterprise. Last July "Othello" was pro duced at the Cosmopolitan Theater, Ford playing the part of the Moor. His wife was not a member of the company and he part of Desdemona was acted by a bright, intelligent mulatto. The company subsequently produced "Damon and Pythias" at the Academy of Music before a large audience, Ford enacting the role of Damon. He prides himself upon his close imitation of the style of John McCullough, imitation of the style of John McCullough, and says he is going with his company to Baltimore to fill an engagement.

Ford has been jealous of his wife, who is neat, fair-skinned and well-educated young woman. She went to a pienic at the Atalanta Casino, in Harlem, on Sept. 28. Ford has been employed as a waiter at Thirty-ninth street and Irving place. and his wife held a place as maid servant at No. 239 West Thirty-ninth street. Upon learning that his wife was at the picnic Ford dressed himself as a tramp, and after a long search discovered her. Folding his arms and striking a dramatic attitude he said in tragic tones:

"So, madame, you are here, and I amhere "So, madame, you are here, and I am here too."

Mrs. Ford became frightened, and turned "Now, good Mrs. Ford, you must wait and hear me whilst I speak one word with thee."
"Oh, come off with your tragedies and play-acts," replied the wife. "I don't want to have anything to do with you. Why do you follow me around? I don't want you, so go hence"

So go hence."

Ford then became excited and struck her a violent blow on the head.

"Madame," began Ford when arraigned in court, speaking in slow, measured tones, "be careful—'tis false—I have witnesses."

HARD-SHELL LOVE-MAKING.

Graphic Sketches of the Merry Maiden and the Lad at a Country Church Meeting.

Rome (Ga.) Bulletin.

To the young people by far the most interesting part of a Hardshell Baptist Association is the courting scenes going on in various directions, which an old campaigner in the wars of Cupid never fails to detect. If the elite about the cities of both sexes think there is no fun of this sort going on in these secluded yet delightful valleys they are greatly mistaken. Lads and lassies go courting up here like they do in the eternal city. There (that is in the city), it is A seat on a sofa, with a glass of especial wine,

And mamma too blind to discover her small white hand in mine. In the country, there is no sofa about it; a new-cut log, with the bark on, answers quite as well. There is no wine in the game;

the interest of the occasion furnishes its own elixir. On the outskirt of the congregation sat a large, well developed, handsome girl, evidently early in her teens. She had a soft blue eye, fashioned after the model of an Italian sky, clear, cerulean, with the softest rays of the sunlight of love playing in its depths; mysterious, unfathomable, yet beautiful as the rainbow. By her side sat a graceful, good-looking country lad of twenty summers. His mustache was thinly settled but promised to be voluminous and black but promised to be voluminous and black as the darkness that covered Egypt in the time of Israel's trouble. An eye, like the mustache, that either an ancient or a modern Roman might covet. Her head was a little bowed, so that the bonnet might cover the face. It did so partially, but occasionally it was gently raised and a furtive glance thrown out to see if anybody were noticing. "An old campaigner" was looking on with intense interest. He knew just as well that boy was courting that girl as if he had been at it himself. The girl was in trouble, but it was delightful trouble. Streaks of crimson would cover her face like golden clouds at sunset. That beautiful bosom would rise and swell gently, like the hillows clouds at sunset. That beautiful bosom would rise and swell gently, like the billows in a calm; and now, it would heave high with an escaped sigh, that spoke volumes to one who knew about things.

The gallant country lad had turned loose a full park of Cupid's artillery upon the citadel of her heart. The heart works were being terribly battered. It was evident to an experienced eye the fortification would go. She picked the rim entirely off her palmetto fan, she chewed the corner of a white metto fan, she chewed the corner of a white lawn handkerchief. Though no flag of sur-render was actually held out, the deep drawn sigh gave notice that it was lost.

'Tis sweet to hear at midnight, on the blue and moonlight deep,
The song and oar of Adria's gondolier,
By distance mellowed, o'er the waters sweep;
'Tis sweet to hear the watch dog's honest bark Bay deep mouthed welcome as we draw near home,
'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark
Our coming and grow brighter when we come: Our coming and grow brighter when we come; But sweeter far than this, than these, than all, Is first and passionate love! Like Adam's recollection of the fall, It stands alone!!

Is first and passiouate love!

Like Adam's recollection of the fall,

It stands alone!!

When the intermission and basket dinner came on there was a junction of the carnal with the spiritual. Lamb, pork, chickenpie, tarts, pies, custards, grapes equal to those the spies brought back from the promised land, nectarine peaches over which the Olympian gods and all the gods would have united, sugar cantelopes and twenty-pound watermelons, and such like things, were cast about in great profusion. If these Hardshells do as well in the next world as they do in this divers will desire to cast their lot with them.

Youthful couples, male and female, could be seen moving in all directions, some hunting the crystal springs that surrounded the grounds, some going farther in the lonely coves, found under the overhanging mountain cliffs, others discussing (possibly) the merits of the sermon and the road to heaven.

Nor did the sparking cease when the meeting broke up. They went as they came, in buggies, wagons, in ox-carts, full of boys and girls; and a vast crowd came and went on horseback. Courting on horseback in the country is a science. If a man wants to know whether a woman is smart or no, let him watch the girls, giving preference, in great competition, to their favorites.

Does a fellow get up alongside of her that she does not fancy, and is the preferred one ahead, casting back a loving glance? Suddenly she becomes exasperated with her unlucky steed, and gives him a cut with her riding whip that spurts him far ahead, alongside of her darling, leaving "Bobby Noodles" far in the rear. Is "her ducky" in the rear, she finds something the matter with her stirrup, and not only suddenly stops, but checks up serenely her Selim, and reels him back some twelve or fifteen feet to the rear, just alongside of her lost one, and tells him her foot is out of the stirrup. Quick as thought he is on the ground adjusting the beautiful foot to the disorderly stirrup. If he squeezes it a little softly and slyly, who can blame him? She may but it is the frown of forgiving displeasure. If, anywhere in the past, anybody but Satan has got the better of a woman, it is not recorded. The villainous old hypocrite told her eating that apple amounted to nothing, but the moment she ate it she would find out something she never knew before. The devil must have laughed as he watched the operation of his physic. Of course she went for the "bottom facts" and ate the apple.

Hygiene in the Schools.

Pittsburg Dispatch. Know then thyself, presume not God to scan: The proper study of mankind is man. —Pope's Essay on Man. Making the study of phsiology and hygiene compulsory in our schools was considered a very wise measure by some educators, and a very unwise one by others, out there was not much said about it until after the schools opened. Now there is confusion all along the line. Those who do highly proper study, while those who have never studied, yet are compelled to teach it, regard it as a useless innovation.

Great minds may differ, and they often do on small matters. This is a small not have it to teach, and those who understand it well enough to teach it, think it a one sense, and a great one in another ense.

It is true beyond a doubt that one of the important studies of mankind is man. Some say it is the most important, the highest and the most essential to long life and happiness. Pope thought "the proper study of mankind is man." which is probably as good a way of stating the proposition ascen be found.

can be found.

The study of man, however, is not confined to physiology and hygiene. The man does not consist in bones, muscles and nerves. There is a higher, more complex and more elaborate system which distin-guishes man from other bipeds. It was orobably this system to which Pope referred in his memorable "Essay on Man," which might be studied with profit by those who are able to comprehend its beauty and its are able to comprehend its beauty and its meaning.

There is but little difference of opinion as to the usefulness of a knowledge of physi clogy, but its usefulness is not so apparent as some other branches, hence the difference of opinion as to its importance as compared with other studies.

Another point upon which there is honest difference of opinion is as to the manner of teaching it, also as to the age when scholars should be required to begin the study. These can not be finally determined except by experience. Teachers will have to carefully note the ages at which children begin to take an interest in it, as well as to note the manner of presentation that attracts the most attention and makes the deepest impression.

There is one difficulty in the way of studying hygiene, which time alone can remove, and it is a great difficulty, too. That is, there so few parents who know how or care anything about it. The children will be taught that certain things are detrimental to good health, while this very thing is allowed, or practiced at home. Unless the child is old enough to realize that its parents may be wrong the chances are it will decide that the teacher is at fault.

How many homes are there in two cities where even the more simple laws of hygiene are enforced? Indeed, how many are there where hygiene is ever thought of, or even There is one difficulty in the way of study-where even the more simple laws of hygiene are enforced? Indeed, how many are there where hygiene is ever thought of, or even known? What aid can a child get in a home like this? What incentives are there for it to study that which it never sees practiced? Were there some way of compelling parents to study and observe the laws of hygiene, there would be some hope of getting good results. However, there must always be a beginning to every new departure, so the work of educating those who are to be the parents of the next generation might as well begin now as at any time. The effort may be wasted in a majority of cases, but the few in which it does good may more than compensate the expense and trouble it involved. Unless teachers take a deep interest in the study, and grow enthusiastic over it, there is not much hope of the scholars becoming sufficiently enthused to cause their parents to take hold of the scheme and put it into practice.

