

Large Crop to Benefit Cotton Producers

PAD BATCH SYSTEM OPERATES WITH LITTLE SPACE AND REDUCED CHEMICALS, ENERGY, AND LABOR - The pad batch system, with its wash-off stand and A-beam, occupies little space, and requires dramatically reduced chemicals, energy, water, and labor, compared with conventional exhaust system. Here, Robbie Stone (left), Cotton Incorporated manager of dyeing research, and Wolfgang Strahl (right), associate director of textile product research, look over the set-up after completion of a run.

The large cotton crop now shaping up has been a major factor in the recent slide in cotton prices, but in the long run it should benefit American cotton producers, say economists at Cotton Incorporated.

Cotton consumption in 1976-77 was hurt, they point out, by tight cotton supplies, which caused some U.S. mills to substitute cheaper and more available synthetic fibers in some products.

Therefore, say the analysts, the larger supplies expected for the 1977-78 crop will be needed for cotton to recapture fiber market share.

The analysis is contained in the August issue of the COTTON SUMMARY, monthly publication of Cotton Incorporated, the fiber company of American cotton producers.

M. Daniel Troxler, associate director for demand economics, says the weakened cotton market has resulted primarily from two factors:

- The excellent cotton production prospects in almost all northern hemisphere cotton-producing countries.

- A deterioration of business conditions in the world's textile industry.

"As long as world crop production prospects remain so favorable," he notes, "and textile business weaker, it is unlikely that U.S. cotton prices can generate any degree of strength. In fact, if growing conditions in the United States for the last of the season are as favorable as they have been in the first half, the abundant harvest is likely to put further pressure on prices."

However, says Troxler, "the 1977-78 crop will be needed to meet consumer requirements for textile products during calendar year 1978 and beyond.

"Although business conditions in many parts of the world have been poor and are likely to remain slow for the immediate future, conditions that lead to serious economic recession are not apparent. The world textile industry has drifted downward during the past 12 months, but improvements is likely over the next 12 months."

As of now, say the Cotton Incorporated economists, U.S. cotton producers are expected to harvest about 13.5 million bales of cotton this year. "At this level of production, textile mill concern about cotton supply and price uncertainties will be moderated, and U.S. mill use should increase by 300,000 bales," says Troxler.

On a worldwide basis, cotton consumption in 1977-78 is projected to be 62 million bales, a million-bale increase over 1976-77 consumption. This compares with expected world production of 64.6 million bales.

The current situation, says Troxler, points up the increasing importance of the export market for U.S. cotton and the need for American cotton producers to have a sound understanding of foreign cotton demand.

An important part of this understanding, he says, is an awareness of the dramatic changes that have occurred in the world textile industry over the last decade.

In 1965, he points out, the industrialized nations - U.S., Canada, Western Europe and Japan - had about 45 percent of the world's textile equipment. By 1975, this total had dropped to about 33 percent, with the two-thirds share claimed by the growing textile industries of the developing nations and Communist countries.

Troxler points out that these changes have caused disruptions, as evidenced in the current Multifiber Arrangement (MFA) negotiations.

"Many nations, particularly in Western Europe are calling for tighter import controls on textile products from developing nations to moderate the disruptions that have occurred," he notes. "If the FMA talks result in tighter import controls, further disruptions will occur because developing nations will be faced with a serious problem of overcapacity.

"U.S. cotton producers should watch the MFA negotiations," he adds. "Changes could bring different trade patterns."

While the combination of good production prospects and slow fiber demand governs the cotton industry as the new cotton marketing year begins, "it is

School Board Tax Retained

The Shallowater School Board retained the tax rate at $1.70 based on 60 percent of $100 value for 1978 taxes. The breakdown of the $1.70 tax rate will be $1.30 for maintenance and operations and 40 cents for the interest and sinking account.

Nearly all of the schools in the area increased their school tax rate when the state increased the local fund assignment two years ago. However, Shallowater I.S.D. did not increase the local taxes during 1975 or 1976. Therefore the school board did not decrease taxes for 1978. The additional funds that will be received from the state this year will be used to improve the educational programs, purchase and repair of equipment, the repair and renovation of existing buildings and the payment of short term loans.

