Ship on Fire.

Baltimore, Oct. 17.—The steamship Baltimore arrived here to-day from Liverpool, and reports that at 12 p. m., Oct. 3, in latitude 50° 56", longitude 17° 40" west, she passed a ship on fire. The Baltimore passed a snip on nre. The Baltimore steamed all around her, displayed night signals and sounded many whistles, but could discover no signs of any persons on the boat. She was one blaze of fire. Capt. Trenery, of the Baltimore, thinks the cargo was of cotton or wool, judging from the smell of the smoke.

THE DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT.

Special to The News.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 17.—The indications tonight are that the Democaats will have the Legislature. To-day both parties claimed seventy-three members, but information is just received in Cincinnati that one of the Republican members-elect in Muskingum County is not an elector, but still a subject of Great Britain. Republicans are still claiming the election of their legislative ticket in Hamilton County, when the returns collected jointly by five morning newspapers show that the Democratic ticket is elected by 1000 majority.

WILL REQUIRE THE OFFICIAL COUNT. CINCINNATI, Oct. 17.—Official count of the ballots in Hamilton County will begin Monday. Till that count shall be completed there will be no additional news as to the result in this county. From the best information the General Assembly is Republican on joint ballot.

A CHIEF OF POLICE IN TROUBLE. CINCINNATI, Oct. 17.—In the Police Court this morning E. W. Kittredge, on behalf of the citizens' committee of one hundred, preferred charges against Chief of Police Hudson, who failed to serve warrants on a Hudson, who failed to serve warrants on a number of men for violating the registration laws, which had been placed in his hands. He demanded an early hearing of the charges. The Chief was sent for, and explained that he had followed the custom and delivered the warrants to lieutenants of the respective districts in which the persons charged by the warrants resided. Why they were not served he could not say. Kittredge states that Col. Hudson had been notified of their not having been served, and the committee hold him personally responsible. Judge Fitzgerald then expressed himself as follows: "This court would be absolutely powerless in protection of life or property if the process of court in making arrests is ignored. I can take no cognizance of the case until it is brought before me. I have ordered that when a person comes before the Clerk and under oath charges another with violation of law, especially election laws, warrants shall be issued and the party so charged arraigned before me, no matter whether he be white or black, Democrat or Republican, politician or merchant, official or citizen. The chief of police has stated in court that he gave warrants to his lieutenants to serve. These lieutenantfunts be brought here. I will not permit any such outrage of justice as allowing people to walk the streets unmolested while warrants are out for their arrests." Col. Hudson demanded time to consult counsel, which was granted. The lieutenants will appear before Judge Fitzgerald at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Col. Hudson's case was set for hearing Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

ELECTION OFFICERS ARRESTED. CINCINNATI, Oct. 17 .- Patrick Kelly and John Minor, election judges of a precinct in the Nineteenth Ward, were arrested today on warrants sworn out by the Committee of One Hundred, charged with adjourning the count of ballots after it had been commenced. They were admitted to bail in the sum of $1000 each, and Michael Ennis, a Fourth Ward judge, charged with stuffing the ballot box in his precinct, was also arrested. Warrants are also out for the arrest of other election judges, illegal voters, and aiders and abettors of illegal voters.

POLITICS ELSEWHERE.

THE WAR ON MAYOR GRACE. New York, Oct 17 .- For some time past charges have been made by importers of rubber that they were being undersold in the market by some persons who must have evaded customs duties in order to leave them any profit at the price at which they were offering Brazilian crude goods. The Telegram to-night publishes what it claims to be the explanation of the mystery. It charges that the firm of Richard Sears & Co., of Para, in Brazil, have, through the collusion of certain Brazilian customs officers, been able to evade payment of export duties to such an extent as to build up a business of 5,000,000 pounds of rubber within the two years of the firm's existence. The article further charges existence. The article further charges that an exposure has been made and that the derelict customs officers are now in trouble with their superiors. As a result of the underselling referred to, the price of rubber in the New York market fell from $1 10 to fifty-six cents per pound. Mr. Sears was formerly shipping clerk in W. R. Grace & Co.'s New York house. He went to Brazil in their interest, but subsequently started into business for himself, and is said to have become a millionaire. It to have become a millionaire. the forgery, that many attacks are now being made on Mayor Grace by his political enemies, and the attempt to connect his firm with the questionable practices alleged to have been engaged in by his former employes is doubtless a part of this political warfare.

ROOSEVELT'S REMARKS. NEW YORK, Oct. 17 .- Theodore Roosevelt, Sherman Seegers, of Buffalo, and Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, addressed a mass meeting in Brooklyn to-night under the auspices of the Young Men's Republican Club. In the course of his remarks Mr. Roosevelt, speaking or his remarks mr. Roosevert, speaking from a mugwump standpoint, said the defeat of Gov. Hill would not be a rebuke to Cleveland's administration, but those who had sought to swerve him from the promises made to the people before his election.

GEN. DOW ON TEMPERANCE. PORTLAND, Oct. 17.—Gen. Neal Dow is out in an open letter this morning denouncing the liquor sellers as being "more remorseless than assassins and inflicting upon the city far more harm." He advocates a greatly enlarged police force to suppress the grog-geries. He asserts that the Legislature has scouted the petitions of the Prohibitionists for necessary amendments to the law, and that the Governor has violated his solemn pledge. This morning Gen. Dow's organ, The Portland Herald, appeared as a weekly organ for temperance people. It says the result of the Ohio election gives them renewed confidence, and that a real national prohibition movement will soon be income. prohibition movement will soon be inau Crillas fired one shot at his assailants and fell, his comrade running away, the latter party firing as he ran. Crillas was picked up by some Americans and taken to his home, where he died at 8 o'clock this morning and will be buried in the morning. He was unmarried. The cause of the trouble was jealousy over his success in winning a woman's affections. All the parties that committed the deed went to Mexico, where they now enjoy immunity from arrest, as they are Mexican citizens, and the Mexican government can not be compelled to deliver their own citizens to the United States, according to the treaty of Dec. A New Chief Clerk for the Department of Education—The Attorney General on the Use of School Funds—News Notes and Personal.

Special to The News. Austin, Oct. 17 .- Superintendent Baker has promoted Second Clerk Thevatt to the position of chief clerk in his office, vacated by the resignation of Prof. Smith, to take charge of the San Antonio public schools. H. H. Holland, of Gainesville, takes Mr. Thevatt's late position.

The Department of Education has been furnished with the following opinion of the Attorney General:

"Inasmuch as the available school fund apportioned to a city may be applied to the erection of school buildings, it follows as a necessary incident that such fund may also be applied to the payment of a debt incurred for school furniture. The fact that such debt was incurred at a time when the city schools had other resources than the amount apportioned to such city by the State Board of Education does not, in my judgment, interfere with the right of the Board of Trustees to use the only available fund now at its disposal for the settlement of a just obligation entered into by competent authority. The law forbidding the creation of a deficiency debt against the school fund applies only to districts and communities."

The Kendall County Tax Collector squared accounts with the State to-day.

Employers' Plan to Prevent Strikes.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—A movement is on foot here among textile and other manufacturers looking to the adoption of measures to lessen the frequency of strikes, which have become very common of late. The plan is to make each employe sign a contract in writing, setting forth the rate of wages, and the number of hours to be worked and providing that one week's notice must be given of a desire to sever the engagement, under penalty of forfeiture of a week's wages. One week's pay is held back by the employer to be handed over upon an amicable cessation of the contract. As may be imagined, such an arrangement affords the employer a powerful lever for the protection of his interests against the labor organizations whose improvements and the protection of the contraction of the erative orders have caused so much trouble the recent special legislation which has been secured in the interest of the laboring class. A test case which came up before one of the city magistrates a few days ago, however, settled the point in favor of the employers.

Too Much Curiosity.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 .- Charles F. Ohlney, late assistant postmaster at Clarksburg, W. Va., was arrested to-day by Postoffice Inspector Henderson for opening letters. It seems that Ohlney and a telegraph operator were in love with the same young lady, who resided a short distance from Clarksburg. The young lady cor-responded with both her lovers but seems to have smiled more sweetly on the operator. Ohlney, desirous of knowing the extent of her liking for the operator, was in the habit of opening her letters to him and reading them and then enclosing them in other envelopes addressed to his rival. His curiosity has been gratified at the cost of his liberty

POLITICAL PROSPECTS. London, Oct. 17.—Although it is yet some the day. Never in the history of the Liberal party has it presented such a disorganized front. Bickerings and dissensions among the leaders of that wing of English politics are duly chronicled. Many of its most prominent and active members are becoming rapidly disgusted, and desertions to the ranks of their opponents are numerous. The most noticeable of these was that announced to-day in the person of Lord Londesborough, who has long been prominent in the advocacy of the principles laid down by the Liberal party. He has now joined in his fortunes to that of the Conservatives, and it is said that his defection is only the precurser of a number of others. In numerous constituencies there are already as many as four and five Liberal candidates in the field, as against one Conservative, and all efforts to bring about a union on one of the candidates have thus far been futile, none being willing to withdraw. In this way it is believed the Liberals will lose a number of seats.

Cardinal Manning's advice to the Catholics with regard to how they should exercise their suffrage in the coming contest, published recently in the Dublin Review, in which he urges the Catholics to place the religious question foremost and support only candidates who have the interest of religion at heart, and protect it from the inroads of atheists and infidels, excites much comment, and it is believed will exert a potent influence in favor of the Conservatives. becoming rapidly disgusted, and desertions

BRIGHT VS. CHURCHILL.

Lord Randolph Churchill's defeat in the Central District of Birmingham is now regarded as certain. The district is Conser garded as certain. The district is Conservative, but the universal respect felt personally for Mr. John Bright, who is Churchill's opponent, will outweigh all political considerations. It has long been understood among politicians that as long as Mr. Bright chooses to remain in active life Birmingham will continue to return him to parliament, no matter who may stand against him. The Whigs and Radicals will all vote for Mr. Bright, not a man abstaining from casting his ballot for the veteran parliamentarian. Among the Conservatives there will be many abstentions, and there is no hope whatever for Lord Churchill.

BOYCOTTING IN IRELAND.

The boycotting movement throughout Ireland has reached alarming proportions The government officials are now thoroughly alarmed at the growth, and are seriously contemplating the enactment of stringent measures with a view to putting it down.
Thus far only the ordinary process of law has been resorted to, and although a large number of the members of boycotting bands have been prosecuted and fined or imprisoned, the punishment prescribed is so light that it has resulted in no perceptible diminution of the evil. Hundreds of tible diminution of the evil. Hundreds of cases of boycotting are reported daily, and the dockets of the civil courts are crowded with suits brought to recover damages resulting from this mode of warfare.

FRENCH POLITICS. Dispatches received late this evening from Paris state that anxiety exists there with regard to the outcome of to-morrow's palloting for members of the Chamber of Dalloting for members of the Chamber of Deputies, in whose cases second ballots have been ordered to determine the will of the people. A dispatch from Berlin states that one of the important questions that will be brought up at the opening of the Reichstag will be the right of the Government to expel the Poles and Russians from German territory Many members of the Reichstag have already openly avowed their intentions of urging a discontinuance of the practice, on ounds that it is impolitic and injuri ous to the interest of the German Empire.

A TORY ACCESSION.

London, Oct. 17.—William Henry Forester Denison, Lord Londesborough, Liberal

member of the House of Lords, has seceded from the Liberal ranks and joined the Tories. He is announced to preside at the meeting of Tories to be held soon. Other prominent Liberals are expected to follow his example. Lord Londesborough's desertion has caused a profound sensation in political circles, as he has heretofore been an active advocate of Liberal doctrines.

Messrs. Strain, Risly and Swineburn have commenced work on the new courthouse in earnest, giving work to several citizen mechanics. Other houses are in process of erection, which is giving Jacksboro something of a boom.

The health of the county is good.

The weather is fine but very dry and will make wheat sowing very late. Mr. L. P. Adamson is rebuilding his flour-ing mill and will put in new machinery, the new combination roller process.

Wichita Falls.

