Marker Dedication Draws Large, Enthusiastic Crowd

Lining the roadway of FM 1065, and estimated crowd of 500 history buffs attended the dedication for twin historical markers, "Camp Resolution" and "Masons on the Texas-Santa Fe Expedition," in a remote location near Quitaque on August 30th.

One hundred and forty-six years ago on that date, the Texan-Santa Fe Expedition camped near the confluence of the Quitaque and Los Lingos Creeks. Nearby a small reconnaissance party was attacked by 100 or more Kiowas. Though the 16-shot Colt repeating rifle evened the odds, the five volunteer soldiers were overrun and killed. Lt. Hull was bleeding from thirty lance and arrow wounds. William Mabee's head was smashed by his own rifle, his brains scattered over the ground, and his heart cut out. All were scalped and mutilated.

Surrounded by hostile Kiowas, near starvation, and unable to find a wagon road onto the Llano Estacado to continue their trade journey to Santa Fe, the volunteer soldiers and merchants confronted their dismal prospects. They must either retreat to Austin by the torturous route just completed or split the command, inviting further disaster, and seek help in the New Mexican settlements.

The council of officers "resolved" to send a detachment for help, leaving the weaker party behind in the Caprock stronghold of the Kiowas. A deathwatch vigil was maintained for three weeks, from August 30 to September 18, 1841. During that time, 83 horses were stampeded and captured. Individuals hunting mesquite beans, hackberries, or game were picked off or just never returned to camp. The "rescue" party arrived with guides and provisions, but only to lead them to further trials and tribulations ending in capture, a forced march of 2,000 miles to Mexico City, and imprisonment.

Four campsites along the Quitaque were thereafter referred to as "Camp Resolution." A joint effort of the Floyd County Historical Commission, the Grand Lodge of Texas, and the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, the dedication featured Curtis Tunnell, Executive Director of the Texas Historical Commission in

Jack Kelly, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Texas, gave a stirring speech and unveiled the Masonic marker honoring members of the expedition who were Masons.

Nancy Marble, chairman of the Floyd Co. Historical Commission, unveiled the Texas State Historical marker and expressed appreciation to Bill Gray, Past Master of Floydada Lodge #721, and Marisue Potts, District X Representative of DRT, for their research and assistance with the program.

Members of the crowd-pleasing 4th Cavalry Memorial Regiment posted the colors and paid tribute to the fallen soldiers with a sabre and cannon salute. Taps echoed through the lonely valley in a melancholy moment of reflection.

Over 200 attended the reception in the Community Room of the First National Bank of Quitaque. On display were the historical paintings of Otho Stubbs, leather art of Bill Gray, sculptures of Buster Jones, historical maps by Harvey Fletcher, and Quanah Parker books by Bill Neeley.

With even the weather cooperating, the ceremony far exceeded the hopes of its planners, being graciously described by Curtis Tunnell, an old veteran of many such occasions, as "one of the best and best attended marker dedications, anywhere in the state of Texas."

Briscoe Soil Conservation Office Offers Helpful Tips

By John Crowell

Due to the abundant moisture received this year, we have some very good stands of grass on CRP land. This moisture has also been beneficial to the sorghum crops planted for dead litter.

Due to the tall growth of some of the forage sorghums, some producers are worried about getting a drill through them. If you have this problem, we suggest that you talk to the person who will seed your grass to see if his grass drill will plant in the tall litter. Grass drills vary in their ability to plant into tall or heavy litter crops due to size, weight, and disc opener design. However, most drills should be able to seed into tall dead litter crops. If you think your forage sorghum is getting too tall, you do have the option to control it by shredding or chemical spray.

If your sorghum is not a sterile variety, you must do something to keep it from producing viable seed. You

We The Women Ready To Start Monthly Meetings

After a summer break, "We the Women" will meet at noon Tuesday, Sept. 8 with a covered dish luncheon at the Methodist Church.