Miss Maud Howe's Tastes. San Francisco Argonau

The genuine Newport belle, for she has lived there since she was a child, is Maud Howe, a daughter of Julia Ward Howe, and who, though verging on 30, is still quite as beautiful as when she sat for the portrait now in the Corcoran gallery at Washington, which attracted so much attention when it was exhibited at the Royal Academy. She is a striking looking woman, with an "exquisitely turned jaw," a perfect neck and an artistic head—round which she binds a wreath of ivy, in the style of the winner of the Olympian games. She is a lady of caprices. At present æsthetic garments are her fad, and she attires herself in limp, loose gowns of dull faded colors which cling about her in a way that would have charmed Rossetti. Dogs are with her, another mania. At one time she ordered all her admirers to cease giving her candies and flowers, and substitute dogs. As her lovers were many, she soon had a menagerie that murdered sleep by howling all night, after the manner of their kind. The genuine Newport belle, for she has

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1885.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO FORT WORTH. Negotiations for placing THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS in Fort Worth at an early hour in the morning are now concluded. In accordance with the promise of THE NEWS to secure regular, early and prompt distributton of this paper at points West, Northwest and Southwest, the management hereby announces that THE NEWS will leave Dallas hereafter, commencing Sunday, Oct. 25, at 5:55 a.m., and arrive at Fort Worth at 7:35 a. m. This will secure connection with the north-bound Fort Worth and Denver and the south-bound Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railways. Two propositions were under consideration-one to employ a special train and the other to have the Fort Worth and Colorado City day passenger train extend its run to Dallas, making the latter place the eastern terminus in future. The first proposition would have been the least expensive to THE NEWS, but the latter was adopted for the double reason that it serves the purpose of THE NEWS just as well as a special train, and gives Dallas an advantage that the whole community, especially the traveling public and business interests, will fully apprebiate. The whole expense of extending the passenger train to Dallas, under the arrangement between THE News and the Texas and Pacific Railway, is borne by THE NEWS. The passenger train will commence running on the new schedule Monday morning, Oct. 26. A special train, engaged for the purpose, will carry THE NEWS to Fort Worth Sunday morning, leaving Dallas and arriving at Fort Worth at the hours above named.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN ON PROHIBI-

TION.

Those Texas statesmen who are laboring so zealously to maintain their connection with the Democratic party, and at the same time to be members in good standing of the Prohibition organization, will no doubt be delighted to learn what Mr. Samuel J. Tilden thinks of prohibition, and the duty of Democrats in relation thereto. Mr. Hal W. Greer, Speaker Foster, Judge Hare, Col. Simpkins, Capt. Gammage and other gentlemen who, while genuine Democracy, insist that prohibition of No. 1. Your little spoils Congressman, the citizen, the State and Nation, will now to impugn or repudiate the Democracy of Mr. Tilden. On the other hand, Congressman Mills, Senator Coke, Seth Shepard, Judge Terrell, Chairman Barry, John Young Gooch, and other distinguished Democrats, who are daily denounced by the Prohibitionists and their organs can call one more eminent Democrat to testify to the wisdom and correctness of their position as Democrats. Heretofore no one has denied that Mr. Tilden is a thorough Democrat, and understands the principles and traditions of the party. He has been a close and intelligent observer of public affairs for more than half a century, and has contributed perhaps more than any other single person to the present primacy of the Democratic party in the government of the country. Recently "The Writings and Speeches of Samuel J. Tilden" were published in book form by the Harpers. This work is edited by John Bigelow, Mr. Tilden's warm personal and political friend, and was revised by Mr. Tilden himself before being sent to the publishers. An interesting feature of the work is a review of coercive temperance, in the form of a letter written by Mr. Tilden in 1855, the principles of which he affirms anew at the present time. The opponents of the sale of alcoholic beverages had shown themselves strong enough to pass a prohibitory act in the State of New York (afterward pronounced unconstitutional), and having also elected their candidate for Governor, it can be seen that the Prohibitionists were prominent factors in the affairs of New York. Mr. Tilden was then a candidate for Attorney General of the State, and might have been materially aided had he seen fit to countenance the desires of the Prohibitionists. But his convictions would not suffer him to make any concessions to gain their support, and in his letter he anticipates the decision subsequently rendered by the court of last resort. After arguing that the prohibitory act violated the State constitution by depriving persons of their property without due process of law, he goes to the root of the matter and contends that all such legislation springs from a misconception of the proper sphere of of government. "It is no part of the duty of the State," says Mr. Tilden, "to eoerce the individual man, except so far as his conduct may affect others, not remotely and consequentially, but by violating rights which legislation can recognize and undertake to protect. The opposite principle leaves no room for individual reason and conscience, trusts nothing to self culture, and substitutes the wisdom of the Senate and Assembly for the plan of moral government ordained by Providence. The whole progress of society consists in learning how to attain by the independent action or voluntary association of individuals those objects which are at first attempted only through the agenlarging that of the individual reason and faithful guardian of its progressive devel-cy of government. It consists in essening the sphere of legislation, and enconscience. Our American institutions have recognized this idea more completely than it has yet been recognized by the institutions of any other people, and the Democratic party has generally been the opment." This shows that Mr. Tilden believes with Senator Coke and Congressman Mills that it is the duty of the Democratic party to combat the principle of prohibition in every form and guise. The letter of

Ar. Thiden concludes as follows:

To-day, while the Democratic party is in faor of sobriety and good morals, it disowns a ystem of coercive legislation which can not roduce them, but must create many serious vils, which violates constitutional guarantees nd sound principles of legislation, invades the rightful domain of the individual judgment and conscience, and takes a step backrard toward that barbarian age when the rages of labor, the prices of commodities, a nan's food and clothing, were dictated to him y a government calling itself paternal.

There is extremely poor comfort in this

ir. Tilden concludes as follows:

There is extremely poor comfort in this for those professed Texas Democrats who recently took the stump in behalf of prohibition, unless they are prepared to establish that the Democracy of Tilden, equally with the Democracy taught by Jefferson, is a spurious article.

REASONS FOR SUSTAINING THE PRESIDENT.

Congressman Wheeler, of Alabama, who seems to be as wise in council as he was dashing in war, has little sympathy for the Eustises, Blackburns and other spoils statesmen of the Democratic party. Gen. Wheeler, in a recent interview, thus expresses himself:

presses himself:

The fact is, our people are getting too impatient. They ought to realize the immense undertaking which this administration has in its hands, and do all they can to help it. We have been struggling and hoping and praying for years to get the Radical misrule taken off us in the South, and have it at last. Under the new administration prosperity is returning to us, and we ought to welcome it instead of quarrelling about the offices. The fact is, and we might as well look the matter squarely in the face, unless our people stop quarrelling about office and set to work to aid in making the present administration a good one, instead of trying to make it a bad one, we are likely to lose the next election and find the Republican rule upon us again in the South. President Cleveland is making a good, strong administration, and if his party and people help him we shall have an era of prosperity and be sure of Democratic success in the next national election. The people generally are satisfied. It is only the politicians and aspirants for political honors that are making the trouble.

These are not only fit words for a states man, but fit words for a clever politician The Democratic party is not yet out of the woods, and unless the principles of Cleveland regarding the administrative affairs of the government are indorsed and approved by the party, the Republicans will be returned to power with a flourish of trumpets in 1888. The Democrats are now squatters in office, as it were, and they will not be permitted to pre-empt their claims unless they come up to the anticipations of the people. Cleveland was not elected on the issue of turning Republicans out of office and putting Democrats in their places; in fact, it was an understood thing during the canvass that only political officers, incompetents, and those who were placed in office as a reward for partisan services, were to be removed. Gen. Wheeler is right when he says that the people generally are satisfied, and that only politicians and aspirants for office are dissatisfied. He might have added, too, that chronic officeholders and chronic office-seekers have very is supremely demanded for the salvation of and his little army of drummers, strikers termination to support the Republican canperceive that it is strictly in order for them | quarter on the tax-payers, don't care a | cluded to do so. This being the case, howcessful or not, so long as they can feed themselves from public fodder. If Mr. Cleveland permits this class of selfseeking and self-helping politicians to affect his course, he can almost assuredly rely upon it that the Democrats will be driven from power in disgrace in 1888. It is not likely, however, that the wails, threats or sulky displeasure of the spoilesmen will affect the course of the President. He has a good understanding of the wide difference between the general public and the mere politicians, and knows that if the people are for him he can well afford to have the politicians against him. The recent success of the Republicans in Ohio has rehabilitated the bloody shirt as a political issue, and if the Republicans succeed in electing Mr. Cleveland's successor. the States of the South can prepare for another period of political persecution, business stagnation, and the demoralizing effect of general uncertainty. For these reasons, instead of embarrassing the President, as Gen. Wheeler pertinently observes, the people of the South should do everything to sustain him and make his administration a success. It is of no use, however, to make an appeal of this kind to the officeholders and office-hunters Nothing but the loaves and fishes can be made to interest them, and hence the people should take their own counsel and their own course in aiding to make the present a good and successful administration. It is certain that if the Democratic party fails to support Mr. Cleveland in his efforts in behalf of administrative reform, the Republicans will stand an excellent chance of returning to power at the next presidential election, and another period of Republican misrule may be anticipated, perhaps even to the extent of attempted disfranchisement at the South, as suggested by Blaine in his Augusta speech, and again by Sherman from the Ohio stump.

Worth will get The Dallas Morning settle the little misunderstanding. NEWS bright and early Sunday morning.

A FANCY shot by the Louisville Commercial:

John Sherman is so pleased with the bloody hirt that he will have it padded and patched, and will wear it in the Senate as an overcoat. Perhaps not.

THE Ingersoll secularists are on the wrong track in wanting to tax church property. It is not by taxation that freedom is advanced.

THAT delightful mugwump organ, the New York Evening Post, finds it rather difficult to ride two horses at once. It professes to support Cleveland's administration while supporting the anti-administration candidate for governor of New York. Here is what the Post says about a recent enterprise of the Republican State Committee of New York:

Committee of New York:

A squad of stump speakers, including Senators Sherman, Logan, Miller and Evarts, Judge Foraker and Congressman McKinley, of Ohio, is to be sent out by the State Committee presently to arouse the voters in behalf of Davenport. It is announced that Senator Logan three. If we may be allowed the suggestion, we think it would be the part of discretion for the committee to be careful where they allow these two orators to make their appearance, unless they talk in a different strain from that of their recent speeches. New York is a very different State from Ohio. We know all about the bloody shirt and the treason-stained saddle of Robert E. Lee here, and nothing that Messrs. Sherman and Logan can tell us will be either new or interesting. If they propose to talk about these things, it would be wisest to let them loose in remote corners of the State, where the people have seen no newspaper nearer in tone to the Weekly Tribune.