WICHITA FALLS, Oct. 17 .- Last Thursday night the Rev. W. Eley, the Presbyterian minister at this place, went out to shoot an owl with a double-barrel shotgun. He fired one barrel and it is supposed he had both barrels cocked, for on returning to the house the gun accidentally went off, shooting Mr. Eley through the foot, and it was found necessary to amputate one of his toes.

All the cotton that has been heretofore coming to the gin has come from Clay and Archer counties. Yesterday Sig Newman & Co. bought the first lot strictly raised in Court did the matter take definite shape. A committee has been appointed with instructions to take the matter in hand and report at the next meeting of the commissioners. The Toll Bridge Co. heretofore have asked $16,000 for their iron bridge, which was erected some sixteen years ago, but recently offered to sell it for $10,000. This price is considered greater than would be the cost of a much better bridge, the chief objection to the one now in use being the shortness of the main span, which necessitates great vigilance and no little expense to protect the supports from the washing of the banks of the river and floating drift. The location is, however, convenient, and the bridge is in good repair. As the people are in earnest, a free bridge will be had at an early date.

A good part of the term of the court was taken up by frivolous prosecutions. Consequently last week and up to date the court has been in session.

Receipts of cotton to date have been 2840 bales, shipments 2330 bales, stock on hand 510 bales. Postmaster's Bond Forwarded.

Special to The News. GALVESTON, Oct. 17 .- This morning at 8 o'clock, as the steam lighter Star, Capt. Smith, laden with 494 bales of cotton for the out from New Wharf, head of Thirty-first street, a fire was discovered among her deck load on the starboard side of the vessel, just abreast of the galley door. With increasing rapidity the flames spread from bale to bale, and very soon the entire afterpart of the Star was ablaze. Among those on board at the time were four gangs of screwmen go and of the Exchange Bank at that place, is daily expected to arrive here, prospecting for a new bank at this place.

Smith, set to work with a will clearing the deck of the burning cotton. The screwmen at work on the steamship Counters, lying, head on, a short distance, alongside, promptly came to the aid of their companions and bale after bale of the fleecy staple were consigned to the waters of the bay. Meanwhile an alarm had been turned in and the department summoned. When they at last reached the scene Chief Oldenberg, taking in the situation at a glance, met the emergency by attaching hose to the salt water plug, at the head of Thirty-first street, and reeling it off to the burning vessel, 1200 yards away, got in a deluging stream, doing much good, until the engines got fairly to work. As every bale of the nearly 400 on deck was on fire, it was deemed the surest and best way to save the vessel to throw all overboard, which was done, the streams of water keeping down the flames so as to admit handling of the the steamship Counters, lying, head on, a the flames so as to admit handling of the cotton. This was soon accomplished, and the Star saved without other damage, except the scorching and charring of her house. The Star is owned by Irvine & Bassner, and is not insured. Of the 494 bales on board only about 162 bales in the hold except of charring and damage. No hold escaped charring and damage. No cause can be assigned for the fire, although it is believed that it originated from sparks

The longshoremen's strike against the Mallory Line still continues, but it would seem that the strikers have lost their grip, as this morning their places were supplied with colored laborers, who were engaged to-day in discharging and reloading the New York steamer under police protection, though this did not seem to be necessary, as no interference was attempted by the strikers. The arrangement to substitute colored labor was made between Capt. Sawyer, the agent of the line, and Mr. Cuney, who agreed to furnish the colored labor upon a guarantee that they should not be taken merely to meet the present emer-gency, but that they should be retained dur-as paid the colored labolers of the Morgan wharf, 40 cents an hour for Sundays and 50 cents an hour for Sundays and extras. These figures are the same for day work as offered by Capt. Sawsame for day work as offered by Capt. Sawyer yesterday, but are 10 cents an hour less

110 colored men went to work this morning discharging the steamship State of Texas.
During the day a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Flanigan, Foley and Holmes, after deliberation among themselves, waited on Capt. Sawyer at his office and offered to return at the terms proposed received them courteously, and in reply to

THE SANTA FE STRIKE SETTLED. The trouble between the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railroad and the Knights of Labor over the disagreement at Temple was settled to-day. It was reported to The News last night that as a settlement of the differences then existing the Knights of Labor demanded the discharge of Capt. Murrell, trainmaster at Temple, on the ground that he was oppressive and otherwise objectionable to the order. The directory, however, took a different view of the matter. They claimed that the accusations against Capt. Murrell were purely the result of a rigid and conscientious discharge of his duty, and would not have been committed had he been less faithful to the company, and though his may have possibly been overzealous, still it did not constitute an offense warranting such extreme measures as were demanded. They were not bound to accept Murrell for any length of time; his appointment, like any other employe of the company, was during good behavior, and as the directory could not see where he had failed in that respect toward them they could not conscientiously, or in justice, discharge him. Upon this the Knights of Labor finally concluded to concede the point by withdrawing their demands for the discharge of Capt. Murrell. This announcement paves the way for better relations all afound, and final articles of agreement were satisfactorily concluded between the Knights and the Santa Fe, thus finally terminating the history of the big strike of August 1885.

EXTENDING THE SANTA FE RAILROAD. Messrs. Marx and Blum have just returned from an extended trip through the northwest and over the proposed extension of Gulf. Colorado and Santa Fe and further on. In an interview with a News reporter to-day Mr. Marx speaks in glowing terms of the section visited and says: "We feel satisfied that the fruits of this land of so much promise can be secured for Galveston if its business men and the Santa Fe directors will only take the necessary stens to do so. We constitute the terms of the same secured for Galveston if its business men and the Santa Fe directors will only take the necessary stens to do so. We constitute the same secured for the s men and the Santa Fe directors will only take the necessary steps to do so. We consider it would be to the advantage, not only of Galveston, but the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railroad Co., to extend their road to Abilene and San Angelo. White, of course, its completion only to Coleman will give a measurable impetus to that section of country redounding to the interests of Galveston, if properly nurtured, yet the extension to Abilene and San Angelo would be such a fruitful source of traffic that one who has not been on the ground can scarcely imagine, and far exceeding any temporary advantages that ground can scarcely imagine, and the ceeding any temporary advantages that may accrue to the railroad by the building up of so called new towns at some insignificant point. Outside of the natural course of travel and competition we would strongly or travel and competition we would strongly urge the directors of the Santa Fe to make a personal visit to this section of country and see what we have seen, and to every enterprising merchant seeking extended territory, the sooner he makes the trip the better for him, feeling sure that after a careful and impartial investigation the Santa Fe will certainly add thus durdent Santa Fe will certainly add this garden spot of Texas to its territory, and thus not only contribute to its own wealth, but to the commerce of Galveston. JUDGE VS. JURY. The case of William Boyd & Co., contractors, vs. C. W. Rugers was tried in the tractors, vs. C. W. Rugers was fried in the District Court yesterday, occupying the whole day. Last night the jury, under instructions from the court, returned a sealed verdict. As the result of this case will determine in a great measure a number of similar suits that will be brought against other property holders, considerable interest was manifested as to what conclusion the jury would arrive at. This morning long before the hour had arrived for convening the court, a large crowd had gathered around the courthouse and in the courtroom. Judge Masterson ascended the

AFFAIRS AT FORT WORTH.

Departure of the Conference Committee for St. Louis.

The Report of the Grand Jury-A Petition of Houston Street Property Owners-Got the Wrong Man-Disagreement of a Jury.

Special to The News.

FORT WORTH, Oct. 7.-The conference committee left to-night for St. Louis. The citizens' committee consists of Mr. A. M. Britton, president of the City National Bank: A. J. Boaz, president of the Traders' National Bank: W. G. Turner, of Fakes & Co.; E. B. Daggett, a large property owner; C. H. Rintleman, the twin-king of the Fourth Ward; O. S. Kennedy, a prominent lawyer and a gentleman who became famous by a meeting that did not take place, and Capt. B. B. Paddock, of the First National Bank. Mr. W. A. Huffman, who was chosen to go, is too unwell to undertake the journey.

The city will also be represented by Mayor Smith, W. A. Darter and C. B. Daggett, and Mr. Humphreys, the latter of whom goes in place of J. P. Alexander, detained by sickness in his family.

A document was circulated for signature among the property owners on Houston street and presented to the Mayor, petitioning that he "add to the committee of citizens who are appointed to confer with the railroad authorities at St. Louis in regard to opening Houston street across the railroad reservation and other matters the following gentlemen: Sam Seaton, Doc Humphreys, Howard W. Peak, E. M. Wells and William

The petition is signed by Casey & Swasey, Montgomery & Co., John Hoffman, C. H. Higbee, Capera Bros., Washer & August, Pinkard & Joyce, James H. Martindale, J. K. Turner, H. W. Williams & Co., W. F. Patterson, E. Kuhn, A. P. Ryan, Max Elser, Josephine H. Ryan, H. Tully, W. F. Lake, James Broach, J. F. Ellis, Joseph Mayer, Randall & Chambers, B. C. Evans, Dahlman Bros., Malone, Waller & Co., H. A. Conner & Co., E. Morris, D. Schwartz, George H. Chase, I. K. Millican, J. M. Brown, Charles Scheuber & Co., F. S. Boulware. The petition is signed by Casey & Swasey,

The Mayor had no authority to make any addition to the committee, but the desire of the petitioners was met as far as possible by selecting one of those named, Mr. Hum-phreys, to take Mr. Alexander's place. There is no fear, however, of a preponder-ance of opinion against the general interest.

BORROWING A MAP. It became necessary that the committee should have a good map of the city, and City Engineer King. who, by the way, is very ill with the dengue, kindly loaned the splendid map drawn by his own hand. It is perfect in every detail, the survey being made under his own supervision before he became a civic officer, and at a cost to himself of $1200. It is the only complete map of the city, except such old ones as have been privately marked, and the municipal government should acquire possession of it. government should acquire possession of it. It was entrusted to Mr. Darter's particular

THE GRAND JURY.

The grand jury have completed their labors and to-day presented their report. They have filed indictments for three They have field indictments for three felonies and thirty-one misdemeanors, making one hundred and thirty this session. One felony has been committed in Tarrant County in three weeks, that of the shooting of Head by John McFarland, who is now out on $1000 bail, but will be arrested on this indictment, the precise nature of which the officers refuse to disclose.

THE REPORT. The following is their report to Judge Beckham, of the District Court of Tarrant County, and is signed by B. F. Ellington the

foreman:

The grand jury beg leave to make the following report: We have made careful inquiry into and concerning all violations of the law throughout the county that have been brought to our notice. We have presented one hundred and thirty (130) bills during this term of the court. We find that the Sunday law is being enforced throughout the city and county, with only an occasional secret violation. Public gambling has also been almost entirely suppressed, and the gaming that has been done in the city for some time has been done secretely. We find that crime of all character is on the decrease in Tarrant County, only one felony having been committed in only one felony having been committed i the county since our last sitting three weeks ago. We have visited the county jail and found it in good condition and well kept. The prisoners, as far as we could learn, are well treated in every respect.

TWO JAIL GUARDS.

From the number of prisoners in fact, and the amount of work to be done in guarding them, we would respectfully recommend the Commissioners' Court to employ and pay two jail guards at the expense of the county. We believe this would be doing justice to the Sheriff, as he has now to keep two guards, and the compensation allowed him by law is not adequate to justify him in paying for the services of two guards. We have not examined the of two guards. We have not examined the books of the county officers nor of the poor farm, being satisfied that it is not necessary

We also desire to return our thanks to the court, the sheriff and his deputies and our bailiff, the county attorney and district clerk for the assistance given us and the uniform courtesy extended toward us. JAY GOULD'S VISIT:

Mr. Gould has abandoned any intention he may ever have had of coming through It is said that he was scared off by the publicity given to his movements, but there is no evidence that he ever intended coming, the arrangements for his arrival in Fort Worth having been based entirely upon speculation. The known facts go to show that his chief interest in his trip along the Missouri, Kansas and Texas lay quite outside our boundaries. The affairs of the outside our boundaries. The affairs of the Texas and Pacific were some time since ar-ranged by a committee of bondholders, and the merely local question of opening of streets is not one likely to engage the atten-tion of the railroad magnate.

