Town Meeting Set April 12th for Clinic

Band Together For Aid
by Jan Sherman

Have you noticed the band-aids covering the doors of our businesses? "Are they falling apart?" No. "Then what does all of this mean?"

It's time for Shallowater to band together for aid in a positive project for the community to benefit the whole community.

On April 1, the Health Services Committee met at Hutton's for a breakfast to discuss a very important date on your calendar. "What could that be? I've already taken junior for his art lessons." More important than an art lesson. This is a town meeting to be on April 12 at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium to discuss the possibility of securing a staff of doctors for a clinic in Shallowater. Dr. Tom Nicholas from the Texas Tech Medical School will be here to tell us more about this and the most important thing you can do is care enough to be there. Also anyone who is interested in serving in some capacity is invited to contact someone on this committee. Everyone has a talent we can use. There will be many needs you can meet. The Chamber of Commerce will be conducting a survey in the near future about this possibility and the community should be informed before this can take place.

Shallowater has many organizations which may be called upon

There is still that gleam of youth in the sparkling eyes. The smile is genuine, frequent. And when the man with the jet black hair speaks, the people listen.

Ronald Reagan tells them he is not out of the presidential race despite only one win in the primaries. He will not leave that race, he says, until the people at the Kansas City convention tell him to go.

He says he remains in the race because he feels that what he stands for is similar to what the majority of the people want. They want the changes he will bring to government. He has, he says, faith in the American people.

Tuesday night, an estimated 2000 banner-waving, cheering West Texans demonstrated their faith in Ronald Reagan. The former governor of California and now presidential hopeful was in Lubbock to gain support for the May 1st presidential primary—the first ever in the state of Texas.

Local Republican officials believe the former governor will run strong in this section of the state, and the enthusiasm of the crowd-raging in age from the very young perched atop their parents' shoulders to the smiling old-impressed Reagan's state people the same way.

The crowd was the largest and the most enthusiastic they had come across so far on Reagan's tour of the state. Some people were not able to get into the Regional Airport's lobby to see the governor, who had arrived about 20 minutes early. Cars were still streaming down the access road as the Republican presidential hopeful finished his talk and left for the Southpark Inn.

The demonstration for the governor in the airport lobby was well-orchestrated. Local Reagan officials carefully arranged those carrying the banners so as to give the best possible effect for the former governor—and the national news media. As Reagan's plane approached the air terminal,

Reagan Addresses Area Residents

Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan told an estimated 1200 people gathered at the Southpark Inn for breakfast Wednesday that he has little faith in government. His faith lies, he said, in the American people.

The former governor of California said he will rely on that faith to get him into office.

Reagan said he was taking his campaign to the American people because he feels the people want a change in Washington.

"We've reached a moment where we must put together a new movement," he told the crowd.

In a wide-ranging thirty minute address, the governor hit at President Ford's relationship with the Washington establishment, Secretary of State Kissinger's lack of faith in the American people as well as his detente policies, big government, gun control legislation, and the country's present energy policy.

After the breakfast, the Reagan entourage flew to Longview, Texas for an address Wednesday before continuing on to Las Vegas, Nevada.

He proposed to the Lubbock audience that the government use the private sector to get the social security system out of debt, and turn the authority and administration of the nation's welfare programs over to state and local governments.

the group was led in a series of cheers, warm-ups for a West Texas welcome. The event had the flavor and the fervor of a political rally.

Reagan's talk conversely was low-keyed though enthusiastically received. He reassured the crowd that he would remain in the presidential race until the convention. He was, he said, expecting 30 per cent of the vote in the Wisconsin primary held that day. Anything over 30 per cent would be cause for him to celebrate a victory, he said.

And with a smile and a wave of the hand, he was gone. He left the airport five minutes before his scheduled arrival time.

Later at the Southpark Inn, Reagan appeared briefly before members of the news media to acknowledge a victory in Wisconsin. He had received more than 40 per cent of the Republican vote. He attributed the good showing to "cross-over" voters—those registered as independents or former democrats currently upset with the present political situation.

Big Voter Turnout in Shallowater School Election

In a big turnout of voters Saturday in the Shallowater Independent School District, 302 voters went to the polls and cast their ballot for the candidate of their choice.