Business will be discussed and plans formulated for the year. "We the Women" need all women in the community who are interested in making need to take action, now, to keep it from making seed. To do this, you can SHRED OR SPRAY the crop to kill it. Shredding will do a good job unless we have a lot of moisture and a late frost. If that happens, you might have to shred more than once. Shredding leaves a lot of the stalks lying on the ground for the grass drill to "ride over". You want to avoid having a thick "mat" of litter lying on ground. This could keep your grass drill from penetrating and placing the seed in direct contact with the soil.

The alternative method is to spray the standing sorghum with a chemical to kill it. This leaves the stalk standing instead of making a mat on the ground. A grass drill should be able to "comb" through the standing stalks while staying in good contact with the soil surface. Another advantage of spraying is weed control.

"Roundup" herbicide was recently labeled for control of the sorghum dead litter crops. The label calls for the application of 12 ounces of Roundup plus surfactant and Ammonium Sulfate to actively growing sudangrass when it is 4 to 6 feet tall, or to grain sorghum prior to the boot stage of growth.

A note to those using chemicals on CRP land - to be eligible for cost sharing, the chemicals MUST be applied according to the recommendations on the product label. Also, be very careful to avoid drift into adjacent, susceptible crops. If you need more information or just want to discuss your situation, call or come by our office in Silvertown.

HOLIDAYS AND HOLY DAYS

Labor Day will be celebrated on September 7th this year. President Grover Cleveland signed an act on June 28, 1894, making the first Monday in September a legal holiday for federal employees. Most people attend some kind of celebration, and by tradition Labor Day is the only day pedestrians are allowed to walk on the Mackinac Bridge. One of the world's longest (five miles long) suspension bridges, it connects Michigan's two peninsulas, Mackinaw City and St. Ignace.

Sept. 13 - Grandparents Day - Observed by People of all faiths.

Sept. 16 - Citizenship Day, designated in 1952 by congress to commemorate the signing of the United States Constitution in 1787. This year's bicentennial observance will include a nationwide television and radio broadcast at 1:00 p.m. EDT, followed by a recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance.

Sept. 24, ROSH HASHANAH (Jewish) - The first day of the Jewish year 5748, it inaugurates Ten Days of Penitence closing with Yom Kippur.

DON'T SHOOT AT POWER LINES!

NEVER SHOOT AT POWER LINES or the insulators that hold them, because the result could be a dangerous downed electric line. A severed line could cause a serious electrical outage, and the downed line itself could be extremely hazardous.

ADDITIONAL SAFETY TIPS:

- Use Power Tools Wisely
Be sure wiring is in good condition and all circuits are grounded. Never use electric tools in the rain or on wet surfaces. Also, when buying new equipment, look for the "UL" seal of approval from Underwriters Laboratories.

- Keep Children Away from Electrical Outlets
Don't let small children play near electrical outlets. A child could put some object in an outlet when you're looking away. A wise safety precaution would be to put safety caps in all wall outlets.
- Always Disconnect Cords by Pulling on the plug
When disconnecting electrical items, be sure to pull on the plug — not the cord! If you pull on the cord, you'll eventually wear it out and expose hazardous wires. Also, don't overload extension cords or outlets.

YOUR TEEN'S DIET: HOW YOU CAN HELP

Your influence can have a lot to do with how well your teens eat and how healthy they are—now, and in the years to come. Here are some important facts from top nutritionists surveyed by the Opinion Research Corporation (ORC) to help your family stay healthier.

- The best way to control weight is by balancing food intake with adequate exercise. Many nutritionists feel that the major cause of calorie imbalance in teens is the lack of physical activity, not excess food intake.

- To prevent chronic diseases in later life, most nutritionists cite eating a well-balanced diet and reducing fat intake. Teens should try to limit their intake of salt.

- When it comes to what constitutes a balanced diet, most nutritionists believe that snack foods, such as chocolate, can be included.