The Noted Preacher, Lecturer and Editor of Galveston Receives Attention at the Hands of a Layman in East Texas. Special to The News.

MINEOLA, Oct. 17.—The Harmony Association, a Baptist organization, convened in this place to-day. Quite a number of ministers are in attendance.

The Rev. John C. Baird's communication to THE NEWS, in Friday's issue, concerning the editorial management of the Texas Christian Advocate, was read with interest It places the editor, Rev. Mr. Briggs, in an unenviable position. A Baptist minister, after reading the editorial comments of THE NEWS upon the subject, remarked to a NEWS reporter that he would hate to be in Mr. Briggs' place. Great surprise is expressed at the exposure, because in the Texas Christian Advocate of Sept. 19, 1885, Editor Briggs, in an editorial headed . "A Challenge Accepted," proceeds to give extracts from a few Methodist ministers favorable to his position to show the drift of Methodist thought on the subject under dis-cussion, and closes by using the following "Two aged veterans in the ranks of the Methodist ministry speak on the fifth page and a prominent layman on the first page of this issue. We could continue, but forbear. We will keep The News informed of the verdict as the returns come in."

Now, the communication of the Rev. John C. Baird clearly proves, if it proves anything, that Editor Briggs has not been faithful to his editorially-expressed promises about the "returns."

Some have inquired if this is the same Rev. Mr. Briggs that lectured on Ingersollism, in Galveston, some years ago. It was Lecturer Briggs then—Editor Briggs now.

Paris, Oct. 17.—A meeting of some of the prominent business men was held last night at the parlors of the Peterson Hotel, to confer with Messrs. Heartsill, Lloyd and Scott who are here representing the Marshall and Northwestern Railroad. Mayor J. C. Gib bons was elected chairman and W. L. Burdett secretary. After an explanation by the Mayor and an interchange of opinion by a number of our citizens, Mr. Heartsill for the company made the following proposition to build the road to Paris, if the citizens would subscribe $100,000 in stock and give the right of way for five miles on each side of the city and depot grounds, all the money subscribed to be spent on our end of the line. The following committee was then appointed to confer with the representatives of the road: J. C. Gibbons, Frank Fitz-Hugh, Dr. S. E. Clement, Dr. J. B. Ryan, and J. D. Wortham. They met the gentlemen again this morning, but as yet nothing definite has been done.

AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL ACT.

Judge McLain Renders the Decision Setting Aside the Result of the Election in Bowie County Removing the County Seat-An Appeal.

Special to The News. TEXARKANA, Oct. 17 .- In the matter of the contest of the citizens of Bowie County against this city on the Bowie County court house question Judge McLain, at Boston, to-day rendered a decision adverse to this city, holding the State law under which the election was to be unconstitutional. The story is told by the States of this morning in a leader, which reads as follows:

"After listening to the argument of law yers on the validity of the law regulating the removal of county sites, Judge McLain decided that the act of the Legislature is unconstitutional and void, and that the election recently held in Bowie County whereby a majority of more than two-thirds of the voters determined that the county site should be removed from Boston to Tex-arkana is a nullity and without warrant of law. Until this decision is reversed by of law. Until this decision is reversed by the Supreme Court, the county seat will of course remain where it has been, at Boston. Texarkana has appealed from the decision, and we are inclined to believe that the validity of the law will be maintained by the Supreme Bench. Under the provisions of the act decided void by Judge McLain several county seats have been removed to more convenient locations, court held therein and decisions rendered affecting the lives, liberties and fortunes of litigants and defendants. The decision is one of the most important which has been rendered in Texas for many years, and will attract the attention of all lawyers throughout the State, whilst it will occasion much confusion, unsettle property values, and cre-The eight passenger cars for the excursion to Pecos returned to-day with only four bassengers.

CRIME.

SENTENCE OF A FEMALE POISONER.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 17.—The jury in the case of Mary Allen, the young colored domestic charged with larceny of valuable jewelry from the Deroy family, and her mother for receiving stolen goods, exhonorate the mother, but find Mary guilty as indicted. A few moments after the verdict was rendered Mary was placed before Judge Ewing for sentence. In reply to the question of the Judge as to whether or not she had anything to say in regard to conviction of murder in the second degree for the poisoning of Bernard Deroy, she became almost hysterical, wailing and shrieking her woes, saying: "I did not do it. I did not do it. I know no more about it than any of you men in this room." Much difficulty was had in calming her. Judge Ewing then pronounced sentence in the case—a fine of pronounced sentence in the case—a fine of 6¼ cents, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment for a term of twelve years. In the larceny case a fine of 6¼ cents, costs of prosecution, and imprisonment for two years. Mary and her mother gave vent to their grief in shrieks and writhings, most painful to behold, as they were conducted from the room. The court imposed the fullest term permitted by law.

INVESTIGATING A SUSPECTED MURDER. Newfort, R. I., Oct. 17.—About ten days ago Benjamin J. Burton was found dead with a bullet wound in the head and over the heart. It was regarded as a case of suicide, but on account of rumors of foul play, the body was exhumed to-day and an autopsy held at the City Cemetery in the presence of a large crowd of people, there being no morgue or other place in the city where such examinations can be held. The result of the autopsy seems to support the theory of murder. One ball had penetrated the heart and must have caused instant theory of murder. One ball had penetrated the heart and must have caused instant leath. The other ball had entered the orain, and the question of murder or suicide will probably hinge upon the decision of medical experts as to whether the man, after inflicting the wound, could have had unstained to the account. sufficient vitality remaining to fire a second shot into his heart. A relative of the deceased is, by some, suspected of doing the shooting, but he has not been arrested, and has had every opportunity to escape if he desired to do so.

A LIFE SENTENCE. BRENHAM, Oct. 17.—The case of the State vs. Lucas Lomax, colored, charged with murder, was tried in the District Court Thursday, and at a late hour at night the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, with a life term of imprisonment in the penitentiary. Lomax shot and killed a negro named Carter on the public streets of Brenham last April. The evidence showed that Lomax was not justified in the least, and that the murder was a shocking one. The prisoner is a quadroon and has a fair education. He is a native of Waller County, and about twenty-five years of age. The colored people here seem satisfied with the verdict of the jury, but many of them say that he is lucky in not getting his neck broken by the hangman's rope.

ANOTHER GOOD MAN GONE WRONG.

HARTFORD, Oct. 17 .- Albert L. Burke, a prominent layman of the Methodist Church, has been found to be a defaulter to the amount of $10,000, having taken money to that amount belonging to the James Howard Co. of this city, dealers in railway supplies. He had been in the company's employ since 1867. Most implicit confidence was reposed in him, and he had complete control of the books of the company. He was also secretary of the Cape Well Horse Nail Co., clerk of the West Middlesex School, and superintendent of the Sunday school. Up to a year ago he lived very economically, then bought a house of Colvery economically house on Col ago he lived very economically, then bought a house on Collins street for $5250, paying $250 and giving a mortgage for $5000. He had the house improved and furnished elegantly. This jump from economy to extravagance excited some comment among the neighbors, but his employers suspected nothing. As the bookkeeper of the Howard Co. he received $1800 a year. The company hope to realize from Burke's effects $5000. He is now in New York, stopping with his brother. EVADING THE LYNCHERS.

BATAVIA, O., Oct. 17.—The authorities are arranging to remove McLefresh, who killed Ohmnis at Utopia on Wednesday, to George town, as the jail here is insecure and "Regulators" on the river are organizing to come and lynch McLefresh.

TOM VARNELL CAPTURED EL Paso, Oct. 17.—Tom P. Varnell, the wealthy stockmau who has long been wanted in Hill County for alleged killing and rape, was taken from here this morning toward the scene of his alleged brutal ex-ploits. He was captured at the Magdalene Mines, Mexico, by Bell, a deputy sheriff of Hill County.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1885.

OFFICIAL RESPONSIBILITIES AND

AMENITIES AT AUSTIN. If the Comptroller's office at Austin keeps in salaried position an unnessary number of clerks, as has been charged, it is the duty of the Governor to address the Comptroller on the subject and have the force cut down. Recently the Governor voluntarily addressed the Attorney General to suggest action on his part deemed necessary by the chief executive. Suppose the Governor should discover a leak in the State Treasury, not a legal and constitutional leak, but a back door leak, would it not be his duty to ask the venerable Treasurer to put on his spectacles and adjust his ear trumpet in order to ascertain where and how the hard earnings of the tax collectors were escaping? Should the Governor have an intimation that the Land Commissioner was issuing fraudulent land scrip, would it not be his duty to at least send in a vigorous protest, as Gov. Hubbard did upon a like occasion, and give Commissioner Walsh notice that patents should never issue upon locations of such scrip? Should it come to the Governor's ears, through the press or otherwise, that the Adjutant General was employing an unnecessary force in order to raise a row with regulars at the San Antonio Volksfest, would it not be his duty, as executive chief, to keep the military in subordination to the civil authority, to maintain the peace, and accordingly to restrain the Adjutant General? The Governor knows as well as the papers what is going on at the capital. Probably he knows it better than all of them, except the particular afternoon paper, the San Antonio Times, that has published the little piece about the Comptroller's office, and vaguely supplemented it with the remark that "there has long been a suspicion that the average clerk at Austin had a picnic." Possibly this afternoon paper had its information from the Governor. This might be the secret of its friendship for the Comptroller. If so, that paper speaks by the card, and the Governor can hardly refuse to interfere for the purification of the public service. It is understood that the Attorney-General, when disturbed by the executive prod, at once began preparations for prosecuting the delinquent railway companies. Why should not the Comptroller also respond promptly to the suggestions of the head of the government? Because of the very great friendship and respect between the Governor and Comptroller the public service should not suffer. They are both in the same boat, both in the

Land Board and the Capitol Board, the Board of Education and the Sewer Board,

Bureau and directors in the State Libel Guarantee Association. The intimate association of these officials fully justifies the senior in reforming the department of the junior member of the pool through the friendly columns of the afternoon paper. A direct suggestion from the Governor himself might not be perfectly acceptable, but a gentle hint through a mutual friend contains no gall, and opens the way for appropriate intimations by the chief at some subsequent reunion of official heads. THE NEWS Austin correspondent appears to think that the Comptroller employs no unnecessary clerks, but probably he had not conferred with the Governor on that subject. The fault, if it exists, has also escaped the attention of all the other morning papers. Some attribute the complaint to plotters against Comptroller Swain. Of course the correspondents cannot keep up with the discoveries of the several little rings engaged in making governors, and United States senators. But the Comptroller is charged in effect with using the public funds to support useless officers or clerks. Friendship, kinship, political influence or gross negligence must be inferred if the charge be true. This is a more direct and damaging charge than THE NEWS made with reference to land mismanagement. Now, will the Comptroller, by himself or jointly with the cabinet, guarantee immunity from the pains and penalties of the libel law if the afternoon paper will come forward and specify what clerks are holding sinecures for and on account of friendship, kinship, political influence, or by reason of inattention to his duties by the Comptroller? The afternoon paper in question was jubilant when the cabinet resolved to guarantee The News from prosecution upon a somewhat similar occasion. If the cabinet were in earnest then, a similar resolution is now in order. If it is not promptly adopted, the inference will be natural that specifications under this new charge are not desired.