Three candidates were elected to the board to serve a three year term. Tommy Pointer drew 153 votes, Bryan Burgett 136 and G.W. Gates, Jr. polled 128 votes to take the three seats vacated by Melvin Stewart, Donald Martin and Walter Hutton, who chose not to run for re-election.

LaVon McAuley got 116 of the votes cast, Joe Randolph was next with 96, Billy Hayslip 85, Clyde Wyche 81 and Pat Cobb polled 73 votes. Mrs. Sally Sinclair had one write-in vote and Walter Hutton received 8.

The three men will be sworn in at the regular meeting of the school board, Monday, April 12, joining the remaining board members, Jay Stanton, Butch Pair, Newman Lusk and Ronnie Elliott.

"The Messengers," a singing group from Odessa, Texas, will appear at a special Youth Night Service at First Baptist Church, Shallowater, this Saturday evening, April 10, 1976. A special invitation is extended to all youth to attend the services which will be at 7:30 p.m. A spaghetti supper will be served to the youth following the services.

Large Turnout For City Election

One of the largest turnout of voters in Shallowater history was recorded Saturday when 231 persons cast ballots at city hall in the city election.

Incumbent W.A. "Dub" Hardin on Place III drew 224 of the votes cast with Leroy Grawunder polling 151 votes to his opponent, Doris Epperson's 78, to win the Place I seat.

Pet Owners Take Heed!

Pet owners in the community are reminded they must have their animals vaccinated for rabies.

Dr. Dunivant will be in the Fire Station at the City Hall in Shallowater on Saturday, April 17th for the purpose of vaccinating the animals.

Pets must be immunized for the rabies every year. Price of the vaccination is $4.00.

What the average farmer wants is profit, not discussion.

Special Board Meeting Held by Shallowater School Board Monday

On Place V Danny Jones drew 82 votes to win that post with Bob Grice polling 79 and Harry Leonard 65. There was one write-in vote for Floyce Preston.

All three elected officials will be sworn in at a later date for a two year term each.

Other city officials remaining on the council for one more term are Mayor Jack Dulaney and councilmen Joe Cox and Doyle Mosbey.

At a special board meeting held on April 5, 1976, the school board discussed the requirements for trustee candidates; with the legal advice of the school attorney, Mr. Jerry Kolander, Jr. Mr. Kolander stated that the courts have decided the requirements stated in the Texas Education Code is the governing code. This code states that "no person shall be elected trustee, unless he is a qualified voter." This means that a person must be 18 years of age and live in the district for 30 days prior to the election to be a qualified voter. Therefore, this is also the requirement to be a candidate.

At a special board meeting held on April 6, 1976, the School Board canvassed the votes and declared Mr. Bryan Burgett, Mr. G.W. Gates Jr. and Mr. Tommy Pointer as new school board members.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

It seems to many observers that baseball players are making a big mistake in hiring agents and/or lawyers. The chances are that they'd do just as well bargaining, in good faith, on an individual basis.

Babe Ruth never suffered and he had his share, and more, of arguments and disagreements with Ed Barrow, then the general manager, and Jake Ruppert, the owner. The mighty Babe was known to hold out for more money and he received it, too.

Now comes the case of Andy Messersmith, a strange case in which the Dodger pitcher apparently worked through an agent. The agent, it appears, got a little out of line.

Anyway, the Yankees seemed to think that they had secured Messersmith's services. Then the pitcher got coy. He didn't like the terms and would fight the case if he was forced to labor for the New Yorkers.

It all appeared to be headed towards a messy case when the new owner of the Yankees stepped in and settled it. He allowed as to how the Yankees didn't want someone who didn't want to play for them and that negotiations were off.

Now, what happens to Messersmith? He is open to bids, but since the negotiations are open secrets, other clubs may think twice before taking any steps to sign him.

Most club owners are businessmen and they'll try to make the best deal for themselves. At the same time, because they are businessmen, they'll give to keep players who have proven themselves.

The player who goes through an agent stands to lose more in the long run, it appears, than if he deals directly. Somehow, it all seems pretty impersonal to have an agent, leading to the club expecting more from the player than maybe he can give.

I know it won't do any good, but before basketball fades into oblivion until next October, we wonder why the networks, in their infinite wisdom, insist on using sideline cameras? They must know more than the colleges and universities.

