Shallowater Fire Plugs Get New Patriotic Look

With red, white and blue paint, a brush and the artistic hands of Terri Dixon, the fire plugs within the City of Shallowater are displaying the spirit of '76 look in observance of our nation's birthday.

Terri began painting the fire plugs last week for fun, which takes about 45 minutes for each one. The patriotic effect she used in painting the fire plugs caught the eye of the townspeople and merchants and paint and brushes have been donated in order for her to paint most all of the fire plugs in town, if her time permits.

The busy miss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Reed, holds down two jobs, at Texas Instruments and the 7 to 11 store in Shallowater.

She is classified as a junior at Texas Tech and is very active in the girls sports and competed in the National Track meet in Manhattan, Kansas, recently.

First State Bank Cashier, Patsy Young, Attending Banking School

Patricia J. Young, Cashier, of First State Bank, Shallowater, Texas, is attending the Third Annual Intermediate School of Banking sponsored by the College of Business Administration at Texas Tech University, May 23-28, 1976.

The major objective of the school is to develop knowledgeable and professional banking employees and acquaint newer bank employees with the scope of operations and problems in the banking industry. It will also serve as a review for employees who have served in one particular area of banking operations for several years and who need to be updated on recent developments. Representatives of 72 banks from Texas and New Mexico are participating in the week-long program.

Besides the College of Business Administration, Texas Tech has five other colleges - Agricultural Sciences, Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering and Home Economics. These colleges and the two schools, the Graduate School and School of Law, have a total enrollment of more than 22,000 students.

City Water Usage Reaches New High

City water Supt. W.F. Williamson reports this week that a daily average of 350,000 to 500,000 gallons of water is being pumped each day for the consumers use. On May 16 510,000 gallons of water was pumped for the largest daily usage of the season and on Tues-

A dream will become a reality Sunday, June 6, when dedication ceremonies will be held, officially opening the Lubbock County Historical Collection of farm equipment at the recently constructed county shed one block northwest of the Sante Fe depot on Avenue G in Shallowater.

The public is cordially invited to the opening and view the 215 pieces of antique farm equipment which includes a 1915 Titan tractor built by the International Harvester Co.

The Lubbock County Museum of historic farm equipment had its beginning in 1969 when several area South Plains farmers including Mr. Bob Crump, Shallowater, sought to find a permanent place for the preservation of various implements they believed to be of value to the heritage of the Southwest. When it was found that no area museums were in the position, at that time, to add to their collections, the equipment was offered to Alton Brazell, County Commissioner of Precinct 4, for storage in the County's facilities in Shallowater.

In August, 1969, the Commissioners' Court established the Lubbock County Historical Collection as part of Shallowater Park.

Also in August 1969, the first piece of farm equipment, a small Monitor windmill was moved from the Werner Teggemann farm east of Shallowater to the present site

Pot Luck Barber Shop to Sport New Look for 2 Weeks

Leon Spoyles announces this week that while he is on reserve duty, Barbara Billingsley of Lubbock will be in the Pot-Luck barber shop to do haircuts for all his customers.

Barbara is well experienced and will be giving the latest in men's hair cuts and styles while she is in the shop from Saturday, June 5th through June 19th, closed on Monday.

Spoyles invites all his customers and new ones to come in and let Barbara do their hair cuts while he is gone to Fort Chaffee, Ark. to do a two week hitch in rescue duty for Uncle Sam.

Dardie Williamson talked with Alton Brazell Tuesday and he remarked he wasn't a hunter or fisherman, "when I get some spare time, I hunt for old farm machinery." He stated, "we've had a lot of cooperation from local people. I'll sit down at the coffee shop and someone will tell me they saw some old machinery down by Stamford east of the lake." As we talked, he said, "I used to drive to Dallas in 5 1/2 hours. The last time I went for a commissioners meeting it took me two days."

by Jesse Evans of Shallowater.

Several pieces of the Bob Crump farm equipment were moved a few days later and the Historical Collection was underway. Also several pieces of machinery have been donated by local people for the museum.

Seeing the tremendous potential value to the people of Lubbock and surrounding counties, Mr. Brazell soon began an active search for the types of implements that had been, since before the turn of the century, used in the cultivation of crops in the southwestern area of the United States. The idea was well accepted from the beginning. Once they found that there was someone who was interested in preserving the heritage of agriculture, area farmers enthusiastically contacted Brazell, telling him what they had. Some, even more aware of the necessity of preservation, carried equipment to the Shallowater facility.