DEMOCRACY, LOCAL OPTION AND CLASS LEGISLATION. The Texas constitution authorizes local option prohibition, wherefore it is contended that, as the constitution was made by Democrats, the local option provision is

cratic constitution authorizes a local option herd law, and accordingly it may with equal force be held that a local option herd aw is a Democratic measure. But the Democratic party declared against a State nerd law at its last State convention. There is no difference as to the principle involved between a local liquor prohibition or a local herd law and a State prohibition or a State herd law. As a matter of fact, State prohibition is less opposed to the fundamental idea of Democracy than local prohibition. Democracy may contend for local self-government, but not for local privileges not shared by every other locality. It may not, in deference to local selfgovernment, create local immunities by which class privileges are established. If it is the duty of democratic government by State law to protect one locality from a certain class of crimes through stringent penal statutes, it is undemocratic to permit a bare majority of another locality to withdraw the protection of the State in that locality against the same class of crimes elsewhere prohibited. In the case of a herd law the principle is different-in fact, may appear in direct conflict with the liquor prohibition idea. A herd law means protection of property. It prohibits the individual from using his neighbor's property and gives this neighbor the benefit of government protection in lieu of personal effort and expense ordinarily required to prevent molestation and insure perfect control and free use of his rights of property. The Government erects the protection fence, instead of the property owner, and it is without cost to the Government. In prohibition of the liquor traffic the Government, on the contrary, restrains and restricts the citizen in the free use of his rights of property. Probably, according to fundamental doctrines, the Democracy of Texas, in declaring against a State herd law, committed as great a mistake as if it should declare in favor of liquor prohibition. A local herd law grants valuable privileges which, if conferred upon any locality as a Democratic measure, enlists the power of the State in maintaining local and discriminating privileges, and commits Democracy to the discrimination, but a State herd law makes no discrimination, and simply protects the natural rights of producers over the entire State, which is entirely consistent with Democratic doctrines. In a republican government the idea of the people of a locality voting themselves out from under the laws that govern the people in general is preposterous. Local self government is local responsibility for enforcing laws that govern equally and uniformly over the whole State, and not local choice of a system of government or code of laws. With reference to local option herd laws it may be said that there are localities in which it is admitted they would be of no material advantage, while in others they would appear to be indispensable. But liquor prohibition, if its advocates are to be credited, is applicable to evils which exist everywhere. The reasons adduced for the prohibition in one county are based upon conditions which prevail in every other county. If the State shall then prohibit in one locality because there is a condition of affairs in that locality which justifies the extraordinary interposition of the government, it is incumbent upon the State to extend its protection to every other locality in which like conditions prevail. The State,

THE chief purpose of constitutions is to put limits on the constituted authoritiesupon the agents of the majority-in a majority government. Any injecting of legislation into a constitution is sure to prove mischievous. The warnings of experience are disregarded by the Dakota Assembly, which has produced what the Chicago Times pronounces a code—for the greater part a collection of projects of statutory law. The Times thinks:

At the best, written constitutions of government are of doubtful utility. If an enacted organic law of a political corporation serves any good of society, it is in the simplest and briefest possible prescription of its organic structure and in judicious limitations upon its faculties. All that any enacted constitution may contain that is not of the one or the other of these two characters—that is, not either a prescription of the organs of the public powers or a limitation apon their faculties—is mischievous surplus are that never serves any good purpose, but is sure to serve some bad purpose.

What the Interior Papers Say. The Laredo Times is a fast friend of the Governor, but seems to thinks an apology necessary for his late letter on the subject of assisting immigrants to come to Texas.

The Times says:

The constitution of Texas forbids appropriations in the interest of securing immigrants to the State. It is to be regretted that this is so, as it reverses the policy obtaining in Texas since 1836 up to the period of the framing of the present constitution. It is the more to be regretted from the fact that such a policy by no means reflects the sentiments of the people. It is doubtful if the inhibition in question keeps a single immigrant of value from Texas, for men are apt to go wherever inducements are held out for the advancement of their fortunes. Still it would have been better perhaps, had the provision been left out of the instrument, and the identical policy pursued which was rendered necessary by the adoption of the constitution.

There was no substantial change of policy involved in the provision alluded to Certain unprepared contracts made during the days of the Republic of Texas, when the great body of the country was a wilderness, rewarded those who introduced certain numbers of settlers with premium lands, but then, as now, lands for homesteads were the only aid and inducement offered to immigrants themselves. The government did not use money to assist immigrants when they were most needed, and there has been no occasion for it to do so since the adoption of the present constitution.

is being aroused to its importance. The

The man who makes his money by the sweat of his brow fails to see how nine hours can be crowded into the space between 8 a. and 4 p. m., with an hour for dinner. By all ordinary rules of computation, seven hours, at most, make a day's labor for the well dressed, fine-haired, sleek-hatted clerk in the Comptroller's, or any other department. There has long been a suspicion that the average clerk at Austin had a picnic. This suspicion is likely to be realized. The interchange of ideas on "politics, science, art and religion" is a good thing in a debating society or on the street, but the clerks are not employed to indulge in such intellectual contests during business hours. A "business man," such as Col. Swain is reported to be, knows such things are not to be permitted in a well regulated business establishment.

Nothing succeeds like success, and the The man who makes his money by the Nothing succeeds like success, and the Waco Day tells how that is sometimes achieved. The Roman fair, to which the unsophisticated Sabines were invited, has its representatives at the present day:

Several gentlemen from Waco attended the St. Louis Exposition. Every one must have noticed that the exposition was pecu-tiarly in the interest of St. Louis. Every man in St. Louis, who had any claim at all nan in St. Louis, who had any claim at all o social and business standing, was a spe-ial committee of one to make the event a uccess, not alone as to the display and the intertainment to the thousands of visitors, success, not alone as to the display and the entertainment to the thousands of visitors, but a financial success—a money-making enterprise for St. Louis. And these efforts were successful. A hundred thousand people, first and last, went to St. Louis, and each one of the 100,000, according to his or her inclinations, left anywhere from $25 to $150 of his or her money in St. Louis. Millions of dollars were spent and left there. Now there is a lesson in this for Waco. Commencing on the 10th of November there is to be a stock show, fair and races at the Waco Driving Park. We can not attract 100,000 visitors here, as St. Louis did, but in addition to those who are sure to come, because of the races or the stock show, we can attract at least from 2000 to 3000 desirable visitors, who would not come otherwise. The Texarkana States regards cities as more apt to produce bad men than the country. The scarcity of good young men in large cities is among the ancient proverbs of the wise, and in these days the great majority do not grow wiser and better as life wears away. Still, counting cowboys and frontiersmen, the cities may owe their bad pre-eminence more to the fact that masses of men are more prone to do evil than isolated individuals or a few. Yet the States is impartial and says:

Men are simply men the world over. They have a similitude in character in sparsely settled regions as well as the cos-mopolitan cities. But in these latter great commercial centers there exist all the confamily, with a decidely strong and evil-di-posed element rendered the more powerf and venomous in their wicked tendencic ever ready to rise to the surface, like ever ready to rise to the surface, like a green scum on impure water, whenever the occasion and opportunity present themselves. Thus it is that epochs of social disorder or the warring elements of society when brought into contact with some momentus struggle cause this turbulent mass to come to the front, like a spirit of bevil, and assume the leadership in deeds of belligerant demonstration too frequently resulting in bloodshed and the destruction of life and property. of life and property.

The Banner says:

We think newspapers make a serious mistake when they speak of silver dollars as "80-cent dollars." Our standard silver dollars contain as much silver as they did in the days of our forefathers, and are really much more valuable, because their purchasing power is greater. A silver dollar contains 100 cents in silver, and is an honest dollar. The bondholders are interested in ruling silver out. Their bonds call for a certain number of "dollars." If they can demonetize silver and contract the amount of money in circulation, of course the purchasing power of the gold dollar becomes correspondingly greater, thereby enriching the bondholder at the expense of the people. The Banner believes in "honest money," consisting of silver, gold, and paper of consisting of silver, gold, and paper of equal value. We do not believe in fiat money. Neither do we believe in increas-ing the amount of metal in our standard

The Austin Statesman says: The Austin Statesman says:

The letter in which his excellency appears opposed to immigration to Texas was written by him some six months ago, in answer to one Mr. Baker, a citizen of North Texas. That gentleman, for some time previous, had been importuning the Governor to aid him in the introduction of a vast number of dead-head immigrants to this State—in fact, wanted executive assistance to sell his dead-head immigrants to this State—in fact, wanted executive assistance to sell his (Baker's) lands, of which it is said he possesses many thousand acres. In the face of constitutional inhibition Gov. Ireland was not disposed to favor any such scheme. It is well known that in ome of his many epistles to the Governor he explained that the railroad companies were running excursions into Texas, but always stopped their trains on their own lands. What a great pity it is that the days of Texas Radicalism were not in vogue when Mr. Baker made his application for free trains to people this State with paupers, for that is just what he wants, as is evidenced by Gov. Ireland's answer to his letter. We believe that ninetynine out of every hundred men in Texas, when they understand the matter, will indorse Gov. Ireland's action in the premises.

A Stranger While Walking Along the Railroad Track Meets a Sudden Death. Special to The News.

QUEEN CITY, Oct. 17.—As passenger train No. 301 was nearing the depot this morning at 9 o'clock a middle-aged man was observed walking on the track, coming toward the depot, with his back toward the approaching passenger train. The engineer blew the whistle and did everything possible to warn the man of the nearness of the engine, but to no purpose. The cow-catcher struck the unfortunate man near the feet and threw his body to the right of the train, crushing his skull from crown to base and cutting off both legs completely, the right leg being severed in two different places. Strange to say no blood of any consequence was observed flowing from the severed limbs, but the flow of blood was immense from near the head. flowing from the severed limbs, but the flow of blood was immense from near the head. MAJOR WALDO ON CONSOLIDATIONS. Austin, Oct. 17 .- Major Waldo, commissioner of the Texas Traffic Association, has written a letter to the Attorney General which shows the view the railway officials take of the proposed prosecutions for rail-way consolidation. He seems to differ widely from the Governor, who stated in his letter to the Attorney General that he considered all trunk lines in the State, in a certain sense, competing lines. Major Waldo writes as follows: "Your favor of the 28th inst. received this morning. I had an interview with the Governor, in which he stated he had no referonce to the Texas Traffic Association in his ence to the Texas Traffic Association in his letter, which was given publicity about that time, but that he has and was considering the consolidation of railroad lines in the State. After I had explained to him the merits of the association he stated that he did not think there was anything in its organization in violation of the laws of the State. I note your anxiety about the supposed consolidation of railroads in the State of Texas and really do not see any cause for it. I am as disinterested in the matter as any one, and believe that it can be established that there really is no consolidation of lines in Texas contrary to law or public policy. I refer, of course, to parallel lines."

To commence with the Missouri Pacific in Texas: It comprises the International and Great Northern, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas and the Galveston, Houston and Henderson Railways. This is known as the Missouri Pacific Railway.

The next is the Texas and Pacific system, and is operated and accounted independently in its entire affairs. It is true, there is the same executive head over all.

Next comes the Southern Pacific Co., which is made up of the Texas and New Orleans Railway and the Galveston, Houston and San Antonio. Here there is no consolidation of competing lines.

Next is the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe, which is under Galveston management, and is not consolidated with anything competing with it. letter, which was given publicity about that s not consolidated with anything competing

Next, the Houston and Texas Central Railway, which is in the hands of the court, under a receiver, and is entirely independent of any other property. This is also the case with the Texas Central Railway and the Texas and St. Louis Railway. So, really I consider the railroad properties in the State at this investment in barrens and the railroad properties in the State at this investment in barrens. the State, at this juncture, in better shape than they have been for several years. There has been, of course, consolidations of lines connecting with each other, but not parallel.

The same amount of competition exists to-day as has at any time during the existence of railroads in Texas.

I am in accord with you in the belief that it has never been the intention of the Legislature to prevent the organization of railroads into traffic associations, having in view harmony of operation among themselves. The word "pool" is entirely misunderstood. It has no application to railroad affairs, and its meaning is not only remote, but foreign, to railroad conduct. ANOTHER MATTER.

The proposed removal of the offices of the Sunset Railroad from Houston, it will re re membered, brought out the Governor, who, in a letter to the Attorney General, asked his attention to that fact, and before the law of the Nineteenth Legislature requiring every railroad in the State to maintain a public office in the locality where is principal business is tarried on in this State. Evidently the principal busithis State. Evidently the principal business in this State is transacted at Houston, a fact that the Governor could take cognizance of officially.

But the Attorney General calls attention to a feature of the law mentioned which had probably been overlooked by the Governor: The last section of the act provides that all railroads within this State shall have six months after this act goes into effect within which time to comply with the provisions thereof. As the act did not go into effect until about the last of June, the railroads have six months from the last of June, or till January, 1886, in which to establish the public offices required. Hence no action could be taken by the Attorney General until after the 1st of January.