I haven't yet seen a football stadium or baseball arena where all the seats were placed on the level. For some strange reason the institutions seem to think that fans can see better if the stands are elevated.

The major TV networks haven't received the message yet. They are so busy proving that they have a lot of cameras that they lose sight of the fact that it's difficult for fans to observe action very well on the same level with the bench.

Thus we are treated to arms and legs from a corner of the court and maybe, just maybe, we see the ball arch out of the mob. And sometimes we actually see it go through.

Then TV is cute in another way. They focus the camera on the player who has just scored—as if anybody gave a Continental dam. Meanwhile, the other team has put on a full court press, a pass is intercepted, someone scores—and you hear about it later.

Let's not let the public in on the action. Let's let "ol' golden throat" tell us about it. Like the camera that focuses on the player making the free throw. Later, old GT tells you that he made one of two free throws, etc.

Or let's go to the action again, with the camera showing a frustrated coach talking to his assistant, or pointing at an official or walking to the scorer's table.

Meanwhile, out on the court, there's action. You know there is because you hear the crowd. But bless TV, they've been scared by Watergate and want to keep action on the court a deep, dark secret.

Next season we expect to see TV have a disappearing camera come up from the center circle to show us the thrilling action on the scoreboard.

Bowie Kuhn played an almost unnoticeable role in the attempt to break the logjam between players and owners in the baseball disagreement. Indeed, he sat idly by for far too long and let both sides almost haggle themselves out of a season.

The thought came to me during the affair, what would Kennesaw Mountain Landis have done under similar circumstances?

For those too young to know, Landis ruled as the czar of baseball for years. When he said "frog," baseball players and owners didn't just jump, they leaped. He ruled baseball.

At the first sign of any rebellion, he'd have been in the midst of it. He'd have had that cold, stern, forbidding look on his face. He'd have made an instant decision. And both sides would have quailed and done as he said. There wouldn't have been the nonsense that we've seen.

This country has lost a lot of great men. Judge Landis, in baseball, was one of those giants, right or wrong.

Red Raider All Sports Banquet to Be Staged Tuesday, April 13th

The 34-year-old Knight led Indiana to the NCAA championship and a 32-0 record this season after rolling up a 31-1 mark last year. In only 11 years as head coach, Knight has compiled an incredible 227-70 (.764) record, including four consecutive Big Ten titles.

The personable young coach has twice been named National Coach of the Year by UPI and was Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1973. Knight was also a starter on the 1960 Ohio State team that won the national championship.

Local KFYO radio personality and former Lubbock Citizen of the Year, Bob Nash, will emcee the banquet given annually by the Red Raider Club to honor all Texas Tech athletes.

National Rural Health Week Scheduled for April 4-10

"Improving the Quality of Rural Life Through Better Health" is the theme of National Rural Health Week, April 4-10, which is being sponsored in Texas by the American Medical Association and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The aim of National Rural Health Week is to focus attention of the medical profession and the public on rural America's health. The week aims to motivate rural citizens to become more health conscious and to improve rural-urban cooperation in health care issues.

The need for rural health care in Texas is desperate for many small Texas communities. The woes are several, from lack of proper equipment in hospitals to not even having a hospital or a doctor for many, many miles.

During National Rural Health Week, Texans are urged to familiarize themselves with the National Health Planning and Resources Development Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-641) and the 12 newly formed health service areas in Texas. These areas are designed to provide better delivery of health care for both rural and urban Texas. Citizen understanding and involvement in these regional health care planning organizations should result in improved delivery of medical services to the Texas citizenry.

THE WEST TEXAS FORESTS: A PHOTOGRAPHIC ESSAY
by Richard Mason

The photographer does not find much in the way of forests in West Texas. Occasionally a city park or an orchard will provide a variety of trees, though the parks, like the trees, are few and far between. But the photographer is not always drawn by quantity. In small numbers lies the unique. And there is a West Texas independence in the solitary trees, an independence which promotes quality.

The quality is subtle, though ever present in the shadows or the sway of budding branches. As sleepy as a warm afternoon, it waits to be drawn out by the searching eye. Against a grey background, small shoots begin their spring blossom along the banks of a Mackenzie Park pond; the march of yucca trees two by two in their chaotic form seems to end where the stark, controlled power lines begin; the whiskery display of yucca leaves; and a lone yucca tree, bent perhaps by years and the West Texas wind, bows to the afternoon sun.

