Youth Camps

The state health department licenses more than 700 youth camps in Texas. Church camps, day camps and similar facilities all should be inspected by the state but parents themselves need to be aware of certain safety factors, the Texas Medical Association says.

The law says camps should be inspected often but it is difficult for health inspectors to regularly visit all camps. Parents themselves should look for violations and encourage children to report problems. Here are a few of the almost 75 regulations to watch for:

—Each youth camp must be under the direction of a qualified adult with at least two years experience working with children. All recreational activities must be supervised directly by a qualified adult.

—There must be one adult supervisor for each 10 children.

—At least two people, including one trained lifeguard, must be on duty when children are using a camp swimming pool. Staff cannot "engage in recreational boating or swimming" while they are on duty, state regulations say.

—A physician, nurse or person with a Red Cross Advanced First Aid Certificate or its equivalent must be in camp at all times.

—Every child 12 years of age and under must wear a life preserver while in a watercraft. Campers must wear preservers in white water, rough water or while waterskiing. Waterskiers must not launch or stop in swimming areas.

—No open bed trucks or trailers can be used to transport campers on public roads.

—In primitive camping areas, hot water and detergent must be used to wash all cooking utensils after each meal.

—Domestic animals such as dogs and horses are not permitted in a waterfront activity area.

Some of the regulations do not apply to certain camps but violations that endanger children could indicate a lax attitude that possibly would let other injuries occur. Camp dangers should be reported to the General Sanitation Division, Texas Department of Health Resources, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756.

Extension Update

Lubbock County Extension Agent
How to Get Most From Trading
Or Selling Your Car

New car "fever" costs money—but you can save by getting the most value possible for their trade-in car.

Before asking a car dealer's appraisal for the present car, determine its approximate worth. To do this, check a used-car price guide available from a banker, credit union or insurance company—but keep in mind that these price estimates are based on the assumption that the car is in good running condition and still attractive. When comparing offers from different dealers, be sure the cars compared are similar in features, power and construction.

If the price offered is much lower than the price guide value, consider the car's condition to determine reasons why the offer may be lower.

Some dealers who offer lower trade-in prices will sell the new car at the lowest price.

Other dealers use the technique called "high balling." In this case, the salesman may offer much more than expected for the used car. If you are buying a big, new expensive model the salesman may intentionally over-value your present car to make the deal irresistible. High balling entices you to buy your car from him and no one else.

Make certain to know all the costs of trading the car before making an agreement to buy. In some instances, the salesman may say he made a mistake in arithmetic in the price he quoted or that such a high offer was not approved by the sales manager. Even though you may feel committed to buy from him, don't hesitate to say, "I think I will look around some more."

Some car owners prefer to sell their car themselves. This may bring a higher price than the wholesale price paid by a car dealer.

It also gives the advantage of bargaining over the new car price since there is no trade-in for the dealer to sell.

To sell a car personally, simply set an asking price and decide how low a price to accept. Stick to it, and if no one meets that price, trade it in on the new car. The only expense is the newspaper ad.

Before attempting to sell the car personally, get the dealer's offer for it in writing so that it is a firm figure to count on if it's necessary to trade it in.

FRESH VEGETABLES—Local truck farms producing top-quality, low-price produce make these items worth considering: yellow and zucchini squash, corn, cooking greens, purple hull peas, green beans, radishes and green onions.

Also look for economy buys on cabbage, carrots, cucumbers and green peppers.

POULTRY—Fryer chicken are a bit lower, and special prices appear on fryer parts.

Medium and large-size eggs have reasonable prices, but jumbo and extra large are bringing "premium prices," since quantities are limited.

PORK—Look for specials on smoked picnics and sliced bacon. Frankfurter and pork liver prices are down. Good buys include rib and loin pork chops, semi-boneless and canned hams.

BEEF—Look for reasonable prices on rib, sirloin and round steaks—and features on chuck roasts and steaks, ground beef and beef liver.

Consumer Watchworks: Although apricot prices are high, this is their peak season.

Migrant Workers . . .

Klein told Texas Welfare Commissioner Raymond W. Vowell that Idaho is expecting a severe drought this summer.

"This will have a serious effect upon the number of agriculture jobs which will be available in the State of Idaho," said Klein.

"We are already receiving reports that a higher than usual number of migrant laborers are coming to Idaho thinking that work will be available here. Actually, there will be much less work available in Idaho than there is normally.

"I think it is our duty to inform migrant laborers that work is not available in this state to save them the expense of making the trip to Idaho.

Consumer Food News

College Station—Canned fruits and vegetables and fresh cantaloupe have attractive prices in many Texas grocery markets, Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt, a consumer marketing information specialist reports.

Mrs. Clyatt, with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, summarizes this week's grocery situation as follows:

FRESH FRUITS—Cantaloupe quality is excellent at attractive prices and plentiful watermelon have moderate prices. Texas honeydew melons reflect lower prices, but apricots, nectarines and plums are still relatively high priced. Varying prices appear on bananas, cherries, oranges, peaches and pineapples, so choose according to budget limitations.