John B. Reese, a conductor on the Southern Kansas Railroad, has had a rather remarkable recovery from an illness of about a year. On Sept. 9, 1884, he was taking a Southern Kansas stock train from Honey well to Cherryvale, and was standing on top of the caboose. He was about getting into the car while the train was moving at the rate of thirty or forty miles an hour, when his foot slipped and he fell to the ground. His leg was fractured and his ground. His leg was fractured and his shoulder and right arm were dislocated. He received a compound and comminuted fracture of the leg, necessitating the removal of part of the bone. Although the injuries which he received were so severe that no hope was entertained of his recovery, he is not only at work now on a passenger train but has almost recovered the full use of his leg. He was a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, and it was mainly through leg. He was a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, and it was mainly through the efforts made by his friends in the organization that he recovered. He was well taken care of by them. Conductor W. H. Last summer symptoms of blood poisoning set in and again his friends took the best care of him.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

The Admiral Enlightens the General on the Wily Waiter.

Bacarat Billy and His Career on the Green Cloth-Some Shining Stars of the Stage-Reportorial Reforms-A Sample Scene of the Slums.

Special Correspondence of The News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 .- The two men who sat supping in a Broadway restaurant were by profession killers of human beings. They were Rear Admiral S. B. Luce, of the United States navy, and Gen. Philip R. de Trobriand, of the army. And yet they refrained from slaying the waiter who served them. Why should they have inflicted capital punishment on him? I will tell you. After they were through with eating and drinking, the General asked for the check and the waiter brought it. The amount was $3 35. A $5 bill was hand to him, and presently he returned with check and change on a plate. A $1 note, 10 cents and 5 cents lay atop of the slip of paper, under which was concealed 50 cents. The General took up the note, left the 15 cents as a tip for the waiter, and got up to depart with his friend.

"Stop!" thundered the Admiral to the waiter. "Set down that platter."

"Yes, sare," responded the Frenchman, obeying with greater reluctance than he

"Now, General, look at this and learn a lesson," the Admiral continued. "The change out of the $5 ought to have amounted to $1 65. You got only $1 and gave 15 cents to this rascal. You never thought of the missing 50 cents. Where do you suppose it is? I will show you," and he drew the check off the plate, disclosing the coin snugly lying underneath. "Our grimacing thief here would have had it safe in his pocket by this time if left to complete the operation."

'I assure you, sir, zat I nefer know-" the fellow began.

"Shut up," commanded the Admiral, in the tone of a sea captain shouting an order to a sailor away up the mast. "Now ob-serve, General, that if you had stopped to count your change and discovered that it was short, he would have picked up the plate, deftly drawn aside the check, and shown you that the right amount was

The naval man had simply exposed a trick that is being practiced by many waiters with considerable success.

BACARAT BILLY AND THE BOGUS BIVALVES. Next evening I witnessed a bigger row over a smaller deceit. The Billy Deutch who used to be somewhat famous as a sensational manager for the Florences, and afterward got the title of the Bacarat King through his reckless and for a time suc cessful gambling in Paris, is engaged in the job of crimsoning New York town. He is on a prolonged spree, to express it in plain English, and many fights are incidental to the employment. He has once been arraigned in a police court. On this occasion his antagonist was a middle-aged man, and immense commotion was caused. Billy's career has been adventurous. A few years ago he was a clerk on $12 a week. His uncle died and left $5000 to him. He then went into the show business, but found it too slow for his rapid temperament. He went to Paris, played all of a night in a bacarat club, and the first gleam of daylight fell on a heap of winnings, amounting to $80,000. His luck varied from good to bad during the ensuing two weeks, but at the close he had a fortune of $600,000, and the notoriety of the bacarat king filled Paris. He next made a sweeping, hilarious tour of Europe, accompanied by a large party of congenial friends. Meanwhile he kept up his gaming, and his experience was little short of miraculous, for at the end of a year he was still richer than at the beginning, although his expenditures had been enormously extravagant. He returned to New York and was a wonder of the day by reason of his princely manner of living. The wildest exploits in luxurious prodigality were his. Again he sailed to Paris, and there in a month he lost all his money on the same green tables that had yielded it to him. His phenomenal period was over, and of course the professional gamblers plundered him. Now he has only a small remnant of the big fortune. Coal Oil Johnny's nightmare of wealth was not more remarkable. But Billy's niceties of exaction are unimpaired. The cause of the turmoil that I saw him in was his discovery that, having sent back some small raw oysters that had fell on a heap of winnings, amounting to I saw him in was his discovery that, having sent back some small raw oysters that had been brought on a plate, the same ones were returned to him in shells far too big to have ever belonged to them. He detected the fraud too late, for it was only the last of the lot that chanced to present to his eye the tell-tale discrepancy of size.

STORIES OF THE STAGE. Writing of actresses, you have of course seen Mrs. D. P. Bowers, and doubtless her sentimental elopement in "East Lynne" has set the tears to running from your eyes. Thousands of times she has in mimicry thus outraged the proprieties of matrimony and died in expiation of her crime. How hard it is to disassociate the performer from the performance. I met Mrs. Bowers in Broadway, a comely matron, accompanied by two adult sons who are landiords of a Broadway hotel, and it really seemed strange that she exhibited none of the friv-olity and venturesomeness of the dramatic heroine whom she has so long enacted, but was the altogether solid mother of deferen-tial sons, who did not have the air of protecting her at all from an "East Lynne" exploit.

daughter of that old-timer, Lydia Thompson, is acting here in Mary Ander son's company, under the name of Tilbury Her father was one of the earlier husbands Her father was one of the earlier husbands of the noted burlesquer, dating twenty-two years ago. The girl is a reproduction of her mother—smoothe, plump, blonde and handsome; and in manner, too, she is strikingly similar, but Lydia is not inclined to let her girl go into the field of smirk, kick and undress, and the inherited talent for that sort of thing serves the purposes of soubrette roles in the legitimate drama tolerably well. But it is like a backward transportation to sixteen years ago to sit tolerably well. But it is like a backward transportation to sixteen years ago to sit and see the fresh fac simile of the British blonde speaking and smirking so exactly as the original did, though the matter is Shakespearean instead of burlesque. "Upon your word of honor, and to settle a great public question," I said to Sam Colville, who had been the American manager of the mother, as he stood watching the daughter, "how old is Lydia Thompson?"

"This is heaven's truth," he replied;
"Miss Thompson was only thirty-one when she first came to America. The idea got started somehow that she was forty, but that wasn't so. She is now only forty-seven, and lacks at least ten years of looking it."

the fact that there is any danger of traveling on that route. Of course that is the

the fact that there is any danger of traveling on that route. Of course that is the theory.

"But you certainly know," I said to President Chauncey M. Depew, of the Vanderbilt roads, "that no such result is achieved. The news of disasters is got by the newspapers just as fully, though at more expense and trouble, as though the particulars were freely given by the employes, and the only damage that you do to the reporting is to force inacuracies into it." "Well," he answered, "I think you're right about that. No doubt the rule was long ago a feasible means of keeping accidents out of print—in the days when the journals spent comparatively little money in news gathering; but now it works no such purpose, and I am inclined to abolish it."

In a quite different branch of reporting a great change has taken place. Society news is no longer struggled for or surreptitiously obtained. Railroad smashes are of public consequence and the papers are bound to tell all about them, but crushes in fashionable drawing rooms are so numerous in New York that one in a thousand yields all the matter of that kind desired. The upshot is that, as a general thing, no entertainment or wedding is reported unless the facilities are given by the host. It is perfectly easy, nowadays, for any New York family, no matter how wealthy or consequential they may be, to keep out of publication. All they need do is to shut the door. No reporter will pry it open. The doings of those who like social fame are sufficient to fill the society columns chock full. These people are only a small portion of what, gauged by any measure of the requirements, are entitled to be called "our best families," and they do not include any of the vast multitude of mere pretenders. The outcome of these conditions is the Astor-Vanderbilt clique, comprising scarce a hundred families, and out of this minute section of New York society has been constituted a circle that, to distant observers, stands for all that is altitudinous in Gotham. They are performers before the public.

A SAMPLE SCENE OF THE SLUMS. A less sightly seeker of fame or infamy entered a newspaper office with a gait that was a curious combination of swagger and sneak. Some of the alcohol that he had drunk was in the fiery surface of his bleary face, and he was palpably one of our worst he asked.

"Do you write up things for the papers?"

Although his call seemed to imply a row over something that had been published in the criminal reports, I ventured so far as to admit that I was concerned in journalism.

"Then w'at's the matter with coming to my place an' givin' it a boom?" he asked.

"There ain't a wickeder crib in New York. I ain't givin' you a stall as it's as big as Mc&lory's, or Geoghegan's, or Harry Hill's, but I'll stake my life as it's tougher an' stinkiner. Say, mister, will you give me a send off?"

The queer invitation was accepted at midstinkiner. Say, mister, will you give me a send off?"

The queer invitation was accepted at midnight. I found the name of the resort, as the proprietor had given it to me, daubed over the door of a basement in a narrow, mean street, just off the Bowery. A loud din was being made on a piano and a violin, lights glared out through gaudily colored windows, and pictures of actresses cut from street posters were pasted round the precipitate entrance. Descending into the pandemonium, I was astonished not to find as much hilarious commotion as the noise had prepared me to see. One man was striking the keys of the piano such blows as ought to have knocked them to pieces in a week, and another was scraping a fiddle with a bow by so much main strength that the strings were bound to be speedily sawed in two. Behind the bar stood the fellow who had visited me. He was a little depressed, but very cordial.

"What this place wants is boomin'," he said. "You put it in the papers that the Empyrean Temple of Terpsichore and Bacchus"—I have substituted a name for the one that he had bestowed on his enterprise—"is the lowest, vilest, wickedest den in the world. 'Twon't hurt you, y'understand, and 'twill set me goin'. I'm only sellin' two kegs o' beer a night, but I'd stick the faucet in twenty if once I got notorious. What I want is to bring the gullies in, and—"

"The what?"

"The what?"
"The gullies—the chumps, greenhorns, rurals—them's what we call gullies. Once in here, an' my three lifters would—"

"Your three what?"

"Your three what?"

"Lifters, sir. Them's women hired to set round and drink with the gullies. I got three queens of the biz. Only two's here tonight, My sister's away. But here's my wife. Come here, Sal, let me introduce you to a gentleman of the press. Sal could swaller twenty drinks in two hours, an' no two out the same bottle, without slewin'. An' the other's my daughter, Jen. She ain't Sal's equal at liftin', but she's comin' on an' bound to get there."

There seemed to be no reason to dispute the wickedness of this man or his saloon. I gazed on the women in astonishment at their relationship to their employer.

"And this girl is your daughter?" I said to the woman.

"And this girl is your daughter?" I said to the woman.

"No, sir," and a gleam of indignation slightly illuminated the murkiness of her character, "she ain't my child or she wouldn't be here. But she's Dan's daughter," and as much scorn was in her expression as she dared to indulge in. "Dan can do what he pleases with his own flesh and blood."

Moses Did Not Die.

The editor of a Jewish paper published in New York, relates that Dr. Hauffe, the celebrated physician of Vienna, one day received a telegram from Cracow, requesting him to repair thither with all possible haste, as Moses Abrahamson was very ill and required advice. This Moses was known to be one of the richest men of his tribe. The doctor, who had an enormous practice, and was very busy at the time, wired back:

"My fee will be 2000 florins."
A second dispatch urged him to come without delay, but added that he might surely do it for less.
"Not a kreutzer less than 2000 florins."

was the reply from Vienna, whereupon a inal telegram came to hand directing him to start at once.

It was in the depth of winter and bitterly

It was in the depth of winter and bitterly cold, so that the medical man was anything but pleased at the prospect of the long journey. But what was his disgust on being met at the Cracow railway station by a deputation of long-coated Polish Jews, bringing the tidings that he came too late, as Moses Abrahamson had died a few hours before. As there was no train back to Vienna that day, he was perforce compelled to put up for the night at a hotel. Meanwhile the news of the great doctor's arrival spread through the town, and sick people of every description, both Jews and Christians, besieged his door. So many afflicted persons touched his compassionate heart, that he freely gave them the advice they needed. When at last he got to the station and was about to step into the carriage, a Polish Jew came sliding up to him with a knowing smile on his face and whispered in his ear: "I say, doctor, I only want to tell you that Moses Abrahamson isn't dead. Not a bit of it; he was among those patients whom you cured for nothing."