The 1987 District Make It Yourself with Wool Contest will be held October 17 on the Wayland Baptist University campus in Plainview. Winners will advance to the state contest November 7 at Texas A&M University.

The contest is sponsored at the state level by the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers auxiliary and the American Sheep Producers Council. The purpose is to focus attention on the beauty and versatility of wool and to encourage the use of this natural fiber in sewing, knitting, and crocheting fashionable garments.

Four divisions, from pre-teen through adult, allow all ages to participate. Entry forms are available by contacting Lynda Fogerson at the County Extension Office or calling 823-2343.

Memphis, Old Town, New Spirit

Hall County in the southeast corner of the Texas Panhandle may be 97 years old, but the spirit remains that of a pioneer.

Memphis, county seat of Hall County, is preparing for its 97th reunion and picnic, September 19 and 20. An annual event, sponsored by the Hall County Reunion and Picnic Association and Memphis Chamber of Commerce is initiating a new project that will make the picnic a perpetual self paying celebration. The plan was introduced by Mark White, vice president of the association. For 97 years, the residents and business people of Memphis have given money for the big feed, now they are being asked to give a gift only in 1987. The money will be put in an account and only the interest will be used for the celebration. This is more in line with the pioneer thinking of self-reliance and independence. Each person will be presented a certificate to show that they gave so that the celebration can continue in the spirit of their forebearers.

The big two days of visiting will begin at 9 a.m. on Saturday, the 19th, with registration on the courthouse square lawn followed by a parade, tour of the museum and an art show. Lunch will be available on the square, and a Living Legends rodeo, concert and dance will be held Saturday night. Sunday activities begin with church at 9 a.m. followed by the Bar-B-Q and visiting at noon in the city park. All former residents of Hall County are invited to attend the celebration.

Cancer Myth #5

"Surgery causes cancer to spread."

No one wants to undergo surgery. But some people may avoid needed cancer surgery because they believe the cancer will spread during the operation. That's a myth. It's not true. Surgery does not cause cancer to spread. Doctors are learning more each day about effective treatments for cancer. If you want the facts on cancer treatment, call the Cancer Information Service.

For Small Businesses

You: An Entrepreneur?

Do you have what it takes to start your own business? If you answered yes, one opportunity you may want to look into is owning a franchise.

Owning a franchise can be a fast and inexpensive way to become an entrepreneur.

Nearly half a million franchised outlets in the U.S. rang up sales of $550 billion last year. Franchises offer faster and less expensive ways to get into business than many more traditional routes. The Small Business Administration reports while 30 percent of new independent businesses fail within two years, fewer than five percent of franchises do.

Specialty food franchising is the fastest growing category. The premium ice cream segment, including frozen yogurt, is a big money maker among specialty foods, with sales reaching $2.2 billion in 1986.

Talking To Animals Is Good For Human Health

In a recent study, researchers found that 99% of people surveyed talk to their pets. This is good news, since scientists have confirmed that interaction with all types of pets relaxes us, lowers our blood pressure and boosts our morale.

In the survey, nearly half of the adults and 70% of adolescents questioned said they confide in their animals. Many people indicated that while pets don't understand human language, they do understand body language and provide comfort and love in response to our unspoken needs.

Why do we relax when we talk to our pets? All the reasons aren't clear, but Dr. Alan Beck of the University of Pennsylvania says we speak more slowly and softly to animals and pause for greater lengths.

In addition to the affection and companionship pets offer, they also serve as our link with nature, keeping us in touch with the "living environment," in spite of our increasingly fast paced and urban lifestyles.

In fact, Dr. Beck notes, our innate need to be with animals is such an important part of human nature, that more people visit zoos and aquariums each year than attend all sporting events combined.

Pets improve our mental and physical well being in many different ways. To receive a free booklet on how animal companionship benefits human health, write to Pet Information Bureau, 1710 Rhode Island Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036 or call 202/452-1525.