What the Interior Papers Say. The Houston Post says:

There is yet no infallible rule to tell when a man is drunk. Even policemen, who ought to be experts, are sometimes deceived, as appears from the following in the Gilmer Mirror:

While Orton's circus was exhibiting here last Saturday, a clown was attempting to ride one of the circus horses when a showman, disguised as a countryman and feigning to be intoxicated, tumbled into the ring and offered his services to the manager. The clown was quick to seize and pitch him from the ring, but to no purpose, for the drunken man picked his flint and tried it again, and tumbled over the rope on his head into the ring. By this time about six of our Gilmer boys, who were on the special police force, seized the unwary sucker and started with him to the cooler. It took several of the showmen some time to explain matters before the drunken man was released. The audience roared with laughter when the matter was fairly understood.

The Texarkana States sees breakers ahead While Orton's circus was exhibiting here

The Texarkana States sees breakers ahead and says they must be avoided, but does not tell exactly how it is to be done:

Behind the differences which are continually creeping into the Democratic ranks in the Northern States, and which should serve as a bugle blast to solidify the party, is the control of the United States Senate. It is an absolute necessity that the administration should be sustained by that important body as an important element in portant body as an important element in the success of the party in the future. This cannot be achieved save by Democratic triumph, which means the reversion of the Republican majority in the Senate so vitally connected with an untrammeled and harmonious administration. Men too often tire before it is time to rest.

They are like horses, and retain the power of being useful longer by moderate and steady work than entire idleness. Too many men are hypochondriacs of the kind who complain that they are incapable of any effort and will attempt nothing. Many a man will remember that he has returned to business with more aversion after a long rest than he felt before relaxing his efforts. Under the improved modes of living in civilized countries at the present day men live longer and have better health than formerly, and it would seem but reasonable that their capacity for work extended further. The Brenham Banner prints a short article which alludes to the change in this respect, which, in the case alluded to at the South, has grown more from the necessity of exertion than the increase in general longevity: were not classed as young men in this country. They were called middled-aged men. But now nothing is more common than to hear a man of even forty-five spoken of as "a promising young lawyer," or "a young statesman."

Many of the best lawyers of the United States have retained their powers until beyond the proverbial three score and ten, and it is so of other professions and occupations. Constant employment is the secret. The German Emperor, Bismarck and Mr. Gladstone are examples of how long men may retain their faculties by using them.

The mystery seems to have been solved at last, and the country will now be pretty generally satisfied that William A. Vincent, of New Mexico, is the 'unfit Judge' whose identity has so long been a matter of doubt. It is altogether probable that the appointment of Dorsev as a jury commissioner by Judge Vincent was simply used as a pretext for his removal by the President. The Judge had previously violated the rules of propriety, as well as, figuratively speaking, spit in the faces of the staunchest Demorats and best citizens of the Territory, by his appointment of Col. Webb as clerk; and his evident determination to disregard the opinions and despise the experience of lawyers who were practicing at the bar when he was wearing swaddling clothes, and to be a law unto himself, demonstrated his entire unfitness for the position he so unexpectable properties. be a law unto himself, demonstrated his entire unfitness for the position he so unexpectedly obtained. It was not reasonable to suppose that a young man with such an almost total lack of legal experience could satisfactorily fill the chief judicial position in New Mexico; and his appointment was no doubt owing to the indorsement of Congressman Springer and the fact that he himself was absent in Europe at the time and the President had no way of forming a personal estimate of his fitness. Just after the publication of the President's letter regarding the "unfit Judge," Mr. Springer paid a visit to Judge Tudge," Mr. Springer paid a visit to Judge Vincent at Las Vegas, and more than one oerson then and there advanced the opinion hat that visit was the outcome of the publication. It now appears certain that such was the case. Unless the President him-self shall authorize a statement to the The Texarkana States reads the fate of

The sentiment of an enlightened era feels no pity for the death-throes of a people who have contributed naught to the civilization, learning or art beauty of the world. There is neither "grandeur nor pathos" in the extinction of the Turkish empire, for it was born of fanaticism, backed by the sword, has existed through all the succeeding centuries by oppression, despotism and ignorance, and will perish in the thundering echoes of war amid its mountain fastnesses, proclaiming that those who have lived by the sword have perished by the same instrumentality, "unwept, unhonored and unsung."

The San Antonio Express says:

If there is not a regular organization there is at least a pretty general understanding among the official bouncees to make a combined movement on the capital in December to wrestle with the Senate to defeat the presidential nominations. Several Democratic Senators who were disappointed in the President's estimate of the size of their heads and political heights are confidently expected to assist in the work for the purreverse to assist in the work for the purpose of "bringing the President to time." The obstacle in the way of the success of the scheme is that there are not enough silly Democratic Senators to overcome the number of sensible Republican Senators, who will not enter into such a reprehensible scheme.

The Eagle Pass Journal says:

The "congressional recommendations" got left in the Piedras Negras consulate appoint ment, conferred upon Mr. Linn, who was not an applicant for it. The Journal says Mr. Simmonds, of Eagle Pass, had the recommendation of our two Senators and Congressman Crain, backed by Gov. Knott and Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky. The Guard says:

Goliad is still in the ring, though "slightly disfigured," in the bout with the San Antonio and Aransas Pass Railway. She wants a railroad and proposes to let no opportunity slip to get one. It is proposed by some of her progressive spirits and seconded, so we learn, by citizens of neighboring eastern counties that a bonus be offered Mr. Huntington to extend his line to Goliad.

Thhe San Antonio Express touches som: of the going-tos as follows:

The man who is going to commence sav-ng "next year" never accumulates any-hing. The man who is going to buckle down to work to make a fortune "next year" never gets rich. If we are always going to make an effort "next year" to get back our lost trade in the northwest, we will never get it. If it is worth striving for it is worth striving for now. The road can be built as cheaply now as "next year," probably cheaper. Then why proscrastinate?

The Brazos Pilot says: Considering the reputation of the last Leg islature, there need be no serious fear of a union of church and State.

The El Paso Star says:

The Secretary of the Treasury has sustained Collector Magoffin in his decision that the law allowing the free importation of cows, mares, etc., into the country for breeding purposes can not be construed to cover such animals introduced for speculative purposes by persons who are not regularly engaged in stock raising, but who import them with the object of selling them on this side of the line to any purchaser who may offer. Hereafter all female animals imported for any other purpose than to be placed on farms or ranches with the unmistakable object of using them solely for breeding will be made to pay the regular duty. This departure of the present collector from the established rule followed by his predecessors brought upon him the unfavorable comment of interested parties, and the support of the department under the circumstances is all the more agreeable to him on that occount. The El Paso Star says: to him on that occount.

Grand Reception at New Orleans Tendered to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers-General Notes.

If conscientious devotion to duty, unflinching courage, constant sobriety, unceasing industry and a manliness commensurate with the most trying emergency and gravest responsibility count for aught in the record of good men, then most certainly those who traverse the iron road must occupy an enviable position among their fellows, and are deserving of more than a passing notice. It is to the skill and vigilance of these men that thousands of human beings and millions of dollars in value is daily committed. It is quite natural, then, that they should have friends everywhere who oppreciate their worth. Particularly in New Orleans has this been especially the case, as the genuineness of the reception tendered the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at Odd Fellows' Hall in that city last Wednesday night will bear ample testimony. The reception in honor of the twenty-second annual convention of the noble order referred to, under the auspices of Crescent Division No. 193, occurred at Odd Fellows Hall on that evening, in the presence of a very large number of ladies and gentlemen. The hall was handsomely decorated, and emblems of the order, flowers and all beautiful things were displayed in tasteful profusion throughout. Seated on the platform were many prominent citizens and distinguished visitors, prominent among which mention might be made of the following: His Excellency Gov. McEnery; P. M. Arthur, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Delop Everett, chaplain of the order; A. C. Hutchinson, president of the Morgan Railroad; S. B. McConnico, of the Illinois Central Railroad; Dr. Markham etc.

THE CEREMONIES of the evening were opened with prayer. Grand Chaplain Delop Everett invoking a blessing upon the proceedings. At intervals during the evening some excellent music was rendered and appreciated all Delegates received a hearty welcome to the city and its institutions through Mr. C. F. Ferry, prominently connected with the Crescent Division of the Brotherhood.

Speeches were delivered by Gov. McEnery, Mayor Guilotte, Grand Chief Engineer Arthur and other distinguished men.

In the course of his speech Chief Engineer Arthur uttered the following striking opinious:

Arthur attered the following striking opinions:
Such is the relation between capital and labor that unless they go hand in hand wreck and ruin is sure to follow. Between capital and labor there oughi to be no warfare, certainly no irreconcilable conflict. Without capital, labor starves; without labor, capital goes to waste. The capitalist and laborer both attend the same market; the capitalist with money to buy labor, and the laborer with strong muscles io sell labor. As between the purchaser and seller there the capitalist with money to buy labor, and the laborer with strong muscles io sell labor. As between the purchaser and seller there may be spirited and healthy bantering, but but there is no need for fighting or quarreling. Labor, however, is a commodity differing from all other articles of trade, especially in this: the purchaser cannot afford to pay much less than it is worth; neither can the seller afford to take much more than it is worth. If the wages of labor are too low, the laborer has cause for dissatisfaction; his hands are then sluggish and unskillful, his heart is unwilling, time and material are wasted, and profits are diminished. If wages are too high capital withdraws, and laborers are unemployed. The interests of both employer and employe require that the wages of labor shall always be as high as the reasonable profits of the business will admit, and no higher. Both parties are equally interested in determining this exact measure, and both parties suffer whenever it is too much or too little. Their interests, then, being common, there is no place for serious conflict when the conditions are intelligently understood; but, on the contrary, the most conffict when the conditions are intelligently understood; but, on the contrary, the most friendly relations and the utmost good feeling should be maintained. During the past year we have been called upon, in accordance with the rules of the Brotherhood, to assist in the adjustment of grievances upon a number of roads, and with but one exception were successful in effecting a settlement of them without resorting to extreme measures. On the Chicago and Western Indiana Belt Road, after exhausting every honorable effort to effect a peace Western Indiana Belt Road, after exhausting every honorable effort to effect a peaceable adjustment of the grievances of the men, we were compelled to resort to a strike in order to obtain justice at the hands of the general manager. Strikes are tolerated only as a last means to free our men from uncessary oppressive treatment—never recommended. Strikes, in the abstract, are an abomination, because always do they encourage mobs and mob violence, and the many suffer for the few, while starvation follows in their wake.