Cured by Mosquito Bites.

REPORTORIAL REFORMS.

Misconceptions go uncorrected for decades because nobody takes the trouble to right the wrong. Ask any railroad manyou happen to know why it is that, under strict orders from his official superiors, he will give no information whatever about an accident on his line. He will be unable to explain the reason for this common usage in management, except that he vaguely supposes that the company desires to suppress Boston Traveler.

MARY ANDERSON.

Nym Crinkle's Critique of Her Rosalind. Resonant of Declamation but Lacking of Coy Sportiveness.

New York World. Miss Mary Anderson had a reception at the Star Theatre last night. A more distinguished or resplendent assemblage than that which welcomed her back was probably never seen in the historic house. Everybody of note in the social world was there, and the literary and critical contingent was unusually large. It was evident that for once the play was not the thing. "As You Like It"—which, as Mrs. Jamison once said of it, "seems to be piped by a shepherd boy to some Amaryllis in the shade"-has become in the repertory of the modern theatre a mere vehicle to exhibit the Rosalind. It is the least dramatic and one of the daintiest of Shakespeare's fantasies. Played by an excellent stock company, it is doubtful if it would twice get an audience. In our own time it has furnished opportunities for beauty of face and limb, for scene-painter and for prize-fighter, and now it lends itself to the return of the American actress. It never had a more picturesque or a more effective Rosalind, and it never lent its poetry to a gifted woman who so failed to fulfil the promise of its delicacy to the sense. Mary Anderson is peculiarly a heroic actress. Not alone her statuesque figure and imperious mien, but the very vibration of her magnificent voice suggest the dynamics of histrionism, not the daintiness of poesy. Her leap into the drama some years ago was that of Minerva full-armed. Evolution stood still while she played Pauline and Parthenia with her own emphasis, that was both a trade mark and a triumph. Her Juliet, resonant, clarion-voiced and provincial, unfolded less like a rose than a revolution, and when she threatened to kill Romeo "with much cherishing," strong men trembled a little at the possibilities. In all this one saw a magnificent woman, limbed like the Farnese Venus and voiced like a Valkyrie, whose Grecian head made profiles of symmetry in every pose and whose stride heroic actress. Not alone her statuesque

Valkyrie, whose Grecian head made profiles of symmetry in every pose and whose stride brought back the lost step of the tragedy queen. But the chariot of her success ran roughly over the roses of thought. Sentiment was bruised a little by the falchion of her voice, and the wheels of genius, like those of Juggernaut, killed many exquisite creations that came in their way.

A mere girl, it was only reasonable that we should wait and hope. It was somewhat paradoxical to even suggest that a Minerva could develop. But we believed against mythology. She came back to us last night after an English victory in which triumphought to have meant tuition if not intuition, and as if to correct the heroic measurements she had left behind her here, she came as Rosalind in that dreary woodland fantasie where every lady is half a dryad and where every gentleman is half a sentimentalist.

It may be said that Rosalind received no such answering admiration as leapt instantly into acclaim for Miss Anderson.

such answering admiration as leapt instantly into acclaim for Miss Anderson. The woman was approved unanimously before the actress had been seen. A thousand voices gave her the instant verdict of popularity, and twice that number of warm hands went heartily together with welcome. After this recognition of the favorite came the challenge of ability, and leaving the celebrity we may come soberly to the examination of Miss Anderson's performance of Rosalind. To do that with any degree of fairness we must premise, with the consent of all recognized critics and commentators, that this is a role so lightly drawn, so deftly compounded of the volatile essences of femininity, that only the most gracious and exquisite sensibility can put it in its spiritual integrity before the senses. Shakespeare here drew with a poet's license and a poet's love a woman whose most precious weaknesses shone through a man's attire as softly and defantly as the harvest moon shines through the masquerading mists of a September night, turning the concealment into a veil of beauty. Here is not the assumption of a man's character with his clothes. She wears no doublet and hose in her disposition. From first to last her frolic bears the coyness of a girl, and the key of its whole measure is found in the lines that seem to spring out of her very nature,

"For innocence hath a privilege in her

"For innocence hath a privilege in her To dignify arch jests and laughing eyes." Against this obvious requirement of the poem, which I insist never falls to the objective rudeness of a play, we have to measure Miss Anderson's assumption. In my opinion that assumption falls shert in the matter of sensibility, suggestion, warmth, tenderness and all the subtle qualities of emotion transmitted through mobile and responsive functions. It is a Rosalind with-emotion transmitted through mobile and responsive functions. It is a Rosalind without coyness; who commands, but scarcely woos. Her love for Orlando, so frankly and yet so sweetly borne upon the text, gains no thrill of passion in her emission of it. It rings with an organic cadence of brave tones, but it does not throb with the sincerity and ardor of affection.

Somehow I got the impression from this performance of hers that it was breadth of exhibit and not fineness of texture that won the eye and the ear. Her talents are on a large scale. She moves in great curves and speaks in open diapasons, and whether she moves or speaks or sighs she conveys the idea of sufficiency and keeps the assumption, like a shadow, a little in the rear of the splendid personality.

It was not until she reached the speech:

So was I when your Highness took his duked.

So was I when your Highness took his dukedom. dom, So was I when your Highness banished him. Treason is not inherited, my Lord, that she caught the house. The line, "Treason is not inherited, my lord," rang out with vehement and indignant power. Her whole manner took on the native imperious tragedy air, and the audience broke out in the later forest scenes a more capti-In the later forest scenes a more captivating boy was never witnessed. Her dress was comely without being picturesque, and as she did not wear high boots she exhibited a shapely leg, which in its contour and action was altogether more womanly than her arms, which have an oratorical and executive sweep. In the scene under the boughs with Orlando, when she gives the marks of a lover, she wore a long red robe, and the addition of drapery, which she has learned to manage with effective grace, gave an instant picturesqueness to her figure and action. During this scene she read her lines with admirable discretion, but her gesticulatory emphasis was overdone and her lines with admirable discretion, but her gesticulatory emphasis was overdone and her arms were scarcely ever in repose. They were extended from the shoulder as if giving a command. They described beautiful curves and they went up in superb arches over her head. In all of this there was not a bit of the coy sportiveness of Rosalind, but in its place a resonant and somewhat authoritative declamation carried by an inimitable voice, a matured intelligence.

But with all this it is the writer's opinion that Rosalind is a role in which the undeniable dramatic gifts of Miss Anderson do not show to the best advantage. She is not by nature a comedienne, and although she plays the part with the natural endowments of face, figure and voice, it is not, to the observer who has a clear and correct knowledge of Shakespeare's poem, the Rosalind of the Forest of Arden.

And of Such is the News of Chicago,

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean "How it is," said "Cope" Townsend, room clerk at the Palmer yesterday, "that a woman can draw a revolver and shoot a man in front of the Columbia Theatre with hundreds of people around and not a word of it get in the newspapers, is something I am unable to understand."

am unable to understand."

"Did such an affair occur?"

"Why, of course it did. Mr. Palmer there, in charge of the keys, was on the ground and saw the whole thing."

Mr. Palmer was seen and asked, "How about the shooting?"

"I didn't see it," replied the namesake of the great hotel man, "but one of the bell-boys wno did told me about it."

The bellboy in question was hunted up. He remarked: "I didn't see the shooting, but heard the report of a pistol. A woman tore a man's collar off, and I heard the man tore a man's collar off, and I heard the man tore a man's collar off.

say, 'I'm shot,' and went down into the saloon in the basement." The proprietor of the saloon alluded to, who was on duty until midnight Monday, knew nothing of the occurrence, but investigation developed the fact that a dude, who belongs to the curbstone fraternity organized to stare at ladies when the theatres have dismissed their audience, went a little too far, and the lady who was insulted took him by the standing collar and tore it off, very much disarranging his immuculate shirt front in so doing. This is the true story of Mr. Townsend's report about the "man who was shot in front of the Columbia Theater, and not a word of it got into the papers."

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Wheat opened rather unsettled, but soon became firm and sold up to the extreme of yesterday afternoon's bulge on an active demand from local dealers. There were very few orders from other points, and as soon as the wants of the local scalpers were supplied the price cased off and the market broke heavily, declining 1½c, with much selling of long wheat at the decline. There was some buying, but not of any large lines, and the market ruled rather dull till the close. A good many war rumors were flying about, but they could not be traced to any reliable source. Cables were generally dull, and still foreign houses were buying some wheat, Geddee especially taking on quite a line. The export movement was very small. Receipts at all Western points were 35,000 bu, and the crowd is looking for 1,500,000 bu increase in the visible supply. Toward the close the market became quite weak, and finally closed at about the inside prices of the day.

Oats were infair demand, but the trade in futures was dull and prices unchanged.

Corn opened strong and active, but gradually fell away under the weight of offerings and closed dull. R. Warren sold a large quantity of May, and Hutchinson is selling year. Cash was, firm, and about ½c premium over October. The market closed weak.

For Monday receipts are expected to be 200 cars wheat, 400 cars corn and 145 cars oats.

Provisions were dull and neglected.

ST. LOUIS LIVE STOCK MARKET.

St. LOUIS, Oct. 17.—Cattle—Receipts 402 head; shipments 915 head. There was no trading of any consequence to-day, and the market was very quiet, without a single interesting feature. Offerings of all kinds were small and consisted mostly of common stock left over from the day before. Buyers were present only in small numbers and made no serious efforts to operate. The receipts the past week have been very fair, but generally of a light and medium quality. The demand was fairly active, and each day's arrivals were cleared up before the close. Values have been pretty steady up to near the close, when they developed weakness and declined from 10c to 15c.

TIDINGS FROM TERRELL.

Jordon Adams Arrested—Accidental Shooting of Sheriff Wilson's Wife-Sale of Attached Goods-Personal and General.

Special to The News. TERRELL, Oct. 17 .- Mr. E. M. Leverette, Deputy Sheriff of Smith County, came in on this morning's west bound train, having in charge Jordan Adams, who is wanted in this county for the murder of Wm. Myrick near Elmo, Nov. 8, 1883. Adams was arrested in Tyler yesterday at the suggestion of a citizen of Elmo, who was at Tyler on business, and seeing Adams, informed the Sheriff that he was wanted at Kaufman on a charge of murder. A telegram from Sheriff Wilson verified this statement, and Adams was arrested and incarcerated in jail preparatory to starting for Kaufman.

The facts connected with the crime with which Adams is charged are said to be as follows: On the day of the murder, Adams came home under the influence of liquor and began to abuse his wife, and she fear ing some bodily injury, fled for protection to the house of her brother-in-law, William Myrick, a short distance away. Adams followed her, and when Myrick admonished him not to abuse his wife he shot him down. Myrick died in a few hours. A reward of $200 has been offered for Adams' arrest and

A very painful and probably fatal accident happen at Kaufman yesterday to the wife of Sheriff Wilson. Mrs. Wilson, taking a pistol out of a scabbard for the purpose of carrying it to her husband, who was waiting at the door, let it fall to the floor. The pistol was discharged, the ball taking effect. It made three flesh wounds on her person. Sheriff Wilson, who is here to-day, says she is very badly hurt.

In the sale of the Bowen Bros.' stock to-day the drugs were sold separate, bringing 40 cents on the dollar, amounting to $606 69; the furniture sold for $157 50; total amount of sale, $764 19. This will be but little more than enough to pay off the costs and the first attachment.

DENTON DOTTINGS.

Half Fare Rates for Cattle Men-Mr. Reagan's Denial-Attempt to Shoot-Notes and Personals. Special to The News.

DENTON, Oct. 17 .- Hon. J. A. Carroll, of this city, vice president of the Stock Association for Texas, has received a telegram from Mr. Hoxie to the effect that cattlemen will be furnished transportation over the Gould lines to attend the convention at St. Louis for one half fare for the round trip.

