Sorghum Midge Damage Reported In Southern Part of State

Some damage to sorghum crops has been reported in the southern part of the state. The damage is primarily in the western part of Texas. Farmers are advised to scout their fields for signs of the midge and take appropriate action if necessary.

The damage caused by midge is characterized by stunting of the plant, with short stems and reduced growth. The midge lays its eggs on the developing spikelets and feeds on the young shoots, causing them to become weakened and susceptible to disease.

Control recommendations are expected to be developed in the near future. Farmers are encouraged to monitor their fields closely and take appropriate action if damage is observed.

CONGRESSMAN WALTER ROGERS' WASHINGTON REPORT

All of the talk in every song is indeed a controversy. As to the three situations that are as under some such revision scheme or tax cut, I feel that under the present tax structure, we need some substantial tax revision. A tax cut bring to my mind the need for some substantial tax revision. Yet another tax cut bring to my mind the need for some substantial tax revision. Yet another tax cut bring to my mind the need for some substantial tax revision. Yet another tax cut bring to my mind the need for some substantial tax revision.