The fast growth of the collection, combined with the enthusiastic support of area farmers, soon dictated even further efforts by Brazell. There was a clear need, he decided, to look forward to a time, not far away, when the extensive implement collection should be researched, cataloged, and eventually displayed as a farm

Jim Reese, a Republican candidate for Congress in the 19th Congressional District, called for an end to appropriations for the Federal Energy Administration last week.

"Domestic (oil) production is being crippled, and FEA's crazy-quilt system of price controls is one of the major causes of FEA has done nothing to raise the goal of U.S. energy self-sufficiency," Reese contends.

The republican further charges that FEA press releases alone cost taxpayers more than $3,000,000 each year.

Spreading the common cold, a talent once thought natural to anyone with the sniffles, may be more complicated than previously suspected, the American Lung Association of Texas reports.

The association cited a University of Wisconsin study which found that the person-to-person spread of the cold virus is not predictable and is more difficult than what had been believed.

The Wisconsin study injected a group of volunteers with nose drops infected with the cold virus to find if the volunteers would spread the colds to their spouses.

Only 38 per cent of the subjects transmitted their colds. However, in those cases where the colds were transmitted, the symptoms from the original infection were at least moderate or severe. All of the couples spent more than 17 hours a day together for a week during the experiment.

Segregation, particularly of children with asthma, is a mistake the American Lung Association reports. Asthmatic children, except in severe cases, should be included in regular group activities at camps, school physical education programs, and all kinds of recreational undertakings. The association suggests that camps with a nurse or physician on call are the better choices.

While asthma may involve a sudden attack, it also includes mild breathing difficulty. Both kinds of attacks are triggered by a variety of factors. Materials in the air or environment, respirator infections, and emotional disturbances help cause the attacks.

More than six million people in the country have the lung problem. Nearly half of them are children under sixteen years of age, the association noted.

day, June 1, a total of 550,000 gallons was used by the consumer. Due to the hot dry weather that has prevailed in the area the past few weeks it has caused a big demand for water for both house and lawn use. With the warm, windy, dry month of May just past, the peak of the watering season is still ahead, and without rain, the daily usage will probably reach well over a half million each day. The city has a total of six wells pumping water for consumer use.

Dirk Pearce Licensed to Preach

On Sunday evening, May 23rd, Dirk Pearce, son of Rev. and Mrs. Boyd Pearce was licensed to preach, giving his testimony of feeling God's call to the ministry by sharing I Corinthians 13 with members of the congregation as his basis for living each day.

Dirk, a member of the Shallowater First Baptist Church where his father serves as pastor was born in Lubbock in 1958. His parents moved with him to East Africa when he was 10 months old where they served as missionaries.

He attended school in Kenya from the first grade through the eight grades and went to Rift Valley Academy Boarding School, which is sponsored by Africa Inland Mission in the 9th and 10th grade.

He made a decision for Christ while on a youth trip to Dallas in the summer of '75 and in August last year he surrendered to preach.

He is a '76 graduate of Shallowater High School and will spend the summer at Lake Canyon near New Brunfels where he will be involved in resort ministry working and providing Christian recreation and inspiration for persons who are vacationing at the lake.

He will enroll in Wayland Baptist College with the fall term to prepare himself for the ministry.

museum. When W.C. "Bill" Griggs of the History of Engineering Program at Texas Tech University approached him in the summer of 1974 with a proposal to research, photograph, and document the machinery, Brazell was enthusiastic. Griggs advanced his proposal to the Lubbock County Commissioners and approval was given. In September, 1974, research began.

Robert C. "Bob" Williams and Mike Vice, graduate students at Texas Tech in History and Museum Science, were employed as Research Assistants by Griggs to begin the extensive study. Long hours in field and library research ensued. Hundreds of letters were written to both individuals and to manufacturers. Scores of people who had actually used the various pieces of equipment were interviewed. Dozens of talks were given to all kinds of organizations from civic clubs to schools, soliciting both information and new items for the collection.

When Vice left Texas Tech to become Curator of the Cavalry Museum at Fort Riley, Kansas, Williams continued the exhaustive research, aided continually by Brazell. Griggs, too, continued active efforts in the quest for elusive bits of information about the sometimes rare farm implements.

