Polling places where Briscoe County farmers may cast ballots in the referendum on marketing quotas for the 1964 upland cotton crop were announced today by Louie Kitchens, Chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee. The referendum will be held on Tuesday, December 10.

The polling places are located as follows: Merle McMurtry home, Briscoe County Courthouse, Dempsey Gin, Quitaque City Hall, G. W. Selmon home. Polls will be open from 8:00 A. M. to 6:00 P. M.

Chairman Kitchens explained that every effort has been made to inform farmers fully about the allotment - quota program, so that the outcome of the referendum may represent the considered opinion of all voters. Farmers eligible to cast ballots are all those who engaged in the production of the upland cotton crop in 1963. Approval by at least two-thirds of the growers voting is necessary if the quotas are to go into effect for the 1964 crop.

Issues to be decided in the Dec. 10 referendum are (1) quotas or no quotas, and (2) the level of price support to be available for the 1964 upland cotton crop.

If the vote is favorable, quotas will be in effect for the crop — with penalties on any "excess" cotton produced on a farm and price support to growers who comply with their farm allotments will be available at a level of from 65 to 90 percent of parity.

If the vote is not favorable, there will be no quotas or penalties applicable to the 1964 upland cotton crop, and price support to cooperators will be at 50 percent of parity, as directed by law.

Growers who have any questions about their eligibility to vote or about any particular part of the cotton program are urged to get in touch with the ASC County Committee.

Mr. Clark later developed pneumonia and was under oxygen for a week.

Mrs. Dudley went to her father's bedside that night and stayed until the following Sunday. She reports that her father is some better, not requiring oxygen now. His right leg is in traction and will be for the next two weeks. Doctors believe he will recover now.

Luncheon guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace McDonald Sunday were his aunt, Mrs. L. M. Putman and his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Putman of Clarendon. Other Sunday afternoon guests were Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Brummett and Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Nail.

It was just about a year ago that Quitaque

CRISS SEAGAN WRITES FROM EL SALVADOR

(Ed. Note: Before he left on his overseas assignment, we asked Criss Reagan, a Peace Corps Volunteer to write and tell us of his experiences in El Salvador, to which he was assigned. His first letter came a few days ago and is most interesting, giving us a first-hand look at how some of the other people of the world live, San Salvador is not so terribly far away from us here in Texas but judging from Criss' article, they do not enjoy many of the everyday blessings we take for granted, such as bathrooms with hot and cold running water in plentiful supply, abundant foods of every description, among other things. We look forward to more letters from Criss.)

San Juan Talpa
El Salvador, C. A.
Nov. 24, 1963

Dear Quitaque,

I have been working in El Salvador as a Peace Corps Volunteer for almost three months now. My group arrived here on Sept. 10 from Miami, Fla. The original plans called for us to all meet in New York City a week after our training ended at the University of Oklahoma. From there we would leave with three other Peace Corps training groups for Puerto Rico where we would receive three more weeks of stringent physical training.

But an epidemic, some sort of fever, broke out in Puerto Rico and for our safety the training sites were closed. The Peace Corps arranged to contact every volunteer who was to arrive in New York City in enough time to stop them from coming there—everyone that is except me. You can imagine my surprise when I checked in at the designated hotel in New York City and was told at the desk that I wasn't supposed to be there. I immediately placed a call to Peace Corps headquarters in Washington, D. C. to receive further instructions. They apologized for not being able to contact me and told me to stay in NYC until they decided when our group would go on to El Salvador.

I had made previous plans to meet a friend from New Hampshire in NYC so I called him that night and he came down the next day. I also knew 4 other volunteers in NYC. They thought it was all very funny. And I must say that I didn't regret the mixup one bit as I got to spend 5 wonderful days in NYC and I saw things that I've often read of but never seen. I went to a Broadway theater production, visited the United Nations Bldg, went to the top of the Empire State Bldg., and visited numerous other famous places.

The Peace Corps notified me that the El Salvador and Costa Rica groups would leave for their host countries on the 10th of September. Instead of meeting in NYC we would meet in Miami, Fla. and from there we would leave by chartered flight (Pan Am Airlines.)

I still had 8 days left so I asked if it would be all right for me to go to New Hampshire with my friend (he is in Costa Rica now) and spend the rest of the time there. The Peace Corps okayed this suggestion and told us to pickup our airline tickets in Boston the following Saturday.

I was in Hampton, N. H. for the next 5 days and the New England countryside was very beautiful. It was just after Labor Day and the trees were beginning to change colors. The clothes I had were for a tropical climate, however.

Since neither of us had ever been to Florida we decided that upon receiving our tickets we would go to Miami and spend the rest of our time there. So, early Saturday morning we left for Boston, got our tickets and by noon we were in Miami. The tourist season had not begun there yet and we managed to find a good place to stay right on Miami Beach. We were there for the next three and one-half days. It was quite a change from cool New England.

Finally on Tuesday morning, September 10, our two groups met at the International Airport in Miami, were given our passports, and sworn in as official Peace Corps Volunteers. We boarded our plane about noon and 4 hours later we landed in San Salvador, capital city of El Salvador. Our flight had taken us over Cuba, the Gulf of Mexico, British Honduras, Guatemala, and then El Salvador.

At last after almost three months of training (12 - 15 hours a day), long hours of academic studies, psychological interviews with experts, medical examinations, and 15 inoculations for tropical diseases, we had finally made it to our host country. But our real task was just about to begin.

The first 5 weeks in El Salvador was spent living with the PCV's that were already here. Then we were assigned to small villages as members of fundamental education brigades. There are 5 persons in each brigade, consisting of 3 Salvadoreans and 2 PCV's. We are each given a specific area of work but we are also to assist any of our co-workers. My area of work is agriculture, which consists mostly of small gardens and some livestock. Other areas of work include home economics, health, recreation, and then we have a brigade leader who coordinates our programs and he may teach in the local school system.

The other PCV in my brigade is a school teacher from New York City. Her area of work is health. In February, when the school vacation is over she and I will begin teaching English in the "Plan Basico" in our village. This school is about our equivalent of the 7, 8 and 9 grades.

We are fortunate to be in a country that is very pro-American. Everyone, it seems, wants to learn to speak English and go to the United States. We have often been asked if little children in the U. S. grow up learning to speak English or do they learn it in school.

Since our village is close to the capital city (about 20 miles away) we have electricity all the time. The water comes on twice a day and there are no bathrooms. To take a bath one must stand in a little room, dip water from a tank with a hollow gourd and pour it over himself. Next door is a latrine.

The food consists mostly of thick, round tortillas, boiled rice, mashed black beans, fried bananas, eggs, black coffee, and various kinds of tropical fruits. Since we are close to the ocean we also have sea food three or four times a week. There is usually a pig or beef butchered once a week so we have these meats two or three times a week, too. The place where I eat has a dirt floor with a table and two benches. I get special treatment because there is usually a little boy stationed at the door with a stick who keeps the dogs, ducks, chickens, and pigs out of the place while I eat. At night bats fly through my room and the fleas have a heyday. I solved these problems by staying under the covers (the bats don't bite anyway) and use a good dose of flea powder. There is an unofficial contest among us to see who can tell the strangest experiences they've had. It would be difficult to say who is the winner.

Every year recently we have been repeatedly admonished to "Keep Christ In Christmas." This can be done if we really want it that way, but of course it means leaving some things out.