Bullock Says Soaring Utility Rates Take the Joy Out of Payday

Comptroller Bob Bullock said last Thursday that soaring utility rates have taken the joy out of payday for the people of Texas.

"But the average homeowner would save only $1 a month at most as a result of proposals to alter the natural gas severance tax rate," Bullock said. "That assumes the savings would be passed on to the consumer, which can't be guaranteed. And that same severance tax adjustment could cost the state as much as $1 billion in tax revenue over the next three years."

The loss in revenue would have to be made up in additional taxes, the Comptroller said. "It doesn't make good sense to put a dollar in the consumer's shirt pocket and then come back and clean out his billfold."

Bullock said that since 1972, Houston's electric rates have gone up 48 percent, Dallas' 71 percent and Austin—setting an omen for the future—by a disgusting 125 percent.

In a statement delivered Thursday to the House Ways and Means Committee, Bullock challenged the Legislature to address discriminatory utility rate structures themselves, rather than fiddling with the gas tax rate to throw chicken feed to the consumers.

He noted that present utility rates charge low-volume users—homeowners and apartment dwellers—higher rates than those charged business and industry.

"This is inequitable," Bullock said.

Holy Week Celebration of Religious Art At St. John's United Methodist Church

Saint John's United Methodist Church, 15th and University, in Lubbock, is having a Celebration of Religious Art as a part of the Holy Week observance. The Exhibit will be open from Monday, April 12, through Easter Sunday, April 18. Over twenty outstanding artists of the Lubbock area are being invited to participate. On Easter Sunday the artists will be honored with a reception and the general public is cordially invited to view the display of religious art and visit with the artists from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Fellowship Garden. The displays will include paintings, sculpture, needlepoint altar cushions, chrismos, stoles, jewelry, copper enamel, and other types of religious art. None of the art work will be for sale. The children and youth of the church are also being invited to display their art work in the halls of the church.

Individuals from other denominations and other United Methodist Churches are being invited to use this Celebration of Religious Art to add to the meaning and significance of Holy Week.

Saint John's is having Holy Week worship services at 7:30 each evening during the week of April 12-17 and is working with other United Methodist Churches in a Sunrise Easter Service in Tech Terrace Park in Lubbock at 6 a.m. on April 18.

Lunch Bunch to View Excerpts From "Camelot"

April 13, the Library Lunch Bunch will be entertained by musical and dramatic excerpts from "Camelot," by the Texas Tech University Theatre players.

"Camelot" is a musical play by Lerner and Loewe which enjoyed a long run on Broadway with Richard Burton and Robert Goulet as Arthur and Lancelot, and later was made into a popular movie. The play is based on T.H. White's novel, The Once and Future King, and concerns the legend of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table, and the ill-fated romance of Queen Guenevere and Sir Lancelot. The musical is set in medieval times, and is filled with beautiful costuming, settings, and a sense of enchantment and magic. "Camelot" will run at the University Theatre from April 22 to May 2.

Lunch Bunch is a free program which meets each Tuesday, from 12:15 p.m. to 12:45 p.m. in the Community Room at the Mahon Library, 1306 9th Street.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

Sometimes the motion picture industry can do the darndest things! You'd think if you had a top production company release through a major studio, a top director (who is erratic at times), a top writer for the screenplay and no less than five star-ranking players (including an Academy Award winner) that you'd come up with quite a picture.

Well, what Columbia Pictures has come up with is a pure entrent into the "Ho Hum" bracket, despite all the glorious advantages mentioned above.

The film, is of course, the British-made "Robin and Marian" a PG-rated job that runs 106 minutes at the Fox Theaters and seems like it is longer by far than "Gone with the Wind."

This is the old tale of Robin Hood and Maid Marian and all the other Nottingham-Sherwood Forest boys, and when I say "old" I mean "old." The thought was to pick up the crowd 20 years later than the original legend. Robin and Little John come back to England after King Richard's death. The Sheriff of Nottingham is a lesser power now, since he is under an appointee of bad King John. Maid Marian has retired to a nunnery when Robin didn't come back from the Crusades (shades of Audrey Hepburn's "The Nun's Story").