A citizen of Denton has received a letter from Congressman Reagan denying the existence of a Congressional pool, and says in plain words that the whole thing is a lie. Jeff Venters attempted to shoot his stepfather, J. M. Salmon, yesterday. The latter was engaged in sacking oats, when Venters came up and accused him of having cheated him out of the rent of his farm, and, after some threatening language, drew a pistol and seemed ening language, drew a pistol and seemed about to shoot when his mother, Mrs. Salmon, interfered, and in a scuffle both Venters and his mother fell down, when Bob Salmon and Mr. Stine ran up and secured Venters. Mr. Salmon took the pistol away from him and went to town for an officer. The farm in question is the homestead of the late Hon. S. A. Venters, and has been the home Hon. S. A. Venters, and has been the home of the widow both before and since her marriage to Mr. Salmon, but Jeff claims that his father gave the farm to him. Jeff has disappeared.

LAGGING AND LOWERING.

Cattle at Chicago Dull and Dropping the Past Week.

The Market Stocked Full of all Grades and the Better Qualities Only Sought-Texans Holding up Well-The Closing Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The cattle market during the past week has been rather "slumpy," especially for undesirable grades. Receipts on the early days were large, but still hardly came up to the big supplies which had been expected. The demand for good to choice fat beeves was brisk and more than equaled the number offered, so that the weakness caused by full pens was confined entirely to common undesirable lots. Both shippers and dressed-beef operators purchased liberally, and some choice stock was taken for Liverpool, but the export inquiry was rather slugglish. No really fancy, extra-heavy steers were offered, and there was no surplus of desirable cattle. A few good 1250@ 1465 pound animals sold at $5 70@6, but some cattle weighing a great deal more went at much less. Some salesmen quoted the general market lower, but as a rule there was no quotable alteration except on very thin and coarse kinds.

A few good to choice lots of butchers' stuff suitable for the city shop trade sold fairly well at fully former rates, but the general market for native cows and mixed stock was dull and weak in sympathy with the canning trade. Butchers were hard to suit and wanted to do a good deal of picking and culling. Coarse and very thin lots were found hard to dispose of and salesmen were compelled to work very hard to accomplish very little. Rangers arrived in large numbers, a large proportion of each day's receipts being of this class. Offerings from the Northern country included some very good fat beeves, but the general quality was poor. The demand was active, however, and prices were steady. Dressed beef firms bought liberally and canning establishments purchased the bulk of the Texans and most of the low-priced Northern cattle.

The market for stockers and feeders was almost lifeless. There were large supplies each day and almost no demand, but prices remained about the same.

As the week advanced daily receipts gradually increased, and the market became dull and sluggish. Buyers were in-different, or pretended that they did not want many cattle, and demanded big rewant many cattle, and demanded big reductions in prices. Sellers held back some, but there was a pretty general drop of 10@15c in shipping stock. Exporters purchased little or nothing, and trade East was reported very unsatisfactory. Common to fair cattle were in many cases unsalable, and it was impossible to get a decent bid for some prime lots. The demand for high priced beeves is very limited and very spasmodic. Now and then when a man sets an order for two cars of cattle of a critain quality and happens to find exactly what suits him, he may pay quite a fancy price. But the same salesman might get a car of better ones on the next train, and not be able to sell them within 50c of the early able to sell them within 50c of the early price.

Cows and bulls were in fair demand at lower figures. Still old cows were slow, and salesmen found it extremely hard to sell very inferior kinds even at very low prices. Competition was very light, and even the best grades of native butchering stock was weak. At the same time $3@3 25 for good cows at this season is not low. Range cattle kept coming in in full force, and buyers had plenty of Montana, Wyoming and Texas cattle to make their selections from. They sold better than native cattle of the same class, but there were somany of them that prices were weaker, and at least 10c off. Texans held up better than Northern rangers, but all were slow.

Trade in stockers and feeders was only fair at cheaper rates. Yard dealers were well loaded up, and country buyers conspicuous by their absence.

Toward the close of the week receipts fell off somewhat, but were still liberal. Supplies included a very fair proportion of plies included a very fair proportion of good to prime cattle, but there were not more strictly choice beeves than the Philalelphia and New York orders were able to absorb.

Dressed beef buyers were in fair attend-absorb.

Dressed beef buyers were in fair attendance, but while there were some few orders in hand for special kinds, many of the chief operators were holding back and acting very indifferently. Good, fat beeves were generally about steady, but the bulk of the offerings consisted of common to fair stock, which sold very slowly at another 10/m15c decline. The demand for fancy heavy cattle is limited, and half a dozen loads extra would be hard to sell.

Cows and mixed butchering stock ruled slow at about 10 cents lower. Really fat cows were in fair demand, and they nearly always sell well, but receipts are chiefly of coarse and thin kinds, which are not wanted. On days when Texans are scarce native stock can be sold to the canners, but on other days, and the "other days" at this season of the year are decidedly the most numerous, salesmen have to peddle their native stock out among the city butchers and dealers who are looking for bargains. Receipts of Southwestern cattle were light and the supply of canning stock was small. The market for Texans and for Northern rangers was about steady on the better grades, with a downward tendency in common.

The general stocker and feeder trade was

MARSHALL MATTERS.

Who will be Postmaster is the Absorbing Thought and Theme-Notes on Cotton, Burglary and Dengue.

Special to The News. MARSHALL, Oct. 17.—The question as to who will be appointed postmaster at this place is attracting some interest. The term of W. C. Pierce, present incumbent, will expire on the 24th of this month. There are several applicants for the place, but it is generally conceded that R. L. Jennings, of the printing house of Jennings Bros., will be the man, since he has the recommenda-tion of Congressman Jones. The question will doubtless be decided in another week. Cotton is coming in a little more freely, but not rapid enough to give life to busi-ness, which is remarkably dull for this sea-son.

THE GHOST EDITOR'S REVENGE.

He Turns the Horse Reporter's Toilette Touches Over in the Twilight.

Every evening and sometimes earlier visions of loveliness come into THE NEWS building clad in the newest silk, satin and cashmere devices of the modiste's art, and surmounted by the most bewitching inventions of the milliner's mind, flanked with feathers sometimes, and sometimes festooned with lace and passamenterie-or otherwise. These visions are always welcomed by THE NEWS, so much so that an upright member of the staff is constantly cept on deck in the brainery, to show them ver the building and answer interroga-

Yesterday was the ghost editor's turn to be officer of the day, and he discharged his duties from early morn till dewy eve with becoming solemnity and a sepulchral tone becoming solemnity and a sepulchral tone of voice.

Troops of girls and matrons, frequently by themselves, but occasionally with a being or so in male attire, had claimed him as their cicerone, and he had discharged his mission from basement to garret, up and down several flights of stairs, in a grave and tired way, through the various departments, all day long, so that when 6 o'clock came, and with it no one but the office cat, the ghost editor dropped into his seat in the brainery and sharpened his pencil to write John Sherman's obituary with a sad, sad smile and a sigh of relief.

His literary labors were cut off in the early bloom of their endeavor by hearing the swish of a dress on the Brussels carpet, and looking up a pair of smoky-topaz eyes were gazing at him from under a wealth of raven hair, surmounting a face of Grecian contour, supported on a Corinthin pillared neck rising above a cloud of black and crimson drapery, underneath whose folds two tiny slipperedfeet peered, like a pair of black mice taking a breathing spell before climbing a red curtain.

"Are you the horse reporter?" queried the vision of loveliness, blushing to the rims of her smoky topaz eyes.

"You shouldn't undertaker remark like that on a rank stranger when he is buried in thought," said the ghost editor, the crimson of scorn suffusing the top of his bald head and making a hairbreadth escape down the back of his neck.

"I wanted to see him" went on the young and making a harbeatth escape down the back of his neck.

"I wanted to see him" went on the young lady timidly, not noticing the joke. "I am told he is up in society matters, and I am going to give an 'evening' to some of my friends next week and would like to get him to write up the toilettes of the ladies."

"Don't do it," expostulated the disciple of G. Washington Childs. "If you get the horse reporter to do the costume act he'll upset your equine-imity. Put him on to a horse car, a slugging match or a turf meeting and he's old peaches, but if you love your friends don't call on him to describe your party. Why, the last time he was assigned to write up a ball he flounced the ladles' dresses down the back, soolloped them up the middle, banged their hair behind their ears, put china blue eves into the heads of pronounced brunettes, and raven tresses on the shoulders of straw berry blondes, and wrote among other things that 'The high stepping Miss Magasariana trotted spryly up to the wire in a pink plush hurrah circingle cut decollette, starting away from her bald-headed running mate in a claw hammered coat and penientary plush hurrah circingle cut decollette, starting away from her bald-headed running mate in a claw hammered coat and penitentiary check pants, her canary-colored mane flying en train down the back stretch while the band played a cluster diamond waitz in her pearl pink ears, and the thousands of enthusiastic spectators in the grand stand pronounced her the fastest nag that ever chewed gum in a ball room!"

"Oh, what a dreadful creature," whispered the vision, turning pale below her breath. "Does he live here—I mean do you keep him around?"

"No, he does not live here now; when he does he is kept in a box."

"Why do you keep him confined?"

"He might get all broke up if he was allowed to roam at large through the brainery. Besides, he is so charming in his literature that several infatuated creatures have ceen trying to pay their addresses to him, and if he is left lying around loose he might elope and be lost to society."

"Elope! who with?" questioned the sweet girly girl, opening her eyes in wonder ment.

"Well, you see, those creatures trying to ment.

"Well, you see, those creatures trying to pay their addresses to the horse reporter carry clubs, and as he shies at such utensils, ike a wall-eyed horse at a pile of shavings, he might be reckless enough to elope all by himself."

"Will you send somebody up to my party next week?" asked the girl with the smoky topaz eyes.

"Yes, I'll send you up the military editor; he's posted on old gold and colors and never will 'Miss' a man at dress parade."

The vision of loveliness faded away across the blushing Brussels. The ghost editor chuckled a chuck of fiendish glee, and while he reeled off his "Sepulture of the Bloody Shirt," let his sepulchral voice pervade the argent afterglow in the following tune, to wit:

The horse reporter's off his feed:

The horse reporter's off his feed;
I've ruined him with the girls;
He's a broken joint on a bended reed
That the cyclone scoops and whirls.
No more at church will he pin the Jack
To my coat—the Jack of Spades!
Nor put a centiped down my back
And make me yell like Hades!

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

A small audience witnessed the closing performance last evening of "Skipped by the Light of the Moon." The piece is a very aughable one-neither comedy nor tragedy, but a bundle of absurdities, generously supplied with musical eccentricities. The Lennoxes are clever comedians, and show themselves worthy imitators of the original Crackle and Dingle, Messrs. Harrison and Gourlay, who are responsible for the groesque situations of the play.

The "Black Flag," an excellent melodrama, and one of the pronounced successes of the last theatrical season, will be produced at the Opera House on Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, by the Edwin Thorne Co. The "Black Flag" is full of stirring situations and has enough of the comedy element to relieve the heavy pressure of the emoto relieve the heavy pressure of the emotional parts. The title of the play is suggested by the custom obtaining in English prisons of hoisting a black flag on the escape of a prisoner. The Thorne Co. promise special scenery for the occasion and a cast fully equal to the one which made the play so popular in the East.

The "Black Flag" will be succeeded on Friday and Saturday evenings of the present week, and at the Saturday matinee, by "A Mountain Pink," with Belle Moore as the heroine. The play deals with life among the moonshiners of North Carolina and has enjoyed a full measure of success elseenjoyed a full measure of success else where.

The Dallas Military.