By the end of 1975, the research effort was virtually complete and Brazell began to look forward to a day, not too far away, when his dream of an "honest to goodness" farm museum in Shallowater would be realized. At his request, the Commissioner's Court officially changed the name from the Lubbock County Historical Collection to the Lubbock County Museum. Plans were made by Brazell and Griggs for a future opening date, with June 6, 1976, being chosen. After a proposal by Griggs, the entire project was approved by the Lubbock Bicentennial Committee as an official project.

Realizing the need for more permanent facilities, the Commissioner's Court, in January, 1976, approved plans submitted to build a large steel equipment shed on the Shallowater property. To accurately interpret the equipment to be displayed, a new contract, for $8200, was awarded to Griggs and the History of Engineering Program to build exhibits depicting the history of the implements.

Brazell, meanwhile, continued actively his efforts to be ready for the mid-year opening date. Equipment was cleaned, repaired, and refurbished. New gravel was spread over the museum site. New fences were built and signs were erected. The museum began to take form. Dealers and implement manufacturers eagerly offered their assistance and volunteered the use of new equipment for the opening to provide contrast between old and new.

The opening on June 6 will be the end of a long period of preparation and the beginning of a new cultural activity for South Plains citizens. Farmers and city dwellers alike will gather to look and marvel at the scores of relics of an agricultural past, brought together for a permanent display.

The opening is being coordinated by several members of the Lubbock County Historical Commission, with Russell Bean of Lubbock serving as coordinator. Mr. Robert A. Nash will emcee the opening, and special guests will be donors of equipment and their families. Judge Rodrick Shaw, Lubbock County Judge, will speak. City and county officials from Lubbock and surrounding counties will be especially invited.

Rev. Boyd Pearce will give the invocation and Mayor Jack DuLaney will present the welcome.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

When you have a dog (German Shepherd) whose real name is Augustus Von Schumacher as the star of your film, then you can readily see the pitfalls of the Fox Theater 4 newest entry, Paramount's "Won Ton Ton, The Dog Who Saved Hollywood."

Granted that the idea of the success in silent films some 50 years and more ago of similar canine thespians as Rin Tin Tin and the earlier Strongheart is challenging, what Producer-Director Michael Winner has come up with is just not so hot. What laughs there are in this tiresome entry are strained and worked to a fare-thee-well and the cast of some prominent names gets swamped in the doings.

Madeline Kahn, who with such hits as "Blazing Saddles," "Young Frankenstein," "Paper Moon" and others already advancing her to superstardom is the principal victim whose upward sweep is halted by this one temporarily. Bruce Dern, who has been rising slowly, suffers likewise, while Art Carney, that old reliable, holds his ground against odds and along with Miss Kahn are the probable survivors. There's a lot of former film personalities of past years who waft through but so briefly that they become ephemeral.

Fortunately the film is only an hour and 32 minutes, short by today's standards. It is PG-rated.

The other film got away from me; I can only report what I have heard. This is Showplace 4's "W.C. Fields and Me," based on the book by Field's former paramour lady. The improbable casting of Rod Steiger as Fields, apparently, came out far better than anyone expected, but, then, Steiger is a consummate actor who would give his best to any given assignment. The film got only a one-week booking at the foursquare Showplace which surprised (and defeated) me, for I would have chanced it, even in the face of that ultimate disaster of films on yesterday's star names, "Gable and Lombard," still current after weeks at this writing, believe it or not.

Oh, well, there are some yet unseen, "Baby Blue Marine" with Jan-Michael Vincent (Fox); Joel McCrea, following in the recent Roy Rogers "comeback" in a new western, "Mustang Country" coming in on Friday; and the proven holdover of "All the President's Men" still around at the South Plains Mall's Cinema I-II.

Mentioning Roy Rogers gives me the chance to acquaint you with the fact that he's going to follow up "Mackintosh and T.J." with another one, again under the flag of Tim Penland who was responsible for the former picture. This one, no name yet, will bring Rogers and young Clay O'Brien (the T.J. of the title) and show them making their way through the west towards California.