The awful thing about this film is not in its total banality, it's sometimes downright silly premises, but the fact that the whole caper seems to underline just how much age has marked the five principal players and diminished their powers at the same time. Consider Sean Connery as Robin, Audrey Hepburn, returning to the screen after more than a decade, as Maid Marian, Nicol Williamson as Little John, the distinguished Robert Shaw as the Sheriff of Nottingham, Richard Harris as King Richard and Kenneth Haigh as the bad Sir Ranulf. Nobody shines in this group. All do what they can with Richard Lester's peculiar direction and James Goldman's tepid script—and he's the one who gave us the brilliant period piece "Lion in Winter."

I don't know how an outstanding company such as these five can be conned into participating in a script such as this. Money, maybe, or else that old bugaboo that actors don't really have any objective sense in the selection of their own vehicles. Suffice to say, there's a whale of a lot of talent gone down the proverbial drain in "Robin and Marian" and that's a true pity.

There's another sorry film been around this past week. This is the picture "Abduction" which has been a filler at the South Plains Mall Cinema I-II. It has been given an R-rating and released by little known Venture Productions. It's selling point to the indiscriminate patron is that it is purported to be based on the Patty Hearst kidnapping and subsequent events. Bear in mind, it is not. It was adapted from a book "Black Abductor" by Harrison James, which was published a year or more before the Hearst event. This film also began as a hardcore X-rated pornographic entry and then edited down to get the R-rating. It still deserves the X.

There are some names in this cast: Leif Erickson, Dorothy Malone, Lawrence Tierney, with Judith-Marie Bergan as the ill-fated Patricia. Nothing about the film deserves mention; it is cited herein only for the record.

I am a little late on this next comment. "The Devil Within Her" has been playing the past few weeks at the Lindsey and I should have gotten here earlier. With a baby as the villain, this British-made shocker is all of that and an exceptionally well done film of this genre.

The Devil in this one is not "within her," but an abnormally large baby possessed. The picture will remind some of "The Exorcist" but that is only because the final scenes involve exorcism. There the parallel ends.

Smooth, beguiling, with some light moments to counter the chill, the film's fine cast is low-keyed and most effective. You'll see Joan Collins as the mother, Eileen Atkins as Sista Albana in a superb performance, Donald Pleasance, Ralph Bates and a sterling-supporting cast. It is a class production all the way, believe me. Watch for it on the re-runs.

Once every so often the art galleries around town have free open-house "preview" events unveiling the new works by established artists of the Southwest. You should watch for these and, by all means, attend. There is far more distinguished talent abounding around our part of the world than many realize.

For example, the Baker Gallery of Fine Arts at 13th and Ave. L this past Sunday brought back two outstanding painters from Albuquerque, who have a host of friends in these parts. Doris Steider, whose star has always been on the ascendancy and continues to be so, showed us a stunning collection of work in and around the New Mexico area and a considerable number of canny and sensitive paintings accomplished during a recent trip to the British Isles. Her Scottish and Irish scenes are particularly honest and vivid. Her work deserves a close look.

She shared honors greeting the visitors with Wilson Hurley, the tall, rangy, handsome and powerfully talented painter, who has made such strides in his career. Former Air Force pilot and lawyer, he has made giant strides since he abandoned his former pursuits for the fulltime career of painter. Strong and vibrant, his realization of the skies and landscapes of New Mexico are overpowering and their immensity matches in full strength the subject matter.

A brief visit with Mrs. Steider and Hurley was a most welcome reunion and the conversation touched on Hurley's plans to return to Borneo this fall, where he saw active service as a pilot. Out of this return to the lush greenery and awesome backgrounds of the South Pacific, one can expect a full and exciting new page to the Hurley career.

Another well-known artist, this one from San Antonio, is to be honored with a one-man show opening, free to the public, at Hall's Gallery on 34th St. Raul Gutierrez will be greeting visitors from 7:30 p.m. and his works, known to Lubbockites, will show new conceptions in Texas landscapes. He will also show his superb wildlife paintings in water colors and knowing Gutierrez' work previously, I can earnestly recommend your paying a visit.

Both shows continue on exhibition, free to visitors. The Baker Gallery show continues on Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., while the Hall Gallery will show Gutierrez' works on 34th St. through April 16. The show then moves to the Hall Gallery in the South Plains Mall through April 24.