Shallowater ISD Okays Changes

Two program changes for the coming school year have been approved by the board of directors. One of the changes approved was the moving of the sixth grade to the junior high building. This move was made in order to provide additional space for grades K-5. Recent legislation from the state mandates that the class size in K and One be approximately 25 or less students.

Also, grades two and three would have to have approximately 30 students per classroom. These requirements would have to be followed for the 1977-78 school year. Therefore, additional classroom space may be needed in these grades depending upon enrollment. The need for a language development classroom and the need for room to serve as the elementary library also necessitated the move.

The board approved the implementation of a reading improvement program for sixth through eighth grades. This program will allow the schools to continue the reading program through the eighth grade.

Grain Sorghum Target Prices Increased

LUBBOCK, Tex.—Grain sorghum producers can expect an increase in grain sorghum target prices (guarantee of the average price received by producers) for their 1977 crop if the President approves the new farm bill, according to GSPA President, A.W. Anthony, Jr., of Friona, Tex.

The target price will be raised from $2.89 cwt. to $4.02 cwt., an increase of $1.13 cwt.; in 1978 the increase will be $1.31 cwt. bringing the target price up to $4.20 cwt.

Although corn producers will not see as big a boost as sorghum producers, there will be an increase of 53c cwt. for 1977 and 71c cwt. for 1978, raising target levels from $3.04 cwt. to $3.57 for 1977 and $3.75 for 1978.

The new farm bill will base target prices on the cost of production instead of the previous 95% of the nutritional value of corn, raising the target levels for grain sorghum by an additional 63c cwt.

Sorghum loan levels will remain at 95% of corn or $3.39 cwt for 1977 and for 1978. In 1978 and thereafter, support prices and payments will be made on the planted acreage for that year in stead of the obsolete allotment system based on historical plantings.

Anthony said, "The increase in grain sorghum target prices and new allotment system is a giant step for grain sorghum farmers. The progress that has been made is a direct result of GSPA's initiating the USDA cost of production studies in 1973 and in 1975 starting work to update allotments. There is still a lot of work to do and we do not claim the levels to be totally satisfactory, but we think farmers will receive some relief with these increases."

be your own Meter Maid

But
can you add up your electricity while you're buying?

You can add up your groceries while you're buying...

You can add up your gasoline while you're buying...

Yes you can... Here's How!

Learn to read your electric meter. It will let you determine how many kilowatt hours you use in a given period of time... an hour, a day, a month or a year. That's how electricity is measured — by kilowatt hours used.

Your residential electric meter will have either 5 or 4 dials

Electric meters are easily read from right to left as you look at the meter. If the pointer on a dial is between two numbers, write down the smaller number. When the pointer is directly on a number such as one (1) (see center dial above) then read it as 1 if the pointer on the next dial immediately to the right has passed zero (0). However, read it as zero (0) if the pointer on that dial to the right has not reached zero.

The dials above read (from left to right): 9-3-1-1-5. If, however, the pointer on the second dial from the right above was between 9 and zero then the center dial would read as a zero.

Now let's read the same meter 24 hours later

This later reading is 9-3-1-3-8. Subtracting the first reading, 93115, from the new reading of 93138 — the answer is 23. Thus you would have used 23 kilowatt hours in the 24 hour period.

Now you can become a METER MAID and watch your meter like a miser if you choose. WE HAVE A BOOKLET CALLED "MANAGING YOUR ELECTRIC BILL" plus other WISE USE TIPS booklets that help keep you from wasting electricity and so help lower your cost. Any of these booklets are free for the asking at your Public Service office... come by and see us.

I read the Ten Commandments for Travelers before I left but it did not mean a thing to me until I got home. I will print them for you as they are very true and will help one who travels in another country.

1. Thou shalt not expect to find things as thou has them at home, for thou has left thy home to find things different.
2. Thou shalt not take anything too seriously, for a carefree mind is the beginning of a good vacation.
3. Thou shalt not let the other tourist get on thy nerves, for thou art paying out good money to have a good time.
4. Remember thy passport so that thou knowest where it is at all times, for a man without a passport is a man without a country.
5. Blessed is the person who

6. Blessed is the person who can say "thank you" in any language—and it shall be worth more to him than tips.

7. Thou shalt not worry. He that worrieth hath no pleasure—and few things are ever fatal.

8. Thou shalt not judge the people of a country by one person with whom thou hast had trouble.

9. Thou shalt when in Rome do somewhat as the Romans do; if in difficulty, thou shalt use thy American common sense and friendliness.