Following Mr. Arthur, Mr. S. B. McConnico, of the Illinois Central Railroad, and president of the North, Central and South American Exposition, was especially invited to address the audience.

Mr. McConnico said he was glad he was

Mr. McConnico said he was glad he was something more than an exposition man, and that he was a railroad man. He had been offered an opportunity through the kind indulgence of the officers of the Brotherhood to say a few kind words, and add one more voice of welcome to that which had already been extended by Gov. McEnery and Mr. Ferry.

He referred to the Exposition project and Mr. Ferry.

He referred to the Exposition project, spoke of its future, what good results were likely to come from it, what a splendid display had been made by the States at the last big show, what benefits had redounded to New Orleans, Louisiana, the United States and the world at large by its marvelousness and completeness; he asked the aid and kindly expressions of the Brotherhood in behalf of the new exposition, and concluded the whole with an invitation to the members of the order with their lady friends to visit the grounds some day during their stay in the city. He said he would ask them to fix the time and the management would provide a steamboat for the occsion. At the conclusion of the speeches an intermission of thirty minutes, after which a grand ball and banquet followed, and in which all participated with a hearty zest.

The proceedings of the convention Thursday were of a strictly private character, so that the press is unable to furnish a detailed report of what occurred within the place of meeting.

COMING TO DALLAS. TEXARKANA, Oct. 23 .- Col. James Aiken, superintendent of the Pacific Express Co., as heretofore stated in The News, is making preparations to move his headquarters from this place to Dallas, where he will be centrally located and better situated for the management of his system. The main office of the Pacific Express Co. has been established here for several years, and in its removal Texarkana feels something of a valuable loss.

THE TEXAS AND ST. LOUIS' QUARTERS. TEXARKANA, Oct. 23 .- As mentioned in a previous dispatch, the officers of the Texas and St. Louis Railway have begun to move their different departments from St. Louis, and in a few days the headquarters of this entire system will be permanently located

RISE IN STOCKS AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—The week just closing has been marked by unusual activity among local speculators in railroad stocks. The brokers' offices have literally swarmed with traders anxious to buy for an advance or to sell for a decline, the former being by far the most numerous. Those who would not touch the stock of certain railways when the price was 20@30 per cent lower than at present, have eagerly clutched it at the advance, and think it cheap. This sudden reversal of opinion is not due to a corres ponding increase in the intrinsic value of the stock, based on increased earnings, but to a belief that such results will be accomplished in the near future. Hence they are willing to discount the benefits that are thus to be derived by paying enhanced prices for the shares. This anxiety to buy is also largely encouraged by the popular belief that the depression that has prevailed in all lines of business early in 1882, or more properly speaking, that started in 1881, is rapidly disappearing, and that the return tide of speculation and prosperity is fast coming in. The recent weekly returns of some of the roads also show fair gains in earnings. The outlook for further improvement in the not distant future is also excellent; and especially so with the lines traversing the Western and Southwestern corn belt, including the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Illinois Central, Chicago and Alton, Rock Island, St. Paul, and Northwestern. These lines, either in whole or part, run through territory having enormous crops of coarse grain. Their live stock business also promises to equal the to a belief that such results will be accomand Northwestern. These lines, either in whole or part, run through territory having enormous crops of coarse grain. Their live stock business also promises to equal the heaviest previous year on record. The two last named will also have a fair wheat and flour business, and the only requisite to insure earnings commensurate with the property transported is a maintenance of rates on a paying basis. The prospects for the last named conditions have also been vastly improved since the first of the current month by the action of the east-bound trunk lines, who have done what the Evening Post correspondent long since claimed they must do, i. e., take the matter of regulating rates in their own hands, and after agreeing upon a certain tariff of charges, notify their subordinate officials that the retention of their positions was dependent upon the strict observance of the agreed rates, instead of going through the farce of making a list that the under officials were at liberty to violate at will, as has been the case for the past two or three years.

Their adhesion to a paying system would also have gone far to strengthen the hands liberty to violate at will, as has been the case for the past two or three years.

Their adhesion to a paying system would also have gone far to strengthen the hands of Western and Southwestern managers, none of whom would have dared to fritter away their earnings in a suicidal rate war while their Eastern connections were earning dividends by enforcing a paying system of charges. So far as regards the present situation of east-bound business, the trunk lines are not making a very promising showing in the volume of property carried East, but as indicated in previous letters the shrinkage is due to the fact that shippers took advantage of the non-paying rates that ruled through September, and rushed property forward to consuming points in liberal quantities, and the surplus thus forwarded must be reduced ere distributors send large orders for additional supplies. It is, however, a mere question of time in regard to the movement of freight; hence if it is sparingly moved this month, it will go all the more freely in future, as the supply of property is ample, and the demand for it an equally assured fact.

CHICAGO MEETINGS.

A number of important meetings will be held in Chicago during the first week of November. On Nov. 5 the roads interested in the classification differences will meet there, as will also the representatives of roads parties to the pass agreement, which will expire Dec. 31, but which will probably be extended and strengthened. It has been found that this agreement is a very good thing for all the roads, who appreciate its import-

On Nov. 6 the general managers of the roads in the Chicago, St. Louis and Missouri River Passenger Association will meet in Chicago to discuss various matters. On this same day a highly important meeting will be held of the Western Freight Association, to discuss the subject of the St. Paul Road's contract with Hammond & Co. in regard to the rate at which the live stock of this firm shall be pooled.

On Nov. 7 the lines in the Colorado-Utah Association west of the Missouri River will be held to settle the differences now affecting the Western part of the pool. There is considerable trouble in this association because of solar water water at the Utah. considerable trouble in this association because of coke rates reported to the Utah pool. The Central Pacific road has, since last April, refused to pay its shortage into the pool, giving as a reason the fact that the Utah contract provides that the Denver and Rio Grande road must not deliver coke from Colorado to Salt Lake City for less than $16 per ton. It is asserted that the Denver and Rio Grande reduced its rate to $13 per ton in April, a statement admitted by that line, which claims that it had the right to quote such rate by virtue of its contract with the Union Pacific road. The Central Pacific road now owes the pool $45,000.

THE ERIE WANTS THE OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI. The latest report is that the New York, Lake Erie and Western Co. is to obtain a lease of the Ohio and Mississippi Road. As to the terms of the lease, it is said that the Erie is to pay the fixed charges of the Ohio and Mississippi, which amount to $1,080,000 a year, and guarantee a dividend of 11/2 per use of circuitous routes is not uniformly cent. on the capital stock of $24,000,000, which would amount to $300,000 more. The Baltimore and Ohio people made a proposition arbitrator shall require that tickets reading | to the directors of the Ohio and Mississippi sale. Article 19 provides that the time fused. It is understood that the Baltimore limits specified in the rate sheets shall be and Ohio proposed to pay the fixed charges limits specified in the rate sheets shall be adhered to, and affixes penalties for neglect to do so. Article 24 specifies penalties for neglect to do so. Article 24 specifies penalties for selling tickets at less than rates prescribed by the agreement. On page 5, paragraph 4, of the proceedings it was resolved that the current rate sheets be continued. It seems to me, therefore, that the current rate sheets published at association points, were made a part of the association points, were made a part of the association of the rates and rules therein printed must be subject to penalty without further ruling from the arbitrator. It follows that while a ticket may be so circuitous as to justify the arbitrator in requiring that it be taken off sale, it may also be in

Jr., is a pretty long-headed sort of a man, one who is said to be a rattling good enemy, and it may be that he is now only pursuing a well formed plan, made before he went to Europe, to wrest the Ohio and Mississippi from the Baltimore and Ohio people, and sorter get even, you know.—Cincinnati Enging.

The report of the Galveston, Sabine and St. Louis Railway shows: Bonded debt, $210,000; earnings, $12,336 for the year.

INDUSTRIAL SUMMARY.

Iron and Steel Prices Tending Upward-Status of Coal, Lumber, Clothing, Etc. Special to The News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 .- Sales of steel rails for the week were 58,000 tons at $30 to $31. Winter orders for 40,000 tons of steel rails and late 1885 orders for 18,000 tons have been placed this week at the same prices. Also 6000 tons of bridge iron and 1200 tons of wrought iron pipe. Bars, sheets and plates are firm but inactive. Sheet is scarce. Nails are $2 25 at mill and nominally $2 50 for tide water delivery. A further advance is probable. Special brands of pig iron are in urgent demand and heavy orders for future delivery amounting to 30,000 tons were placed this week at outside figures.

Coal-Manufacturing, railroad and domestic demand for anthracite and bituminous coal is stronger. Contracts for 80,000 tons of anthracite have been placed for early delivery. Stove and chestnut stocks are low. Cars are scarce. Coastwise freights from Philadelphia to Boston are $1 10. The vessel owners have 95 per cent of the carrying capacity pledged to an advance of freights Jan. 1. Buyers are crowding in orders, and wholesale rates have advanced 10 to 15 cents on actual selling prices. Large bituminous orders are coming in both in tidewater and lake markets at 5 to 10 cents advance.

Wool-The manufacturers and dealers, who have been quietly buying up all good medium grades of wool for months past, have agents out with orders for unlimited supplies at current prices. A further rise supplies at current prices. A further rise is probable on medium fleeces. The Pennsylvania and Ohio clip is 15 to 20 per cent behind last year, while the West Mississippi wool region is 10 per cent ahead. All Eastern wool markets are apprehensive of higher prices and manufacturers declare present prices forbid dearer raw material. Prices advanced this week in all primary markets. Foreign wools will advance next.

Prices advanced this week in all primary markets. Foreign wools will advance next week, but will protect American buyers against extreme prices.

Lumber—Stocks and shipments of white and yellow pine and spruce, in view of a slight restriction in distribution, is weakening prices on all excepting best grades of lumber. The expectation of a general improvement in prices is not borne out by transactions, either here or at other tide water markets. Offers from the Northwest and South show considerable anxiety on the and South show considerable anxiety on the part of manufacturers to enter the winter season with lighter stocks.