The Dallas Light Guards, only organized a few months ago, are giving evidence of remarkable expertness on the drill ground. They march, wheel and form like veterans, and say that if backed by the citizens they expect to do something next spring that will redound to the credit of Dallas. The company was fortunate in being officered by gentlemen who have made a study of the art of war. Capt. Cook lately served on the staff of the Governor of Colorado and is well up in company, batallion and brigade drill. First Lieut. Milton Dargan is a graduate of the Naval Academy at Anapolis and understands the "hayfoot srtawfoot" business as well as the ropes. Second Lieut. Tom McLennan is a fine looking soldier, straight as an arrow, and the recipient of a liberal military education. First Sergeant Hawkins, on whose efforts the perfect drill and discipline of the company largely depends, is well up in the minutiæ of company drill, and knows when to tell the boys to "come out a little in the center" and "back a little on the right," enough for the men to see well. The fatigue uniform of the company, cadet grey, is expected every day, and the full dress uniform when decided upon. It will, it is reported, be as flash as that of Billy Wilson's Zouaves. This is more than likely, as the company is largely composed of young men with a large cash balance.

The Hibernian Rifles, made up of ringing metal, are also well officered, well drilled, and promise to make the welkin ring if ever their adopted county or its cause needs their aid. They too expect to carry off laurels on the drill ground when the swallows return. enough for the men to see well. The fatigue lows return.

The Crawford Battery, Capt. Andrew Jackson Houston commanding, are handicapped by being limited to one section of artillery but expect to soon have a reinforcement of guns, toward which the State Adjutant General is using efforts. Although organized at a comparatively recent data organized at a comparatively recent date, it gives promise of showing up well, as its Captain is a thorough disciplinarian, which is shown by the history and afterclap of the Lampasas drill contest.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

An Alliance of Dallas County Organized Talk on the Inside and Outside of the Meeting.

A meeting of Dallas County farmers was held vesterday at Oak Lawn School-house, two miles north of the city, for the purpose of organizing a County Farmers' Alliance. The attendance was large and solid, and the interchange of views indulged in showed that the planters are practical in the use of economic methods in the management of their affairs. Several ladies attired a la mode drove to the meeting with their husbands. To the reporter accustomed to visiting rural districts all over the United States, the first thing that attracted his attention was the culture and attractiveness of the ladies than which there can be no stronger evidence of the happy and prosperous community, and where there is prosperity and happiness in the rural districts, there is the place to look for a maximum of the true and morally the rural districts, there is the place to look for a maximum of the true and morally good.

Temporary organization was effected by the election of Mr. S. H. Tucker chairman, and Mr. J. R. Johnston secretary, after which the following committee on credentials was appointed: Messrs. C. Griffith, J. J. Clancey, and B. B. Watson.

While the committee was at work Mr. J. T. Vanston, in response to several calls to address the meeting on its aims and purposes, came to the front in a strong argument in defense of the principles formulated into the platform of the Farmers' Alliance—principles that he held to be based on common sense in the clearest reasonings of political economists.

Mr. C. Griffith also responded to a general invitation for an address. He recited the history of the organization of farmers in Dallas County, and indicated the good results accomplished and to be accomplished. Mr. Griffith is a close reasoner and thoroughly informed in the relations existing between agriculture and commerce.

Mr. John Warner, of Trinity Mills, who is a prominent member of the Union Alliance, dwelt on the importance of unity among the between agriculture and commerce.

Mr. John Warner, of Trinity Mills, who is a prominent member of the Union Alliance, dwelt on the importance of unity among the farmers, in order to reach substantive results. He did not desire that antagonism should exist between classes, but wanted to see the farmers protected. From his effort, which was well delivered, the presumption was logically deducible, and so understood, that the farmers should be more freely represented in the Legislature, and should keep an eye on the lobby, where their interests have no champions.

The committee on credentials reported favorably on the following delegates: Messrs. C. M. Tucker, Pleasant Mound; L. C. McCullum, Pleasant Valley; E. L. Kemper, of Farmer's Branch; H. B. Furbee, Bruton Jackson, B. B. Watson and W. N. Mann, Morriss; J. J. Chaney, Elm Spring; J. P. Samuel and J. C. Knox, Rose Hill; J. R. Johnston, Oak Lawn; H. J. Houston and C. O. Clarke, Pau line; C. The following committee on trade was appointed: Mr. G. A. Wright, First Precinct; Mr. John Warner, Second Precinct; Mr. M. Mann, Third Precinct; Mr. C. M. Tucker, Fourth Precinct.

The platform of the organization was indorsed, and the Dallas County Alliance then adjourned to meet at Mesquite on Friday, Nov. 10, 10 a. m.

On the outside views were freely interchanged on the political situation, and the opinion was general that before the next election comes off the Dallas County Farmers' Alliance will be able to represent on erection comes on the Dahas County Farmers' Alliance will be able to represent on the floor of the conventions, county and State, the conditions, wants and circumstances of their industry. There was no disposition manifested for the formation of a farmers' class distinctively as such, but the conviction seemed widespread that it is a farmers' class distinctively as such, but the conviction seemed widespread that it is the duty of the farmers to resist class legislation detrimental to their interests, and to bring up the profession of the farmer to the full measure of its legislative possibilities and merits. One gentleman spoke encouragingly of the growth of the Alliance in Texas, saying that with the support it could draw from the labor movement there was no doubt whatever but they could carry the State within a very few years. There was no disposition shown of an intention to desert the Democratic party, the feeling being that the movement would be strong enough to run the party. What they propose doing if that expectation should not be realized is not very apparent, but a large proportion not very apparent, but a large proportion of the order believes that with no other alternative accessible the individual inter-ests of the agriculturists will be considered of paramount importance.

G. M. Danover entered suit yesterday in the County Court against Leeper Bros, for $206 rent, which he alleges to be due him on premises on Elm street

Suit was also entered by W. C DePauw, of New Albany, Ind., through his attorneys, Messrs. Thompson & Clint, against Messrs. Hamilton & Young, of Dallas, based on Hamilton & Young, of Dallas, based on an alleged account of $431-50.

A petition for divorce was filed in the District Court by Lula W. Presley vs. William H. Presley, in which the plaintiff states that they were married Feb. 25, 1885, at Cleburne; that she was then only sixteen years old, and being beguiled by the assurances of the love and devotion of the defendant, and by his promises to care for and protect. of the love and devotion of the defendant, and by his promises to care for and protect her, she, without the consent of her parents, met the defendant by appointment at Cleburne on the date aforesaid, was then and there married to him, and came to Dallas with him. Then follows a tale of woe, with the request that the bonds be broken and she restored to her maiden name, Lula W. Radford.

A light spring wagon, containing a mid-dle aged man, an old woman and a boy, came lumbering round the corner of Elm and Murphy streets yesterday evening about a quarter to 6. The man who was driving seemed perfectly oblivious of the fact that the old lady was sitting behind him in a ricketty chair, and as he carelessly turned the corner with a sudden swing out flew the old lady with the chair on top of her. Quite a crowd gathered at the scene, and the good old lady, after adjusting her garments and feeling her ribs and limbs to make sure that she was all there, slowly pulled herself together and heroically reentered the vehicle, which was once more put in motion, but with a more demure and solemn page. It is to be honed that the lady

THE COURTS.

Mayor Brown having succumbed to the dengue fever, which spares not age, beauty nor justice, was absent yesterday from the bench, which, however, was ably filled by Acting Mayor Spillman. The Acting Mayor, who is one of the nandsomest men in the Council, if he doesn't part his hair in the middle, seemed "to the manor born," middle, seemed "to the manor born," which means to say that he was in a meditative mood, like the merchant around the corner who does not want to give an onion too much or too little. There were three drunks floated into the dock, though not half seas over, and fined in an aggregate of $11, which will not go directly to Gambrinus. A tall young man, with an unpronounceable name, was yanked upon the charge of assault and battery. He said it came about in this way: He went to the variety show and wanted to take a hand said it came about in this way: He went to the variety show and wanted to take a hand in the opening where they ask conundrums, and sing and dance. The end man objected to an interrogation put in a polite but funny manner. The defendant meant no harm by it, as it was in the play, but the end man was irate, and the defendant was on the stage when the artist entered an all-around protest by hitting him, the defendant, just where his jaw was connected with his head, the implement of war being a beer bottle. Defendant from that moment declared that he could spare neither sex, age nor previous condition. moment declared that he could spare neither sex, age nor previous condition. Eight witnesses bore the mark of his wrath. He did not look like a hnrricane, but each of the eight wanted to say that the like of him had hitherto been unheard of before the footlights. The court fined him $5, and then turned him over elsewhere for striking the series coming performer, on him $5, and then turned him over elsewhere for striking the serio-comic performer on the eye and smelling the ear of the lady who sang the lullaby.

In the District Court S. Wilson was granted a divorce from George Wilson, and judgment by default, with writ of inquiry, was granted Bowser & Lemmon vs. P. Y. Burks et al. The balance of the time of the court was consumed in hearing motions.

The Justices of the Peace did not have as much as a sudden death or marriage to look after, so Judge Kendall went fishing and Judge Schuhl kept waiting for something to turn up.

LOCAL NOTES.

The teachers were paid off yesterday. The grand jury are reported to be working like beavers.

Collector Gillespie paid over yesterday to the city $2500 school fund. Sheriff Smith, in his call at the Clerk's office vesterday to settle accounts, behaved as politely as a dancing-master.

W. Waldron, who had been caged on the charge of robbery, was released yesterday by the grand jury, there being no evidence to sustain the charge. Steps are on foot for the organization of a Dallas literary society, the first meetings of which are to be held at the private residences of the members.

When the next norther comes the dengue will have to go. "If the Wyoming coal miners could turn loose on the dengue or the dengue or the miners there might be an improvement in humanity," was the remark of a citizen yesterday.

Permission to marry was granted yesterday to M. E. P. Anderson and Miss Rosa Lavender. Miss Rosa is said to be as sweet as her name. Mr. Jesse Edwards and Miss Norah Johnson also took out a license to enter upon the happy state.

Mr. John O'Connor last evening received information by wire of the death of Dick Dewey, the thoroughbred stallion trotter that for years graced the stables of Messrs. Slaughter, O'Connor & Co., of this city. The animal, preferring death to defeat, dropped dead on the track. He was valued at $10,000.

A gentleman dressed in a light suit but with an overcoat on his arm might have been observed on Main street vesterday. A friend wanted to know why he was acting so eccentrically with his wardrobe, and he answered by saying: "Haven't you seen the weather signals? There is a blue crescent, indicating clear weather, and a blue star, showing rainy weather. Old probabilities is dodging, and so am I." The questioner replied that he was not surprised at that, as old Probs had hailed from Ohio, and must have got his wires and his signals badly mixed. badly mixed.

Rev. Mr. Black, the nephew of the lamented Judge Jerre Black, is reported to be carrying things by storm at the Commerce Street Christian Church. He is pronounced by many who have heard him preach to be the peer of his illustrious uncle, whose repution as a statesman is immortalized in the annals of history, in clearness of argument, force of style and eloquence of speech. His learning is said to be remarkable and his reading very extensive. His discourse on the divinity of Christ, which will be repeated at 3:30 to-day, as an intellectual proposition, is spoken of as being unanswerable. tion, is spoken of as being unanswerable.

stimulant was so strong that he had each time fallen back into his old habits. At the suggestion of the reporter he has placed himself under the treatment of Dr. T. G. Hammer, of this city, and now says that he feels no desire whatever for any kind of stimulant. Dr. Hammer, who is now at the St. James Hotel, has perfected over six hundred cures of confirmed drunkards in this State alone. After undergoing his treatment they have no desire whatever to drink again, and every man of them will vouch for his ability to do what he claims. If you feel that you cannot control yourself go and see him, or write to him at the St. James Hotel, Dallas, Texas.

POPULAR.

The New Gallery.

Some traveling men who were visiting the many live institutions that have been continually springing up in Dallas, happened in at Webster's photograph gallery yesterday, and remarked that it was, in point of elegance and appointments, one of the most complete that they had ever seen, even in cities of a much larger size. Mr. J. H. Webster, who has been in business here about three years, has made quite a reputation for himself and is regarded as the photographer par excellence of Dallas. The apartments that he has lately fitted up with such consummate taste, occupy some fifty by a hundred feet, having handsomely draped double parlors and toilet room, Every facility is afforded to ladies and children visiting the gallery. The work turned out by Mr. Webster has given much satisfaction, as he employs none but first class workmen. Entrance to the gallery is had both on Main and Elm street.