10. Remember thou art a guest in every land—and he that treateth his host with respect shall be treated as an honored guest.

Some things we found out about Alaska: Population: 302,173. Area: 586,400 sq. mi. Capitol: Juneau. Nickname: Six States Within a State; Land of the Midnight Sun. State flower:

Arctic Alaska, populated almost exclusively by Eskimos, is a region of barren tundra and mountains, extending from the Arctic Ocean to the formidable Brooks Range which runs from east to west in Northern Alaska. Interior Alaska, (which we three saw), between Alaska Ranges and Brooks Ranges, consists of vast tundra-covered lowland and plateaus fed by several large river systems.

THIS IS ONLY A STORY

By Holly Shafer

Well, as you all know I have a great uncle by the name of Wayland Nelson. He went along with Faye Ann and I to Fairbanks, Alaska. He was kind of a nuisance at times along the way, but yet he came in pretty handy when it come to carrying bags and paying some of those bills. We left Lubbock on a Continental airline plane. We flew to Anchorage, Alaska on this plane and it flew from 6 to 8 miles high at a speed of 500 to 600 miles per hour and the ride was just as smooth as silk with the exception once in a while it would shake, rattle and roll just a little.

The first thing after we took off the stewardess brought us a drink of 7-UP, cokes or champagne and of course my uncle would take the champagne, but me (Holly) being 10½ years old, they would only let me have cokes and 7-Ups...which I like very much, but you know my uncle Wayland got in good with the stewardess and would talk her out of three or those little glasses or champagne... one for himself, one for Faye Ann and then one for me so he got to drink all three of those little glasses of champagne. We were somewhere between Seattle, Wash. and Anchorage, Alaska and my uncle decided he had to find a restroom. The stewardess showed him the way and everything went fine except when he came back to his seat his hat was gone. He always wears a white panama straw hat. Well, those commodes have a great suction to them so his hat got in that commode somehow, but in just a few minutes here came the stewardess with his hat and it was just in perfect shape and you never saw a happier person than my G. uncle for he does love his hat, but in about an hour my uncle wanted to use the restroom again, so there was a door that said exit, so the stewardess pointed to that door and you know my uncle just reached over and opened it and stepped outside. Well, out he went, but, he hung on to the tail section of the plane, but he used the restroom alright except a little bit more than usual. But he lost his hat again. After going through this ordeal my uncle Wayland finally managed to find a little scuttle hole to ride in on the tail section of the plane.

He made it just fine the rest of the way. When we arrived in Anchorage, Alaska and the plane came to a stop my uncle began to climb down and guess what...here came that most friendly stewardess with that white panama hat and it was just in perfect shape again.

The stewardess asked my uncle if he was all right and he said, yes, but he thought he would just leave the champagne off from now on.

I will tell you something else about my uncle Wayland. We would go into a place to eat and I noticed that a T-bone steak was $7.50....The waitress would bring us a menu, so just for the fun of it in one place where we sat down I looked at the menu and said, "Well, I believe I will take a T-bone steak." You know what...my uncle would change color and he would whisper in my ear and say, "Baby doll" those steaks are too old, he would say. They are so high that nobody will buy them and they have been laying there for a week. I tried this three different places and times but I failed to get my $7.50 T-bone steak. This is the only steak you will see on the menus in Alaska. There is plenty of good fresh fish to eat and we really did enjoy the fish, but no $7.50 T-bone. I may write more on Alaska at a later date.

The shop will be specializing in the latest hair styles and hair cuts and invites everyone to come in, get acquainted and let them style your hair in the latest fashion.

Velma will remain in the shop, as an operator only, and will be taking appointments for all her former customers and new ones.

Both shops will be open for business until Aug. 27th, when Julia will be moving to her new shop. For appointments call either 832-4675 or 832-4640 for an appointment.

A formal announcement of the opening will be on Aug. 27th.