Clothing and Textiles—Heavy orders are

Clothing and Textiles—Heavy orders are pouring in and stocks are going down rapidly. Worsted and woolen goods have advanced slightly. The season's business is in excess of last year. Seamless hosiery goods are in active demand and spring orders will probably show higher prices, be cause of the advancing prices in yarn. Textile manufacturers are ordering much improved machinery. Carpet orders are crowding mills. Cotton goods are in abundant supply and demand has progreptibly dent supply and demand has perceptibly de-

Boots and Shoes—Tanners and leather dealers are taking steps to effect a 10 per cent advance in prices, and boot and shoe manufacturers in many centers are anticipating requirements at current prices, giving all markets the appearance of unusual health and activity. Most boot and shoe manufacturers are crowded with orders because of the hesitancy of retail dealers in the season to cover probable demands. Between the probabilities of higher prices labor and higher prices leather, the chances are in favor of higher prices spring stock of medium goods.

The evidences of improving demand and prices in several of the leading industries are encouraging, but liable to misconception. The influences at work will probably restore prices to a normal limit, which was ots and Shoes-Tanners and leather

The depression in textiles lessened wool production and normal demand is restoring prices. The same course, assisted by trade organization, is improving the leather and the boot and shoe industries, as well as nearly all others where unadvised curtailment of production was maintained for months, resulting as it has in a general advance in wages, or demands for an advance, because of the crowding of requirements somewhat suddenly on the various centres omewhat suddenly on the various centres

MEN WHO WRITE RISKS.

Disruption of the Chicago Underwriters' Association Averted.

As was expected from the importance of the business to be considered, the meeting of the Chicago Fire Underwriters' Association last Wednesday drew out a very large representation of the membership. It was an adjourned meeting from last week to hear the report of the committee appointed to investigate the advisability of so amending the constitution and by-laws of the association as to allow members to pay a commission of 20 per cent to brokers for business obtained in the suburbs on dwellings ness obtained in the suburbs on dwellings, and to expunge from section 8 of the bylaws the clause: "Brokers desiring admission to this association must be persons whose principal business is that of fire insurance," thus opening the chance to any one to solicit business and obtain commissions.

The chairman of the committee read the first section, which provided for the 20 per cent limit in commissions. Judge Davis first spoke upon the question, taking strong ground against the increase, and stating that the entire rescinding of the rates on stores and dwellings would be a lesser evil than the adoption of this section. He referred also to the lack of principle involved in the proposed letting in of everybody to the ranks of class 2, the brokers. The association had agreed from the beginning that only those whose principal business was insurance should become members. The brokers had, on this pledge in the constitution, joined, paid their money, signed the constitution, and subscribed to all the rules of the association. To let in everybody now, whether an insurance broker by profession or not, would be a piece of bad faith to which he could not subscribe, and which the association could not adopt and live. Others spoke in the same vein. The very firms who had demanded this amendment were those who, during the past years in the old Board of Underwriters, had been most restrictive on the brokerage question, had even opposed any system of brokerage, and who had lost business through the fact that the regular brokers had not favored them. It soon became very plain that the adherents of the proposed amendment were few and far between. tion, joined, paid their money, signed the

A vote was taken on the commission clause, and only nine members favored it. This so effectually displayed the opposition to the second clause letting down the bars to the general public, that the rest of the report was laid on the table indefinitely. An amendment to the amendment, permitting only insurance brokers and real estate and loan agents to join class 2.1 was not seconded. Two firms only have sub-agents of the latter class, and it was the sense of the majority that inasmuch as the association had refused to change the rule it should be strictly enforced, and the two firms impeached for violating the by-laws. The fact that, as stated in the Inter Ocean of Sunday last, the brokers had held an indignation meeting and formulated a series of resolutions to be presented to the associa-tion may have influenced some of the votes against the amendment, but most of the members evidently believed that its adopt under any circumstances.

The threats of certain influential members of class 1 that they would withdraw uness the amendment was adopted will not, in the opinion of most of the underwriters, be carried out. A number of them go so far as to say that the adoption of the amendments proposed would have resulted ultimately in the destruction of the association.

THE COURTS.

The Mayor's Court yesterday was up to its yes in business, the weight of which consisted in punishing by a fine of $5 each, fifteen young girls legally called vagrants. They were not of God's poor kind, out were as so many spectres drifting down the long, dim vistas of the broad road that the good book says was opened up for the the good book says was opened up for the accommodation of the devil and his angels. As Acting Mayor Spellman imposed their license, he drew a deep breath like a man who loves his church and bleeds for the wickedness of the perverse generation.

John Smith, whose name will never die out, was fined the regulation amount for getting drunk, and Joe Shelby forfeited $1 for assaulting a party named Bishop.

A mysterious looking colored woman, dressed in a Mother Hubbard which flowed behind her like a spanker sail in a dead calm, was around last evening looking for a calm, was around last evening looking for a Justice of the Peace. She was advised it she wanted a Coroner to go to Justice Schuhl, and if she wanted to marry, Justice Kendall was the expert to hunt up. She said she believed she would hunt up Judge Kendall, and started off to do so, but as the marrying judge had gone fishing she failed to find him.

Splicing Human and Dog's Bones.

It was reported the other day that Dr. C. W. Trueheart, a surgeon in Galveston, Tex., has accomplished a most remarkable case of bone grafting. His patient had lost over two inches of his left clavicle, the bone which pins the shoulder and breast bones, by a gun-shot accident. The lacking section distorted and disabled one side of him, and the doctor decided to try and fill the gap with pieces of dogs' bone. This he did by a series of operations that were far more series of operations that were far more painful to the man than to the dogs contributing the bone. From twenty or thirty dogs the surgeon nipped bits of bone by cutting through the flesh, and one of these was used every few days to build out the clavicle. It required cutting and burning almost constantly to keep the flesh from healing over the wound, and this painful operation was continued for a and ourning almost constantly to keep the flesh from healing over the wound, and this painful operation was continued for a month. A fair proportion of these grafts grew fast, and in that way the space of more than two inches was nicely filled in. The patched clavicle is said to be as serviceable as its mate, though not a match in shape. A reporter for the Mail called on Dr. Charles E. Laning, the well known anatomist of the Hahneman Medical College, at his office in Central Music Hall, and asked for his opinion of the case as reported. The doctor said that there was nothing against it theoretically, and that as the clavicle is one of the most vascular bunes in the body, its great blood supply would greatly assist the operation. While in a case of this kind, where the bone is so near the surface, bone grafting might be resorted to with success, he did not believe that it would be practicable in the case of a leg or an arm, where so much flesh would have to be cut away continually, as the slow growth would likely result in the death of the patient in either of those cases. those cases.

THE TIME FOR WOOING.

When May with apple blossoms
Her loving cup is brewing,
With beams and dews and winds that get
The honey from the violet,
With hopes on which the heart is set,
Oh, then's the time for wooing,
For wooing, and for suing,
Door led the time for wooing!

When August calls the locust
To sound the year's undoing,
And, like some altar dressed of old
In drapery of cloth of gold,
High pastures thick with broom unfold.
On, then's the time for wooing,
For wooing, and for suing,
Dear lad, the time for wooing!

When brown October pauses,
The ripened woodland viewing,
And all the sunny forests spread
Their fallen leaves, as heart's blood red,
A carpet fit for brides to tread,
Oh, then's the time for wooing,
For wooing, and for suing,
Dear lad, the time for wooing!

Oh, listen, happy lover,
Your happy fate pursuing;
When fields are green, when woods are sere,
When storms are white, when stars are clear,
On each sweet day of each sweet year,
Oh, then's the time for wooing,

For wooing, and for suing,
Dear lad, the time for wooing!

A CHAT WITH MME. NEVADA.

The American Girl Talks Airily About Music and Roasting Ears.

New York World. When the steamer Etruria of the Cunard Line arrived at her pier, shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday morning, Mme. Nevada-Palmer tripped down the gang-plank as lightly as a school girl. She looked the picture of health, and her eyes glistened as if she had been materially benefited by the sea air. She was attired in a gray worsted traveling suit, trimmed with silk and silver ornaments, and wore a hat and sacque to match. Her husband, a robust Englishman of fine physique, took an active interest in the manner in which the prima donna's twenty-five trunks were handled. Mme. Nevada seated herself on a big pile of trunks and bundles and watched the ransacking of her rich laces, silks and satins, which were unceremoniously tumbled about by the customs officers.

When the last trunk had been examined Mme. Nevada and party drove to the Everett House. They were escorted by Mr. C. A. Chizzola, her manager, who met the party on the pier and welcomed the little traveler to her native shores. At the hotel entrance she stepped from the carriage and looked up and down the street, and glancing toward Union Square, smiled as the great load of baggage appeared bearing the large, black letters, "Nevada," on every trunk. She was the last of the party to meet the hotel. Mr. Chizzola seemed in the sest of spirits and was delighted to find his prima donna suffering so little from the flects of the voyage. He said that he should not feel quite easy until the rest of he company, who are due to-morrow on the French steamer Canada, had arrived.

It was not until 8 o'clock that Mme. Neada touched the little electric bell in her room and ordered her dinner. A few moments later she entered her private dining hall on the arm of her husband, Dr. Palmer, followed by Mr. Chizzola, Miss Ellis and a few friends who had gathered to welcome her. While she was dining a World reporter sent up his card, asking at what time Mme. Nevada would be at leisure. Without waiting to make an appointment traveler to her native shores. At the hotel what time Mme. Nevada would be at leisure. Without waiting to make an appointment she requested him to join them at dinner with the exclamation:

"Oh, I am too glad to see anybody here and most of all one of the friends who have always spoken so well of me. Dear me, do sit down; you have written so much about me while I have been away that I ought to thank you for not forgetting me. You know I am only an American girl and am glad to get home. I believe I am behaving absurdly. I was very happy abroad, but after all, I am glad to get back. Perhaps I shouldn't be if I hadn't brought the best of what I saw with me. You know what I mean, for not ten minutes ago I read a lovely description of my wedding in this very morning's paper. Lucy Hooper, who writes those nice little letters, is a very, very dear friend of mine, and she has given a beautiful picture of the wedding. I wish Lucy was here now."