Mother of Mrs. G. T. Doggett Honored

Grandchildren are extra special to a grandparent, and the love and encouragement by Mrs. Ora Melton of 924 32nd St. in Lubbock, mother of Mrs. G.T. Doggett, to her grandson, David Smither of Lubbock, talented musician and author, was repaid to her tenfold recently when he presented her the first copy of his new book, The Evangelistic Piano Hymnal, a collection of 270 arrangements of favorite hymns.

Being the first grandchild, he dubbed her Big Mama, which is what she's been called down through the years, and the book was dedicated to "Big Mama." He says any success he may have in the music world, he owes to her, because 28 years ago she gave him a toy xylophone for Christmas and that simple toy seemed to spark his interest in music.

It wasn't long after that, until she bought him his first piano, a weather beaten upright, which quickly became his first love, playing it constantly. "When I exhausted one pile of music, I would invent my own," Smither recalls.

He developed a love for sacred music and "Big Mama" encouraged him through every difficult lesson and chord. As a typical adolescent his interest waned. It was then that "Big Mama," not a musical herself, kept his interest alive, motivating him to keep on trying to go ahead and not be discouraged.

By her love and encouragement the 36 year old Smither has a bachelors degree from Texas Tech and a masters degree from Columbia University, taught music in public schools in New Mexico and New Jersey, and at a private school in New York before returning to his hometown of Lubbock two years ago to write this book. He is a graduate of

by Jack Dulaney

Why don't we care? Why die when it could be prevented? We always think that it will be the other man who has the heart attack, or someone else who died from the shock of an accident, loss of blood or just from not getting medical aid soon enough. For instance, if your heart was stopped longer than 5 minutes from a heart attack, it would be too late to prevent brain damage.

Yes, we could call Lubbock for an ambulance, or even rush them to the hospital; but, it's 10 to 20 minutes before an ambulance would arrive, plus, being unfamiliar with Shallowater, it could be much longer than that. They tell us many people die of heart attacks, etc. because of not getting medical attention quickly enough. You need properly trained people reaching you quick enough with proper equipment.

The equipment is no problem, because Lubbock County bought us a $21,000 ambulance last November. They also provided almost $5,000 worth of equipment to go with it. The equipment and ambulance consists of the latest in medical aid for heart attack

Lubbock's Monterey High School. The book is designed for the church musician who reads music by cannot add "runs" and "fill-ins." The book has warmly been endorsed by Dale Evans, Dino and Tommy Brinkley, organist of the First Baptist Church in Dallas, the largest Baptist Church in the world.

Born and raised in Lubbock, Smither is the son of Mrs. Coena Nichols of Lubbock and the nephew of Mrs. G.T. Doggett, former Shallowater resident, now of Lubbock. He and his wife reside at 4623 Elgin in Lubbock where she works for the State of Texas with deaf students and they both are involved in the ministry of sign language.

Mrs. Melton, 78 years young, mother of four children, grandmother of five grandchildren, and two great grandchildren, received the specially dedicated book in a lovely ceremony recently at the senior citizens center, 2600 Avenue P in Lubbock, where the active lady gathers with friends 2 or 3 times a week to play dominoes and etc.

When love is expressed, it is returned, and the love of "Big Mama" to her grandson David Smither was publicly made known with the dedication of his book to one of his very favorite persons, "Big Mama."

victims and other emergency items such as electric saw and giant cutters to get someone out of a wrecked car or machinery.

The other need is people like you, who will take a 140 hour course in Emergency Medical Training. This course is very enlightening. You study many subjects, spend 40 hours of time in an emergency room, and do many other things, such as watching a baby get his first breath.

Idalou, Wolfforth, and Abernathy already have their ambulance in operation with several people trained to run them. We have four people who are certified, and they are all out of town during the daytime.

Couples can take this course or just one member of the family. Talk to people who you know, who might be interested in doing this, or you yourself decide to do your part in making our town a safer town to live in. Our city will pay the cost of this course, which is $75.00 at the present time.

The ambulance service, added to the clinic that we hope to get here, would surely give us assurance of proper medical care if and when it is needed, as well as peace of mind. Will you help out on this? Phone Richard Hopson, J.D. Young or the City Hall if you need more information. The county will not keep this equipment available to us forever, if it is not being used. Act Now! We don't want to lose this protection.

I do think the people of Shallowater care, and will respond to this need.