Those of you oldtime (and many newtime) movie buffs who loved "That's Entertainment" a year or so back, the stunning compilation of excerpts from the musical films of the illustrious Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios of the 1930s-40s must know there's a new "That's Entertainment, Part 2" that has just opened in New York and is on its way around the country. Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly co-host this one and the verdicts have all been raves. In bridging the various sequences, Astaire and Kelly dance together on screen for the first time in more than 30 years. Some of the legendary stars you'll see in this one, both in musical, dramatic and comedy footage include The Marx Brothers, Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Clark Gable, the James A. FitzPatrick travel talks, Laurel and Hardy, Buster Keaton, W.C. Fields, Abbott and Costello and Greta Garbo (the latter in the famous scene with John Barrymore in "Grand Hotel").

I don't know into what theater "That's Entertainment, Part 2" is coming, but I know this is one oldtimer that can hardly wait!

You probably realize the Lindsey Theater has been showing the past week a film called "Dr. Black, Mr. Hyde." This one is a black treatment of the famous Robert L. Stevenson classic thriller done on screen by Fredric March, John Barrymore and Spencer Tracy. This one has more laughs than its triple predecessors and a little more permissiveness. It's R-rated and relatively short, 87 minutes. Diverting and unusual.

"Taxi Driver" the film in a long run at the Fox 4 just emerged as the winner of the highly-regarded Cannes Film Festival Award, no mean achievement for this strong, provocative Robert De Nero film.

Now I want to divert in closing from films to two outstanding current books that are on sale at bookstores and available at the Lubbock Public Libraries.

The first one is the highly-readable, informative and maybe at times shocking true account of the life of the freckled-faced, "golden girl next door" star, Doris Day. The title is: "Doris Day: Her Own Story" by A.E. Hotchner, who is remembered for his definitive biography of the late Ernest Hemingway.

The form of the book which traces Miss Day from her Cincinnati beginnings through hopes for a dancing career, ended at 13-years old by a crippling car-train crash, her singing with the big bands on the road, her emergence as a Warner Brothers musicals' star, going on to a number of dramatic triumphs such as the Ruth Etting story, "Love Me or Leave Me" with James Cagney.

It is the tragic account of her three disastrous marriages told with candid power, her loss of her finances through the third husband after years of success, the relationship with her son, Terry Melcher, her humor, her religious thoughts and the lady as she is today.

It's compelling reading, made even more so by candid interview inserts by her friends, co-workers, associates as the story line progresses.

I recommend "Doris Day: Her Own Story" all the way. The other book is nonfiction, highly-researched most admirably, that reads like absorbing fiction. It is "Louis and Antoinette" by Vincent Cronin, son of the great novelist A.J. Cronin. This is the story of Louis XVI and his Austrian-born Queen from his succession at the age of 19 at Versailles, his reforms, his love for his people, the calumnies raging against his wife, their contributions as the Age of Enlightenment ended and the Reign of Terror began. We witness the tragic flight to Varennes, preceding the trial and beheading of Louis, the subsequent trial and beheading of his Antoinette. It is solid reading, colorful reading, good and informative reading. "Louis and Antoinette" is a top-ranked contribution.

Texas Railroad Commission

The Railroad Commission is one of the most powerful regulatory and conservation agencies in America. Two candidates are in the June 5th Democratic runoff election:

JERRY SADLER, 68, who entered politics in the 1930's, was defeated as Land Commissioner in 1970 after an official reprimand from the Texas House for refusal to cooperate in an investigation . . . bad absentee record in public office . . . investigated by a grand jury for using a state employee to run his private motel . . . sued for civil tax fraud by the IRS . . . in 1969 the Dallas Times Herald declared "Sadler has made Texas government a universal target of ridicule and derision," and in 1976 the San Angelo Standard echoed, "Under Sadler, the Railroad Commission just might become the laughing stock he once made of the General Land Office."

JON NEWTON, 34, three-term House member with solid record of public service . . . authored the law regulating strip mining . . . fought for a Public Utility Commission . . . serves on Interstate Oil Compact Commission, Mining Council of Texas, Governor's Energy Advisory Council, House Energy Resources Committee (vice chairman) . . . endorsed by major newspapers throughout Texas . . . described by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal as "the resident expert on energy matters in the State Legislature" . . . in the first Democratic primary his Bee County neighbors gave him an 85% majority over his seven opponents.

Texas' energy and utility rate problems can be solved only by vigorous, responsible leadership and fresh approaches.