"I felt some hesitation about sending my

"I felt some hesitation about sending my aard to you," remarked the reporter, "when the reports from broad that you didn't like American news-recalled the fact of the reports from 'broad that you didn't like American newspapers."

"Did you really believe all that nonsense? And after all they have said and done for me? Dear, dear me! What dreadful things the papers say? Why, I never in my life said one word of the things they said I did. I remember one dreadful thing reported about Mr. Schwab. Why, I don't even remember him, and shouldn't know him if I saw him. I did meet him, I think, butwell, there, I know you don't believe those stories. How awfully foolish it would be for me to leave here, where everyone did everything for me, and then go over somewhere and tell all those dreadful stories. No, indeed; and I wish you would say so. Just say that I am not so ungrateful as all that. Everyone tells me I am growing plump and in a little while I'll be like all the famous singersbig, big, big! And I think so myself. Pleasant, isn't it? Don't ever sing, and then you won't get fat."

At this point the waiter served a dish of sweet corn on the cob. Mme. Nevada seized an ear, exclaiming:

"Oh, oh, I'll eat you, every one. Look, papa? Isn't this worth coming way an ear, exclaiming:

"Oh, oh, I'll eat you, every one. Look, papa? Isn't this worth coming way across the water for? I'd rather have that plate of corn than all the rest of the dinner. You needn't laugh, Mr. Chizzola, for you have had it all summer and this is the first corn I've seen since I was in Germany. They give it to the pigs there and the papers made fun of me because I ate it. I suppose they thought I was a pig—they would if they saw me now, wouldn't they? Mr. Palmer, I am going to teach you to eat this, for I shall order it three times a day until it gets too hard to eat.

The Locksmith's Art. Chicago News.

"Tell you something about locksmiths!" exclaimed an old craftsman, dolefully; "there are none any more. The trade dead. Locks are all made now by machinery, except, perhaps, safe and prison locks; those are handmade because they afford greater security than the other kind. Time was when the lockmaker was a smith and bellhanger as well, and the trade was a good one; but it is all changed now, and we do nothing now except repairing, or occasionally duplicating a key that has been lost.

"The factory made lock has taken the place of the hand made article and driven us out of the business. Now, perhaps, twenty men are required to make a lock which was formerly the work of one man. These men superintend machinery by which certain parts of the lock are made. One man handles a punch and cut out the tumb lers; another make the sliders; the springs are made by another, and so on, until all the are made by another, and so on, until all the parts are ready to be put together. None of these men could make a lock without assistance from other workmen, and they have no knowledge of the principles of locks. "Before the era of machinery all locks were made by hand. That is why old locksmiths understand their business so well. But there are very tew smiths of the old school in the business now. Most of them have quit making locks, and are making sewing machines. The principles on which sewing machines are made can be easily understood by any locksmith, and there is more money to be made in the new business.

of the works. The key hole being large he would insert a wire, the end of which being covered with wax would receive an impression of the style of key required to open the lock. It was an easy matter to make a key after the model in wax, so that almost all the old locks could be picked with but little difficulty.

'The patent lock of to-day, requiring a flat key, defies any attempt at picking the works, because the key hole is so small and the slots are too numerous. For that reason skeleton keys are useless to thieves nowadays, and cracksmen rely for success principally on their possession of duplicate keys.

"'(Jail work,' as it is known to the trade, is the only branch of our business where machinery is not used.

"All the locks for jails and penitentiaries are made of wrought-iron and constructed with from two to five tumblers finished off smooth on the inside and held together by steel screws and brass clamps. The parts when thus joined are absolutely air-tight and the only opening in the lock is the keyhole. Such a lock is as durable as can be made.

made.

"The principle of the modern lock is very old. I have a book here which gives a description of a lock found among the ruins of the great temple of Karnac and which was in use more than forty centuries ago. The leading principles of this lock have served as the foundation for most of the inventions of recent times. The locksmiths of China, we are told, had, centuries before the birth of Christ, perfected a lock out of which a sharp bamboo thorn would dart and strike the hand of any one wrongfully tampering with it. The end of this bamboo thorn was steeped in a poisonous decoction, and, should the luckless thief escape death, he would be marked for life. But this story is hardly entitled to full belief for the reason that, as the Chinese themselves claim, gunpowder was manufactured by them at the time, a celestial safe-blower could easily render the patent lock harmless by the aid of a few grains of powder.

"The mediæval locks were among the most elaborate and delicately contrived specimens of these articles ever produced. They were enveloped in steel, covered with beads and floral designs, and were mostly found on the doors of the ancient cathedrals or in the magnificent cabinets that have been the marvel of succeeding ages." The principle of the modern lock is very Farewell Brother Downs.

St. Louis Republican Special. Boston, Oct. 20 .- The Bowdoin Square Baptist Church meeting held to-night was the liveliest ever known in the history of that or any other church in Boston. It began at 8 o'clock and lasted until midnight. Pastor Downs was there in all the glory of a span new broadcloth coat and an extra clean shave. When the meeting was called to order he smiled, but when it adjourned he did not. Even his adamantine confidence had received a severe indentation. Mrs. Downs was there too, with their two pretty little girls for moral effect. One of the pastor's friends suggested that the moral effect of the discussion might be bad for the children. Dr. Downs acted upon the advice and sent the little girls out of church and home. About the same time the newspaper reporters were sent out of church, but they did not go home. They climbed adjacent trees, hid in convenient corners and took in as much of the proceedings as possible. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Tabor were there, but they had plenty of representation. All the members of the church who went off in a huff eight months church who went off in a huff eight months ago returned to-night and joined in the fight against Downs.

For an hour and a quarter the discussion waxed hot. Church officers and plain privates applied all manner of epithets to one another, and every few minutes one of them would forget that he was not at a ward caucus, and use language which would have been more appropriate in the dance-house a block away. Providence interfered at 9:15, and let the Special News Co.'s reporter, who was perched upon a hatchway taking notes, down through a chute into the coal cellar. He landed with such a tremendous dull thud that it closed the discussion. A committee of six found him sitting in a bunker, with his pencil in hand. This incident caused the cleaning out of all the reporters except a Globe man, who had crawled into the big fireplace in the Sunday school room and hid in the chimney.

The discussion was resumed at 9:45 and was tame in comparison to what it had been. Twice Mr. Downs came out of the church, hatless and breathless, and rushed over to the Revere House to consult Lawyer Butterworth. About 11 o'clock a vote was had upon the question, "Shall the Rev. W. W. Downs be requested to resign from the pastorate of this church?"

After considerable difficulty a ballot was taken. When the vote—102 in the affirmative to 98 in the negative—was announced, Mr. Downs jumped axcitedly upon a chair ago returned to-night and joined in the fight

There was considerable discussion before Downs' opponents consented to second ballot. The second ballot was 118 affirmative to 98 negative.

Mrs. Downs went off into a dead faint Mrs. Downs went off the a dead faint when the vote was given out, and Mr. Downs labored over her with tears in his eyes until she recovered consciousness. The Anxiety About the President.

New York World Special. WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The President is very averse to doing any more than he has done to express to the public his desire for the election of Mr. Hill. He does not understand why more should be asked of him. To the persistent people who think that he should come out over his own signature, he has only this to say-that such persistence looks like doubting his word. He considers the statement on the subject which he dictated to his private secretary as fully covering the case in hand. Those who are not satisfied with that statement he believes would not be satisfied with any statement he could make. Secretary Manning's letter was written with his full consent. The President, Mr. Manning and Mr. Whitney will go home to vote on election day for Mr.

Gov. Hill has made one or two appeals here for the administration people to use their good offices in establishing a union ticket in New York City. He made this appeal before the County Democracy had nominated its ticket. He argued that Mr. Manning or Mr. Whitney could persuade the Democrats of New York to unite upon one local ticket even if the President did not care to interfere. Both of these gentlemen felt compelled to follow the President's example of non-interference. This refusal to the only request that Mr. Hill has made is probably at the bottom of the renewal of the stories of the indifference of the administration to Mr. Hill's success. It is said tonight in behalf of the administration that the President has given the press one statement of his position. He has announced, through Secretary Manning, his purpose to make the trip-to Buffalo to vote for Mr. Hill and his earnest desire for Hill's election. A gentleman near to the President said tonight. Gov. Hill has made one or two appeals A gentleman near to the President said to

"I don't know that any President has ever done more than this. Certainly none recently has done as much. I know that the Democratic State Committee of New York and Gov. Hill himself think the President's declaration already made ought to be regarded as sufficient."

But there are very iew smiths of the old school in the business now. Most of them have quit making locks, and are making sewing machines. The principles on which sewing machines are made can be easily understood by any locksmith, and there is more money to be made in the new business.

"Yes, the modern lock is superior to the old-fashioned one, and for this reason it is harder to pick. The old lock was made to accommodate a large key, so that no matter how fine the construction inside an accomplished cracksman could always get an idea

THE APPELLATE COURTS.

COURT OF APPEALS. T. J. Harrison vs. Western Union Teleliable for negligence in the transmission of proved that the company was notified of its message for transmission. If so notified, the company will be liable for actual damages. Otherwise it is liable only for nominal damages. Simple notice of the fact that a cipher dispatch contains an order for goods is sufficient notice that it is of value and importance. Such general notice is all that is required. Parties who use the telegraph as a mode of communication are not to the receiver by reason of error therein, such sums as he may pay to the receiver are voluntary and gratiutous and cannot be recovered over from the telegraph company.

Arthur Lloyd vs. the State, from Jones County. Hurt J.—The facts constituting the escape should be set out in the report of the Sheriff made under articles 845-6, C. C. P., so that this court may inspect the same and determine whether they constitute an escape. No conclusions or impressions of the Sheriff or other officer making the report of the escape will be indulged. The meaning of the word "escape," as used in article 845, C. C. P., is its ordinary and popular meaning; therefore, to constitute an escape under said article the prisoner must actually and completely withdraw himself from custody. The facts stated are: The prisoner got out of jail and was captured about 200 or 300 yards therefrom, and returned to and into said jail within fifteen or twenty minutes of the time he got out. Held: These facts do not show an escape within the meaning of article 845, C. C. P. Motion granted and aopeal reinstated.

Edward Foster vs. the State, from Dallas County. Willson J.—The opinion in this case contains no question of law. The court in reversing the case and remanding the cause simply holds the evidence entirely insufficient to support the conviction. Reversed and remanded.

Ben Lane vs. the State, from San Augustine County. Willson J.—This is a conviction for murder of the first degree, for which the death penalty was assessed. There is no question of law raised in the case or noticed in the opinion. The Judge thoroughly and ably discusses in the opinion all the facts upon which the conviction was had, and holds them convincing as to appellant's guilt, and that the death penalty was properly assessed. THE DECLINE IN SILVER. The New York Shipping List of Oct. 17, 1885, says: The recent decline in the value of silver 200,000,000 standard dollars stored away in the vaults of the United States Treasury, but furthermore has cheapened the products of East-Europe. Yesterday's cables say that on this account there has been a heavy increase in the exportation of wheat from India. Enormous shipments are pending and vessels have been chartered for the shipment of 100,000 fons before January. There is also food for reflection in this information for speculators and producers of wheat in this country. With a new crop coming to market, the exports thus far have been unusually light, the export buyers having been quite indifferent to the fluctuations of this market, and with good reason, for they have been enabled to buy cheaper elsewhere. It looks very much as if we were holding up the umbrella for the benefit of some one else who are holding wheat for an advance may find out their mistake. A cable dispatch from Calcutta says: "The difference in the prices of wheat in English and home markets created by the low price of silver and the fall in exchanges affords the Indian farmers a profit of 2½ per cent for lots exported over the cash price of lots for home consumption. This fact has greatly stimulated the inquiry for freight room for the exportation of wheat." xportation of wheat from India. Enormous attempts to stem the downward course of values, but to no avail. All prominent stocks were freely sold, and went downward with every transaction. Reading and Lake Shore were especially pressed for sale, and were conspicuously weak. At this hour the entire list was down 1/202 per cent.

The tables were completely turned after 12:30. The bulls went in and bought heavily, and soon had prices on the upward turn. The buying continued throughout the afternoon, and many of the morning sellers, apprehensive of a squeeze, rushed to cover. Prices went steadily up and closed generally at the top figures.

The great advances were recorded in some of the specialties. The generally active list closed from ¼ to 1¼ per cent higher, Sales amounted to 461,500 shares.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Outside influences favored lower prices to-day, cables being dull, the weather still fine and receipts large. But at the decline caused by those facts there was a good demand and Kent and Hutchison were named as buyers of large quantities. This turned the tide, although it was reported that both flour and wheat were selling at reduced prices in Minneapolis. The market ruled steady all day and closed firm. ST. LOUIS LIVE STOCK MARKET. ST. LOUIS, Oct. 23.—Cattle—Receipts 439 head; shipments 834 head. The markets were very dull this morning and only a few small bunches shipments $34 head. The markets were very dull this morning and only a few small bunches changed hands on local account. Fresh receipts were about half a dozen cars, but a fair supply remained over from yesterday, though they were not of a description to induce trading, being of a very common grade and practically below the requirements of all classes of buyers. Values for all kinds of cattle from the very best to the most interior are exceedingly low just now at all points; lower, in fact, than at any time this season, and compared with a week ago may be quoted fully 60c to 70c off all around. The demand this morning was confined almost exclusively to butchers' stock. Dressed beef people and shippers could find nothing to suit them, the supply of really decent cattle being of the smallest.

The Morning News.

THE CITY.

To Newsdealers and Subscribers.

As will be seen by announcement of a special train in another column, subscribers and newsdealers along the line of the Fort Worth and Denver City and the Gulf, Colo rado and Santa Fe Railways will receive THE SUNDAY NEWS on the day of publication, instead of the second day, as here-

No one is authorized to make any purchases for our account or have work performed for any department of our establishment without the written order from the business manager, and these orders should invariably accompany monthly statements rendered at the close of each month. A. H. BELO & Co. Dallas, Tex., Oct. 16, 1885.

To the Public.

It is the desire of the management of THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS to have that paper on sale, in sufficient quantities to supply the demand, on all railway trains running into or connecting with trains to and from Dallas. The traveling public are respectfully requested to bear this fact in mind and to report to the business department any failure on their part in being able to purchase copies of the paper in the manner indicated, giving date, train and other particulars.

To City Subscribers.

We beg to announce that the failure of our city circulator to call upon a number of citizens for their subscriptions is not due to oversight, but is the result of his finding it necessary, for the time being, to devote his entire time and attention to the systematizing of the routes, and the supervision of his carriers, to insure the prompt delivery of the paper each morning to the subscribers already obtained This work has prevented him from making a thorough canvass of the city. He expects, however, to resume this canvass this morning and continue daily until every section of the city has been visited. In the meantime be pleased to send names and addresses to the counting room, where they will receive prompt attention. Subscribers failing to receive their papers with regularity and promptitude will please notify us.

BREEZES FROM THE BRAINERY

The Pure and Patient Proofreader is Assailed and Defended.

Every inhabitant labored in the brainery of THE NEWS yesterday noon. The paragrapher was half-soling some ancient jokes that the weather editor had translated for him out of a German almanac. The religious editor was turning one of Bob Ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses" into a Sunday school hymn, while the society editor was busy with the tortures of sewing a button on one of his principal garments. Over near the stove the headline heathen and the rumbler were engaged in a spirited contest spitting at the head of a carpet tack for the cigars, and the commercial editor, as referee, was watching their marksmanship through his nickle-plated eveglasses. The city editor, with drawing utensils scattered over his desk, was sketching a bobtailed alligator, typifying dengue in the act of absorbing a wide-eyed infant with bow legs and a dimpled shirt front, intended to represent the ghost editor.

Presently the holy hush that erstwhile pervaded the apartment was rudely split up the back and shattered by the horse reporter, who lumbered into the room with his mouth full of rusty nails, an old horseshoe in one hand and a four-pound bowlder in the other. The intruder, without any regard for decencies, began to attach the talisman of luck with much loud hammering to the back of his reclining chair.

"Put aside that rusty trinket
That some dray mule used to wear!
"Tis an emblem of the voudous; Fire it through the bay windaire," growled the ghost editor, who was reading up on mortuary statistics and didn't want to be disturbed.....

to be disturbed.

The horse reporter stopped, dropped his rock and nails on the floor and retorted:

"Shut your head, old skull and crossbones,
For your voice sounds like a snore.
Learn this truth, bald ghosty: 'Never Take the horseshoe...'"

"Mash that chestnut!" interrupted the

"Mash that chestnut!" interrupted the Rumbler.

"How long has that been out of the hospital!" queried the weather editor.

"Hagar got that off on Abraham," suggested the religious editor.

"That mummy was dug out of the pyramids," put in the headline heathen.

"Only hyenath dig up dead joketh," lisped the society editor.

But the horse reporter never fainted. He never even shied. He backed his ears, threw open his mouth and whinnied.

"You fellows think yourselves a porcupinery, and you're only a scrub menagerie. It would have pleased you better for me to antic with the monkey than to monkey with the antique?"

There is no telling what damage this par-

the antique?"
There is no telling what damage this paralytic stroke of the equine editor would have done had not the electric current been turned aside by the risk reporter, who rushed in among the multitude with a paper in his hand, a tremer in his voice, a cold consternation eozing out at every one of his pores visible to the naked eye."
"Fellow criminals," he sobbed, sinking a waste basket, "I have been ruined-lered." 'Why don't you bleed, then?" asked the unfeeling Rumbler.

"My copy has been butchered, I mean, oh man of the iron jaw!" explained the risk reporter, getting mad.

"Oh, is that all?" came from all hands

'Here's the way I wrote that account of the rescue of a beautiful girl from the fire last night, went on the insurance fiend: A thrill of horror passed through the crowd. A mournful girl's face appeared at the window, and a cry for help through t. e fog of fiame and smoke turned all'eyes in that direction. Suddenly James Porter, a gallant policeman, placed a fludder against the burning building, mounted it, and, clasping the fainting maiden around the waist, landed her without bustle or confusion upon the ground, while roars of applause ascended on high.

"Now listen—listen how they murdered

"Now listen-listen how they murdered my metaphors up stairs in the butchery. Here's what the proof reader made me say in the paper this morning." And the in-surance fiend wept as he read aloud:

surance fiend wept as he read aloud:

A throe of hiccoughs parafyzed the crowd.
A mullato girl, flerce, ungeared as the rainbow on the sky, forced the yelp of a dog that was lame and broke, turned old eggs in that direction. Lovingly Jimjams mania potu, a galivanting politician, placed his luggage against the leaning doggery, manipulated it, and, clasping the fascinating mulatto around the wrist, landed her on her withered bustle, though confused, upon the grass, while showers of apples descended on the fly.

While the ghost editor founds the gurls

While the ghost editor fanned the curls back from the fevered brow of the swooned back from the fevered brow of the swooned Risk reporter with the horse reporter's overshoe, and the Rumbler mopped his alabaster brow with the office towel, the head line heathen remarked:

"Why, that youth is too tender to en dure the perils of a print shop. My copy has been massacred in every type butchery between New York and Galveston. Only the other day when the telegram came from Pecos City that Gov. Gibbs had donated a lot to the first baby girl to be born in the new town. I Gov. Gibbs had donated a lot to the first baby girl to be born in the new town, I wrote over it the headline: 'Baby Girl Bonused by Barney Gibbs at Pecos,' and when it got through the butchery it read: "'Baby Girl bounced by Barney Gibbs from a pay car.'"
"That's nothing to the way they done up are chitagen."

my obituary," commenced the ghost editor, but the horse reporter interrupted him with:
"The printers say you compose in the dead languages, Ghosty; write in the Chinese and spell in the style of the aboriginary."

Here the speaker drew from the lining of Here the speaker drew from the lining of his hat a piece of yellow paper jagged on the edges, and about 3½ inches wide by 4 long and handed it around among the beavers of the brainery. "That's one of Hazen's bulletins," guessed the weather editor. "It's an old cipher dispatch," conjectured the headling heatten.

"It's an old cipher dispatch," conjectured the headline heathen.

The paragrapher pronounced it a prescription, and the Rumbler declared it a map of Pecos City, while the city editor, who is a college graduate, swore it was a cryptogram written in Greek with a Latin key.

"A little learning is a dengued thing, ladies and gentlemen," resumed the horse reporter. "That fragment is the ghost editor's contribution to literature. A heathen Chinee did my mother give this an-tor's contribution to literature. A heathen Chinee did my mother give this ancient relic. Guess where I got it. Wah Sing is the celestial who b'iles my shirts. Every time I send in my soiled garments he gives me a ticket with tea box writing all over it. When I take my linen out of his shirt stewery I have to return the ticket. The other day I asked old Ghosty to write me out a due bill for the various sums he has been borrowing from me for the last month. I really didn't for the various sums he has been borrowing from me for the last month. I really didn't want it to sue on; I only wanted it to sleep on. He gave me the desired instrument of collection. Going home that day, I passed by Wah Sing's, gave him his ticket, as I thought, and he strung it on a white string, along with several other clothes tags. When I got to my room and was changing my vest, I found another Chinese laundry ticket in my pocket and took it to Wah Sing. The Celestial's brow was contorted. He got the first ticket I had given him off the string and laidit alongside the other and looked, first at one-and then at the other, shook his head at one and then at the other, shook his head and grunted out:

"Um two tickets so much likee as um two blitches legs."
"Finally a bright look came into Wah's eyes. He picked the two collections of hieroglyphics up, and smelled each one carefully, and selected the smaller piece of paper.

did not seem to be sick, but, as the sequel shows, he was sick of life, had reversed his oars and was pulling for the cataract. What the cause of his weariness was probably the world will never know. It was evident that he had no employment, was among strangers, and, being too proud to beg, was experiencing the discomforts of a desert and a blank. The human mind is a queer machine that runs in no two heads alike, and poor Barman's mental apparatus was not of the brass-mounted kind. Rather than stand the ordeal of being considered an idler, he made his quietus with arsenic and flew to a fate of which he was ignorant but which he supposed to be no worse than that he Important Conference.

Mr. Wm. M. Weigley, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Edward B. Cowles, of New York, arrived in the city yesterday evening, for the purpose of conferring with the directors of the Texas Trunk Railroad in regard to its purchase and extension. Correspondence has already passed between the parties and matters have progressed so far that the presence of Mr. Weigley and Mr. Cowles, representing the parties proposing to pur-chase, in this city to look into the exact con-chase, in this city to look into the exact condition of affairs was necessary. They were expected, and a long conference was held in the parlors of the Windsor Hotel last night between Messrs. Weigley and Cowles and the officers and directors of the road. The conference was a "talk," and no business was transacted, but the "talk" was so satisfactory to both sides that the formal transfer of the road will probably be made within the next three days. The Trunk, as it stands, would be no investment, and a purchase means an extension to the pineries of southeast Texas, and to a railroad connection with Sabine Pass. The benefit to Dallas would be incalculable, and everyone is desirous that the sale should be made.

Stolen Horse Recovered.

About six weeks ago a horse belonging to a thrifty colored man named Jones, residing at Miller's Switch, about three miles south of the city, suddenly disappeared.

Almost simultaneously with that event a worthless negro, whose name the authorities decline to disclose at present, became conspicuous for his absence. The owner of the horse at once went camping on his trail, and at last reports had struck Waco on a strong scent. Jim Jones, a relative of the unhorsed scent. Jim Jones, a relative of the unhorsed man, yesterday ran across the horse coming to the city harnessed to a cotton wagon owned by Mr. Dunn, a respectable farmer living on Bear Creek. Mr. Dunn, it appears, had traded a mule for the horse with Mr. Tom Ramsey, of this city, and Mr. Ramsey had bought the horse from the negro who has gone camping and whose bill of sale he holds. The horse was turned over to the representative of the owner upon proper guarantees being given. The officers say they are sure of capturing the thief.

Nipped in the Bud.

A fire broke out yesterday in the lint-room of the Howard Oil Mills, and the alarm was at once sounded, with the effect of bringing the fire companies to the scene at a gallop, the hook and ladder company leading. Simultaneously with giving the alarm the local appliances, which are ex-tensive and well managed, were brought to bear on the fire, and it was extinguished before the arrival of the engines. The East Dallas Company got its hose into the shed, but did not throw water.

When it became known that the alarm sprang from the oil mills a feeling almost akin to panic seized upon the citizens, who entail on a large number of families. A crowd rushed to the scene, but were gratefully disappointed at finding the mills running as though nothing had happened.

The Exposition Movement.

The finance committee of the Exposition

Society made little progress yesterday toward raising the $1000, without which the executive committee says it will be impos sible to move. A News reporter yesterday interviewed several prominent citizens as to the importance of a grand Dallas display at the Exposition. All agreed in the belief that it would prove the means of making Dallas appear to Texas what Paris is to France, and would, in all probability, be the means of bringing it an influx of manufacturing enterprise. They based this in-ference not only on the showing of the actualities and possibilities, but on the generally understood fact that no other Texas city will be represented by an exhibit

A. L. Coats has filed proceedings in the District Court against J. W. Caldwell and W. M. Mann, enjoining them from selling 1800 pounds of seed cotton and twenty acres of cotton, in which he is interested. Peter Ahearn, being sworn, said: When I went on watch yesterday morning after II o'clock, a man by the name of Alexander came to me at the Union Depot and told me that a man was lying sick at Elliott's lumber yard. I had a prisoner in charge and told Mr. Alexander that I would attend to it as soon as I came back. About half an hour later I found the deceased in the back room of Oscar Roughten's saloon, lying on the floor. I saw the man was very sick and got an express wagon and brought him to the City Hospital. He vomited three or four times on the way. I asked him no questions, as he was very sick. He would rise and act nervously sometimes and fall back. At first said he was from Fort Worth. I noticed him the last few days around the Union Depot. He did not seem to be sick then. I think he was about thirty-five years old, swarthy complexion, large nose, high cheek bones, weight about 140 pounds, had brown hair, reddish moustache and gray eyes. I took him to be a German.

The town is to hold an election Nov. 16 to determin whether or not that bailiwick shall continue upon the prosperous road to wealth and fame or be placed upon the dry dock of de cay. Mr. Bearden is a new man in the com munity, having but recently located in the town, believes that prohibition is a good thing, and is the only thing needful to the preservation of the morals of Pocahontas, and in his paper has taken strong grounds in advocacy of his principle.

Being thus disqualified both by nature and age we would ask to be excused from further participation in such pastime, but we would most respectfully say to all who may thirst and hunger to squelch us that we are firm believers in the God-given right of self-defense, and that too in the broadest interpretation. We have chosen to publish in Randolph County a newspaper, and it matters but little to us what is said in derision of our efforts by those who seek to mob or boycott us or our paper, and most kindly would we say to those deluded young gentlemen that have been educated beneath the bloody shirt banner that the day of mob law in the Southern States has passed and gone." ner that the day of mob law in the Southern States has passed and gone."

What give him nerve and vigor was the thought of wife and babies away off in New York, waiting and praying for his return. He slipped out of much of his clothes as he drifted by the vessel's side and then started shoreward.

All night long he alternately breasted the long swell and floated resting and panting on his back. Daylight came and he was still in the water, but the shore a little over a mile away gave him encouragement, and he soon was able to stagger, half unconscious, up the sandy beach, only to drop in a faint above high water mark. It was not until noon that he awoke and looked for aid. He took employment with farmers, and K. Hunstable, Boot and Shoe Factory. 732 ELM STREET, DALLAS, TEXAS.

ant engineer on the Pacific Mail Steamship Co.'s steamer, Honduras, bound from that port for various stopping places down the western South American coast.

The crew was a mixed one of Spaniards, Mexicans and such. Among the company was a Portuguese known as Ramon, who, as an oiler, regarded himself as the heir to the position taken by Doherty, and hated the newcomer as an interloper. The steamer had only been five days from port when Doherty said he overheard a conversation between this Ramon and a Spanish passenger, in which it was determined that the Northerner should be dirked and then thrown overboard.

From that time Doherty dared not sleep in his berth at night lest the treacherous Portugese thrust the dagger into his breast. He caught sleep as he could standing at his post, and several times he thought he detected his foe crawling upon him in the darkness. He says he was compelled to literally dodge for his life every time his enemy or enemies came near, for both Ramon and the Spanish passenger were watching him. When he could endure it no longer. Doherty appealed to Alfred Pardee, the chief engineer, and was greeted with a round of laughter, and he was advised to jump into the water if he didn't care to remain aboard ship.

He made such provisions as he could to die fighting; wrote several letters to his wife and friends, which he directed and left aboard ship, only to learn subsequently that they had been thrown overboard, and then waited with such fortitude as he could summon for the attack of the assassins. It came on the night of May 21, when the ship watch.

The night was densely black and the hunted engineer felt that the occasion fitted for the bloody work his foes had determined upon. He says he heard a light tread near him as he stood watching and then came the rush of the two murderers. Doherty drew his own knife and fought with desperation for his life, but the odds were enormously against him, and when he was forced to the vessel's side he suddenly turned and plunged overboard, to take the faint flicker of a chance by swimming to the shore. until noon that he awoke and looked for aid. He took employment with farmers, and when a measure of his strength had returned struck out for a long tramp of nearly two hundred miles across the republic to a small seaport named Livingstone, whence he worked his way homeward, and then when, in March last, he reached New York, it was only to find that his wife, relying on the reports that he had jumped overboard, had married again.

He asked for some sort of recompense from the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., but was confronted with his own death certificate as proof that he had no claims, and then, broke down in health by his sufferings, he listened to the advice of friends and instituted a suit for $30,000, claiming that when he entered the service of the company he was entitled to protection, which, when French, German and Spanish wines at Ed S.
